Fuller will not seek sixth term in office

By SUSAN GRAVES

Bethlehem Supervisor Sheila Fuller announced last week that she will not run for a sixth term in November.

"It's not a decision I reached easily. I gave it a lot of thought," said Fuller, 58.

A big part of her decision was her desire to spend more time with her granddaughters, Katie, 5, and Bridget, 19 months.

"It's important now to spend time with them. I want to be there," she said.

But that doesn't mean she won't miss the job that she said she enjoyed "98 percent of the time." What she won't miss is what she said is really a 24/7 responsibility and having to spend many evenings away from home at meetings and other public functions.

And she won't miss the worry. "I do worry because I'm Irish. I have to worry in advance. I feel the need to worry about everything," she said.

Fuller has been a popular supervisor and ran for her last two terms with little opposition, but it wasn't always smooth sailing. When she ran for the first time against Democrat Matt Clyne of Glenmont, the margin of victory was a mere 54 votes, Fuller recalled. "Here I am, a woman that raised five children, and this was my first job."

In addition, she said being the first woman to hold the town's No. 1 post shocked some people. "Are you sure you'll be able to do this," some asked," Fuller said.

Fuller

But raising five children might have been the best preparation for the supervisor, who was a real pro at negotiating and settling arguments.

"When you raise five children, you lay the groundwork," she said.

Although Fuller views the supervisor's post as her first official job, she had an abundance of experience in various roles in the town. She served on the Bethlehem Central school board for 13 years, the last eight as president. She later joined the town board and served for two years before deciding to run for supervisor.

But now in her 10th year in the job, she's moving on, mostly with fond memories of the experience but admitting that 2 percent of that time was rather difficult.

"What troubled me is that people did not deal with issues and tended to personalize everything," she said. "To have people question your motives at times and be somewhat abusive is hurtful."

But apart from that, she believes "Probably water was the biggest issue," which has been ongoing throughout her

Police SRO joins lower school ranks

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

Seven years ago, Bethlehem police Detective Vince Rinaldi was the first policeman in the Capital District to include the high school as part of his regular beat. When the School Resource Officer (SRO) program first started in 1996, Rinaldi's presence drew negative commentary from students in the school's newspaper, and some members of the community wondered if this was a sign that the high school was a dangerous place to be.

This January, when School Superintendent Les Loomis sent home a letter saying that the SRO program was being expanded into the elementary schools, there was no sound of protest or concern. Before moving the SRO program into the elementary schools, the

Make dream come true at BOU auction

By KRISTEN OLBY

Are you searching for tickets to the sold-out Billy Joel and Elton John show in Albany? Or are you desperately in need of a relaxing day fly fishing on the Battenkill in the beautiful Adirondacks? These are just two of the hundreds of items you can bid on at the 17th annual Bethlehem Opportunities Unlimited (BOU) Auction on Friday, March 21.

The auction began in 1986 as an oversized garage sale for the fledgling BOU and has grown to include weekend trips, dinners, performance and sporting event tickets.

"It's really a fun way to spend your Friday night with your family, friends and neighbors," said Debbie Kopp, president of BOU.

And don't forget the kids. There are plenty of items parents can bid on for their children, including a ride on an Elsmere or Slingerlands fire department truck in the Memorial Day parade. With so many deals to be had, the auction succeeding in raising about $14,000 for the organization last year.

"Bethlehem Opportunities Unlimited relies totally on the funds it raises at its annual auction to provide all of the monies for the upcoming year," said publicity chairwoman Helen Smith.

Albany teenager charged in BC bomb scare incident

By KRISTEN OLBY

An Albany teenager charged with calling in a bomb threat to Bethlehem Central High School has been indicted by an Albany County Grand Jury.

Michael Nelson, 17, of Ten Eyck Avenue, was charged with falsely reporting an incident, a felony, after calling the high school on Feb. 24 and stating a bomb was in the building.

Students were evacuated to the gymnasium while police and fire personnel searched the building. No bomb was found, and approximately 50 minutes after the threat was made, students returned to class.

Nelson made the threat "to get a student out of class," said Bethlehem Sgt. Thomas Heffernan Jr., who added an additional arrest is pending.

Nelson also faces robbery charges in Albany for allegedly mugging a man at gunpoint in front of 36 Bertha St. on Feb. 21, according to the indictment.

Nelson remains in the Albany County Jail without bail.

Y zeros in on site location

New facility expected to cost $6M

By KRISTEN OLBY

The YMCA is inching closer to narrowing in on a location suitable to build a "Y" in the town of Bethlehem. The roughly $6 million facility would likely include a fitness center, eight-lane pool, double gymnasiums, indoor track, babysitting facilities and community rooms.

"It would probably be a clone of (the) Gunderland and East Geenbush centers," said Barry Relyea, the YMCA's vice president of property management and development.

The YMCA has considered building in Bethlehem for more than three years, but has yet to break ground. With other projects now complete, namely the building of a "Y" in Gunderland, the nonprofit organization is now ready to focus on Bethlehem.

"I've looked at close to 30 sites in quite a wide range of areas," said Relyea, who needs at least 12 acres of land to build the facility.

While all of the potential sites were within the town limits, not all were appropriate for building. Many of the properties lacked water and sewer lines, roadway access or didn't meet the necessary zoning requirements.

"We've narrowed it down to three or four potential sites, and none of them is perfect," said Relyea, who declined to name the locations.

Despite the difficulty in finding an appropriate plot of land, the YMCA says it is committed to building in Bethlehem.

"They can't get here soon enough, it's been a long time coming," said Supervisor Sheila Fuller.

The aging Bethlehem town hall building currently serves as a meeting place for various community groups, something that will likely change with the arrival of a "Y."

"Our building is used morning, noon and night by community groups, so this would be a real plus," Fuller said.

The organization must raise a sizable sum of money in order to pay for the multi-million dollar facility.

"It hasn't been decided how much of that we'll be willing to borrow," said Relyea, who noted the "Y" will rely on some area businesses for funding.

The YMCA believes a center would thrive in Bethlehem, in part, because many people living in the town already belong to one of the organizations fitness centers either in Albany or Gunderland.

"A lot of current YMCA members live in the town and they are calling saying, 'Please build a Y closer to us,'" said

They can't get here soon enough, it's been a long time coming.

Sheila Fuller

Relyea.

The organization plans to narrow its search down after speaking with realtors and property owners over the next month. The YMCA hopes to select a site early this year and begin the process of acquiring the land.

"It's probably a couple of years' worth of work to get to the point where we have a 'Y' in Bethlehem," said Relyea.

For those who trek back and forth to other YMCA locations in the area, the construction of a "Y" in Bethlehem can't begin fast enough.

Forum on war set at BC

By KRISTEN OLBY

A public forum for students, teachers and the community to discuss both sides of the impending war with Iraq will soon be held at Bethlehem Central High School.

