Conservative line puts Davis over the top

By Mel Hyman

Democratic town chairman Matt Clyne had a slightly pained look on his face as the early returns rolled in from last week's town board shootout between GOP Councilwoman Doris Davis and Democrat Bill Burkhard.

As campaign workers punched in results from the first few election districts, a trend was beginning to emerge. Burkhard was putting up some impressive numbers on the "A" (Democratic) line and appeared Davis came out on top by 278 votes, 6,996 to 6,718, according to unofficial results from the town clerk's office.

But close only counts in horseshoes, and the jubilation at Republican headquarters in the Town Squire Plaza could hardly be contained.

Standing on a chair, Davis delivered a rousing victory speech that made someone in

I want to thank the voters and assure them that I will work very hard on their behalf.

Doris Davis

to be surpassing Davis' totals on the "B" Republican line.

But when the votes for Davis on the "C" (Conservative) line were figured in, what has become an all-too-familiar scenario for Bethlehem Democrats began to take form.

Without the Conservative Party line, the Democrats just cannot seem to go over the top.

When the final vote totals were recorded, Burkhard had indeed outpolled Davis in a straight Democrat-Republican matchup, 6,718 to 6,305. With the Conservative Party figures added in, however, the crowd joke that you'd think she was just elected to the state Senate.

"I'm just thrilled," she said. "I want to thank the voters and assure them that I will work very hard on their behalf. It was a tough race, made much tougher by the fact that I had to fight the Clearwater group and the Times Union as well as Bill Burkhard."

Speaking to the press earlier, Davis lashed out at Burkhard and Clearwater for Bethlehem for "misconceptions and mistruths spread throughout the town" about the $13.9 million supplementary water system now under construction.

Clearwater for Bethlehem began as a grassroots movement opposing the town's plan to pump up to six million gallons of water per day from an aquifer underneath the Hudson River to a new water treatment facility on Clapper Road. But the group became increasingly political as the year wore on.

Clearwater members presented Supervisor Sheila Fuller with more than 2,000

Local voters mirror results across state

By Dev Tobin

Election returns in Bethlehem and New Scotland were a microcosm of the selective tidal wave that swept Gov. Mario Cuomo from office after 12 years, while leaving other incumbents high and dry.

The biggest vote-getter in both towns was Republican state Senate candidate Michael Hoblock, whose high name recognition (and accomplishments) as county executive for the past three years propelled him to an easy victory.

Hoblock received 9,357 votes in Bethlehem and 2,840 votes in New Scotland on the Republican and Conservative lines.

His chief opponent, Democrat James McCaffrey, tallied 3,651 votes in Bethlehem and 1,144 in New Scotland, and Liberal Ruth Klepper (1,006 and 221, respectively) and Right-to-Lifer Joseph Sullivan (158 and 66) trailed even further behind.

Elsmere couple lend hand to Croatian family

By Dev Tobin

For Elsmere resident Lou Johnson, her latest pilgrimage to Medugorje in Bosnia-Herzegovina was the most touching, as she got a chance to meet the Croatian family that she and her husband Bill have been helping for more than a year.

"We didn't know if they were getting the money and clothes we were sending," Johnson said of the family whose husband and father was killed in Sarajevo.

"Here in America, we have welfare to help the poor, but there the needy and poor have no help at all," Johnson noted.

She was relieved to see that the money and care packages were indeed getting through to the family. She said that a mere $25 to $50 a month buys enough food to feed a family.

"A dollar here is like five dollars there," she said.

This was Johnson's fifth trip to the site where many believe the Virgin Mary

Sales tax revenue keeps N. Scotland budget on line

By Dev Tobin

Continued strong sales tax revenues will help New Scotland hold the line on tax increases in its 1995 budget, approved Monday by the town board.

At last week's public hearing on the budget, questions remain about the estimated revenue from the mortgage recording tax, since higher interest rates have drastically reduced mortgage and refinancing volume.

Supervisor Herb Reilly reiterated that the estimate of $140,000 is conservative, given that the town received $174,000 in 1993 and more than $84,000 for the first half of 1994.

Roz Robinson, an attorney who does real estate closings as part of her practice, said that the real estate business "has fallen off a third to a half" in recent months.

Sales tax revenues are the good news, with Reilly's estimate up $65,000 to $1,175,000 for 1995. So far in 1994, the six-month sales tax revenue is $613,600, so Reilly said that the 1995 estimate is conservative also.

The town's $3.1 million budget is divided into two parts — the A fund, for

Faso may stay put in Assembly

Good soldier earns consideration for state job

By Mel Hyman

His name has been bandied about with regard to a high-level position in the administration of Governor-elect George Pataki, but Assemblyman John Faso is not exactly doing cartwheels.

The Kinderhook Republican, who represents Bethlehem in the state's 102nd Assembly district, won re-election to a fifth term by a more than two-to-one margin.

Despite speculation about being named secretary of state in the Pataki administration, Faso said he's perfectly happy where he is and has no intention of leaving the legislature.

Speculation about a Faso appointment is fueled by the fact that he has plenty of political IOUs to cash in if he wants.

After 11 months on the campaign trail in pursuit of the Republican nomination for state comptroller, Faso heeded a request from party officials in May and stepped aside at the last minute.

While he reportedly had enough delegate support at the Republican state convention to garner the nomination, Faso dropped out of the race so that Conservative Herb London could take his place.

London had been threatening to run for governor on the Conservative line, as he had done in 1990, if he was not awarded the GOP nomination for comptroller — a move that could have cost Pataki the election.

"My wife and I went through some wrenching moments," Faso recalled. "I had four-and-a-half hours to make up my mind. ... If Pataki had lost, I certainly would have second-guessed myself, but in retrospect, it was the right decision."

Faso is confident he could have beaten Democratic Comptroller-elect Carl McCall if he had stuck to his guns.

At the same time, he said he plans to keep a close eye on McCall's performance and did not rule out a future run for state comptroller.

If Pataki had lost, I certainly would have second-guessed myself, but in retrospect, it was the right decision.

John Faso

As for the present, Faso said he was looking forward to the 1995 Assembly session and helping to pass the Pataki legislative program.

"We gained six seats (in the Assembly). If we can forge an alliance with some of the moderate and Conservative Democrats, then we can make some progress," he said.

A cornerstone of the Pataki agenda, he said, will be rebuilding the state's economy through tax relief and easing regulations on business.

The other priority item, he said, will be taking a tougher stance on crime by enacting the death penalty and mandating stiffer sentences for violent felons.

BC board to hear report on standards

The Bethlehem Central School Board will hear a presentation on the New Standards Project by teachers Johanna Shagan, Mary Agars and Gail Sobolewski at its meeting tonight (Wednesday) at 8 p.m. in the district offices.

The board will also discuss whether to add a new modified girls basketball team, because of increasing interest in basketball by girls.

Spectacular crash leads to DWI arrest

An East Berne man is lucky to be alive after a high-speed crash Sunday on Route 85A near the intersection with Picard Road.

At about 1:45 p.m., Blaine Gordon, 33, of Joslyn School Road, failed to negotiate a curve, sideswiped a utility pole, then his car became airborne after hitting an embankment, Albany County sheriff's deputies said.

Gordon was charged with driving while intoxicated and driving at an imprudent speed. He was taken by the Voorheesville Ambulance to Albany Medical Center Hospital, where he was treated for minor injuries.

He is due to answer the charges in town court at a later date.

RCS community to present forum on proposed ANSWERS landfill site

By Dev Tobin

In what may be the beginning of a unique collaboration, students and parents of Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk High School will sponsor a forum on the proposed ANSWERS landfill Thursday, Nov. 17, at 7:30 p.m. at the high school on Route 9W.

The proposed landfill is an issue for the school community because the site between routes 144 and 9W is within two miles of every RCS school, from Ravena to Selkirk, according to Linda Marshall of the Parent Teacher Students Association (PTSA), for the best site, just the easiest one to acquire.

She said that the town of Coeymans is not a member of the ANSWERS consortium, which includes every other municipality in the county except Colonie, along with the cities of Schenectady and Rensselaer.

