RCS science teacher faces felony charge

BY KRISTEN OLBY

An earth science teacher with the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk school district, arrested twice in one week, will return to Cossackie Village Court to answer a slew of charges on Sept. 17.

A manhunt stretching from Greene to Saratoga counties ensued Thursday evening when 42-year-old Donald Poe crashed his car into guide wires on Route 9W around 8:30 p.m. Poe appeared to be intoxicated at the time of the crash, according to police.

"He threatened he would do harm to himself, and he tried to run out into the roadway," said Trooper Abdul Weed of State Police in Catskill. Poe ran into a heavily wooded area that bordered the Thruway. State police utilized search dogs and a helicopter but were unable to locate Poe. The search was called off Friday afternoon when Poe walked into the Village of Corinth police department around 12:30 p.m. and turned himself in.

He threatened he would do harm to himself, and he tried to run out into the roadway.

Abdul Weed

"We located the Honda he was driving in a parking lot the next day," said Officer Louis Somma of Corinth police.

Poe was transported back to Cossackie, where he was arraigned on charges of criminal contempt and aggravated harassment. Cossackie Village Justice Matthew Kennedy ordered Poe to undergo an alcohol and mental health evaluation and sent him to the Greene County jail in lieu of $25,000 bail.

Earlier in the week, Poe was arrested by Cossackie police for allegedly breaking into his ex-girlfriend's Mansion Street home, where police say he stole jewelry and cut the wires to appliances. He was arraigned on a felony burglary charge and misdemeanor charges of criminal mischief and aggravated harassment. Poe was sent to the Greene County jail in lieu of $1,000 cash bail, which he later posted.

Students remain suspended

By KRISTEN OLBY

Three Bethlehem high school students arrested in connection with an attempted burglary of the Bethlehem Central Middle School will be suspended from school for an extended period of time, according to the district.

Police arrested high school juniors Cullen Breen and Scott Fraser, both 16, and a 15-year-old high school student for allegedly attempting to break in to the school using a rope ladder on Aug. 17. Police had been monitoring the building after several Molotov cocktails exploded in a parking area outside of the school on three occasions earlier that week. All three teens face felony charges of attempted burglary and criminal possession of a weapon, along with several misdemeanor charges.

"I think it was a grievous lack of judgment and dangerous action on their part, but I don't believe the intent, in any

BC grad on long road to recovery

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

Erik Hjeltne's grin is easy and big, testament to the positive attitude that friends and family mention first when talking about him.

Just 23, Hjeltne became a C-7 quadriplegic in a diving accident this past March in Cancun, Mexico. After being airlifted to New York City's Mount Sinai Hospital for surgery and having macrophage surgery in Tel Aviv, Israel, Hjeltne now has full mobility of his arms and some use of his hands. Both surgeries took place within two weeks of the accident, and Hjeltne was at Mount Sinai for rehabilitation until the end of August, when he returned to his home in Clifton Park.

He splits his time between home and Sunnyside Rehabilitation Hospital in Schenectady.

"My long-term goal is to be walking,"

Hjeltne said. "I'm trying to be independent."

The 1998 Bethlehem Central High School grad recently moved into his own apartment, converted from the garage attached to the house his mother, Deb Hjeltne, and her partner Pat Ragozzino share with Erik's brother Daniel Hjeltne, a senior at Niskayuna High School. The apartment is spacious enough that Hjeltne can move about easily in his chair, and the sink and stove allow him space to position his chair so he can prepare a meal for himself and clean up afterwards. A spacious deck provides access to the outdoors.

"My next goal is a vehicle so that I could go to therapy, the mall, the gym or meet my friends on my own," Hjeltne said. "I've applied for a driver's class at Sunnyside that teaches you how to drive a specially-equipped vehicle."

Currently, Hjeltne goes to Sunnyside

Teacher relieved of classroom duties

By KRISTEN OLBY

A Bethlehem Central High School chemistry teacher arrested for exposing himself will remain with the school district throughout the year but not in the classroom.

Keith Gunner, 46, of 439 Wemple Road in Glenmont allegedly walked outside to retrieve his mail in the nude on Aug. 29. A neighbor driving by saw Gunner and reported the incident to police. Gunner was ticketed for exposure, a violation. He was immediately reassigned by the district and relieved of his teaching responsibilities after the arrest.

Police arrest 3 for DWI

Bethlehem police recently arrested three individuals for driving while intoxicated (DWI).

Michelle Wilkes-Hawkins, 36, of 16 Mansion Blvd., Delmar, was stopped by police on Sept. 7 at 4:37 a.m. for driving down a one-way portion of Frontage Road. Police said Hawkins failed field sobriety tests and charged her with DWI.

Diane Demeo, 51, of 232 Union St., Schenectady, was stopped by police on Sept. 8 at 3:18 a.m. for crossing the center line on Route 9W in Glenmont. Police say Demeo failed field sobriety tests and charged her with DWI.

James Clouse, 37, of Oakbrook Manor Apartments, Ravena, was stopped by police on Sept. 11 at 9:48 p.m. for passing a vehicle on River Road in Selkirk in a no-passing zone. Police said Clouse failed field sobriety tests and charged him with DWI.

Daylily group to meet

The Hudson Adirondack Daylily Society will meet Saturday, Sept. 20, at Cornell Cooperative Extension of Albany County on Martin Road in Voorheesville.

The meeting will begin at 10 a.m.

David Kirchoff and Mort Morss will present their newest and best performing daylilies.

A member photo contest will also be held.

Taxpayers need to notify office of mortgage changes

Bethlehem school tax bills have been mailed.

If you should have received a bill and did not, call the tax office at town hall. New homeowners and homeowners that have refinanced their homes are requested to inform the tax office of the new information.

The tax office wants to verify that the bill was mailed to the correct bank or mortgage institution and possibly prevent penalties to the homeowner.

With the low interest rates, many have chosen to buy a new home or refinance their mortgages. The town of Bethlehem is often not notified for several months of this change. Albany County is currently behind in processing deed changes.

It is the homeowner's responsibility to notify the tax office of any changes in their escrow accounts.

For information, call Nancy Mendick, receiver of taxes, 439-4955.

Oral Cancer

The word CANCER is one that most of us like to avoid. Although there is no guarantee that one can remain cancer-free for a lifetime, there are many preventative steps that can be taken.

The exact cause of most cancers, including oral cancer, is unknown. What we do know is that smokers are five times more likely to develop oral cancer than nonsmokers are.

Also, the risk of oral cancer increases with age. About 90 percent of all oral cancers are found in people over 45 years of age.

Oral cancers are treatable when discovered early. We recommend an oral cancer examination by your dentist at least twice a year. If you have not had a dental cleaning and examination by your dentist, schedule an appointment today.

Emotions still raw after 9/11 anniversary

BY KRISTEN OLBY

As two beams of light stretched high into the evening sky from ground zero, dozens of people with glowing candles in hand launched a vigil of their own in Delmar to commemorate the second anniversary of the Sept. 11 terrorist attacks.

Along Delaware Avenue, adults and children joined in prayer, recited poetry, sang songs and spoke of the horrifying day that took the lives of 3,000 Americans two years earlier.

"It's still very emotional for me," said Cheryl Bellus of Albany, who was living in Washington, D.C., when an airliner careened into the Pentagon. "It was a very strange place to be. The only noise that you heard overha were the helicopters and fighter jets flying."

Like many Americans, Bellus finds she's still haunted by the traumatic events of the day.

"I feel like I'm over it, and then I see a plane overhead and I'm not so sure that I am," she said.

Many who attended the candlelight vigil sought to continue the healing process while mourning the dead and searching for answers.

"(We need) to recognize that healing isn't somehow disloyal to the people that died," said Mary Applegate of Delmar.

The attacks have urged her to help make the world a better, more peaceful place, she said.

"It would be nice if we continued to have community gatherings like this to memorialize it. I just think it shouldn't be forgotten," said Patricia Kelley of Delmar.

The memorial service appeared to be more low-key than others held on the first anniversary, but as attendees wiped tears and stood silently with candles glowing, it became clear emotions remained raw.

"The two times this day has come by, it has gotten worse," said Alon Dominitz as he fought back tears. "I personally feel a lot of anger about it but also sadness."