Students For Peace and Survival — a social justice group that operates within the high school — is organizing the event. A firm date for the forum has yet to be set because speakers are still being lined up.

"These kids need to understand what the facts are on each side of the issue," said high school Principal Michael Tebbano, who supports the informational program, but notes it won't escalate into a rally.

The teach-in is designed to educate students on all aspects of the war and will include presentations by college professors both for and against a war with Iraq, student speakers and a question and answer session.

Many students have passionate opinions on the possibility of a war, according to Preya Krishna-Kennedy, who is the faculty adviser for the student organization.

"Unfortunately, their opinions are isolated into one or two points, and they don't understand the magnitude of the issues surrounding the Iraqi situation," said Krishna-Kennedy.

The forum came at the request of teachers after students staged a walk-out and peace protest at the high school on Feb. 5. Roughly 89 of the school's 1,590 students left the school at 7:45 a.m. to hold a rally in the parking lot. The protest was dubbed "Books Not Bombs" in an effort to convince lawmakers to reallocate funds toward education rather than the military.

"I am just fundamentally opposed to war. I think it's important to always find peaceful ways to avoid conflict," said Annie Longley, a BCHS sophomore. "I feel we're kind of going into this a little too quickly."

Bethlehem students marched to the Delmar Post Office, where they mailed letters to lawmakers opposing the war. Students who left class were punished with two hours of after-school detention.

"I respect the fact that they have an opinion about the events going on in the world," said Tebbano, adding students don't have permission to leave school grounds. "It was very orderly, they all came back into school and so far, they've all begun their detention."

School board grapples with budget

By RONALD E. CAMPBELL

With the cut in state aid to school districts in Gov. George Pataki's proposed budget, the Bethlehem school board and the administration have developed a unique approach to the budget process.

School Superintendent Les Loomis said the cuts "rescind(s)" in one year one quarter of the investment New York state has made in education over the past eight years.

"Fiscal mismanagement by the state in the heavy use (of) one-time revenues during 2002-03, (the) downturn in the national economy and the Sept. 11, 2001, terrorist attacks are all part of the cause of the budget nightmare facing the state this year," said Loomis during a power point presentation entitled "Financial Realities of the 2003-04 School Budget."

An expenditure freeze, implemented on Feb. 12, will save money this year and soften the "negative impact next year without cutting too deeply," Loomis said, since district officials feel next year could be another difficult year.

This year's budget process proposes to cut expenses in areas that "will least affect students and educational programs" and doesn't include any new spending proposals except "one new elementary teacher in response to enrollment growth," Loomis said.

The first item during the public portion of the meeting was the budget work session. The district expects state aid to be cut by $874,804 this year and is looking for ways to cut costs by a like amount, so the target is to knife about $875,000 out of district expenses in the 2003-04 budget. A cut of this magnitude is expected to cap a school tax rate increase at 8.1 percent.

"We presented the board with a list of reductions slightly over $1 million as we struggle to respond to the impact of the state's fiscal problems," said Loomis. "The board handled some very tough decisions in a responsible way, while attempting to maintain and continue quality education but show fiscal responsibility to present a budget to the community they can understand and support."

"All interested community members are encouraged to work with us in these very difficult times," Loomis said.

The board meeting on March 19 is designated as a special Community Forum on the budget.

Community members may get budget projections from district offices at 90 Adams Place.

Loomis also updated the progress of the Facilities Planning Committee to review options and cost figures for the elementary schools and middle school.

Loomis reiterated the school board's charge to the committee to "present options, not recommendations or decisions for the board's consideration."

The committee had pursued the option of expanding Clarksville Elementary because it would be cheaper than building a new school.

"Two additional options to address crowding in the elementary schools will be developed for the board to consider," said Loomis. "First will be to close Clarksville after building a new elementary school. Second will be to build a new, smaller elementary school, then close Clarksville temporarily to renovate and expand it," added Loomis.

The next board meeting is scheduled for March 12.

Police arrest men for scam

By KRISTEN OLBY

With spring home improvement projects just around the corner, Bethlehem police are warning people, especially senior citizens, to be on the lookout for scams.

A father and son were recently arrested for scamming a Selkirk woman of approximately $2,000 for a driveway sealing job.

Rodney G. Cooper, 41, of Cairo and Rodney T. Cooper, 22, of Albany were both charged with grand larceny, a felony.

"They continued to keep coming back for more money," said Sgt. Thomas Heffernan Jr. of the Bethlehem police, who added the work should have cost about $400.

The father-son duo has a history of conducting similar scams in the Bethlehem area and throughout the state. Police said there are also charges pending in New Jersey.

The Coopers were arraigned and sent to Albany County jail with a court date set for April 1.

Bethlehem police are searching for any additional victims and urge those with questions about the legitimacy of contractors to contact police at 439-9973.

We need to embrace happiness when it happens

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

Three weeks after Sept. 11, 2001, Garrison Keillor read a poem on "The Writer's Almanac," his literary interlude that can be heard on National Public Radio every morning just a little before 10:30 a.m.

The poem was "So Much Happiness" by Naomi Shibab Nye. Essentially, it's about happiness as an ephemeral, unavoidable element — and one that we never quite know how to embrace and enjoy. It made me cry when I first heard it, for a tiny bit of light had been creeping back into those dark days when we'd mourned what we'd lost and feared the unknown.

That was an autumn marked by tears, but pulling into my driveway as the poem ended on the car radio, I wept different tears. None of my friends or relatives died on Sept. 11, so my grief had found a resting place more easily than those more directly affected.

My heart was still heavy for the different world my children now lived in, but slivers of light were shining into the dark corners of my world again. We were safe for the moment, our children were healthy and the rest of our family was also safe. Slowly, we could smile at one another again and hug in joy, not just despair. We could appreciate the piercing blue of the autumn sky and know that this year, the blazing colors we took for granted each fall would seem like a miracle.

A sort of guilt accompanied the happiness though, and when Keillor's mellifluous voice read, "It's difficult to know what to do with so much happiness," I felt like he was reading my mind.

A year and a half later, times again look dark and foreboding, and they seem to demand a certain gravitas from us — a need to be concerned and to worry. A wise woman once told me that she believed worry was a kind of superstition. If you worried that the worst would happen, maybe it couldn't.

We all know how to worry, how to feel despair. It's as accepted a notion as the idea that our family lives must be so scheduled that we spend more time in our cars than in our living rooms.

Life is hard, right? There's never enough time to do the things we want, and the things we need for modern life — separate bedrooms for the kids, computers, appliances, two cars, replacement windows, vinyl siding, activities for the kids to join and someday, college tuition — make money fly out of our hands before we even have a chance to think about it.

