EPA still considers town good for sludge

This is one of those times that being a finalist is not necessarily a good thing.

By KRISTEN OLBY

A plot of vacant industrial land along Bethlehem's riverfront continues to top the federal government's list of potential Hudson River dewatering locations, despite repeated public outcry from town officials.

Last Wednesday, the EPA presented a scaled-down list of three potential sites still being considered for use in the agency's sixyear, $500 milliondredging project slated to begin in 2006. River sediment contaminated with PCBs will be shipped to the sites by barge or rail, processed to remove the toxins, and then taken to an existing landfill outside of the Hudson Valley, again by rail or barge.

The sediment will be extracted from a portion of the river near Fort Edward, where General Electric's manufacturing plants dumped 1.3 million pounds of PCBs into the Hudson over a 30-year period prior to 1977.

A 77-acre site along River Road in Glenmont, owned by OG Real Estate, has remained on the list, beating out dozens of other potential sites along the Hudson.

"This is one of those times that being a finalist is not necessarily a good thing," said Town Supervisor Theresa Egan, following the announcement. The selection of the site would greatly affect the town's ability to boost the tax base with commercial development, she said. "It may or may not be on the tax rolls but certainly it's not going to be available for economic development."

Theresa Egan

The EPA has determined that the River Road site has sufficient usable space to construct and operate a water treatment facility, along with direct access to two active rail lines, CSX and Canadian Pacific, at the port of Albany. The land is located just south of the former Niagara Mohawk power plant, and much of the property is filled with ash, which could present foundation challenges during design, according to the EPA. The land is a 100 year-old floodplain in close proximity to a known spawning area for the shortnose sturgeon. The EPA has said the potential for affecting the sturgeon will be considered in its biological assessment of the site.

With limited drawbacks, the EPA has found the site suitable for use as a dewatering location, in part because it is situated below the Troy dam near deep water.

"One of the possible ways to transport the dewatered sludge to its final disposal site is by ocean-going barge," explained David King, director of the EPA's Hudson River field office. The water near the site is between 25 and 30 feet deep, making it one of the deepest sections of the upper Hudson, according to the EPA.

The selection comes despite plans by OG Real Estate proprietor Victor Gush of Castleton to develop a multi-million dollar commercial hub known as Beacon Harbor. The complex — which would include a marina, luxury hotel, condominiums, theater, retail and office

V'ville board OKs $1.3M budget

By MARTIN J. BANNAN:

The Voorheesville village board adopted a $1.3 million budget at its April 27 meeting. Mayor John Stevens said that the current tax rate of 66 cents per $1,000 assessed property value remains stable because sales tax revenues are expected to be higher than previously thought.

Increases in expenditures include a 3 percent raise for village employees and the purchase of a snowplow. Stevens said, adding that next year the village might propose a slight increase in taxes to have extra funds for other capital expenditures.

Aretired schoolteacher from Selkirk is the first patient to successfully undergo an operation in the Capital District that used a revolutionary robotic device which could dramatically redefine how surgery is conducted in the years ahead.

The da Vinci computer-enhanced surgical system was unveiled Friday at St. Peter's Hospital along with its first patient, 64 year-old Richard Keel.

On March 26, the da Vinci's four stainless steel rods — which are manipulated by a surgeon using a remote control — successfully removed Keel's cancerous prostate gland.

Surprisingly, the retired social studies teacher said he wasn't at all apprehensive about being the first patient to undergo surgery using da Vinci. Dr. Michael E. Moran of Capital District Urologic Surgeons performed the surgery.

"Dr. Moran told me he had done this first on one human being and two pigs, so I felt fine," said Keel, who has recovered rapidly and is considered to be cancerfree.

The machine provides greater accuracy than a human hand performing surgery. A doctor seated at a separate console uses a joystick-like device to maneuver four stainless steel rods that have tiny knives or forceps attached to the tips. The rods enter the body through incisions about the width of a pencil. A high-resolution camera attached to one of the rods gives doctors a three-dimensional view of the surgical field.

"A human being cannot get this type of precision magnitude," said Dr. Moran. "These are 8-

County Dems win big The sound of music

By KRISTEN OLBY

Democrats swept the Albany County Legislature special election April 27 in all Bethlehem districts for the first time ever.

In the 33rd Legislative District, Democratic incumbent Herbert Reilly Jr. held his seat for a second term with 709 votes, beating out Peter Potter who secured 553

In the 34th District, incumbent Jack Cunningham, who was appointed by the Legislature in January during a special holdover session, retained his seat for a full term with 793 votes. His Republican challenger Jeff Perez garnered 616 votes.

In the 35th District, Democrat Charles Dawson swept the contest with 879 votes, securing a third term. His Republican challenger Ray Parafinczuk took in 540 votes.

In the 36th District, where Republican Robin Reed had represented the district for the last 12 years, a Democrat now holds the seat.

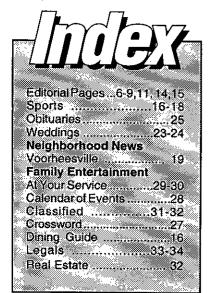

Howard Shafer secured the post with 572 votes while Republican Tony Schwartz earned 492 votes.

"This is quite a significant reversal," said Bethlehem Democratic Party Chairman Matthew Clyne, calling Shafer's win one of the toughest in the county to secure. He praised the work of all Democratic candidates and attributes the overhaul in party leadership to changing demographics. "There are more Democrats, more not enrolled (in a party) in the town now, the political landscape has changed," he said.

Bethlehem Republican Party. Chairman Tom Marcelle had a vastly different take on the election outcome and the redistricting battle that ensues.

"In effect, what they did was gerrymander the district to make sure they were advantageous to Democratic candidates," said Marcelle about the Albany Democratic machine. "Instead of having the four seats that we should have, they carved it up into

We fully anticipate running again in November of 2005 on lines that are fair to the people of Bethlehem," said Marcelle.

In the 10th and 11th Legislative Districts, which sit primarily in Albany but stretch into northern Bethlehem, Democratic incumbents also retained their seats.

Daniel McCov earned 824 seats in the 10th District 10, while challenger Herbert McLaughlin had 211 votes.

Gary Domalewicz secured a fourth term in the 11th District with 937 votes, while Republican Joseph Sullivan had 339 votes.

Four seeking RCS board of education seats

Four candidates are vying for three vacant seats on the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk board of education.

Incumbent Mona Selover is seeking a sixth term on the board. while newcomers John Semenick. James Van Valkenburg and Mike Varney are all hoping to secure a seat. The election will be held May 18 with polls open from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m.

Second threat triggers RCS High School lockdown

By KRISTEN OLBY

For the second time in just over a week, a bomb threat at the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk High School sent all four of the district's schools into lockdown mode for two hours.

School Superintendent Vicki Wright placed the high school on lockdown status around 9:35 a.m. Thursday, after the threat was discovered.

"It was scrawled on the bathroom wall," said town of Coeymans Police Chief Scott Giroux, who was uncertain as to whether the message was in a boys or girls bathroom. "It made reference to a bomb," he said, adding that the threat was not specific to a particular school building.

The uncertainty of the threat prompted the district to expand the lockdown to all four district schools. At the high school, students were moved to the gymnasium while police, firefighters and school custodians swept the facility. No one was permitted to enter or exit any of the schools.

By 11:30 a.m., police determined the threat was unfounded, and the lockdown was

"We are now working with local authorities to pursue the proper legal and disciplinary procedures against whoever may be responsible for this," said Wright. The district declined further comment.

Just eight days earlier, a senior at the high school allegedly made a threat in the hallway to "blow up the building," according to

The comment triggered a lockdown at all schools for nearly two hours.

It's a thankless job, but I wouldn't have another

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

It's an unusual mantra, not one repeated in a calming, meditative manner, but one that comes out through gritted teeth.

"I am the grown-up," I mutter to myself, "I am the grown-up, I am the grown-up."

I say it to remind myself that, contrary to the opinion my children often hold, my years of living count for something. I say it to remind myself in the tedium of the day-to-day that I am the example the kids see most, the one that teaches them so much.

The thing about being a grownup is that so much of it is tedious. Ask my kids what I do, and they'll put their hands on their hips, waggle their forefingers and imitate my most frustrated moments perfectly. "I cook, I clean, I do laundry, I take care of the house," they say, and I have to laugh that they've captured the exhausted mother part of me so perfectly.

Sometimes, when the days of constant motion that accompanies work, cleaning, cooking and bill paying yield more fatigue and boredom than accomplishment, it's easy to wish for something different.

The thing about being the growr-up is that you have to be careful what you wish for, because the thing that's different isn't always easier.

Like Christopher's recent request to go to a rock concert with a couple of friends, to see one of their favorite bands perform with a few other groups.

"You're only 13!" was my first reaction, as it occurred to me that all the big questions seem to be coming three or four years before I expect them.

"It's not till this summer," he said. "I'll be 14 then."

