Local hopefuls line up

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

Incumbent town board members and challengers alike seem to have the same goals for the town of Bethlehem, regardless of party affiliation: lower taxes, preservation of green space and open and efficient government.

Two seats on the town board as well as the position of town supervisor are up for grabs this fall, and two newcomers will face two incumbents.

Sam Messina, who is running on the Independence line and is also endorsed by the Democratic committee, said his extensive experience both in government and the private sector, as well as his volunteer experience, would make him a good choice for town board.

Messina, who has worked in various positions in the state government, including the Department of Environmental Conservation, the New York state Coastal Management Program and was director of administration and management for the state Department of State, said these positions give him the experience to help shape Bethlehem's future.

"To go way back in terms of planning and preserving the character of Bethlehem," said Messina.

He has been active in Bethlehem's planning process since 1987, when he was a part of Bethlehem Citizens for Responsible Planning, which led to the establishment of LUMAC, the land use management plan never approved by the town board but which served as a development guideline and was the precursor to the town's current comprehensive plan. As a longtime resident of Bethlehem and an advocate for the town's comprehensive plan and new updated zoning, his goal, if elected, is to make sure the new zoning laws are properly implemented.

Site in Gunderland likely a significant link to ancient history

By MARY LANNON

Somewhere between 4,000 and 5,000 years ago, ancient people regularly canoed the Normanskill to a 22 square-mile encampment that now sits across Western Avenue from the Gunderland Town Hall.

The people, who were Homo sapiens, would have traveled in small groups of about 50, most likely kin to each other, meeting with other kin groups to find mates. They would travel light and so not regularly make pottery, though they had the capacity to do so. To cook they would put their food directly into the fire or heat up rocks and then place the food on the heated rocks.

Their camping site would have been one of many in about a 100-mile circumference. The decision to camp was based on the likelihood of gathering an abundance of food, not an easy task in that hunter-and-gatherer society. Acorns or berries, ripe for the eating, would attract them as well as deer, a time when men using atlatls — or spear-throwers — would have an easier time hunting. Along with deer, rabbit and an occasional bear would have been among the animals that would form about 10 percent of a varied and more healthful diet than we have today or that even

Decisions up to local towns when developing land

By STEPHEN PAUSE

If an archaeological site is uncovered, there are deeper questions to answer than "to build or not to build." There are political, scientific and moral decisions that factor into if and how a site is researched and possibly excavated.

According to John Bonafide, services coordinator for the New York State Historical Preservation Society (SHPO), decision-making initially lies with local governments.

"Local municipalities have tremendous power, if they choose to use it," he said.

Board rejects Rodriguez' petition for town supervisor

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

It looks like Victor Rodriguez of Selkirk, the 20-year-old founder of the Voter Rights Party, will not be running against incumbent town Supervisor Theresa Egan in November.

Objections to signatures on petitions garnered by Rodriguez had been under investigation from the Albany County Board of Elections, and last Thursday, the board reached a decision upholding the challenges to the legitimacy of the signatures.

John Walsh, a member of Bethlehem's Conservative Party (which is fielding Robert Jasinski as a supervisor candidate), filed objections to Rodriguez' petitions last week, citing that several of the signatures were from people not registered to vote in the town of Bethlehem. Other objections included several signatures that indicated hamlets or villages not acceptable as addresses and signatures by people who had already signed petitions for another candidate, according to Jim Clancy, Democratic Commissioner of Albany County.

Of the 778 signatures obtained by Rodriguez, 321 of the signatures, or objections, were sustained. By far the highest number of questionable signatures came from people who gave incorrect addresses.

"Really, he should have known better," said Clancy.

Clancy said people who sign petitions are only responsible for their actual signatures, and it's up to the candidate to fill in the other information correctly.

"The election law is very clear, very black and white," said Clancy. "I'm confident the courts would agree with this ruling."

Rodriguez, who is appealing this decision, disagrees.

"The election law is not clear at all," he said. "All it says is that the person

Town police make various arrests

A Queens man was arrested by the Bethlehem Police Department on Sept. 1 on charges of false personation. Darrell Lamar Taylor, alias Tony Lee of 2038 Seagirt Blvd, Queens, was a passenger in a Chevy Suburban which was stopped at a road check on River Road for equipment violations, police said.

Officer Chris Hughes asked Taylor to produce I.D., and when he could not, he gave the name of Tony Lee and stated he had a New York State I.D. card. Hughes could not find that name on file, and Taylor then admitted to lying, police said. Taylor was released and will appear in Town Court on Sept. 20 at 4 p.m.

An Albany woman was charged with fourth degree criminal possession of stolen property on Sept. 1. Tammy Jean Soden of Third Street in Albany was interviewed by police after her arrest by Det. Chuck Rudolph at Petrol at 294 Route 9W in Glenmont. Soden gave a written statement implicating herself and admitted to taking the victim's credit card and using it later to purchase gas at Petrol, police said. Soden is scheduled to appear in Town Court Sept. 13.

A Massachusetts woman was arrested Sept. 5 for DWI. Deborah Jean Martin, of Chicopee, Mass., was reported to police in a 911 call from Stewart at 33 Frontage Road by her boyfriend, police said. Martin's boyfriend told police he had a verbal argument with Martin regarding lost tickets for a show at the Pepsi Arena, and he was concerned that she was drinking and taking prescription drugs while driving, police said. The 911 call came after Martin's boyfriend was left at Stewart's without notice, and was given a courtesy transport to the Greyhound bus station, police said.

While returning, police said Martin was observed on the southbound shoulder off Route 9W in the area of Corning Hill with her four-way flashers on.

When stopped, police said they detected a strong odor of alcohol. Martin said she didn't have her license with her and admitted to drinking two or three white Russians, police said. Martin failed field sobriety tests and was arrested. She is scheduled to appear in Town Court on Sept. 20 at 4 p.m.

A Slingerlands man was arrested in a class D felony for grand larceny on Aug. 29. Clarence Moore of Olympian Drive in Slingerlands was arrested on an active arrest warrant, police said. Moore was processed and arraigned before Judge Frank Milano, police said, and was sent to the Albany County Correctional Facility in lieu of $15,000 bail.

A Rensselaer man was arrested Sept. 1 in conjunction with a crime committed Aug. 7. Police said Salvatore Scattareggia of Second Avenue in Rensselaer was arrested for second degree scheme to defraud and for fraudulent accosting. Scattareggia was arrested at the police department by Officer Adam Hornick pursuant to an arrest warrant signed by Judge Paul Dwyer for the two charges, police said.

Scattareggia was arraigned before Judge Frank Milano and was released on his own recognizance and scheduled to return to court Oct. 4 at 4 p.m.

Scrapbookers open workshop slated for continuing ed program at high school

An open workshop is being held for beginner to advanced scrapbookers at Bethlehem Central High School on Thursdays, beginning Sept. 22 (no class on Oct. 13).

There is a beginner's class the first week for those new to scrapbooking. Advanced scrapbookers can use the time to work on their own projects.

Each week following there will be a half-hour lesson with handouts on scrapbooking techniques and the rest of the time students will work on their own albums and scrapbooks.

Scrapbooking tools will be provided for students' use. There will be a limited amount of scrapbooking supplies to purchase. The workshops are held from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. and the course fee is $25.

For information on registering, call the continuing education office at the high school at 439-4921, ext. 22965.

Church accepts donations for sale

First United Methodist Church at 428 Kenwood Ave. in Delmar is accepting donations of clothing and miscellaneous items. Donated items are either given to those in need of them or are sold to support other ministries of the church. Items should be complete or in good working order. The community is also invited to visit the church's Treasure Cove Thrift Shop on Tuesdays from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m. for gently used items.

Future events to plan for include the annual Toy and Doll Fair on Saturday, Oct. 1 and the popular Fall Fair on Saturday, Nov. 5.

Historical group to sponsor Plum Fest

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

Although the town of Clarks-ville is over 200 years old, the Clarksville Historical Society has only been around for a little over a year.

Joe Hogan, town historian and president of the new society, said it was a response to what many Clarksville residents wanted. A small village only about two miles in diameter. Clarksville still has a rich history that is only now beginning to unfold.

Clarksville, which sits on Onondaga limestone, was once the home of a booming lime-burning industry, and the town had over 50 lime-burning kilns at one point. Burning limestone without melting it created the lime that could be used in building. The industry died out in the late 1800s when the cost of wood made lime burning prohibitively expensive.

Now, there is only one old lime-burning kiln, which is on the Hiram Ingraham Farm.

"It's private property," said Hogan. "And it's a hike to get there. People are hesitant to let you go see it."

Hogan is in the process of building a replica of the lime-burning kiln for those who may not know about the former lime industry in town, and he hopes to have it ready in time for Plum Fest, which began in 1999 and is a part of the fund-raising effort for the Clarksville Historical Society. The history of lime is one of the focal points of the historical society.

Hogan is also part of the New Scotland Historical Association board, and the combined efforts of both societies have helped to stimulate interest in the history of both areas.

Plum Fest, which began in the town of New Scotland because it is 'plum' in the middle of Albany County, takes place in a different town each year to celebrate that town's history. This year, Plum Fest is back in Clarksville, and the historical society is going to make the most of it.

"Each fest focuses on one little hamlet," said Hogan. "I've fought to keep it going for the last few years, and even though we don't make that much money, it works out."

The Classic Car Show, which began primarily to get more men interested in history, is something Hogan hopes will prove to be a big draw in coming years.

"If it works, we'll do it every year," he said.

Representatives from the Cave Conservancy, Clarksville Elementary School, Bennett Hill Preserve and the Onesquethaw Fish and Game Club, along with other groups, will be on hand Sept. 24 to kick off Plum Fest. The post office will be issuing reproductions of first day covers of when the post office was Clarksville and Bethlehem.

"That's been a big draw," said Hogan. "The Delmar postmaster will be there."

Although Plum Fest is the fund-raiser for the Historical Society, the society itself is still in the process of being established.

"The main thing is getting everything up and running, so when we're too old to run it, the younger people will be able to take over," said Hogan.

Hogan said he has documented everything meticulously for future leaders of the society.

"Right now our mission is to get it going," he said.

Along with Plum Fest, the society is also responsible for establishing three historical markers in town.