Then there are the things that take up our time — hours on the phone with computer support people, sitting with our children while they do their homework, hounding them to practice their musical instruments, cooking the meals, doing endless loads of wash and keeping the dust bunnies from amassing in such numbers that they begin organizing and demanding better living arrangements.

You can toss into the mix the fact that it looks like we're going to war, but we don't know when and nowhere near a majority of the nation wants it to happen. Now, into our already busy daily routine, we need to stay informed and decide for ourselves what we think, so that when asked, we can defend our opinions.

Economic times are tough, too, which adds to the very real burden that we carry around. Add to that the fact that winter seems to be holding us in a vise-like grip, and it's easy to see why our tough lives are the main topic of conversation. These difficulties are things we must address together and talking about them draws us closer.

Why is it so difficult to talk about happiness, or even contentment? It's out there, and even in the darkest times, it will come and find us.

If we are not packing up a loved one to maybe fight in a war, if we have enough money to pay the light bill and buy this week's groceries, and if our children and families are healthy, maybe, for just a minute, we should stop and let our hearts acknowledge that happiness has found us.

That job that takes up all our time and energy has its good points, beyond the paycheck it provides. Sometimes, it lets us learn something new, and, at a minimum, it has put people into our lives with their own stories to tell and perspectives to help keep our world balanced. The spouse who feigns ignorance of the washing machine can be funny and insightful and a needed balance with the kids.

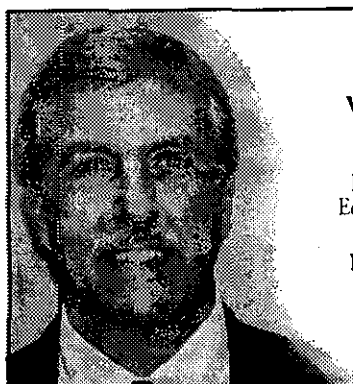

Ah, the kids. They confuse us, confound us and vex us — and the only thing we know for sure is that we love them with all of our hearts. Ask parents about their children and you will know that happiness exists, for even as they shake their heads and sigh about the latest emotional roller-coaster ride their kids have taken them on, you will see the light of optimism in their eyes.

When I think of my children, my heart sings — then I too often drown out that song with my complaints, worries and concerns about them. Perhaps we hate to admit happiness because it makes us sound smug and self-contented.

Maybe we worry that it invites trouble. Maybe it feels disrespectful to those who face true problems. Maybe we know how fleeting it is, and by not admitting to moments of happiness, we don't feel disappointed or bitter when they are gone again.

There's no doubt that hard times will come again, but we don't know when or in what form. Happiness will come too, and require even less of us.

As Nye wrote about happiness, "It doesn't need you to hold it down. It doesn't need anything."

Needs assessment plan discussed at public hearing

A public meeting was held last Thursday to address a needs assessment proposal and possible referendum for the library. Library trustees introduced a deferred maintenance plan that addressed four areas of concern: capital repairs and improvements, ADA mandates, safety and technology support.

Projects were separated into two groups: priority and future.

Priority items

First on the list was carpet replacement, for which money has already been set aside in the current budget. Money for a new electric panel, lightning protection and exterior tile repair has also been budgeted; work on these safety concerns will begin this spring.

ADA compliance is also a high priority. Public and staff rest rooms are not compliant at this time. Interior and exterior signage requires improvement. Interior doors need to be replaced with automatic doors; an LSTA grant will fund a portion of this expense, and the rest will be funded out of the budget. Interior doors would also be relocated to streamline traffic flow and provide better access for strollers and wheelchairs.

In the area of library services, several items would get priority attention. ADA-compliant service desks would also be more efficient for staff and patrons. Noise control at the circulation desk would be addressed.

We hear you

A recent community survey indicated patrons value quiet study areas, a local history room and youth services. The proposal indicates these areas as priority items. Shelving, seating and storage in the youth services area would be improved. Two more early-learning computers would be added. To help this effort, Friends of the Library have pledged $2,200 to furnish a parent-child reading nook. Approximately 700 meetings per year are held in our meeting rooms. The proposal seeks to selectively replace old furnishings and upgrade the public kitchen.

Deferred projects

Projects designated as future concerns include an ADA-compliant elevator, roof replacement, improvements to the parking lot, an additional T1 line to accommodate added features of our online system, improved security and new sound and projection equipment for the meeting rooms.

The big question

The cost is about 15 percent that of the bond proposal defeated in 2000. A five-year bond for $1,495,285, added to $100,000 from the library's capital account, would pay for this project.

Cost per household would be $33 annually, or $165 total (based on an assessed value of $150,000). This translates into a tax increase of 22 cents a year per $1,000 assessed value.

More facts

About a dozen residents attended last Thursday's meeting.

A summary of the question and answer session follows:

Question: Can the library do a telethon fund-raiser to supplement the cost of the project?

Answer: Because we are a school district library and a public entity, the board is not allowed to campaign for funds. The library's Friends group would be permitted to undertake such a project, but it would require a sizable effort. In 2000, the board created the Bethlehem Public Library Fund, a planned giving opportunity administered by the Community Foundation for the Capital District.

Question: How does the defeated bond amount compare with this one?

Answer: The defeated bond was approximately $8.6 million. The current proposal is about 15 percent of that.

Question: Does this proposal adequately address the library's needs in the long run?

Answer: This proposal is a five-year-plan only. New housing developments in the community and the continuing deterioration of this 30-year-old building will eventually necessitate expansion.

Question: Why is parking lot improvement not on the list of priority projects?

Answer: The community survey indicated some interest in improving the parking lot. However, a bond for parking lot improvement was defeated in 1998; community pressure needs to be brought to bear on this issue.

Question: How will your marketing strategy differ from the last referendum?

Answer: The board is soliciting input at an earlier stage of this project. A community telephone survey was conducted recently, and a mailing will be done closer to the referendum date.

Question: Do you anticipate a reduced rate of increase in the library budget if this referendum is passed?

Answer: Yes. Increased energy efficiency alone will result in savings, which can be used to offset other budget lines.

Question: Will this proposal be included in the May budget vote?

Answer: Yes. Your voice is important.

To give more residents the opportunity to hear and comment on this plan, a follow-up meeting will be held Monday, March 24, at 7 p.m. in the Community Room. In the meantime, the community is invited to e-mail, call or talk to board members about this issue.

A needs assessment document is available for review at the adult reference desk and on our Web site (www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org). Review this document and fill out a comments form (available at the library) or send e-mail comments to BPL@uhls.lib.ny.us. Matters of Opinion

Hard act to follow

Sheila Fuller's announcement that she would not run for a sixth term in November should certainly stir up the local political waters.

With Fuller's record, she likely would have sailed to another victory had she chosen to run. She has earned the respect of people from all parties and has proven she has what it takes to lead a town like Bethlehem through good times and bad.