Schwartz

"The city of Albany is trying to ram this dump down the throats of people in Coeymans," Marshall said. "This town doesn't want it, but there are some towns that do."

For RCS school board president Sarah Hafensteiner, the proposed landfill site is literally in her backyard. Hafensteiner and her husband Marc live in the Tobias TenEyck House, adjacent to the proposed site.

Hafensteiner added that working to oppose the landfill will be educational for students.

"They can study the economic, environmental and geologic impacts and work with many facets of government and law," she said. "This presents a tremendous number of learning opportunities."

Hafensteiner said that the board will likely oppose siting the ANSWERS landfill in Coeymans, although it had not taken any formal action yet.

RCS Superintendent William Schwartz said, "Many children wait for buses along Route 144, and there's lots of commercial traffic on that road already."

Schwartz, who also lives within a mile of the proposed site, said the school district officials found out about the landfill plan by reading the paper.

"The general feeling around here is that there's been a lot of secrecy and questionable practices" in the preliminary siting process, Schwartz said.

Thursday's forum will feature a slide show and talk about the dump by John Bonafide, a local historian who actively opposes the Coeymans site.

"This was originally proposed as an ash dump in the late 1980s, and now has become a shredded waste dump," he said. "That's a major change in use."

Bonafide said that the 320-acre Coeymans site was selected because it had the least amount of owners and the most owners willing to sell.

Coeymans has never had a contract with ANSWERS, Bonafide said, and haulers serving the town currently export trash that cannot be recycled.

"We've stayed clear of ANSWERS, and I don't know why we were singled out," he said.

Bonafide argued that smaller landfills, built by and serving two or three towns, would be a better solution than a "mega-dump" serving the 14 ANSWERS municipalities.

programs that include the village of Voorheesville, and the B fund, for town programs outside the village.

The budget calls for $812,638 in A fund spending (up 9 percent from 1994), and $2,334,586 in B fund spending (up 7.7 percent from 1994).

The 1995 tax rates will be $1.11 per thousand of assessed value for village residents (an increase of 6.7 percent) and $1.35 per thousand for town residents (a decrease of 8.8 percent). The reason for the difference is that the village receives its own sales tax distribution, which has helped moderate village tax rates in recent years.

The new budget includes 3 percent raises for all town employees, $109,000 for a new dump truck and pickup truck for the highway department, $20,000 for replacing two bridges and $5,000 for a new senior van service.

Town support for fire and ambulance services will be the same or less than 1994, according to the following schedule — $120,000 for the New Salem Fire Department, $113,600 for the Onesquethaw Fire Department, $32,791 for the Onesquethaw Rescue Squad, and $41,892 for the Voorheesville Area Ambulance.

In other business at the meeting, Reilly reported that preliminary test results for the Orchard Park Water District well showed that it is "suitable for domestic use, and within acceptable regulatory limits."

He said that the final report on the results will be complete within a week.

On the proposed town hall addition, Reilly said that he would be meeting with architects in the near future.

Councilman Edward Donohue said that the town should do as much of the town hall addition business as possible with town residents.

The estimated cost of the addition, which would more than double town hall office space, is about $300,000. Construction is expected to begin in 1995.

Corner Market cooks up homemade favorites

By Mel Hyman

Chances are that if you live in the Selkirk area, you've already noticed a big change at the junction of Routes 9W and 396.

Prior to Sept. 1, a Bon Fare market was there for local residents needing convenience items like, milk, beer, cigarettes and cat food.

You can still pick up these items at the new Corner Market that has taken its place, but all of a sudden there's a whole lot more.

In fact, you can probably forego having to visit the local supermarkets in Elsmere and Glenmont if you stock up on enough delicatessen, fresh produce and homemade chili.

Store manager Mary Ann Weidman returned to the Bon Fare in June of this year, and now she finds herself in charge of a new, expanded and greatly improved convenience store that has shed its former image.

Prior to the purchase of the old Bon Fare on Sept. 1 by Robert Edick, the establishment had been neglected, run down and "not kept up properly," Weidman said.

The Stewart's Ice Cream Shop chain bought out most of the Bon Fare markets in the area this past fall except for a handful that were picked up by local proprietors such as Edick.

The Corner Market has been renovated with a modern kitchen capable of turning out an impressive array of takeout items such as pizza, subs, stews, chili, soups and salads — all homemade.

Assistant manager Cyndi Ristau, left, and manager Mary Ann Weidman, are handling the duties at the new Corner Market, formerly the Bonfare Convenient Store, at Beckers Corners in Selkirk. Doug Persons

"We also roast our own turkeys and roast beef" right in the store, Weidman said, plus there are special entrees produced each day for anyone looking for a break from the routine.

So if you always dreamed of having a Stewart's around the block from you, you now have the best of both worlds, Weidman quipped. The butter, milk, soda and newspapers are still in plentiful supply, but you can now plan your dinner or lunch around the menu at the Corner Market and not have to fuss or bother in the kitchen if you don't feel like it.

Weidman guarantees that everything is top quality and thus far the reaction of local residents seems to be highly positive. Not only do they appreciate the fresh, homemade takeout items, but they like the warm and friendly atmosphere that you rarely find these days whether in convenience stores or supermarkets.

The Corner Market has 10 full and part-time employees.

"People have been remarking about the cleanliness and friendliness of employees here," Weidman said, and "They seem really pleased about how much better the food is."

Matters of Opinion

Go with the facts

Editorials

Doris Davis' election to the Bethlehem Town Board will not end the controversy about sourcing the town's water supply. And there was no reason to expect it would.

As a sitting member, Davis, who supports the board's decision to tap into an aquifer under the Hudson River, was not the symbol of impartiality. Nor was Democrat Bill Burkhard, who questioned the decision while challenging the traditionally all-Republican body that made it.

But one thing Bethlehem residents do have the right to expect is that the substance of any continuing debate focus on fact and not on allegations of deceit. The concerns of those who still doubt the new system will deliver uncontaminated water are sincere and should be treated with respect. So should the opinions of those who believe it will.

However, one core fact will be difficult to overcome. As a recent letter to The Spotlight noted, Davis and most of the others who back the Hudson River connection live in this town and, with their children, will have to drink that water. It is irrational to believe they would willingly Jonestown the entire community, including their own children, just to avoid acknowledging a mistake in judgment.

It certainly remains incumbent on the town board to have evidence of problems with supply or purity evaluated and, if necessary, to modify the system's design. But until that happens, logic and scientific opinion argue that when Bethlehem's water is drawn from the Hudson aquifer it will be of good quality and therefore safe.

Rethink the tax cut

One message all politicians should get from last week's election is that taxes almost everywhere are too high. That is particularly true in New York, whose citizenry is the most heavily taxed in the nation. Having said that, however, we question whether Governor-elect Pataki should now proceed with his promised 25 percent income tax cut.

The main argument against cutting income taxes is that the taxpayer keeps only part of the cut. The U.S. treasury gets the rest because the taxpayer now has a lower state tax deduction on his federal return.

But there are other non-deductible taxes, disguised as mandates, license fees, inspection fees, user fees, utility taxes, filing and recording fees and highway and gasoline taxes, where the impact of a cut would be more immediate.

Finally, there are taxes that, were they more fairly assessed, would directly benefit business and therefore employment. We refer specifically to the state's costly and inefficient unemployment and workmen's compensation insurance programs.

Of course, a tax cut of any kind may vanish if Gov. Mario Cuomo's post-election surprise — a previously concealed $4 billion shortfall in next year's budget — proves true. But assuming for the moment it won't, and assuming the spending cuts that must accompany any reduction in taxes also can be made, Mr. Pataki would do well to weigh all potential targets before wielding his tax-cutting ax.

