Election board rules in Marcelle's favor

By KRISTEN OLBY

A Bethlehem town justice candidate accused of fraudulently gathering petition signatures to run on a liberal party line has been found innocent of any wrongdoing by Albany County Board of Elections Commissioners.

Republican Tom Marcelle, who currently serves on the town board, will run on the Working Families Party line in the town justice race, after commissioners determined his petition was valid.

Members of the Working Families Party who signed Marcelle's petition accused him of misrepresenting himself by stating the party had already endorsed him when it had not. Shortly after Marcelle submitted his petition to the board, the party filed an objection hoping to have it thrown out.

Marcelle has denied the allegations and contends he told petition signers he was seeking the party's endorsement.

"A bipartisan board of elections rejected their allegations. I received the party line, and I'm happy to run on it," said Marcelle.

According to New York state Election Law, a candidate for town justice is not required to have a party's endorsement to run on its line. The candidate must only obtain petition signatures from 5 percent of the party. Marcelle needed to gather signatures from two of the 23 party members in Bethlehem.

Working Families Party member Linda Wistar of Delmar signed Marcelle's petition after she said Marcelle assured her he had the party's backing.

Marcelle

"If he wants to be on the ballot that way, I guess he has the right to. It's just not an honest way of getting on. To me, it's unethical," said Wistar. She hopes voters will remember how Marcelle obtained the party line when they head to the polls.

Marcelle has also secured the Republican and Conservative lines on the election ballot. He is being challenged by Democrat Paul Dwyer, who was appointed to replace Justice Theresa Egan when she resigned to run for town supervisor.

A Sept. 9 primary will determine which town justice candidate will receive the Independence Party line.

IDA to hold 2nd forum

By KRISTEN OLBY

Work on the creation of a "vision" for Bethlehem will continue this fall when a second economic development forum is held. The Bethlehem Industrial Development Agency (IDA) is once again seeking input from residents to help create a community-wide consensus, detailing where and how the town should be developed.

Results of the first economic development forum, sponsored by the IDA in June, were recently compiled. More than 100 people took part, sharing aspects of the community they'd like preserved and attributes that could one day be implemented.

Smoking ban is real drag for some

But local tavern owners are complying with law

By KRISTEN OLBY

As bars and restaurants become acquainted with the rules and regulations of the state's newly enacted smoking ban, many smokers are still adjusting to stepping outside for a puff.

As of Friday, the county Health Department had received eight complaints, six of which involved smoking in Albany bars. None of the complaints pertained to Bethlehem businesses.

The Clean Indoor Air Act went into effect at 12:01 a.m. on July 24. At the midnight hour, many area bartenders began collecting ashtrays, and smokers were promptly ushered outside to light up.

"People understand it's the law, and we're abiding by it," said Greg Nalewka, an assistant manager at Beff's on Delaware Avenue in Delmar.

Beff's has an outdoor patio with 11 tables. Under the law, roughly three tables, or 25 percent of the outdoor seating area, could have been designated for smokers. Because tables are in close proximity, Beff's opted to ban patio smoking and has fielded few complaints as a result.

While some bar and restaurant owners anticipate a decline in customers as a result of the ban, Nalewka says Beff's has maintained a steady flow.

We fought for freedom, and they're taking it away from us.

Joe VanDeloo

"I don't expect to see any decline. If smoking is the only reason people are coming to your place, you're doing something wrong," said Nalewka.

So far, customers have complied with smoking outside at My Place and Co., a sports bar and restaurant on Delaware Avenue.

"Some people say they don't mind smoking outside, but I think in the

BC teachers will adopt mentoring program

By LINDA DeMATTIA

Brand new teachers will get a helping hand as they begin their careers at Bethlehem Central in the person of a master teacher who will serve as their mentor.

The teacher-mentoring program, which is new this year, is one of the ways the district is utilizing federal grant money that is aimed at professional development, according to John McGuire, assistant superintendent.

Police arrest 3 for DWI

Bethlehem police recently arrested three individuals for driving while intoxicated (DWI).

Russell Rue, 47, of 456 Bozenkill Road., Altamont, was stopped by police while driving on Creble Road in Selkirk for driving erratically on July 26 at 9:47 p.m. Police said Rue failed field sobriety tests and charged him with felony DWI and aggravated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle.

The felony charge stems from a prior DWI conviction in 1996.

Daniel Murphy, 23, of 539

Onesquethaw Creek Road, Feura Bush, was stopped by police while driving on Route 9W for crossing the white lines several times on July 27 at 4:43 a.m.

Police said Murphy failed field sobriety tests and was charged with DWI. He was released on $200 bail.

Phillip Parrish, 43, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., was stopped by police while driving on Maple Avenue in Selkirk for speeding on July 26 at 4:57 a.m. Police say Parrish failed field sobriety tests and was charged with DWI.

BC announces meal program

Bethlehem Central School District once again announces its free and reduced-price meal policy for Bethlehem school children, establishing family income eligibility requirements to participate in the program.

The district announces its policy on an annual basis. Applications and eligibility requirements for the free and reduced-priced lunch program are sent home with students during the first week of school.

Families that qualify and wish to apply must provide all the information requested; incomplete applications cannot be processed.

Call Kathy Haege in Bethlehem Central's Business Office, 439-7481, for details or a copy of the eligibility requirements and an application.

Artwork on display at cafe

The Tuesday evening oil painting class of the Bethlehem Central adult education program are showing their paintings at Java Jazz in Main Square on Delaware Avenue in Delmar through Aug. 15.

Everyone is invited to drop by and view the works on display during regular business hours.

Those displaying their works are Jocelyn Cole-Calkins, Linda Cutler, Sue Fox, Lee Grefalda, Ed McAllister, Mehdi Shayegani, Tanya Stefanik, Kate Thibault, Mary Tierney and Mason Forando.

Delmar youth help out in Honduras

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

Just after America celebrated its birthday, a small group of Bethlehem teenagers left to spend a week in Honduras, literally helping to expand the Episcopal church of St. Matthias in the town of Siguatepeque.

Sixteen-year-olds Scott Heighton, Matt Mahoney and Jami Rodman of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Delmar, along with Scott's dad, Deacon Bob Heighton, joined teenager Tim George from Scotia, youth pastor Holly Schubert and Nick and Theresa van Strahlen from Calvary Episcopal Church in Burnt Hills, to help build the foundation for a fence to enclose the church property.

The property will eventually include the church, a meeting hall, medical clinic and bilingual school. The Delmar teens joined a mission sponsored by the South American Missionary Society (SAMS). SAMS has been around since the mid-1800s and is committed to establishing an Anglican church in South America.

"SAMS is working to train people to put their skills to economic use," Scott said. "A team from Norfolk, Va., was working with the women on sewing skills during the first part of the week we were there, and a group from Franklin, Pa., was there during the later part of the week."

When the Capital District team arrived on July 6, they joined a group from Texas that had the fence about a quarter of the way finished, only to discover that they were digging in the wrong place. Even though they were the new kids on the block, the St. Stephen's team dug right in — literally.

"It was heavy work," Bob Heighton said. "We mixed cement by hand."

"We moved a lot of sand and cement," Scott said. "We broke the rock with an eight-pound sledge hammer."

"We got up most mornings around 6 a.m., and ate and prayed, then took a bus to the site to start working around 8 a.m.," Scott added. "We took about a one-hour lunch break, then worked till 4."

Because they were so close to the equator, the Northeasterners had to hunt for their shadows at noon. "We'd only have about a 1-inch shadow, and the temperature was in the low to mid-90s," Scott said.

Water was an issue, since most of the local water wasn't potable. "We bought bottled water, and the construction crew — locals included — were glad to have clean water," Bob Heighton said.

The team stayed at a Catholic retreat center, which Bob Heighton described as being like a four-star camp. In the evenings, which got dark around 6 p.m., they played poker, talked and ate.

I was surprised at the togetherness and love that people there shared, and how they extended that to us without even knowing us.

Scott Heighton

"There were a lot of spiritual experiences, and we needed time to reflect on what Jesus had shown us, to explore what had happened, and to feel the Holy Spirit. I was surprised at how adult the kids' reactions were," Bob Heighton said.

"I was surprised at the togetherness and love that people there shared and how they extended that to us without even knowing us," Scott said.

"The people are very close and have very tight families," Bob Heighton said. "They have to depend on each other, and I'm impressed with how hard-working and open they were."

Honduras is a relatively stable country, so nobody ever feared for their safety. Some of the poverty they witnessed was eye opening. "I expected to see poverty but to see eight people living in a one-room shack was different than anything I'd expected," Matt said.

Matt and Jami both speak Spanish and learned some new words during their trip.

"I didn't know how to say stones," Matt said.

After working in Siguatepeque, the group traveled to Copan to visit Mayan ruins, then returned to San Pedro Sula for their flight home. Seeing all three places gave them a few different impressions of Honduras.

"Siguatepeque is a town of 25,000 to 300,000, surrounded by a mostly rural area with a population of about 100,000," Bob Heighton said. "There was a whole range of living, from wealthy residences to one-room shacks. We passed open roadside sewers."

"And saw a lot of cow herders," Scott added. "Copan was a tourist city, so we saw a lot of money there. It was a shock to go to San Pedro Sula, which was like a big city anywhere else in the world."

