Board tabs Leveille to head public works

By KRISTEN OLBY

George Leveille of Delmar has been selected to head up Bethlehem's public works department and will likely be appointed to oversee the town Industrial Development Agency later this week.

His appointment to the position of public works commissioner was made official by the town board at its organizational meeting on Jan. 8.

Supervisor Theresa Egan and board members Dan Plummer and Tim Gordon voted in favor of Leveille's appointment, while Tom Marcelle and George Lenhardt abstained, having not received a résumé or conducted an interview with Leveille.

Longtime Public Works Commissioner Bruce Secor, who has been employed with the department for 25 years, will retire in February.

Secor said he pursued retirement after being informed by Egan he would not be re-hired under her administration.

"It was my recommendation that he not be reappointed and the town board echoed that," said Egan.

She believes Leveille's management background will prove beneficial to the department.

"He and I work very well together," she said. "I think George's experience in management and administration will be an asset to that department."

Leveille said he planned to work on maintaining and upgrading the town's water and sewer infrastructure to accommodate future growth.

Up until 2003, Leveille was the commissioner of development and planning for the city of Albany. He also served as executive director of the city's Industrial Development Agency since 1994. He left both positions to open his own consulting firm.

As commissioner, Leveille will earn a salary of about $86,000 while overseeing roughly 60 employees and managing the sewer and water departments.

He does not have an engineering background as his predecessor did, but Egan believes such a background isn't crucial.

"George has a planning background," Egan said. "I don't think there's a need for an engineering background; we have an engineering department."

Leveille holds a master's in public administration from the University at Albany.

His first day on the job was Monday, Jan. 12.

It's likely the town board will also approve Leveille's appointment to oversee the Industrial Development Agency at its Jan. 14 meeting.

The IDA is a town entity that works to attract new commercial business.

For the last year, Leveille has served as a paid consultant to the IDA. As chairman, he would forgo his consultant fees and serve as a volunteer.

In other news, the town board approved the appointments of several new board chairmen and members, as follows:

- Jim Potter will serve as town attorney, replacing Robert Alessi.

- Parker Mathusa has been named planning board chairman, replacing

Delmar woman fund-raises for African school

By KRISTEN OLBY

Halfway around the world, 23-year-old Lauren Rice of Delmar is on a mission to save lives in Africa through education. Just over a year into her two-year stint as a Peace Corps volunteer in the country of Togo, Rice has taken on the monumental task of raising enough money to renovate and expand the only school in a small African village of 5,000 people. The end result, she believes, could dramatically improve lives.

Shortly after graduating from SUNY Geneseo in 2002, Rice's mission commenced as she made the three-day journey to the African village of Boade'. Her initial Peace Corps assignment involved educating Togolese men and women about health, sanitation and AIDS.

"Education was definitely one of the main problems that we identified," explained the Bethlehem Central grad during a rare visit home earlier this month. "If they want to improve their health, they need to have an education."

Lauren Rice hopes to double the size of the school in the village of Boade' where she is a Peace Corps volunteer.

Therein lies the problem. Roughly 200 children in the village attend classes at the primitive, three-room school where students sit cramped, three to a bench.

There are no books, blackboards are so worn they barely hold chalk, and the

Egan changes meeting time

By KRISTEN OLBY

In an effort to boost public attendance at Bethlehem town board meetings, the time of the meeting has been pushed back by two hours.

It was one of the first changes made under Supervisor Theresa Egan's administration at an organizational meeting held Thursday night at town hall.

For decades, town board meetings have been held in the evening.

Under Sheila Fuller's administration board meetings were held every other Wednesday night, beginning at 7:30 p.m. It was not uncommon for only a handful of residents to be in attendance.

Teacher sentenced for exposure

By KRISTEN OLBY

A Bethlehem high school chemistry teacher has pleaded guilty to exposing himself in public.

Keith Gunner, 46, of Wemple Road in Glenmont, admitted at a Jan. 6 Town Court appearance that he walked outside to retrieve his mail in the nude last August. He was ticketed for exposure, a violation punishable with up to 15 days in jail and a maximum fine of $250.

Town Justice Frank Milano sentenced Gunner to the maximum fine.

At the time of his arrest, Gunner told police he had been drinking and may have been "under clothed." A neighbor driving by saw Gunner and reported the incident to police.

Gunner began teaching with the Bethlehem school district in 1986 and was relieved of his teaching duties following his arrest. He continues to work on developing science curriculum and reports to an office off school grounds.

Last year, the district announced that Gunner would remain on the special assignment for the remainder of the school year while receiving his full salary.

The district is exploring its options regarding Gunner's employment. Until a decision is reached, he will continue to be paid, unless he chooses to resign, according to School Superintendent Les Loomis. To date, Gunner has not submitted a letter of resignation to the district.

The board of education could bring formal charges against Gunner, an option the board has said it is considering.

Police arrest one for DWI

Bethlehem police recently arrested one person for driving while intoxicated.

Silas Reed, 70, of 220 Green St., Albany was stopped by police on Jan. 5 at 11:34 p.m. after they received a report that Reed was driving while intoxicated.

Police observed Reed on Route 9W flashing the vehicle's high beams repeatedly.

Police said Reed failed field sobriety tests and was charged with DWI.

Dems vote Young out, Cunningham in

BY KRISTEN OLBY

In a special meeting of the Albany County Legislature, Democrats widened their majority, replacing one Bethlehem Republican legislator with a Democrat.

The meeting was held to temporarily reappoint legislators, in the wake of the redistricting court battle that delayed the legislature election from November 2003 to November 2004.

Republicans lawmakers abstained from voting on the reappointments, calling it a violation of state law.

During the Jan. 5 session, Republican David Young's Delmar seat was declared vacant. Democrats unanimously appointed one of their own, John "Jack" Cunningham of Delmar, to fill the seat.