The Clark House, home of local innkeeper Adam Clark, who was the first postmaster of Clarksville from 1826 to 1841, and the Meed House, home of Henry Meed, who was the first postmaster of Bethlehem from 1812 to 1826, will be dedicated at Plum Fest. Costs will be split between the New Scotland Historical Society and the Clarksville Historical Society.

The Houghtaling House marker, which will be dedicated the day after Plum Fest, will be paid for by CHS and by a donation from John Houghtaling. The Hough-taling house is on the National Register of Historic Places. Each historical marker costs $700.

"For two historical groups to work together like this is a very new thing," said Hogan. "We're taking the historical society to a local level, and the state is very interested in us because of this."

No, state, county or town funding is part of the effort.

Additionally, the Clarksville Historical Society is gathering artifacts in the hope of starting a museum. Currently, artifacts are stored in the church.

"Getting a museum would be one goal, but the funding would be tough," said Hogan. "We still need to establish a paperwork and cataloguing process for the artifacts."

The church has been good, but we need a place of our own." Plum Fest will be held Sept. 24 at the Clarksville Community Church.

Puttin' on the dog for hurricane victims

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

Roger Valente, co-owner of Pet Spa in Delmar, really wants to help victims of Hurricane Katrina.

As a former resident of Hilton Head, S.C., the second largest island off the Atlantic coast, he has personally been through three forced evacuations due to hurricanes. While Valente and his family were lucky enough each time to have the resources to evacuate, he knows that there are many in the wake of the disaster in New Orleans and the Gulf Coast who are not so lucky.

"What about the poor people, the ones without a car or credit cards?" he asked. "Just try to rent a motel room anywhere without a credit card. How will they get out?"

Valente has come up with an idea for a dog and cat show that could help raise money for hurricane victims. Valente is still planning the show, which he hopes will take place in November. At a minimum, all entry fees would go toward charitable organizations to help hurricane victims.

"I want to do charitable things, and I want to do something locally," he said. "If the participants bring their pets to Pet Spa to get groomed, then fine, but that's not the object. All the money would go to charity."

Valente has a history of helping out in crisis situations. A trip to Bosnia in 1996 turned into a four-month-long stay in the war torn country, where he helped local municipalities get aid from the U.N. and the European Union.

A former New York City cop, he spent 11 years on the force and retired at age 32.

"My wife is the entrepreneur," he said.

Pet Spa was founded by his wife, Patricia, in 1988, after they moved to Delmar from Hilton Head to be closer to their children. The Valentés own both the Delmar and Latham Pet Spa locations. The Latham shop opened in 1988 and Delmar's opened just last year. Along with the standard bathing and grooming, each features two Jacuzzis, sauna drying cabinets for after the bath, and Internet video cameras, so owners who leave their dogs or cats at Pet Spa can have video access to their pets at any time. "No one else has ever done this," said Valente.

A camera scans the boarding areas, and the user can adjust the picture to zoom in or out on the pet. The service is free of charge.

"It's a confidence builder," Valente said.

Pet Spa also boasts that it is the largest "catary" in the Capital District, which features large cages over 5-feet high for each cat. The cages are equipped with kitty jungle gyms and shelves for optimum exercise and comfort. Doggie day care is also a feature, and each dog gets a five by five "cell," each which open into each other to form a common room where the dogs can socialize.

"The reason many people leave their dogs here is because they don't want them to be alone," said Valente. "If there are problems with a dog, if it can't be social for some reason, then we don't take it."

Dogs and cats are kept in temperature and humidity controlled areas, Valente said, to keep stress to a minimum. The facility also features sprinklers in case of a fire.

"That's rare," he said. "The key to pets is to not let them get stressed. The less stress the better."

Monty gets a bath at Pet Spa of Delmar. Pet Spa is planning a November dog and cat show, with all proceeds going to charity.

BC alum leaves NBC news post

By JIM CUOZZO

NBC News President Neil Shapiro, a Bethlehem Central High School alumnus, has resigned. Shapiro weathered Sept. 11, the Iraq War and Hurricane Katrina.

Shapiro developed his passion for news as editor of his high school newspaper, The Bethlehem Star, and announced his resignation late last week. In a prepared memo to NBC staffers, Shapiro said, "I found myself missing the opportunity for the kind of creativity I've had in previous jobs." His last day was Sept. 9.

According to online news and wire reports, Shapiro began his career at NBC in March 1993 as executive producer of "Dateline NBC." The show received several awards and excellent television ratings under Shapiro's direction. In June 2001 Shapiro was named NBC News President in charge of such programs as "Nightly News," "The Today Show," and MSNBC.

Shapiro was named earlier this summer as one of the first-ever recipients of the Bethlehem High School Hall of Fame Awards. The Spotlight spoke with Shapiro upon receiving the award and he said, "I am very proud and very grateful to be selected as part of the freshman alumni award class at Bethlehem High School."

Capt. Dennis E. Fitzpatrick, commanding officer of the USS John F. Kennedy, and the late singer-songwriter Jo-Carol Block Davidson were also named to the first Bethlehem High School Hall of Fame Awards Class. Shapiro may have some free time to see his new award at the high school as he transitions to new endeavors. His father still resides in Delmar. His mother passed away this spring.

Plan for fun, but watch out for everything else

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

COMMENTARY:

Mom's
the

It's a little bit like Thanksgiving dinner, the Murphy's Pisspot Fishing Competition held in Crookhaven, Ireland, every August.

Thanksgiving dinner takes hours and hours (even days, what with all the brined turkeys being cooked nowadays) to prepare and after as little as one very satisfying hour, it's over. Likewise, preparations for the Murphy's Cup — a more genteel description — can take a great amount of time and the event itself can go by far too quickly.

Those of us lucky enough to gather for the same idyllic late summer span of time in Ireland's most southwesterly area look forward to the friendly fishing competition with great joy. For many of us, the surrounding antics are more amusing than the fishing itself.

The roots of the fishing competition are very touching. Seven years ago, David Stogdall from Kenya and his brother Peter from Scotland sat in O'Sullivan's pub, chatting with its owner, Billy O'Sullivan, when a mother and her five children arrived in, past regulars who hadn't been around for a while. When Billy asked how they'd been, he heard the sort of news you just don't like to hear — the father had passed away and the mother was stretching an already strapped budget to let the kids have a vacation in a place their father had always loved.

When the Stogdalls and Billy asked if there was anything they could do, the mother requested that somebody could take the children out fishing. On the spot, the Stogdalls and Billy volunteered their boats and time to fish with the children, divided into two crews and laid a wager as to who would catch the most fish.

The Murphys have not been to Crookhaven since then, but the competition that bears their name continues. An antique chamber pot serves as the victory cup, and rests in a place of honor when not being used as a vessel for victory Champagne on the great day itself.

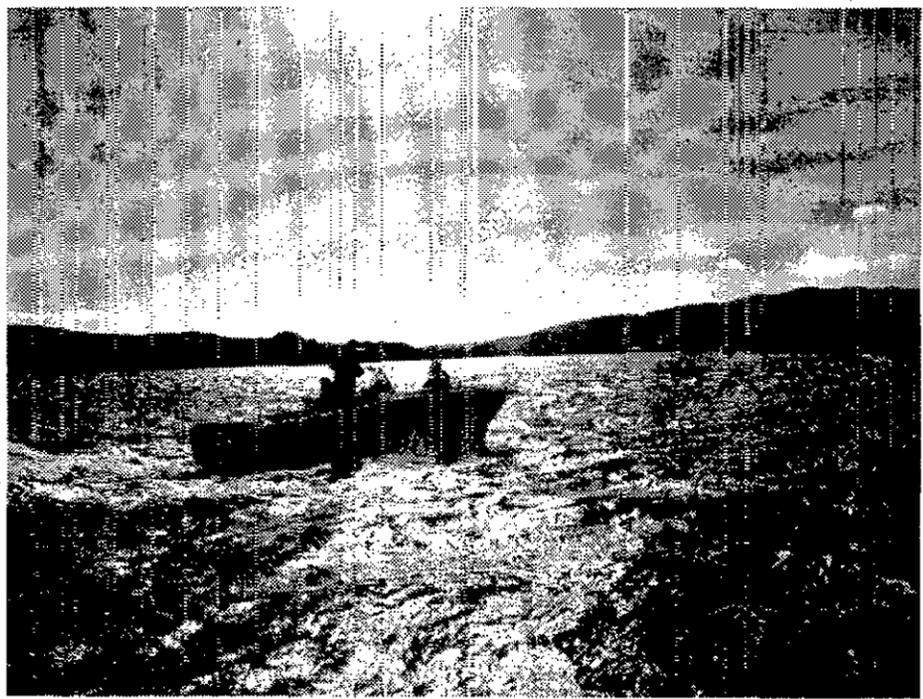

Preparations began at our house around the holiday season, as we received Christmas gifts of wrestling masks and decided they'd be perfect for our roles as judges of the competition. Huge red-white-and-blue top hats purchased during the Fourth of July festivities in Burlington, Vt., promised great laughs — or ridicule, but that would only add to the fun.

The games really began in early June, when my sister-in-law, flooded by e-mails and phone calls from people who only get to visit Crookhaven for a short period of time each summer, chose a date for the fishing competition with the assistance of Fiona from England and Mandy from Northern Ireland.

Jack Sheehan, an Irishman from Cork city who spends as much time as he can in his house in Crookhaven, took exception to the fixing of the date by foreigners, thereby spawning a slew of e-mails that left people from Kenya to the Capital District laughing as they read them, and pounding out responses that promised to make the day one to remember.

English journalist Patrick Mulchrone crafted a verbal image of parents sipping tea from tartan thermoses while their children gamboled along the strand. Recalling England's bravery in the face of past danger, he vowed that he and his family would not back down from the Murphy's Cup. Jonty, a London lawyer, said he'd already created 4,000 pieces of merchandise to sell on the day of the fishing competition, and entered a state of purdah, communicating no further until the day of the competition itself. My own true love wrote a long defense of the appointed day, offering evidence that Nostradamus himself had foretold the great day. David Stogdall, who brings the ingredients for a potent African drink called a dawa, wondered if Jack might not be happier drinking milk, something more in line with the sport David suggested might suit Jack better

The now-retired Billy O'Sullivan was left to wonder if any of us had jobs, we were spending so much time on e-mail.