Land use plan should be adopted

Editor, The Spotlight:

We attended the public meeting several weeks ago to hear the community's comments and questions regarding the town's draft Land Use Management Action Plan (LUMAC). This meeting also gave the town board an opportunity to hear more about the plan as well as to listen to public comments prior to voting on adoption of the plan. There are several issues worth mentioning:

- LUMAC, the group charged with developing the plan, has our support and congratulations for performing the impossible—creating a document that thoroughly details the topography and designates appropriate use of each square inch of the Town;

- The master plan must be adopted by the town board. If it isn't, our community has lost its chance to see that further development will be done in something other than a willy-nilly fashion;

- The master plan is not a perfect or ideal document. There are options within its covers that will be opposed by some. However, there also are options that will be widely supported. What this plan provides, for the first time in Bethlehem's history, is an explicit, precise and carefully researched and constructed planning tool that we can use to protect the remaining beauty and unique character of our town;

- It would be an affront and an insult to the LUMAC members to fail to support the master plan. These individuals have volunteered untold hours for the past five years to produce a document that promises to guide us into the 21st century;

- We would like to see the plan adopted as local law. However, Mr. Kaplowitz indicated at the public meeting that this effort could create a lengthy delay in the plan's adoption. We believe the plan does have major influence even if it is not adopted as law and we also believe it is important to adopt the plan as soon as possible. Therefore, we urge the Town Board to adopt the master plan without delay, deferring to LUMAC's efforts and to the wishes of the community.

Thank you for your attention.

Thanks voters, volunteers, friends for victory

Editor, The Spotlight:

With the November election having ended just hours ago I feel compelled to thank the voters of the Town of Bethlehem for their support.

I wish to assure the residents of our special community that I will continue to work very hard as a member of the Town Board. I will do my best to serve them and help provide the good government they deserve.

My extensive door-to-door campaigning was particularly exhilarating and rewarding. I enjoyed meeting the many people who asked meaningful questions, expressed opinions and concerns, spoke kind words or offered a cold drink on a hot day or an umbrella during unexpected showers.

So many friends and volunteers were a part of my campaign and victory, and I also wish to express my appreciation for all their help and encouragement during the past months.

Showed students a world of magic, memories

Editor, The Spotlight:

I stood at the door of the music room at Slingerlands this morning trying to grasp the enormity of the loss, trying to capture, perhaps, the essence of her spirit, her life here at this place.

I realized, though, that her legacy was very much here, lining the walls. Come to Slingerlands and see the pictures and more pictures of those memorable extravaganzas, the fifth-grade musical, so lovingly crafted year after year by the hand of Virginia Dale. For many of those bright-eyed, young people, the fifth-grade musical was their last time on stage, a last entry into a world of magic and memories.

My introduction to Ginny was at a holiday concert in 1977 when she put together a tableau depicting the "Twelve Days of Christmas." That evening, sitting in the audience watching this magic unfold before my eyes, I made up my mind that my daughter would be attending school here, if only to experience this creator of the beauty I was witnessing.

My daughter, Meg, had a special relationship with Ginny which was evidenced in first grade and in each subsequent year at Slingerlands. She referred to the day she had music as "dress day." She explained very simply that that was her "tribute to Mrs. Spelich." Never once did she waver and right through fifth grade she wore a dress the day she had music. Some years that posed a challenge when she had gym the same day.

Our friendship evolved both professionally and personally. As a public school music teacher myself, I relished the sound she produced from her young charges. And, as I got to know her more, I realized how committed she was to creating that young, soft, child-like sound which I called "the Spelich sound." She was above reproach, had the highest standards and expected the same from the children. Virginia Dale was a stellar educator because she knew the true meaning of the word "educate," from the Latin educare — "to draw out." She produced the best from her students and did so with gentleness, elegance and caring.

Ginny's death leaves me without one of the dearest friends I have ever known. I finger the silver cross that she gave me and I recall a conversation we had about our own human sufferings. She had a stoic, warm faith in God and truly felt sustained by the prayers of those close to her those past few weeks.

She was a gift, a real blessing in my life. She cried with me when we realized 11 years ago that our son would be stillborn. She held my hand and consoled me after the loss of another. Her strength carried me and all was done with such ease, gentleness, serenity. For years, on the anniversary of Michael's birth/death, she literally gave me her house as a haven, as a place to go for myself that day. How do you say thank you for such a gift of friendship? Her answer to my attempts were always, "but Kathleen, that was so simple."

I learned from her about loving restraint, about walking slower, about enjoying a loud, hearty laugh, of keeping focused on the children whom I was teaching. My greatest joy was to give her flowers, especially when her children were visiting, and to get her laughing.

Surrounded by her quiet, serene elegance, I told her often that I felt like a bull in a China shop when I was around her. She would respond that that's what she loved about me most of all. In the deepest way, she touched my life and, as we sat together a few weeks ago in the late afternoon sunlight, we talked about the power of prayer and how she felt God was with her. I shared with her my own image of her in the arms of an angel being gently, slowly, transported to heaven. We hugged and cried and prayed and said goodbye.

Rest in peace, dear friend.

Parental involvement leads to improved schools

The writer of this Point of View is president of Parents For Excellence, a group organized to help the Bethlehem Central School District develop and maintain quality programs. He resides in Glenmont.

By Kevin McCarthy

A recent article in The New York Times carried what might seem like a no-news headline: "Success in School Called Family Effort."

For most parents in high-performing school districts such as Bethlehem, that's no revelation. After all, we already spend hours each week attending school functions, checking homework, packing lunches, extracting who knows what from bookbags and generally trying to do what we can to make sure that Jimmy and Janey are learning.

But our children will benefit further if parental involvement goes beyond the support we're now giving. Parents For Excellence is an organization that formed earlier this year in the Bethlehem Central School District to demonstrate — and to strengthen — parents' support for quality education.

Our mission statement sums up what we try to do: "Encourage parents and schools throughout the district to challenge all students to work to the peak of their abilities in all their studies." Parental involvement is a key component in that process. Without parental involvement and support, it is much more difficult for our schools to maintain and nourish the innate curiosity and desire to learn that is in children.

With that in mind, Parents For Excellence sponsored an open meeting at the Bethlehem Public Library on Oct. 30. The focus of the meeting was a panel of parents, teachers and other experts who discussed parental involvement in education.

The panelists included Jackie Brilling, a parent involved in the shared decision-making committee; Dick Crowley, a Bethlehem resident who works in the state Education Department; Les Loomis, Bethlehem superintendent of schools; Ginny Trimarchi, a past president of the Glenmont PTA; and Donna Varriale, a teacher at the Bethlehem Central Middle School.

The panel talked with the audience of parents and teachers about a number of issues. Among them, not surprisingly, were homework and grades. The comments regarding homework were actually somewhat disturbing: In many cases, educators tell us, parents are asking schools to make their children's education less challenging. The reasons are several, but one has to do with time.

More and more, we fill our children's schedules with soccer,

Point of View

Girl and Boy Scouts, dance classes, music lessons, Little League and more. These activities are all to the good. But, as one of our panelists pointed out: "First and foremost, we need to focus on education." If our children are too busy or too tired to make their best possible effort on their schoolwork, what's the long-term gain?

The teachers and administrators also told us that we as parents are more likely than ever to complain about our children ever getting less-than-superlative grades. If we expect our children to be challenged to do their best, that may mean something less than "A's" across the board. Aren't we helping our children more when we allow them to enjoy the benefits of earning a high grade, rather than assuming it as a matter of course?

For those of you who would like to hear more from the panel discussion, there are three options: TV-31, the Bethlehem Public Access Channel on cable will be broadcasting it on Nov. 30 at 6:30 p.m.; it will also be available in the Bethlehem Public Library media center during December and January as part of the TV-31 Highlights section; or you can call me after Dec. 1 at 439-7815 and borrow a copy of the VHS videotape.

The issues mentioned above are just a couple of the questions that have arisen in this exciting and challenging time for public schools, both in the Capital District and across New York. We will be holding public meetings at the library on Jan. 29 and March 26 and we welcome your suggestions for subjects for discussion at those meetings.

Demands on our schools are growing, while support for them is, in many ways, shrinking. We ask schools to build our children's self-esteem, give them nutritious meals, teach them life skills, and prepare them for the 21st century — all without ever giving them a bad grade or too much homework. At the same time, two-worker families find it harder to spend time volunteering in our schools, the percentage of households that have children in school is less than half, and we as a society have less confidence in institutions in general, including schools (the proportion of school budgets not being passed is the highest in years).