Democratic legislators said Young no longer lived in the district and had intended to leave office in January 2004 anyway.

In July 2002, Young sold his Delmar home in the 34th Legislative District and moved to 1007 Delaware Ave., located within the 33rd legislative district.

Under the Albany County Charter, a county legislator is required to live in the district he or she represents for the entire term of office. Young now lives in a district represented by Democrat Herb Reilly of Voorheesville.

"It's a pure power grab by the Albany County Democratic machine," said Minority Leader John Graziano Jr., R-Latham, who boycotted the meeting. "I think state law is very clear, we are holdovers. Holdovers do not have the ability to fill vacancies or appoint our successors."

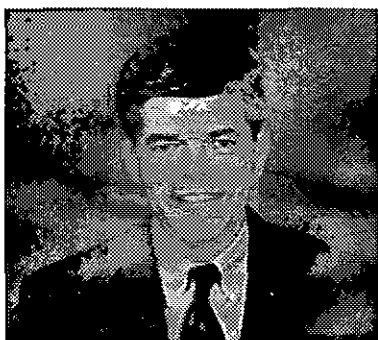

He added that Democrats should have sought to remove Young under the charter if they felt he was in violation of the residency requirement.

Young was unavailable for comment. He did write a letter to The Spotlight, see Page 7.

Graziano is vowing to fight the appointments in U.S. District Court on Feb. 4 before Judge Norman Mordue.

Cunningham, 46, works as a technology project manager for Key Bank. He was the Democratic candidate vying for the legislative seat against Republican Jeff Perez, until the election was postponed.

"This appointment is really just temporary, to fill a vacancy," said

Jack Cunningham

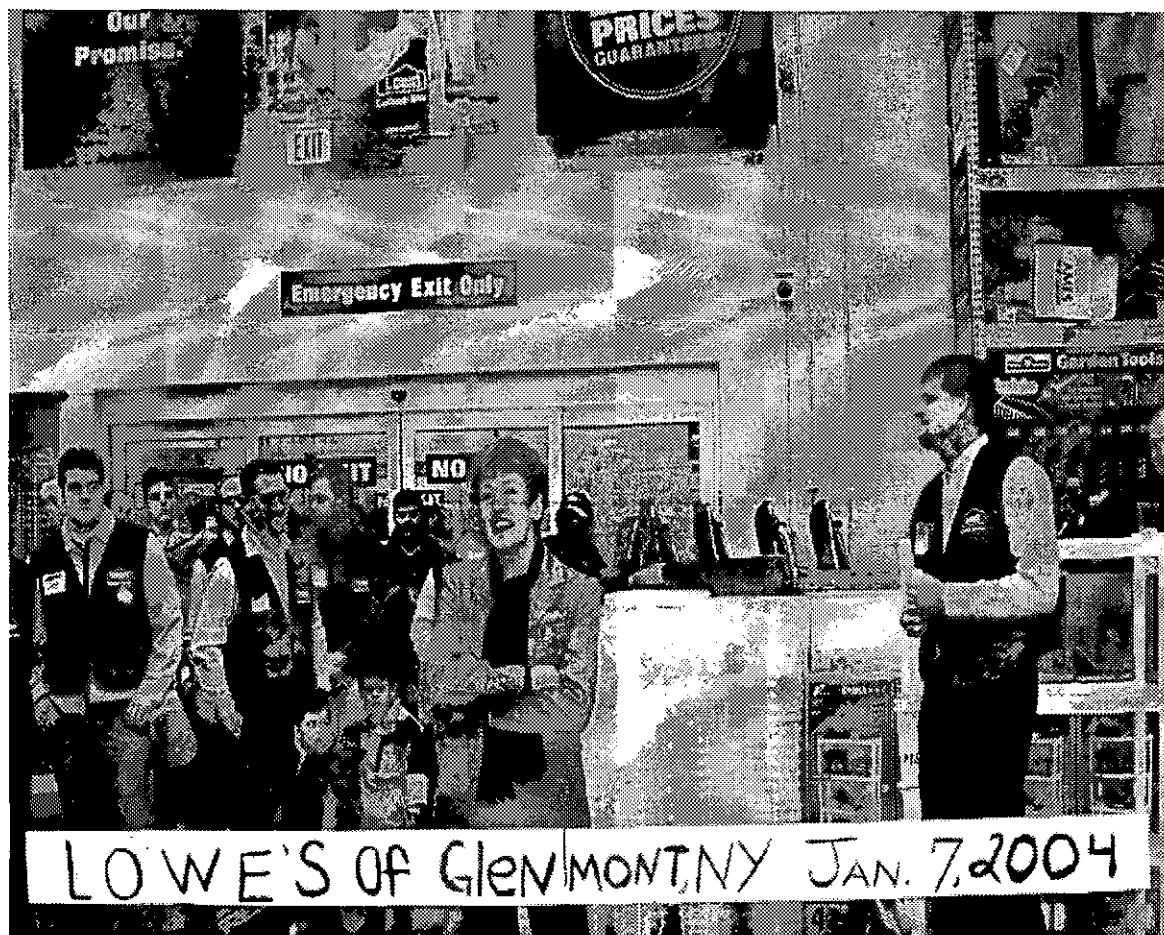

Cunningham. "My intention is to run in November of this year," he said, adding he believes Young had little interest in remaining in the Legislature, having been a candidate for a Bethlehem town board seat in November.

Cunningham is no stranger to politics. He was highly visible in Theresa Egan's successful bid for Bethlehem supervisor, leading some Republicans to conclude his appointment is a form of payback.

Perez still intends to challenge Cunningham in the legislative election.

The 34th legislative district is comprised of central Delmar, part of Elsmere and the Cherryvale section of Slingerlands.

