Porco case will go to outside judge

By LIBBY SCHIRMER

An out of area judge has been assigned to the murder case of Brockley Drive resident and law clerk Peter Porco, if it ever makes it to trial.

Assistant District Attorney Dave Rossi said it's not unusual for judges to be assigned cases before indictments. In the Porco case, where, on Nov. 15, 52-year-old Peter was killed in his home and his wife, Joan, was found upstairs from him severely beaten, there hasn't been an arrest.

"There has been a judge assigned, prepared to handle the case, if there ever is a case handed up," Rossi said. "It will be an out of area judge, just to avoid any potential conflicts."

Peter Porco was a longtime friend and law clerk for Supreme Court Judge Anthony Cardona. Cardona spoke at his funeral and spoke to Peter Porco on the phone the day before he was found dead in his home.

Rossi said he wouldn't give the name of the judge or what county the judge works in. A grand jury has been investigating the death of Peter Porco. After a three-week hiatus, the grand jury reconvened in January, after the jurors' terms were extended and has been on hiatus since then.

"There's still no date (set when the grand jury will meet again)," Rossi said. "I can't really comment about the grand jury."

The assignment of an out-of-area judge does not rule out a change of venue,

The residents of Bethlehem proved their appreciation for openness in the comprehensive planning process by showing up en masse at Thursday's public hearing on the draft comprehensive plan, leaving standing room only in the town hall auditorium.

With a Bethlehem Planning Advisory Committee meeting scheduled for Monday, March 7, Friday was too early to tell if the comprehensive plan would be up for review and adoption by the town

Bypass plan may include roundabouts

Supervisor hopes for '06 project startup

By LIBBY SCHIRMER

Plans for the Slingerlands Bypass remain in the preliminary stages, but the Department of Transportation is considering one, two or three roundabout intersections as part of that project.

The DOT will likely be in front of the town board at its March 21 meeting, according to Supervisor Theresa Egan. DOT officials consider the installation of roundabouts a routine process that can decrease incidences of personal injury accidents.

Route 85 is a highly traveled thoroughfare in and out of the town, seeing 24,000 cars on an average day, according to DOT public information officer Peter VanKeuren.

Roundabouts are being considered as part of the Slingerlands Bypass project at the intersection of Blessing Road and Route 85 and Route 85 and New Scotland Road VanKeuren said.

"As the Slingerlands Bypass project advances, we're going to be looking at installing roundabouts, which is pretty generic. Any kind of intersection work, we look at the possibilities and appropriateness of roundabouts at that intersection," VanKeuren said. "It's pretty generic. It's not anything big."

Roundabouts, common to resort areas in New England and in Colorado, are becoming increasingly prevalent in New York. The most infamous roundabout, around since most people can remember is in the town of Colonie, at the Latham Circle Mall.

Improvements to the Latham Traffic Circle were made recently.

"My understanding is that the state identified some accident history there that was greater than the norm," said the town of Colonie's Commissioner of Public Works Bob Mitchell. "The state's been working on an roundabout initiative and they felt they could make some improvements, but it wasn't at our request. My understanding is that it's improved."

Voorheesville just got a roundabout put in and the DOT has been considering others in Malta. Plattsburgh just had a number of roundabouts installed in that town.

VanKeuren said Voorheesville's roundabout has worked well, so far. After being installed about a year-and-a-half ago, residents have gotten used to it.

"New York state is kind of in a walking mode in terms of roundabouts. Other states have gone ahead of us," VanKeuren said. "There's certainly a learning curve when installing a roundabout. It takes a little bit of getting used to."

The Slingerlands Bypass is apparently a project Supervisor Theresa Egan is eager to get under way and completed, as she notes its been on the books "since I was in high school."

Egan hopes to see shovels in the ground by Labor Day, 2006, but DOT officials are hesitant to commit to a specific date.

Egan hopes the Slingerlands Bypass project will alleviate traffic pressure in town and is remaining "open minded" about the possibility of roundabouts in that area of town.

"Past Maher Road, we have to have a design that will slow people down as they are coming into town. We really want something other than a four-lane speed

Police arrest one for DWI • Town IDA loses two members

Bethlehem Police made one driving while intoxicated (DWI) arrest last week.

Police received a call for a car off the roadway in the area of River Road on March 1 around 6:30 p.m.

The driver of the car, 39-year-old Michael B. Tenholzen of 131 Trinity Place in Selkirk, said he hit black ice and lost control of his car.

As police interviewed Tenholzen, they said, they detected an odor of alcohol on his breath.

During the initial interview, another car drove up and the driver of that car told police that he saw objects being thrown out of the car that Tenholzen was driving and into the nearby wooded area.

Police later found a bottle of beer in the woods.

Tenholzen failed field sobriety tests, was processed for DWI.

A chemical test later showed Tenholzen to be positive for alcohol. He is scheduled to appear in Town Court on March 15.

If the Bethlehem Industrial Development Agency has to lose members, it might as well be to far-reaching organizations with which the agency has already developed working relationships.

After retiring from 40 years in the corporate banking sector, Slingerlands resident Joe Richardson tracked down an offer he couldn't refuse.

His appointment as director of economic development for the Albany-Colonie Regional Chamber of Commerce is one of two appointments of former Bethlehem Industrial Agency members to high-ranking positions with global-thinking organizations. Both positions necessitated resignations from the IDA.

Brian Hannafin, the former executive director of the IDA, recently accepted a post as the director of industry attractions with the Center for Economic Growth, located on State Street in Albany.

"Short of having lost them, it's great that they're there. I hope the great relationships continue," said IDA Chairman George Leveille.

Both appointments, and the recent resignation of Daniel Plummer as a member of the IDA, leaves the agency immediately a little shorthanded, but, perhaps, with good long-term regional, national and global connections, Richardson said. He noted also former IDA Chairman Michael Tucker's position as president of the Harriman Campus Redevelopment Corporation. "The Vista Tech Center is very critical," Richardson said of the 1 million-square-foot facility to be built behind the Slingerlands Price Chopper, "because we need technologically ready sites. I can't wait to get Vista going."

That facility was recently awarded a $1 million grant by Albany County, Richardson said. That's typical of the development he'd like to see in the area.

Richardson, in part, is charged with retaining existing businesses and attracting new ones, educating up-and-coming businesses and existing ones about loans available to them and to identify needs of businesses, he said.

"People say I've always had a lot of energy," Richardson said. "I really believe in Tech Valley, and I wasn't about to sit home and drive Joan (my wife) nuts. The skills and contacts and experience I've developed in the banking industry would be helpful."

Richardson made contacts in the chamber when he served as a member of the board of directors, a position that he credits leading him toward his current one.

Hannafin, meanwhile, at the beginning of last week, was getting settled into his new office at CEG. Hannafin's new position is symbolic of the mode of thinking of regional business leaders.

Noting five different sectors, including nanotechnology, Hannafin said he is tasked with attracting businesses from all five sectors, to ensure the Capital District's economy consists of something more than similar "eggs in one basket," Hannafin said.

Both Hannafin and Richardson noted the global influence of their respective organizations.

"How do we market ourselves? By being advocates and providing the best services, sometimes we can't compete with other areas, but the quality of life here, I truly believe this is the place to do business," Richardson said.

March means auction time

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

Anybody who thinks that community spirit is a relic of a bygone era hasn't been to Bethlehem lately. In the past year, residents have spent hours discussing the future of their town at public meetings.