One of the new, positive elements of parental involvement in education is New York's new requirement that every public school district — indeed every individual school — create a process for shared decision-making.

"Shared decision-making" may sound like bureaucratic lingo. In fact, it represents an opportunity for parents and teachers to work together — along with school administrators and support staff — to improve our children's educational achievement.

Shared decision-making teams have been, or soon will be, created in every school in the state. Parents For Excellence encourages parents to use this new process as one means of getting involved in their children's education. Know who the parent representatives are for your schools and talk with them. They're your voice in the shared decision-making process.

There are other good ways to get involved. One way, of course, is to participate in your PTA or in other parent groups like Parents For Excellence. An update on some of our activities over the past 10 months might be informative.

For example, during the budget process last spring, we asked that more funding be provided in the 1994-95 budget for teachers to work on curriculum development. Despite a tight budget, the school board and the administration worked on the suggestion and provided additional funding for in-service teacher training.

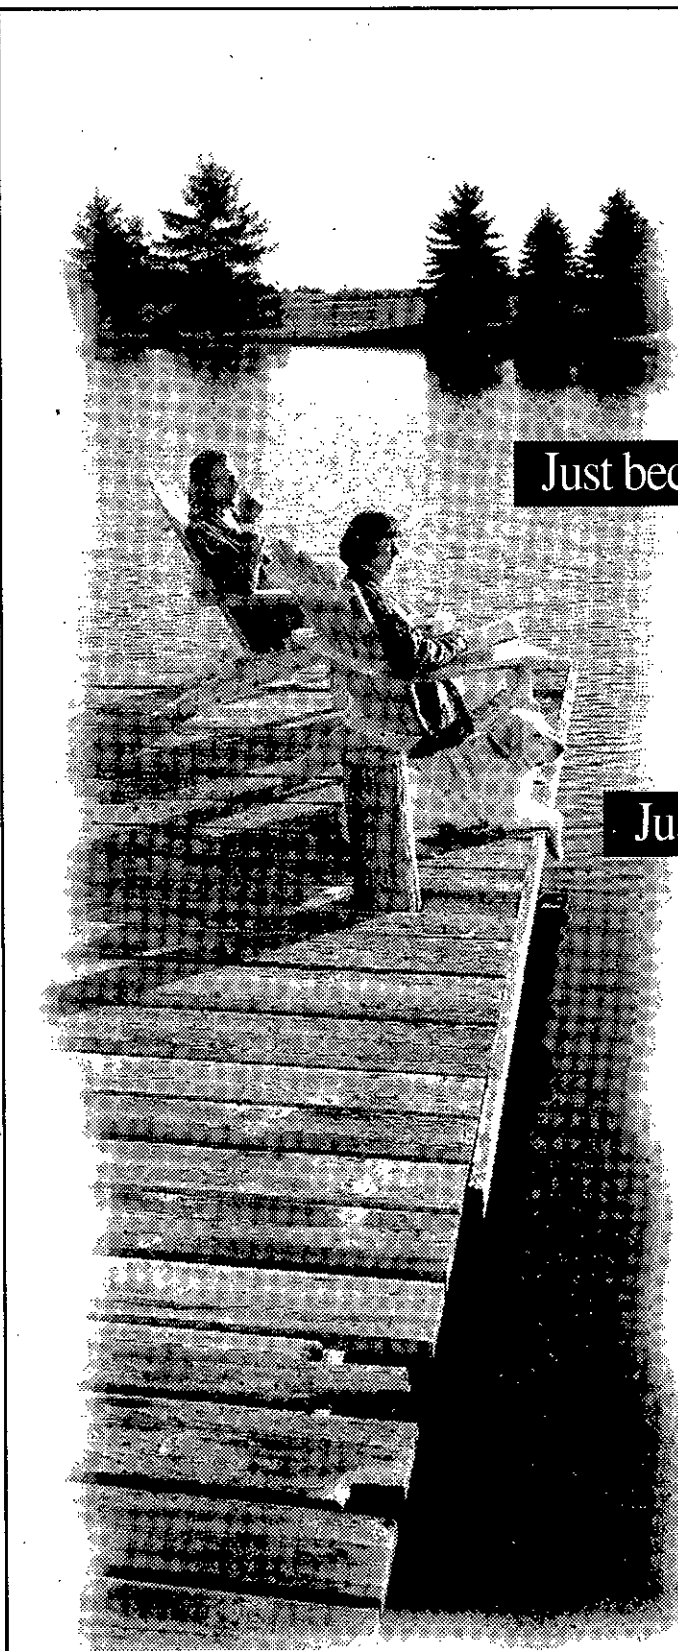

Our High School Working Group has met with district administrators and teachers to discuss the high school curriculum. Our Middle School Working Group has met with teachers and administrators to share views and information about the restructuring at the middle school. In both cases, PFE has expressed support for some improvements that were already under discussion or under way, and suggested some additional areas for consideration.

PFE's Elementary School Working Group determined that some parents needed to know more about the elementary language arts program. Teachers involved in language arts volunteered their time after school to talk with some of our members, to explain the program and answer questions.

Our Community Affairs Working Group has proposed that the district apply for the New York State Excelsior Award, and is learning more about the district's self-assessment and benchmarking activities. The State and National Affairs Working Group follows relevant developments at those two levels of government, as well as activities of other parent groups outside our district.

This is a partial list of our activities. We will be working on these and other issues in the coming year. One possibility is helping to augment the existing academic program by working with the district to bring more parents into the schools to work on special programs in their areas of expertise.

Be aware that your involvement does make a difference, to your children and to the entire district. Your active, constructive participation as a parent in your school district very simply helps our schools be even stronger and more effective than they already are.

One of the members of Parents For Excellence spoke for many recently: "Students need to hear that we value their work in the classroom. Not just those who win awards at the end of the year, but all those who stretch themselves and achieve. And they need to hear this not just from their teachers and their parents, but from the entire community."

Bethlehem students meet Clinton, Cuomo

Editor, The Spotlight:

When President Clinton visited Albany two weeks ago, I had the honor of arranging for 25 Bethlehem students to participate with the President and Governor Cuomo in an education teleconference they held with other students across the State.

I am glad I did.

The residents of Bethlehem and the faculty and staff of the school district can be proud of these young people. It was my pleasure to watch the students conduct themselves in an orderly, mature and responsible manner and show appropriate respect for the occasion and the President.

Thanks from Slingerlands firemen

Editor, The Spotlight:

On behalf of the members of the Slingerlands Fire Department, I wish to thank everyone who attended our annual Halloween party and haunted house on the evening of Oct. 31.

We also wish to apologize to those of you who attended and waited to see the haunted house that evening only to be turned away. Due to a medical emergency involving one of the participants it became necessary to close the house before the end of the evening. We are happy to report that the patient involved is doing fine.

As we look forward to 1995, the members of the Slingerlands Fire Department wish to invite the entire community back to get spooked once again at next year's Halloween party.

Timothy Veltman, Chief
Slingerlands Fire Department

It was also a pleasure to witness their excitement at being together with the President, hoping for the chance to shake hands or converse with him, which most did.

More importantly, I was impressed by the students' appreciation for the educational technology which was demonstrated for the President and the Governor and for the potential this technology has to enrich learning opportunities in and outside the classroom. It was clear that Bethlehem students understand and value quality education.

Accompanying Dr. Loomis and teachers William Cleveland and Donna Varriale were high school

Distinguished leader

Editor, The Spotlight:

As State Senator Howard C. Nolan prepares to leave office, the consumers and staff of the Center for the Disabled wish to publicly thank him for his decades of support. Senator Nolan has been on our Board of Directors since 1963, is chairman of the Foundation Board, and is currently an executive committee member of our 50 Years Capital Campaign. The Center's residence in Loudonville, which houses seven children who have disabilities, is named Nolan House, and we honored him as our Humanitarian of the Year in 1984.

Howard Nolan's legacy, though, goes beyond these contributions of time, dollars, and talent. He is quite simply, a friend to all of us. When he visits our school programs, our students call him by his first name. He stops to observe the latest communication technology in action. He believes in the work we do with individuals who have disabilities and their families, and through him many members of the community have become involved in the Center.