Longtime Voorheesville principal to retire

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

Talk to people in Voorheesville about retiring elementary school Principal Ed Diegel, and you'll hear about the exercise classes and games he plays with the kids, the pictures he takes, and the fact that the kids see him when they arrive at school in the morning, and when they leave again in the afternoon.

"When my students earn 50 stars, they can have ice cream or exercise with Mr. Diegel," said first-grade teacher Mary Nolan.

"He takes them to the gym and plays games with them, and it's something they really look forward to."

"He's a great conflict solver, and able to give good advice," PTA president Heather McMaster said. "It's very easy to get access to him. He takes a lot of pictures that end up in the yearbook."

"His style is perfect for an elementary school teacher," Superintendent Alan McCartney said. "He's laid back and easy to work with. I know when students who aren't at the elementary school anymore see him, they always greet him with a hearty 'Good Morning, Mr. Diegel.'"

Although he's been in education for 35 years, 57-year-old Diegel wasn't entirely sure he wanted to retire. His wife Kathleen retired two years ago from her teaching job in South Colonie. That, along with a new granddaughter, made Diegel think more about retiring, although he has no very specific plans for the near future.

Ed Diegel

"I'm going to watch the sunset, drive more slowly and wait for the mailman," he said.

Diegel grew up in Colonie, and was the first generation in his family to go to college. He gave his mother some credit for his choice of becoming a teacher.

"She felt that teaching was a worthwhile profession," Diegel said.

He studied education at SUNY Oneonta and received two master's degrees from the University at Albany, one in school guidance and one in curriculum and instruction.

Diegel attended the former Cardinal McCloskey High School in Albany and started his teaching career at St. James School in Albany.

"I was there for four years and taught social studies to seventh- and eighth-graders," he said.

From there, he taught junior and senior high school social studies in South Colonie, and coached the girls' basketball team. He taught for seven years at Shenendehowa, where he made his first forays into administrative work as the high school dean and middle school assistant principal.

When he first came to Voorheesville 18 years ago, Diegel was the assistant principal at the high school for three years, then moved to his job at the elementary school.

After a career with middle- and upper-level students, he wasn't sure the elementary school was the right place for him. Fifteen years later, those doubts are gone.

"It was a wonderful decision," he said.

Diegel has watched a lot of things change during his educational career.

"Schools reflect society,"

Diegel said, "and to really change schools, you need to change society. It's why a lot of school reform has met with little success — people are trying to change an institution, instead of society."

"There's a higher divorce rate now, and many parents have to work two or three jobs to stay solvent," Diegel said. "Kids' exposure to television and electronic games has increased, and the schools reflect that, too. One reflection of the information age is that kids are growing up too fast. The Internet is a good and a bad thing — it puts the whole world in your house in the form of a computer. Kids are exposed to so many ideas so soon, and it's difficult for parents to help their children deal with that."

Schools are called upon to do more for students than ever before, he added.

"The safety nets are tighter, so we have fewer children falling through the cracks," Diegel said. "We're also asked to do a lot more than teach just the three 'Rs' — reading, 'riting, and 'rithmetic. Some of the things we have to teach are the Irish potato famine, AIDS education and fire safety."

Diegel sees society's changes as forcing families to deal with the outside world more than in the past.

"In the early years of my career, families could isolate themselves more from the world," he said. "It was easier to instill their values. As society becomes more advanced, as there are more electronics and ways to communicate, we have less social contact with each other and less time with family members."

Diegel is cautious about expressing his opinion about the way society is today.

"I don't want to be a curmudgeon, but there was something to be said for kids going home to two-parent homes, where somebody was always there," he said with the easy smile that makes the kids feel comfortable. "It was also good that sometimes there was nothing on TV but a test pattern."

What hasn't changed in education, Diegel said, are the children.

"Kids are still kids, and that's what's so rewarding," he said. "They're fresh, alive, vibrant and unassuming. To be around them — it rubs off, and that's what makes education so special. People not in education don't realize how lucky we educators are."

Voorheesville, Diegel said, has been a special community.

"The families feel connected to the district, and are very supportive of the schools," he said. "There's very little turnover among the teachers and students."

Diegel said that the relationship between elementary school teachers and their students is very special.

"An elementary teacher is very connected to her class," he said. "Teachers really dote on their children."

Diegel's days start around 8 a.m. and "go so quickly," he said. He spends time in the halls, at assemblies and in the classrooms — plus keeping his door open to assist teachers, students and parents and working on curriculum and testing. In spite of full days, he said, he has a standing offer to all the teachers to take a student who's earned it into the gym and play games or exercise with them.

Diegel recently started playing in an over-48 men's baseball league, and his retirement exercise will consist of more walks with his two dogs. He'll also spend time with his wife, his 24-year-old son John and 30-year-old daughter Krista Palombo, mother of 1-year-old Gianna.

"I was very fortunate to have found Voorheesville," Diegel said. "I had a good career, and I'm retiring with mixed feelings."

Is it the future or the past that we look for?

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

We have met the enemy, and he will never be ours. Not only that, we'll face him again and again and again, thanks to the cable television station ESPN Sports Classics.

Channel surfing had long been the primary foe of couples seeking to watch television together, as man's inhumanity to woman had forced wives everywhere to miss Kodak moments and AT&T commercials that made us cry, as husbands forsook commercials in pursuit of the next, possibly better television show.

Reruns of great moments in sports history seem to have ended the constant channel changing that is likely short-circuiting some critical neural paths in our brains. Chris' willingness to watch past sporting events reminds me of the days when our children watched Disney videos so incessantly that I settled in to bed each night humming "Be Our Guest" or "I Just Can't Wait to Be King."

"Wait a minute," I said one evening, sitting down with Chris after turning on the dishwasher, tossing in yet another load of laundry and checking that all the doors were locked, "How can this be baseball? It's winter."

Turns out it was the third game of the 1969 World Series, the New York Mets against the Baltimore Orioles, and Chris had been at the game with his father.