Oh well, that only gave me a teeny bit of pause in my thinking that the answer was still going to Still, I was willing to hear his case — perhaps it was a local group in a small venue, and a pair of earplugs would make it possible for me to accompany said, and I'll talk to Dad. My heart sank as I realized we would have "Should I not listen to you?" to be the grown-ups and say no. The venue was south of Boston, transportation and chaperoning sketchy, and the lineup of bands not commendable. I checked with another parent, whose child, I had been assured, was not only allowed to go, but was getting his ticket purchased for him. News to that parent, who was withholding judgment till he had more evidence than, what was on the Post-it note before him.

When you read parenting advice, the experts always tout saying no, holding a firm line and espousing your own values.

We parents are led to believe that our children will be grateful for our guidance — they will stay off drugs, make the honor role and revere us in our old age — if only we can remain firm.

That gratitude sure looks enjoy verbal sparring; I want the delayed in our family. The good news is, I think I'm raising the next generation's Clarence Darrow.

"But you swear," Christopher Let me hear the evidence, I said when we pointed out our making the unilateral negative objections to the language one of ruling that Christopher had the performing groups uses. feared.

As I sat properly chastised, Chris — serving as husband, defense attorney and ultimately, judge in the case of Parents v. First Rock Concert — pointed out the difference between making a living with music full of cursing and the degrading of women, and Mom spouting a few expletives when life's curve balls zing by too fast to field.

Arguments went on for a long time, and although I'd made Chris accompany me to impart the negative verdict, I left him after an hour of appeal.

The men in my family seem to

That went well," Chris said

I'm the mother, period.

"How about we skip all my logical reasoning," he had said once before, "and go right to the part where you say, 'because I'm 🕳 the parent.'

If only I were always as confident as that! Being the grown-up also means considering, reflecting, refining — and often doubting — the way things

My potty-mouth language is a prime example, and if I had it all to do again, I'd have let my kids learn their cursing on the school bus, not while I was cooking, driving, running the vacuum, replacing burned-out light bulbs or assembling many of the toys and electrical gadgets they've received so far in their lives.

So now I will be considering what permanent damage I've done to my kids by releasing my frustrations with a well-timed curse word, so that they know a too-colorful-for-their-ages range

I'll alternate between chastising myself and feeling that grown-ups should be allowed to do some things that children just aren't.

I'll try to turn to my mantra and try to impart some positive values as I mutter, "I'm the grown-up."

In addition to being Dr. No, I also need to try to impart something I believe deep in my soul, something that too often gets lost in the day-to-day of life.

This journey we're on is a good 🗻 one. For every trying moment with children, there's the one with a spontaneous hug, an unexpected shoulder rub or a grin at a shared family joke. Being the grown-up means teaching the kids to face the tough moments, 🕶 but it also means getting to rejoice in the good ones.

Those good moments can help strengthen us when the harder ones come.

The issue of rock concerts has just been broached; surely Christopher will bring it up again, and someday — probably sooner than I'd like — the answer will be

I will need to really store up the good moments, for two years behind Clarence Darrow is Cormac, already preparing his devil arguments to counter our best Daniel Webster moments.

They may be agile arguers, but let me not forget ... I am the grown-up, I am the grown-up, I am the grown-up.

For every trying moment with children, there's the one with a spontaneous hug, an unexpected shoulder rub or a grin at a shared family joke.

Foundation aims to buy escarpment land from developer

By MARY LANNON

Jeff Thomas, owner of the last 200 acres of privately owned land on the Helderberg escarpment, said he's optimistic that a deal will go through to transfer the land to preservationists.

"We're currently negotiations with the Open Space Institute, and I'm optimistic we will come to terms," Thomas said Monday.

The news comes in the wake of other good tidings for the Helderbergs this week. On Tuesday, April 27, Gov. George Pataki designated 1,800 acres of Thacher and Thompson's Lake State Parks as a Bird Conservation Area and announced the addition of 81 acres to the park.

The bright outlook for the Thomas deal follows years of negotiations between Thomas and the group, in which they were unable to come to an agreement

In the last year, Thomas floated the idea of developing his land with estate homes, drawing increased attention from the local environmental group Save the Pine Bush. The Thomas land lies in the town of Knox and the Guilderland school district. In early April, Thomas said that he was actively seeking to either sell or develop the land he has owned since 1995.

He also expressed frustration at that time that OSI could not come up with a "viable offer" for his land. The deal would be the

Being a mother is a tough job, and the pressures of modern life don't make the already daunting task any easier.

Mothers who work juggle their time to keep their family's needs fulfilled, while at the same time trying to manage a career or a job. It often means double duty since they can't simply go home at the end of the day and put their feet up and relax. Going home means changing gears to another job of providing food, clean clothes, chauffeuring and all kinds of other Editorials support for their husbands and children.

Other mothers put their careers on hold until the children are older, but this often is either impossible or difficult because of financial obligations and the difficulty of making ends meet on only one salary.

The world of the "Leave it to Beaver" lifestyle is long gone in the contemporary world. Today, TV spots remind us that eating even one meal together as a family is a good thing. What a pity we have to be reminded of that. We know it's a good thing, but all too often it's easier said than done. All family members have their own schedules, so a leisurely meal with everyone present , with lots of time for conversation, can be a hard thing to Still, most suburban families manage to raise their children and get them headed in the right direction by the time they graduate from high school.

If kids go on to college, that means another financial hurdle for both moms and dads who often refinance their house so they can make ends meet while their kids move into the adult world.

It's a rat race, but one day each year in May, we set aside a day to honor mothers for all they do for their families.

It's hard to pack into one day, but a good time to take stock of what mothers mean to all of us.

Their unconditional acceptance of their children makes them champions and heroes for life. Their willingness to put their children first is nothing short of amazing, considering what trouble kids of all ages manage to get themselves into. Mothers' sacrifices are enormous-their acts of kindness are the stuff of legend. It is only fitting they get treated like royalty on Mother's Day.

Remember mom on her special day, and make her feel special. Big presents aren't necessarily the big ticket item. She'll be happy just to know how grateful you are to be able to call her mom.

Nutrition should be No. 1 priority

By DRS. ROBERT WEISSBERG and ANN TOBIN

The writers are board-certified family physicians and graduates of the University of Arizona's Associate Fellowship in Integrative Medicine.

Lately, much of the news media's attention has focused on the importance of nutrition and physical activity in maintaining our health. Unfortunately, obesity is now a national epidemic.

In March, the Centers for Disease Control (CDC) released a report which said that we are in the grips of a preventable epidemic. The report states that the combination of poor diet and inactivity threatens to surpass smoking as the leading cause of preventable death among Amer-

According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, obesity among American adults has climbed from 23 percent in the early 1990s to 30 percent in 2004. Two-thirds of Americans are overweight, increasing the risk for heart disease, diabetes, arthritis and certain cancers.

A "Call to Action" by the first Conference on Nutrition and Health, sponsored by the University of Arizona College of Medicine's Program in Integrative Medicine and the Rosenthal Center of Columbia University and presented by Dr. Andrew Weil, states: "We believe that the population of North America is in great nutritional peril. People are consuming increasing amounts of low-quality foods. There is an epidemic of obesity and in its wake, a rising incidence of type 2 diabetes in younger and younger children. More people than ever are following extreme and fad diets that may pose long-term risks to health. The food served in schools, hospitals and senior facilities promotes obesity, chronic inflammation and accelerated development of agerelated diseases,'

Dr. Kelly Brownwell, director of the Yale Center for Eating and Weight Disorders, states that the environment we now live in is one in which unhealthy food is 'accessible nearly everywhere, nearly all the time, and is convenient, engineered to taste really good, promoted very

Point of View

He labels this a toxic environment, one that makes us sick.

heavily, and is inexpensive."

Recent national publications have, hopefully, drawn the attention of the public to the increasing importance of heart attack and stroke as causes of death and severe illness in both women and men. The presence of obesity and low activity levels greatly increases the risk of many chronic diseases.

Type 2 diabetes, often associated with obesity, further multiplies these risks. Particularly distressing is the ominous observation of the progressively younger onset of type 2 diabetes. If this trend continues, we will begin to see this generation of children suffering and dying of these diseases at a younger age than their parents' generation.

As experienced family physicians with fellowship training in integrative medicine and parents of school-age children and active members of our communities, we are extremely concerned about these developments. We assert that prevention of these health problems makes more sense than trying to fix the debilitating consequences of ignoring them.

Being proactive means beginning early to provide our children with healthy choices and good examples. A recent study of more than 3,000 children found that a significant number of infants and toddlers are regularly consuming French fries, soda and pizza, contributing to an average daily calorie intake of greater than 30 percent of what is required for their age. The same study found that up to one-third of children under 2 years old did not consume fruits and vegetables. Of those over 15 months old who did eat vegetables, French fries were the most common choice.

Schools in our country house vending machines full of highsugar soda, pseudo-juices, candy, ice cream, sweet baked goods, chips and crackers. The cafeterias are little better, serving food items that are nightly processed and high in fat, sodium, sugar and vegetables of poor quality.

Typical school programs often allow only 15 to 20 minutes for lunch, encouraging students to wolf down the food quickly, bypassing natural satiety mechanisms. Sadly, the trend at home, with ever-busier schedules for all, has been for shorter meal times and more "fast" foods.