This Friday, residents will gather for what has become an annual event that helps support the youth who are the future of the community.

The gavel will drop on the 19th annual Bethlehem Opportunities Unlimited auction at 7 p.m. on Friday, March 11, in the high school cafeteria at 700 Delaware Ave. The auction is divided into three parts: the bucket auction, the silent auction and the live auction.

That's about all the resemblance it bears to any other kind of auction you've ever attended. People receive paper plates with an assigned number, which get tucked under their arms while they check out the donated goods from local merchants; purchase tickets for their kids to drop in the buckets near the items they covet; guide their kids to the children's activities; grab a homemade treat from the dessert table; and catch up with friends and neighbors as the Northeast winter begins to slowly yield to spring.

The bucket auction will end around 8:15 p.m. and the silent auction's bid sheets will be closed at 8:30 p.m. The fun really gets going around 7:30 p.m. as Bethlehem's middle school Principal Dave Ksanznack and Assistant Principal Sandy Morley launch the live auction.

The BOU auction specializes in the unique. Kids from the district's schools will tug at their parents' sleeves, asking them to go just a little higher in their bid to become "Principal for a Day."

Politically-inspired youth can spend the day with town Supervisor Theresa Egan, visit state Sen. Neil Breslin, D-Delmar, or have lunch with his brother, County Executive Mike Breslin, D-Delmar.

A guaranteed spot in the summer's driver's ed course is a perpetual favorite, as is the opportunity to be first in line for soccer sign-ups. Savvy bidders have purchased dinner for 10 cooked in their own home or planned a ride on the Upper Hudson Scenic Railroad.

Every year brings something new, said auction chair Dave Banas. This year's offerings include a day at Capital News 9 with anchor and Bethlehem Central High School alumnus Brian Taffe; four grandstand seats to the World Series champs, the Boston Red Sox; four box seat tickets to the New York Yankees on July 9, which includes tickets to the Old Timer's Game that day; two tickets to Broadway's "Sweet Charity;" a six-hour fishing trip with Bill Nash; and a tour with the Albany Aqua Ducks.

"All of the items are donated by local individuals or businesses and they've been very generous," Banas said.

BOU is in its 21st year of providing the community's kids with activities to support them through the rough adolescent years and avoid drug and alcohol use and risky sexual behaviors.

"We're a community organization, not a PTA," said BOU's president, Kathy Betzhold, who is also the school nurse at Clarksville Elementary School. "BOU has evolved into a source of grants to mentor kids. Although we focus on high school and middle school, we've also awarded grants to the (all-kindergarten) Early Learning Center and elementary schools."

The auction is how BOU raises the money for those grants. It typically brings in between $12,000 and $14,000. BOU's 15-member board, which includes one student, review the grant applications, which typically come from teachers.

BOU has funded chess clubs, computer clubs, writing clubs and a fish tank for kids to take care of at the middle school. One of the middle school's physical education teachers, Sandy Banas, runs an after-school swim club that has high school kids mentoring middle school kids who might not be comfortable swimmers. While most of the grants are small, BOU has also made larger donations to Bethlehem Youth Court and to the fitness center at the high school, which is available to students beyond just school hours.

BOU has also sponsored speakers and events like the "Images and Alcohol" forum for students and parents at the high school and the middle school's Respect Day.

Grant applications and a list of grant recipients are available at the BOU link from the school district's Web site, www.bcsd.k12.ny.us. That same link will also give you a list of the 130 items that will be available at Friday's bucket and silent auctions and the 35 items that will be subject to hot bidding.

"This is a fun way to get out and enjoy some simple family fun while having a chance to bid and win on some very good items or services," Banas said. "All the proceeds go back into youth activities. People get the chance to win some great items and local businesses get people to come and use their services. Everybody comes out a winner."

Teacher offers rockin' recital

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

If the music of Beethoven, Bach, Chopin and Mendelssohn isn't enough to entice you to head for the Delmar Reformed Church this Sunday, March 13, pianist Patrick Pisanello has another reason.

"I'll make the walls of the church rock," Pisanello said.

If you've seen Pisanello in action, you know that's just what will happen. Pisanello is best known in Bethlehem as the sixth- and seventh-grade music teacher and sixth-grade chorus teacher with extra energy and enthusiasm and a great sense of humor. This Sunday, at 2 p.m., the Colonie resident will put the energy his students see every day into the role of concert pianist — something not unfamiliar to Pisanello.

A regular performer at Albany's First Night, Pisanello appeared in his first public recitals when he was 10, at the Troy Music Hall and the Albany Institute of History & Art. When he was 16, he was accompanist to Thelma Matesky, a New York City soprano and Carnegie Hall recitalist.

"The piano is my first love," Pisanello said. "The literature is so extensive from all the periods in music."

By performing works from the people he describes as "the superheroes of the past," Pisanello hopes to perpetuate their music.

"I fear that the great musical literature won't be perpetuated," he said. "Nowadays, moms and dads have to work and when people are put to the wall financially, the arts are the first to go."

Pisanello's been practicing for about four months for Sunday's free recital, getting up at 5 a.m. to practice for two to three hours before school starts. It's a lot of work for a concert that he estimates will last 45 minutes, and all that practice doesn't mean the concert pieces will sound stiff or rote.

"Playing live is the penultimate of music," Pisanello said. "The demands on a performer are unreal. You have to play the notes accurately, and express the emotions to make it sound recreated on the spot. You have to ask, 'what is the composer seeking to do?' One also gets to explore one's own interpretation of the music."

Pisanello said he never questioned the hard work that goes into performing. "It's demanding spiritually, emotionally and physically," he

BC middle school actors on stage this weekend

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

Two variations on classic fairy tales will be performed this Thursday, Friday and Saturday at Bethlehem Central Middle School as Staged Creations presents "Stone Soup" and "If the Shoe Fits."

The two plays are each about 40 minutes long, just the right length for families with young children, said Tom Reardon, the eighth-grade English teacher who's also the director and producer of the plays. Shannon Casso, a seventh-grade Spanish teacher, is the assistant director.

The familiar "Stone Soup" is the story of soldiers who wander into a village of poor peasants who profess they have no food to offer the weary travelers. No problem, for the travelers know how to make soup out of stone and water. Soon the villagers are adding cabbage, carrots, and so many other ingredients that everyone feasts all night long.

In Staged Creations' version of "Stone Soup," a group of knights who are women disguised as men battle a dragon. Sir Charlie and Sir Lou get to know each other, but when Rocky Scum finds out that they're women, he tells his mother, who un-beards them so her son can get the credit.

When the girl-knights teach the villagers to make soup from a stone, they're returned to hero status.

"It's fun to hang out with friends," seventh-grader Olivia Gordon, who's playing Sir Charlie, said of the play.

Connor Menneto plays

Laura Hannigan, left, who play Sir Lou and Olivia Gordon, as Sir Charlie will perform in "Stone Soup" this weekend.

Rafferty Scum, a role he quit wrestling to take.

"It's fun to play a bad guy," Menneto said.

Michelle Kennedy is playing the Scum brothers' mother, Lillian, and agreed that it's more interesting to be a bad guy than a good one.

Relishing their darker sides seems to be a theme of some of the middle school actors, for Heather Schwartz was also pumped about her role as Grunge in the Python Gang in "If the Shoe Fits."

"If the Shoe Fits" is the story of Cinderella from the Prince's perspective. The Prince must get married a month after graduation, but it turns out his deepest desire is to go to college and study computer science. The Python Gang kidnaps him and sends in a robotic prince in his stead.