"So you know how it ends?" I asked, my scathing tone prompted by a deep fear that I would never again be able to watch "ER."

"Well, sure," he said defensively, "but you know how 'Pride and Prejudice' ends, and you watch that whole mini-series a few times a year."

Guilty as charged. When the world gets to be too much, I claim the TV room as my own and watch Colin Firth and Jennifer Ehle bring Jane Austen's classic book to big, period-drama life.

"But nothing happens," my "Matrix"-loving sons protest when I invite them to watch it with me.

"Right," I tell them, "but someday you will want to go on dates, so you ought to practice with this movie."

They scurry away on the double then, and the popcorn is all mine as I settle in to the English countryside of long ago.

Why do I watch that miniseries over and over? Why do I reread books I love particularly well? Surely, others must do that as well. Other men have said they love ESPN Sports Classics, too — what is it that we all love about repetition?

Rather than seem boring, knowing the outcome is the seduction for some people. Dave Wall of Delmar likened it to comfort food, a sentiment that Mike Healey of Louisville, Ky., echoed.

"There's a certain comfort with

COMMENTARY:

*Mom's

knowing what's going to happen and then seeing it happen," Healey e-mailed. "So much in our lives today is out of our control, and in fact, doesn't happen the way we plan it that I think the opportunity to see something (like a game) that will turn out the way that we want it to offers us a little piece of sanity."

Jessica Loy, Delmar author of Follow the Trail, applied the idea to books.

"When things are stressful, there is something comforting about repeating something I already know," she said. "I find I tend to go back to movies or books that are heartwarming and reassuring during these times. It is like seeing an old friend."

"It's like having the same conversation with an old friend," Healey wrote of rereading books. "You may know how it's going to turn out but you can still enjoy the interaction."

That familiarity certainly gets me, and in addition to my quarterly viewing of "Pride and Prejudice," I reread Animal Dreams by Barbara Kingsolver regularly. It's an incredible book that makes me cry, makes me laugh, makes me dream, makes me remember falling in love, and leaves me feeling hopeful — every single time I read it.

For Eric Mollman of Summit, N.J., it's the possibility that has him halting the remote at broadcasts of old sporting events.

"When one sits down to watch a game, the possibilities of what may happen are infinite," Mollman e-mailed. "Taking baseball as an example, even on a seemingly meaningless midweek game in May, at the start of the game, there is the chance that you will see something very rare — the no-hitter or even the perfect game, the player who hits four home runs or hits for the cycle, the triple play or, of course, the dramatic last inning heroics. When that does happen, the game becomes special and memorable."

Having put in the time to watch the mundane become the memorable, Mollman posited, the viewer forges a connection to a particular community.

"So many fans are able to relate their mutual love of the game through these classics," he wrote. "One only needs to mention them and the response is a knowing, and probably emotional, comment."

Women who have sighed over romantic movies form their own bond. "The Sound of Music" seems to be another chick flick that draws sighs.

"I grow up with Maria, my eyes wet the whole time, beaming like an idiot through the tears on my face, thrilling when they make the mountains," Marcy Parlow e-mailed from Weston, Mass.

"What girl did not dream of her own wedding when Maria walked down the aisle," Eileen Miller e-mailed from Livingston, N.J. "I remember crying during that scene during most of my 20s when I was convinced I would never find Mr. Right. Now I cry for poor Maria — eight kids, is she out of her mind?"

Putting ourselves into those fictional settings, and comparing our lives to those fictional characters, is part of the appeal, I think. Mr. Darcy is every strong, silent type who has attracted us over the years. He turns out to be honest, kind, verbally charming, and completely enchanted by Miss Bennett — exactly what we want from our men who get lost too easily in thoughts of past sporting glories.

I watch "Pride and Prejudice" with its beautiful costumes and compare myself to the adult women who spend their days plucking flowers, embroidering and having their hair dressed. I am relieved to be wearing jeans and contemplating what sort of work I might like to do next in my life. My heart does beat fast when Mr. Darcy gazes deep into Elizabeth's eyes, though. I feel I am 26 again, when Chris looked at me just like that.

I checked back with my beloved, to find that a lot of what I like about "Pride and Prejudice," he likes about watching the repeat of a baseball game he'd attended with his dad in 1969.

"The old games show how the world has changed," the family historian said. "I like to see how the seats were painted, how the advertisements are different and what the uniforms were like."

Some reasons strike close to his heart, too.

"Sometimes it just reminds you of seeing a baseball game with your dad," Chris said.

yearly tuition of $30 is too steep for many families.

Yet, for most children in this village, this is the only opportunity for schooling they'll ever have. The nearest middle or high school is 8 miles away. Shoes and bicycles are scarce, and without cars or bus service, few will ever make the trek toward a secondary education.

Educated Togolese women are rare, making it crucial that young girls get a chance to study. It is hoped education can help stifle the spread of disease, specifically AIDS, by incorporating family planning, and delaying both polygamous marriages and pregnancy.

The lucky children who are enrolled in school must overcome a harsh learning environment. Walls made of mud and corn stalks allow the elements to seep through.

"These kids have to study and learn with rain coming through, and wind, so their learning environment is not very conducive," Rice said.

In an effort to educate more children, she hopes to nearly double the school's size by adding two rooms and an office for records and materials.

It's estimated that construction of the two rooms, repairs to cracked walls, additional benches and new blackboards will cost about $13,000. The villagers have agreed to contribute labor and supplies like sand and gravel.

"The villagers have already started working really hard to realize this project," said Rice. "Everyday they are transporting sand on their heads and by donkeys so that we can start making the cement bricks."

With work slated to begin on the school in two months, time is running out to secure funding. Construction must be completed by June, the start of the rainy season.

The Dapaong Rotary Club, comprised of African business leaders from the city of Dapaong, has launched an effort to raise financial support for the project. Working in partnership with the Albany Rotary Club, donations are beginning to pour in. To date, about $6,000 has been raised.