School districts throughout the U.S. have been lured into signing lucrative contracts with large soft drink and fast food/snack corporations. Outside and inside the schools, popular fast food vendors sell huge amounts of harmful fats and sugars in the form of inexpensive ultra-super-sized "meals." At home, increasing numbers of children are spending hours in sedentary activities; many exercise less than 30 minutes per week, if at all.

We believe that these trends 🕟 must be reversed. The obesity epidemic can be addressed by increasing attention to physical, activity, eating patterns, the quality of our food supply and education about nutritional principles starting in the elementary grades. The food supplied in our schools must be of high quality and reasonable in quantity; healthy food can be delicious, convenient and affordable.

State law does mandate that public schools will not serve soda. gum and candy "from the beginning of the school day until the end of the last scheduled meal period." Unfortunately, other inappropriate high-calorie snacks of poor nutritional value are still sold in many school cafeterias and vending machines for after-lunch consumption.

We recognize that many school systems in our region have begun programs that invest in sound principles of good nutrition and physical activity. However, more can be done.

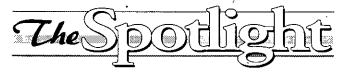

A vivid example of what is possible is found in an Appleton, Vis., school. The project, sponsored by Natural Ovens of Manitowoc, Wis., is described in the school's Web site: "Appleton > Central Alternative Charter School and Natural Ovens Bakery provide good nutrition for our students through the development and implementation of a healthy and natural breakfast, lunch and snack program."

In addition to the expected health improvements, the following benefits were observed: increased ability to concentrate and to think more clearly; fewer health complaints; increased attendance; fewer disciplinary referrals; less moodiness; and increased practice of good nutrition outside school. Call 800-558-3535 or visit http:// www.aasd.k12.wi.us/aca/ phys%20health.htm information.

We need to make our voices heard in support of better nutrition for all Americans. Attention to improving the quality of the food offered to our children at home and at school, and fighting the factors that promote childhood (and adult) obesity is critical. Become an advocate for our children by demanding high quality food and increased physical education in our schools.

Contact your local schools and school boards, PTAs and state legislators, but don't stop there. Write to sports heroes, pop stars and actors that sponsor these foods, and to companies that allow their cartoon characters to promote unhealthy foods. Get angry about super-sizing meals that encourage the consumer to eat more for just a few more cents. Demand that calorie counts and nutrition facts be readily available at all restaurants. Educate your children about the strategy behind food advertising.

Most importantly, teach your children about healthy lifestyle choices, and set an example yourself.

The recent front page article by Kristen Olby about my entry in a contest for a room make-over has resulted in numerous inquiries about the results.

I'd like to let everyone know that I was not the lucky winner and extend my thanks to the many people who voted for me and offered their encouragement and support.

The article also mentioned that my husband, Col. Patrick Caulfield, is currently serving in southern Iraq, caring for soldiers at a medical clinic.

He called on April 25 and was doing fine. His mailing address is; Col. P. Caufield, 160th MP BN, APO AE 09375.

He'd be delighted to pass along any cards or letters to other soldiers, if local residents wish to correspond with some our servicemen and women he encounters daily.

Wanted: New Scotland residents' opinions on future of town

We will be shown slides of which ones we prefer and note why we prefer them.

Do we want more buildings like Stonewell Plaza? Do we prefer architecture like the Saab dealership? Do we want businesses to look like the rehabbed house of the equipment rental place? Do we want a tree-lined road? Do we want parking lots to line the roads? Do we want

When I was approached to volunteer to be a member of-RPAC, I decided to meet and talk cance and existing community or with people about the corrierence survey, open to all town dor because I live on 85A and what happens there directly during this past year, has been

On the other hand, I realize that we have to balance maintaining the rural quality and open space that townspeople have repeatedly said they value, with different scenes and vote on the need to provide the town with additional commercial tax revenue, and with the rights of land-

I think that the best way to accomplish these seemingly contradictory goals is with aesthetic guidelines, as preferred by town residents and approved by the town board, that are part of the town's written regulations.

> I believe the board, especially sensitive to residents who have. expressed concern about development on the corridor. The board is advising potential developers about hamlet-style architecture and landscaping.

> Why is there a need for aesthetic guidelines? Establishing aesthetic guidelines gives the community an opportunity to more definitively define the future of the corridor, since 85, especially, does not have a consistent character and style, and if development comes to 85A, the town could help guide a commercial developer to maintain a sense of open space.

cheaper for developers to come up with plans that they know the town would likely approve, and not have to go back to the drawing board several times before they "get it right."

Establishing aesthetic guidelines means the town would have the characteristics it wants in black and white and available for public inspection, and not depend on the perspective of board members, no matter how well intentioned, while at the same time, allow the town to periodically review those guidelines and amend them if the town chooses to do so.

Spring into Smart Energy Use!

Albany, NY-Springtime brings the promise of starting anew with all of our earth-friendly resolutions. Whether it's starting a recycling program at home or work, taking time to plant a tree, or simply pledging to turn off the water while brushing your teeth, so often the responsibilities we have in our daily lives overshadow our plans to make a difference. As we reflect on Earth Day 2004, consider these simple steps you can take to express your environmental commitment throughout the year:

Practice good housekeeping.

When it's time to get rid of your old room air conditioner (RAC)—give it a proper goodbye. Old RACs waste energy and money! Certain components must be properly dismantled and recycled to avoid burdening landfills and releasing dangerous chemicals into the environment. To learn more about opportunities to recycle in your area, visit www.GetEnergySmart.org.

Look for the ENERGY STAR® label and make it an energy smart summer. After you have recycled your old, inefficient air conditioner, replace it with an ENERGY STAR model. ENERGY STAR products use superior technology, requiring less energy and less money to operate. Replacing a 15-year-old RAC with a new ENERGY STAR model could save you up to $56 a year on your electric bill.

Protect your investment.

Replace filters on your RAC or central air conditioner following your manufacturers guidelines. Save yourself the cost and inconvenience of having your air conditioner fail during summer's hottest days. Be sure to close blinds or shades to keep out the heat during the hottest part of the summer day, and use a programmable thermostat to cool the house on your schedule.

AIR CONDITIONING 101

There are many different room air conditioner (RAC) and central air conditioner (CAC) models. But there's one thing they should do: remove heat and humidity from the air. Naturally, getting the right size air conditioner is crucial. The appropriate size unit will operate more efficiently than a unit that's too large and cycles on and off too often. To find the right RAC for your home, visit www.GetEnergySmart.org or call 1-877-NY-SMART.

Matters of Opinion

Grants will help expand Park director Public needs answers town senior programs

Editor, The Spotlight:

Thanks to generous grants from the Albany County Enhanced Senior Services Fund and the Community Foundation for the Capital Region's Community Health Care Fund, and several donations and bequests received during the past year, Bethlehem Senior Projects has replaced one of its three wheelchair-accessible vehicles and will soon implement several new programs with a focus on better nutrition, socialization and accessibility for the town's older residents.

Bethlehem Senior Projects is a community-based nonprofit corporation, which partners with Bethlehem's municipal senior services department.

Senior Projects president Charles Tobin III said the grants will provide wonderful opportunities for increased socialization and necessary transportation for older residents of the town.

Included in the plans for the new vehicle are new lunch and social program offerings, increased transportation availability for congregate meal programs, seasonal weekly shopping at Delmar's farmers' markets and additional capabilities for wheelchair-bound seniors to grocery

The Bethlehem Senior Transportation Service is one of many programs partnered between Bethlehem Senior Projects and

Other shared programs include funding for the Bethlehem Food Pantry, informational displays and the town's monthly health-related screenings.

There are also wellness classes, programs co-sponsored with the Bethlehem library, information and referral services and the purchase of equipment benefitting the elderly.

For information about programs and services, call the town hall at 439-4955, ext. 168.

says thanks for youth help

Editor, The Spotlight:

The Bethlehem Parks & Recreation Department would like to thank three groups that celebrated Earth Day and/or Arbor Day by completing projects to help beautify our parks.

A Bethlehem Cub Scout pack, led by Roseanne Garry, planted 25 new trees in Elm Avenue Park on Thursday, April 22. These trees will beautify our park for years to come.

The youth group at First Assembly of God Church spent Saturday, April 24, picking up trash and debris from North Bethlehem Park. Thanks to Gwen Mitchell for organizing this Finally, Gayle Rundell of the Glenmont Job Corps Center organized 30 energetic youth to clean up Henry Hudson Park on April 29. They celebrated their accomplishment with a cookout following their work.

Many thanks to these youth for keeping the spirit of volunteerism and community pride alive in Bethlehem!

rather than war in Iraq

Editor, The Spotlight:

In his April 21 letter, Mr. Joseph Cardamone claims anti-war protestors have an "irrational agenda" for the United States' foreign policy. In my opinion, it is our president and his supporters who have the "irrational agenda."