Senator Nolan has been a distinguished public official and distinguished community leader. Thousands of individuals with disabilities have had richer and fuller lives because of his work.

Memorial helps Vietnam veterans cope with past

By Susan Graves
and Elaine Jackson Cape

Even though Veterans Day has come and gone, there's still time to take stock of the contributions of American servicemen and women who served during the Vietnam War.

Robert F. Allyn of Glenmont, director of the New York State Vietnam Memorial, said an exhibit called "Breath of Life: The Sculptures of Eileen Barry," will be on display at the Empire State Plaza through Tuesday, Nov. 29.

The exhibit at the state Vietnam Memorial's Fine Arts Gallery is part of a "living memorial" that was established by legislation in 1981 to commemorate the military service of New Yorkers in Vietnam and Southeast Asia from 1961 to 1975.

In addition to Barry's sculptures, the exhibit includes bronze tablets listing the 4,194 state residents who died in the war.

For Allyn, much of the exhibit is a reflection of his own experience.

"I guess the important thing is that we make sure this doesn't happen again," said Allyn, who is a Vietnam-era veteran. "I think people want to sweep as much under the rug as they can," in terms of what happened in Vietnam and what happened here when the troops returned home,

Courage, Compassion and Pain is represented in this piece by Eileen Barry. during a time of anti-war sentiment and upheaval.

Even today, there are Vietnam War veterans who deny the whole experience, Allyn said.

"A lot won't admit they served," said Allyn, adding that he himself went through a 20-year period of denial. "I didn't tell my wife until recently. ... When I came back, there were problems." He remembers being spat upon.

"It was a very negative situation.

It devastated me. It felt like you were wrong ... weren't really part of society. I stayed that way for 20 years," he said.

But Allyn, 48, said all that changed at a Veterans Day parade in Albany several years ago. "It was like an alarm clock went off in my head ..." when he saw the veterans' Tri-County Council march by and "I started to cry."

It was only then that Allyn stopped being ashamed of the experience and began to take an active role in veterans' affairs.

Allyn, who served in the Air Force, was a loadmaster as part of the Operation Ranch Hand team, whose job was to spray the herbicide Agent Orange around Vietnam.

Charles Wheeler of Loudonville, director of conventions, tourism and administration at the state Office of General Services, oversees the memorial as part of his job at OGS, and said the program serves a very useful educational purpose.

Wheeler, who served in Vietnam as a lieutenant from 1970 to 1971, said most of the soldiers he knew came back from the conflict and "didn't say anything much, just went about our lives."

It wasn't until he got involved with the memorial three years ago, Wheeler said, as he was sitting in a room with "other gray-haired, balding men," talking about the war, that he realized they all had shared a common experience.

"I understood then that some of the vets required help dealing with the problems caused by the war."

The memorial also helps the families of those who were killed in action, he said. Last year, two names were added to the lists on the tablets, and the families of the servicemen attended the ceremony. "It wasn't a time of mourning," Wheeler said. "They really appreciated that their sons were being remembered."

According to Wheeler, the memorial serves not only to recognize the veterans who served their country, but also as a reminder to others. "It's important not to forget the horrors of war, that it was something that we don't want to repeat," he said.

In addition to the on-site exhibits, Allyn has also taken the memorial program on the road to schools through panel discussions.

"Very little is taught in the schools" about Vietnam, he said, even though some of the war's effects linger on. "Agent Orange, certain cancers and the POW issue" haven't made it into the history books, said Allyn. "People would rather not talk about it."

The exhibit, however, has something for everyone to talk or at least think about. "I can't tell you the response of kids," he said. "They love the sculpture."

The memorial has changing exhibits, educational programs and special events and is the first effort of its kind by any state in the nation. It's located in the Justice Building, across the street from the State Capitol on State Street in Albany. The gallery hours are Monday to Friday, 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Consistency is key ingredient at Route 85 pizzeria

By Dev Tobin

Slow and steady, along with fresh and consistent, will win the race in the highly competitive pizza and take-out food business, according to Cosimo Crupi and Dominick DeLeo of Pizza by Dominick.

Almost a year ago, the two opened their store in the Stonewell Plaza on Route 85 outside Slingerlands with a limited menu, and have been carefully adding menu items and services in response to their customers.

"We want to bring it along slowly, allowing us to grow the right way," said Crupi, adding that they do not offer delivery at this time. "We don't have an extensive menu because we want to make sure the food is consistently high quality."

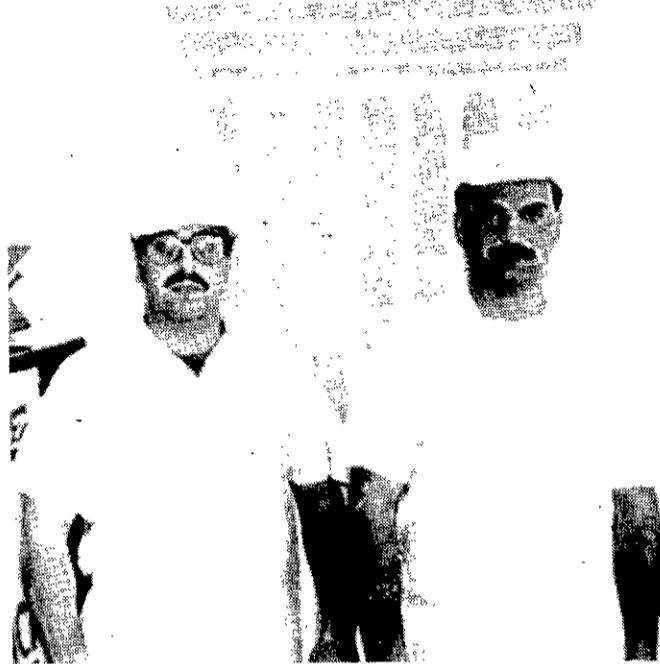

In addition to the two owners, the store employs two other people. "We're here all the time," Crupi noted.

Pizza by Dominick features pizza with a thinner crust, "more New York style, with as many fresh ingredients as we can," Crupi said.

Fresh means making sauce and dough on a daily basis, and also making sausage and meatballs from scratch, DeLeo said.

Pizza by DOMINICK

a slice above the rest

Cosimo Crupi and Dominick DeLeo of Pizza By Dominick focus on freshness at their take-out store in the Stonewell Plaza.

Dev Tobin

The menu consists of pizza, pasta (ziti or rigatoni) dinners with homemade marinara sauce, tossed and antipasta salads, chicken wings, chicken parmigiana and four subs — meatball, sausage, Italian mixed and turkey.

Recent additions to the menu are the chicken parm and the turkey sub, both in response to customers' requests.

"We don't want to get too elaborate," Crupi said, noting that cream sauces and veal dishes, for example, are more appropriate for a sit-down restaurant.

Calzones and eggplant parmigiana may be the next additions to the menu, again in response to customers, Crupi said.

Two areas the business has expanded into are catering and bottling sauce.

"Last spring, we got a number of calls for platters for parties, which we hadn't thought about getting into," Crupi said.

As for the sauce, Crupi noted, "Everyone who makes sauce thinks theirs is the best. Ours is a simple sauce with all fresh ingredients, and bottling it is something we can try without a large investment."

The fledgling business plans to give back to the community with a proposed $500 annual scholarship to Siena College for an area student, said Crupi, a Siena grad.

"We felt that businesses our size can do something like this to help the community," Crupi said, adding that he is working with Siena to set the criteria for the award.

Pizza by Dominick is open Tuesday through Sunday from 4 to 9 p.m. Call 478-9223 or 478-9226 for information.

best be advised to nominate a runner or jogger — possibly someone who has competed in a marathon before.

If nothing else, Davis campaigned as though her very life depended on it. Grange meetings, church dinners, neighborhood forums — she was ubiquitous.

And her energy was not lost on town Republican leaders who picked her from a list of candidates last spring to fill the remainder of Fuller's board term when Fuller resigned in January to assume the supervisor's post.

"When Doris came before the (town Republican committee) she had her walking shoes on," said town GOP chairman Brian Murphy.