Before going on the trip, Scott, Matt and Jami all worked to raise the money needed for the trip, which cost $1,200 per person. That covered everything including building materials. The three St. Stephen's teens raised money with a spaghetti supper and by having people pledge money for community service they performed.

Each of them did at least 26 hours working in the soup kitchen at Grace and Holy Innocents Episcopal Church in Albany's Arbor Hill, helping at the Spiritual Life Center and participating in the Midnight Run to feed New York City's homeless with other church youth groups in town.

"Everyone in Honduras was so grateful we'd gone there," Scott said.

"The people there helped us as much as we helped them," Matt said. "They don't need a lot of stuff to survive. The people there felt blessed by us being there, and we felt blessed to be there."

"I definitely got more out of it than I gave," Bob Heighton said.

"The real gift of mission trips, is the renewal of spiritual vitality it gives to the people who go," said the Rev. Darius Mojallali, rector of St. Stephen's.

Mojallali said his role had only been to encourage the group and commend the trip to the congregation. It was the parish's first youth trip of this magnitude, and Mojallali was impressed with the enthusiasm the teens brought to the trip.

"Mission trips give people within the church a chance to experience what other people's lives are like," Mojallali said. "On this Honduras trip, a group of Delmar kids, who are really of modest means, got a chance to see how rich we are."

On Aug. 2, another team that included St. Stephen's parishioners left for a medical mission in Argentina, continuing a relationship between the Albany diocese and the diocese of Northern Argentina. A group from St. Stephen's traveled to Argentina last year, and the current group is led by St. Stephen's parishioner Kevin Steckline, a physicians' assistant. Keylla Lehtinen, a native of Argentina and a member of St. Stephen's, is the only person in the group who speaks Spanish.

Mojallali is pleased that St. Stephen's members are moving the church towards more mission work.

"Churches can be very self-focused and this is a good antidote to that," he said. "It's crucial to the church that we stay in communion with and in support of the poor. We need to be reaching out to places in need. Also, going on missions gives people a story to tell, which can be both inspiring and challenging."

Bob Heighton is sure that inspiration and challenge will continue for the youth of St. Stephen's.

"We learned so much in this trip," he said of the Honduras mission. "We'll definitely do it next year."

Two vye for judge post in New Scotland race

By MICHELE FLYNN

As New Scotland Justice Kenneth Connolly retires, two local lawyers with a history of community service are vying for the job.

Kris Jackstadt, the Democratic candidate, is acting justice for the village of Voorheesville. He noted that he can be both a town and village justice at the same time.

"The positions are compatible," Jackstadt said.

Jackstadt has held the village post for more than 10 years and has practiced law for 28. For the past 15 years, he has also provide counsel to Voorheesville Area Ambulance.

Jackstadt said he is running because, "It's part of a commitment to the public and hope I can make a difference to the community for the town of New Scotland."

Margaret Adkins, a Republican, served as attorney to the town of New Scotland planning and zoning board from 1996 to 2000.

"I have done other work for the town through the building department and animal control," she added.

Adkins has been practicing law since 1991 and started her own practice in 1992, which she operates out of an office in her home. She has represented individuals in local courts, including New Scotland and Guilderland.

"It's a great way to blend my work and continued involvement in the community," Adkins said of running for town justice.

Does Adkins see any changes in store if she is elected?

"We've been fortunate in having a great judge like Connolly. I really admire the way he ran his courtroom. If I could change anything, I'd like to see more interaction with the Drivers Ed program at school, to have students come to the court and see what it costs for a speeding violation or how devastating a DWI charge is. I'd like to approach teachers and see if they'd like more involvement in the court with their curriculum."

Three town officials are running unopposed — Town Clerk Diane Deschenes, Highway Superintendent Darryl Duncan and Tax Collector Marilyn Holmberg.

Deschenes and Duncan are Democrats, Holmberg is a Republican.

Connie Burns, Democratic Committee chairwoman for the town, said of Holmberg, "She's a good person. We decided not to run anyone against her."

Deschenes has served since 2000, this would be her third term

Here are some real accomplishments alums can celebrate

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

The summer issue of my college alumni magazine is one of my favorites, with its spread of graduation photos, showing all those June graduates celebrating against the backdrop of the Green Mountains. Each year, the graduates look more like children being unleashed onto the world, leaving some of us to wonder how it could be more than 20 years since we left those safe and secure ivy-covered walls for the "real world."

The attachment to "my" college has grown over the years, as my less-than-stellar academic performance there, and my sense of complete and total intimidation by the rest of the student body, fades.

Many of the other students came from incredibly wealthy backgrounds, had already traveled in Europe with their families, recognized significant pieces of classical music and art and avoided the freshman

English class that was a survey of great European literature because they'd read most of the books their junior year in high school. Their education came in the 300-level classes; my education started the day I met my first roommate, an incredibly confident, hardworking and happy girl from Long Island.

After looking at the graduation photos in the current magazine and reminiscing only briefly, I turned to the class notes at the back of the publication, where people's accomplishments are divided up by class. Everywhere we go in life, there are lessons to be learned from those around us, and it's with mixed feelings that I read through the notes people send in about the businesses they've started, the places they've traveled and the accomplishments they deem worthy of sharing with the people who started their independent, adult lives with them in a place both sheltered and challenging.

The achievements that started in History 102 continue in spades now that we are — forgive me, classmates, that I have to describe us this way — middle-aged. Lots of us who graduated in the early '80s have been living in the shadow of Ari Fleischer, the former presidential spokesman who graduated from Middlebury in 1982.

In addition to the class notes, this quarter's magazine bears a cover of a classmate who is now the Parks Commissioner in New York City. News of great successes travels by grapevine, too, so that those too modest or unwilling to brag about their accomplishments garner either our admiration or jealousy.

We try to rejoice in everyone's accomplishments, but sometimes the success of people doing more than just creeping forward brings on a flash of jealousy that fades to remorse, soul-searching and questioning of our own self-worth.

Oh yeah, the notes might remind us, I meant to be an international diplomat. Right, I was going to write a best seller. Where are those few typed pages I sweated over all those years ago? Darn, I meant to go into investment banking, but the fact reported from her home in Delusionville that she was able to find all the pieces to the Pokemon Monopoly game that her 6-year-old son had accused her of intentionally hiding from him. She further reports that his hug of gratitude flooded her heart so thoroughly that she was spurred on to organize her pots and pans cupboard that very same day.

James "Chip" Worthington reported that after running up and down his driveway next to his son's new bicycle 100 consecutive times, Chip Jr. has finally mastered riding a two-wheeler. Chip Sr. advises all his classmates to buy more stock in the that my math skills stop at long division got in the way.

I always wonder at the people who write that they're having it all, combining parenthood with careers and secretly rejoice when someone writes of having chosen a path like mine, where their days are occupied with the stuff that makes for not-so-thrilling reading.

Wouldn't it be great if there was a section for people who consider it a victory to get through the day in clothes without food stains, to walk through their home without crushing three tiny toys or who open the silverware drawer and find the spoons with the spoons and the forks with the forks?

How would a special section of true accomplishments of parents read in an alumni magazine?

manufacturers of ibuprofen tablets.

Great news from the home of Muffy and Matt, where their teenage daughter sat down at the breakfast table with them on a Saturday morning, marking the first time she'd been up before noon on a weekend in three years. Muffy and Matt are on a religious retreat now, in thanksgiving for her asking, "So, Mom and Dad, how are you?" instead of "When can you drive me to the mall?"

There might be a report from the wife of the school hockey star that the man so quick with a slap shot had finally learned to do laundry without ruining the silk shirt that was the only item of clothing she owned that would be out of place on her major weekly outing — to the supermarket. Perhaps the rest of the class would rejoice at a classmate who hit the equivalent of the grocery daily double — having a manufacturer's coupon on the same day that the supermarket had an item on sale.

Surely others could appreciate the news that a third-grader did her homework in an hour — no tears, no moaning, no insisting that Mom, Dad, the teacher and math were stupid and why learn them. Why learn them? The answer's simple — so that you can go to college someday and meet people who've been other places and seen other things, people who will teach us different ways of living and about different things.

The key to reading those class notes is to realize that we all have different roads to travel. Rather than begrudge others roads that seem to have led to great success, we should celebrate their accomplishments and take a moment to see if we're making the most of the road we're traveling.

No matter how small they might seem, we should celebrate our own accomplishments and use them as stepping-stones to our own future greatness.

There could be a novel in each of us; we could finish a marathon someday. Who knows, maybe this will even be the week that the clean laundry actually makes it from the dryer to the family's drawers.

Kids are invited to mind their manners

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

If you're seeing a lot of elbows on your dinner table lately, your phone messages aren't being clearly relayed and you can't remember the last time your child wrote a thank-you note, you might want to check out Cindy Rogan's upcoming Manners for Minors course.

Forty-three-year-old Rogan, who grew up in Delmar, will be offering a three-day class on Aug. 12 through 14. Thursday's class will include a formal luncheon with cloth napkins and a vast array of silverware. Rogan will be limiting her class to eight children, and has more sessions planned in the upcoming weeks. During the school year, she will have after-school classes.