"Both the plays are so funny," Menneto said.

Reardon said that 60 kids make up the cast and crew of the show, who have been rehearsing since the show was cast on Dec. 20. For much of the time, they rehearsed in different classrooms in the building while the recently-completed musical "Seussical" took the stage.

Since getting onto the stage, though, the kids have been hard at work designing and building the sets — something Reardon's proud of.

"Everything is the kids' own idea," he said. "It's all student-built. They designed and moved everything. The students also designed the programs. We've also had good parent support for the show."

The shows should be great fun for everyone, Reardon said.

"They're familiar classics, and they're totally hilarious," he said.

"Stone Soup" and "If the Shoe Fits" will take to the stage at Bethlehem Central Middle School at 332 Kenwood Ave. this Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 7 p.m.

Admission is $4, except for Thursday, when admission will be half price if people bring in a canned good.

"Get it?" Reardon asked. "Like making stone soup."

Supreme Court to rule on Ten Commandments

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

The current question before the Supreme Court as to whether it's a violation of separation of church and state to have the Ten Commandments on government property has left me thinking — yet again — how great it is to be an American.

Anybody in our country has the right to question the application and interpretation of our laws and our Constitution. We truly are fortunate to be able to question every aspect of the system that supports us. We must all hope that this is done in the name of making our country better, even if sometimes it feels like a lot of court cases grow out of what seems like people's needs to gratify themselves immediately.

COMMENTARY:

Mom's
Word

But a Supreme Court case isn't a dumb criminal case that will end up as an Internet joke. Supreme Court decisions have far-reaching and long-lasting effects on our society — just ask anybody going to an integrated school in the American South today.

The current cases seeking to remove the Ten Commandments from the Texas Capitol's grounds and the walls of Kentucky courthouses are keeping religion in the limelight, a place it has been basking comfortably and uncomfortably since the closing prayer at President Bush's first inauguration invoked the name of Jesus Christ, the God the president believes in.

Since then, there have been countless articles about the role that religion does and should play in our society and among our leaders. The Supreme Court case may stick to the issue of separation of church and state but it will feel to a lot of us like it's really about tolerance and diversity.

The insistence on individual rights in our society pushes a lot of cases to our highest court of law. Those rights seem to stem from an insistence on tolerance, an essential element in our society and one that fewer people seem to feel they're being accorded.

Separation of church and state are essential in our society. Too often in history real woes are afflicted upon people in the name of religion: the Crusades; the Spanish Inquisition; the Taliban; suicide bombers in the Middle East; the attacks of 9/11.

Let's not forget, though, that more than a little good can come out of religion. The diverse faithful in the Capital District spend time at soup kitchens, in nursing homes, in hospitals, traveling to impoverished nations to help build infrastructure and getting their spiritual batteries recharged once a week in their houses of worship.

For many who worship, the Ten Commandments are laws they seek to live by. Are the Ten Commandments truly offensive to people who don't believe in God? Do their words really make them feel backed up against a wall and forced to regard something deeply offensive to them? Can the Ten Commandments have a negative impact on the governing of our country?

Thinking about the Ten Commandments, a song I learned in grade school — Catholic grade school — comes to mind. I only remember it to the fifth commandment and to make the song catchy and rhyming, the words got messed up a little. So I headed for the Internet to bring the commandments back to mind. They are: Thou shalt have no other God before me. Thou shalt not make unto thee any graven image. Thou shalt not take the name of the Lord thy God in vain. Remember the sabbath day, to keep it holy. Honor thy father and mother. Thou shalt not kill. Thou shalt not commit adultery. Thou shalt not steal. Thou shalt not bear false witness against thy neighbor. Thou shalt not covet.

Pretty good rules, really, but certainly one through four are religious. I'm content to leave the final decision about whether they should be displayed on government property to the Supreme Court, but I can't help but feel that we'd be tossing out some of our history and some good rules to live by if they're stricken from places where they're currently on display.

If those who don't believe in God call for tolerance and fairness under the law, aren't religious people entitled to the same tolerance and fairness? There's a real lack of a specific god in the commandments, leaving room for people to live the rules with their god as the one to put first. Could people who don't believe in a deity interpret the word "God" as the guiding principle that sees them through their lives?

Removing the Ten Commandments from public places where they've long existed could be the edge of a slippery slope. Separation of church and state is paramount, but we are a nation founded by people who believed in God. If the rules can't be displayed, will yarmulkes, crosses on necklaces and head scarves be deemed offensive, coercive and forbidden? Do we want to be like France that doesn't want Muslim girls wearing their head scarves to school? Could a fear of having religion inflicted on non-believers end up turned around so that believers are forbidden any outward manifestation of their religion?

The court case brought to mind the post-9/11 cover story in the satirical magazine The Onion. "God clarifies no-kill rule," it read, going on to state that when God had said "thou shalt not kill," he meant never.

It would be great if God could come and clarify a few things for us, not least amongst which would be whether or not he (or she) exists. Is there a heaven? Is there reincarnation? Is there hell? Is there one organized religion that has it right and we should all follow? Gay marriage: yea or nay? How did you let anybody develop nuclear weapons? Can anybody write a television show as insightful and humorous as "Northern Exposure" ever again? Could the Cubs ever win a World Series? Why do children yell for their mothers as soon as the phone rings or she shuts herself in the bathroom? Can men really not tell the difference between black and navy blue? Why does my seventh grader do his homework but not hand it in? The last few questions may sound flip, but sometimes our immediate concerns make the big picture hard to see.

Right now, the Supreme Court's got that big picture in its lens. Here's hoping the focus they find leaves a print that shows our nation at its best.

Rossi said, noting a change of venue is a motion that would have to be filed by attorneys before the trial.

A court officer showed up at the Porco's 36 Brockley Drive residence on the morning of Nov. 15 when Peter Porco failed to report for work. Joan Porco was found with trauma to the head and body. Joan Porco was alert before she was taken by ambulance to the hospital.

She remained at an Albany hospital for weeks, with her family keeping vigil beside a police presence before she was transferred to Sunnyview Rehabilitation Center in Schenectady before Christmas.

Meanwhile, Bethlehem Police continue their investigation, according to Lt. Thomas Heffernan.

Recently, area news organizations reported that the Bethlehem Police were trying to contact a man in Maryland in connection with the Peter Porco case.

"We've been working outside of the Capital Region since Day 1," said Det. John Cox. "There's been recent attention to move along better and they can reduce accidents upwards of 60 or 70 percent," VanKeuren said. "People get accustomed to waiting at traffic lights. It's the same thing, but they keep moving along."

The Slingerlands Bypass project will likely be paid for by "various avenues of funding," VanKeuren said, including federal and state shares, but "probably not a local share."

Maryland, that's been ongoing for several months. We've also been (tracking down leads) in other areas of the state, Massachusetts, Vermont, Florida."

Neither Heffernan nor Cox would comment on what, if anything, they've been able to rule in or out because of the interviews with individuals out of state of the Capital District area. Cox said police spoke by phone to an individual in Florida and a state trooper in Vermont set up an interview with another individual there.

"Other agencies have been assisting us," Heffernan said, calling the investigation "widespread."

Rossi, Heffernan and Cox wouldn't characterize the investigation, which toppled the three-month mark recently, as long. Rossi noted investigations in the DA's office that have been active since the 1970s.