Fuller is essentially a people person and a person who weighs issues thoughtfully. She also speaks her mind and isn't afraid to take a stand once she has made up her mind.

She is a leader who has earned the respect and support of the majority of her constituents, and will leave big shoes to fill on Dec. 31 when she leaves office.

We hope that her example will help to set high standards for all candidates who might consider entering the supervisor's race. The town continues to face difficult issues, like increasing the tax base by attracting more business while at the same time trying to preserve the town's rural character.

Sheila Fuller has earned high marks from the community that she so cherishes. We wish her a fulfilling, happy retirement and thank her for all she has done and tried to do for the town.

Don't be a victim

It's already started. Scams. Last week a Bethlehem woman was allegedly duped by two men in a driveway paving incident. Police are cautioning all residents and especially senior citizens to never accept an offer from anyone offering home improvement services door to door. Reputable contractors simply don't solicit business this way.

But year after year, the scam artists return to suburban communities, because they'll likely find someone to take them up on the deal that sound like it's too good to be true. What usually happens is the scammers end up jacking up the price of whatever the job, often fleecing innocent homeowners out of thousands of dollars for little or any legitimate work.

Avoid becoming a victim, and if you have older parents, make sure you tell them never to agree to any kind of home repair jobs without checking references and checking with you.

Report suspicious vehicles that cruise through neighborhoods. The police will be happy to respond and check to see if the person is on the up and up.

Give girls a leg up on tech fields

By LOUISE McCOLGIN

The writer is the executive director/CEO of the Girl Scouts Hudson Valley Council in Colonie.

It's her future: Do the math.

This generation of girls is at a crossroads. Ahead of them is a multitude of paths to choose from.

For girls, the math/science and technology paths are some of the least traveled, even though the often lead to greater rewards.

Research has found that girls exhibit as much early interest in these subjects as boys, but they do not pursue them into later teen years, much less into adulthood.

However, today's women are more educated than their male counterparts.

More than half of all college degrees are awarded to women, and women earn more than 40 percent of all doctoral degrees.

And yet, there is still a dearth of women going into the fast-growing, high-paying technology fields. According to the National Science Foundation, women represent 46 percent of the total work force, but only 25 percent of the technology work force and 10 percent of the nation's top technology jobs.

Could it be that the cultural clues society gives girls makes them turn away from such non-traditional career pursuits?

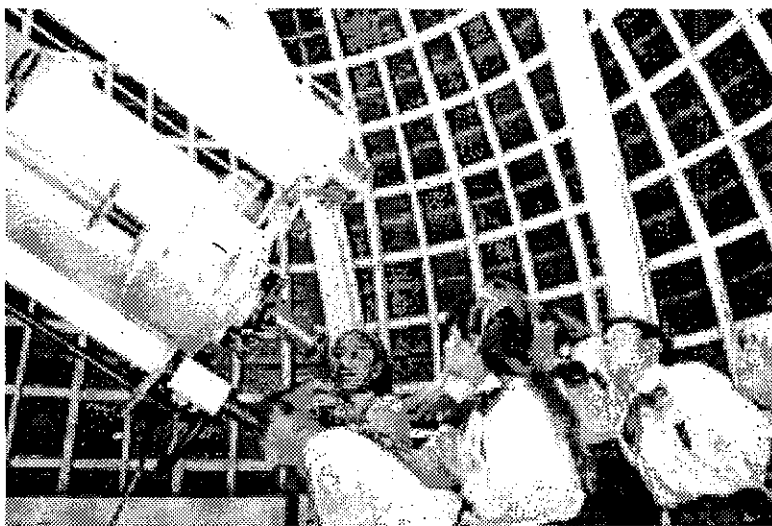

Unfortunately, the answer is yes.

But Girl Scouts of the USA is aiming to break that pattern, and we need your help.

As Girl Scouts across the country celebrate Girl Scout Week (March 9-15), we are issuing a national call to action for parents, caregivers and other adults to encourage girls to embrace math, science and technology.

Point of View

By shoring up girls' self-esteem in their impressionable pre-teen years, nurturing their early interest in math, science and technology, and showcasing female role models in these fields, we can assist girls in taking on the technological opportunities and challenges of the 21st century.

Girl Scouts enjoy learning about astronomy and other scientific topics.

It all starts with a healthy dose of self-esteem. Studies by the Girl Scout Research Institute and other organizations demonstrate that risky behavior such as smoking, drinking, unsafe sexual behavior, eating disorders, suicidal tendencies and self-mutilative behavior are often associated with low self-esteem.

America deserves a diverse, dynamic and productive work force that will be realized when girls are fully vested in math, science and technology.

This is compounded when girls are living in underprivileged communities.

Girl Scouting promotes all girls' perception of themselves as important, competent and talented. When girls are comfortable in their own skins, they'll be empowered to resist peer and societal pressure, allowing them to follow their true interests in life.

Secondly, girls need a safe place to discuss real-life issues important to them. Girl Scouts is providing that space in nearly a quarter of a million Girl Scout groups or troops in the United States today, including almost 7,000 girls in the Hudson Valley Council. In our special all-girl environment, girls grow courageous and strong.

Having good self-esteem and access to a safe space will allow girls to resist social pressures and cultivate their interests in such non-traditional subjects as math, science and technology.

This is a priority for Girl Scouts USA. The Hudson Valley Council offers girls programs such as Exploring Engineering, From Dreams to Reality Career Exploration and Science Discovery.

So, how can you help?

Foster your girls' natural interests, whatever they may be. Promote independent thought, leadership and sometimes taking the less-traveled paths in life.

Make a donation of time to your local Girl Scout troop or group. We need adult role models — men and women — who are competent, generous and willing to share their interests and skills.

If you are in a technological field, we need your help that much more.

Don't have much time to donate? No problem. We'll match your availability with the needs of girls.

You can participate once a month, on weekends, evenings or during a particular time of year.

America deserves a diverse, dynamic and productive work force that will be realized when girls are fully vested in math, science and technology.

Your daughter, and those of your family and friends deserves the opportunity to pursue their interests, acquire the future jobs and achieve the higher salaries that this sector can provide.

It's her future, do the math.

Matters of Opinion

Columnist was offbase in political remarks

Editor, The Spotlight:

Katherine McCarthy writes sensitive articles about parenting and children but misses some key facts when discussing politics. She states that England appeased Hitler on the eve of World War II and now the U.N. is doing the same thing with Iraq.

She fails to note that the U.N. has imposed harsh sanctions on Iraq, and together with its inspection teams, has made Iraq a weak and isolated nation. The comparison to pre-World War II Germany is inaccurate.

Ms. McCarthy thinks everyone should believe Secretary of State Colin Powell as he leads us to war, but the evidence he presented that Iraq is a threat to the U.S. or to the world lacked much credibility. His involvement in illegal arms sales to Iran that became known as the Contragate scandal gives us another reason to doubt him.