The three-day class will be in her Cherryvale home and will cost $125, plus a $25 materials fee. The materials fee will cover the cost of porcelain nameplates for each child, a monogrammed napkin, the final luncheon and a videotape of very well-mannered children.

"I'll start with a history of manners and etiquette," Rogan said. "I want to make it fun, so we'll do some role-playing and play some games."

During the role-playing, kids will practice introductions — done with a firm handshake and while maintaining eye contact. Rogan will cover phone etiquette, both how to make a phone call and how to answer one. She'll have the kids talk about whispering and interrupting, and how it can make people feel excluded and unimportant. Rogan and her class will spend a lot of time at her dining room table, learning to fold napkins, set the table and which utensil to use when.

"I'm planning a table hunt, where I'll hide silverware and linen around the house and have the kids find the pieces for a setting," Rogan said. "I'll also do a table-setting game, where whoever sets the table the most quickly and accurately wins a prize."

Cindy Rogan will help children learn the importance of good manners.

Rogan also plans a round of "identify the utensil" where kids can learn the difference between a soup spoon and a cereal spoon. Time will be devoted to thank-you notes, and kids can write a note to anybody who's done something nice for them in the past week. Rogan said that manners were and 7-year-old Kelly, greet newcomers, they do so with firm handshakes, make eye contact and say sincerely, "It's nice to meet you."

Rogan, who has run Special Care Medical Claims for 15 years, thought she could meet a societal always critical to her parents and grandparents, and she and her siblings grew up with good manners.

"I knew early on that manners were important," Rogan said. "Good manners are mostly second nature to my children now, and people comment on them."

In fact, when Rogan's daughters, 9-year-old Taylor need while combining her love of children and good manners, and the result was Manners for Minors. Rogan spent a few months researching manners and etiquette and is ready to share that knowledge with children.

"People are so busy, and it seems like manners are falling by the wayside," Rogan said. "Manners are a reflection of who we are as individuals. When our children are grown up, will they be able to interact at a luncheon with future employers or the company's CEO? If their elbows are on the table or they're not sure what to do with the water bowl on the table, they'll feel uncomfortable."

In fact, Rogan pointed out, they won't even need to wait till they're in the work world to call upon good manners.

"Soon, our kids will be looking at colleges and will need to talk with the admissions counselors," Rogan said. "It will help if they know how to conduct themselves. When they're young, you can get the point across and make it fun for the kids."

Rogan will be limiting her class to eight children, and has a second session planned for Aug. 5 to 7. During the school year, she will have after-school classes.

"Good manners never go out of style. They are style, and they don't have a socio-economic background," Rogan said. "Having good manners allows children to feel more positive about themselves."

For information about Manners for Minors, contact Rogan at 478-0757.

Sleeping with Shakespeare and Company in Paris

By TANYA LEET

The writer is a reporter for Spotlight Newspapers.

My bed is a worn and stained 2-inch foam "mattress" laid out on a stone floor. But my view is of Notre Dame, looking out a window from the Left Bank in Paris.

The weary world traveler won't find these accommodations listed in any guidebook, but only by accident. In retrospect, I'm surprised it wasn't in my bible, "Europe on a Shoestring."

For two long nights, my friend, Meghan, and I had the unforgettable experience of staying at the legendary Shakespeare and Co. English language bookstore on the Rue de Bucherie, directly across the Seine from Notre Dame. The owner, George Whitman, kindly invites poor backpackers with a passion for literature to stay upstairs in the library of his store, dubbed the Tumbleweed Hotel, for "one day, a week, entrance.

So, instead of heading out on our France-Switzerland-Austria-Germany itinerary, we had two more nights in Paris. We went to a café to plot Plan B; my friend drank her café with crème and I pretended to read a French newspaper.

I recalled my encounter the previous day with the 88-year-old Whitman. While reading the "100 Poets Against the War" chapbook, I heard a friendly voice from over my shoulder, "You must be a poet."

I humbly replied that I was not a poet, but considered myself a writer of sorts. What followed was a pleasant conversation regarding what I did for a living, where I was from and my political views.

That is when he invited me to stay. Indefinitely. I must admit I was flattered, but never thought I would take him up on the offer.

While browsing downstairs, I noticed the random twin beds located in corners or in front of bookshelves. During the day, these cots are covered with books and serve as a convenient spot for customers to sit and read an assortment of novels. By night, they house an eclectic group of temporary or semi-permanent youngsters and the not so young.

I broached the idea with my friend. When confronted with someone more pessimistic than I, by default I have to assume the role of an optimist.

I pitched the bookstore as a place of adventure — imagine all the interesting people we would meet! I conjured up images of the literary lions from the 1920s and 1950s who were regulars at

My friend cleaned up his office and ironed a dirty shirt. This was no American iron, mind you. Nor was I given an ironing board or squirt bottle to work with. I was annoyed that I was forced to perform a domestic drudgery, especially without the proper equipment. I rarely iron my own clothes but when I do, at least they are clean.

however long, just let me know."

Our first two nights in the city of light, we stayed in a hostel that was only slightly less seedy than camping out inside. The reason for the impromptu move was, like Americans, we naively thought that our car rental company would be open on a Saturday.

When we arrived, all packed up and checked out of our hostel, we were confronted with a metal fence barricading the front

Shakespeare and Company.

At the time, I thought the whole experience would be fun and exciting. I ignored that nagging feeling of dread deep in my gut.

We reluctantly trudged to the Metro and headed back into the heart of Paris. Then it began to rain.

Miserable and wet, we arrived at the bookstore, and I went upstairs to look for our savior. George was in his cramped office and upon seeing my backpack and the desperation on my face he immediately asked, "How long do you need?"

"Only two days, until Monday," I replied.

Still eyeing my pack warily, he asked how many pairs of underwear I brought with me. Caught off guard, I muttered something about having enough for at least a week. I did not know my answer would elicit a response that mirrored cardiac failure.

After he recovered from the feigned shock, he bestowed upon me some free, yet obvious, advice. "All you need is one pair that you hand wash every night."

I didn't want to be rude or ungrateful, but I was not in the mood to discuss the finer points of feminine hygiene.

"Good point, but women are more high-maintenance than men," I replied.

After we locked up our bags, George disappeared without a word. We wandered outside, where a few of the current bookstore tenants were sitting on a bench eating a baguette with Camembert for lunch.

In step with the tradition of communal living, they offered up a hunk of bread and the wheel of cheese. I introduced my friend and I as the new boarders and asked about the rules and procedures. We found out that we had to return to the bookstore by midnight to help close and then help open up in the morning.

One girl, Helen from Toronto, explained that someone would need to unlock the door for her at 7 a.m. — when her shift ended at a local bar.

Another resident alien, Joel, summarized his résumé when I asked what brought him here. He said he was working as a lawyer in Manhattan when he just decided to up and move.

Because I didn't want to pry, I refrained from interrogating him further. But racing through my head were all the reasons, mostly tragic, why a successful professional would leave everything behind. Was it a woman? A midlife crisis? A drug deal gone bad?

Then Helen told us about our writing assignment. For his archives, George requests an autobiography and a photo from each guest. The purpose is to publish a who's who of the bookstore, just in case any of us become famous writers. Or criminals.

At first, I thought she was joking. Where was I supposed to get a picture of myself? Well, they had it all figured out. The Metros have those cheesy photo booths, like the ones in malls were four people, mainly young girls, cram themselves in and make funny faces.

Our little picnic was cut short by the revival of rain so we headed over to the Boul. St. Michel stop. My friend got the generic yearbook photo, but I wanted to be more creative. I opted for the FBI badge photo that I believe is usually reserved for kids. I had to slouch down in the seat so my face would fill the frame, instead of just my neck.

When we returned, we met the other members of our motley crew. After we figured out who would sleep where, we chatted with the other vagabonds and settled in for the worst night of sleep in my life. It took me a week to recover.

After being awakened at 7 a.m. by Helen the barmaid, I could not fall back asleep. So I found a book that would enlighten me to the workings of George's operation.

The book was the first published archive of guests in the "Rag and Bone Shop of the Heart," another fond name for George's clandestine B&B.

The stories ranged from hilarious to sad, from pathetic to confident, from serious to hopelessly lost. Some dealt with childhood experiences and family, while others wrote about future goals and dreams.

Happy to have found samples of the kind of life story he was looking for, I began to write mine. I wrote of what brought me to Paris, what I found so far and what would make me stay. I hoped this would give George a sense of my personality and character.

Happy with the result, I left the bookstore to use a real toilet at the McDonald's down the street.

The bookstore did have a toilet — a small closet with a hole in the ground and feet placements to sit and squat. Ironically, it also served as a mini-library, just in case anyone could hold his/her breath long enough to read a book.

When everyone else got around to waking up, we were served a pancake breakfast. Martha, the woman who lives in George's apartment upstairs, was the cook. She also serves as his secretary of sorts, collecting the photos and stories. I was worried that my FBI photo would not amuse George, but she thought it was great.

Afterwards, we went downstairs to get a change of clothes. To receive access to our bags, we were told that we had to do little chores for George.