Burkhard, for his part, said he "took great comfort in the fact that we beat her straight up." But he added that the Democrats would have to do something to blunt the effect of the Conservative Party line, which the GOP seems to garner year after year thanks mainly to the efforts to town Receiver of Taxes Ken Hahn.

Eventually the Democrats will break through, Burkhard predicted, given that he picked up nearly 49 percent of the vote in this year's election while Clyne and Susan Burns posted similar percentages last year.

"We have a right to look at her record next fall and see if she's actually accomplished anything."

It's a new ballgame. They were fortunate to escape with a win. We've never had a Democrat in history get as many votes as Bill did.

Matt Clyne

Three board seats, including the supervisor's post, will be up for grabs in 1995 and if this year's election was a donnybrook, next year's should be no less.

"It's a new ballgame," said Clyne. "They were fortunate to escape with a win. We've never had a Democrat in history get as many votes as Bill did."

"Which takes nothing away from Doris. She worked hard and she earned it. What it goes to show I think is these board races are up for grabs. Give Bill the Conservative Party line and he wins by 1,100 votes."

Local

Hoblock, a former assemblyman and Colonie town board member, will join the senate majority in January, replacing retiring Democratic Sen. Howard Nolan.

In statewide races, local voters' preferences also matched the final results.

In the governor's contest, Republican George Pataki easily outpolled Cuomo (6,912 to 6,486 in Bethlehem and 2,387 to 1,695 in New Scotland). Independent Thomas Golisano was far behind, with 598 and 203 votes respectively.

Democratic Comptroller Carl McCall became the first black to win statewide office, and his support reached into suburban southern Albany County.

McCall defeated Republican-Conservative Herb London 7,653 to 5,911 in Bethlehem and 2,123 to 1,884 in New Scotland.

In the race for Attorney General, Republican-Conservative Dennis Vacco edged Democrat-Liberal Karen Burstein locally, just as he won statewide by a narrow margin.

Vacco nipped Burstein 6,753 to 6,744 in Bethlehem and 2,154 to 1,943 in New Scotland.

Not all Democratic incumbents had a hard time, as U.S. Sen. Patrick Moynihan and Congressman Michael McNulty cruised to easy wins, both locally and overall.

Moynihan bested Republican Bernadette Castro 7,884 to 6,033 in Bethlehem and 2,122 to 2,015 in New Scotland.

McNulty had no trouble with Republican Joe Gomez, winning 8,455 to 5,039 in Bethlehem and 2,574 to 1,526 in New Scotland.

Incumbent assemblymen also won, with Democrat John McEneny with 2,368 local votes (whose district includes New Scotland) unopposed, and Republican John Faso (whose district includes Bethlehem) turning back the challenge of Anthony Schwartz of Selkirk.

Faso beat Schwartz 8,261 to 5,155 in Bethlehem.

In the race for state Supreme Court judge for the Third Judicial District, comprising Albany and six neighboring counties, winner Republican-Conservative Anthony Carpinello outpolled Democrat-Liberal Mary Work 7,607 to 5,607 in Bethlehem and 2,314 to 1,643 in New Scotland.

In the contest for New Scotland highway superintendent, Darrell Duncan won easily, although his non-campaigning opponent garnered more than 40 percent of the vote.

A Democrat appointed to replace Republican Michael Hotaling after he resigned, Duncan won over Larry Bartkus 2,221 to 1,584. Shortly after he was nominated, Bartkus informed town GOP officials that he was no longer interested in the job.

"It's mind-boggling. A lot of people must have started with Pataki and just went right across the line," commented GOP Committeewoman Roz Robinson.

In the 10th County Legislative District (North Bethlehem and part of Albany), Democrat Joseph Cannizzaro beat Republican Donald DeWitt 2,760 to 1,098 overall (and 380 to 342 in Bethlehem) for the one year remaining of the late Sal Garufi's term.

In August, Cannizzaro was appointed by the county legislature's Democratic majority to replace Garufi.

Turnout was high in both towns — 14,519 out of 19,121 registered voters in Bethlehem (76 percent), and 4,481 out of 5,964 registered voters in New Scotland (75 percent).

All results are unofficial, according to the county Board of Elections.

"Every time I go, I grow spiritually and learn to be a better person," Johnson said.

While Medugorje itself has been spared the effects of the civil war (through Marian intervention, according to Johnson), nearby Mostar, the capital of Hercegovina, has been embattled for many years.

Knowing that part of the trip this time included visiting refugee camps on the outskirts of Mostar, Johnson brought along hundreds of toys that are given away as part of McDonald's Happy Meals.

"The children's faces light up when they get a 25-cent toy, but they need everything — shoes, socks, shirts, underwear, flashlights, school supplies," she recalled. "Some of the kids didn't even have shoes; it really breaks your heart."

Johnson said she had bought the toys at garage sales, and will contact McDonald's directly for a new supply to send over in time for the holidays.

Johnson and her husband said they would like to organize a local relief effort for the beleaguered refugees.

"If one person can't afford to support a family, then maybe they can get together with some friends, or with a prayer group," Johnson said, adding that more than 40 families and groups locally are sending regular support to needy refugee families.

Johnson said that contributions could be sent to Mir Peace, P.O. Box 105, Clarks Summit, Pa. 18411.

She added that people who would like to donate clothing, canned goods and toys can contact her at 439-1388, and that she and her husband can arrange for delivery.

Bill Johnson emphasized that, by working through Mir Peace, "100 percent goes to the people who need help. Even if you can only buy one pair of socks, it will go to someone who really needs it."

Delmar man wins award

Delmar resident Thomas J. Kinney of Rockefeller College has been awarded the 1994 Outstanding Service Medallion by the American Association of Adult and Continuing Education in a ceremony held at the association's national conference in Nashville, Tenn.

The award was given for his outstanding achievement and leadership in the field of adult and continuing education. Kinney was also cited for his specific contributions to the association. He will continue to serve as treasurer for a fourth term and on the work place skills assessment advisory committee to the American College Testing Program.

The American Association of Adult and Continuing Education represents over 6,000 members and subscribers and over 12,000 affiliate members. The association includes literacy and adult basic education practitioners, adult education faculty, university continuing education staff, military educators, and business and industry trainers.

Kinney's primary role as director of the Professional Development Program at Rockefeller College, University at Albany, is to establish and oversee education and training programs for professional workers and managers in state and local government and in business.

Because of his efforts, the university has one of the most innovative professional development programs in the country. Both Kinney and the program have received national recognition.

Extension gets funding for non-traditional volunteer program

For information about the new volunteer program or to get involved, call the 4-H office at 765-3500.

Views On Dental Health

Dr. Virginia Plaisted, D.D.S.

Xerostomia

Do you have a glass of water on your bed stand to sip during the night?

Do your lips and cheeks get sore from rubbing on your teeth when you talk a lot?

Have your recently started getting cavities when you went years without tooth decay?

You may have Xerostomia, better known as dry mouth.

Xerostomia is most commonly associated with the natural aging process: our salivary flow decreases as we get older. However, there are many medications that cause dry mouth.

If your mouth is dry, both cavities and periodontal disease (gum disease) is likely to increase.

Mention your concerns to your dentist. He or she will have suggestions to help prevent the dental problems associated with dry mouth.

CAFE looking for input on school switch

"Where will my child attend elementary school next fall?"

That's the question on many parents' minds these days, because in September 1995, our elementary pupils will begin occupying our newly renovated buildings at Pieter B. Coeymans and A.W. Becker. Ravena Elementary will be closing.

Because there are more students in Pieter B. and Ravena Elementary together than there are in Becker, it's not a simple matter of moving all the Ravena students into Pieter B.

The Committee Addressing Facilities and Enrollment (CAFE) has begun meeting to discuss the consolidation of the three schools into two.

Ultimately, it will also recommend new attendance lines that will vary from current ones.

The final recommendations will be made to the board of education at the second board meeting in January.

Now, CAFE is seeking your input.

A public meeting will be held on Thursday, Nov. 17, at 7 p.m. at the RCS Middle School's large group room.

The committee would like to hear your thoughts and concerns before any decisions are made.

If you have any questions, call the board of education office at 767-2513.