"Just because we can make a phone call, it's still time consuming," Cox said. "We need statements. Several other outside agencies to follow up."

Heffernan said the Bethlehem Police "expect to make a trip to Rochester in the near future," to conduct more interviews.

The Bethlehem Police said they interviewed a teacher in the Bethlehem Central School District who knew of a threat against the Porco family about 15 years ago.

"Absolutely part of our investigation is ruling people out," Cox said. "Because of Mr. Porco's position, there may be enemies out there, and, obviously, it's our job to locate them."

Chris Porco and his 23-year-old brother, Johnathan Porco, who is in the Navy, were called persons of interest at the beginning of the investigation. Both were interviewed by police. Chris Porco's Jeep Wrangler was seized by police for processing after they traveled to Rochester the day of the discovery of Peter Porco's body. Chris Porco's attorney, Terence Kindlon, have said the police made Chris Porco's Jeep "undrivable," from processing it.

"The seats were torn apart, seatbelts were missing. They took gas out because they wanted to weigh it," Kindlon said recently. Kindlon said that as Chris Porco was putting his Jeep back together recently, he found a GPS device on that car, which prompted him and Kindlon's investigator to look for similar devices on Chris Porco's mother's car, which he's been driving. Another GPS system was attached to that car, Kindlon said.

Bethlehem Police have never publicly called Chris Porco a suspect in the attack on his parents. Interviews with Chris Porco ended when Terence Kindlon, whose services were retained by 21-year-old Chris Porco's family, advised him not participate in any more police interviews.

"What a person of interest is someone we want to talk to, who may have information useful to us, not necessarily a suspect or not a suspect," Cox said.

Matters of Opinion

Same ol', same ol'

Once again, it looks like New York's budget debacle will continue long after April Fool's Day when it is "officially" due.

The uncertainty, particularly in regard to annual school district funding, sets schools boards scrambling to figure out what to do with their own budgets, which are basically in limbo until the amount of state aid is determined. This kind of American roulette is unacceptable and unfair, for districts that are struggling to do more with less.

State lawmakers pay only lip service to the idea of meeting the April 1 deadline. Over the two decades of late state budgets, numerous pleas have been made to apparently deaf ears.

Confidence in the lawmakers' ability to play by the rules has been undermined, and their role has become a laughing stock.

Still, we believe this is a violation of the public trust and carrying on business as usual only further violates the public's confidence in its elected representatives.

State Senate and Assembly members must be really out of touch with the people they're supposed to represent. People have not been shy in local media venues to express their displeasure with the way the state manages its business and the people's money.

The only reaction seems to be finger pointing among the lawmakers.

It's no wonder more and more young people relocate to other states, where taxes are lower and government more responsible about managing the people's business.

The country after all was founded on the concept of no taxation without representation. In New York, we certainly have enough of the former and precious little of the latter.

Perhaps term limits would help to purge the state Senate and Assembly of members who repeatedly flaunt or ignore budget deadlines. The three men in a room seem to have carte blanche, without the voice of the majority of legislators.

Other suggestions toward solving the problem have been made over the years, including not paying legislators until a budget is in place. That of course never happens. In effect, lawmakers have suffered little if any penalties except being singled out as a dysfunctional governmental entity. But despite that dubious distinction, legislators carry on as they have for two decades.

We'd like to think this budget horror show will end, before another 20 years slips by, making even more of a mockery of what has already become a cruel joke for the people of New York.

New Visions: meet some remarkable folks

By ANDREW F. MCKENZIE

The writer is executive director of New Visions, an organization that has worked on behalf of individuals with differing abilities since 1951.

March is Developmental Disabilities Awareness Month as proclaimed by New York state Gov. George E. Pataki. You may ask, why does Gov. Pataki need to proclaim such a designation in light of the fact that New York leads the nation in many areas of treatment, care, and opportunities for persons with developmental disabilities? New York State is, in fact, heralded as the nation's leader in the field of developmental disabilities with such programs as NYS-CARES (residential placement opportunities), NYS-OPTS (creative service opportunities), and its Consolidated Support Services (self-directed, individualized service opportunities). Yet, March is proclaimed Developmental Disabilities Awareness Month by the governor himself.

There are nearly 4 million Americans with developmental disabilities in this country. The term developmental disabilities itself is a generic term that can refer to several different kinds of challenges for individuals and their families. For example, included in the list of diagnostic terms for developmental disabilities are mental retardation (affecting some 200,000 residents in New York State alone), cerebral palsy (affecting approximately 24,000 residents of New York state), autism, epilepsy, and other neurological impairments, all occurring during childhood and resulting in significant mental or physical limitation.

Remarkably, and based upon the advances of diagnosis, treatment, and social perception of persons with developmental disabilities, there are no limits to what a person can accomplish as an active participant in mainstream community life. Not too many years ago in this nation, persons diagnosed with developmental disabilities had few options and fewer hopes of living any semblance of a normal life. Unlike any other realm of human endeavor, advances have occurred largely due to the courageous and perseverant efforts of parents and family members, progress in research for treatment and care, and the sheer will of individuals with developmental disabilities themselves. Today, not only are individuals benefiting from some of the nation's best services and programs, but these same people are giving back and participating in the community in ways that were not even imagined a few short decades ago. People who were once institutionalized and cloistered in settings of substandard care are now residing in neighborhood settings, attending community functions, working and paying taxes, and even volunteering to help people who they feel are less fortunate than themselves!

At New Visions, many of the individuals we provide programs and services to are living fully-integrated lives as involved and committed members of the Capital District communities to which they belong, no matter their age or disability. As volunteers, they have worked on a multitude of projects over the past several years that have enriched the lives of their neighbors and our community as a whole, such as the Samaritan's Purse project, which serves underprivileged children in developing countries and Give Kids The World, a program which provides much-needed assistance to children suffering from severe illnesses. These volunteers have also worked at the Northeast Regional Food Bank helping to prepare packages for needy families, donated money and materials to neighborhood homeless shelters and visited nearby nursing homes in an effort to bring cheer and comfort to the residents, in addition to numerous other volunteer activities that take place throughout the year.

As employees, these individuals have proven themselves valuable in countless ways to local area employers. Our program participants are employed at organizations such as Price Chopper, Hannaford, the J. T. Foley Federal Courthouse, the Leo O'Brien Federal Building, the New York State Museum, the University at Albany and the New York state Department of Transportation, in addition to a host of others, in a variety of positions on a full and part-time basis. In years past, limited employment opportunities for individuals with disabilities were the norm. Today, thanks in large part to the enthusiasm of these employers, employment options are expanding and opportunities are no longer rare for people of all ability levels in the Capital District.

Living in the community has also become an important milestone for many of our program participants and their families. Following the movement in the field of developmental disabilities in the late 1970s to open community residential homes for people with developmental disabilities, organizations like New Visions have worked hard to prepare people and their families for life outside the family home. We currently operate 14 homes, 23 supportive apartments and three supervised apartments in the Capital District, in which over 150 people of all ability levels live and participate as active members of their communities. As some of the best neighbors in many of the communities in which they live, their daily example is helping to educate the public at large about the importance of being involved and committed regardless of physical and/or developmental limitations.

So, why proclaim March as Developmental Disabilities Awareness Month? If for no other reason than to encourage you to get to know your neighbors, your children's classmates, your congregations' brethren, etc., who may have a developmental disability. You will find that your efforts will be rewarded in ways perhaps not appreciated or even considered previously. You may even find a yearning to get more involved, and if you do, remember that one of the best ways to get involved and help make a difference is to become an active member in an organization that works on behalf of individuals with disabilities. Gov. Pataki's proclamation is one of opportunity, a designation that helps organizations like New Visions get the word out that this is a great time to get to know some remarkable, vital members of our community you may not have had the privilege of previously meeting.