He and his wife Maria are New York City natives who moved to Bethlehem in 2001. While they lost beloved high school friends in the terrorist attacks, they count themselves among the lucky — Maria's brother, a New York City firefighter, was spared that fateful morning.

Connors easy victor in Democratic primary

By DEV TOBIN

Albany County Comptroller Michael Connors easily turned back the challenge of County Legislator Allen Maikels in last Tuesday's Democratic primary.

Connors, a Menands resident, said the unofficial tally Tuesday night, showing him winning by 7070 to 5124, understated the margin, since he expected to win the absentee ballot count by about another 900 votes.

With the absentees, Connors said he will have gotten 60 percent of the vote, "officially a landslide — this was a big win for the little guy."

Connors credited his campaign organization, run by his wife Kate Boyd, for the impressive win.

"It's refreshing to see a positive campaign thoroughly demolish a negative campaign," Connors said. "Their whole campaign was what's wrong with Mike Connors versus what Allen would do to improve the situation."

Connors said he was especially upset by a telephone "push-poll" that called him anti-labor.

"It's an absolute lie, but they can get away with it" over the phone, he said.

He said his victory showed that, "Voters responded positively to having an activist comptroller and to my plan to revamp Medicaid."

Connors had proposed bringing Medicaid recipients into the county employees health insurance plan. He estimated that the proposal could save county taxpayers up to $10 million a year.

Even though he said County Executive Michael Breslin supported his opponent, Connors said, "The real issue now is to help the county executive and the Legislature control spending and get a good budget."

Maikels said his campaign "did the best we could, but I'm obviously disappointed in the outcome and the turnout."

Maikels said he had hoped to get 6,000 votes, which "would have made it pretty close."

Maikels, who gave up his Guilderland legislative seat to make the comptroller challenge, will still be on the Independence and Working Families lines on the November ballot.

But he said, "I don't know how effective I can be" running on just those minor party lines.

Every countywide elective office is held by Democrats, who hold a roughly 2-1 registration advantage over the Republicans. There is no Republican candidate for comptroller this year.

V'ville board hears of glitches

By MICHELE FLYNN

You can't learn if you can't get there. Bus and parking problems were among the issues discussed at the Sept. 8 meeting of the Voorheesville school board.

One parent, Mike Bates of Glen Street, wondered exactly where the bus would pick up his second-grader. According to Bates, the schedule says in front of the house, the driver says at the end of the street and the substitute driver picks her up in front of the house.

"We don't know where to send her," he said.

Other bus concerns were in respect to bus capacity. High school students noted that they sometimes had to sit three to a seat because there were not enough seats for all.

Mike Goyer, transportation supervisor, later said that the bus capacity as listed on the side of the vehicle, usually 59, 60 or 66, was not exceeded. The overcrowding issues arise at the start of school each year.

"As kids receive their parking passes, fewer kids take the bus," said Goyer.

He added that there are fiscal constraints. "We can't effectively send out a bus with 10 students on it," he said.

"We've only been in school for three days. It takes a few days to get the kinks worked out," said

Superintendent Alan McCartney.

Construction at the elementary school is behind schedule. Elementary school Principal Ed Diegel said that the contractors didn't show up when they said they would, but noted that the custodians did an amazing job of maintaining the school in spite of the ongoing construction.

The floors may not be completed, but academically, the elementary school is more than up to snuff. Fourth-graders met and conquered the standardized math and English tests. Eighty-five percent of the students scored in levels 3 and 4 of the ELA (English Language Arts Assessment) given in February.

Since 86 percent of the students usually receive these top scores, the numbers indicate a slight drop from previous years. The test scores are grouped from 1 to 4, with 4 as the highest.

Fourth-graders scored even higher on the math test, with 95 percent in levels 3 and 4, an increase over the 94 percent accomplished in past years.

Diegel noted that these exams don't just test kids on what they learned in fourth grade. "It's building from first grade, second grade, third grade and fourth grade," he said.

Associate Principal Michael Paolino reported that the character education committee will recognize four high school students, four middle school students and one staff person each month. The committee will choose a different quality to focus on each month, such as tolerance, cooperation, leadership, citizenship and honesty. Students, teachers and parents will nominate students who have made outstanding contributions in the particular category, providing reasons why the student should be recognized.

"We want to recognize students for outstanding behaviors that go unnoticed," said Paolino. "We're looking for more student leaders instead of adult leaders."

The committee wants to expand to recognize kids who do positive things outside of school and is asking the community to make recommendations. The quality of the month for September is "courage."

In addition, the character education committee is looking to the community for monetary and in-kind donations to reward the winners. They'd like to take the kids to lunch or offer a small gift such as a T-shirt.

In previous years, only the high school was involved, only one student was recognized each month and no characteristics were defined.

The next school board meeting will be held on Monday, Oct. 20, at 7:30 p.m. in the high school commons.

Water dominates New Scotland agenda

By MICHELE FLYNN

Water water everywhere, but not a drop to drink.

In the town of New Scotland, it's either too much water or not enough.

Gary Kubish of New Salem Road is trying to get rid of water that's flooded his property. Bob Cook, of Font Grove Road, wants it. Both men stated their case at the New Scotland town board meeting on Sept. 10.

According to Kubish, a stream that was once hundreds of feet from his property is now 30 feet away from his home, due to tree trunks and other natural debris blocking his neighbor's culvert. The homeowner has dismissed requests to clean it out or let anyone else do it.

As a result, Kubish's land, along with other neighbors' property, has been flooded. One neighbor has a well that is in standing water as a result of the rising water.

The Albany County Department of Health and the state Department of Environmental Conservation have considered the situation and found no problems. Town Supervisor Ed Clark will meet with the neighbors to try to work out a solution.

Bob Cook, on the other hand, wants water so that he can develop some of his land on Font Grove Road and has requested that the town extend the water district. He has approached the town water committee and planning board.

"If I wanted to sell the farm, I'd have done it long ago. I'd like to sell a lot, maybe two," Cook said.

According to Town Engineer and Water Committee Chairman Mark Dempf, the water committee has not completed its report, but has favorably considered Cook's request.

Town Attorney John Biscone said this situation differs from others who what to develop.

"We don't have any water to give," Biscone said, though there's the possibility of getting water from Albany County and transmitting it through Bethlehem. If those issues are worked out, a new water district can be considered.

Jeff DiStephano has approached the town requesting a truck permit to drive on Krumkill Road. A mudslide on DiStephano's Krumkill Road property this spring prompted the town board to enact a 5-ton weight limit on the road.

DiStephano wants to rebuild the slope where the mudslide occurred. Before it issues a permit, the board is requiring a report from a soil specialist to ensure that dumping will not create more problems. The board made additional requirements if the permit is approved.

"No dirt on the road," Clark said. "The road has to be clean all the time — and not during rush hour," leaving DiStephano between the hours of 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Dems sweep primary

By KRISTEN OLBY

The Sept. 9 primary resulted in Democrats sweeping the Independence party lines in both the town justice and town board races.

In the town justice race, Democrat Paul Dwyer will appear on the Independence Party line having received 194 votes. Republican Tom Marcelle received 56 votes.

In the town board race, Bethlehem Independence Party Chairperson Tim Gordon was the top vote getter of three candidates seeking the Independence Party line with 198 votes. Town board Democratic incumbent Daniel Plummer will also appear on the party line having obtained 192 votes. Cindy Hill received 60 votes, but her name may still appear on the ballot in November. Hill hopes to run as an Independent candidate for a town board seat under the 20/20 Planning Party, which she founded.

Democratic Party Chairman Matthew Clyne recently challenged Hill's petition signatures with the Albany County Board of Elections. Clyne claimed 90 percent of Hill's signatures were invalid because she witnessed her own petition signatures. Board of Election commissioners voted 1-1, keeping Hill's petition.

Clyne has filed a lawsuit in state Supreme Court in an effort to throw Hill's name off the ballot. The court is expected to rule on the matter within a week.

Quiet spirits still leave restless hearts

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

COMMENTARY:

*Mom's
Word*

The wind didn't blow as strongly this past Sept. 11, which meant that the candles I lit in the morning stayed burning until I blew them out that evening. They're red, white and blue, and they greeted my boys as they arose for breakfast on the second anniversary of that sad day.