"If we don't go through an organization, the money gets scarfed up by politicians, quite frankly," said Mary Perrin Scott of Delmar who is a member of the Albany Rotary Club and chairperson of the international effort. "We're trying to make sure every penny of it gets to Dapaong."

To help garner support for the cause, Rice's parents, Frank and Ruth Rice, will give an informational seminar on Thursday, Jan. 22, at Bethlehem town hall, beginning at 7 p.m. The program includes a PowerPoint presentation with photos of the school and a video.

The regional governor in Togo has promised to provide the additional teachers, if Rice and the people of Boade' can make this mission a reality.

Reality check

On Monday, Dr. Martin Luther King's birthday will be celebrated, yet sadly, much of his dream for blacks in America remains just that, especially in middle class suburbia.

Inner-city schools and neighborhoods are plagued with ills related to poverty and ignorance. In our own region, crime dominates the news in the three major Capital District cities: Troy, Albany and Schenectady. Shootings, often fatal, are a too regular occurrence.

And all too often, these crimes involve young blacks, both as victims and perpetrators.

Dr. King would likely be disheartened by the lack of progress in race relations, by limited opportunities for the poor, by income-related educational limitations and with the general acceptance of this status quo of inequality.

Perhaps it's time to take another look at King's vision of the future of blacks in America and begin to work toward making that vision a reality.

Editorials

Stay cool

The big chill has arrived in the Northeast with a capital C. The flu, sniffles and nasty colds have also arrived.

Even though the weather was milder for a time earlier this week, Arctic air will have made a return trip by the time you read this.

It's important to take precautions against frostbite and other cold-related ills both in and out of the home.

Furnaces should be in good working order, and filters should be changed regularly to assure proper efficiency.

Helping to keep the heat in and the cold out can be accomplished by some common-sense tactics, such as opening blinds and drapes during the day when the sun is out and making sure windows are properly caulked.

It's also a good idea to stay put whenever possible — especially when sub-zero temperatures blanket the region. This helps to avoid nasty germs so prevalent in public places at this time of year. If you do get sick, keep your ailment at home away from co-workers.

When you do venture out, be sure to dress accordingly, with appropriate head, foot and hand wear.

With last week's cold spell, many area drivers were stranded because of the number of vehicles that simply refused to cooperate with Mother Nature.

Even the American Automobile Association was overwhelmed with calls regarding weather-related emergencies. Don't panic — it will use reserves that could be keeping you warm.

Stay warm, stay well, and try to keep your cool during a trying time.

Sports loses out to liars and cheats

By ROB JONAS

The writer is the sports editor of Spotlight Newspapers.

It used to be that shameless lying to the public was relegated to politicians and PR flacks. Now, it's become standard operating procedure for the sports world.

Today's professional athletes are in a constant state of denial. They deny that they're taking supplements to increase their strength or decrease their weight. They deny their involvements in criminal cases. They deny that their bodies are betraying them, even as their doctors are telling them that they should retire before they suffer permanent physical or mental damage.

In the case of Pete Rose, he denied to the public for 14 years that he gambled on baseball while managing the Cincinnati Reds in the late 1980s, even though he was banished from the game following an intensive, reputable investigation. When he finally owned up to his transgression last week, he didn't apologize.

Is it any wonder that Americans are getting tired of the professional sports world? When someone who knows he's done something wrong doesn't even offer an apology to his loyal fans for both his actions and his lying, he shouldn't expect people to forgive him right away. Especially after 14 years of denial.

Of course, Rose is hopeful that his admission will get him what he wants — a spot in the National Baseball Hall of Fame. He certainly has the stats to get him to Cooperstown, including the record for career hits. But are fans going to remember what he did on the field or what he did away from the field? Chances are they'll remember him for gambling first, baseball second.

Rose isn't the only one who seems to be living in his version of reality. Barry Bonds wants the world to believe that he hasn't taken any supplements to help him become one of the most feared home run hitters in Major League Baseball. Never mind the fact that Bonds has gone from being a skinny rookie infielder with Pittsburgh to a muscle-bound goliath in San Francisco over the last two decades. Those muscles are supposed to be the result of working out every day, right? Yet, fans try to believe that Bonds has avoided taking supplements, even after he testified at a hearing in California on designer steroids.

Another baseball slugger, Sammy Sosa, got caught in a lie last year when he first denied any prior knowledge that the bat he used during a game was corked after it shattered on a grounder he hit. He then admitted it was his bat, but that he used it only during batting practice to give the fans a good show before games.

Now baseball fans are left wondering whether his monumental blasts in batting practices and All-Star Game home run derbies were the result of his strength or his corked bat.

Football players are also

having credibility issues these days. In early November, Cleveland Browns running back William Green initially swore the stab wounds in his back that landed him in the hospital were self-inflicted, but authorities arrested his fiancée for allegedly assaulting him. This came less than a week after Green was suspended for four games for violating the National Football League's substance abuse policy. Nice alibi, but it's hard to believe anyone would deliberately stab himself in the back. It's hard enough trying to reach your back with soap in the shower, let alone with a knife in a kitchen.

Some professional athletes will go to any lengths to protect their image. Kobe Bryant reportedly bought his wife an expensive ring to make up for an alleged case of rape in Colorado during the last National Basketball Association off-season. At least he had the guts to tell the world in a press conference — with his wife by his side — that he was unfaithful. But the rape case still hangs over the perennial all-star and will continue to do so until it is resolved.

If anyone is wondering where pro athletes are learning how to cover their tracks, look at what's been happening at the highest level of college sports. Iowa State men's basketball coach Larry Eustachy was pictured partying with undergraduate students when the team was on a road trip. He then admitted he had a drinking problem and was eventually replaced by the university.