In the letter, Mr. Cardamone states, "Iraq is as good a target in the war on terrorism as any." Apparently, he has bought completely into President Bush and his spin doctors' efforts to convince the people of the United States that Saddam Hussein's regime and the unbelievable tragedy on 9/11 are one and the

After Sept. 11, President Bush was able to convince some of our citizens (not all of us) that Saddam Hussein had weapons of mass destruction and was getting ready to attack us.

Using our fear and shock over the 9/11 tragedy, he led us into a war that, if anything, is creating a new hotbed for terrorist extremists.

In the letter, Mr. Cardamone states that terrorists have an "irrational hatred" of us. By killing innocent Iraqi women and children, are we not creating a new generation to hate us?

This war on Iraq has very little (maybe nothing) to do with terror. It is a war for oil. In my opinion, we could have better spent the money being used for this war on research into alternative energy sources. However, President Bush and his supporters in the oil business would not benefit financially from

If we are so determined to fight \tag{7} terror, why aren't we spending our energy and resources trying to capture the man who supposedly organized the 9/11 attacks, Osama bin Laden? By the way, the Bush family and the bin Ladens have been doing business together for more than 25 years.

That is probably why on Sept. 12, 2001, when no air travel was allowed anywhere in the United States, 24 members of bin Laden's extended family were flown from the U.S. to Europe, with the assistance of our government. How about looking into the fact . that 15 of the 19 people identified in connection with 9/11 were from Saudi Arabia? No, not Iraq.

There are so many questions, Mr. Cardamone. I think we need some answers - not a war.

Honor motherhood by giving up dairy

Editor, The Spotlight:

This Sunday is Mother's Day, when we celebrate the cherished Unfortunately, dairy cows, recognized widely as the symbol opportunity to nurture their own

The dairy industry impregnates cows artificially each year to boost milk production. The newborn calves are torn from their mothers and chained by the neck for life in tiny wood crates, covered with their excrement. They are denied natural food and water, bedding, movement, fresh air, sunshine, and mother's milk and love. They suffer from chronic anemia, diarrhea and respiratory disorders.

The product of this misery is just as sickening. The calves are kept alive with antibiotics that ieopardize consumers' defenses against deadly infectious diseases. They receive hazardous hormones to boost their growth.

Their flesh is laced with saturated fat and cholesterol, which have been linked conclusively with chronic diseases that each year kill 1.3 million Americans.

The 70 percent drop in U.S. bond between mother and child. veal consumption shows consumers' revulsion at these abuses, and many institutions of motherhood, are denied the have stopped serving veal. The veal crate has been banned by the European Union. Yet the U.S. dairy and veal industries have resisted all efforts at similar reforms here.

> This Sunday and every day thereafter, we should honor motherhood by dropping veal, milk and other dairy products from our diet.

Candidate is thankful for support

Editor, The Spotlight:

I would like to thank everyone who supported my candidacy for a seat on the county Legislature.

While I wish I could have come out on the winning end, I met too many really wonderful people to think of this as a loss.

I am also very pleased that this race was run without the negative campaigning that can mar an election. Thanks to a spirited but fair campaign, a number of important issues were raised, including the growing tax burden on Bethlehem residents and the extent to which the county can play a role in improving our quality of life.

And I would like to offer my heartiest congratulations to Jack Cunningham and wish him well in his service to the people of Bethlehem.

I look forward to seeing around town the many friends I made during this campaign.

Second-half spurt propels Lady Eagles to victory

By ROB JONAS

The Bethlehem girls lacrosse team ended Guilderland's hopes of an upset with a dominating second-half performance.

The Lady Eagles scored four goals in the first 4:04 of the second half and controlled the ball for much of the remaining time in a 16-6 Suburban Council victory over the Lady Dutch last Friday in Delmar.

"I just made a couple of (halftime) adjustments," Bethlehem coach John Battaglino said. "We weren't shooting the ball well (in the first half), and it seemed that when we missed, they'd get the rebound, go down field and score."

goal late in the first half when Bethlehem (7-0 league, 8-0 overall) started taking over. Kelly Hughes rebounded her own missed shot and scored to put the Lady Eagles ahead 6-4. Then, Emma Strachman scored on a fast break 18 seconds later to give Bethlehem a three-goal cushion.

The Lady Dutch had a chance to open the second half with a goal, but Bethlehem's Emily Szelest stopped Kayla Best's breakway shot. Less than two minutes later, Strachman scored on a tough-angle shot to give the Lady Eagles an 8-4 lead.

Strachman's goal opened the floodgates. Hughes scored off a pass from Katie Rowan 24 seconds later, and Halley Quillinan tallied twice in the next two Guilderland was within one minutes to give Bethlehem an 11-4 advantage.

After that surge, the Lady Eagles slowed things down with more deliberate passing and tacked on five goals before Best scored with 1:16 left to end Bethlehem's 11-0 run.

Quillinan had five goals and an assist, while Strachman contributed four goals and two assists for the Lady Eagles, who are currently the No. 1 ranked team in New York. Rowan chipped in three goals and three assists, and Hughes added a hat trick.

"She's been the x-factor lately," Battaglino said of Hughes. "She's been scoring more consistently lately. If she plays controlled, she's effective.'

Best recorded a hat trick, and Kathryn Marcantonio added two goals for Guilderland, which lost its third league game.

Bethlehem's Katie Rowan moves around a Guilderland defender during last Friday's Suburban Council game. Rob Jonas ovice RV owners and snowbirds," it was time embark with other seniors n route south to escape the current brutal Northeast vinter. Our destination was a KOA Kampground at Titusville on Florida's west coast. ...

However, several bstacles delayed our departure: nasty weather and my inability to secure a scooter to a trailer hitched to our new motor home. The temperature was below zero. snow was piled high on either side of our driveway and my fingers became numb as I struggled to secure scooter to trailer.

It was Tuesday. Jan: 20. sometime before noon, as we prepared to leave on our first trek south to the "Sunshine State." Aside from coping with the biting cold, I was frustrated by attempting to manage the tangle of straps. Fortunately, a motorcycleowning neighbor drove by, saw my plight and under his direction, I completed the task.

Thanks to him, Operation Florida could now begin. My wife, Diane, would serve as navigator for the entire jaunt.

I was totally inexperienced at driving a 23-foot motor home, let alone one hauling a trailer. Initially somewhat apprehensive, a driver is on a steep learning curve. There are several important maneuvers to learn. You need to make wide turns, and constantly use the mirrors. On several occasions, my turning ability was lacking, causing a pair of the double rear tires to assault a curb.

Backing up with a trailer in tow was another challenge I encountered. If you turn the steering wheel clockwise, the trailer goes the opposite direction. Before this practice became routine, I wasted time trying to direct the trailer out of small areas. Fortunately, on the route south, the need to back up was minimal.

When pulling a trailer and passing a slower vehicle, it's important to be sure your trailer is beyond the other vehicle before you re-enter the slower lane. I was often unsure whether the trailer was still attached because the mirror was unable to reflect anything directly behind the vehicle. On major highways, with the sun shining, I could see part of the trailer's shadow in the mirror, restoring my confidence that it still remained with us.

Our baptism driving the RV started on the Thruway after entering Exit 23. It was smooth sailing until we missed the exit (Palisades Parkway leading to the New Jersey Turnpike) to bypass New York City. Another error was failing to completely fill the 55-gallon gas tank in Delmar on the premise that the fuel was cheaper traveling south. An expensive mistake! Our assumption may have been true had we sufficient fuel to pursue options. However, as the fuel needle dipped toward empty, my anxiety level climbed. I exited at Route 295 and pulled into a gas station in elegant Westchester County. After filling the tank and paying for the gas, I imagined myself applying for welfare and food stamps.

The other blunder (missing the exit to New Jersey) began a whole series of additional nightmares: entering the Bronx with its heavy traffic, riding on narrow highways with concrete barriers only a few feet to my right, frequent gridlock as we approached the entrance to the George Washington Bridge and occasionally needing to change lanes due to merging and exiting.

Conjure this scenario: Edgy, throat dry, you are driving on a congested twolane highway, sandwiched between monster tractortrailers behind and in front, frequent stops and then slowly accelerating as assorted vehicles whiz by. My stress mingled with feelings of awe as we viewed the Big Apple's spectacular skyline. After finally reaching the Jersey Turnpike, the drive to suburban Baltimore was uneventful, and we stayed at a motel for reasons of convenience. On the following day, we visited a friend at a nursing home in Fairfax, Va.

Subsequently, our stops included KOA camps in Rocky Mount, N.C., South Point, S.C., and we arrived at Titusville, our home for the next six weeks. Thanks to help from other friendly campers, we made the correct connections for sewage, electric and water. Now settled, our agenda is rejoicing in the weather and behaving like tourists.

As retirees, we seniors have the rare opportunity (if health and resources permit) to pursue new experiences. Driving a motor home has been challenging and fraught with mistakes, but it will serve as a launching pad for future adventures.

For an amateur "snowbird," Florida is a blend of new and interesting sights and people. For six weeks, the memories of the Capital District's brutal temperatures were temporarily forgotten as we rejoiced in the 60-degree weather.

After our three-day driveto the Sunshine State, we settled in at a small KOA camp in Titusville, a one-hour drive from Disney World in Orlando.