"Nice candles," 13-year-old Christopher said. I tried to keep my voice even, as I said words they are still too young to scoff at. "They're a memorial to all the people who died on Sept. 11," I said. "They're a tribute to the light that shone in them, and a reminder that we need to let our own lights shine bright."

The horror and sorrow of Sept. 11 remains constant. I was blessed to not have lost anyone that day, so am one of the millions who can observe the grief not daily, but annually. Last year, I set the whole day aside to mourn, to watch memorials on TV, and let the tears rise and fall throughout the day. This year, that felt inappropriate and intrusive on the people who must face each day without the loved one they lost.

I observed the 8:46 a.m. moment of silence watching live television coverage of ground zero, sighing with Mayor Bloomberg and choking up at the children of the deceased bravely paying tribute to their lost parents. Watching others grieve reminds me of the people we've lost in our families, and some of my tears were for my brother-in-law, taken too soon from us four years ago, and my father and father-in-law, also passed away before their time.

The thing is, we can still love the people we no longer have, which keeps them with us forever. We can hold them in our hearts and in our prayers, and that's what I did this Sept. 11, adding a special prayer for all the people overwhelmed by grief on the day our world changed forever.

For parents, Sept. 11 comes at a time of new beginnings, as our children return to school. Walking the dog through our neighborhood the day before Sept. 11 had brought a different kind of tear, as parents and spiffily-dressed kindergartners waited for the first school bus that would start them on a journey that is theirs to determine.

I remember so clearly my own mix of pride and loss on the very first day of school for both of my children. Now that they're in the eighth and sixth grades, the school year requires strength that can sometimes be hard to muster. The routine of early mornings, structured days and homework in the evenings strains us all for a while. Although the homework fits that go hand in hand in elementary school seem to have disappeared, nobody leaps from the dinner table to attend to the work designed to enhance, augment and reinforce the learning process.

So I strive for a manner that's an appropriate mixture of confidence in their abilities, and sternness that will indicate the importance of doing a good job. In the face of Sept. 11, I add gratitude to the mix. I count my blessings daily, knock wood repeatedly, and don't take for granted that at this moment in time, my family and I are healthy, we like each other, and we are together in one place.

That gratitude and my own peculiar sense of optimism feel like a rare thing in today's world. Our nation has faced dark days in the past, but perhaps because I am now a middle-aged woman with children becoming aware of the world around them, these days feel especially gloomy. I still cling to the belief that the strength of our nation derives from the diversity of our opinions and beliefs, and our ability to express them without recrimination.

Yet there are newspaper columnists I no longer read, radio stations that make me bellow as I'm driving on routine errands, and talking heads on television that make me utter Archie Bunker-like statements: "Oh, yeah, if you hate it here so much, why don't you leave?"

I have a great deal of respect for people who truly live by their beliefs and who work for positive change, and a great intolerance for those who spend all their time kvetching and not putting any action behind it.

Perhaps I am naive, but my own post-9/11 life hasn't seen a decrease in my personal civil liberties, and I am delighted when baggage inspectors at airports look into my carry-on bag and ask me to take off my shoes so they can check those, too. Until Tom Ridge shows up at my breakfast table to run through the day's agenda with me, I'm willing to believe that our government's goal is to prevent another 3,000 people from dying in a terrorist attack.

We must all do what we think is right in these early autumn days, when summer's warmth still clings to leaves just beginning to think about changing color. How will the remembering of Sept. 11 be in future years, as our children are some of the last to remember their parents' tears on that day? "Do you remember grown-ups crying when Pearl Harbor was bombed?" I asked my mother two years ago.

She was a little girl when America was first attacked; her eyes looked backward for just a minute. "Of course," she said. "It was horrible." In an interview a few years ago, Bob Drake, then supervisor of the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk school district, said that wanting more for our children was at the essence of being American. We may have many disagreements about our nation and its government, but there can be no better way to honor all those who went before than by working to make our world a better place for its children.

Collection program set

The Albany County Soil and Water Conservation District and the county Water Quality Coordinating Committee, in cooperation with state Department of Environmental Conservation, Albany County Farm Bureau, and state Soil and Water Conservation Committee, are directing a Clean Sweep Program for the environmentally safe removal of canceled, unwanted or unusable agricultural or commercial pesticides.

Eligible participants for this program are active or inactive agricultural and horticultural operations, golf courses, municipal facilities, schools, colleges or universities within Albany County.

This program is not for homeowners who have pesticides for disposal. Other programs, such as household hazardous waste collections, provide pesticide disposal for homeowners.

The DEC recognizes that farmers and other holders of old pesticides have not had many legal opportunities to safely dispose of these agricultural pesticides.

Depending upon funding availability, there will be no charge and no limit to the quantity of obsolete pesticides that can be returned by eligible participants.

The Clean Sweep Program is scheduled for Saturday, Nov. 15. Participation is through advance enrollment only.

For information or to receive a registration packet, contact Thomas Lacko at 765-7923.

Kiwanis Club to hold barn sale

The Delmar Kiwanis Club will be holding its annual barn sale on Saturday, Sept. 27, from 8 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Geurtze's Barn on Route 9W in Selkirk.

Geurtze's farm is one half mile past the Jericho Drive-In heading south from Delmar. The barn sale will feature toys, household items, sporting goods, collectibles, tools, glassware, records and a host of other items too numerous to mention.

This fund-raiser is one of the ways the Kiwanis Club raises money to fund the numerous activities that it supports throughout the year.

Last year, Kiwanis gave away more than $10,000 to numerous groups and activities, including the Bell of Life for Pediatric Trauma at Albany Medical Center, Kamp Kiwanis, Little League, Walk for Diabetes, Children of Afghanistan and many others.

Kiwanis also sponsors many youth groups in the schools, including K-Kids, Builders Club, Key Club and Circle K at the University at Albany. It also gives a $500 scholarship to an outstanding Key Club member each year.

The barn sale is one of three fund-raisers Kiwanis has during the year. The spring pancake breakfast netted more than $1,000.

The next pancake breakfast will be held on Saturday, Oct. 18, from 8 a.m. to noon at Delmar Presbyterian Church.

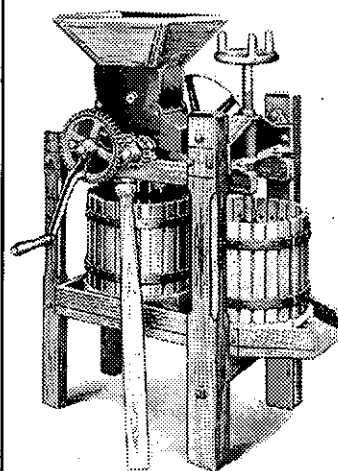

The Kiwanis Club of Delmar

meets on the first and third Mondays of each month with a Dinner at 6:15 p.m. followed by a program. Members are home in time for Monday night football.

Stormy weather

When hurricane season rolls around and we view news footage of our Southern friends bracing for potentially devastating weather, we Yankees often think smugly, "Well, we may have to endure 3-foot snowstorms, but at least we don't have to worry about Category 4 hurricanes."

But as Hurricane Floyd proved in 1999, leaving us with flooding, washed out roads and downed power lines, our area is not immune from the ravages of tropical weather.

As the southeast keeps out a weary eye for Hurricane Isabel we too will be preparing for anything from a few days of heavy rain to major storm damage.

If the local forecast turns nasty — a few minutes of preparation may help save the day.

High winds and rain often cause power outages, so it's a good idea to have a number of working flashlights, at least one battery-operated radio and an extra supply of batteries in your home. You should also post Niagara Mohawk's emergency outage reporting number (1-800-867-5222) near your telephone so it will be handy if needed.

If the power goes out you may also have problems with the public water supply or your well pump, so keep some bottled drinking water handy.

People often forget the danger that the combination of downed power lines and water pose. If you see lines down on your street, report them to NiMo and your local emergency response organization. NiMo says that even though you may see no sparking or arcing, assume all downed power lines are live and dangerous.

Do not go near any wires you see on the ground. For an additional measure of safety, keep children and pets indoors until the problem is fixed.