Several days after the Eustachy pictures were made public, the University of Alabama dismissed head football coach Mike Price — whom the university had just hired — after allegations arose that he had been in a Florida strip club and then brought one of the workers back to his hotel room.

It was a strict punishment for an indiscretion, but at least the university proved that it had standards it was willing to uphold.

Those cases are tame compared to what happened last summer with the Baylor University men's basketball team, though. One of its players, Patrick Dennehy, disappeared and was found dead several days later. Another Baylor player, Carlton Dotson, was arrested and charged with Dennehy's murder.

But it was former head coach Dave Bliss' attempt to cover up the circumstances leading to Dennehy's murder that created the most outrage. He took his title as coach a little too far by allegedly coaching some of his players as to what to tell police about Dennehy and Dotson. When the cover-up was exposed, along with allegations of illegal pay-outs to players, Bliss and several Baylor administrators resigned, but the stain on the program remains.

Fortunately in the Capital District, we don't have those worries. The highest level of professional sports we have around here are minor league, and our local colleges have done a good job of keeping their athletic programs clean.

Not to say that athletes or coaches at those levels can't get into trouble with the law, but when the worst thing that happens around here is a 10-game losing streak by the Siena College men's basketball team, it really isn't all that bad.

Still, the illegal activities — and the lying that goes along with them — in the professional and collegiate sports worlds are troubling, especially since in many cases, the people involved get off with suspensions or probation, if it turns out to be a criminal case. This reinforces the belief that if you're a pro athlete or major collegiate coach, you can get away with anything. That shouldn't be the case.

The sad part is, you'd think they would know better, but they don't. They keep making mistakes that bring embarrassment upon themselves and the teams and colleges that employ them. In some cases, they'd rather deny everything than own up to their mistakes.

As sports fans, we know that players and coaches are only human. We'd just like to see more of them act human when they mess up.

County legislator is grateful for support during tenure

Editor, The Spotlight:

I have thoroughly enjoyed my last eight years at the Albany County Legislature.

Anyone who has had the opportunity to serve his or her hometown knows how special that can be. Elected politics provides a fascinating education about one's community, about the people who live here, our system of government and human nature.

Unfortunately, it is the "politics" of politics that I have never enjoyed that much. Of course, Albany is knee deep in it, but you accept this as part of the political system. After all, it wouldn't be Albany without politics. Being an elected official has both rewards and headaches or, as I often say, "never a dull moment."

Although I had announced my intentions to retire from the Legislature, I had planned to serve the remaining months in this, the first "holdover" legislative session. The "game" of Albany politics, however, has denied me of that privilege, and for that I am deeply saddened. Many legislative members have reached out to me, on both sides of the aisle, with many kind words — to these individuals I would like to give special thanks.

There is much to be positive about, and I have many friends with whom I served and for whom I have great respect. I have two beautiful young daughters who have deserved more of my time than I have been able to give them, and I look forward to getting on with many other things in life that have taken a back seat.

I would like to say thank you to the people of Bethlehem who first elected me in 1995, and the many local, county and state elected officials with whom I have had the privilege of working with; the many agency leaders and staff and the many nonprofits that provide services to the residents of Albany County.

Certainly, I would like to wish my successor, Mr. Cunningham, the very best, as well as my many friends at the county Legislature.

There have also been a number of legislative staff, minority and majority, who deserve many thanks for their efforts to serve the legislative members and the people of this county. Finally, my wife and family deserve perhaps the greatest thanks, for their many years of sacrifice.

Peace group plans anniversary vigil

Editor, The Spotlight:

On Sunday, Jan. 18, Bethlehem Neighbors for Peace will be celebrating our one-year anniversary.

We will be sponsoring a one-hour candlelight vigil from 5 to 6 p.m. at the Four Corners, where we continue to hold our weekly vigils.

We are proud to be one of 54 ongoing vigils in the Hudson Valley region, from Manhattan to Elizabethtown.

Our candlelight vigil will be in honor of the peace work of Martin Luther King Jr., and of the American soldiers and Iraqi citizens killed or wounded in the American occupation of Iraq.

We want to welcome you all to join us in this special celebration and to thank you for past support at previous vigils and public forums.

We receive many honks of support, peace signs and verbal thanks from our neighbors on Monday nights.

We continue to vigil for peace to let you and the world know that war is not a solution, but, rather, creates further menacing vulnerability for all people.

As King wrote in his famous letter from Birmingham jail, "Injustice anywhere is a threat to justice everywhere. We are caught in an inescapable network of mutuality, tied in a single garment of destiny. Whatever affects one directly, affects all indirectly."

Matters of Opinion

Medicaid is the mother of all mandate madness

Editor, The Spotlight:

It's a vicious cycle. The state government mandates that local governments provide certain services, yet they do not provide the funding.

The local government, in turn, passes on the cost to the property owner through higher taxes. It occurs in school districts, towns, cities, villages and counties all across the state. There are hundreds of mandates imposed by Albany, but the "mother of all mandates" is clearly Medicaid.

Medicaid is the single most expensive mandate imposed on counties throughout New York state, prompting county executives from across the state to hold simultaneous press conferences on Jan. 5 asking for the state to "help us pay for Medicaid." In addition, Gov. George Pataki noted in his State of the State address that we need to "work together to reverse the costs that have squeezed the finances of so many county governments."

From 1999 to 2002, Medicaid costs to counties on the average soared by 32 percent. In my Assembly district, encompassing Schenectady and Saratoga counties, that increase was 33.91 percent and 33.89 percent respectively.

Moreover, New York is only one of a handful of states that require counties to pay a share of Medicaid costs, but gives them no say in how the program is run. Not only is this mother of all mandates expensive to local governments, but it is the biggest impediment to revitalizing local economies. And that is what makes the cycle continue.