So all of our preparations were made, and lots of good-natured ribbing took place as we all met up and anticipated the great day.

But life has a way of reminding us that sometimes things don't go as planned and when two teen-age boys capsized their small boat on the day set for the competition, people gathering with silly hats and shirts sprang into action, heading overland to scour the cliffs for the one boy still missing, or zipping up life jackets and heading off in their own boats to avert a tragedy. After 45 minutes in frigid North Atlantic waters and another hour clinging to wind-blown rocks, the boy was rescued. Brought ashore in shock and hypothermic, the nurses among us sprang into action, taking him inside and slowly warming him up while waiting for the Coast Guard medical helicopter that took him to a hospital.

A few days later, we watched in horror as Hurricane Katrina struck the Gulf Coast and the levee that let New Orleans be a city broke.

Where had the preparation been? What use is all the modern, accurate meteorological technology, if leaders — from the local to the national level — couldn't take the next step and get more people out of harm's way?

Comparisons to 9/11 were quick to come, and with it the fact that none of us wanted to see — we clearly remain a whole lot more vulnerable than we want to be.

Which means that we all need to be prepared for danger, which could come in the form of an unanticipated attack or a predicted weather pattern. So the information's back, the kind we had in anticipation of 9/11 and after the Sept. 11 attacks. Get bottled water; keep a full tank of gas in the car; have some cash on hand; make sure there are batteries in the flashlights; have an escape plan prepared with a meeting place for the family in case you can't get home; have an out-of-town contact in case all the local lines go down.

It's enough to make you want to stick your head in the sand, and to totally understand the people who avoid the evening news and the morning newspaper. How on earth can we plan for catastrophe when it takes all our energy to get through the routine of daily living?

But we have to, and if we can plan for the fun of a fishing competition, we can think ahead so that we and our loved ones have a fighting chance in the face of a catastrophe. On the day we held our delayed fishing competition in Crookhaven, Dermot O'Sullivan reminded us to respect the sea, and not a child went to bed that night without being reminded to stay within the boundaries their parents give them — and wear a life jacket. It seemed more than fitting that the fishing competition also serves as a way to raise money for the Royal National Lifeboat Institution and the rescue work it does.

Watching the Sept. 11 tributes on a day as beautiful as the one four years ago, tears come first. Then I resolve to make sure my children always know how to reach me, to tell my husband that 19 years after I married him, it turned out to be the best thing I ever did, and to drop an e-mail to the people I love.

In tragedy, there are always reminders of the potential good of mankind. After Sept. 11, there were the heroes, and the people who went to New York City's West Side Highway every day to applaud them.

Tsunami relief efforts ranged from boat-buying to huge donations, and volunteers and donors are stepping up to help Gulf Coast residents.

If we're prepared for the worst, we can better enjoy the best when it comes.

Let's not forget to look for a day when the sun shines bright and we gather with people who make us laugh.

When we cast our nets wide across the water, who knows what we'll catch?

Board ponders options to new elementary school construction

By JIM CUOZZO

New elementary school construction options and how to approach the community about the decision-making process were the primary focus of discussions at last week's meeting of the Bethlehem board of education.

Rich Peckham, representing Collins and Scoville Architects, is overseeing the $95 million district expansion. Peckham presented the board with various options to add classroom space at the six elementary schools. The ideas include adding several classrooms to Slingerlands Elementary, creating new music and art rooms at each elementary school, and constructing a new elementary school or Early Learning Center for kindergarten students.

School board member Stuart Lyman said the board should make its decision based on factual information presented and not wait for a public hearing that involves community input.

"The options presented to us are complex in detail," he said. "We should offer the community a well grounded decision. We are in a decision-making stage, not a planning stage."

Board member James Lytle had a slightly different opinion.

"I don't strongly disagree with Stu's comments," Lytle said, "but I think we might err swinging too far in the other direction. I think we need to have a community dialogue at the appropriate time and lay out the facts and the case. We need to do something to suggest this is important enough to engage in a special dialogue."

Factors involved in the decision-making process include the number of classrooms needed at the elementary school level, the demand on the Slingerlands school, overall construction costs, enrollment projections, long term planning, staffing and operational costs.

"I'm just thinking about our fiduciary responsibility in the future," said Superintendent Les Loomis. "Everything has changed for me about the need to get more efficient. We have to save the community's money."

Loomis and Slingerlands Principal Heidi Bonacquist have been discussing the demands of running a new Early Learning Center compared to an elementary school.

"Les and I have talked about it many times," Bonacquist said. "It is easier to manage a building grades one through five than it is to manage a building K through five, even with help. There is a whole list of impacts daily."

The decision on how to proceed with plans for additional classroom space at Bethlehem's elementary schools will be made sometime in mid-November after more discussion at the next three meetings of the school board.

Rudd Lewis, senior project manager of Sano-Rubin, overseeing construction management of the high school and middle school, gave a slide presentation detailing contractors' work performance through the spring and summer. A new faculty parking lot and new bus parking space along with excavation and structural work in the new two-story wing were discussion highlights.

"A lot of work was undertaken this past summer and the contractors performed remarkably," said Lewis.

The new school year began this week and Gregg Nolte, director of facilities and operations in the district, said that so far there have been very few complaints.

"All of these years of planning and phasing is showing," Nolte said. "It's really paying off."

Lyman noted concern about the cars that drive from Delaware Avenue into Van Dyke at the school drop-off zone and the cross-traffic congestion it creates at the high school. Nolte said Bethlehem school and town officials met to discuss this and other issues.

"As much as we want everybody to come all the way to Van Dyke and turn off the road right in front of the school and drop off there, it didn't happen last year," Nolte said. "We have two student drop-offs, one being in front of the school and one being a cul-de-sac near the cafeteria. The town is pleased with it. The only negative is that you will be discharging your passengers on the traffic side, not on the sidewalk side." Nolte added that school monitors will be present at the site to ensure traffic safety.

"It's a great improvement over what we've had in the past," said Loomis.

Matters of Opinion

Life lessons

With the blame that's being bandied about over managing or mismanaging rescue efforts in the wake of Hurricane Katrina, and the election season kicking into full gear, it's time to consider just who we elect to public office on the local level.

Will the folks we elect on the local level be up to handling the unexpected as far as leadership is concerned.

In an emergency, finger-pointing is useless and debilitating. With Katrina, we realize how important local leaders can be in a real emergency. And, when we bring this down a notch, just how prepared are we as individuals and families to cope with life-threatening situations?

Here in the Northeast, we are more likely to be stricken by heavy snow, ice storms and power outages than hurricanes, but we have experienced our share of devastation doled out by Mother Nature.

With severe weather forecasts, people inundate the grocery markets and gas stations. Yet with modern appliances, we should be able to survive for several days at least with what's already available in the freezer at home.

But how would we handle a situation where full-scale evacuation was necessary either because of natural causes or terrorists? And, who should direct and oversee an operation to protect our citizens? Police agencies, Homeland Security or a combination of rescue operations?

Certainly, communication is one of the ways to ensure people's safety. That means that local, state and federal agencies must be attuned to a plan where the major players know what the "minor" players' role is and vice versa.

Clarity is another important component of protecting people. People need to know exactly what to do in various types of emergencies. Radio and television broadcasts need to specify what the best options are for staying safe.

Families need to have a plan in place in terms of what each family member should do. Local fire departments have information already in terms of a plan to be sure everyone knows what to do, and where to go if a fire breaks out.

Even simple things like having a telephone emergency list in a prominent place in the home can be useful.

Cooperation is also key to staying safe under adverse conditions. People need to remain as calm as possible during an emergency. Panic causes confusion and chaos. When calm heads prevail, there is less chance of making a bad situation even worse than it needs to be.

Sunglasses protect eyelids

With the end of summer rapidly approaching, The Skin Cancer Foundation has one more important sun safety reminder — wear sunglasses!

By now most people should be in the habit of using sunscreen however, most don't realize the importance of wearing sunglasses.

Skin cancer of the eyelids is surprisingly common yet easily preventable with UV blocking sunglasses.

When it comes to skin cancer, the eyelids are not the first place that comes to mind. However, skin cancer on the upper and lower eyelid is one of the most common areas on the face where skin cancer can occur. In fact, eyelid cancers account for about 10 percent of all skin cancer deaths.

In addition, 90 percent of eyelid malignancies are basal cell carcinomas (BCC), with the majority of them appearing on the lower eyelid. While they rarely metastasize, they can be locally aggressive and cause disfigurement and vision impairment.

"This type of skin cancer usually begins small, but if ignored grows and grows and grows," said Stephen Bosniak, MD, of Bosniak + Zilk-ha Ophthalmic, Plastic and Reconstructive Surgery in New York City. "It may begin as a small red lump, looking like a pimple, or it can be a tiny sore that doesn't heal, or the only indication may be loss of eyelashes."

No matter how the skin cancer begins, these warning signs should not be ignored. As with any form of skin cancer, early diagnosis and appropriate treatment ensures the best results.

Before any type of eyelid cancer treatment is contemplated, a full ophthalmologic examination should be obtained to provide a baseline evaluation of the general health of the eyes. Treating skin cancers of the eyelids poses special challenges. Eyelids are composed of extremely specialized mobile skin. To remove the cancer, Mohs microsurgery is highly effective. The cancer is removed layer by layer, with each one studied under the microscope until a cancer-free layer is reached.

The surgeon must attain adequate margins of normal tissue around the malignancy to determine if the cancer has been removed. Then, if reconstruction of the eyelid is needed it is best performed by an ophthalmic plastic surgeon.

"By diagnosing the problem early and by borrowing tissue from the other eyelids, we often can make the reconstructed eyelid look as if it never has had surgery," Bosniak said.

Ultraviolet radiation from the sun is directly responsible for more than 90 percent of all skin cancers. Damage to the eyes is cumulative and builds from years of chronic and prolonged UV exposure. The single best way to prevent this damage is with UV-blocking sunglasses. Therefore, it is best to begin protecting the eyes and eyelids early. Children should be encouraged and get used to wearing UV-blocking sunglasses as soon as they are old enough to wear them safely.

Sunglasses should be wrap-around, fit comfortably and especially important for children, be impact resistant. Neutral gray and amber brown lens tints give true color rendition. Polarizing lenses can cut glare from reflective surfaces, but make sure they are UV blocking. Sunglasses can now block more than 99 percent of UVA and UVB rays.