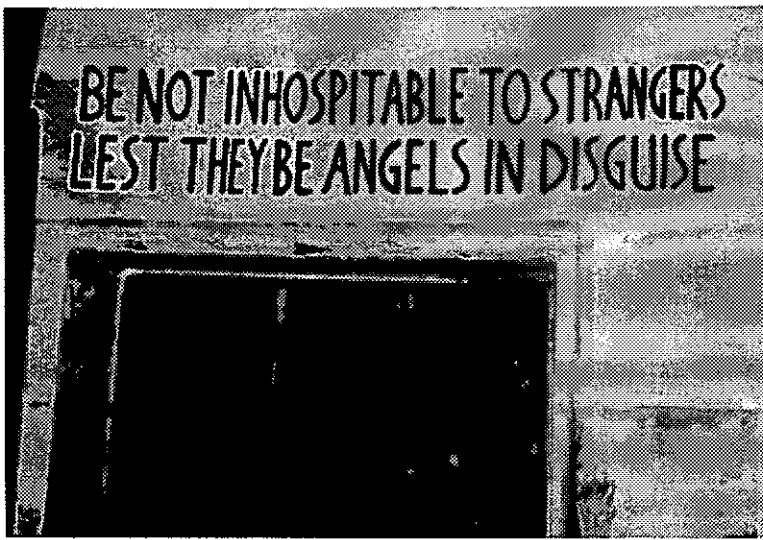

My friend cleaned up his office and I ironed a dirty shirt. This was no American iron, mind you. Nor was I given an ironing board or squirt bottle to work with. I was annoyed that I was forced to perform a domestic drudgery, especially without the proper equipment. I rarely iron my own clothes but when I do, at least they are clean.

Paris began to look less appealing to me. But I didn't want to blame the city for one eccentric man's habits. I had to get out of there. It was like the Hotel California.

Needing a reprieve from the rain and the grime, we embarked on a daylong hunt for a place to shower. A couple of the current guests told us about a public showering facility across the river. But it was Sunday, so of course it was closed. The woman behind the Metro counter suggested a public gym/swimming pool outside of downtown. Luckily, it was the last stop on one of the Metro lines. We emerged almost an hour later halfway across the city. We paid to use the locker room at the pool and the French women must have thought we were crazy or homeless. Like a prudish American, I searched for the personal shower, wary of the communal area full of old women and children. Twenty minutes later, I felt like a new person.

That night was our last hurrah. We met up with two of the guys we hung out with the previous night from the hostel/bookstore and decided to eat out for dinner. By out, I mean buying paninis (cheese and meat grilled in a baguette) and 2-euro bottles of wine (one per person) from the nearby grocery store. Since the bookstore was still open, we had nowhere to dine. Still raining, we huddled like hobos under the awning of a street corner brasserie and ate standing up.

After some cards and a wine circle, we decided to spend our last night in Paris at a hookah bar. This style of entertainment felt somehow fitting. I could imagine the authors of the Lost Generation, who frequented Shakespeare and Company, sitting around a huge pipe with a communal hose being passed from Pound to Joyce to Fitzgerald to Hemingway and then to Stein — the salon mother of American writers in Paris. These greats of 20th-century literature had haunted the arrondissements and cafés of Paris in the 1920s, some living in poverty before they made names for themselves.

I bought Hemingway's "A Moveable Feast" at the bookstore, as suggested by my travel guide. Through out the rest of the trip, I read his memoirs of his time in Paris, his writing tactics, his first wife, meeting Fitzgerald and frequenting the original Shakespeare and Company owned by Sylvia Beach.

Fittingly, I finished the book by the end of the trip and our return to Paris. This time, we called ahead and booked a hostel. For some reason, I did not return to the bookstore even though I had planned to thank them with bread and cheese from the outdoor market. Maybe I'll return when I'm famous.

What I did do that last night in Europe was search for Hemingway's old flat. Alone, I navigated the narrow one-way streets until I found the right one. My excitement rose along with the street numbers, 109, 111, 115 ... wait.

"What the hell happened to 113?" I said out loud to no one in particular. Hemingway once lived at 113 rue Notre-Dame-des-Champs.

The logical answer was that his building was knocked down, but I suspect that Paris is trying to erase his legacy. Disappointed, I walked back to our hostel near the Luxembourg Gardens and tried to console myself.

While there is no trace of Hemingway's former home, the bookstore is still here. It's moved over the years, but Shakespeare and Company remains a literary/historical institution that should never be demolished to make way for new expensive riverfront condos.

I may have laughed when Helen first told us about the autobiography, but now I realize the importance of permanently documenting one's experiences. So my story, like Hemingway's, will never be lost.

Thank you, George.

Views on Dental Health®

The Importance of Dental X-rays

Radiographs are an essential part of a dental examination. In order for the dentist to create an appropriate treatment plan, she must be able to observe all aspects of a person's mouth including the root structure and the amount of bone supporting the root. As well as, cavities that present between the posterior teeth. These areas of the mouth can only be observed with a dental x-ray. The area of the mouth that needs to be evaluated will determine the type of x-ray prescribed by your dentist.

The three types of dental x-rays commonly used in a dental office are bitewing x-rays, periapical films, and panoramic x-rays. A bitewing x-ray is usually taken once a year to determine if there is any decay present in between the back teeth. A periapical film is used to assess bone level and root structure and is often taken on an as needed basis, if a patient is experiencing discomfort. Periapical film can also be used in conjunction with bitewings as a complete series of films, which is a diagnostic tool recommended by the American Dental Association every 5 years. A panoramic film is a skeletal overview of the teeth. This x-ray is used to determine tooth growth and positioning, and is often used for orthodontic referral or determining appropriate eruption patterns and location.

It is important to listen to your dentist's recommendation for x-rays. Most offices use a high-speed film that decreases radiation exposure to an insignificant amount. If you have any questions regarding radiation exposure ask your dentist and feel confident that you are receiving the best diagnostic treatment possible.

Citizens need accurate information

Editor The Spotlight:

On Sunday, July 20, a hot, sunny, summer day, more than 350 people crowded into Bethlehem town hall to hear Scott Ritter talk about Iraq.

This event was sponsored by Bethlehem Neighbors for Peace, which continues to offer the community educational and informational forums to help explore the lies and devastations perpetrated by the Bush administration.

A local "talk" radio host, Scott Miller, or "Scotto" as he calls himself, announced on WGY that he would be bringing about 400 protesters to town hall after he failed in his attempts to have the talk cancelled.

"Scotto" also informed his listening audience that it takes all his control not to drive his car into the vigil participants at the Four Corners on Mondays when he passes through Delmar. Is this a representative of freedom of speech and Democracy or someone who would limit the voices of dissent that run contrary to the corporate controlled media, which is censored by the administration?

"Scotto" arrived on Sunday, put on his Burger King crown as Mr. Ritter rose to speak and sat quietly, looking completely isolated and lacking any credibility. None of his supporters joined him at the lecture.

Following the lecture, which received several standing ovations and many rounds of applause, Fox 23, also owned by Clear Channel, chose to interview "Scotto" about issues that attempted to deflect from the very serious circumstances and facts presented by Mr. Ritter. In fact, it was another example of unprofessional and empty news mongering.

The Bush administration is daily being exposed as liars, and has led this country to an illegal invasion and occupation of Iraq. Thousand of Iraqis have been slaughtered and mutilated, and U.S. soldiers continue to die daily, many under "unexplained" circumstances.

The news media is obligated to educate and inform the citizens of America. Instead, Fox 23 and people like "Scotto" pander to a reactionary and uninformed audience in an attempt to instill fear, not knowledge, in their listening audience.

This is a perfect example of the implicit dangers of the recent FCC rulings limiting ownership of news media to a few huge corporations and the cross-ownership of media sources to those same few corporations.

This will only lead to continued censorship and the dumbing down of America. Global citizens need to be encouraged to be informed to events which, in fact, have a direct impact on our futures.

Our voices will not be silenced.

BC should reconsider plan

Editor, The Spotlight:

As I come across more information regarding the current bond proposal the Bethlehem community is faced with, it becomes even more apparent to me that it would be beneficial to look at the proposal I outlined a few weeks ago in a letter to the editor.

I proposed building a new school to house grades seven through nine and to house grades 10 through 12 at the current high school. The fifth and sixth grades would be housed at the current middle school and grades one through four at the current elementary schools.

Not only would this solve spatial issues, but it would also place those students in the seventh through 12th grades in close proximity and keep the elementary age students away from potential dangers at the high school, including traffic.

It is also interesting to note that the state Education Department and Office of Teaching certifies our educators of pre-kindergarten through sixth grade and then at the seventh through 12th grade levels for academic subjects.

Why is it that we have grades six through eight contained within one school? Would it not be sounder to have teachers with similar certification credentials all in one place? Why couldn't there be a referendum before the bond vote to gather information about what the community wants from the voting community and not only from the select few on the bond committee?

Also, from The Spotlight of Oct. 23, 2002, our school board stated:

Boards of education before us have faced similar facilities challenges, resulting in building plans in previous years. A 1989 bond issue funded classroom expansions at three of our elementary schools... to address a first wave if enrollment increase. In 1995, a bond issue created by the Early Learning Center, expanded classroom space at the middle school and high school, and advances the district's math, science, library/media and technology programs. Most recently, in 1999, six classrooms added onto the high school temporarily alleviated overcrowding and some room sharing. Each time, the district has been determined to build enough, but not more than foreseeable needs justified. We believe it may be time again.