In a sense, the camp was an enclave, primarily comprised of seniors keeping house in a variety of dwellings ranging from motor homes, fifth wheels (RVs that are towed), and permanently fixed RVs surrounded by flowers and tiny picket fences. The camp contained a substantial number of New Yorkers

(some for brief stays; others for a one-night stop-over while en route elsewhere) who, like us, were enthusiastic about their decision to escape winter's savage weather in the northern part of the country.

Frequently on our travels. we meet fascinating individuals who add a wonderful bonus to the total experience. Florida was no exception. We became friendly with our neighbor, a former astronaut. Every Monday, he would fly to Houston to work the entire week instructing and training new candidates in the techniques of space flight, returning for the weekend. On several occasions, this particular neighbor departed from his small trailer wearing his flight suit decorated front and back with patches and

In response to the adornments, I uttered a loud, "Wow!," questioning him on the significance of particular piece. During his prehis preinstructing years with NASA, he served as a shuttle crew member three times and traveled to the space station.

On one occasion, I posed a question that triggered a lengthy, complicated scientific response, beyond my ability to understand. It sounded impressive so I merely nodded, feigning comprehension.

Relying on a scooter for transportation was a boon, enabling us to venture beyond the camp without disconnecting the RV's life supports.

With Diane behind me as passenger, both resembling extraterrestrials with our helmets, we made many forays to shop, visit friends and check out the attractions. I cite one in particular which is a "must see" for visitors — the Merritt Island Wildlife Refuge Center. There, we boarded a van for a free three-hour tour on narrow dirt roads where we observed armadillos, alligators and 16 different species of birds. An official government brochure claims that 316 species of fowl have been observed either migrating or wintering there. Ignorant in general about birds, it was an educational treat to see them feeding, roosting and flying.

Seniors, who want to spend some of their summer and early fall days out and about in the sun, can benefit from following these recommendations, according to one of the nation's most respected dermatologists, 81vear-old Dr. Jerome Litt, author and frequent television talk show guest.

"I tell people to slip, slap and slop: Slip on a shirt, slap on a hat and slop on some sunscreen," Litt said. "Commercial sunscreens, with a sun-protection factor (SPF)

That's good news for this area's active seniors.

"So many of the elderly love to be outdoors. walking. gardening, golfing and fishing," said Susan Walter, owner of the Home Instead Senior Care office in Albany.

Our caregivers are with elderly clients day in and day out. By educating our clients and their families about the importance of protecting themselves from the sun, we help ensure that seniors can continue to do what they've always loved to do outside,' said Walter, whose office provides non-medical home care and companionship to this area's seniors.

Growing evidence through the years has linked the sun to dangers such as skin cancer, particularly for the elderly. According to the American Cancer Society, one risk factor for skin cancer — actinic keratoses (AKs) — occurs most often in those who are middle-aged or older with light skin who have been exposed to too much sun. Small, scaly patches on the face, ears, backs of the hands and arms characterize AKs.

The April 2003 "Archives of Dermatology" study found that survey participants who used sunscreen daily — even when they weren't planning to be outside for extended periods — had developed 24 percent fewer AKs than those people who used sunscreen at their own discretion.

"This survey implies that even a quick trip, in and out of a vehicle, to places like the senior center or grocery

"Many people who take certain medications develop itchy rashes when exposed to the sun," Litt said. "These are known as photosensitive reactions and are common after taking sulfa drugs, such as many high-blood pressure and oral antibiotic medications, in particular."

Seniors taking these medications should be particularly diligent about use of sunscreen, he said.

But medications aren't the only issues. Characteristics of aging skin make it more susceptible to the sun.

In his book, Your Skin from A to Z (Barricade Books, 2002), Litt explains the changes that aging causes in the skin's epidermis, which often lead to problems in the sun. For instance, an overall thinning of the epidermis because of reduced hormone levels results in the thin, shiny appearances of aged skin that is exposed to the sun. Also, aging brings about a de-

"This results in the inability to tan as deeply or as evenly as in earlier years," Litt said.

"The statistics about skin cancer paint a sobering picture," Walter said. "According to the American Cancer Society, more than one million Americans will discover skin cancers this year. Another 54,200 will get melanoma, the most deadly skin cancer. Thanks to advanced research and awareness, seniors can continue to play an active role outdoors, even on the brightest, sunniest days."

Protect seniors from the heat and the sun

If you're a senior or family caregiver to an elderly individual, the following are tips from the Environmental Protection Agency and Home Instead Senior Care — to help avoid skin problems and dehydration from the sun:

- Whenever possible, seek shade.
- Minimize sun exposure at Standard Time (10 a.m. to 4 p.m.)
- Use a broad-spectrum sunscreen with SPF 15 or higher on exposed areas.
- Re-apply sunscreen every two hours, especially after swimming or perspiring. • Wear a wide-brimmed

- hat and clothing that covers your body.
- · Wear lightweight, lightcolored clothing.
- Wear UV-protective sunglasses.
 - Drink plenty of fluids.
- Check the UV index daily.

The Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) and National Weather Service (NWS) provide a UV Index - a daily forecast of the expected intensity of ultraviolet (UV) radiation from the sun. Overexposure to the sun's ultraviolet radiation can cause immediate damage, such as sunburn, and longterm problems, such as skin cancer and cataracts. You can log in your ZIP code and get the current UV rating for your area, along with an explanation of what it means. For information, log on to www.epa.gov/sunwise/ uvindex.html.

Check out the American Academy of Dermatology Web site at www.aad.org for information about skin cancer screening, or visit the American Cancer Society Web site at www.cancer.org (or call 1-800-227-2345) to learn more about skin cancer.

However, most Americans are caught somewhere in the middle. Recent legislation has made it more difficult to transfer assets to other family members of trusts in order to qualify for Medicaid. And, with care in the Capital Region averaging $8,000 to $9,000 a month, you could wipe out your retirement savings in just a few short years if you have to pay for everything out of your own pocket, which — ironically would leave you dependent on public assistance.

Playing the insurance card

That's why most financial professionals recommend long-term care insurance for individuals who are nearing retirement and who have accumulated substantial retirement savings. Long-term care insurance is an insurance policy designed to cover a lengthy stay in a nursing home or to provide home health care service if you don't need the level of medical attention a hospital environment provides. Because premiums are based on age, health and the type of coverage you choose, it's a good idea to purchase long-term care insurance while you're in your 50s or early 60s. But don't wait too long. Premiums rise considerably after age 62, and health problems could make you ineligible.

Purchasing long-term care insurance can be daunting. The terminology can be tricky, and the choices can be confusing. You need to weigh key variables as well as optional features in terms of your own needs, your general health and your financial resources.

For New York state residents, the first decision is between a New York State Partnership policy, which is guaranteed to protect financial assets, without your having to resort to transferring them, and a standard long-term care policy. This decision is predicated on your projected retirement income level and sources, whether you anticipate being a permanent resident in New York or relocating, and your own personal feelings about Medicaid, which some regard as another form of public assistance, or welfare.

Once this decision is made, you can focus on choosing:

A daily benefit amount.

Typically between $150 and $250 per dav. In the Capital Region, costs for a semiprivate room average $447 daily, whereas in many retirement destination states, costs average around $150 daily.

- A benefit period. Typically expressed in number of years, ranging from two to lifetime. According to the Long-Term Care Insurance National Advisory Council, the average nursing home stay is two and a half years to three years.
- A deductible. The number of days the policy holder has to pay for themselves, typically 20 to 50, before the insurance kicks in. This is akin to the deductible in your homeowner's policy.
 - Inflation protection. This

Mothers and daughters: Repairing relationships or many little girls, Mother's Day was a time to pick flowers, make a handmade card, and hand-deliver them with hugs and kisses. But as these girls mature into independent women, sweet, unconditional feelings of love can change, possibly leading to bittersweet relationships between a mother and a daughter.

Even celebrities such as Jennifer Aniston, Drew Barrymore, and Meg Ryan have had well-publicized, toxic relationships with their mothers for a variety of reasons beyond their fame. And when Mother's Day arrives each year, how do estranged mothers and daughters handle that day? Is it too late for them to heal a broken relationship as adults?

"Past literature shows that the mother-daughter relationship is considered the most significant of all intergenerational relationships," says Dr. Mudita Rastogi, associate professor of psychology at Argosy University/Chicago and a licensed marriage and family therapist.

"Estrangement between a mother and a daughter is a combination of individual, familial, and societal factors," says Dr. Rastogi. "And the reasons why mothers and daughters become estranged can be varied and complex."

For example, the mother's generation may have included social aspects such as:

economic depression, nuclear families, early marriage, and basic education. However, as society changes and evolves, the daughter may grow up in a completely different culture — in a robust economy, varied family structures, delayed marriage, immediate focus on a career, and higher education.

According to research conducted by Dr. Rastogi, involving more than 150 women ages 25 to 35, significant variations exist between ethnic groups in their mother-daughter relationship. Euro-American women want to do fun activities with their mothers. but also want to maintain certain boundaries. Asian-Indian and African-American women generally turn to their mothers for support. wisdom and advice. Mexican American women want to be dutiful daughters and help their mothers.