McCarthy discusses her understandable fears for her family if there were a terrorist attack on the U.S., but she misleads her readers when she links the World Trade Center attacks to Iraq.

She does not tell them that the CIA questions this link. The CIA evensays that a U.S. attack on Iraq is likely to provoke sympathy for Saddam Hussein and increase the likelihood of additional attacks from terrorists.

McCarthy would benefit her readers if she wrote about the two countries that back the Sept. 11 killers: Saudi Arabia and Pakistan.

Maybe we could ask President George Bush why he sees these nations as our allies and why billions of our tax dollars are being sent to them rather than being used to strengthen our schools, our health care system and our communities.

Advocates for peace doing valuable work

Editor, The Spotlight:

Peace advocates are doing a very important job in our troubled times. What is at stake is no less than our national character.

We Americans consider ourselves to be decent people, generous to a fault and ready to send all the aid necessary wherever disaster strikes.

Unfortunately, our present administration is projecting worldwide the image of a bellicose nation that relies mostly on its military might to attain its objectives.

Those advocating for peace remind us that the root causes of injustice, poverty and unrest are really not being addressed in any significant way, and that $100 billion of the Pentagon's budget would be more useful if sent to nongovernmental organizations in struggling countries.

In this way, I think, our national character would be better served.

Fluoride should not be mandated for everyone

Editor, The Spotlight:

The ugly specter of mandated water fluoridation continues to raise its head as the Bethlehem town board is weighing the pros and cons of this controversial issue.

Although the issue is controversial, it is not complex. It is a matter of free personal choice.

It is simply that individuals should have the right to choose what to ingest and should not be forced to consume (and pay for) something they neither need nor want.

A public water supply should contain nothing other than what is necessary to make it safe to drink.

It should not be used as a medium to dispense medicine for dental or any other health-related treatment.

The issue becomes roiled because fluoridation proponents methodically and consistently lie to the public, to elected representatives and to other policy makers.

Many studys show that fluoridated water poses a variety of health problems and dangers.

Contrary to what the fluoride proponents would have us believe, there is no consensus among researchers as to the effectiveness or safety of drinking fluoridated water.

There is, in fact, a great deal of contention in that area. As long as there is serious disagreement among scientists, why take a chance on something that is not necessary?

Those who want fluoride for themselves or their children have options that do not deny the rights of others.

There is prescription medicine, toothpaste and topical treatments.

That's their choice. Let those who (for whatever reason) do not wish to ingest what is actually a highly toxic industrial waste product have the right not to.

The town board wants to hear all aspects of the issue, not merely the deceptions of a self-appointed few who presume to dictate what the public must have.

If you want your pure and safe drinking water left alone, let the board know. The time to do that is now.

Call for local host families

Host families are needed for 30 American Field Service (AFS) foreign exchange students who will be coming to the Capital District for the 2003-2004 school year.

Students from countries all over the world will attend local high school and participate in all aspects of family, school and community life.

Families who apply early this spring will have the best opportunity to view applications from students with special interests that match theirs, such as athletics or music.

Local AFS volunteers provide family orientation and student support, as well as social and educational events for students, host families and host siblings.

For information about hosting or about intercultural opportunities for U.S. high school students to study abroad for a summer, semester or year, contact Happy Scherer at 439-0016 or call 1-800-AFS-INFO.

DestiNY USA's "Let's Do Business Program" is a business and community development initiative to allow companies to begin the process of doing business with DestiNY USA. DestiNY USA is interested in learning more about your company and how we may be able to develop a business relationship with you. We anticipate a broad range of business relationships with construction companies, vendors, suppliers, professional service providers, etc., necessary in order to complete the DestiNY USA project.

In addition, we are interested in developing relationships with small business enterprises (SBE's), minority business enterprises (MBE's) and women owned business enterprises (WBE's) on both a local and national level. As part of our continued commitment to Upstate New York, we would like to see these businesses prepare for, and benefit from, the economic impacts of DestiNY USA.

We believe it is not too early to begin this process. We urge you to take a few minutes to complete the enclosed registration form. Tell us as much as you can about your business and how you may fit into a business relationship with DestiNY USA. The more we learn about each other, the more we will be able to take advantage of the "Let's Do Business Program."

Eagles fly into state semifinals with regional win

By PHIL BLACKWELL

At last, a victory in Liverpool for the Bethlehem Eagles.

Earning a chance to be close to home this weekend, the Section II champion Bethlehem girls basketball team battled its way to a 51-48 victory over Section III champion Nottingham in last Saturday's Class A regional finals.

A large, boisterous contingent from Bethlehem was on hand to watch the Eagles lead for most of the game and hold off every conceivable comeback attempt, right down to the last shot.

"When we've needed to get the job done, we got it done," said head coach Kim Wise. "At any given time, I've got players willing to take the shots."

That this victory took place at the Liverpool High School gymnasium, just north of Syracuse, was no small bit of irony to Bethlehem's fans.

Four long months ago, both of Bethlehem's Section II Class A champion soccer teams were beaten in the regional finals by 1-0 margins, with the boys losing to Liverpool and the girls falling to eventual state champion Baldwinsville — on Liverpool's home field.

But no amount of recent history would matter on Saturday, as Bethlehem sought to continue the frustration of Nottingham, a team with four straight Section III Class A titles that had not made it past the regional round any of the previous three times.

Bethlehem grabbed an early 10-4 lead, only to have the Bulldogs roar back and take an 18-15 lead by the end of the first quarter.

Not panicking at all, Bethlehem took the lead back in the second period and built it to 28-21 by halftime.

For the entire second half, the Eagles tried to get away, only to have Nottingham fight back, tying it at 31 at one point in the third quarter and pulling within one point at three stages of the final period.

All through the contest, the play was physical and relentless. A pair of strong man-to-man defenses made the baskets more precious.

With every possession crucial, Bethlehem suffered what looked like a major blow when guard Sarah Homer fouled out with 5:33 to play.

However, sophomore Katie Rowan came off the bench and drained a critical three-pointer with 2:22 to play, building the Eagles' lead back to 47-42.

Never giving it up, Nottingham cut its deficit to a single point, 47-46, and had a chance to go ahead, but Cintia Johnson missed the front end of a one-and-one free-throw try with 19.9 seconds to play.

Forced to foul, the Bulldogs hoped that the Eagles' day-long struggles at the charity stripe would continue. But senior Emily Bango hit her two foul shots with 12.1 seconds left.

After Johnson made some free throws of her own, another Bethlehem senior, Kaitlin Foley, drained both of her attempts with 3.6 seconds to play.

Down by three points, 51-48, the Bulldogs could still force overtime with a three-pointer, but Johnson's shot near half-court fell short of the rim as time ran out.