Is this a letter that taxpayers want to see again in October 2008?

Family is thankful for support

Editor, The Spotlight:

There are not sufficient words to express our gratitude to our friends and neighbors who were so very supportive when our son and brother died in June.

We truly appreciate all the help and support given to Tracy and Val when we needed to be in California, and the expressions of sympathy from so many - the food and flowers, visits, calls and prayers that have been given so freely to us.

We've always known that we live in a wonderful community, but we did not realize it fully until we received such a tremendous outpouring of support of every kind. Everything each of you has done has helped us during this most difficult time.

Our thanks to also to our church community for making Matt's memorial service such a special time for us. The comfort we felt from all those who participated carries a special place in our hearts and memories.

We are also so very appreciative of the many expressions of love and caring from the teachers, parents and children of the Children's Place and the Children's Corner, where Matt spent so many happy hours. We are indebted to all of you who have tried to comfort us, and we want you all to know how much it means to us that you have helped us in a time of such great loss.

From all of us, and on behalf of our extended family, who will miss Matt so much forever, thank you, each and every one, for all you have done.

Bethlehem Cares readies for walk

Editor, The Spotlight:

Many people, both kids and adults, in Bethlehem and its neighboring towns live with diabetes each day. For people with diabetes, every day can be a struggle.

Many of us take insulin — up to three or four shots daily — just to survive. We must measure all of the food that we eat. We must test our blood sugar by pricking our fingers up to seven or more times each day.

Still, even if we do all of this, we run a great risk of developing some or all of the life-threatening complications that strike people who have diabetes for a number of years.

Over the past four years, our community has rallied around an important cause — finding a cure for diabetes. People from all over our town and beyond have joined together as Bethlehem Cares, a team that has participated in the Walk to Cure Diabetes, sponsored by the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation.

Thus far, our team has raised more than $77,000 for this cause.

On Sept. 21, Bethlehem Cares will participate in this year's walk at Corporate Woods in Albany. You can join as a walker by calling us at 439-6894 or by pre-registering using one of the walk brochures found at many businesses. All of the money raised will benefit diabetes research.

If you are one of the 175 people to turn in at least $25 for diabetes research, you will receive a free team T-shirt. We would like to thank our business friends for sponsoring our T-shirt this year, especially our presenting sponsor, DeGraff, Foy, Kunz & Devine. Our team also has five gold sponsors — Crossroads Ford Mercury; Drs. Decker, Sbuttoni, Boghasian, DiCerbo & Lawless; the Kiwanis Club of Delmar; Meadowbrook Farms; and Nigro Companies.

We would also like to thank all of our silver sponsors — Allen & Taub Plumbing & Heating, Bethlehem Family Practice, Callanan Industries, Capital Cities Imported Cars, Capital District

Oral & Maxillofacial Surgeons, Choices Hair Studio & Day Spa, Robert M. Deitz, DDS, Delmar Pediatrics and Farm Family Insurance Companies.

Also, the Golub Foundation, Klersy Building Corp., Mr. Subb, Northeastern Dental Lab, Prime Care Physicians and Something Olde, Something New.

The next time you visit one of these businesses, please thank them for supporting the community and diabetes research.

If you can't join us for the walk, but would like to make a donation, you can mail your check (made payable to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation) to Bethlehem Cares at 65 Boylston Drive, Delmar 12054.

Thank you for helping us show that Bethlehem really is a caring community!

Students can choose to opt out of act

Editor, The Spotlight:

In 2001, the "No Child Left Behind" Act was passed by Congress.

One provision of this act included making available to the Armed Services the names, addresses and telephone numbers of high school students. One can readily see the intent.

A letter from the high school principal citing this act and its requirements was sent to Bethlehem Central High School parents and students on July 8.

I write to remind parents and students that they may request withholding this information from the military by signing and returning the lower portion of that letter.

Not doing so implies acceptance of the Act's requirements.

To keep this from being released is a simple procedure, but the deadling for "opting out" is Aug. 8.

Learn what a typical day was like for a child in colonial times

Aug. 12-15 at Thacher Nature Center.

Learn about school, take nature walks, make candles and butter and play old-fashioned games. Have fun with surprise colonial guests. The program is geared for ages 9 and up. For information, call 872-1237. Space is limited.

On Saturday, Aug. 9, at 2 p.m. come to the nature center and learn about river otters.

River otter populations are currently increasing in New York, after many years of heavy trapping had brought them to very low levels. Learn how you can discover these elusive animals and help NYS DEC in current studies.

For information, call 872-0800.

School board to meet

The Voorheesville school board will meet Monday, Aug. 11, at 7:30 p.m. in the commons area at the high school.

For information, call 765-3314, ext. 101.

Slingerlands man named to bank post

Michael R. Orsino has been named national retail sales executive of KeyCorp.

Orsino will be responsible for Key's retail banking sales and service organization, with overall responsibility for 24 districts including 903 KeyCenters nationwide.

The new organization aligns retail sales and is designed to reinforce and enhance a consistent sales culture throughout the KeyCenter network nationwide.

Most recently, Orsino served as executive vice president of retail banking for the Northeast Region. He was previously president of the Long Island District with primary responsibility for commercial banking sales in four districts.

Before joining Key in 1990, he served as senior vice president at North Fork Bank & Trust and senior vice president at European American Bank.

A New York native, Orsino, 52, will continue to reside in Slingerlands. Orsino graduated from Dowling College with a bachelor's degree in business.

Summer program set at library

Delmar man receives award

Edward Jones investment representative Jerry Pittz of Delmar recently received the Jack Phelan Award for his outstanding sales and service efforts of the past year. The award is named for the firm's former national sales manager, Jack Phelan.

Pittz is one of just 1,750 of the firm's more than 9,000 investment representatives who received the award. Edward Jones, the only major financial-services firm advising individual investors exclusively, traces its roots to 1871 and currently serves nearly six million clients. The firm offers its clients a variety of investments, including certificates of deposit, taxable and non-taxable bonds, stocks and mutual funds. The largest firm in the nation in terms of branch offices, Edward Jones currently has more than 8,800 offices in the United States and, through its affiliates, in Canada and the United Kingdom.

Using your power to make a difference this summer.

What's happening and why

Electricity demand in New York State continues to grow. This summer, when hot weather places even greater demand on the electric grid, supplies might be tight, especially in New York City and Long Island. Statewide, the New York Independent System Operator (ISO) forecasts that we should have enough electricity to meet demand. It projects that New York's 2003 peak demand will be 31,430 megawatts, 786 megawatts higher than last summer. Add to that another 5,657 megawatts of reserve power, and the total need is 37,087 megawatts.

New generating plants expected to go on-line this summer, improvements to older plants, and demand reduction programs for large customers are helping meet demand. But if we have a prolonged heat wave, or if major generating plants break down, the margin between peak demand and available supply could diminish.

What to expect

This summer you may be asked to help ensure the reliability and availability of electricity by conserving energy. Your efforts can make a big contribution to the plans of utilities and large-use customers that go into effect during a heat wave. If everyone reduces the amount of electricity they use just a little, it can make a lot of difference.

On an extremely hot day, New York's electric utilities take steps to maintain system reliability. Utilities may:

- Issue public appeals to residential customers on the radio and TV

- Ask large customers to reduce their consumption
- Ask customers to voluntarily reduce power consumption

During an energy alert your actions may keep us from running out of electricity. If an alert is announced, make every effort to reduce your electricity use. Turn off all non-essential electrical devices, lights, and appliances.

What you should do

By using electricity wisely, you can conserve energy, ensure an adequate supply for everyone, and lower your bills: You can:

- Use major appliances early or late in the day.
- Turn off your air conditioner when you leave home; set the thermostat at 78 degrees or run it on low.
- Replace or clean air conditioner filters once a month.
- Use a fan to bring in cool air from outside during the morning and evening.
- Close curtains or blinds during the day to block out the heat from sunlight.
- Use your microwave instead of your oven and range.
- Turn on lights only when necessary.
- Keep refrigerator and freezer doors shut as much as possible, and set refrigerator temperature at 38 to 40 degrees and freezer temperature at 0 to 5 degrees.
- Buy Energy Star appliances and lighting, which can save you 30% on your energy costs and 70% on your lighting energy costs.

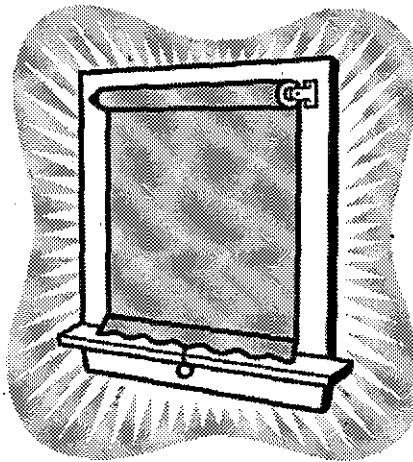

For more information, contact the New York State Public Service Commission at 1-888-Ask-PSC1 or www.AskPSC.com, New York State Energy Research and Development Authority at 1-877-NY-SMART (1-877-697-6278) or www.GetEnergySmart.org or your local utility.

Conserve a little.

Electricity supply may be tight this summer. You can make a difference. There are simple, affordable things everybody can do to conserve energy, save money and help protect the environment.