"Even though these ethnic groups varied somewhat in terms of relationships, all of the women in the study wished for the same level of connectedness with their mothers," says Dr. Rastogi. "Almost all of the women reported that they wanted respect and trust in their relationship with their mothers."

According to Dr. Karen Eriksen, department head of counseling psychology at Argosy University/Orange County, some societal conditions lay the groundwork for the development of mother-daughter conflict. For instance, society expects women to be good mothers; if they fail, they are considered "bad women."

"Mothers, rather than fathers, are held responsible for good parenting," says Dr. Eriksen. "In some instances, women haven't been wellprepared for these parenting responsibilities."

Other pressures emerge for single mothers left alone to raise their daughters. Mother-daughter relationships may suffer when the single mothers begin seriously dating and try to find a way for a new partner to enter the family system. The daughter may experience a sense of betrayal, and may worry that she is losing her mother to someone else.

"Resolution of these struggles requires the efforts of both mothers and daughters," says Dr. Eriksen. "Daughters always need their mothers to be parents. They need their mothers to take some of the steps in mending the relationship.

"Mothers, on the other hand, need great understanding and forgiveness from their daughters given the inequities in some of society's expectations."

Both mothers and daughters could use Mother's Day as an opportunity to embark on a journey toward a more fulfilling relationship, realizing that as they navigate toward this goal, they may veer off course.

As complex as mother-daughter relationships can be, working on existing problems is not out of reach. Below are more tips that mothers and daughters can use to start the healing process and improve their relationship:

• For minor conflicts, daughters should try to understand the life circumstances, challenges and choices that were made available to their mothers.

- Start mother-daughter traditions it's never too late to begin new ones and make a promise to keep the traditions alive every year (why not every Mother's Day). Traditions can include simple activities such as long walks, dinner at a favorite restaurant, or updating family photo albums.
- Join a women's group or look into family therapy together to help resolve serious long-standing problems.
- Realize that all relationships have downsides.
 Mother and daughter should focus on the positive aspects of their relationship and invest time and energy in it.
- Mothers and daughters should recognize that all choices can come with negative and positive results. Regardless of social or ethnic backgrounds, pay attention to the intentions behind the choices.

Daughters of Sarah Senior Community is a beneficiary agency of The United lewish Federation of Northeastern NY Older Americans enjoy: more lifestyle options eing able to live independently. It's one of the keys to living a long and healthy life. With Americans living longer and a generation of aging baby boomers to come, there are now more options than ever in senior housing.

For many, that means hanging up the worries and burdens of home ownership and property maintenance to enjoy a more carefree lifestyle in their retirement years.

Independent living

While many older adults have traditionally lived in senior communities in southern states like Florida, retirement living communities have only begun to spring up here in the Northeast in recent decades. Retirement living not only offers another independent living option for seniors, but a whole new lifestyle that frees them to truly enjoy their golden years.

Studies show that one of the most significant factors in determining quality of life, especially as we age, is environment. This includes concerns about safety. finances, services, transportation and socialization. Research shows that all of these things can have a great impact on our health. Furthermore, seniors who live with a partner or family or have a strong social network are much more likely to be positive in their approach to life than those who live alone and isolated. Indepen-retirement living offers a comfortable, safe and secure environment where seniors can put worries behind them — no more mowing the lawn, shoveling snow, or fixing leaky faucets. Retirement living leaves seniors more time to pursue their interests and enjoy the things that they really want to do, such as travel or other activities.

The Eddy not-for-profit network of services, with more than 18 years of experience in premier retirement living communities, sponsors five retirement community campuses — Beverwyck in Slingerlands; Glen Eddy in Niskayuna; Beechwood in Troy; The Glen at Hiland Meadows (joint venture with The Glens Falls Home) in Queensbury; and Hawthorne Ridge (in development) in East Greenbush.

Assistive living As the needs of independent seniors change, there is another housing option for older adults called assistive living. One of the fastest growing types of senior housing in the country, assistive living provides assistance with the activities of daily living, such as dressing, cleaning and bathing, which can become more difficult as we age. Assistive living provides a more appropriate level of care and bridges the gap between older adults who are still independent and those who require 24-hour skilled nursing home care.

> Most assistive living residences offer meals, customized wellness programs, care through a licensed nursing staff, medication management and regular health and wellness assessments. Services include 24hour security, an emergency call system, scheduled transportation, housekeeping and laundry. There is also a wide range of social, cultural, educational and recreational activities to help seniors stay active and

To care for seniors as their health needs change. The Eddy also offers The Terrace assistive living residences, located on the same campus as its independent retirement communities — The Terrace at Beverwyck, The Terrace at Glen Eddy and The Terrace at The Glen. The Eddy recently opened The Terrace at Eddy Memorial, which is as its Beechwood retirement community in Troy. Assistive living apartments are also planned at Hawthorne Ridge, the East Greenbush campus currently in development.

For information about independent retirement living or assistive living options in the greater Capital Region, call Donna Baker, Eddy Retirement Living, at 451-2103.

Located on 80 tranquil acres in Slingerlands, life at Beverwyck offers the comforts and privacy of home — without the responsibilities of home ownership. Comfortable apartments provide relaxed living and the campus is surrounded by wooded areas that provide trails for walking and enjoying nature — just minutes from shopping and entertainment.

Seniors can cultivate a gardner's green thumb aglish garden designer Gertrude Jekyll wrote, "The love of gardening is a seed once sown never dies."

That first delicious spring day is a temptress, luring all avid gardeners out of their winter doldrums and calling them out to play. It's the smell of fresh soil and those little green sprouts popping up everywhere that makes gardeners come back for more each spring.

With eyes bright, a spring to their step and trowel in hand, they head out for a weekend of joy in the dirt. By Monday morning the stiffness sets in, aches and pains in long forgotten muscles remind them that they are not as fit as they used to be.

As the baby boomer generation grows into their middle years, they have the recreational time, income and desire to embrace gardening as one of the fastest growing hobbies in North America. At the same time, they are starting to experience arthritis, carpal tunnel, backaches and other infirmities that come with aging.

Horticulturalist, Karen York, author of The Holistic, Garden, Crecting Spaces for Health and Healing recognizes the emptional and healing aspects of gardening, as an escape from day-to-day stress, coping with depression, dealing with grief.

She also cites the physical benefits, "Even relatively light work such as weeding. trimming or raking burns about 300 calories an hour. Digging, hauling mulch and heavier work not only burns calories but also improves muscle tone and bone strength."

Garden Forever is a Web site that focuses on the joys and therapeutic advantages of gardening and encourages the fulfillment of the desire to garden forever. The aim is to garden smarter so people can garden longer.

Garden tool manufacturers are finally starting to recognize the needs of middle aged gardening enthusiasts. Materials such as fiberglass added to nylon, create tools that are extremely strong but also deceptively light, making them particularly useful to those with limited arm and > hand strength. Kneepads with gel inside make a soft cushion around knees that are wearing down over the years.

Beverley Mitchell, owner of Gardenscape Tools, and a card carrying member of the baby boomer generation. found some of the tasks involved in gardening, including kneeling, bending and lifting were getting more and more difficult to do. In the late '90s she started lcoking for ergonomic tools at the horticulture trade shows she attends each year to source out new products. The retailer now offers an extensive line of gardening products called "enabling tcols."

Companies approach Gardenscape Tools with new inventions that help make gardening easier. Recently the Louisville Slugger company sent a sample pair of new gardening gloves. Designed by a renowned hand surgeon, the gloves have anatomic relief pads to help reduce vibration, calluses, blisters, and hand fatigue.

Mitchell, who had injured Ler wrist in the spring, wore the gloves all last summer in her own garden and loved the comfort, support and fit. She decided to put the Bionic Garden Gloves on the cover of Gardenscape's 2004 catalogue.

Horticulturalists, therapists, manufacturers, and retailers are working together to produce information, resources and tools to allow gardeners to continue doing what they love to do — garden. If you have limited strength, trouble getting around the garden or need to pace yourself, try some of these tips to make the work easier.

- Plants Choose plants carefully to eliminate work. Use easy-tocare-for perennials that don't need constant division or watering; shrubs for borders rather than hedges that need shaping and trimming; vines that grow up and eliminate the need to garden on the ground; ground cover perennials to replace high maintenance lawns.
- Planters Garden in raised beds and containers that require less bending and kneeling and can be maintained from a sitting or standing position. Hanging baskets require little weeding and maintenance but use a pulley system to make the daily watering easier.
- Exercise Stretch before you start and don't overdo any particular activity. Try to do a variety of tasks each time rather than a whole day of one activity that is particularly hard on underused muscles.
- Tools Look for lightweight tools that have ergonomic grips to ease hand and arm fatigue. If knees and back are problems, choose a tool with a telescoping handle so that the tool does the reaching for you. Try pruners with rotating handles that reduce stress and strain on the hand and provide more cutting power with less effort.

 Protective devises — Use braces for wrists and back and pads for sore knees. Protect hands by wearing gloves and adding foam padding to the handles of tools.