If you have to drive, be cautious when approaching standing water on the road. Your best bet is to go around, not through it. Water rises quickly, so if you are in an area that experiences flooding, a few packed bags can help you get out of your home before the situation turns dangerous.

Isabel may turn out to be a tempest in a teapot, but in the words of another cliché, it's better to be safe than sorry.

Give résumé an electronic edge

By MARIBETH GUNNER

The writer has a master's degree in education and is a senior academic adviser and career resource coordinator at Excelsior College. She lives in Gunderland.

One of the most important tools for job hunting is your résumé. Today, the guidelines for developing your résumé are changing. In the past, you have probably worked very hard to create the perfect paper document that promotes your work experience, accomplishments and education in a unique and aesthetically pleasing way. Although useful, this paper résumé might not be enough to entice potential employers to offer you an interview. Now you may need to add an electronic version of your résumé to remain competitive in the job market.

What is an electronic résumé?

Electronic résumés have similar content and serve the same purpose as the conventional paper résumés, but they are created to be computer-friendly. Two main types of electronic résumés are the "scannable résumé" and the "online résumé." A scannable résumé is created when your paper résumé is electronically scanned or "read" by an employer's computer, then stored in a database as a computer file. An online résumé is one which you create using your word processing software and then e-mail or post via the Internet. To develop either type of electronic résumé, you will need to follow different guidelines.

What do you need to know about scannable résumés?

Many large and mid-size companies are using electronic scanners to help them manage the large volume of résumés that they receive daily. This processing system is known as "automated applicant tracking." Once the hard copy of your résumé is scanned into a computerized database, the employer will then use a software program to further scan your résumé for keywords to determine if your qualifications match the employer's job specifications.

If you want your résumé to get noticed, there are several points to consider when designing your scannable résumé. The main guideline is to keep it simple! Scanners respond best to clear, concise language and simplified layouts. You should avoid fancy fonts and formatting that will not scan properly into the computer system. If not readable by the computer, your résumé will be left out in cyberspace. Special effects you may have included on your paper résumé such as italics, bold, bullets, decorative typefaces, shading and graphics should be avoided when creating your scannable résumé. Using relevant keywords is extremely important. These keywords must coincide with the specific job requirements. Use nouns more than verbs; keywords tend to be more of the noun or noun-phrase type. For example, say "project supervisor," instead of "supervised project." To become familiar with good keyword descriptors, check classified ads, review job descriptions, or talk with members of professional associations in your field. The scannable résumé offers several advantages over the paper résumé.

Once your electronic résumé is in a database, it can be retrieved easily via a keyword search. This serves you better than a paper file sitting idly in a filing cabinet, where personnel representatives must wade through stacks of other résumés to finally, hopefully, come across yours. Your scanned résumé may also remain in the database for an extended period of time, allowing the potential for consideration of a variety of openings over time.

The scannable résumé can prove to be a beneficial resource but should be viewed as a valuable supplement to add to your job hunting tools. The traditional paper résumé will also continue to be used in instances where computer scanning is not being utilized. If you are wondering how to best submit your résumé, contact the prospective employer to inquire if they use an electronic applicant tracking system. To be sure you are prepared in your job hunt, it may behoove you to have two versions of your résumé—one for human eyes and one for computer eyes.

What do you need to know about online résumés?

An online résumé allows you to use the Internet as another resource to gain exposure and assist you in your job hunt. Job seekers can e-mail or post their résumés online via company home pages, résumé banks, professional association home pages, classified ads, bulletin board services and news groups. Employers can also post job announcements by using many of the same mediums and can search résumé banks for potential employees.

To develop an online résumé, you create your document using word processing software, then save it as a generic "ASCII" or "text only" file. Both are universal text languages, which allow different word processing applications to read and display the same text information. This type of text is simply words; there are no formatting mechanisms such as fonts, margins, graphics or tabs. Each word processing software (like Microsoft Word) saves files in its own native format. This can make it difficult to know how to send information because you may be unsure which specific program the receiver uses to view documents. The use of universal text enables your online résumé to be retrieved and reviewed by prospective employers using e-mail or the Internet, no matter what kind of computer applications they are using.

There are several advantages to e-mailing your résumé. First, you can save money on processing and postage required for the conventional mailing of a paper résumé. Also, your résumé file will end up in the same type of computerized database where the scanned paper résumés have been stored. Similar to the scanned résumé, this allows your résumé to be accessible anytime the employer searches the résumé database using keywords. Additionally, by e-mailing your résumé, you can exhibit your understanding of technology and make a positive first impression.

Résumé banks are another online option through which job seekers can display their résumés. These services act as an intermediary, matching applicant qualifications with employer needs. Sounds simple enough, yet there are various points to consider before e-mailing or posting your résumé with a résumé bank. Some of these services are free, while others are fee-based. You will need to invest some time to decide on the best option. Even if the service is free, some résumé banks request that you fill out their form, or they furnish you with software to enter your qualifications instead of accepting your free-form version.

You may wish to inquire about the types of employers that search the résumé bank. Are they employers that you would like to reach? Find out about the competition within the talent pool of the résumé bank. The larger and better qualified the talent pool, the greater the chance that employers will search the résumé bank. Ask if the service can provide you with feedback about the number of times your résumé was looked at or selected for review.

Another very important consideration when using résumé banks is confidentiality. In general, information transmitted by electronic means is similar to sending a postcard. Every word is available for anyone to read. Careful consideration is suggested when disclosing personal and current employ-

Parking costs in BC bond too high

Editor, The Spotlight:

When I first read about the $90 million bond issue for school expansion, I decided to refrain from comment. The last issue of The Spotlight concerning a $350,000 "turning lane" re-ignited my feelings of concern.

I am and will continue to be supportive of the educational needs of our community. But I reject the position that nothing can be done to contain, reduce or eliminate some taxpayer costs.

As I recall, parking was an issue a few years ago. Objections were raised against the idea of paying for empty seats on school buses and then paying to build a parking lot for the same students that chose to drive a personal vehicle to school. The "storm" subsided and a parking lot was established, tennis courts were displaced, and additional costs of maintaining, plowing and monitoring the parking lot became a reality.

At least two individuals are assigned to monitor the parking lots, and the majority of these costs, none related to academic matters, are part of the annual budget.

The last school budget approved by voters on June 3, resulted in a 3.7 percent increase and the passage of a school bus purchase proposition for transporting, in part, "phantom" riders who choose to drive or ride in personal cars.

Fast forward to the current bond issue. An additional parking lot for students is included at a cost of only $320,000 for 230 spaces — what a bargain! The position of administration seems to be, "What can we do, student parking is an immovable force."

Consequential costs are not highlighted, nor is there the possibility of additional liability mentioned. In the bond issue, there are also additional costs to move athletic fields. The last issue of The Spotlight really said it in a graphic nature — $350,000 for a "turning lane" looms as a possibility to accommodate the increases in traffic, primarily caused by students going to their new $320,000 parking lot.

Proponents of the bond issue are quick to use the word "safety" in arguments for parking lots and turning lanes. No one is against safety, but they should identify and attribute all of these costs as a consequence of the choices made by students who elected to use their personal vehicles and abandon the safe transportation provided by the school district.

How can one say that up to five hundred vehicles, many driven by students, are as safe as school buses operated by able and competent bus drivers? I have heard of an instance where parents of a student sued a school district regarding the death of their child while operating a car en route to school.

The position taken by the parents faulted the school district for not declaring a snow emergency and thereby placing the student in danger. It would seem to me that a school district's liability might increase where it encourages the use of personal vehicles by building parking lots for those vehicles.

I don't know what the answers are, but those who are charged with finding the answers might consider the following. It is a given that a segment of the student body will not ride school buses. If I am correct, students are now charged about 65 cents per day for parking based on a 180 day school year. If parking is so vital to this group, they should, as part of their social and civic education, accept the responsibility of payment of a realistic user fee based upon the capital expenditure and consequential costs associated with parking.

The possibility of downsizing some buses might be considered. While I recognize that the same buses are used to transport elementary, middle and high school students, some savings should be possible by using smaller vehicles in some situations.

In view of the very significant tax increases that would result from the $90 million bond issue, it would seem that everything possible should be done to reduce the costs to taxpayers.