USE FANS TO COOL YOUR HOME.

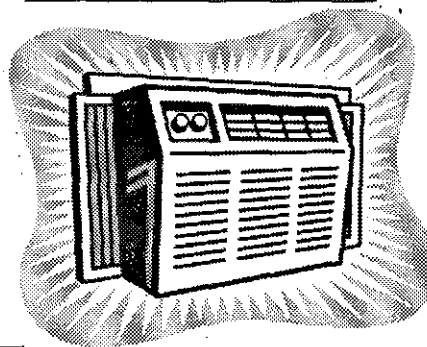

SHADE ROOMS FROM DIRECT SUNLIGHT.

USE APPLIANCES EARLY OR LATE IN THE DAY.

INSTALL TIMERS OR PROGRAMMABLE THERMOSTATS ON YOUR AIR CONDITIONERS.

Save a lot.

You can also save energy and money by shopping for Energy Star appliances. For more ideas to lower your energy costs this summer, contact the NYS Public Service Commission or the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority at www.GetEnergySmart.org

Library board, administration and staff are grateful for the foundation's regard for our library and our community.

Tang presents program

The Tang Museum presents "Trisha Brown: dance and art in dialogue" next Monday, Aug. 11, at 2 p.m. Learn what a choreographer does and how Brown's collaboration with artists has changed the way dance is performed and viewed.

Participatory choreography and dancing will connect visual images, sound and movement. Appropriate for children age 5 and up, the program is part of the Tang Museum's Destination: Exploration series of interdisciplinary programs that link museum exhibition works and themes with NYS K-12 curricula. Call 439-9314 to register.

Web site tour

Learn how to access our resources from home next Tuesday, Aug. 12, at 2 p.m.

"Library Website Tour" will demonstrate how to renew books, request items and learn about library events for adults and children. The talk will also show you how to use the library's databases to find newspaper and magazine articles and get homework help.

Call to register. You can sneak a peek beforehand at www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org.

Sunnyview Rehabilitation Hospital-
Inspiring Independence Since 1928

On August 8, 1928, Herbert Hoover was president of the United States. Television was in its infancy (thanks to WRGB in Schenectady). There was no way to prevent polio. But there was a place where children could be treated for polio, bone deformities and cerebral palsy. It was called the Eastern New York Orthopaedic School.

Times have changed, and so has the name. But the mission of caring - now for people of all ages - remains the same.

On August 8, 2003, Sunnyview Rehabilitation Hospital will celebrate

Ernie Williams to perform tonight

Tonight's the night to enjoy one of the best musical experiences the area has to offer when the Ernie Williams Band appears at Together at Twilight. The library is proud to host this charming bluesman and his extraordinary band.

Bring the whole family and a blanket to sit on for the 7 p.m.

performance.

In case of rain, the concert will be at the performing arts center at the high school.

We are heading into the last week of summer reading club 2003 and there has been an important alteration in the schedule which families should take note of.

The grand evening finale will be held on Thursday, Aug. 14, at 7 p.m. instead of Aug. 13 as previously announced. The library apologizes for any inconvenience this may cause.

All ages are invited to this evening of amazing and hilarious entertainment with the Michael Mills Magic Show. The program offers comedy, magic, prizes and refreshments and a great time for all.

No sign-up is required, but you must come early to be guaranteed a seat!

Teens will be talking about favorite books in the fantasy and sci-fi genre on Monday, Aug. 11, at 7 p.m.

Bring your own white T-shirt and complete the evening with a fantasy tie-dye. Wear old clothes in case you get messy. Sign-up is required. For grades six and up.

First-through third-graders should be wearing their old clothes, too, on Aug. 11, at 2 p.m. Everyone will take a turn at a number of "art stations" set up around the room and work on a variety of art projects.

On Wednesday, Aug. 13, kids in grades four through six will have their chance to meet Widget the dog who travels with the Animal Protection Foundation for the B.A.R.K. program.

Learn about the APF's local traveling veterinary hospital and the pets they help at the Be Aware, Responsible and Kind presentation at 2 p.m. You can help by bringing a bag, box or can of dog or cat food to donate to the APF.

Summer story times for pre-readers end Aug. 14. Sign up for library programs by calling 765-2791 or e-mail voorefq@uhls.lib.ny.us.

Visit the library Web site at www.voorheesvillelibrary.org. The library is closed on Sundays and open Saturday from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. until after Labor Day weekend.

Clown show on deck to close summer program

"Har-Har Harry's Musical Magical Clown Show" is featured at the final festivities of Bethlehem Public Library's summer reading program on Thursday, Aug. 14, at 7 p.m.

Reading program participants in grades one and up can register by calling 439-9314.

Harry is the creation of Jeffery

Boyer, a versatile performer with more than 20 years of professional experience. Boyer received clown training under the tutelage of Steven and Mary Richelle, aka Rickles and Tutu, currently with the Ringling Brothers/Barnum & Bailey Circus. Boyer also studied with the Boston Shakespeare Co.

Tang Museum to present choreography program

The Tang Museum will present "Trisha Brown: Dance and Art in Dialogue" at Bethlehem Public Library on Monday, Aug. 11, at 2 p.m.

Children age 6 and up can learn what a choreographer does and how Brown's collaboration with artists has changed the way dance is performed and viewed. By doing some choreography and dancing of their own, children will learn to relate visual images and sound to movement.

Call 439-9314 to register.

The program is part of the Tang's "Destination: Exploration" series of interdisciplinary programs that link museum exhibition works and themes with state kindergarten through 12th-grade school curricula.

The Tang Teaching Museum and Art Gallery is located on the Skidmore campus in Saratoga.

Malinowski wins ESG gold in steeplechase

By ROB JONAS

The steeplechase is the most unusual event in a track and field meet.

Part distance event and part obstacle course, runners have to be able to master two techniques in order to be successful.

Bethlehem's Emily Malinowski is one of the few area high school runners to master the steeplechase. After finishing second at this year's state championships, Malinowski set a record in winning the scholastic women's 2,000-meter steeplechase at the Empire State Games July 23-27 in Buffalo.

"I got the record, so it was so exciting. I was thrilled," Malinowski said.

Nobody came close to beating Malinowski, who finished with a time of 7:14.39. The runner-up in the event was more than 10 seconds behind her.

"I hadn't recognized any of the girls" in the race, Malinowski said. "Only one of the girls I had heard of before, so I didn't know what to expect."

Malinowski's Bethlehem teammate, Roxanne Wegman, also had a strong performance at the games. Wegman took second in the scholastic women's 10,000 with a time of 40:54.89 and placed fourth in the scholastic women's 5,000 in a time of 19:38.14.

Ravena's Brianna Drexler was fifth in the scholastic women's 100 high hurdles in a time of 16:26 seconds and seventh in the scholastic women's 400 intermediate hurdles in a time of 1:11.13. She also finished 11th in the scholastic women's long jump with a distance of 4.77 meters.

In the scholastic men's division, Matthew Shaffer (Delmar) earned a bronze medal in the 5,000 with a time of 16:16.62, while his brother Patrick placed fifth in the event with a time of 16:27.04. Evan Savage (Delmar) finished fourth in the 10,000 with a time of 35:52.81.

James Nixon (Delmar) missed medalling in the open men's decathlon by two places. Nixon finished fifth with a score of 5,206 points.

Ben Greenberg (Slingerlands) was fifth in the open men's 5,000 in a time of 16:44.62, and Michael Piplani (Delmar) finished 10th in the open men's 10-kilometer racewalk with a time of 1 hour, 10:59.

In the masters division, Delmar's Linda Robins received a silver medal in the women's 35-39 age group javelin with a throw of 20.28 meters.

Stern, Vanetten swim to medals

Becca Stern of Slingerlands earned two gold medals and a silver medal in the scholastic women's swimming competition at the Empire State Games July 23-27 in Buffalo.

Stern won the 50-meter freestyle in a time of 28 seconds and took first place in the 100-meter backstroke in a time of 1:08.80. She also finished second in the 100 freestyle in a time of 1:01.09.

Ravena's Jenny Vanetten medalled in two events at the games. She finished second in the scholastic women's 100 breaststroke in a time of 1:20.58 and placed third in the scholastic women's 200 individual medley in a time of 2:34.30.

Ashley Burns of Ravena earned a silver medal in the scholastic women's 200 backstroke with a time of 2:33.11 and received a bronze medal in the scholastic women's 400 individual medley with a time of 5:25.56. She also finished sixth in the scholastic women's 800 freestyle in a time of 9:50.89.

Burns, Vanetten and Stern teamed up with Guilderland's Katie Linehan to finish second in the scholastic women's 400 medley relay with a time of 4:46.99.

In other scholastic women's division events, Glenmont's Katie O'Donnell placed eighth in the 200 backstroke and 15th in the 800 freestyle.

Brittney Ginsburg of Slingerlands was 16th in the 100 butterfly.

In the scholastic men's division, Delmar's Sean Kennedy earned a bronze medal in the 400 individual medley with a time of 5:28.41. Kennedy also finished seventh in the 200 butterfly with a time of 2:40.25 and placed eighth in the 100 butterfly with a time of 1:09.15.