At New Visions, the involvement of our consumers, staff, family members and the Capital District community at large is what helps us provide cutting-edge programs and services to more than 500 of our neighbors and friends who live, work and volunteer as active members of our community. Did you know that New Visions is a New York state leader in the field of service provision for individuals with developmental disabilities, offering educational, habilitative, rehabilitative and residential programs throughout the Capital District? We are a chapter of NYSARC, Inc., the largest not-for-profit organization working on behalf of individuals with developmental disabilities in the country (57 chapters currently). Started in 1951 by a small group of parents who wanted to improve the lives of their children, New Visions remains committed to the program participants, family members and communities we serve, steadfast in our mission to "serve, advocate and offer opportunities to persons with differing abilities and their families."

Our membership drive is going on now, and we need your support. For more information on our programs and services, activities and events, or to become a member, contact us at 459-0750. Rewarding volunteer opportunities are also available in all departments at New Visions.

School board deserves praise for no idling policy

Editor, The Spotlight:

Congratulations to the Bethlehem Central School District board of education for adopting a "No Idle Policy" at its Jan. 19 meeting. We have worked with district officials and bus drivers on this initiative for many months, and it was a positive experience from the start.

Pollution from diesel exhaust from school buses has been in the news lately with the recent evacuation of a school in the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk district. We are fortunate to live in a school district that demonstrates leadership on so many issues, clean air included.

BCSD's no idle policy is but one step in a series of innovative steps that the district has adopted. For many years, the district has aggressively upgraded its fleet, improved its infrastructure and adopted best practices for the safe and cleaner operation of its buses.

Although state regulations allow buses to idle up to five minutes, the district decided that a no idle policy was more protective of students. The new policy is very simple: it requires bus drivers to turn off the bus engines when they arrive at schools or other venues to drop off or pick up a busload of students.

Turning off the engines pays big air quality dividends because it reduces a major pollutant — diesel exhaust. At the schools, diesel exhaust lingers and then enters the schools through the schools' doors and windows. This exposure is compounded when all the buses are at the school loading and unloading students.

Children are especially vulnerable to air pollution because their lungs are continually developing. Smaller particles penetrate children's narrower air passages and lodge deep within the lungs. Children breathe at a higher rate — 50 percent more air per pound of body weight than adults — and this can lead to more exposure.

Additionally, asthma is the leading cause of school absenteeism for chronic illness, and the exhaust from school buses can trigger asthma attacks. But cleaner air from a no idle policy not only benefits children; it also benefits bus drivers and all staff who are near the buses.

Banning bus idling will also save the district money in reduced fuel costs and in school aid formulas, which are measured in part on school absenteeism.

The district's no idle policy applies to passenger vehicles on school property — limiting them to 30 seconds of idling. Passenger vehicles emit many pollutants, including benzen, nitrogen oxides and carbon monoxide. We hope that parents, high school students and other drivers will embrace this new initiative.

We extend our thanks to Assistant Superintendent Steven O'Shea, District Transportation director Alfred Karam, Assistant Transportation Director Cindy Jurewicz, and the many dedicated bus drivers. We also thank Sen. Neil Breslin for securing the funding for signs at the schools. So when the spring thaw comes, expect to see "No Idling" signs!

Bad eating habits can be changed, one step at a time

Editor, The Spotlight:

Our society does not widely support a healthy lifestyle for any of us.

But I remain optimistic. Bad health habits can be changed. We can turn off TVs and become more active. We can teach healthier eating at home and in school.

We can apply consumer pressure to the food industry to be honest about what we are served and be provided with other options. It all starts with one change, a baby step, then another and another. One example is to drink water instead of juice or soda.

Changes are not easy, but that doesn't make them any less vital.

The children of our community are counting on us to lead by example.

Thin Mint drink specials raised $250 for Scouts

Editor, The Spotlight:

Thank you for running weekly articles over the past month announcing Thin Mint drink specials offered at Perfect Blend in support of the Girl Scouts. We are so pleased and proud of the tremendous community response.

Yes, the drinks were delicious (I had to keep sampling for quality control purposes), but more importantly, it was exciting to see the community spirit and generosity of all who visited Perfect Blend to support the girls.

Overall, we used 32 boxes of Thin Mints — or 873 cookies — and sold 291 drinks. The Thin Mint special was a staff favorite. Along with customers, our staff enjoyed about 50 frappes and smoothies throughout the promotion.

As a former Girl Scout who still lives by the Girl Scout Law, it's our pleasure to contribute $250 to Girl Scouts Hudson Valley Council on behalf of local neighborhood troops.

Your Opinion Matters

A letter writer may have found Christo's Gates unimpressive, but Dean and Robyn Gray of Elsmere created their own version in their Elsmere yard. It's unknown yet how much revenue it brought the hamlet.

'Gates' were dull and boring

Editor, The Spotlight:

I visited New York City recently and had a look at "The Gates" in Central Park both from the sidewalk and from the 46th floor of a building nearby.

Orange painted 6x6 posts with orange fabric hanging from the crossbars gave me the feeling of construction site barricades, dull, repetitious and boring.

Christo and Jeanne Claude's technique of wrapping buildings and landscapes in plastic grew from an artistic movement that surfaced in the 1960s called "Conceptual Art." It was an exciting development at that time, having to do with making fantastic proposals on paper: drawings and scale models for projects and fanciful schemes, not meant to be realized.

Unfortunately, the Christos got some of their proposals realized and have based a lucrative career on them. I say "unfortunately" because while exciting in the drawing phase they turn out to be boring when actually built.

Instead of paying $20 million dollars for installing these gates in Central Park, if the Christos had given the $20 million to young artists in the form of purchases or perhaps used the money to construct an artists' building for young artists, they could have left "The Gates" at the scale model stage and put their money to better use.

Swimming and diving supporters forming booster club

Editor, The Spotlight:

The Bethlehem Central School District is fortunate to have both outstanding academic and athletic programs for the youth of our community.

Together, these outstanding programs provide a positive environment that enables our children to be tomorrow's leaders by learning how to set challenges for themselves and knowing the feeling of achievement by meeting personal goals.

The scholastic swimming and diving programs for middle school modified and boys and girls varsity high school teams are examples of the great opportunities that Bethlehem youth have in our area. The varsity swimming and diving teams have been a strong athletic presence in the district and the Capital District for more than 33 years.

Many of the parents and coaches who now have children in the school system once swam on these teams.

Building on this history, the parents, coaches and alumni of the teams are joining to form a nonprofit booster club to support Bethlehem's scholastic swimming and diving programs.

Starting with 90 families in our community, we hope to establish goals through the Bethlehem Swimming and Diving Booster Club — under the auspices of the Bethlehem Central Athletic Association — that will support projects for our young athletes and coaches.

An invitation has been sent to the families of all 2004-'05 teams' members to join us at an organizational meeting at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, March 15, in the high school media center.

The Booster Club would also like to extend an invitation to any parent who may have a child who would like to swim or dive for one of the teams.

We would like to thank the school district and the Bethlehem community for their continued support for our children to foster a positive environment for both academic and sports development.

Up for discussion

It's time to start preparing for several book discussions coming in April. Sign up now and get a copy of the book for your group.