The Skin Cancer Foundation is the only national and international organization concerned exclusively with the world's most prevalent malignancy — cancer of the skin. The mission of this nonprofit organization is to increase public and professional awareness about the prevention, detection and treatment of skin cancer.

Youth Court will miss board members

Editor, The Spotlight:

As the ninth year of the Bethlehem Youth Court begins, our organization is stronger than ever, thanks in large part to the contributions of two of our founding board members, the Hon. David R. Homer and Janet Kaplan, both of whom recently announced their retirement from the board after many years of generous service.

Judge Homer was one of the founding members of the Youth Court movement in our area, overseeing the creation of the program and spending countless hours in the formation of the program guidelines and regulations.

He was a primary impetus for the program's push beyond its original boundaries into the town of Bethlehem, where he served on the board during the program's formative years and continued in that capacity until his recent retirement.

Judge Homer's sharp legal mind and ability to succinctly analyze the myriad of issues facing our Youth Court, together with his quick wit and unwavering commitment to the goals of alternative sentencing and the well-being of our children, made him a treasured asset to the program.

He will be sorely missed.

Janet Kaplan has also given years of service and dedication to the Bethlehem Youth Court program. Like Judge Homer, Janet was instrumental in the inception and the development of BYC during the mid-90s and used her exceptional problem solving skills and legal know-how to develop the program and integrate it into the community as a viable sentencing alternative. Janet served on the BYC's board of directors as the secretary until 2002 at which time she was unanimously elected co-chairperson.

During her tenure, Janet provided sound legal advice and made sure that the board functioned in an efficient and effective manner.

The board of directors and the participants of the BYC owe a great debt of gratitude to Janet; without her hours of work and love for the program, BYC would not be the strong community resource that it is today.

Altamont approves moratorium

By JAMES CUOZZO

There will be no further development in the village of Altamont's immediate future. The village board unanimously approved a moratorium on subdivisions following a public review of the issue.

The moratorium may stop a potential project being planned for Bozenkill Road. Building Inspector Donald Cropsey said he recently received notice for an application for a 32-lot subdivision. Village Attorney E. Guy Roemer denied a formal application has been filed.

The moratorium does not affect a proposed senior housing project being planned because it lies just outside the village in the town of Guilderland. Trustees did agree to an amendment that states any re-subdivisions of land would be allowed.

Many officials, including Mayor James Gaughan, believe village water capacity is at its limit.

The village is waiting for a decision from Albany County Supreme Court over a land dispute on a 5-acre site off Brandle Road.

The site was sold to the village by Nancy and Michael Trumpler in the hopes of drilling for water. The Trumplers have since asked for a court determination as to who really owns the property, since they believe the deal is not binding.

"We are in a state of suspended animation in regard to this issue," said Gaughan. The village is waiting for a decision responding to its description of discovery, which should come sometime in October.

Meanwhile, the village board approved up to $4,700 to be placed in escrow to pay for the services of Spectra Engineering.

"The town of Guilderland assigned these engineers to work with the village to review and comment on the drilling and testing we have done so far," Gaughan said. "They have been hired to review all records and look at the analysis to see if we met all specifications as required by law."

Neighbors with property near the Brandle Road site are concerned that the water testing is affecting the quality of nearby wells.

A measure approving an additional $5,000 for Barton and Loguidice Engineers has been approved. The money is to cover ongoing demands of the current legal proceedings regarding the water source development project.

"They have spent far and above the amount originally anticipated. This is to cover anticipated expenses largely related to litigation," Gaughan said.

The planning committee, meanwhile, will push forward with its comprehensive review of all property encompassing the one square mile village while the moratorium is in place.

Board OKs Bethlehem Center, storm water pond

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

Two items before the Bethlehem planning board last week got the go-ahead to move on to their next phases.

Bethlehem Town Center II, a 17.44 acre expansion of the Bethlehem Center proposed for Route 9W, received a negative declaration on its SEQR review, which means it can move on to the next phase of the development, building a smaller shopping center north of Lowe's and Wal-Mart. Additionally, a traffic impact study revealed no significant delays, and the project is free to move forward.

Taking ownership of 35 acres of land to the west of the expansion to control land and water quality is part of the mitigation requirements for the expansion, said Pete Giavenco, an engineer with Bergmann Associates who is working with Nigro, developer for the project. The land will be donated to an appropriate land conservancy outfit, most likely Mohawk Hudson Land Conservancy.

Additionally, a planned storm water detention pond was re-analyzed, and the idea was thrown out due to massive disturbance of mature vegetation in the area. The storm water will be allowed to gradually be released into the Normans Kill, preserving water quality and not exacerbating peak flow times of the stream.

In other business, the Milltowne Plaza subdivision on Wemple Road, proposed by Traditional Builders, presented an amendment to that subdivision which was originally approved three years ago.

Changes in storm water regulations stopped the project that was approved in 2002.

"This project has been idling, and we're talking with the DEC about what storm water management processes are best," said Donald Zee, an attorney for Joseph Lucarelli of Traditional Builders.

Originally, the project was to be approved in three phases, but now phases one and two will be grouped together as one phase.

"There has been a pent-up desire to build in this community, but it has dwindled some because of all the has and stops," said Zee. There have been 16 property purchases since July, Zee said. Infrastructure has already been placed in the developments.

Combining phases one and two would mean that a lot of construction would be going on at one time instead, but because of rising prices in building materials and uncertainty in the future of the housing market, Zee argued to begin building now.

"We don't know what the market will be like a year from now," said Zee. "Right now it's a good opportunity to start building homes."

Planning board member Dan Odell said he was comfortable with the decision as long as town staff is comfortable, and deputy director of economic planning and development Mike Morelli said combining the building phases would be no problem.

"It's not really a question of setting a bad precedent, because we'll most likely never have another situation like this one," he said. "All of the infrastructure is already in."

The revision to the phasing plan was approved.

Girl Scouts look for volunteers, members

Sign ups and registrations for Girl Scouts are going on now.

Contact a local troop organizer for information.

Girl Scouting is not possible without adult volunteers.

The Girl Scout Council will provide you with the training and support you need to start a new troop or help in a number of ways. Call if you can help. There will be an information night on Sunday, Sept. 18, at the town hall from 4 to 6 p.m. for information on becoming a leader.

Community Day activities, SAT prep offered at Library

Community day on Sunday

Are you interested in playing in an orchestra, making a quilt, or collecting buttons? Do you want to learn more about lifelong learning, recycling or library advocacy? Find out about these activities and more at Bethlehem Public Library this Sunday, Sept. 18, 1-4 p.m. Folks from Bethlehem area community groups and organizations will be available in the lobby to talk about and demonstrate their activities. Staff from several town services will be on hand as well. Everyone is welcome.

The following groups will be represented: Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce, Bethlehem Garden Club, Bethlehem Recycling, Bethlehem YMCA, Community Caregivers, Delmar Community Orchestra, Delmar Place, Delmar Progress Club, Four Corners Group, Friends of Bethlehem Public Library, Friends and Newcomers of Bethlehem, Halfmoon Button Club, Humanities Institute of Lifelong Learning, Quilters United in Learning Together (Q.U.I.L.T.), Village Volunteers Fife and Drum Corps.

SAT workshop

The new SAT will be implemented next March. The test writers have eliminated certain types of questions, added others and added an essay component in an attempt to level the playing field.

"Are you afraid of the new SAT? Don't be!" is a 90-minute hands-on workshop for high school students to be held Wednesday, Sept. 21 at 7 p.m. Educator and learning researcher Marea Gordett will show you how to creatively approach the new opinion essay, and how to organize your thoughts and budget your time to write an effective essay in 25 minutes. You will also learn about the new math content and practice critical reading.

Gordett is a researcher for the National Research Center on English Learning and Achievement at the University at Albany, and director of Creative Tutoring in Latham. A poet and Pushcart Prize winner, she teaches literature and writing at SUNY-Institute of Technology.

Call 439-9314 to register for this free workshop. Pens and paper will be provided.

Sports reform advocate

Sports claim the hearts and minds of millions of Americans, many of them young and impressionable. In an era of mass-media overexposure, performance-enhancing drugs, and multi-million dollar contracts, consequences can be dire for young people.

"Reforming Sports Before the Clock Runs Out" features Bruce Svare on Thursday, Sept. 22 at 7 p.m. Author of a book by the same name, Svare is a professor of psychology and neuroscience at the University at Albany and founding director of the National Institute for Sports Reform. He offers ideas for corrective action to return sports to a more balanced and positive experience for young people.

Svare's lecture is energetic, thought provoking and highly relevant for parents and others shepherding the next generation of young athletes. Call 439-9314 to register.

Old-fangled memories

Life was different when clothes were washed by hand, irons were heated on the stove, and butter was made in a churn. The Scotia-Glenville Traveling Museum offers a look at some old-fashioned appliances and toys "In Days Gone By" on Friday, Sept. 16 at 1pm. The program is cosponsored by Bethlehem Senior Projects, Inc. Call 439-9314 to register.

LET'S TALK REAL ESTATE

with Abbey Farbstein
COLDWELL BANKER PRIME PROPERTIES

How Realtors Work

How do real estate agents sell houses? When a professional real estate agent is hired to sell a home, the agent will initiate a sequence of activities that has proven effective for selling homes quickly for the maximum market price.

The real estate professional will do a market analysis by comparing the home with similar homes recently sold in the area to establish the asking price. The next step will be to guide the owners in the preparation of their home for showing. A description of the home will be uploaded into the local Multiple Listing Service.

By doing so, real estate agents use leverage to attract buyers through other real estate offices. MLS exposure is one of the most valuable services a real estate agent can provide sellers. Real estate professionals also have other agents in their office they can notify when they bring new listings to the market. They can also call, fax or email agents they have had transactions with in the past to let them know about new listings as well.

Additionally, real estate agents make marketing efforts to attract buyers directly. They can use a wide variety of media, including newspapers, direct mail, Internet, or paper flyers.

For professional advice on all aspects of buying and selling real estate, call me at Coldwell Banker Prime Properties, 518-640-4444 or email me at abbey@cbpp.com.

A CAREER IN REAL ESTATE CAN LEAD YOU DOWN NEW ROADS.