Yet again, Bethlehem won with scoring balance. Jamie Mooney led the way with 13 points, with Foley close behind as she put in 12 points. Nottingham's Sophronia Sallard led all scorers with 18 points.

Now the Eagles proudly take their 21-4 record to Hudson Valley Community College in Troy for the state final four, which starts Friday evening with a semifinal game against Section I champion Ursuline. Wise said she expects an even bigger — and louder — turnout.

"We'll have even more people (at HVCC)," she said. "It's what we've been working for."

O'Brien earns all-tourney honors

Bethlehem Central High School graduate Jackie O'Brien was named to the all-tournament team from the University at Buffalo softball team at the Malihini Tournament in Hawaii.

O'Brien had three hits in eight at-bats, including an RBI double in a 7-5 win against Kent State.

ALZHEIMER'S UPDATE

Up to four million Americans (one in ten people over the age of 65 and nearly half of everyone over 85) develop Alzheimer's disease, the most common form of dementia. As yet, there is no cure, but there is hope. Great strides have been made in both diagnosis and treatment. Once notoriously difficult to identify, early Alzheimer's disease can now be diagnosed with 90% accuracy through regular monitoring that focuses on specific symptoms and their progression over time. Moreover, recently developed medications can improve mild to moderate symptoms, thus help people maintain independence, delay nursing home admission, and provide more opportunity to plan for the future, before cognitive decline undermines decision-making skills.

Alzheimer's disease is a challenge no matter when it hits. At Good Samaritan Lutheran Health Care Center, 125 Rockefeller Road, Delmar, we are particularly attuned to the special needs of seniors suffering from this ailment and work with families to help them understand and deal with a loved one suffering from this disorder. Call us at 439-8116 for more information.

Umar jumps to titles at state indoor meet

Bethlehem's Rafiq Umar won two individual championships at Saturday's state indoor track and field meet at the Carrier Dome in Syracuse.

Umar earned the Federation title in the triple jump with a leap of 45-feet, 10-inches and won the public school division championship in the long jump with a leap of 22-8.5.

"He's getting to the point where he's gone to a lot of big meets and he wants to win now," Bethlehem coach Dave Banas said.

Darnell Douglas and Emily Malinowski also competed at the state meet. Malinowski was part of Section II's distance medley relay team, which finished second in a time of 10:31.68. Douglas competed in the 45-meter dash and the 300.

program was put in place at Bethlehem Central Middle School — first with Officer Michael McMillen, now with Detective Supervisor of the Family Services Unit Bruce Oliver, a daily presence for sixth-through eighth-graders.

"We've had such success with at the middle school and high school that we see the extension to the elementary school as a further step forward for us," Loomis said, adding that the program is not a sign that Bethlehem's schools are dangerous. "I see our schools as safe and orderly," Loomis said. "The key to keeping them that way is to see a situation before it happens."

Loomis credited Police Chief Richard LaChappelle and the school resource officers themselves with making the program successful.

"Chief LaChappelle is visionary," Loomis said. "He gets a lot of the personal credit for what we've accomplished with the SRO program so far. I have 100 percent faith and confidence in Mike McMillen, Vince Rinaldi and Bruce Oliver, and I'm confident that Chuck Radliff will do as good a job in the elementary schools."

Loomis said that the officers are colleagues with the staff at the schools and that teachers, guidance counselors and administrators turn to them on a regular basis. They deal with a number of issues, ranging from the recent bomb threat at the high school to students who might be runaways, to potential suicides, to bullying, to breaking up or averting fights before they begin.

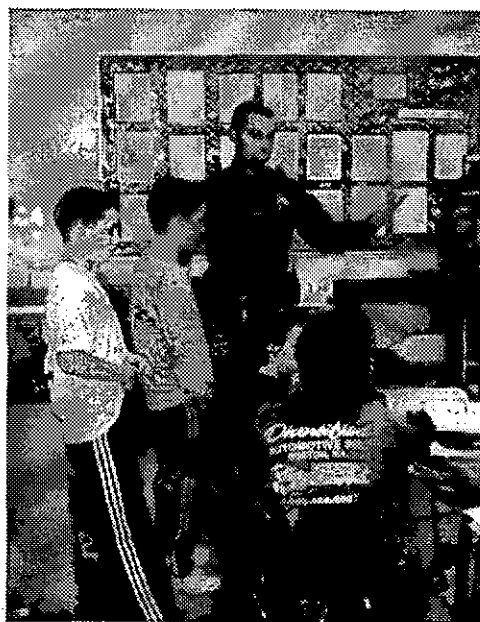

"It's interesting that the students who are the most at-risk are often the quickest to develop a relationship with the police officer," Loomis said.

Neither Rinaldi nor Oliver wears a uniform at the schools, although they do carry their guns. The guns were a big issue when SROs started working in the schools, LaChappelle said, and elementary school kids remain fascinated with them. After brief discussions of gun safety and a police officer's uniform, the weapon becomes a non-issue.

Bethlehem's kids have long been familiar with police officers through the DARE program, the Drug Abuse Resistance Education program offered in fifth-grade. Many of the current middle school students recognize Oliver from his days as their DARE officer. That recognition, he said, combined with the establishment of a relationship with a police officer, have been the greatest benefits of the DARE program.

"The contacts between the students and officers established during DARE are the true successes," Oliver said. "We get to know their hobbies, likes and dislikes. The students ask questions of us, and as they get older, they tell us things they might not tell 'The Police.'"

"Recently, we had a lot of occurrences of pushing, shoving and kicking. The kids face the school consequences and I take out the penal code and let them know what could happen," Oliver said. "We use a two-pronged approach, where the kids are aware of school consequences, and possible legal consequences."

"Sometimes, the school offenses can be stronger than the legal ones, and there are the ramifications with their peers and the effect on their social lives," said McMillen.

Rinaldi's relationships with the other adults at the high school enhance his work with the students. Recently, he joined an English class' discussion of the book Holes by Louis Sachar, about a group of boys sent to a unique juvenile facility. In his Law and Life course, Rinaldi takes students to visit jails and courts.

Very important, Rinaldi said, is the relationship between school administrators and police officers. The schools have the primary responsibility for disciplining students.

"If there's something that I'm aware of," Rinaldi said, "I always go to the principal and assistant principal. It's important that nobody's out of the loop."

Often, a police officer's presence is enough to deter problems, but when they arise, the school resource officers work with teachers, administrators and often parents to mediate problems.

"School resource officers are good at separating adolescent behavior from legal offenses," LaChappelle said.

"The three main things we deal with are students harassing each other, pushing and shoving, and theft," Oliver said. "We do a lot of crime prevention and try to get kids to lock up their things. We try to create a lot of teachable moments, and we have a lot of interaction with parents."

Oliver said that because SROs also have duties outside of the schools, they often get a fuller picture of a student's situation.