 Plan ahead — Put tools, labels, seeds, etc. in a bucket to avoid running back and forth to the tool shed. Have a hose bid installed half way down the garden so you don't have to carry the hose out each time. Place benches and resting spots strategically throughout the garden. They allow you the time to pause, rest and enjoy the rewards of your work.

• Use nature — Provide student to do the heavy digging and lifting. It will save you for the less physical jobs, will help out a young person and maybe even start + that seed of gardening flourishing in the next generation.

'Gentle Waves' technology yields younger looking skin

Stasior and George O Stasior, the area's leading eve surgeons, have acquired the latest technology for facial rejuvenation, an LED (Light Emitting Diode) system called GentleWaves

LED technology was originally developed by scientists at NASA to accelerate wound healing, and has been developed by GentleWaves to use an frequency that penetrates to the dermis to stimulate the mitochondria in the fibroblast cells where collagen and elastin are produced.

Drs. Orkan George Similar to the LED light that is in car dashboards outdoor television screens and traffic lights, the very low frequency light (similar to a 20 watt bulb) is perfect for increasing energy inside of the body's cells. Unlike laser and other treatments, this procedure is quick, completely painless, non-surgical, creates no redness or side-effects yet, over a few months. biologically creates the effect of younger skin.

Currently there are less than 90 GentleWaves LED systems in the country, limited to select medical offices.

Further technology by the company is anno FDA approved blue light panel for acne reduction, and a red light panel for hair rejuvenation and additional technology is being studied to combat macular regeneration.

The Drs. Stasior feature 🗻 the only GentleWaves LED system available in the entire Capital Region?

For information, call Stasior & Stasior at 220-1400. Their office is at 8 Wade Road in Latham.

Providing care for an aging parent he toughest question any child will ever face is how to best care for their aging parents. Many adult children believe that their love will see them through. But what do you do when love is not enough?

Often, care decisions must be made quickly, usually after a life-threatening experience. But caregivers also find themselves stressed out and in the position of having to make decisions after months and years of athome care when they accept that, finally, they need help.

"For most elders receiving care, the primary caregiver is a spouse, with the nearest daughter being the second most likely primary caregiver," says Lynne Horne-Moyer, an associate professor in the Georgia School of Professional Psychology at Argosy University/Atlanta. "Elders with only sons are typically cared for by daughters-in-law."

Also, many women have responsibilities of caring for children and elderly relatives at the same time, which can be doubly stressful adds

Horne-Moyer. And, while there is usually a primary caregiver, the entire family is often involved in making decisions and providing care of all kinds including:

- Overseeing finances
- Providing socialization opportunities and moral support
 - Providing transportation
- Coordinating medical
- Providing housekeeping or home maintenance
- Providing activities of daily living.

When do children know it's time to make the leap to a nursing home or an assisted is emotionally and physically care facility?

Horne-Moyer, a clinical psychologist, says, "In many families this decision is an agonizing one. Most caregivers try to keep their elderly parents at home until safety issues are glaring right back at them."

She underscores the importance of family involvement and offers these tips for making the move:

- Investigate potential facilities as much as possible, and work with staff to make sure the elder's treatment matches their needs.
- Frequent visits are helpful, even if the elder appears not to respond to or recognize family members. The feeling of familiarity is related to well being.
- Family members can often be rewarded by an occasional "good day" when there is more recognition from the parent.

• Try to be matter-of-fact about the change and deal with guilt with others.

 Home visits may or may not be appropriate, depending on the ability to adjust to leaving and returning to the care facility.

 Address adjustment difficulties with staff, who may be able to provide a friendly visitor, additional activities, physical therapy, or other individualized services, depending on a particular elder's needs.

"In Alzheimer's disease, care giving is most difficult when the parent wanders, is physically combative or when personality changes emerge," says Horne-Moyer.

In early stages of Alzheimer's family members need to monitor for self care, such as remembering to bathe, eat and take medicine.

- · Self-care is key. Horne-Moyer stresses to her clients that they have to preserve their own health and well-being.
- She encourages the use of formal and informal supports, including adult daycare, home health agencies, and family and friends.

 Stress management. techniques can be helpful.

- Treating depression and anxiety in both the elder and the caregiver is extremely important.
- Support groups, both formal and informal, are helpful.
- Many self-help books exist Horne-Moyer suggests The 36-Hour Day.

Horne-Moyer says it is far too common that caregivers are neglectful of themselves. If you feel exhausted, chances are you are neglecting you.

She encourages a caregiver to give elderly parents the time they need, but recognize that it's perfectly acceptable to allow others in your life to take the wheel when you need to take time out for you. It will not feel as unfair or as tiring knowing that you have the chance for a bit of rejuvenation.

That is how to avoid burnout and save yourself from your caregiver self. The burdens we place on ourselves are the ones that are the most difficult to bear.

Ask yourself if you've demanded too much from yourself? Would you impose the same burdens on a friend? Remember, you are your own best friend.

Managing heart failure You can take control he number of people in the United States with heart failure is expected to double during the next few decades. More than half a million people will be diagnosed this year alone. That's in addition to the 4.8 million who already have the disease.

However, there is good news. New treatments can be very effective in slowing and stopping the progression of the disease and in some cases can even reverse the process. The key is early diagnosis and treatment.

If allowed to progress without treatment, heart failure has a great impact on quality of life and can shorten life expectancy. In the United States, it is the single most frequent cause of hospitalization for people over age 65, and more people die from heart failure than from all forms of cancer combined. In its advanced, stages, it limits a person's ability to do even simple everyday tasks.

Heart failure also places an enormous economic burden on the healthcare system. In 2004, an estimated $28.8 billion will be spent on treating heart failure.

Although the word heart failure has an ominous ring, it does not mean that the heart has stopped or is about to stop suddenly. Heart failure means that the heart is not pumping blood as well as it should through its chambers to the rest of the body.

Heart failure is a common condition that usually develops slowly as the heart muscle weakens and needs to work harder to keep blood flowing through the body. This can be caused by a heart attack, longterm high blood pressure, a heart valve abnormality, a viral infection of the heart or a genetic condition that runs in families.

Sometimes the exact cause of heart failure is not known. Although it tends to develop later in life heart failure can also occur in younger people.

Heart failure is sometimes referred to as congestive heart failure. Congestive heart failure happens when fluid seeps into the lungs because the heart's pumping action weakens and blood backs up into the blood vessels around the heart. As a result, the body holds more water and salt which in turn causes edema (ankle or abdomen swelling) and difficulty breathing.

But as is often the case in medicine, early recognition and treatment of heart failure is the key to prevent progression. Even though a person with heart failure may not feel bad, they should still see a doctor regularly and get treatment.

People with risk factors such as high blood pressure, blockages in their coronary arteries, damaged heart valves, family history or diabetes should ask their doctor about their risk of developing heart failure.

No matter the initial cause, the effect tends to be the same. The weakened heart must work harder to keep up with the demands of the body and this is why people with heart failure often complain of feeling tired and why they develop symptoms of congestion.

Other symptoms of heart failure include:

- Shortness of breath which can happen even during mild activity
- Swelling in the feet and legs from fluid retention (results in weight gain)
- Cough with frothy
- Difficulty breathing when lying down which may waken you from sleep at night.

Although heart failure can be a serious and progressive disease, individuals with heart failure can live active and fulfilling lives with intervention and treatment. Once diagnosed, it's important to work with a doctor to develop a treatment plan and to follow it.

Better understanding of the disease has led to development of new treatments and management strategies from medication to surgery.

In addition to taking medicines exactly as directed, persons with heart failure should:

Weigh themselves every

- Follow a low-sodium (salt) diet
- Get regular physical activity
 - Quit smoking
- · Avoid alcohol or drink sparingly
 - Control body weight
- Monitor symptoms and learn when to consult a doctor or nurse.

The Heart Failure Society of America has taken the lead in developing a series of modules on heart failure. Patients and others can learn more about following lowsodium diets, exercise, managing their emotional stress and how to evaluate claims about new treatments and cures.

All educational materials developed by the Heart Failure Society of America can be found on the HFSA Web site: www.abouthf.org. Copies can be downloaded, or a complimentary hard copy can be ordered.

The Heart Failure Society is a nonprofit organization of health care professionals and researchers who are dedicated to enhancing quality and duration of life for patients with heart failure and preventing the condition in those at risk.

Graduation Celebration update Prize Patrol needs donations

For the past 12 years, parents of seniors have thrown a drug and alcoholfree all-night farewell party following graduation. This night of food, music, dancing, games and prizes offers graduating seniors the opportunity to celebrate safely with their friends.

The parent-sponsored event relies solely on generous donations of time, money, prizes, goods and services by members of the community.

Each graduate who attends has a chance to win door prizes. The prize drawings are held every half-hour, culminating in a grand prize drawing at the party's end. The prizes serve as an added incentive for our grads to come and stay at the safe and supervised party. Last year, more than 100 prizes were donated and almost 95 percent of the graduating class attended.

This year, the prize patrol is asking anyone who is willing to donate a door prize to drop it off at Burt Anthony Insurance offices at 750 Delaware Ave. or at the Bethlehem Networks office in Main Square (second floor, next to the Chamber of Commerce) between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m. For pickup, call 439-7740 and leave a message.