I am encouraged by the fact that some school board members feel they "should focus on academics." That, at least, is a sign of responsibility for the education of students and concern for the taxpayer.

No soda in BC schools

Editor, The Spotlight:

In her Point of View column on Sept. 3, Donna Bell asks whose job it is to worry about vending machines in schools.

As far as soda vending machines are concerned, the board of education decides whether or not they will be allowed in areas of schools that students have access to: cafeterias, lobbies and hallways.

Fortunately, for the students of Bethlehem Central School

District, the board decided in July 2000 not to sign an exclusive "pouring rights" contract that, as a result, would have allowed soda machines to be placed throughout the middle and high school.

The members of that particular board should be recognized for putting the health of our students ahead of profits from vending machine sales.

ment status and whether your job search must remain under wraps. Before deciding on a particular résumé bank, be sure to read the description of security measures offered. Some will charge extra for confidential service. They may offer to replace your name with a number, and your current employer's name can also be removed for your protection. The résumé bank will then contact you when a request is received from an employer. If you are e-mailing your résumé to one of these services or posting your résumé to a Web site, security should always be a factor. As long as you provide your e-mail address and/or phone number, items like your home address, business address, and list of references can be mailed to an interested employer after you have been contacted.

An online résumé can be advantageous, offering flexibility and serving as another valuable resource. However, the conventional résumé is not defunct. It should coexist with your electronic version. Due to the rather bland appearance of the online résumé's generic universal text, it is also a good idea to have a fully formatted, more aesthetically pleasing hard copy of your résumé for follow-up purposes, interviews, and to give to employers who are not using an electronic dimension. Opening doors to new employment situations can be an arduous task for many job seekers. An electronic résumé may just be the key that unlocks the door to your next job opportunity!

way, involved malice or the desire to do harm," said Bethlehem Central School Superintendent Les Loomis, who declined to say when the teens might return to school. The students could have faced expulsion.

"I think eventually these three individuals can return to the high school without the district, or any of us, having to worry about school safety," added Loomis.

Breen and Fraser are scheduled to appear in Town Court Sept. 16. The 15 year-old's case is being handled in Albany County Family Court. A fourth teen charged in the case lives near Utica.

Classroom

"The school district has decided Mr. Gunner's out of classroom assignment will be extended at least for this school year," said Bethlehem Central School Superintendent Les Loomis. Gunner is working on science curriculum development and reporting to a district office that is not located within any of the schools, according to Loomis.

"The administration and board of education will be considering the options regarding Mr. Gunner's future employment status with the district," said Loomis, who expects a decision will be reached before the end of the school year.

Gunner is scheduled to appear in Bethlehem Town Court Oct. 7.

Meanwhile, the district is shifting teachers to cover Gunner's absence. Science teacher Charles Reed will take over Gunner's teaching responsibilities. The district will hire Dr. Susan Coffee on Wednesday to take over Reed's teaching schedule. Coffee has taught chemistry at Albany High School and previously worked as an associate professor at Albany College of Pharmacy. She will begin teaching on Thursday.

The Ravena-Coeymans Selkirk school district went into lock-out mode Friday morning after district officials learned of the search for Poe.

Doors at all of the district schools were locked from the outside and students were kept inside throughout the day.

Poe, who has been a teacher with the district for 19 years, was last at the school on Thursday when he taught classes.

"We didn't know what had happened until Thursday," said Superintendent Vicki Wright of Poe's felony arrest earlier in the week.

As of Tuesday morning, Poe remained in the Greene County Correctional Facility.

Gold Coin to build larger restaurant

By KRISTEN OLBY

A Slingerlands Chinese restaurant will soon meet the wrecking ball, as its owners prepare to rebuild a slightly larger restaurant in its place. The owners of the Gold Coin restaurant, on New Scotland Ave., say after 16 years in business they need more room to accommodate a growing number of customers.

"When we first started business that kitchen was really, really small," said Conrad Kung, a part owner of the family run restaurant. The staff was operating in such tight quarters, Kung said they were forced to build a small addition solely to grind meat each day.

Since its construction roughly 50 years ago, the building has housed an ice cream shop and an Italian restaurant, while undergoing a number of small expansions. Kung says it's simply time to start over and rebuild.

"The existing building has 48 seats for patrons, we prepared a bigger building which will be devoted to a bigger kitchen and dining room," said John Allen, an attorney representing Kung.

The zoning board of appeals unanimously granted the variance necessary to alter the size of the building at its Sept. 3 meeting.

Kung expects the restaurant will close for about four months sometime in the next year to allow demolition and construction to be completed.

Church to dish up roast pork dinner

Reservations are requested. For tickets, call 377-5766.

Tickets will also be sold at SuperValu Foods on, Sept. 20, from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Proceeds from the dinner will be given to the Emmanuel Faith Community in Albany. The Emmanuel community has been worshipping and reaching out to the neighborhood from a storefront center at 391 South Pearl St. for the last three years.

Town police offering gun safety devices

Bethlehem police are joining forces with project CHILD SAFE as part of a nationwide initiative to raise awareness about responsible gun ownership and storage.

Designed to make homes with firearms safer, Bethlehem police will be offering gunlocks, at no charge, to those who want them beginning this week.

"Our goal is to improve gun safety and safety awareness to keep our families protected," said

Chief Louis Corsi. "Using a gunlock is a simple and practical way to prevent a terrible accident involving a firearm."

Project CHILD SAFE is funded by a $5 million grant from the U.S. Department of Justice and managed by the National Shooting Sports Foundation.

Gunlocks are available at the Bethlehem Police Station, 447 Delaware Ave., Delmar, or by calling the Police Department Family Services Unit at 439-3373.

Foundation elects officers

The Community Foundation for the Capital Region has elected its 2003-2004 officers and has added three new board members.

Community volunteer Barbara K. Hoehn of Menands was elected board president; John Lavelle of Slingerlands, partner in Lavelle & Finn, first vice president; Phoebe P. Bender of Menands, community volunteer, second vice president; Frank Lasch of Loudonville, partner in DeGraff, Foy, Holt-Harris, Kunz & Devine, treasurer; and Roy M. Hershey of Niskayuna, retired businessman, secretary.

New board members elected for a three-year term are Brian Enright of Loudonville, senior vice president; Janney Montgomery Scott; John MacAffer of Slingerlands, associate broker, CB Richard Ellis; and Deborah Ryan of Saratoga Springs, chief executive officer, IA Systems.

Founded in 1968, the Community Foundation for the Capital Region administers charitable funds established by individuals, families, businesses, private foundations or other nonprofits intent on building a permanent endowment for the benefit of the communities of the Capital Region.

Youth Network

A BETHLEHEM NETWORKS PROJECT

Neighbors Helping Neighbors – Thank You

Last Spring, The Rotary Club of Delmar held its annual dinner to present donation checks to organizations serving youth in our community.

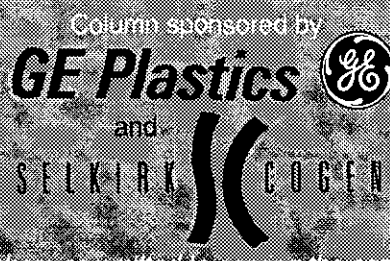

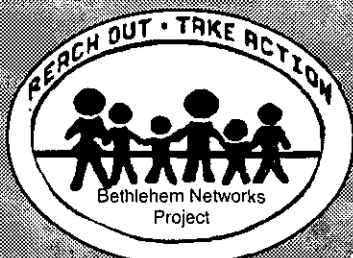

Bethlehem Networks Project thanks the Rotarians for their long-standing and generous financial sponsorship of our Middle School Mentoring Program and urges community members to support the Rotary in its annual citrus sale and other service activities.

At the dinner, we were also introduced to the Bethlehem Festival Fund, sometimes called "The Best Kept Secret in Bethlehem." The fund began in 1942 with a Christmas pageant, and through the pageant ended in 1967, Festival Fund activities continue today. Its current mission is "to quietly help children, families and the elderly living in the Bethlehem community without a lot of red tape and acting anonymously through local schools and community organizations.