"Sometimes, when a student is a discipline problem and we go to their home and see what could be a difficult situation, it's amazing that the kids do as well as they do," he said.

Principals at the three schools had high praise for the school resource officer program and the officers themselves.

"I can't say enough good things about Vince Rinaldi," high school Principal Mike Tebbano said. "In an emergency situation, he's there; when there's criminal activity, he's there; and you get the real feeling that he has a vested interest in the community."

Dave Ksanznak, middle school principal, thinks that no one better deserves the Unsung Hero award Oliver received from the New York State School Safety Summit 2003 and the Bethlehem Police Department's Officer of the Year award.

"I've been very fortunate so far," Ksanznak said of his first year as middle school principal. "We've really only had to deal with fights and kids cutting a class. But Bruce is always around. He's at the morning workout program, at dances, on field trips and at sporting events. It's a pleasure to watch him work with the kids."

Primarily, Ksanznak said, Oliver is a resource for students and teachers, available when there's a problem and usually able to offer a positive solution. Slingerlands Elementary School Principal Heidi Bonacquist has already seen the benefit of having Radliff available as a familiar presence, in particular when he helped alleviate a bullying situation that was going on in the school.

"Chuck provides tremendous support and information," Bonacquist said. "At this level, his job is about providing as much prevention as possible. Chuck visits the classes, sits in at lunch time and the kids love him. They all give him high fives, and he chats with them about their vacations."

As Radliff continues the work of building relationships with students, he will continue to do the DARE program for fifth-graders. He will spend one day per week at Slingerlands, Hamagrael and Glenmont, and will share a day with Elsmere and Clarksville.

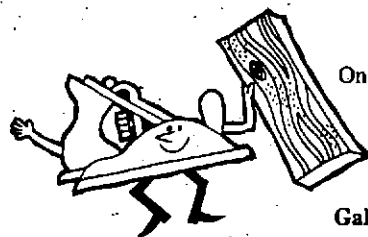

"When you look at Bethlehem, the biggest population is made up of youth," LaChappelle said. "This is a population we want to serve, and the school resource officer program puts another positive role model into the schools."

CALENDARS ♦ ARTS & ENTERTAINMENT

By DEV TOBIN

When most people think of classical music, they think of Beethoven, Bach, Brahms, Mozart, etc. — major European composers whose heyday was the 18th century or 19th century.

The Albany Symphony Orchestra plays the great composers, of course, but also devotes much of its program every year to showcasing the work of modern American composers.

The orchestra's American work is especially evident in March, when the ASO presents programs ranging from the most exciting composers of the future to the best American music of the past in the Key American Music Festival.

ASO Music Director/Conductor David Alan Miller said the orchestra has become "the most well-known and respected champion of American orchestral music, period."

Miller added, "American music permeates our life and we're an American orchestra living in America in 2003, so the music of our country has great significance for us."

Two festival programs have already taken place — a Sunday Symphony for Families American Adventure and the Capital Heritage Commissions chamber concerts of three world premieres performed in three landmark Albany buildings.

Up next is the full symphony concert on Friday, March 14, at 8 p.m. in the Troy Savings Bank Music Hall featuring works by Michael Torke, Gordon Beeferman, Paul Creston and Samuel Barber.

The Casual Night at the Symphony program includes the American premiere of Torke's "An American Abroad, 2nd Music." Miller said Torke's piece is the composer's homage to Gershwin's "American in Paris."

"It's unabashedly romantic and nostalgic," Miller said. "Torke is young, but already an 'emerged' composer, no longer an emerging composer."

The program also has a world premiere of

ASO celebrates American composers

"Morbidity and Mortality Report" by young composer Gordon Beeferman.

Miller said Beeferman's short piece, which was commissioned by the ASO as part of the festival, is "very disturbing, all about the troubles facing our world."

"It's wonderful to hear and present what's current, what's at the cutting edge," he added.

Miller said that both Torke and Beeferman will be present at Friday's concert.

Creston's "Violin Concerto", featuring world-renowned soloist Gregory Fulkerson, and Barber's "Symphony No. 1" complete the evening.

Tickets are $17, $29 and $36. For reservations, call 273-0038.

Vanguard-Albany Symphony, the volunteer auxiliary which supports the orchestra, presents the free Vanguard Prevue Series before each ASO concert. Vanguard invites the public to bring lunch and a friend and join Music Director/Conductor David Alan Miller and guest composers and soloists for an entertaining hour discussing Friday's concert, on Thursday, March 13, at the Albany Public Library, 161 Washington Ave.

In addition, Miller and guest composers and soloists will conduct a free informal 30-minute talk one hour before the concert on Friday at 7 p.m. at the Arts Center of the Capital Region, 265 River St., Troy.

On Sunday, March 16, at 11 a.m., Kevin Cole, "the definitive Gershwin interpreter of our time," will perform a solo performance of classic American standards by Gershwin, Porter, Berlin, Rodgers and others at the Hall of Springs in Saratoga Springs. A buffet brunch follows the performance.

Miller said: "Kevin Cole sings and plays this repertoire with more authority, beauty and grace than anyone else walking the planet. His piano-playing is simply unbelievable!"

Tickets for the performance and brunch are $50 and are available through the symphony office at 465-4755.

And finally, the Dogs of Desire, the ASO's avant-garde chamber orchestra, returns in a "Best of" concert on Saturday, March 29 at 8 p.m. at the Troy Savings Bank Music Hall.

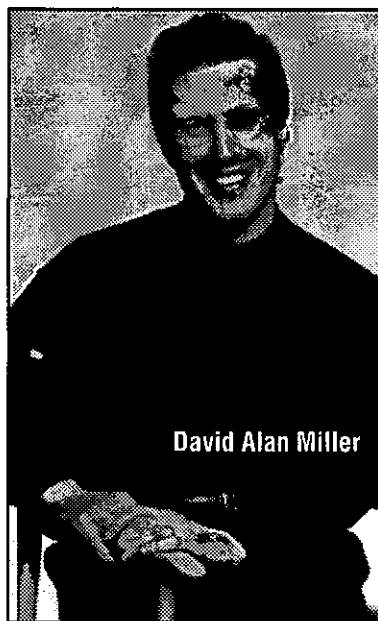

Performing with vocalists and 16 traditional and non-traditional instruments such as the drum set, assignment keyboard, and computers, the Dogs of Desire seek to fuse classical music with American popular culture, which speaks particularly to young listeners who are excited by the work of young composers.

The Dogs of Desire has gained a national reputation among young composers as a proving ground for emerging talent. The composers will introduce and discuss their compositions.

Tickets are $20, $15 for seniors and students. For reservations, call 273-0038.

Miller concluded that KeyCorp's support of the festival "has been unbelievable, allowing us to explore the vast panoply of American music and embrace our American-ness."