Take a gander at pols' signatures

This month, the library is presenting "Political Autographs," a collection of photographs and letters signed by local and national political figures since 1960.

"Political Autographs," on loan from Albany resident Frank S. Robinson, will be on display through Wednesday, Nov. 30.

The exhibit includes letters signed in 1969 by then governor of California Ronald Reagan, 1968 presidential candidate Richard M. Nixon and by Georgia Gov. Jimmy Carter in 1971, as well as signed photographs of John Connally, Hubert Humphrey and Lyndon Johnson.

The autographs, on display for the first time, represent only a fraction of Robinson's collection. Robinson said it all started when he saw the address of former Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's law firm in the newspaper. "It occurred to me that I could write to him. He (Dewey) was an icon to me, up there in the clouds. But he wrote back."

Robinson said he helped to build his collection using addresses he found in Who's Who. "I especially liked the idea of going back and touching base with an earlier time. I have letters from Upton Sinclair and T.S. Eliot," he said.

Robinson, an attorney and freelance journalist, is the author of Albany's O'Connell Machine published by the Washington Park Spirit in 1973, and reprinted by Transaction Books as Machine Politics: A Study of Albany's O'Connells in 1977.

On display in the children's room is a miniature model on preventing rabies by state Health Department staffer Mary Chris Schultz.

The Bethlehem Networks Project also has an exhibit about a recent Bethlehem Central Middle School Leadership Club conference.

On Sunday, Nov. 20, at 2 p.m., the Franco-American Film Federation of New York will present "The Cinema of Frederick Back."

The 70 minute program is free and open to the public.

Back has been creating cartoons for Radio-Canada, the French-speaking arm of the CBC, for four decades.

Noted for his innovative style and pastels, the French native won his first Oscar in 1982 for "Crac!" an exploration of Quebec's history from the view of an old, discarded rocking chair.

Sunday's program will include a showing of the Oscar-winning "The Man Who Planted Trees." The moving account of a man's efforts to reforest a war-torn mountain, the film created a sensation when it was released.

Back's latest work, "The Mighty River," tells the story of the St. Lawrence from its birth to its slow recovery from ecological ruin.

The "Mighty River," like all his best work, required the drawing of more than 10 thousand, separate six-inch frosted acetate frames. The 24 minute film took four years to complete.

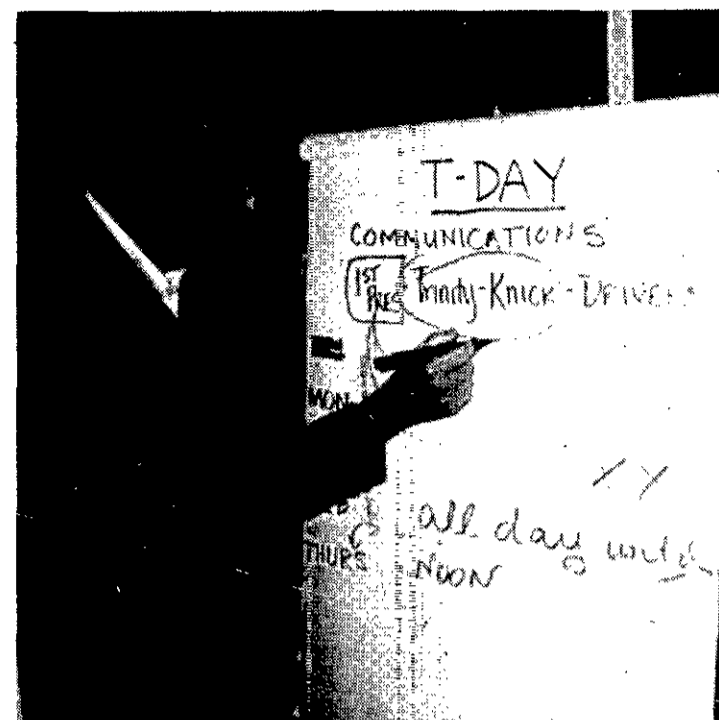

The library will close at 5 p.m. on both Wednesday, Nov. 23, and on Friday, Nov. 25, and will be closed on Thanksgiving Day, Nov. 24.

College recruiters woo Bethlehem's Jim Boyle

By Joshua Kagan

With high school seniors across the country contemplating their college plans, most would be jealous of the choices Bethlehem senior Jim Boyle has.

The 6-foot-6-inch, 290-pound Boyle started on the Eagles' offensive and defensive lines this year. His raw size and football talents, together with his academic abilities (he is an A student), make him a hot commodity among the top colleges.

Boyle said he has been approached by Boston College, Stanford, Duke, Virginia and Maryland and has been verbally offered an athletic scholarship from Maryland.

The scholarship offers should intensify in the coming weeks because NCAA rules restrict recruiting during the high school football season, which just recently ended for the Eagles.

"At this point I favor Boston College because I visited it and I liked what I saw," Boyle said. "It's also close to home. Academics are definitely a factor. Academics are the biggest reason for considering Stanford or Duke."

"Jim has really come on as a player," BC football coach John Sodergren said. "His attitude has been real good. He's blessed with size, which the big schools need. He's got a great SAT score, too. I'm fairly certain he'll play somewhere in Division I. Hopefully, he'll be in a position of leverage."

Boyle is the second heavily recruited lineman to come through Bethlehem in recent years. John Reagan, who later became a captain of the Syracuse Orangemen, played at BC. Reagan has coached Boyle at times.

"His work with me is one of the biggest factors in my being recruited," Boyle said.

"Jim's bigger than John," said Sodergren. "He's worked with John at our football camp and John's influence can be seen in him. Jim uses John as a role model, even wears the same number. They're similar in many ways."

As it stands now, it is all but certain that Boyle will attend a big-name Division I school and play football there. Boyle is still unsure if he will pursue professional football after he finishes college.

"I really haven't given it much thought," he said. "I don't know if it's possible. It would be a dream of mine come true."

Soccerplex shaping up

The west side of the Bethlehem Soccer Club's Soccerplex will be ready for play next spring if Mother Nature cooperates. The club's fundraising for this major effort is continuing. Contributions can be mailed to the Bethlehem Soccer Club, P.O. Box 305, Delmar 12054.

Loss in tourney marks end of 3 stellar V'ville careers

By Jacob Van Ryn

The Voorheesville girls soccer team ended its season on a low note, losing in the semifinals of sectional play to Greenville.

Although the 'Birds dominated the game, they were not able to put the ball in the net. The only goal of the game came about six minutes into the second half when Greenville had a break to the goal.

They scored, and that would turn out to be the final score of the game. Greenville later lost in the semifinals to Maple Hill.

"It was very disappointing. It's even harder for me to accept because we outplayed them," said coach Jim Hladun. "We just didn't play hard enough. We were flat the whole game."

Unfortunately, for the number-one seeded 'Birds, the season ended too soon. "We always struggle in the semifinal game," said Hladun. "We really wanted to play Maple Hill in the finals, but we just have to deal with the loss and focus on what we were able to accomplish this year."

What the 'Birds did accomplish this season is quite impressive. They won the Colonial Council title, and during the difficult Council schedule there was a stretch in which the 'Birds did not suffer a loss in 15 consecutive games.

The loss to Greenville marked the end of the soccer careers at Voorheesville for senior tricapitans Cristie Arena, Kristin Dougherty and Jessica Reed.

Arena was one of the Council's best midfielders, and was also quite a leader. "She was a big factor in the middle of the field," said Hladun. "She scored some big goals for us and was always a hard worker, in the game or in practice."

"It was a very disappointing way to end a soccer career," Arena said, "but I'm proud of the fact that the whole team always played hard and that's all you can ask for."

Soccer

One of the reasons for the success of the defense (Angie Berg had nine shutouts) was the play of senior fullback Dougherty. She continuously improved her game, and got better as the year went on.

When asked about Dougherty, Hladun said, "She always played very hard when she was on the field. She's a versatile player, and showed very good leadership qualities on and off the field."

Dougherty was also quite disappointed with the way the season ended. "That last game isn't the way I want to remember the season," she said, "but I'll certainly remember winning the Colonial Council."