The fund helps those whose needs might otherwise remain unmet for things like cost of a field trip, eyeglasses or handicap equipment. Bethlehem Networks also thanks the Bethlehem Festival Fund for the generous assistance it provided us this summer on behalf of some deserving, hard working students.

Those who wish to contribute to Bethlehem Festival Fund can do so through United Way/SEFA pledges (code 50-303) or directly at P.O. Box 341, Delmar 12054.

Town Supervisor Sheila Fuller, Chamber President Marty DeLaney join Glenn Durlacher at the recent grand opening of the deli on Delaware Avenue.

Durlacher's Deli opens in Delmar

By KRISTEN OLBY

A new Delmar delicatessen will welcome customers at a grand opening celebration on Saturday, Sept. 13. After 10 years of business on Southern Boulevard in Albany, Glenn Durlacher moved Durlacher's Deli to Delaware Avenue in July.

"I thought it was a great location," said Durlacher of his new digs, which previously housed a beauty salon.

Durlacher said he had been considering the move to Delmar for years, and when he became aware of the vacant commercial space, he quickly made the move.

"I did business with the town for years, many of my customers came from Delmar and Elsmere," said Durlacher, who added he's received a strong outpouring of support from the community already.

The deli offers a variety of freshly prepared sandwiches, French bread subs, wraps, and salads. Durlacher's Deli is open Monday through Friday 8 a.m. to 7 p.m. and Saturday 8 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Lady Eagles can't stop Niskayuna's offense

By ROB JONAS

If Niskayuna is one of Bethlehem's challengers for the Section II, Class AA girls soccer title this year, the Lady Eagles will have to shore up their defense before they meet the Silver Warriors again.

The teams clashed twice last week, with Niskayuna taking both games. The Silver Warriors edged Bethlehem 2-1 last Wednesday in a Suburban Council contest and then defeated the Lady Eagles 3-2 in last Sunday's championship game at the Oneonta Tournament.

"We have only one returning starting defender, so we're trying to sort things out," Bethlehem coach Tom Rogan said. "It will take some time."

Defense isn't the only part of the team that was hit hard by graduation. The Lady Eagles lost 13 players from last year's Sectional championship team, including such key offensive players as Emily Petraglia and Kate Metevia, as well as starting goaltender Megan Volo.

"We've lost a lot," Rogan said.

"It'll take some time to get everyone rolling again. I'm sure we'll get better in time for Sectionals."

An encouraging sign for Bethlehem (1-1 league, 2-3 overall) was its 1-0 league win against Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake last Friday. Cate Quinlan — one of several newcomers in the starting lineup — scored the lone goal for the Lady Eagles off an assist from veteran forward Vanessa Patry.

"The win against Burnt Hills was a big win - a good win to have in our pockets," Rogan said. "It's always tough to get that first win in the league."

At the Oneonta Tournament,

Bethlehem forged a 1-1 halftime tie in last Sunday's championship game before being outscored 2-1 in the second half by Niskayuna. Patry and Quinlan each scored goals for Bethlehem. Brooke Knowlton, Jen Lawrence and Allie Sylvestsky tallied for the Silver Warriors.

Patry had a big game for the Lady Eagles in last Saturday's 6-0 victory over Westhill of Syracuse in the opening round of the Oneonta Tournament. The junior had four goals and added an assist to pace the attack. Kristen White tallied twice, while Katie Fage, MacKenzie Glannon and Ashley Spath contributed assists.

The Lady Eagles wrapped up a tough stretch of four games in four days Monday night by hosting Guilderland in a Suburban Council contest. The Lady Dutch entered the game having scored 11 goals in their last three games, including a 4-2 victory over Shenendehowa last Wednesday.

Pee wee Eagles remain unbeaten

Vince Planz's touchdown catch and run in the last minute of the fourth quarter propelled the Bethlehem Pop Warner pee wee division team to a 12-7 victory over Rensselaer last weekend.

Planz caught a pass from quarterback Brett Bukowski and ran the rest of the way for a 78-yard touchdown with 20 seconds left to keep the Junior Eagles unbeaten after two games.

Bethlehem took a 6-0 lead when running back Evan Bullis threw a touchdown pass to Planz on a flea flicker. The Junior Eagles maintained the lead until Rensselaer scored in the third quarter and added a one-point conversion.

The pee wee team returns to action Sunday with a game against South Colonie at Cook Park.

The junior midget Eagles opened their season Sept. 6 with a 28-15 loss to the Troy Patriots. Quarterback Casey O'Conner and running back Sean Murphy had touchdown runs for Bethlehem.

Youth hoop program schedules tryouts

The Bethlehem Little Lady Eagles girls basketball program is holding tryouts for its travel teams Sept. 23, 26 and 30 at Bethlehem Central Middle School.

Tryout sessions for the fifth- and sixth-grade teams take place from 6 to 7:30 p.m. each day, and sessions for the seventh- and eighth-grade teams are held from 7:30 to 9 p.m.

It is recommended that players attend as many of the tryouts as possible.

There will also be a fourth-grade team this season. Tryout dates will be announced soon.

Capital District duo leads Albany running attack

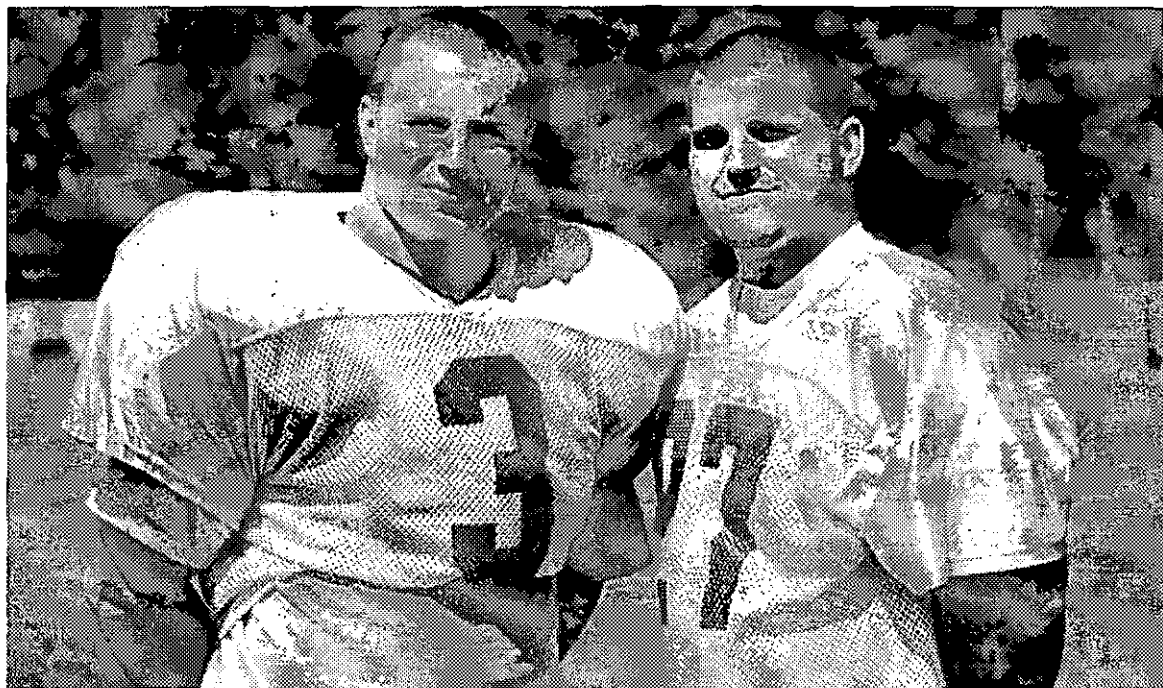

By ROB JONAS

Long before they shared the same backfield, University at Albany running backs Gary Jones and Jon George knew about each other.

"I remember checking the newspapers and seeing how many yards and how many touchdowns he had," said George, a Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake High School graduate. "Gary was always up there."

Not much has changed in the five years since George and Jones were high school seniors. Jones — a Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk High School graduate — broke several UAlbany single-season records last year, while George had a solid junior season in his own right with more than 600 rushing yards.

"I personally think that it's neat that me and Jon are in the same backfield because in our senior year of high school, we were neck and neck" for the Section II rushing lead, Jones said.