• For adults, it's Love and Hate in Jamestown, by David Price, for Wednesday, April 6, at 7 p.m.

In his book, Price writes that in the early 1600s, Spanish ships crossed and re-crossed the Atlantic loaded with gold, silver and jewels for the Spanish monarchy. The English were late in their attempts to establish outposts in the Americas.

The expeditions were inadequately supplied, the colonists unsuited to hardship, and many died from starvation, disease and Indian attacks.

Rivalries among the leaders caused instability, and some of the colonists bolted for home when they had a chance. How did the struggling Jamestown colony survive?

Price's account makes the reader aware of how much of our history we take for granted, and allows us to imagine how easily things could have turned out differently.

• If you are in grades 2 or 3, Tippy Lemmey, by Patricia McKissack is the book for you.

Not only is Tippy Lemmey the only dog Leandra, Paul, and Jeannie have ever met with a first and a last name, he's a living, breathing monster.

When they ride their bikes, he chases them, snapping at their heels. When they run, he runs. If they cross the street, he follows. There's no getting away from him — over him or under him. He's their No. 1 enemy.

Leandra, Paul, and Jeannie try to come up with a plan to stop Tippy Lemmey, but nothing works. But then Tippy does something totally unexpected, and the kids realize that maybe he's not their enemy after all.

The library will be closed except for this program on Friday, April 8, at 7 p.m.

• Poppy by Avi should suit grades 4 through 7 just fine.

This is an animal fantasy that pits a tiny deer mouse named Poppy against the evil Mr. Ocax, a great-horned owl.

As an adventure story, the book combines action, suspense and humor. As a novel with a beautiful character, it convincingly portrays growth as Poppy faces her fears and finds her way.

Parents are invited to come, too, on Tuesday, April 12, at 7 p.m.

Planning for college

Signup up is necessary for the upcoming program on College Planning for High School Juniors & Parents that takes place on Tuesday, March 15, at 7 p.m.

The workshop and work session will zone in on specific steps to take in starting the two-year and four-year college search, presented by Sally M. Ten Eyck, a certified educational planner.

Lapsit storytime set

Lapsit storytime, designed for children under two years accompanied by a caregiver, meets at 10:15 a.m. on Thursday, March 17. Signup is necessary.

Nimblefingers raffle

Buy your raffle tickets for a beautiful Nimblefingers quilt and matching pillows that are being raffled off. Tickets are $1 for one or six for $5 and can be purchased at the circulation desk.

The drawing will be on April 3 at the Harbinger of Spring Classical Concert.

Poets to meet

Thursday Night Poets will meet on March 10 at 7 p.m. Newcomers welcome.

COLDWELL BANKER PRIME PROPERTIES

IT'S A PAIN IN THE NECK

As a seller, we want the property we market to look spotlessly attractive to potential homebuyers. But even the most impeccable housekeepers find that maintaining their house in prime showing condition begins to wear thin after a few weeks.

It is a lot of work to keep the beds perpetually made, the kitchen and bathrooms spotless and closets neat. Is it worth it? It is - if you want to sell your house for top dollar in a reasonable amount of time. When buyers see normal household clutter, they might take the presumption that your house hasn't been maintained. They see bathtub rings and think "plumber's bills". Dusty vents cause them to imagine having to replace the entire heating and air conditioning system. People are often functioning more on emotion than logic when selecting a house.

You can help your Realtor by minimizing the objections that buyers might have to a little ordinary chaos. The extra energy you put into keeping your home in pristine condition will entice buyers to fall in love with it.

Blackbirds survive weekend trip to North Country

By ROB JONAS

The Voorheesville boys basketball team is becoming the king of the comeback.

The Blackbirds rallied from fourth-quarter deficits to defeat

Section III champion Westhill 37-32 and Section VII champion Plattsburgh 43-39 at last weekend's class B regional tournament in the Potsdam-Massena region.

The victories place Voorheesville in Friday's state semifinal game against Section V champion Palmyra-Macedon at the Glens Falls Civic Center.

"These come-from-behind victories are starting to get to me," Voorheesville coach Don Catellier said. "That's four in a row where we've had to come from behind."

Westhill had the Blackbirds on the ropes in last Friday's regional semifinal at Indian River High School until Voorheesville went on a 16-5 fourth-quarter run to pull out a 37-32 victory.

"The first half, they played really good defense. We scored the first nine points of the game, but then we got slowed down for a bit," Catellier said. "The third quarter, we just started playing really well."

Andy Catellier netted all eight of his points after halftime, and Greg Klopfer scored six of his team-high 10 points in the second half to lead the Voorheesville comeback. Mark Carson and Nick Duncan each added eight points.

The Blackbirds ran into a red-hot Plattsburgh team in last Saturday's regional finals at Clarkson University. The Hornets had knocked off third-ranked Ogdensburg Free Academy in the regional semifinals and were eyeing another upset after outscoring fourth-ranked Voorheesville 17-5 in the second quarter to take a 26-14 halftime lead.

It didn't help the Blackbirds that Carson and Duncan — their starting center and power forward — each got into foul trouble in the first half and sat out much of the second quarter.

"It wasn't so much (Plattsburgh) as us," Catellier said. "We kind of tripped over our own feet. We had nine fouls called against us in the first quarter. We haven't had nine fouls against us in a half all season."

Voorheesville regained its defensive composure in the second half. The Blackbirds limited Plattsburgh to four points in the third quarter to cut the deficit to 30-25 and allowed only one Hornets' field goal in the fourth quarter to complete the 16-point turnaround.

"We picked up our man-to-man defense" in the second half, Catellier said.

Duncan led Voorheesville with 21 points, 10 of which came in the fourth quarter. Klopfer and Greg Delaney each added six points, and Andy Catellier contributed four points and seven assists.

"Nick just got open, and we got him the ball," coach Catellier said of Duncan.

The Blackbirds face another challenge in Friday's state semifinal. Palmyra-Macedon enters the tournament off a stunning 61-34 regional victory over Section VI champion Lackawanna, the state's top-ranked class B team.

"We're going in nice and loose," Catellier said. "We wanted to win Sectionals, and we did that. Then, we went up (north) with the hope of winning at least one regional game, and we wound up winning both."

Gloeckler takes seventh at state swim meet

Bethlehem's Larry Gloeckler was part of a fast-paced 500-yard freestyle final at last Saturday's New York State Boys Swimming and Diving Championships at the Nassau County Aquatic Center on Long Island.

Gloeckler swam a season-best time of 4:46.10 to take seventh among public school swimmers and ninth in the Federation. The top two times in the finals were under 4:37. Guilderland-Voorheesville's Bruce Maki was ninth in the public school standings and 12th overall with a time of 4:51.10.

Gloeckler was also 11th in both the public school and Federation standings in the 200 freestyle with a time of 1:46.86, and he was part of Bethlehem's 400 freestyle relay team that placed 17th in a time of 3:22.09. Tim DeGroff, Sean Kennedy and Aaron Brauner joined Gloeckler on the relay team.

DeGroff and Kennedy competed individually at the state meet for Bethlehem. DeGroff was 37th overall in the 50 freestyle with a preliminary heat time of 23.28 seconds and 39th in the 100 backstroke with a prelim time of 58.15 seconds. Kennedy swam a time of 1:05 in the prelims to place 33rd in the 100 breaststroke.

Maki also competed in the 200 individual medley. He was 28th overall in the prelims with a time of 2:03.14.