Some prize ideas include phone cards, alarm clocks, desk lamps, cordless phones, TVs, computer printers, desk chairs, MP3 players, small refrigerators microwaves, movies tickets, cameras and gift certificates and gift cards.

If you are willing to donate, but prefer to give a monetary donation, a check may be sent to Sheree Pittz, 97 Wright Lane, Delmar 12054.

Friendship Singers host benefit concert for To Life

By ANNE TREADWAY

The Friendship Singers, a Bethlehem-based group of women who specialize in show tunes and old favorites, will present their annual spring program on Friday, May 21, at 7:30 p.m. at Delmar Reformed Church on Delaware Ave.

Admission is free, but those attending will be able to show their appreciation for the evening's entertainment by donating to To Life.

In recent years, the Friendship Singers have performed a spring concert as a benefit for a local organization.

To Life is now in its sixth year in Delmar and has recently moved to 410 Kenwood Ave. It describes its mission as "To educate our community about the machinery and formality of a breast cancer detection, treatments and related health matters, and provide support services to breast cancer patients, caregivers, family and friends."

All its programs and services public concert. Many of them are provided free-of-charge and it have friends who have exrelies on grants and donations to stay in business.

Nola Royce, To Life's program coordinator and a breast cancer survivor herself, said recently her organization has a mailing list of more than 4,000 people, and helps hundreds of women each year.

It provides education forums, breast self-exam instruction, a mentoring program that matches survivors with those entering treatment for the first time and a "boutique" with a private fitting room for finding just the right prosthesis, bra, wig, scarf or other need brought about by breast cancer treatment.

"We moved here in January and we love this building because it's not clinical," said Royce. "It's a comfortable setting, without all medical facility.'

The Friendship Singers, mostly women in their 50s and 60s, believe To Life is an appropriate beneficiary of their perienced breast cancer, and one of them, Kitty Murphy, is a 10-year breast cancer survivor.

Her treatment was a lumpectomy, followed by radiation, and, as she says simply, "It worked."

Murphy spent a few years after her treatment acting as a mentor to other women starting before they left the hospital, through the American Cancer Society's "Reach to Recovery" program. Some were women she had first met on the tennis court.

Now Kitty Murphy not only continues to play tennis two or. three times a week, she also plays banjo and washtub bass in the band she and her husband, Bert, formed many years ago.

She will be displaying that skill at the Friendship Singers May 21 program when they perform 'Country Style," a rousing square dance number.

But Murphy is sensible too, while continuing to enjoy the hobbies closest to her heart. She doesn't play tennis two days in a row, she says, and she had to give up golf "because I had a tendency to hit the ground too often."

She also loves gardening, but limits weed-pulling sessions as an Singers enjoy their time together, accommodation to her reovery,

The family of Emily F. Etzkorn would like to thank all our friends and associates who have been so kind and thoughtful to us during this sad time. A special thank you goes to St. Mary's Hospital Pastoral Care, especially Sister William Aloysius and David Pilliod, and St. Thomas the Apostle Pastoral Care, especially Sister Mary Frederick and Father James Daley for their spiritual guidance during difficult times. Another special thank you goes to Dr. Nancy Knudsen for her gentle and compassionate care of our mother, Tom Pratt of Tebbutt's Funeral Home for helping us arrange a beautiful tribute to our mother, and to Father Leskovar for conducting the funeral services. Words cannot adequately express our gratitude to Linda DiCaprio, whose loving and compassionate care was truly a blessing on very dark days; you will always have a special place in our hearts.

planning so much, we even honor prearrangements made at other funeral homes.

You can transfer your arrangements to our funeral home without losing any benefits. In fact, we'll most likely be able to offer you more.

We believe choices are important... that's why we give you so many.

By DEV TOBIN

ike crocuses, daffodils and other spring flowers, the tulips are up and ready for their starring role in the Capital District's premiere outdoor event - Albany's Tulip Festival in Washington Park.

The Dutch-theme festival is also the city's biggest special event, attracting more than 80,000 people, if the weather cooperates, according to Sue Cleary of the city's Special Events and Volunteer Services Department.

"It's a great opportunity to bring people into the city," Cleary said. "It's also a celebration of spring for people who can't wait to get outdoors after winter. We'll have a number of traditional events and some new things, like a sidewalk art competition."

A popular fixture at Troy's erstwhile Riverfront Arts Fest, the sidewalk art contest will feature artists decorating the sidewalks on Madison Avenue between Willett Street and New Scotland Avenue on Sunday. The entry fee is $10.

The festival begins on Friday downtown with a carillon concert at 11:30 a.m.; the traditional Dutch street scrubbing of State Street at noon; followed by the Tulip Festival luncheon at the Crowne Plaza. The luncheon, a benefit for Vanguard, the volunteer auxiliary of the Albany Symphony Orchestra, costs $27 and reservations (465-4755) are required.

After that, most of the action takes place throughout Washington Park --music in three stages, the KidZone with lots of children's activities, a dance stage featuring local dance companies, a series of gardening talks both afternoons, and a juried craft show with more than 100 quality crafters.

"The KidZone has expanded every year; this year, there will be Colonial craft demonstrations spinning, weaving and tinsmithing — along with the usual hands-on crafts, face painting and pony rides," Cleary said.

There will be the same number of crafters as in previous years, but Cleary noted that there were more applicants this year for the limited spaces available, so the quality will be higher than ever.

Detal right along Tulip fest ushers in spring

"The craft line has become a big draw for visitors," she said.

> The Tulip Festival also kicks off Albany's season of outdoor free concerts with two days of free music -Saturday's bluesy lineup of Delbert McClinton, Marcia Ball and the Bluz House Rockers and Sunday's eclectic offering of Sergio Mendes and Brasil 2004, New York Voices and Georgie Wonders Orchestra.

The coronation of this year's Tulip Queen will be at noon on Saturday in the Washington Park Amphitheatre. The Tulip Queen finalists this year are Jaclyn Basle and Erin Van Denburgh, both of Colonie, Annette Seminario of Glenmont, and Shannon Phinney and Meredith Rose, both of Albany.

Regarding parking, a major concern for suburban people headed into the city for anything like this, Cleary advised patience.

"There's plenty of street parking, but wear sneakers and be prepared to walk a couple of blocks," she said.

For information on the festival, call 434-5412 or log on to www.albanyevents.org.

Budget

This year's general fund is $1,302,471. The water district budget is $639,607; Sewer District 1 is $222,564; and Sewer District 2 is $7,380.

At the meeting, Stevens proposed tearing down an apartment building the village owns next to its Voorheesville Avenue offices. The demolition would clear the way for an expanded parking lot for village hall as well as the park located in back. To pay for the estimated $30,000 project, budgeted funds would be transferred from a proposed $5,000 replacement of the village's more than 50-year-old fire siren located on top of village hall as well as other items slated for the village's volunteer fire department. The siren, Stevens said, is no longer required because today's firefighters carry cell phones and paging devices.

Trustees Bill Hotaling and Richard Berger, as well as other residents present, disagreed with Stevens' idea. Hotaling said that the siren alerts motorists that emergency vehicles may be coming. He added that the siren also reassures fire victims that help is coming. After more discussion, the village agreed to repair or replace the siren. Stevens hoped to further pursue his plans for the property next door.

In other news, Public Works Superintendent Will Smith announced that he received two bids to install recently-purchased water meters. National Meter, a New Jersey based firm, offered the lowest price at $76 per meter for a total cost of $88,000. The village bought new meters in order to have them modified for radio transmission. Radiotransmitted meters can be read from the street in passing vehicles, finishing the job in less time and with less expense.

Smith said National Meters also offered to bench-test meters removed from homes to measure their accuracy.

"We expect water bills to rise because of the increased efficiency of the new meters,' Smith said. "Having these measurements will give us something to demonstrate to water customers when they ask why their bill is higher. We can show them how their old meter has not been working at 100 percent."

National Meter's price for the testing is $3,000. Village trustees unanimously voted to award the contract to National Meter. As the project moves ahead, both the village and the contractor will send instructions to water users before installation.

"Access to homes is mandatory for this project to be completed," Smith said.

Voorheesville trustees approved a measure on Jan. 27 to purchase Badger Meters in order to standardize all new meters to be bought and used by the village. Badger Meters, Smith said, supplies an automatic meter reading transmitter called the Orion AMR. These devices, he said, can be easily installed on standard Badger meters, thus saving Voorheesville $3,500.

In other news, Stevens announced that an exploratory committee with St. Matthew's Church is moving ahead with plans to build a senior citizen housing complex on 6 acres of land behind the church.

The committee is now asking the Albany Diocese and its real estate experts for permission and advice on how to go forward.

Because the land is not zoned for senior housing, whoever develops it must go before the village planning board to get a special use permit or seek to change the zoning.

Finally, village trustees passed a measure allowing the village to hire employees who live outside Voorheesville. The village is currently accepting applications for three new administrative positions: clerk treasurer, deputy clerk treasurer and part-time clerk receptionist.