Local governments rely on property and sales taxes to fund their budgets. When state-mandated Medicaid costs increase, those costs are passed on in the form of increased property taxes. This increases the cost of renting or owning property and doing business in New York state. As a result, businesses cannot grow and job growth stalls while New York's economy flounders. This scenario can eventually lead to businesses downsizing or moving out of state completely. Senior citizens on fixed incomes can no longer afford to live in their own homes. In a softer economy, more people will be forced to rely on the very services that are busting the budgets of local governments.

That is why my Assembly Republican colleagues and I have put together a plan to end this cycle of runaway spending with a Medicaid Reform package that is actually an economic recovery plan. This plan would provide $200 million in emergency Medicaid relief to counties and create a five-year state Medicaid takeover. Under the emergency Medicaid relief plan, Schenectady County would get $3,167,207 and Saratoga would see a windfall of $2,240,974, all of which would be used to reduce local property taxes.

With lower property taxes, more money will be left in the pockets of the consumer. This will create an influx of disposable income for the consumer that, in turn, will surely help boost the economy. With increased consumer investment in New York's economy, the state will see an immediate increase in sales tax revenue. In the final analysis, it is the consumer who is the engine that makes our economy roar.

In addition, with lower property taxes, local communities will see an influx of new buyers. Senior citizens will be able to remain in their homes longer, and struggling businesses will be able to survive. Moreover, with the added incentive of lower property taxes new businesses will have incentive to come to New York. More employees translate into increased revenue for the state in both income and sales tax revenues. As a result, the Medicaid relief package and five-year takeover plan, combined with the extensive program to combat Medicaid fraud creates a fiscal environment where the state takeover of Medicaid ends up paying for itself.

The key to making this work is to ensure that the money the counties save goes directly back to the taxpayer in the form of property tax cuts. In fact, it is the only way this program will work.

But when it does work, it will be a win/win situation for all involved.

Salvation Army says thanks

Editor, The Spotlight:

So many of you took part in the Red Kettle campaign and the holiday assistance program who we need to thank – the companies and retailers who opened your doors to our kettle workers, our bell ringer and holiday assistance volunteers, individuals and companies who gave of their resources – gifts and toys for the children, food for our families, dollars and pennies you dropped in the kettle, check you sent in the mail – you have overwhelmed us with your generosity in time and resources.

Because of your sacrifices, families in our community enjoyed a safer, holier, happier holiday season this year and will receive services and assistance during 2004.

Your message has always been clear – but it resounds and reverberates during the holiday season – that you support The Salvation Army's efforts to help those less fortunate or struggling through a crisis.

As always, we embrace the opportunity to do our share in this community and we promise to use the funds responsibly – to help our fellow human beings who truly need assistance during the coming year.

We would also like to add a special thank you to our media who have helped us reach our community during a very intense campaign.

Thank you for your support and may God bless all of you and keep you safe in 2004.

Patrons can access library databases from home or school

Bethlehem Public Library acquired three new online reference tools this month through the Upper Hudson Library System.

World Book Online Reference Center is an award-winning resource containing the complete World Book Encyclopedia, thousands of additional articles, easy search capability, and links to related articles and editor-approved Web sites. Pictures, maps, sound and animation add depth and interest. An intriguing feature is "Surf the Ages," imaginary Web sites from various historical periods.

Voted Internet Magazine Site of the Year in 2002, Oxford Reference Online contains 100 of Oxford's dictionary and reference works in a cross-searchable database. Subject areas include general reference, language, arts, science and medicine, humanities and social sciences, business and professional, mythology and folklore and more.

Children's Literature Comprehensive Database contains more than 150,000 full-text, searchable, adult-level reviews of children's books.

Awards and booklist appearances are also indicated in this regularly augmented and updated resource, which is a particularly valuable tool for parents and teachers.

24/7 virtual service

The library's online reference collection currently includes 42 databases, encompassing a wide range of subject areas and accessible to various age groups.

Twenty of these carefully selected reference tools have been purchased by Bethlehem Public Library. The rest are provided by the Upper Hudson Library System and the New York State Library.

Library databases are available free on our library computers, or from home or school with a valid library card.

To access databases from a location outside the library, go to the library Web site at www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org, and click on "Reference and Research" or "Find Articles."

Library hosts afternoon of readings Thacher Nature Center plans bird walk with expert

The library will celebrate the recent publication of a beautiful little volume by the late Bryce Butler titled The Traveled Road on

Voorheesville Public Library

Sunday, Jan. 18, at 1:30 p.m. Everyone in the community is invited.

Butler was a well-known local writer and journalist who was a member of the library's Life-stories workshop for many years. His book begins "This is the life of a man of the sixties" and includes vignettes from his life, as well as "Dead Man Writing," a funny and touching series of essays he wrote in the months preceding his death.

The book was published as a result of the inspiration and dedication of Butler's partner, Marilyn Mowry. It is available for purchase at the library. Don't miss what promises to be an entertaining afternoon of readings and refreshments.

Barkley's School for Dogs: Snow Day by Marcia Thornton Jones and Debbie Dadey is the selection for the book discussion for students in grades two and three. Parents are welcome to join in for book-related activities and refreshments on Jan. 23 at 7 p.m.

A copy of the book is available when you sign up for the program.

Students in grades four to six can also sign up and start reading for the Feb. 10 discussion of The Incredible Journey by Sheila Burnford.

The temperature has taken a nosedive and the theme of preschool story time is "Arctic Blast" for the week of Jan. 20. There is no story time on Jan. 19. No signup is necessary.