BCMS hosts girls b'ball clinic

There will be a basketball clinic for girls in grades two through eight March 12 and 19 at Bethlehem Central Middle School.

The clinic goes from 9 to 11 a.m. both days. The cost is $30 per participant, and registration can either mailed in advance by March 10 or taken the day of the clinic.

Completed registration forms can be mailed to Mark Nealon, 6 Terrace Place, Troy 12180.

Intersectional relay comes up big

Section II's intersectional relay team, which included Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk's Sam Craven, took first place at Sunday's New York State High School Indoor Track and Field Championships at the Carrier Dome in Syracuse.

Craven, Kyle O'Connor (Niskayuna), Colin Frederickson (Colonie) and Ken Little (Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake) won with a time of 8:57.97.

Bethlehem's Matt Shaffer placed eighth in the boys 3,200-meter race. The junior finished with a time of 9:36.12.

On the girls' side, Bethlehem's Emily Malinowski finished 10th in the 1,500 with a time of 4:49.49, 12th in the 55-meter hurdles semi-finals with a time of 9.03 seconds.

Persico rolls Sect. II to title

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk's Nicole Persico led the Section II girls bowling team to the title at last Saturday's New York State Public High School Athletic Association Championships at Bowler's Club in Latham.

Persico rolled a team-high 1,385 pins over six games to help Section II take the team title with a state tournament record score of 6,533.

Bethlehem's Joe DeVoe also had a good day at the state tournament. DeVoe finished his six games with a score of 1,445 to help Section II take the team title with 6,874 pins.

97% Enjoy Working Here!

In two surveys in the past four years, 97% of our staff told us they would refer a friend or a member of their family for employment at Wildwood Programs.

WHY? We do worthwhile work and have a sense of accomplishment. We make a difference in people's lives. We work with children and adults with developmental disabilities. Our employees are talented, caring people who are given the chance to do what they do best. We are an open, supportive workplace where employees are truly appreciated.

THE BENEFITS OF WILDWOOD: Full training with no experience necessary, promotional opportunities, comprehensive insurance, employer paid pension, retiree health insurance, tuition assistance, educational assistance, personal leave, sick leave, up to four weeks vacation, paid training, life insurance, dental insurance, child care, short and long-term pay protection, paid holidays, cell phone accounts, credit union and more.

Residence Counselor: We are looking for dynamic individuals to work as Residential Counselors, promoting independence, self-esteem and community integration in our Delmar Residence. You should be able to work independently and have strong interpersonal skills. This is a great position to grow in - we provide full benefits, training, certifications and opportunities throughout the Capital District. Valid NYS driver's license and High School Diploma/GED are a must. Experience working with adults with developmental disabilities is a plus. Night, evening and weekend shifts required.

Residence Counselor (Part-time Mornings): Same position as Residential Counselor - working as part-time morning shift only. A great way to earn extra income and be out of work by 10:30 a.m.

Awake/Overnight Counselor: Same requirements as the residential counselor position - working mainly an awake overnight shift.

WOULD YOU LIKE TO WORK HERE? THE PERCENTAGES ARE IN YOUR FAVOR.

board on March 9, as originally planned. If another meeting is needed, BPAC will meet March 21 and the plan would go to the town board at the March 23 meeting. Egan appeared enthused that BPAC's efforts were appreciated and by the articulate nature of the comments.

"In the past, some of the comments were emotional and angry in nature," Egan said. "You didn't see any of that. They've spoken their view and we've responded."

The most controversial topics proved to be the establishment of a conservation advisory council and the encouragement to use conservation subdivisions in residential areas.

Egan said the comprehensive plan will illustrate a balance of interests.

"Not everybody is going to get what they want," Egan said. "Still, we need to get a plan adopted."

Even those that spoke against one or more points in the plan, seemed to agree with the consensus that a plan, in general, is long overdue.

Resident Ed Kleinke said, when wearing his three hats as a resident, member of a longtime town farm family and a landscape architect, he feels somewhat qualified to speak on the plan.

"We may not be there yet, but the process from where it started out, has come a long way and in the right direction," Kleinke said.

The thematic complaint of those residents who expressed opposition to a conservation council was a concern that the council would be given too much authority. At least one resident noted a tendency of councils, even advisory in nature, to exist on their own as governmental entities. Selkirk resident Jim Bohl said he didn't believe in a conservation council.

"I don't believe in big government. Bethlehem Tomorrow, how many of you are landowners? Right now, you have nothing to lose and everything to gain. Think about the people who have owned their land and paid taxes on it," Bohl said.

Bethlehem Tomorrow is a group that has come out in favor of the comprehensive plan. Egan said those who spoke against the conservation council seemed to miss the point of establishing one.

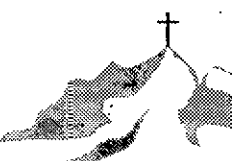

"They seemed to misunderstand the nature of it. They picture it having more authority than what the drafters or I envision it having. If it had the authority they think it's going to, then I would be the first to share their concerns."

Egan said there are projects looming that are already being envisioned for a conservation council, including working with willing landowners to create a trail system behind the Vista Tech Park and connecting the Canadian-Pacific Railroad via trails with property Five Rivers has offered up. Egan said resident Dennis O'Leary, who recently purchased 68 acres in town, has goals of establishing a center on his property. The group could act as a liaison, Egan said, not charged with buying any property, but "coordinating things." O'Leary spoke at the hearing in favor of a conservation council. Such a group could save the town board time and energy, Egan said, by exploring what kind of grants are out there.

"We've said over and over, we're not trying to use eminent domain. We want to work with willing landowners," Egan said.

Dave Dembling said he would work with the town. "I am one of the willing landowners in town that is anxious to participate in a trailway system," Dembling said. "We see it as the greater good for the community."

Green Power.

The natural choice for New York State.

Introducing competition into New York's electricity market has provided choices that never existed before. Since 1998, electricity customers have been able to choose a supplier other than their local utility, and now they have the ability to buy electricity generated from pollution-free sources that will never run out.

According to recent market research, 84% of residential electric customers said that the environmental impact of how a company makes electricity is important when choosing their electricity supplier.

"Green Power" is environmentally-friendly electricity that is generated from renewable fuel sources such as solar, wind, water and biomass. In New York State, Green Power providers supply environmentally-friendly electricity that is generated from these renewable fuel sources.

Generating a green future.

Unlike traditional fuels such as oil and natural gas, Green Power comes from sources that are constantly replenished and readily available:

- Solar — Solar energy systems convert sunlight directly into electricity.
- Wind — Modern wind turbines use large blades to catch the wind, spin turbines, and generate electricity.
- Biomass — Organic wastes such as wood, other plant materials and landfill gases are used to generate electricity.
- Low-impact or small hydro — Small installations use running or falling water to drive turbines that generate electricity.
- Produces fewer environmental impacts than fossil fuel energy.
- Helps to diversify the fuel supply and contributes to more stable energy prices.
- Reduces use of imported fossil fuels, keeping dollars spent on energy in the State's economy.
- Creates jobs and helps the economy by spurring investments in environmentally-friendly facilities.
- Creates healthier air quality and helps to reduce respiratory illness.

Switching to Green Power is easy as:

1. Call — Call the PSC's toll-free number 1-866-GRN-POWR (1-866-476-7697) for an updated list of Green Power service providers in your area.
2. Compare — Compare the Green Power programs.
3. Choose — Choose the Green Power program that is right for you.