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk High School graduate Gary Jones, right, and Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake High School grad Jon George form a powerful one-two punch in the University at Albany football team's backfield. The duo combined for 225 yards in a 28-10 win against Central Connecticut last Saturday.

Rob Jonas

They didn't start their collegiate careers sharing the same backfield. Jones went from RCS to Hudson Valley Community College for two years before moving across the Hudson River to UAlbany three years ago. Meanwhile, George gave NCAA Division III school Hartwick a shot in his freshman year, but transferred to the Great Danes.

When George and Jones moved into starting roles last season, their impact was immediately felt. UAlbany won the Northeast Conference title for the first time since joining the league several years ago and defeated Duquesne in the ECAC Bowl. Along the way, the duo combined to gain more than 2,100 yards, with Jones accruing 1,509 yards and 23 touchdowns.

Though they received the glory, Jones and George said that they wouldn't have gotten anywhere without the help of their offensive line.

"If you ask anybody on the team, they'll tell you that the offensive line is the strongest part of the team," Jones said.

UAlbany coach Bob Ford said another secret to the success of Jones and George is that they are willing to share the running duties.

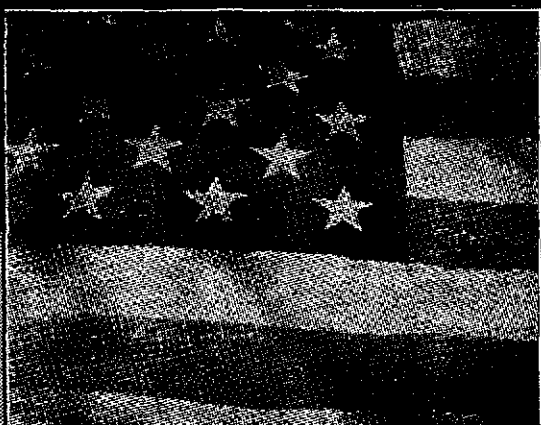

"The wonderful thing about them is they're totally unselfish kids. You'd think that playing such a high-profile position, they'd have inflated egos, but they don't," Ford said.

"I think we have mutual respect for each other," Jones said. "We're just good working together."

Their teammates rewarded George and Jones by naming them as two of the three tri-captains this season.

"That's a great honor coming from the teammates because they're the ones that vote for you," George said.

three times a week for an hour each of rehabilitation, occupational therapy and physical therapy.

"I'm glad to be home, although it's been a big adjustment, going from an environment where everyone is in wheelchairs," Hjeltne said. "My family and friends have helped a lot, and I'm taking this time now to adjust."

Hjeltne has always been physically active, having gone from high school into the Army.

"I went into the military to figure out what I should do," Hjeltne said. "I was stationed in Fairbanks, Alaska, where I was part of infantry reconnaissance."

The former football and basketball player grinned. "It was a little more outdoorsy than I would have liked," he said.

After a two-year stint, he returned home and enrolled at the Sage Colleges, where he was studying graphic design.

"I loved working with my hands," Hjeltne said. "I did a lot of construction work, and not being able to do that is another blow. I was more on the hammer end, and now I'll be more on the computer end."

Hjeltne is currently on medical leave from Sage, and is talking with them about possibly returning in January.

"The adjustment's not just physical," Hjeltne said. "Mentally, I think sometimes about things I used to do."

Hjeltne said that his girlfriend, Jen Luck, and friends like Geoff Linstruth, John McGinnis and Aaron Smith have been regular visitors, always ready to offer support. His parents, brother and 25-year-old sister Kristin have also been there for him.

It's clear that her son is Deb Hjeltne's top priority, as she brings out a binder full of doctor's cards; research papers and magazines; and information about the special needs fund that is helping Erik to live independently.

Ragozzino was the first to receive the news that Erik had been injured in Cancun. He called Deb Hjeltne at work, and she called Erik's father, Knut, a coach at the United States Military Academy at West Point. They immediately set to work getting Erik out of Mexico, overcoming obstacles like Erik's missing wallet and birth certificate.

"Erik was born in California, and they were refusing to issue us another birth certificate," Deb Hjeltne said. "I finally called Gov.

If you don't have resources or you don't know how to go after them, I don't know how you'd cope with this.

Deb Hjeltne

Gray Davis' office and we got one."

While the hunt for a birth certificate was taking place, Knut Hjeltne was getting a hospital to accept Erik. Knut Hjeltne's brother Nils is a physiatrist in Norway who had worked at Mount Sinai Hospital in New York City. Through his brother, Knut Hjeltne was able to find a neurosurgeon to work with his son.

The Hjeltne's met their son at Mount Sinai a day after he was injured, and Dr. Arthur Jenkins III operated to replace his broken vertebra. The information that only about 8 percent of patients recover from the first surgery "devastated us," Deb Hjeltne said. Stuck in Deb Hjeltne's memory, though, was a program she'd seen about Christopher Reeve, the actor who was paralyzed in a horseback-riding accident.

While the couple was in New York, Laureen Copeland, who worked with Deb Hjeltne at Albany Molecular Research, was online gathering as much information about paralysis as she could. Through the Christopher Reeve Paralysis Foundation, Copeland read about Dr. Valentin Fulga, who performed macrophage surgery for Proneuron in Israel. When Deb Hjeltne asked Dr. Jenkins about the procedure, he oversaw Erik's transfer to Israel for the macrophage surgery that's not yet approved in the United States.

"Having the surgery was ultimately my decision," Erik Hjeltne said. "Without it, I only had a 2 to 3 percent chance of recovery. Any chance better than that was good."

Professor Michal Schwarz of the Weizmann Institute of Science in Rehovot, Israel, pioneered the surgery that Proneuron Biotechnologies performs. In the surgery, healing immune cells called macrophages that allow damaged central nervous systems to repair themselves are injected into the body. Erik Hjeltne met a strict number of criteria to have the surgery still in clinical trial, and was one of the first 12 people to have it.

He, as well as his friends and family, knows that success is not guaranteed and that it cannot be expected for another six months to two years. Deb Hjeltne is currently on leave from her job, and when she's not helping care for Erik, she is advocating on his behalf.

"If you don't have resources or you don't know how to go after them, I don't know how you'd cope with this," Deb Hjeltne said. "When you think about how to solve a problem, you can sit down and cry, or you can work around it and figure out a way to solve it."

Deb Hjeltne is currently planning the second fund-raiser to benefit the Erik L. Hjeltne Special Needs Fund, following the success of the first one in Scotia this past summer. The fund-raiser will be held on Sept. 25 at Mallozzi's Restaurant at 1930 Curry Road in Rotterdam.

It's clear talking to people who know Erik that they have faith in him. Bruce Svare, a coach in the Bethlehem schools, coached Erik when he played basketball with the Bethlehem Basketball Club and the Amateur Athletic Union.

"Erik was a friend of my son Mark," Svare said. "He was a terrific kid who played hard and was never any trouble. He's been dealt a severe blow, and I have a lot of admiration for him. He's got a fabulous attitude. It's remarkable, given the long road he has ahead of him."

Hjeltne's girlfriend, Jen Luck, described him as a fighter. "Erik's always been extremely active and a hard worker," said Luck. "He's always helping people out. The accident limits what he can do, but he tries his best to be as independent as he can."

At the end of the day, both Luck and Deb Hjeltne agree that Erik is the same person they've always loved.

"This hasn't changed the person he is," Luck said. "If anything, he's more appreciative of things. He's always been a positive thinker, and he does the best he can."

"He's still Erik, thank God," Deb Hjeltne said. "We didn't lose Erik."

Turning to the September pages of a Robert Schuller calendar, she paused for a minute. "This says it all," she said. "Look not at what you have lost, but at what you have left."

Tickets to the fund-raiser at Mallozzi's Restaurant in Rotterdam on Sept. 25 are $120. For information, call Deb Hjeltne at 383-3231.

Donations can also be made to the fund at any Charter One Bank, or by mailing a check, made out to the Erik J. Hjeltne Special Needs Fund, to Charter One Bank, Branch 453, 1 Municipal Plaza, Clifton Park, 12065.

Tommy Makem

Seven Nations

A wee bit o' the Irish in Altamont

By DEV TOBIN

We all remember 9/11 in our own ways — where we were when we first heard, the awful sight of the towers burning then falling, the mental blur of those first few terrible days.