PRAYER TO THE BLESSED VIRGIN

(Never known to fail)

Oh, most beautiful flower of Mt. Carmel, fruitful vine splendor of Heaven. Blessed Mother of the Son of God. Immaculate Virgin, assist me in my necessity. Oh, Star of the Sea, help me and show me, herein you are my mother. Oh, Holy Mary, Mother of God, Queen of Heaven and Earth! I humbly beseech you from the bottom of my heart to answer me in this necessity. There are none that can withstand your power. Oh, show me herein you are my mother. Oh Mary conceived without sin, pray for us who have recourse to thee (3X). Holy Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3X). Sweet Mother, I place this cause in your hands (3X). Holy Spirit, you who solve all problems, light all roads so that I can attain my goal, you who gave me the divine gift to forgive and forget all evil against me. I want in this short prayer to thank you for all things as you confirm once again that I never want to be separated from you in eternal glory. Thank you for your mercy towards me and mine. The person must say this prayer 3 consecutive days, after 3 days the request will be granted. This prayer must be published after the favor is granted.

Gymnastics team rises up Section II standings

Just a few years ago, if anyone had suggested that the Bethlehem gymnastics team not only be taken seriously, but have a chance to win the Section II title, they would have been laughed out of the room.

Now, it seems that the Eagles are realistically in reach of this goal.

Bethlehem has not won the section title since 1982. But in the last couple of years, new additions to the team and a hardworking attitude has made the team a real competitor for Shaker, Shenendehowa, Guilderland and defending Section II champion Saratoga.

The last 20 years were quiet for gymnastics at Bethlehem with a typically small and inexperienced team. Occasionally, individuals qualified for the New York state championship meet.

The 2002-03 season was a breakout year because of Bethlehem's first wins over a section II team (Guilderland) in more than a decade, and the qualification for states by Brittany Rodgers and Christine Hackman.

The current team is stronger than ever with new and talented members including freshman Kendall Day, eighth-graders Meredith Michl and Kerry Deyo and seventh-grader Kirstie Russell.

With half of the season left,

Bethlehem has already received two trophies for their accomplishments. The Eagles won the Bethlehem Invitational on December 27 and finished a close third out of eight teams behind Shen and Saratoga at the Shaker Invitational on December 13.

There is also talk of Day and Michl qualifying for states, as well as veteran team members Lauren Quirk and Marcelle Martens, who are both scoring consistently this year.

Sophomore Morgan Fluster and freshmen Sammy Kuhn and Julie Sagor are working through their injuries and helping the team's performance. Freshman Jen Crandall and eighth-graders Kate Halvorsen and Kristen Kenny have made progress on all events.

From early November to mid February, all 15 girls give up about 2 1/2 hours for practice six days a week on the four women's events: balance beam, uneven bars, floor exercise and vault. Although a high school sport, gymnastics requires great amounts of time and energy, which the girls readily provide.

Everyone agrees that this year's team — led by co-captains Rodgers, Hackman and junior Sandy Okun — has come a long way toward making Bethlehem a strong competitor again.

Egan anticipates the earlier time slot will make it easier for working professionals to attend meetings and will allow seniors, who may have avoided meetings because of the late hour, to attend.

"In my opinion, it's going to be easier for the public in general, because they can stop on their way home from work and still give them time to be with their families," said Egan, who is also the mother of two children.

Three other board members, Tom Marcelle, Dan Plummer and Tim Gordon are also parents of young children, but Gordon does not support the time change. He was the only board member to vote against it.

"It may be convenient for people who work at town hall," said Gordon, but he believes the dinner hour meeting is more of a nuisance for families.

"It require working people to take time off from work. It's not unreasonable but it's not the optimum time," he added.

Gordon believes a 7 p.m. meeting would be more reasonable for the public.

The Jan. 14 town board meeting will be held at 7:30 p.m. and the Jan. 28 meeting will be held at 6:30 p.m. Beginning Feb. 11, meetings will be held at 5:30 p.m.

Symphony's winter concert features Russian greats

Tchaikovsky

Prokofiev

By DEV TOBIN

After the last week or so of deep winter, it's fitting that the Albany Symphony Orchestra concert this Saturday at the Palace Theatre in Albany will be all-Russian.

The orchestra's White Nights concert will feature Prokofiev's Alexander Nevsky Cantata and Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 5.

"So much of Russian music is so great and passionate," said David Alan Miller, orchestra music director and conductor. "This concert is like a warm, delicious, musical meal in the middle of winter."

The Prokofiev cantata builds on the score he wrote for Sergei Eisenstein's 1938 famous movie about the 13th-century Russian national hero who successfully fought off invasions by the Swedes and the Teutonic Knights.

The cantata follows the film script and the songs tell of the battles Nevsky fought to preserve the nascent Motherland, especially the dramatic (and historically accurate) Battle on the Ice.

Joining the symphony to sing the cantata (mostly in English) are mezzo-soprano Lucille Beers and the Albany Pro Musica choral group under the direction of David Griggs Janower.

David Alan Miller said, "I love to collaborate with Albany Pro Musica; last year, we did Beethoven's Ninth with them."

Miller added that Beers, a Latham resident, is also a nearly annual guest artist with the symphony.

The last time the symphony played Tchaikovsky's Symphony No. 5 was 13 years ago, for Miller's audition concert.

"I'm a huge Tchaikovsky fan; his work is audience-friendly and also very profound," Miller said.

"I've conducted the Fifth all over the world," Miller added. "It has arguably the most beautiful slow movements in all of music and the movements flow together with a great sense of balance." In keeping with the romantic Russian theme of the evening, a horse drawn carriage will bring concert-goers to the Palace from the Quackenbush Square Parking Garage.

And two downtown restaurants, La Serre and Daniel's at Ogden's, will offer four-course, traditional Russian dinners to symphony ticket-holders for a prix fixe of $48. Reservations are recommended.

Miller will discuss the concert at the Vanguard Preview on Thursday, Jan. 15, at noon at the Albany Public Library, 161 Washington Ave. (coffee and desserts provided) and in the Albany Convention and Visitors Center in Quackenbush Square at 6:30 p.m. on the night of the concert.

The concert will begin at 7:30 p.m. Tickets are $37.50, $29.50 and $19. For information or reservations, call 465-4755.