What happens when you choose to buy Green Power?

The Green Power you buy is supplied to the power grid that delivers electricity to all customers in your region. Your Green Power purchase supports the development of environmentally-friendly generation. You are helping to provide a cleaner, brighter New York for generations to come.

When you choose Green Power, you will still receive the safe, reliable electricity you've come to depend on. Your utility will continue to deliver your electricity and provide you with customer service, including responding in emergencies.

Using New York's power to change the future.

The Public Service Commission has initiated a process for developing and implementing a Renewable Portfolio Standard (RPS) to ensure that within 10 years at least 25% of the electricity purchased in New York State is generated from renewable resources.

In addition, you now receive an Environmental Disclosure Label in your electric bill twice every 12 months. The labels show the mix of fuels used to generate the electricity you buy and related air emissions. Knowing about electricity generation, fuel sources and their environmental impacts will help you make informed choices.

Use your power to choose.

Doing your homework is the key to making an informed choice. The Public Service Commission has the information to help you evaluate competing offers and select the energy options, including Green Power, that are right for you. For an energy supplier guide, visit www.AskPSC.com and click on the "Power To Choose" logo.

Learn more about Green Power.

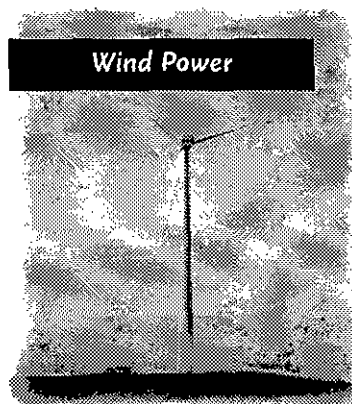

You can learn more about the future of renewable energy at the New York State Energy Research and Development Authority (NYSERDA) Web site www.powernaturally.org

For more information and a list of Green Power service providers, please call the New York State Public Service Commission at 1-866-GRN-POWR (1-866-476-7697) or visit their Web site at www.AskPSC.com

Choose Green Power.

The power to change New York's future.

Wind Power

For more information on New York's Green Power choices, please visit the NYS Public Service Commission Web site at www.AskPSC.com or call 1-866-GRN-POWR.

New York State and the Public Service Commission (PSC) have made a commitment to promote the use of Green Power and to foster the development of renewable energy generation resources. These sources include solar, wind, biomass, landfill gas and hydro.

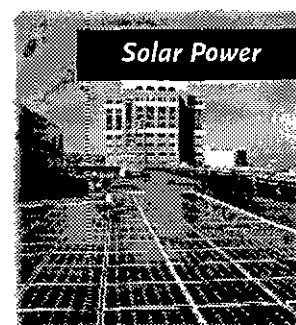

Knowledge is power.

As an energy consumer, you now have access to information that lets you assess the environmental impacts of the energy you purchase. Periodically you receive an Environmental Disclosure Label in your electric bill showing the mix of fuels used to generate the electricity you purchase, and related air emissions. Knowing about electricity generation, fuel sources and their environmental impact will help you make informed choices.

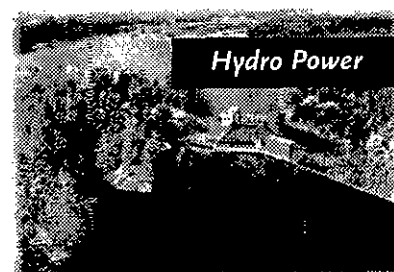

The natural choice for helping NY's environment and economy.

You can support cleaner, sustainable energy solutions by shopping for electricity suppliers that offer Green Power. Developing innovative, environmentally sound energy technologies and a robust Green Power market will provide New York's consumers with more energy choices, benefit the environment, increase jobs, and help the economy grow.

Green Power is clean power.

NYSTI offers world premiere of "King of Shadows"

BY DONNA J. BELL

Newbery Award-winning and Emmy Award-nominated screenwriter and novelist, Susan Cooper's book King of Shadows has metamorphosed into a play and onto the New York State Theater Institute stage in Adrian Mitchell's world premiere.

The story, a mystery/fantasy, revolves around a group of young contemporary American boys — actors — who are selected to perform Shakespeare's "A Mid-Summers Night's Dream" at the New Globe Theatre in England. By the magic of the theater, one boy, Nat Field (played by P.J. Verhoest) travels back to Shakespeare's time to play Puck at the original Globe Theatre in 1599. Shakespeare had just lost his son Hamnet and befriends Field.

"It's a family show," said Ed Lange, executive director of the New York State Institute. "The kids love to see boys of their own age sword fighting and tumbling and the parents bring the with them the understanding of the parent-child relationship. Everyone there is going to get a kick out of how Shakespeare is used in modern times."

Leading the ensemble cast is the 14-year-old Broadway veteran Verhoest. Although only a seventh-grader, Verhoest has performed on Broadway in "The Rivals," "The Boy from Oz," and "Oklahoma!" As though those weren't enough credits for a boy who isn't old enough to drive, Verhoest performed in a national touring production of "Beauty and the Beast" and has performed in many productions of the New York City Ballet.

The events of the play occur in 1999 and in Shakespeare's time. Because of this, many of the cast

"King of Shadows" is based on Susan Cooper's Newbery Award-winning novel.

P. J. Verhoest in the role of the magical spirit Puck performs an aerial flip in "The King of Shadows".

play double roles — one modern and one in 1599. Among these is NYSTI resident company member John Romeo who plays the role of Arby in modern times and Richard Burbage in the past.

David Bunce, a 20-year veteran of NYSTI, plays the role of William Shakespeare, and serves as the fight choreographer for the production.

"The music is lovely," Lange said. "There is sword fighting and the boys go through a fencing and tumbling class. They perform the magic moments of a mid-summer's night. And it's fascinating going back in time and seeing the comparison of how they performed the show in 1599 and today."

The new play features the talents of a novelist, playwright-poet, director, and a designer from the United Kingdom, working in collaboration with an American composer, cast, and designers.

British novelist and Emmy

Award-nominated screenwriter Susan Cooper is probably best known for her Newbery Award-winning series of fantasy novels, "The Dark is Rising." King of Shadows, published in 2000, is regarded widely as her best novel since "The Dark is Rising" series.

Adrian Mitchell, a British playwright and poet, adapted Cooper's novel for the stage. His best-known work for the theatre is probably his verse adaptation of "Marat/Sade" for the Royal Shakespeare Theatre. Mitchell has worked with NYSTI on several previous projects including "Vasilisa the Fair," "Pied Piper," and most recently, as the book writer and lyricist of "The Snow Queen."

American composer Will Severin has earned a number of awards for his musical compositions, both background scores for original productions, existing dramas, and as co-composer of the NYSTI musicals "A Tale of Cinderella," and "Magna Carta." As "King of Shadows" is a play with music, Severin has written original music for the production as well as writing adaptations of traditional songs from the Elizabethan era.

British stage director and playwright Greg Banks first came to NYSTI from England as a director with his company, Travelling Light Theatre.

Already in production, the show runs March 12, at 8 p.m.; Sunday, March 13, at 2 p.m.; Friday, March 18, at 8 p.m.; and Saturday, March 19, at 8 p.m. Tickets are $20 for adults, $16 for senior citizens and students and $10 for children up to age 12, and student rush. There is a 25 percent discount for groups of 10 or more. Tickets are available through the NYSTI box office at 274-3256. For information visit the Web site at www.nysti.org.