'Unexpected Guest' a strong rendition, 'Medea' fosters indifference

By W.K. Aaron

Agatha Christie's "The Unexpected Guest" arrived in Latham at Curtain Call Theatre this past week. One of Christie's most frequently performed shows, "The Unexpected Guest" provides all of the twists and turns that one comes to expect from her English drawing room mysteries.

The show, set in the South Wales manor house of Richard and Laura Warwick, revolves around a murder that is committed just prior to the curtain rising. As various family neighbors, relatives and police make their way in and out of the murder scene, we come to discern that things are, in Christie fashion, not always what we expect. James Disalvatore as Michael Starkwedder does an admirable job of helping the audience navigate the show's "unseen" twists as they, along with Starkwedder, attempt to unravel the murder.

Diane Doring, as Laura the murder victim's widow, takes us on a roller coaster of emotions, highs and lows without ever losing her grace or dignity. Todd Meredith as the slow half-brother, Jan, presents a wonderful mastery of his role, making us feel the childlike innocence yet at that same time feeling his pain and disdain for his late brother. Kudos too go to set designer Michael Blau for his very accurate rendition of the manor house drawing room, Janet Womachka's costume design and John Miller's lighting round out an excellent technical execution.

Yale Drama School graduate, Cindy Brizzell-Bates, makes a strong showing in her Curtain Call directorial debut.

In all, the evening belongs to Christie, not her finest piece, but one of the better renditions of this show that has been presented in the area in along time.

I must admit to some trepidation when asked to see "The Unexpected Guest," as the show now holds mixed emotions for me. The last time I saw a production of "Guest" was at The Theater Barn the summer before last. In that production, one of my closest friends, Amelia "Amy" Adams was appearing as Laura. Adams had been a staple in many theaters around the region, has been featured on TV commercials, and she was the hostess on cable TV's Home Channel. Amy had been struggling with ovarian cancer. After she was given a clean bill, she decided to tread the boards one more time. My wife and I were there for Amelia... front row, as always, trying desperately, and quite immaturely, to get her to break character upon her first spotting us. The consummate professional, she never let on she'd seen us until her curtain call with what had become our traditional winks to one another across the footlights. That was the summer of '04.

Sadly, the summer of '05 was not to be as kind. The 40-something mother of two lost her battle. She fought until the end, never giving up and always hoping (assuming), she would win. Over the nearly two years that the insidious disease ravaged her, we shared phone calls, e-mails and when her stamina allowed, lunches. My over 20-year friendship with her will be part of me forever. Actors James Disalvatore and Diane Doring in "The Unexpected Guest."

brother-in-law arrives to tell Medea in very graphic detail about the bombing of Jason's bridal party, the audience doesn't stir. When Medea appears on stage drenched in the blood of her son after murdering him, nobody cares.

The highlight of the 90-minute drama, which is performed with-out an intermission, is the set. Roman Tatarowicz's design is a combination of stone monolith, plexiglass lit from behind to give the illusion of the city lights and piles of distant wreckage. It is intriguing and gives one something to focus on when trying to figure out how much longer the play is going to last.

Judith Lightfoot Clarke as Medea and Sean Haberle as Jason try desperately to pull off the action. Perhaps they try a bit too desperately. Michael Gotch, Peter Reardon and Jennifer McCabe, who round out the cast of this ill-conceived show, don't fare much better.

On the bright side, it is always a great thing to see companies such as CapRep be willing to go out on a limb to bring new innovative works to the community. This time, alas, the limb seems to have snapped.

"Medea in Jerusalem" runs through Sept. 17, Tuesday through Thursday, 7:30 p.m., Friday 8 p.m., Saturday 4 and 8:30, Sunday 2:30. Ticket prices range from $32-$40. For information, call 445-7469 or visit the Web at www.capitalrep.org.

made me smile by the very mention of her name, her laughter and smile and optimistic attitude were infectious. She will be missed by everyone with whom she came into contact. Oh, and as an aside, she would have been very impressed with this version of "The Unexpected Guest".

September is National Ovarian Cancer month. For information on "The Unexpected Guest", call Curtain Call Theatre at 877-7529. The show runs through October 15, tickets are $18.

Medea, DOA

So many times this past season, the opportunity has presented itself to see shows of various levels of professionalism performed by amateurs, semi-professionals and card-carrying members of The Actors Guild.

This area is rich in cultural activities and theatrical venues. It is very exciting when we are afforded the opportunity to see new works performed. Regional premiers and new artists have the chance to actually get to see their works come to life. Capital Repertory has one such offering playing on the boards now. Roger Kirby's "Medea in Jerusalem."

Medea is based on the Euripides tragedy. Medea's husband Jason falls for another woman and leaves Medea. To wreak the ultimate revenge, she kills her children.

Fast forward to present day Jerusalem. Medea is a Palestinian who forsakes her family to marry an Israeli, Jason. When Jason leaves her and their two children to marry the daughter of a wealthy Israeli tycoon, well, you see where this is heading.

The basic problem with the play is the intrinsic lack of caring for any of the characters.

The show starts off at such a fever pitch that it leaves no place for the actors to go and the show comes across as over acted and poorly directed. By the time that Jason's wreckage. It is intriguing and gives one something to focus on

New book looks at woman ballplayer's life, on and off the field

BY STEPHEN PAUSE

Anyone who has seen "The Natural" knows the story of Archibald "Moonlight" Graham. But those who have seen "A League of Their Own" won't know anything about Dottie Wiltse Collins, one of the best-known players of the All-American Girls Professional Baseball League.

Collins' true life is the subject of a new book by local author Carolyn Trombe titled Dottie Wiltse Collins: Strikeout Queen of the All-American Girls Professional Baseball League. The book chronicles Collins' life both on and off the field.

Trombe was quick to separate the real life star from the cinematic character. She said that the characters in the film were composites of all the girls who played, not because of a studio decision, but at the request of the former players.

"They had a motto of 'all for one, and one for all.' They didn't want any of the characters representing any one particular player," she said.

Dottie Hinson, the character that Gina Davis portrayed in the 1994 film, was portrayed as one of the best players in the league, but that is where the similarities between her and the real-life Dottie

Collins end. The two didn't even play the same position; Collins was a pitcher, not a catcher.

Collins first established herself as one of the best softball pitchers in southern California, having benefited from a father who played semi-pro baseball. She and five friends tried out for the AAGPBL in 1944 and she won a spot on the expansion Minneapolis Millettes. After the team went bankrupt, Collins made a name for herself the next year with the Fort Wayne Daisies, where she spent the remainder of her career.

Like other male players of the day, Collins' feats have become the basis of legend. At one point in her career she was pitching and winning games while five months pregnant. Several times she started and won both games of a doubleheader. Following the birth of her child, Collins returned to the league with an overhand style and won 13 games before retiring in 1950.

The book also details her post-baseball life, including when she became a local golfing champion with her husband, Harvey, as well as her efforts to get the AAPGBL and other women ballplayers recognized in the baseball hall of fame.

Information about Collins' off-field life was an aspect that was important to not just Trombe, but those close to Collins.

"I spoke with Dottie's daughter, and she said to me 'I'm so glad it wasn't all about the ball,'" Trombe said.

Now that the book is published, she reflected on the importance of it.

"I realized that no one had written about a specific player before," she said. "This is the first biography written on a female professional baseball player, and the only one to date."

This was important to Trombe, who said, "The league was what it was because of the women who played."

Like others from the World War II era, the number of surviving female baseball players is dwindling, and Trombe was thankful for the part she was able to take in preserving the past.

"I was grateful that I was able to record the voices of these women, because 10 years down the road, they're not going to have that. I felt that was important," she said.

Trombe grew up in Albany and received her B.A. at Siena and her Masters at St. Rose. She currently works for the NYS Department of Education and is working to get her second book published. She also has an article in the upcoming Encyclopedia of Women in Baseball.

She will be holding a book signing at the Book House in Stuyvesant Plaza on Thursday, Sept. 22 from 7p.m. to 9p.m.

"My election platform springs from this," he said.

Attracting what he calls clean, taxpaying businesses to the town, which would help create jobs and strengthen the tax base, is his main reason for running for office.

"Theresa Egan and I share similar values," he said. "I support her, and she is part of the reason why I am running for office."

Messina said he has experience implementing planning programs and getting things done, and believes he can help move the town forward. He also shares Egan's goal of streamlining town government processes.

"As far as looking at the economy and the efficiency of government, I have the experience to do this, and to help reduce taxpayer expenditures," he said.

Messina is also a member of the town's Industrial Development Agency, and said he plans to use that agency to help encourage taxpaying businesses in the right parts of town to help grow a healthy tax base.

Messina also volunteers with the Organ Donor Program, speaks to various groups about the dangers of drunk driving at the DWI Impact statements program, works at a suicide hotline and has been an active member of the United Methodist Church in Slingerlands for 30 years.

"I have always tried to be involved," he said. "I've met a lot of people campaigning, and it's been a lot more fun than I first thought. I feel really good about the reception I've gotten, and I've also lost 20 pounds since I started the door-to-door campaign."

Incumbent town board member George Lenhardt is also committed to the goals of lower taxes, and fair and equal implementation of the zoning codes.

Lenhardt, a Republican, is in his 12th year on the board, and said one of his greatest accomplishments was solidifying the county paramedic program. He was proud to have been part of the settlement with Niagara Mohawk and PSEG. The adoption of the current comprehensive plan is also high on his list of accomplishments.

If elected, lowering taxes is his main concern, particularly for senior citizens.

"I have heard many seniors say that they are being priced out of their homes, and that the taxes are a huge burden when they are on a fixed income," he said.

Lenhardt agrees attractive, small businesses in the right places will ease the tax burden, and while he says he does not want to "sell the community's soul" for lower taxes, he is committed to implementing the right kinds of businesses in Bethlehem.

"Right now, we're seeing how the town develops with the new comprehensive plan," he said. "We're also seeing how developers will react to it. The pressure to develop in this area is intense, and I want to make sure that it's done right."

Lenhardt worked for Verizon for 28 years, mostly when it was NYNEX. He now works in information technology for the New York state Power Authority.

Incumbent Tom Marcelle, who is seeking election to his second term on the board, is also in favor of proper development in town, as well as preserving green space. If elected, Marcelle will push for the town to hold a bond referendum, which would allow the town to purchase land at fair market value, and lessen the amount of land available for retail development.