"Even though we (the team) didn't always get along, we came together in the end and that was nice. I'll miss everybody on my team next year."

Jess (Reed) just doesn't allow herself to get beat on defense," Hladun recalled. "She took her job very seriously and always had a good focus on the game. She was a three-year starter for me because of her unique defensive skills."

"I didn't know what playing meant to me until I didn't have it anymore," Reed said. "I'm going to miss a lot of people and playing with these people."

The three girls had one more chance to play together at the exceptional senior game at RPI on Sunday, Nov. 13.

They all three played extremely well and made key contributions to the 1-0 victory of their squad.

V'ville junior midfielder Alison Walter races upfield during the Blackbirds' last game of the season. Coach Jim Hladun will have most of his players back next year. Jonathan Getnick

Four BC swimmers headed to state tourney

This past weekend the girl's varsity swimming and diving team captured a fourth place finish at the Section II Championships at RPI in Troy.

"The girls did an excellent job in preparing for this meet all season and it paid off in the end," said coach Sandy Banas. "Everyone that swam reached either a personal or seasonal best time."

Finishing in the top 16 finals were Jessi Fein, Sarah Hotaling, Meagan Tougher, Trish Caimano, Shauna Down, Maggie Tettelbach, Erika McDonough, Maggie Wolfert, Cailin Brennan, and Nadine Maurer.

McDonough, Brennan, Wolfert, and Maurer will go on to compete in the New York State Championships this weekend at RPI. McDonough will be competing in the 500-yard freestyle, and the 100-yard backstroke.

"I am looking forward to a great season next year and maybe a third place finish at Sections," said Banas. The team finished the regular dual meet season with an 8-3 record.

THE YOUTH NETWORK

A BETHLEHEM NETWORKS PROJECT

MiddleWorks works for parents and students

What is MiddleWorks? MiddleWorks is a group which was formed approximately two years ago at a Bethlehem Community Partnership workshop.

Fred Burdick, then principal of the Bethlehem Central Middle School, explained that an important step in alcohol and other drug prevention is keeping parents involved in their children's lives and education. Research studies indicate that the most successful students are those whose parents are most involved in their education.

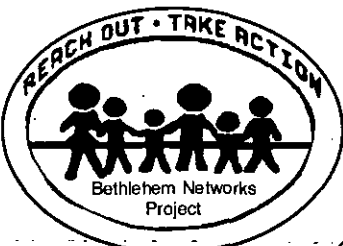

A major goal of MiddleWorks is the continued involvement of middle school parents in the schools. Those who originated MiddleWorks believe one way to keep parents involved is to help them in the transition from elementary school to middle school.

To this end, members of MiddleWorks have helped with middle school parent orientation. They visited the elementary schools in the spring and spoke with fifth-grade parents. For the past two years, MiddleWorks held Welcome Picnics for new sixth-graders and their families in the fall. These picnics have been extremely successful.

This year, the Bethlehem Central School District applied for and received a grant from the state Office of Alcohol and Substance Abuse Services. Some of the funds from this grant will be used to support and to fund MiddleWorks projects.

MiddleWorks members will offer workshops for parents and students. Members of MiddleWorks were invited to make presentations about the group's goals at sixth- and seventh-grade open houses. They distributed a survey to measure parent interest in various workshops.

The first workshop of the year, on study skills survival, will be offered Dec. 7 at the middle school.

Novemberfest

German-American festival offers best and 'wurst' of fall harvest

By Susan Graves

At last! A genuine harvest festival with all the comforts of home. So what if it's mid-November. The South Concourse at the Empire State Plaza — sheltered from the wind and even worse Northeast weather vagaries — is the perfect setting for the New York Novemberfest set for Friday, Nov. 18 from noon to 9 p.m.

The fifth annual event, sponsored by the state Department of Agriculture and Markets and the Office of General Services, designed to celebrate the state's harvest, is also an opportunity to get an early jump on holiday shopping. Usually held in October, the festival was moved to November because of scheduling, said Carol Budliger, agriculture and markets spokeswoman. "We realized it was another opportunity" to expand the celebration, which this year will include Christmas tree growers, who will share ideas on tree care and decoration, she said.

A harvest holiday tree, decorated with all-natural materials by the Albany County Cornell Cooperative Extension 4-H Teen Council in Voorheesville, will be on display along with food and gift ideas from growers and crafters throughout the state. "The focus is really on food items as gift ideas," said Budliger.

This year, three German-American clubs will offer the best of the "wursts" including bratwurst, knock wurst, weisswurst along with sauerkraut, hot potato salad and strudel for hungry shoppers on their lunch or supper hours or visitors trying to get an edge on the holiday crowds. "Every year, more and more people participate in and attend the festival," Budliger said.

To make things even more festive, accordion-player Walter "Big Wally" Krywulych and country fiddler George Wilson will perform throughout the afternoon. And from 5 to 9 p.m. the Bavarian Barons and the S.V. Alpenklang German dance group will entertain.

Demonstrations of cider pressing and candle making are also on the agenda, along with numerous handcrafted items, plants, dried flowers and seasonal produce.

New York wine makers and brewers will also be on hand.

Admission to the Novemberfest is free. For information about the festival, call 457-5981.

Matt Rutnik, an eighth grader at Bethlehem Central Middle School, makes holiday tree decorations for the 4H Council in Voorheesville.

Holiday show at Capital Rep raises the Dickens with Carol

Imagine a very bad theater company attempting to do Charles Dickens' Christmas Carol and you have some idea of the plot of Inspecting Carol now at the Capital Repertory Company in Albany.

The theater company within a theater company concept for the plot is doing the play for all the wrong reasons and casting the same way. In an attempt to get funding from the National Endowment for the Arts, the Soapbox Theater (the play's errant theater troupe) does Christmas Carol and in order to be politically correct for the person inspecting the company, they cast a six foot, four inch African American to play all the ghosts in the play. His costume is a diaper.

Martin P. Kelly

This is only one premise that dooms the play-within-a-play and that is the playwright's wish. Similar to Noises Off and The Torchbearers, the producing company on stage is inept but enthusiastic, lending to the comedy of the piece.

A husband-wife team of actors, Seth Barrish and Lee Brock, head the cast while Kate Kelly, wife of the show's director, Bruce Bouchard, is seen as the Soapbox Theater's overwrought artistic director.

Oh, yes! Michael-Leon Wooley plays the NBA-sized ghosts.

Inspecting Carol plays through December 11. Tickets and reservations at 462-4534.

Churches' choirs combine to present Thanksgiving in Song November 20

A combined 100-voice choir from eight community churches will present Thanksgiving in Song 7 p.m. Sunday, November 20, at the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, Adams Place, Delmar.

In addition, the Bethlehem Lutheran Bell Choir will perform as will a brass ensemble.

St. Thomas church plays host to this event because of its near-perfect acoustics. Choir director Peg Dorgan and organist Jennie Moak will lead the 100 voices which represent St. Thomas; the Bethlehem Lutheran Church; the Community United Methodist Church of Slingerlands; the Delmar Presbyterian Church; the Delmar Reformed Church; the First United Methodist Church, Delmar; St. Stephen's Episcopal Church; and Unionville Reformed Church.

The concert begins at 7 p.m. and admission is a free will offering for the Interfaith Partnership for the Homeless. Non-perishable food items for the Bethlehem Food Pantry will also be accepted.

$400,000 grant given to NYSTI for musical play development

The New York State Theater Institute has received a five-year grant totalling $400,000 to develop and produce five family-oriented musicals.

The new musical version of Cinderella currently under rehearsal in Troy is the first of the five to be funded by the Warner Music Group grant.

Cinderella will premiere December 4 at the Schacht Fine Arts Center at Russell Sage College in Troy. The cast will include company members, guest artists and community theater performers.

Two other musicals have already been scheduled for upcoming seasons. The Silver Skates will be done in December, 1995 and The Snow Queen is scheduled for 1996. The remaining musicals funded under this grant have yet to be selected.

The New York State Theater Institute was created by the state legislature in 1974 and has gained renown for a number of musicals created since that time.

Patricia DiBenedetto Snyder, the founder and producing artistic director, worked with the Warner group to obtain the grant.