For me and scores of others, the healing/recovery process was helped along by hearing Tommy Makem sing classic American folk songs like "This Land Is Your Land" at the 2001 version of the Irish 2000 Festival at the Altamont fairgrounds.

A mere week and a half after the terror attacks had devastated New York City, Makem put aside his repertoire of Irish and Irish-American songs — even his own classic "Four Green Fields" — to pay tribute to his anguished, adopted country. There was not a dry eye among the hundreds in the big tent.

Makem returns this year to the seventh annual festival on Saturday, Sept. 20, after a year off, and will again be the highlight of the traditional music tent, playing from 4:50 to 5:50 p.m.

"We've had a lot of requests for Tommy; people really expect him to be there," said festival organizer Matt Nelligan. "For a guy's who's been around so long, he's still a top-notch performer."

Makem's three sons, Shane, Connor and Rory — The Makem Brothers, will also be on the traditional stage, from 2:30 to 3:15 p.m.

After the Albany St. Patrick's Day parade, the festival is the largest Irish-American event in the Capital District. Nelligan noted that 17,000 came to the festival last year and that attendance has grown every year.

As before, the festival will have four stages — Traditional, Contemporary and Local/Regional under large tents and the alfresco Grove Stage, which will host Capital District favorites Hair of the Dog from 6:30 to 8:30 p.m.

Besides bringing Tommy Makem back, the festival will also have Black 47 on stage after a four-year absence.

The New York City-based Celtic rockers "have a big fan base in the area," Nelligan noted.

New this year will be Irish music veteran Paul Brady, one of the founding members of the seminal Planxty Band, who has been more active as a songwriter than a performer for many years.

"Paul's never been in this area," he said. "We're happy to have him; he's a great performer."

Also new to the festival this year are The Cottars, a traditional quartet from Cape Breton Island, and the Tannahill Weavers, a top Scottish traditional band.

Returning favorites include Seven Nations, Danu, The Prodigals, The McKrells, The Young Dubliners, Seamus Kennedy, The Indulgents, The Glengarry Bhoys, and many more.

Pipe bands and dancers from local Irish schools will also be performing at various sites throughout the day.

For the young ones, there will again be a family fun area, with rides, games and special treats.

The festival remains a great value, "with 25 bands for $10," Nelligan said. "For a family of four with two kids under 10, we offer a whole day of entertainment for $20; there's no better value than that."

Tickets for the festival are $15 at the gate and $10 in advance. Children under 10 are admitted free. Advance tickets are available to the Crossgates mall customer service area, Celtic Treasures in Saratoga Springs, Gilhooley Design in Watervliet, Tipperary Trading Co. in Brunswick, and the Ginger Man, Washington Tavern, McGear's and the Irish-American Center, all in Albany.

There will also be a preview show, featuring Seamus Kennedy, The Indulgents and The Glengarry Bhoys, at McGear's, 4 Clinton Square, Albany. Tickets are $5 at the door.

For information on the Irish 2000 festival, call 1-888-414-3378 or log on to www.Irish2000Fest.com.

So there's no juice when you turn the key

BROADVIEW, IL — So you go out to your car, get behind the wheel, put the key in the ignition, and turn the key. But instead of the normal sound of the engine coming to life after the starter cranks, there is silence.

Nothing. Zero. Zilch. Nada. Not even an electrical click. You try it again. A few times. Still nothing.

"Arghh" you say to yourself. "The battery is dead."

Well, maybe yes and maybe no. But before you rush to the phone to call for help or start walking to the nearest bus stop, you might want to try a few old-timer's tricks and possibly find to be lost.

If cleaning and re-tightening battery connections doesn't solve your no-start condition, a jump-start probably will. But why did the battery die in the first place? Perhaps you left the headlights on. Or maybe you left a door ajar, leaving the interior lights on. But maybe the problem lies in the vehicle's charging system.

According to Bosch's Padgett, until the 1960's cars used generators which produced Direct Current (DC), and were generally inefficient. Since that time, virtually all cars have been equipped with alternators which, as their name suggests, produce Alternating Current (AC), and a far more efficient than generators. So alternators include an electronic component called a rectifier to change the AC output to DC.

Alternators do a terrific job of producing electricity but, like generators, require a device called a voltage regulator to control their output. The voltage regulator operates much like a faucet, electrically opening and closing as needed. Some voltage regulators are a separate component (external), while others are built into the alternator (an integral regulator). "Voltage regulators monitor the needs of the car's electrical system, and also the level of charge in the battery, and adjust the alternator's output accordingly," explains Padgett.

life in that battery after all.

According to Fred Padgett, Product Manager for Robert Bosch Corporation (BOSCH), a leading manufacturer of starting and charging system components, the problem might be as simple as a loose or corroded battery cable connection. "Look for white powdery residue where the battery cables attach to the battery," explains Padgett. "It doesn't take much to interrupt the flow of electricity."

While it's easy to clean and re-tighten battery connections, two cautions are in order, explains Padgett. First, always disconnect the negative (-) cable first and reconnect it last. This will help prevent a spark or short circuit from the positive (+) terminal to the chassis, which is connected electrically to the negative (-) side of the battery. Second, remember that disconnecting the battery will cause electronic settings (like the clock and the radio pre-sets)

Take that extra second to prevent an accident

An issue that's been with us almost as long as the automobile is whether or not older drivers should be tested more frequently for re-issue of their licenses. If a person's vision, reaction time and dexterity continue to be up to standard, then that driver should be safe, right?

Not necessarily, says the Car Care Council, who contends that any driver, regardless of age, is at risk if the vehicle is not sufficiently responsive and mechanically sound. The theory that the vehicle is an extension of the driver is a valid one, says the Council. The brakes function only when the driver engages them. A driver with good vision can see surrounding danger and respond only if lights, windshield wipers, brakes and steering all are up to par.

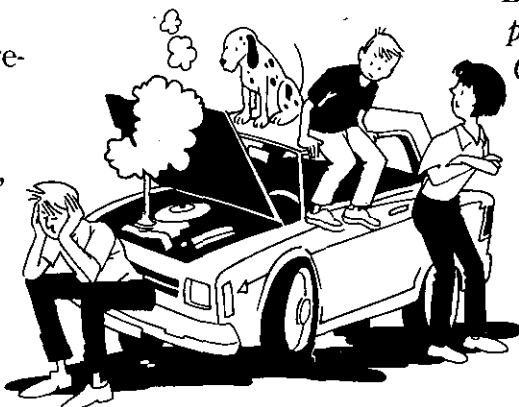

"It's impossible to evaluate the responsiveness of all of the nation's cars," says Rich White, spokesperson for the Council. "However, through annual vehicle check lanes we know that almost nine out of 10 cars are in need of maintenance. That speaks volumes about safety when you consider that these check lanes focus on safety items such as brake fluid, tire pressure, and turn signals."

Coupling deficient cars with the inherent dangers associated with speed compounds the safety issue. A driver's average reaction time, according to the National Safety Council, is $\frac{1}{3}$ of a second. At 60 miles an hour, for example, you'll travel 66 feet (a third the length of a football field) in $\frac{1}{3}$ of a second.

investigate enhancements designed to help them drive more safely.

Brought to you as a public service by Car Care Council. The Council is the source of information for the "Be Car Care Aware" campaign, providing information about the benefits of regular vehicle care,

That means you'll need between 162 and 202 feet to bring your car to a complete stop. "Those figures get most people's attention," says White, who is an advocate of the three-second rule.

Use the "three second" rule to determine if you're giving yourself enough space between your car and the vehicle ahead. As the vehicle in front of you reaches a stationary mark, count "one thousand and one-one thousand, two-one thousand, three-one thousand". If you arrive at that mark in three seconds or less, you're too close. Back off.

Under ideal conditions, adding a little lag time behind the vehicle ahead of you could make a big difference in avoiding a collision. This is assuming that your reaction time is normal, and your tires, braking system and other safety related components are in optimum condition.

The Council suggests that, in addition to paying special attention to safety functions of the vehicle and observing the three second rule, older drivers or those with impaired vision or reaction time should pay special attention to their vehicles' safe operating condition and