A quiz about trains for your car's sake

Who hasn't sat at a railroad crossing with the lights flashing and bells ringing contemplating the millions of pounds of steel rocking along the tracks in front of you?

A train's power and enormity can intimidate the driver of even the largest SUV.

There's another train that gets little or no attention from motorists, even though it's a vital power-transmitting component and a key to dependability. It's the drive train, and it's responsible for transmitting the flow of power from the engine to the wheels. The components include the clutch, torque converter, transmission, driveshafts (or axle shafts in front wheel drive), U-joints, CV joints, differential and axles.

Most motorists take these components for granted until something goes wrong. That "something" can range from leaks or strange noises to shifting problems to total failure. If you do a lot of stop-and-go-driving, tow a trailer or otherwise subject your vehicle to unusual service, check your owners manual for recommendations. With regular checks and maintenance you can expect two bonuses: a more dependable car, as well as fewer and smaller repair bills.

See how much you know about your vehicle's drive train.

1. If you hear a loud clucking sound as you shift your rear wheel drive car from drive to reverse, you probably need:

a) new universal joints.
b) universal joints tightened.

c) transmission mounts tightened.

2. The most common cause of damage to an automatic transmission is

a) driving too fast in second gear.

b) failure to have bands adjusted.

c) overheating due to improper use.

3. The drive train most commonly used in new cars is

a) front engine, front drive.

b) front engine, rear drive.

c) rear engine, rear drive.

4. Most automatic transmissions are cooled by

a) the vehicle's air conditioning system.

b) a fan driven air cooler.

c) the engine cooling system.

5. A lock-up torque converter is a

a) theft-proof device built onto an automatic transmission.

b) torque converter that serves as a parking brake.

c) torque converter in which the fluid coupling is mechanically locked out, providing a solid, non-slipping connection for better efficiency.

147 million gallons of wasted gas? It's a drop in the bucket

Loose gas caps, underinflated tires, faulty thermostats, worn spark plugs, malfunctioning engine controls, poor wheel alignment and the list goes on. These are among the conditions that daily cost consumers millions of dollars in wasted fuel.

"Something as innocuous as an improperly tightened gas cap, for example, or one that's missing or defective, might seem a minor factor," said Rich White of the Car Care Council.

"But consider that 17 percent of the vehicles on U.S. highways have either misused or missing gas caps, causing 147,000,000 gallons of gas per year to vaporize into the atmosphere (source: Service Tech Magazine, September 2000).

"To the maxim 'waste not, want not,' we need to add 'be car care aware,' because most drivers are unaware of the economic consequences of neglected maintenance."

White said the nearly 150 million gallons of gas out of the filler cap are literally a drop in the bucket of waste.

"Among the six worst offenders are underinflated tires and incorrect wheel alignment, conditions which increase rolling resistance. Like driving with the parking brake not fully released, it can cost a mile or two per gallon on a car that normally delivers 20 miles per gallon.

"Among other gas guzzlers," said White, "are dirty oil, a mile per gallon; a slipping automatic transmission, another mile per gallon and as much as two mpg for a cooling system thermostat that causes the engine to run too cold."

"Finally, there could be a malfunction of one or more components in the fuel, ignition or emission control systems, especially critical in cold weather driving. The fuel penalty for just one misfiring spark plug is two or three miles per gallon.

"Combining all of these discrepancies into one vehicle, the cost of wasted fuel easily could exceed recent increases in pump prices," said White. "It's what being car care aware is all about."

Auction

The auction will be divided into three segments: the bucket auction, silent auction and live auction.

"People can spend as little or as much as they want," said Kopp.

During the bucket auction, participants buy tickets and drop them into buckets for items they'd like to win.

"Anything from toys to smaller gift certificates to area businesses" will be available, said Smith.

Winning is a matter of luck — a ticket will be drawn from each bucket to determine who takes home the prize.

The silent auction draws higher-valued items and some competitive bidding.

"A wide range of things from framed artwork to trial memberships at health club facilities and gift baskets" will be available, said Kopp. Participants will write down what they are willing to pay for the item, and the highest bidder wins.

A weekend away on Cape Cod will be up for grabs during the live auction hosted by Bethlehem Middle School Principal Dave Ksanznak and Assistant Principal Sandy Morley.

If a weekend away isn't for you, maybe overseeing the school district is. During the live auction, you can have a shot at being the Bethlehem School District superintendent for a day, giving

Nearly 200 area businesses, citizens and community groups have donated items to be auctioned off, providing a vast array of items to bid on.

"I'm really touched by the outpouring of community support," said Kopp.

The roughly 60 volunteers who have organized this year's auction hope the generosity continues with a strong auction turnout. The bidding begins at 7 p.m. on Friday, March 21, at Bethlehem Central High School.

Art group to meet March 20

The Bethlehem Art Association will meet on Thursday, March 20, at 6:45 p.m. in the board room of Bethlehem Public Library in Delmar.

Karen Rosasco will critique members' works. There is a two-piece-per-member maximum.

Rosasco is a juried member of the Central New York Watercolor Society and the Oakroom Artists, the Albany-Schenectady League of Arts, the Schenectady Art Society, the Colonie Art League, the Schoharie County Arts Council and the Saratoga County Arts Council.

Tickets for a drawing will be available at the March and April meetings. Proceeds will be used to support the Charles Argow Schade Scholarship Fund.

10-year tenure.

Initially, it was negotiating a purchase price with Albany Mayor Jerry Jennings, followed by a drought that has plagued the town in the last two years.

But with this winter's excess of snow, Fuller can relax and even joke about the situation.

"In the fall, whenever I spoke, I talked about having to do the rain dance" to ease Bethlehem's water woes. "Now, people are saying, 'You're the one who brought this (wretched winter) on,'" Fuller quipped.

And Fuller recalls some serious situations that she said brought out the best in the community. "I'm proud of the community that hung in throughout the landslide. It was a very difficult time, but people shared services and pitched in."

Fuller said part of the reason she decided to announce her plans now was to give potential candidates the time to consider a run in the fall.

"I'm willing to spend a lot of time with anyone interested" in the job, she said. "I want it out so people will seriously consider their candidacy for the right reasons."

Accessibility, said Fuller, who has an open door policy at town hall, is one of the most important aspects of the job.

Plans: I have none. I think it'll be fun to decide what I am doing that day.

Sheila Fuller

"I'm most proud of being able to have people feel comfortable meeting with the supervisor," she said, "Everyone I met was most important to me. It's all about people, and that's what I love."

Her advice for candidates: "The most important thing they need to do is face themselves in the mirror every morning. You need to weigh and measure what is best for the community, and you've only failed when you fail to try. I guess that's what it's all about."

Fuller said she's uncertain about what exactly she'll do after Dec. 31, her last day on the job.

"Plans: I have none," she said. "I think it'll be fun to decide what I am doing that day."