Paul Cafiero (Delmar) placed 10th in the 200 individual medley and 12th in the 100 breaststroke.

Timothy DeGroff (Feura Bush) finished 10th in the 100 backstroke and 13th in both the 100 butterfly and 100 freestyle.

Thomas O'Hanlon (Selkirk) was 11th in the 1,500 freestyle and 18th in the 100 freestyle.

Teams get jump on preseason preparations

By ROB JONAS

Football isn't a year-round activity, but it's getting closer to being one at the high school level.

While the official first day of football practice isn't until Aug. 18, some players have already been going to preseason camps such as the recently-completed Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk team camp.

"Every sport has become year round, or there is an off-season where you have to prepare," said RCS varsity football coach Gary VanDerzee, who also ran the team camp. "They (the teams) want to get better, and if they want to get better, these are the kinds of things they have to do to get better."

Five schools — RCS, Voorheesville, Cossackie-Athens, Rensselaer and Hudson — spent five evenings the week of July 20-25 learning technique and scrimmaging against each other. Voorheesville has been a regular attendee of the RCS team camp.

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk running back John Dibble avoids a Voorheesville defender during a scrimmage on the last day of the RCS Football Team Camp July 25.

Rob Jonas

"I guess the thing I like the most about it is the people who run it," Voorheesville coach Joe Sapienza said. "Ravena has a great football tradition with a great coaching staff, and this is one of the few camps where you get to work with the kids as a team."

"It gives us an evaluation tool," VanDerzee said. "It also gives us a chance to see who has the dedication."

Coaches do not make the team camp mandatory for their players, but both VanDerzee and Sapienza said that more than 90 percent of the players that are eligible for the varsity level at their schools participated in this year's camp.

"They have to find that balance between home life and sports," VanDerzee said.

Sapienza said that going to any off-season camp can be a valuable tool for athletes.

"There's not a sport that isn't available to be played year-round," he said. "And if you want to be successful, you have to put in as much time as possible."

Loux earns two gold medals in wrestling

Delmar's Andrew Loux won two gold medals in wrestling at the Empire State Games July 23-27 in Buffalo.

Loux's first gold medal came in the open men's 63-kilogram Greco-Roman competition. He won his first five matches by decision before defeating Central's Jason Goldman 7-3 in the finals July 25.

Kuhn beats Shaffer for Hour Run title

Bethlehem Central High School graduate Rob Kuhn outdistanced the field to win last Thursday's Hour Run at Shaker High School.

Kuhn covered a distance of 10.9 miles during the hour-long track race to earn first place. Pat Shaffer, a current BCHS student, was second with a distance of 10.01 miles.

Megan Leitzinger had the greatest distance covered for a female at the Hour Run. Leitzinger amassed 8.85 miles.

Anny Stockman set a new single-age American record at the Hour Run. Stockman, 71, covered 7.07 miles over 60 minutes.

The Hour Run is part of the Hudson Mohawk Road Runners Club's series of Thursday night track races at Shaker High School. The series concludes tomorrow, Aug. 7, with the Pentathlon — a series of five track races of varying distances.

Loux and Goldman had a rematch in the finals of the open men's freestyle competition July 26. This time, it took overtime before Loux edged Goldman 3-2 to claim his second gold medal.

An Open Letter to the Residents of the Town of Bethlehem

This open letter is being published to bring two significant issues to your attention:

1. Zoning Amendments proposed by the Town Board will severely restrict uses of residential and agricultural property in the Rural District Not Zoned portion of the Town, which comprises over 20% of the total land area within Town boundaries.
2. A proposal by Waste Management to build office and maintenance building will provide significant financial and environmental benefits to the Town of Bethlehem.

1. Zoning Impacts on Residential and Agricultural Properties - A recent court decision renders agricultural uses and single-family homes illegal in the Rural District Not Zoned part of Town. When the Town Zoning Board of Appeals tried to appeal this decision, known as the "Orsi Decision", the Town Board refused to fund this appeal.

The Town Board now plans to implement "stop-gap" zoning restrictions that many local residents fear will severely restrict the uses of property in Bethlehem's Rural District Not Zoned areas and could have major adverse impact on land values in these areas. The Town Board says it will address other zoning issues in the Rural District Not Zoned areas sometime in the future. When this will happen and how it may negatively affect property values is still unknown.

2. Economic and Environmental benefits from Waste Management's Office & Maintenance Building Proposal - For more than two years, Waste management has sought Town approval for a new commercial office building, truck and container maintenance building, and parking area for our fleet and employees' vehicles on Route 144, directly across from Exit 22 of the New York State Thruway. The benefits of this project include the following:

- 80 acres of the property will be dedicated to a conservation easement, thus eliminating any development on that portion of the property, which includes the banks of the Hudson River and adjoining lowlands.
- Bethlehem would receive significant tax revenues from the project.
- Approximately 140 people of diverse talents would be employed at the facility.
- Current farm buildings and homestead will be maintained and preserved on the property.
- No waste transfer station or landfill would ever be built on the property.

Waste Management's property lies in the Rural District Not Zoned area of the Town. For more than 10 years, Town officials have agreed that the type of facility proposed by Waste Management would be permissible within the District, subject to site plan approval. The Land Use Management Advisory Committee ("LUMAC") has also identified this portion of the Town as suitable for uses as those proposed by Waste Management.

Like many residential and agricultural properties in the Rural District Not Zoned area that will be negatively impacted by the Town's proposed zoning changes, Waste Management's project benefits it provides to the Town will also be affected. We believe the project should be exempted from the zoning changes because the new rezoning would come into effect well after the application for our project was filed. Failure to do so could potentially derail a quality project that will yield significant tax revenues to the community and employ approximately 140 people.

Waste Management has always been straightforward regarding the nature of our project. We stand by our offer to meet with any individual or group that may have questions, suggestions or concerns. We remain dedicated to complete a full review of our project in a fair fashion.

Every day Waste Management works hard to provide very important and necessary service to the Bethlehem community. We are very concerned about the impact of the Town's zoning policies on property values, as well as the future of our project. If you share these concerns, call Supervisor Sheila Fuller at 439-4955 Ext. 164 and attend the Town Board Public Hearing on August 13, 2003 at 7:30 p.m. at Town Hall.

Mentoring

McGuire said the new program was the result of a collaborative effort between the teachers, principals association and central administration. It follows the apprentice/master craftsman model, pairing a tenured teacher with years of experience in the classroom with one who is new to the profession, he said.

"The most important components are the pedagogy, curriculum and collegial support," he said at the last school board meeting. "It is not mandatory that a special education teacher is mentored by a special education teacher."

McGuire said a pool of seasoned teachers was recruited to serve when needed. During the summer, they have been received training their roles as mentors.

"Selection of capable teachers is key, but training is really important," he said. "They need to understand how to foster independence and provide support. The mentor's role is absolutely separate and discreet from the teacher appraisal process. The new teacher must be able to turn to his or her mentor and ask questions and be vulnerable and not be afraid he or she will be judged."

McGuire said that the number of trained mentor teachers now exceeds the number of new teachers anticipated to being their careers at Bethlehem Central in the fall, but those who are not currently assigned will more than likely be paired up in the future.

"We have a roster of volunteers who are interested, but they know they may or may not be assigned," he said. "We currently have 11 new teachers, but you never know where your recruitment needs will be. There are always unanticipated needs, like a teacher's spouse may need to relocate or other family issue may arise."

This is not the first time the district has had a teacher-mentoring program McGuire said, but it has been quite a long time since the last one. The new grant also addresses some of the problems with the old program.

"There was grant funding available for this type of mentoring program in 1989-90 it required both the mentor and their apprentice teacher to be released (from the classroom) one day per week," he said. "This minimizes releases time."

McGuire said a great deal of study went into the project before it was launched.

"We designed a program not unlike others we studied," he said.

Host families needed

Host families are needed for 30 American Field Service (AFS) foreign exchange students who will be coming to the Capital District for the 2003-2004 school year.

Students from countries all over the world will attend local high schools and participate in all aspects of family, school and community life.

Families who apply early will have the best opportunity to view applications from students with special interests that match theirs, such as athletics or music.

Local AFS volunteers provide family orientation and student support, as well as social and educational events for students, host families and host siblings.

For information about hosting or about intercultural opportunities for U.S. high school students to study abroad for a summer, semester or year, contact Happy Scherer at 439-0016 or call 1-800-AFS-INFO.

Obituaries

Dorothy Campbell

Dorothy M. Campbell, 94, of North Bethlehem died Tuesday, July 22, at her home.

Born in Brooklyn, she lived in New Salem before moving to Delmar in 1988 and to the Beverwyck in 2000.

Mrs. Campbell was a sixth grade teacher at Voorheesville Elementary School before she retired.

She was a 50-year member of the former New Salem Reformed Church and more recently a member of Delmar Reformed Church.

She was a Girl Scout leader in Scotia and was a volunteer at Child's Nursing Home and Child's Hospital for many years. She was a charter member of the New Scotland Historical Association and a member of the Delmar Progress Club.

She was the widow of Robert Francis Campbell.

Survivors include two sons, Robert Worthe Campbell of Folsom, Calif., and Roger Alfred Campbell of New York City; and two grandchildren.