"This would ease population growth, which stresses the schools and the town's infrastructure. That is what increases taxes," he said.

When the town is ready for more development, he said, then it could use land it already has and recoup the investment. He is also in favor of purchasing development rights to keep open space.

Marcelle also favors commercial growth to ease the tax burden.

"It was fine to have no large commercial tax base when the town was smaller, but with the population growth, we need to build that up," he said.

"Bethlehem used to have a reputation of 'no businesses allowed,'" he said. "I've lived here all my life, and I know that it was good then, but as they say, nature and economics don't work well in a vacuum."

"I view my role as to watch out for the public interest, and I think I've been loyal to that commitment," he said.

Marcelle's candidacy for town board may be a moot point, since he hopes to be nominated as a candidate for state Supreme Court at the judicial convention on Sept. 23.

Energy prices are rising — get your home in order.

Prices for natural gas and other fuels like oil and propane have increased dramatically. As a result, across the United States home heating costs are expected to be much higher this winter than last year. The United States Department of Energy anticipates that nationally, homes could see a 35-45% increase in their total winter heating bills compared to last winter's bills.

Understanding your natural gas bill

Your gas bill has two main parts: Supply (the cost of the gas itself) and Delivery (the cost of delivering the gas throughout your utility's system). On average, supply costs make up about 60-75% of your bill, depending on your utility.

The supply price of gas is set by national and international markets and is not controlled by utilities or the NYS Public Service Commission. The delivery price is set by the Commission.

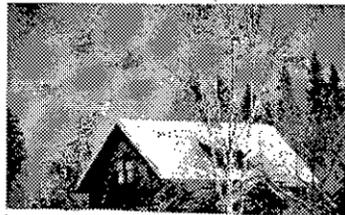

About 98% of the natural gas we use in New York comes from the Gulf of Mexico and Canada. The Commission works hard to keep delivery prices as low as possible and help you deal with changes in the market.

Factors affecting the price of natural gas

The price for natural gas (not including delivery) is expected to be considerably higher than last winter. The price varies based on many factors, including weather, demand, the amount and cost of natural gas in storage, and exploration and drilling.

• Supply and Demand — Natural gas suppliers serving New York State are entering the heating season with higher than average inventories. However, the gas going into storage has been more costly this year, and the higher price is usually passed on to consumers. Production losses due to Hurricane Katrina have also tightened the gas market.

Meanwhile, demand continues to grow as more people use natural gas for their energy needs, and more factories and power generation facilities use gas because it produces fewer emissions than other fossil fuels.

• Weather — Weather plays a significant role in determining the cost of natural gas. Colder weather means an increase in the amount of natural gas used by the average household. However, it is impossible to know what this winter's temperatures or natural gas prices will be over time.

Controlling your heating costs

Your heating costs are made up of the cost of your fuel and the amount you use. No matter where prices go or what the heating season is like, you can take basic steps to lower your costs.

What you should do

Have an energy smart winter

- Make sure the attic, walls and foundation in your house are well-insulated.
- Seal gaps around doors, windows and foundations.
- Have your furnace or boiler inspected and insulate your hot water heater and pipes.
- Set thermostats back — for every one degree you lower your thermostat, you will save 1-3% on your heating costs. Consider installing a programmable thermostat; it will make saving even easier.

Consider bill payment options and assistance programs

- Budget Plans provide equal monthly payments based on past energy usage.
- Deferred Payment Agreements may be available if you have fallen behind on your bill and cannot pay in full. You may qualify to pay the past due amount over time.

Financial assistance and energy efficiency programs can also help you with your heating costs

- NYS Home Energy Assistance Program (HEAP)
- NYSEDA's Assisted Home Performance with ENERGY STAR® Program

- NYSEDA's EmPower New York Program

- Utility-sponsored assistance programs
- Community-based energy services programs

Use your power to choose

- You can buy electricity and natural gas from companies other than your utility. These Energy Service Companies (ESCOs) are competing to sell you your energy supply.
- Competition among ESCOs to supply your energy means new products and services, and better value for your dollar.
- Your utility will still deliver your energy safely and reliably, and will respond to emergencies.

The New York State Energy Research and Development Authority's (NYSEDA) Home Performance with ENERGY STAR® program can save you money by making your home more energy efficient. Certified contractors inspect your home and recommend energy improvements, and you may be eligible for low-interest financing.

Erin go bragh

Irish 2000 festival kicks off its ninth annual event

By MARTY BANNAN

September is the halfway point to St. Patrick's Day, and for the Irish, that calls for a celebration to share with everyone as the ninth annual Irish 2000 Music and Arts Festival promises to be everything last year's event was and more. rain or shine.

Billed as the largest, single-day Irish festival on the planet, this year's event welcomes more than 20 performers to four stages for 13 hours of non-stop music during the 2005 edition of the Irish 2000 Music and Arts Festival this Saturday, Sept. 17, at the Altamont Fairgrounds.

From 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. — on the very day that's as close to St. Patrick's Day 2006 as St. Patrick's Day 2005 — this year's festival lineup includes the spirited fiddling and step dancing of Leahy; the ever-popular Seven Nations; Young Dubliners, the Celtic rock quintet; Enter the Haggis; the virtuosity of Cherish the Ladies; the engaging performance of singer, storyteller and bard Tommy Makem. Don't forget the songs of Capital District favorites the McKrells and Hair of the Dog!

Add to the list of performers the Fenians, Peelers and Rathkeltair, Old Blind Dogs, the Irish Descendants, the Makem Brothers, Téada, Seisun, Skuttlebutt, Saratoga Faire, Frank Jaklitsch & Steve Gray, Dublin Trainwreck and Barrett & Byrne.

"Irish 2000 has become a one-day showcase for a wide range of Celtic music, with some of the world's best performers," said Matt NeLigan, president of Irish 2000.

"And, the festival continues to grow with more than 20,000 people expected to celebrate with us during this mid-way to St. Pat's Day festival," he said.

Throughout the day, festival goers can enjoy the pageantry of the Designs and the Ancient Order of Hibernians, both in Watervliet; Celtic Treasures, Saratoga Springs; Tipperary Trading Co., Brunswick; McGeary's Pub, Ginger Man, the Albany Irish American Center, and the Washington Tavern, all in Albany; the customer service area at Boscov's, Colonie Center; Schenectady AOH, Schenectady; The Counties of Ireland, Troy; and Old Dublin Inn, Halfmoon.

Irish 2000 has a round-trip shuttle bus service available from Albany, Colonie and Guelderland to the festival at the Altamont Fairgrounds. Bus service will run from noon until midnight, making a constant loop between the fairgrounds and various locations. Bracelets must be worn

Schenectady Pipe Band and the Albany Police Pipes & Drums and the Irish dancing of the Farrell, Boland and Campbell schools of dance.

In addition to the music, Irish 2000 features the Celtic Kids Family Fun Area with games, rides and refreshments; Irish storyteller Bairbre McCarthy; and a wide variety of Celtic crafts and refreshments for every taste.

"This is a one-of-a-kind event and it is without a doubt one of the largest events in the Capital Region," NeLigan said. "We attract people from as far away as Ireland itself and most of the 50 states. You can even do your Christmas shopping early at one of our more than 50 vendors."

Advance tickets are $13. Admission on the day of the event is $18 per person. Children under the age of 10 are admitted free. There is a $3 parking fee. Advance tickets also may be purchased at all Price Chopper Supermarkets, Gilhooley

On Tap

Tap dancer Savion Glover will bring a brand-new program to The Egg on Saturday, Sept. 17 at 8 p.m. Glover has created a special performance that will include both contemporary string music as well as mainstream jazz, with a portion of the proceeds to benefit the New Orleans Musicians Relief Fund. The program will include a special appearance by the acclaimed composer and violinist Daniel Bernard Roumain (a.k.a. "DBR"). Roumain's hip-hop/classical style of music has been embraced by orchestras, chamber ensembles, and mainstream pop, rock, and jazz musicians worldwide. A portion of ticket sales from the performance will be used to assist musicians affected by Hurricane Katrina with 10 percent of the gross ticket sales to the New Orleans Musicians Hurricane Relief Fund. 100 percent of contributions will be used to assist musicians who have been left homeless or have lost instruments and other equipment due to the flood. Tickets to the performance are currently available at The Egg Box Office, 473-1845, and all Ticketmaster locations.

Indians prepare for first-place showdown

Lansingburgh visits Ravena Friday

By ROB JONAS

Buckle your chinstraps. It's time for Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk and Lansingburgh to renew their rivalry.

The last two Section II, Class B football champions meet Friday night in Ravena to determine who gains the inside track for the Reinfurt Division title.

"It should be a good battle," said Lansingburgh coach Pete Porcelli. "I think it will come down to ball control — who can hold on to the ball."

Both teams have shown the ability to score early and often through the first two weeks. Lansingburgh ripped apart Schalmont 65-0 in week one and then downed a solid Fonda-Fultonville squad 46-12 last Friday.

Ravena's offense has nearly matched Lansingburgh's output point for point. The Indians scored 33 points in an opening week victory over Hudson Falls and then piled up 42 points in the first half of a 49-0 win at Schalmont last Friday.

The only difference between the two teams is that Ravena has been tested, while Lansingburgh has not. Hudson Falls put together a late comeback, but the Indians fended off the Tigers 33-29 to avoid the upset.

"We needed to improve a little bit defensively (after the Hudson Falls game)," said Ravena coach Gary VanDerzee. "The kids had to learn some new positions and work together, and I think they improved last week (against Schalmont)."

Ravena will need a strong defensive effort to slow down Lansingburgh's running backs. Led by Kenny Youngs and Brandon Canty, the Knights have gained more than 400 yards on the ground in their two wins.

"Their running game has been very good the last three or four years," VanDerzee said. "We have to play very good, aggressive defense and tackle very well."

The Indians have a more versatile offense than Lansingburgh. Besides the one-two punch of tailback Ryan Cross and fullback John Lynch on the ground, they have a proven passing game with quarterback Tim Jordan and wide receiver Keith Geraldson.

Porcelli said his defenders are ready for the challenge. "I think defensively, we're a lot better than we were last year," he said.

Kickoff for Friday's showdown is 7 p.m. at Ravena.