Services are scheduled at 1:30 p.m. on Monday, Aug. 11, at Delmar Reformed Church, 386 Delaware Ave., Delmar. A reception will follow at the Van Cortland Room in the Beverwyck Retirement Center.

Arrangements are by the Applebee Funeral Home in Delmar.

Contributions may be made to Delmar Reformed Church, Prayer Garden Fund, 386 Delaware Ave., Delmar 12054.

Catherine Gordon

Catherine M. Gordon, 68, of Delmar died Monday, July 28, at her home.

Born in Amsterdam, she was a longtime Capital District resident.

She worked for the state Department of Law, retiring in 1998.

She was the widow of Daniel

Gordon.

Survivors include two daughters, Carol Gordon of Albany and Linda S. Gordon of Glenmont; a sister, Veronica King of Albany; and four grandchildren.

Services were from the Magin and Keegan Funeral Home in Albany and St. James Church.

Burial was in Memory's Garden in Colonie.

Barbara Williams

Barbara Curro Williams, 85, of North Grandview Terrace in Voorheesville died Friday, July 25, at her son's home.

An Albany native, she graduated from Albany High School and attended the University at Albany.

She was the widow of Fred R. Williams.

Survivors include a son, James J. Williams; a sister, Lena Mazzarini of California; three grandchildren; and two great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Williams donated her body to the Anatomical Gift Program at Albany Medical College.

A memorial service was held at St. Matthew's Church in Voorheesville.

Contributions may be made to Community Hospice of Rensselaer County, 295 Valley View Blvd., Rensselaer 12144.

Theresa Gibbons

Theresa C. Gibbons, 74, of Slingerlands — and formerly of Newark, Hasbrouck Heights and Allendale, N.J., and Littleton, Mass. — died Sunday, July 27.

Born in St. Benedict, Pa., she was a feature writer for the Newark Sunday News and a producer for the teenage section of the Kate Smith television show. She was also a teacher in New Jersey schools.

Survivors include her husband, Thomas R. Gibbons; three daughters, Jane E. Nealy of New York City, Marie E. Brand of Middletown and Susan K. Gibbons of Glenmont; a son, Michael J. Gibbons of Salt Lake City; and five grandchildren.

Services were from the Church of St. Thomas the Apostle in Delmar.

Burial was in Bethlehem Cemetery in Delmar.

Arrangements were by the Applebee Funeral Home in Delmar.

Forum

The results show attendees repeatedly called for the creation of a comprehensive master plan that would highlight appropriate locations for companies to develop, while preserving some open land.

"You want to be sure you're focused on current development projects at the same time you're evaluating a comprehensive master plan," said Michael Tucker, IDA chairman.

Efforts to attract new development must not be hampered while work on a study is under way, Tucker added.

In June, the town launched its search for a consultant to evaluate zoning issues within Bethlehem and appropriate land uses. It appears the consultant won't be creating a comprehensive plan from scratch.

According to Town Supervisor Sheila Fuller, the consultant would essentially review and update the Land Use Management Advisory Committee (LUMAC) plan created in the early 1990s. The LUMAC plan was never officially adopted as law, but it continues to be utilized by the planning and building departments as a resource guide for identifying preferred types of development in locations.

Town residents also ranked addressing infrastructure needs as a top priority along with controlling sprawl, preserving open space and maintaining the character of the community.

The second forum — slated for Oct. 20 — will include a review of the public commentary and a discussion involving the town's strategy for implementing appropriate growth. The IDA hopes public feedback will help identify between four and six areas within the town that have the potential for commercial growth with minimal negative effects. The likely corridors would include: land adjacent to the proposed Route 85 Slingerlands bypass extension, West Yard Road in Selkirk, Route 9W, River Road property near PSEG and Wemple Road, according to Tucker.

"That doesn't mean they're exclusive areas and that you shouldn't have a plan for other areas," added Tucker.

An internal review with town staff and consultants would be conducted to determine the feasibility of the identified locations. The IDA would then start formulating a conceptual master plan for the selected areas.

In early September, the IDA expects to publish a draft report of the June forum that includes a summary of the information presented, public viewpoints expressed and future action to be taken by the agency.

The public is invited to attend the second economic development forum Oct. 20 from 7 to 9 p.m. at town hall.

Drag

winter they probably just won't come," said owner Jim Giaccone.

He attributes a 10 percent dip in evening bar sales to the smoking ban, but says it's too soon to determine what long-term effect the ban might have on his business.

Wednesday marked the first smoke-free bingo at American Legion Post 1040 in Delmar, yet it still managed to draw a crowd of roughly 80 players. Of those, Legion board chairman Joe VanDeloo estimates 40 percent smoke — resulting in a plethora of complaints.

"Rumbling and grumbling. They did a lot of smoking outside," he said, leaving VanDeloo with a sea of cigarette butts to pick up.

But it isn't the mess that has this former smoker so irritated; it's the restrictions imposed by the government.

"We fought for freedom, and they're taking it away from us,"

VanDeloo said.

Failure to comply with the state law can result in hefty penalties. But bars and restaurants found violating the law are being given a reprieve, for now.

"The first step is to make sure they are acquainted with the new law," said Jim Plastiras, director of communications for Albany County.

Establishments with pending complaints will be notified and informed of the parameters of the law. If additional complaints are received, Plastiras said county Health Department inspectors will visit the establishment, and fines would be imposed for repeat offenders.

Business owners can be slapped with a maximum fine of $1,000 for violating the law. For some bar owners, the threat of a fine far outweighs a drastic drop in sales.

"I think some people are just going to take their chances," said Giaccone.

The McKrells bring their noteworthy sound to the inaugural Sacandaga Summer Music Festival this Saturday at The Eagle Mills Cider Co. in Broadalbin.

SUMMER SOUNDS

outdoor festivals abound this week

By DEV TOBIN

Though summer's outdoor music scene is waning, with Live at Five over, the coming week features several multi-act outdoor festivals.

Two are in Albany — the GE Riverfest on Saturday and the Pride of New York Food Festival on Wednesday — and one is the inaugural Sacandaga Summer Music Festival on Saturday at the Eagle Mills Cider Co. in Broadalbin.

The GE Riverfest, from noon to 9 p.m. in the Corning Preserve, will feature a wide variety of entertainment, from a Radio Disney concert of young singers to the headliner, popular dance band Nile Rogers and Chic.

The fact that this is a river festival means there will be more than the usual concerts in the new amphitheater. The U.S. Water Ski Show Team will perform on the river from noon to 1:30 p.m. and there will be a lighted boat parade by members of the Albany Yacht Club at dusk followed by fireworks over the river.

There will also be a Kidzone with children's activities like hands-on science experiments, juggling, face-painting, etc.

On the main stage will be Jesse McCartney, Chris Trousdale, Nikki Cleary and Stevie Brock of Radio Disney from 1:30 to 2:30 p.m.; roots rockers The Decadent Royals from 2:45 to 3:45; Toby Foyeh and Orchestra Africa from 4:15 to 5; Irish rockers The Commitments from 6 to 7:15; and Nile Rogers and Chic with Silver Logan Sharp from 7:45 to 9.

The Pride of New York Food Festival on Aug. 13 at the Empire State Plaza, besides offering lots of tasty made- or grown-in-New York edibles, also offers classic rock, this time from Eric Burdon and the Animals and Woodstock's venerable NRBQ.

The festival, the food part anyway, with 70 traditional outdoor vendors and 30 Pride of New York vendors, runs from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m.

The music begins at 5:15 with local horns/rock band the Burners UK, followed by NRBQ at 7 and Eric Burdon and the Animals hitting the stage at 8:30.

The Sacandaga Summer Music Festival features four top local acts — The McKrells, Ernie Williams and Band, the Cole Broderick Jazz Quartet and Skuttlebutt.

The day-long festival, with music from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m., will be at the site of a historic cider mill on Eagle Mills Road just off Route 29.

Also on tap are children's activities like gemstone mining, a dino dig, a nature discovery train ride and the Kidville interactive play center.

Food and drink, including homemade ice cream, cider and related products, will be available for sale.

Tickets are $12 in advance, $15 at the gate. Admission for children ages 5 to 12 is $5, free for children under 5.

For information, call 883-8700 or log on to www.eaglemillsfun.com

Nile Rogers and Chic will perform at The GE Riverfest in the Corning Preserve.

Eric Burdon and the Animals (above) and Woodstock's NRBQ will perform at The Pride of New York Food Festival on Wednesday, at the Empire State Plaza.

Don't need a job, but want a job? Want to work, but need summers and holidays off?

Are you a hard worker, but insist that family and a life outside the office must come first?

Maybe we are a fit. A small but busy consulting practice is fast growing into a consulting business. We expanded last year and our new Marketing Director has proven to us that once you show your ability, success follows. Now we must keep up with the work she is bringing in. We deal with gas, electric and water utilities but are really in the money business. An understanding of income statements, balance sheets, cash flow statements and electronic spreadsheets is essential. A background in the utility business would be great, as would a rate-setting background; however, we can train receptive brains. We are looking for a numbers person but not just a numbers cruncher. Must be able to analyze and put numbers into perspective. Must have brains, spirit, ideas and ambition. Ideal candidate is someone who wants to work from home and wants a flexible work relationship. Part time work on your schedule. Talk us into hiring you. Send replies to