Eagles fly into Shen

There will be another big football game Friday night as unbeaten Bethlehem travels to unbeaten Shenendehowa for a class AA Division 1 showdown.

"They're very good," said

Bethlehem coach Ron Smith. "They're Shen — what can I tell you? I'm just anxious to see how well we do against them."

The Eagles will be down two running backs for Friday's game. Already without starting tailback Brian Nicholson, who is serving a team program suspension, Bethlehem will be missing Eric McLeer, who injured his knee during last Friday's 28-20 victory at Schenectady.

"Our team responded against Schenectady," said Smith. "Ryan Paratore (110 yards, one touchdown) did a great job taking over Brian Nicholson's spot. Dan Unright (three touchdowns) has grown up quickly. He's had no choice but to grow up quickly."

The key for Bethlehem against Shen will be avoiding fatigue. The Plainsmen have made a habit of wearing down their opponents with the size and strength on the offensive and defensive lines, and the Eagles have several athletes who play both sides of the ball.

"We probably have six or seven guys who never step off the field, and they never complain," Smith said.

Kickoff for Friday's game between Bethlehem and Shen is 7 p.m. in Clifton Park.

In other area football action this weekend, Voorheesville (1-1) hosts Chatham Saturday at 1:30 p.m.

Ravena forges tie with Schalmont

By ROB JONAS

A battle is brewing for the Colonial Council girls soccer title.

Schalmont, Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk, Voorheesville and Academy of Holy Names are all primed to challenge for first place. Which team finishes on top depends on how well it does against the other challengers.

"It's definitely going to be a competitive year, probably more so than in the past," said RCS coach Danielle Hummel. "It may be more like two years ago — when we were co-champs with Schalmont — than last year."

The Indians tried to gain an advantage in the league title chase last Wednesday against Schalmont, but they only managed a 1-1 tie. Kelly Maguire scored RCS' lone goal in the second half.

"I knew this game would pretty much determine how my girls go into the rest of the season," Hummel said. "We know we are capable of doing more. That's what we talked about at halftime."

Hummel has a veteran-laden roster this season. Besides Maguire, RCS has seniors Jackie Levie and Jeannine Rider back to lead the offense, along with defensemen Dawn Weidman and Jessica Byerwalters and goaltender Elisha VanKempen.

Hummel said the one thing her team has to guard against is overconfidence. "I know with my team, it can go two ways — either we can be confident, or we can get cocky and someone can knock us off. Hopefully, it will be the first thing of the two," she said.

Brown

Cleveland has been at the bottom of the league due to bad draft picks, bad coaching and bad luck.

And the old Browns? They won a Super Bowl as the Baltimore Ravens in 2001. I never rooted harder against a team as I did when the Ravens played the New York Giants.

So now, here is another NFL season, and the Browns already might as well be mathematically eliminated from the playoffs. New head coach Romeo Crennel might have been a defensive whiz in New England, but as evidenced with Sunday's 27-13 loss to Cincinnati, it's going to take him a long time to restore the bite in the "Dawg Pound."

There has been a lot of player turnover, but so much dead weight still has to be jettisoned that new general manager Phil Savage should hire NASA to launch it into orbit so no other NFL team has to be burdened with it. Already, Denver's defensive line has a distinctive Cleveland look to it because they signed or traded for four former Browns, and the end result was a 34-10 loss to Miami.

With so much going wrong for the Browns, a sane person might consider dropping his allegiance with them. Not me. I'll still wear my Browns' t-shirt every Sunday in the hopes that it will bring them some luck — maybe even a win.

Who knows? Maybe someday I'll be able to celebrate Cleveland's first Super Bowl title. Probably not before 2010, but someday.

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk's Jessica Byerwalters (3) tries to keep the ball away from Schalmont's Jessica Strang during last Wednesday's Colonial Council game in Rotterdam. Rcb Jonas

99) for the girls championship, while Queensbury defeated Shen 61-73 for the boys team title.

"I don't think we'll be satisfied with today's performance," said Shen girls coach Lynn Lindquist. "We always strive to improve."

"We've had a great start," said Shen boys coach Matt Jones. "I'm very pleased with how we're progressing."

Bethlehem placed fourth in the girls team standings with 109 points, one point behind Academy of Holy Names and four points ahead of Columbia.

"I had a couple of eighth graders finish 1-2 in the junior varsity race, so when we pull them up (to varsity), we should be fine," Rightmyer said.

A Thousand Thank-yous to All of You!

To our many friends and loyal customers, Paul and I would like to express our sincere thanks to all of you for 25+ terrific years. Getting to know so many of you on a personal basis has been one of the many delights in owning a small-town business. Some of you have been coming in since 1980, and others of you I met for the first time last week. We thank you one and all for your part in making our business the success it has been for the past 25-1/2 years.

While the time has come for Paul and me to retire and spend more time in the sunny south, we will remain in Delmar several months of the year and hope to see many of you when we are here.

We hope that you will extend the same loyalty that you have shown to us to the Delmar Health Hut's new owner, Denise Lemieux. Denise is a long-time Delmar resident who many of you may already know from her active involvement around town. She has been on staff for several months and plans to continue making customer service a priority. Senior citizen and pregnancy discounts will remain, as will the vitamin discount cards; and special orders will still be available.

You'll see familiar faces, as Annette, Shawn and Hilarie will remain on board - ready as always to help you.

Our heartfelt thanks,
Judi and Paul Woodin

The first step

Kristin Kenney leads Bethlehem at opening meet

By ROB JONAS

This year's Shaker Invitational cross country meet featured a showdown between two of the top male runners in Section II and a first-time winner on the girls' side who is looking to start her own legacy.

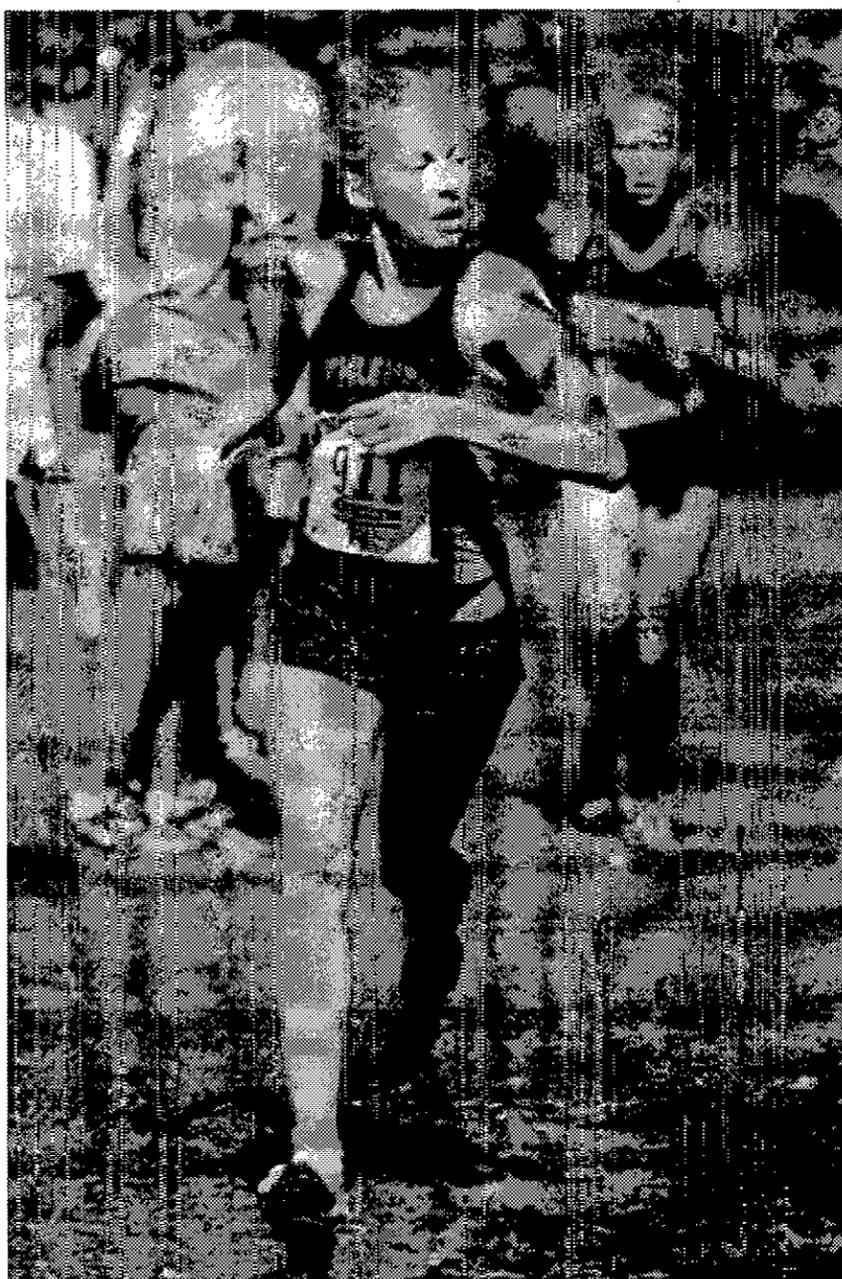

Shenendehowa's Dan McManamon pulled away from Guilderland's Brian Rhodes-Devey in the final 200 meters to successfully defend his 2004 individual title, while Bethlehem freshman Kristin Kenney claimed her first victory with an impressive stretch run of her own.

McManamon was in a three-way duel with Rhodes-Devey and Ticonderoga's Jesse Berube for much of the race before using a strong kick to gain a five-second margin of victory.

"I wanted to repeat," said McManamon, who finished with a meet-record time of 15:18.87. "I just threw a surge in with 200 (meters) to go."

"Dan is in awesome shape, and he ran an incredible race," said Rhodes-Devey, who fended off Berube for second place with a time of 15:23.90.

Kenney used a similar strategy to win the girls race. Colonie's Nicole Soblosky shadowed Kenney throughout the second half of the race, but Kenney pulled away down the stretch to win by nearly seven seconds.

"I was afraid she was going to catch me, so I just went," said Kenney, who finished with a time of 18:26.97.

"She ran a very good race, and she ran very smart," said Bethlehem girls coach Jack Rightmyer. "I wanted her to run with the lead pack and then pull away."

Soblosky's performance was equally impressive, especially coming off a disappointing 2004 cross country season. The senior finished second with a personal-best time of 18:33.68.

"Kristin's a very good runner. I give her props for what she did," Soblosky said. "I'm just happy that I was able to stay with her."

"We're certainly happy with Soblosky," said Colonie girls coach Frank Myers. "She did her homework over the summer, she's at fighting weight and she's determined to do well."

The battle for team titles in both divisions was tight. Shen edged Shaker by seven points (92-

It's not easy being Brown these days

By ROB JONAS

When you're a Cleveland Browns fan, you learn how to deal with heartbreak very, very quickly.

I've been a Browns Backer since the early 1980s when my older sister was attending Case Western Reserve University law school in that corner of Ohio. I didn't have any lasting allegiances to other NFL teams because I had just crossed double digits in age at that point. So whenever the Browns were on TV, I watched because in a loose way, it was a connection between me and my sister (who is not a big sports fan).

At that time, the Browns had gained a reputation as the "Cardiac Kids" because every game nearly produced a heart attack. Unfortunately, they never quite got over the hump in those days — primarily because it was around the same time that Pittsburgh ruled the AFC, and being in the Steelers' division was a lot like being in a small tank full of sharks. Still, I got hooked. I lasted through the halcyon days of the late 1980s, when Bernie Kosar, Ozzie Newsome and the infamous "Dawg Pound" defense rose near the top of the AFC. Sadly, I can only say "near the top" because every time the Browns reached the AFC championship game, John Elway and the Denver Broncos got in the way.

(With all due respect to Buffalo Bills' fans, nothing hurts more than to get so close to the Super Bowl three times in four years, only to be denied a trip to the promised land by the same team. And before you Bills fans start squawking about four consecutive losses in the Super Bowl, remember that you were only close to winning it once. The Browns came close to winning the AFC title twice.)

Times got harder in the 1990s. Kosar was nagged by injuries, before ultimately being released in favor of bringing in Minnie Testaverde (a name closely associated with the word "disappointment"). Other stars either left or were released. The only notable achievement in those days was bringing in Bill Belichick to coach the team. Despite being let go with a losing record, Belichick did guide Cleveland into the playoffs once with Testa-in Cleveland, Modell simply couldn't wait an extra month. So, he took his franchise to Maryland and left behind the team name and all of the Browns' record books.

Sensing the possibility that Cleveland would fall into a pit of despair from which only a miraculous World Series victory by the Indians could possibly cure (they're still waiting on Lake Erie for that day to come), the National Football League gave Cleveland an expansion franchise for the new stadium that they ultimately approved — one month after Modell's announcement. Unfortunately, the new Browns have played like an expansion team ever since coming back into existence in 1999. With the exception of the 2002 season, Cleveland has never been a contender.

verde at quarterback — a clear indication of just how good he was. Then came the ultimate indignation — the day owner Art Modell (a name still reviled in Cleveland) announced his star quarterback deal in Baltimore. Even though a new stadium was going before the voters, later ancient people who began farming had. The other 90 percent of the early diet, including nuts and berries, would have been gathered by the women of the group.

Archaeology, an inexact science

At least, that's how archaeologists believe the ancient people of this area lived, said Sean Rafferty, an assistant professor at the University at Albany, who studies ancient people.

"Archaeology is like doing a jigsaw puzzle when you don't know what the picture is and 90 percent of the pieces are missing," Rafferty said.

He explained that much of what humans created so long ago was made from organic materials such as wood or plants, which do not last for thousands of years. In addition, the ancient people who lived on the site along the Normanskill lived in the late Archaic Period also known as the Vosburgh phase of pre-history, which is not well understood.

"It's a period of time and type of site that's a little bit lesser known than others," Rafferty said.

That's part of the reason why the site on the Normanskill, known as the Vosburgh site, is a significant one for archaeological study, he added. The fact that the site's name and the phase of Archaic history are the same offers additional evidence of its importance, Rafferty said.

Preserving the past

The preservation of the site has recently been negotiated between the Guelderland planning board and the developer of the land, who will build residential houses around it.

Douglas Mackey, archaeologist at the New York state Office of Parks, Recreation and Historic Preservation, said that the site has been known since the early 1900s when archaeologist Arthur Parker first reported it. The site is also mentioned in archaeologist William Ritchie's book, Pre-Iroquoian Occupations of New York State.

Pottery, images, tools and burial rites

Even with all the uncertainty surrounding the site and while it's not his specific area of research, Rafferty did offer his colleagues' best educated guesses about life long ago in the Capital District.

Such people would have made fired terra cotta figurines but not pottery. Rafferty emphasized that the Native American ancestors had the capability for pottery but did not develop it because it did not fit their mobile life style. It was not, as is still commonly believed, that that they were less advanced than today's people, he said.

Similarly, the people of that time were non-literate, he said, because they had no need for writing. They did create mostly animal images with some animal and human images. But they generally did not make pictures of their prey, instead depicting birds such as ducks or hawks or wings. Images of lizards, turtles and bears begin to appear with the people who came after the Archaic period. The lack of pictures of trees or plants suggests a streak of male chauvinism in the society, Rafferty added, explaining that females' purview would have been plants while males were concerned with animals. The imagery also suggests that people spiritualized nature, he said. Even later, when people developed farming their images began focusing more on forces of nature such as the sun.

Most likely the people believed in an afterlife as most human societies do, Rafferty said. People would not, of course, have been buried in a box wearing their Sunday best, and they may not have all been buried in the same general area. Instead, burials may have been on a much more ad hoc basis, reflective of the mobile lifestyle. People would probably have been buried with beads, shells, weapons or tools.

"It may have been their equivalent of the Sunday best," he said.

While the bow and arrow did not exist for another thousand or so years, the people of the Archaic Period had a variety of tools. Most likely they would have had large projectile points, knives, spears, gauges, scrapers to scrape hides, and graters, used for etching. A number of adzes or sideway axes have also been found. Most likely they were used in making canoes.

"Rivers were the super-highways of the ancient world and canoes were the cars," Rafferty said.

The ancestors' ancestors

The people of the late Archaic Period are believed to have descended from ancient people who walked over a land bridge from Asia or South Asia or Europe between 12,000 and 15,000 years ago.

Before that, travel to the Americas was believed to have been extremely difficult, Rafferty said. In turn, those people are believed to be descended from the first Homo sapiens who lived in Africa more than 150,000 years ago.

Archaeologists have divided North American pre-history into three periods: the PaleoIndian or ice age, the Archaic, which began 8,000 years ago and includes the Vosburgh phase, and the Woodlawn, which began 3,000 years ago.

Past

Local authorities do have the first say by having the ability to order a survey of a proposed development. If a developer plans a major construction site, the local municipalities will generally require them to hire an archaeologist to draft a general survey report. Bonafide said that this is the probably the biggest step in saving a site of interest.

"Overall, all the laws are pretty weak. It really is up to the local community to preserve their archeological sites," he said.

There are only two instances where the state or federal authorities can get involved. The most likely is when the project is funded with government money, in which case authorities can suspend building permits until the site is investigated.

When human remains are found on a site, developers are required to contact authorities. In such a case, the main purpose of government officials is to determine if the remains are recent, and if so, whether or not foul play was involved.

If a local municipality does not request a survey before issuing permits, then often times it is left up to the landowner or developer to decide what course of action should be taken if a site is unearthed.

"Even if they find something major, they don't have to report it. It's really a matter of conscience," Bonafide said.

Even when human remains are discovered, if professionals deem the site not a crime scene, the decision again is left to private parties. Bonafide also cited another major reason developers are discouraged from finding and reporting a site.

"Unfortunately the cost falls to the developer. Archaeology is a costly science, it's not a cheap thing," he said.

He added that SHPO is just developing a small fund to aid in such cases, but as of now the expenses of investigating a site fall to private parties.

Oftentimes these factors lead to the march of progress superseding the preservation of the past by developers who are simply doing their job. Bonafide believes the best way to avoid such conflicts is to take preventative measures.

"The earlier in the process we become involved, the better. Once sewer lines or roads are put in, it becomes more difficult," he said. "We try to work with them to avoid these sites. The goal is always just to have them avoid the site wholesale."

As a preventative measure, one of the goals of SHPO is to educate local governments about potential sites in their jurisdictions. Through their Web site, www.nysparks.ny.state.us/shpo, New York State became the first state to offer to the public a geographical map of archeologically sensitive areas. The map includes not only underground sites, but historic buildings as well. The intent of the map is to show both developers and local governments where sensitive areas are, in the hopes of limiting conflicts. When the map went online, SHPO sent out mass mailings to local governments in order to make officials aware of it so they might use it as a prescreening tool for developing sites.

If a site is discovered, Bonafide said SHPO works with all parties to reach some sort of compromise.

"If indeed there are significant archeological deposits that we would deem important, we would work with the developer to either build around the site or to mitigate and reach some compromise," he said.

The case of the Vosburgh site in Guelderland is an example of government and private parties working together to take steps to preserve the past while allowing for continuing development. The site would be protected under a plan before the zoning board to build an 86-home subdivision. By W. D. B.

According to Bonafide, there are three phases of investigation when a potential site is found.

The first phase is a literature search, in which known data about a specified area is collected and limited testing is done to determine if the site holds historic value. Phase two would occur if there is cause for concern or if artifacts are discovered. This could include more extensive excavation, including the digging of strategic square pits to look for cultural materials. The final phase, documenting and recovering artifacts from the site, is done only when a significant site is discovered.

However, in some cases the best course of action is to avoid excavating it completely.

Sean Rafferty, an assistant professor at the University at Albany, described why at times it is best not to excavate an entire site. He said that while wanting to discover the past, archaeologists also know that some things are best left undiscovered.

He cited the expansion of the United States following the Great Depression as an example of what he called "conservation ethic — saving the past for the future."

"I've read site reports from the time that refer to large mounds of carbon that were uncovered and discarded," he said.

He added that at the time nothing could be learned from such a find, but with the advent of radio carbon dating in 1949, scientists would have been able to determine accurately to within a few decades how long ago people had been there. Such advances make it desirable to leave some areas untouched until science is better equipped to study its secrets.

Despite the seeming incompatibility between the past and future, architecture and archeology, Bonafide believes there is room for compromise.

"We work to protect both interests as best we can," he said.
