'Tom Sawyer'

Lots of dancing and singing mark the upcoming middle school production of "Tom Sawyer," as well as a hands-on learning experience for all middle school students interested in theater. Of the 85 students involved in the production, only half are part of the cast.

"There are a lot of kids who audition, and many of them would rather work as part of the crew," said Mary Katherine Daly, musical director and general music teacher.

Reval doesn't

taxesNew Scotland assessor updates residents on process

By LISA PETT

Around 70 residents of the town of New Scotland gathered at the town hall last Wednesday to attend an informational session that town Assessor Julie Nooney hosted to bring residents up to speed on the revaluation of properties currently under way in the town. Nooney said the purpose of her presentation was to educate residents on all the stages of the revaluation process.

By definition, a revaluation is "the reassessment of all properties in a municipality using a mass appraisal technique to determine the fair market value of those properties." The last town-wide reassessment took place in 1997.

Nooney explained that the current revaluation is necessary to preserve equity in homeowners' assessments and taxes. Pointing out that she is also a town resident and homeowner, Nooney said, "I put in many extra hours here in town hall to make a conscientious effort to be as fair as possible."

"It is possible for assessments to go up, and a resident's taxes to actually go down."

Julie Nooney

Nooney also said that the belief that a revaluation will automatically increase a resident's taxes is a common misconception.

"It is possible for assessments to go up, and a resident's taxes to actually go down," she said. This is because of the consideration of other factors such as cost/budget

Board changes
curriculum

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

A wellness program, a literacy study skill program and accelerated studio art for eighth grade students are three of the new curriculum choices that will be available to middle school students in the 2006-07 school year. The board of education approved all three at Wednesday's meeting.

"We met with the students extensively to get their thoughts and ideas about the classes," said Jody Monroe, principal at the middle school. "We've also had a lot of parent and teacher input."

By next year, all schools in the state will be required to have a wellness program, said Michael Tebbano, assistant superintendent for instruction.

The program will be a three-year integrated process that combines physical education, health classes and family and consumer sciences.

"Instead of a separate class in sixth grade, it will be incorporated and consumer sciences, better known as FCS, a modernized version of home economics.

FCS will remain a separate course at the seventh grade level.

The more focused literacy study skills program is being offered to sixth-grade students.

Locals stay with their loyalties

By ROB JONAS

Football fans are everywhere.

Throw a football onto a crowded city sidewalk. Chances are it will be caught.

Wear a New York Jets jersey in the middle of a rural town. Chances are at least half the people that pass by will recognize it (and at least a few will give a sympathetic gaze in your direction).

Mention names like Terry Bradshaw, Joe Montana or John Elway at a coffee shop in a suburb. You'll soon have a conversation going with a total stranger who remembers what each of them did in the Super Bowl.

Here at Spotlight Newspapers, the majority of the staff have allegiances to National Football League teams. The New York Giants led the survey with five people swearing allegiance to "Big Blue." The Giants were followed by the New England Patriots, Pittsburgh Steelers and Cleveland Browns with two fans apiece. Single votes went to the Jets, Dallas Cowboys, Denver Broncos, San Francisco 49ers, Seattle Seahawks and Tampa Bay Buccaneers.

The same likely holds true at any office or place of business. Just ask any co-worker. Chances are, they have a favorite NFL team, whether it's one they grew up watching or one they picked up because they like the coach or a particular player.

Even politicians have their favorite teams. Malta town Supervisor Paul Sausville and Clifton Park Supervisor Phil Barrett are both Patriots fans, though Barrett said he hasn't actively followed football for the last five years, while Bethlehem Supervisor Theresa Egan loves the Giants.

"I also grew up a Yankees fan, so it's a New York sort of thing," Egan said of her reason why she chose the Giants.

Coaches' choices

In the local high school sports scene, many coaches cheer for the NFL teams closest to the Capital District — the Giants, the Jets, the Patriots and the Philadelphia Eagles.

"I started liking the Eagles because everyone I knew were Cowboys fans," said Guilderland wrestling coach Regan Johnson. "Growing up (in

To Life and Seton Health to offer women's program

To Life!, a breast cancer education and support organization, and Seton Health, a comprehensive integrated health care system anchored by St. Mary's Hospital in Troy, have teamed up to present "No Bones About it!" an educational program that will examine topics in women's health.

The program, which is free to the public, will take place on Thursday, Jan. 26, at 6 p.m. at the MapInfo Corporation Assembly Room in RPI Technology Park.

In the last few years, major studies conducted on hormone replacement therapy (HRT), a standard treatment for menopausal symptoms such as hot flashes, night sweats and osteoporosis, have yielded conflicting results, including some alarming findings concerning breast cancer, strokes and heart disease. These inconclusive findings have instilled a level of fear and confusion for women considering this treatment option. There is also a growing concern that new pharmacologic developments that treat osteoporosis encourage women to overlook the benefits of a healthy lifestyle, including diet and exercise.

With these issues at the forefront, "No Bones About it!" will offer an update on hormone replacement therapy, bone building drugs, exercise and diet, heart disease, breast cancer and osteoporosis. Joyce M. Stein, D.O., Ob-Gyn, and Sharon Wright, chief clinical dietician at Seton Health will present.

Pre-registration for the program is requested. Check-in begins at 5:30 p.m. Call 439-5975 or e-mail info@tolife.com to register or for directions.

School books needed for hurricane relief

Clarksville Elementary sends relief to hurricane-ravaged school

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

Cleaning up after last fall's book fair at Clarksville Elementary School, co-chair Abby Mouzakes had an idea — why not send some of the leftover books to victims of Hurricane Katrina?

Deborah Zimmerman, Mouzakes' co-chair, was one step ahead of Mouzakes. She had already looked online and found a school in Mississippi that was hit hard by tornadoes and high winds from the hurricane.

The result of their efforts are the 1,800 books that Clarksville students collected over the last four months, which have been steadily shipped to Sharon Elementary School in Laurel, Miss.

"Almost all the students have been involved in this project in some way," said Mouzakes. "Everyone is really enthusiastic about it."

Mouzakes and Zimmerman wanted to help Sharon Elementary rebuild its library.

Aside from significant damage to the building infrastructure, eight classrooms, the entire computer lab and the gym were totally destroyed. Mouzakes and Zimmerman wanted to give kids at Clarksville a real sense of giving that doesn't come from writing a check.

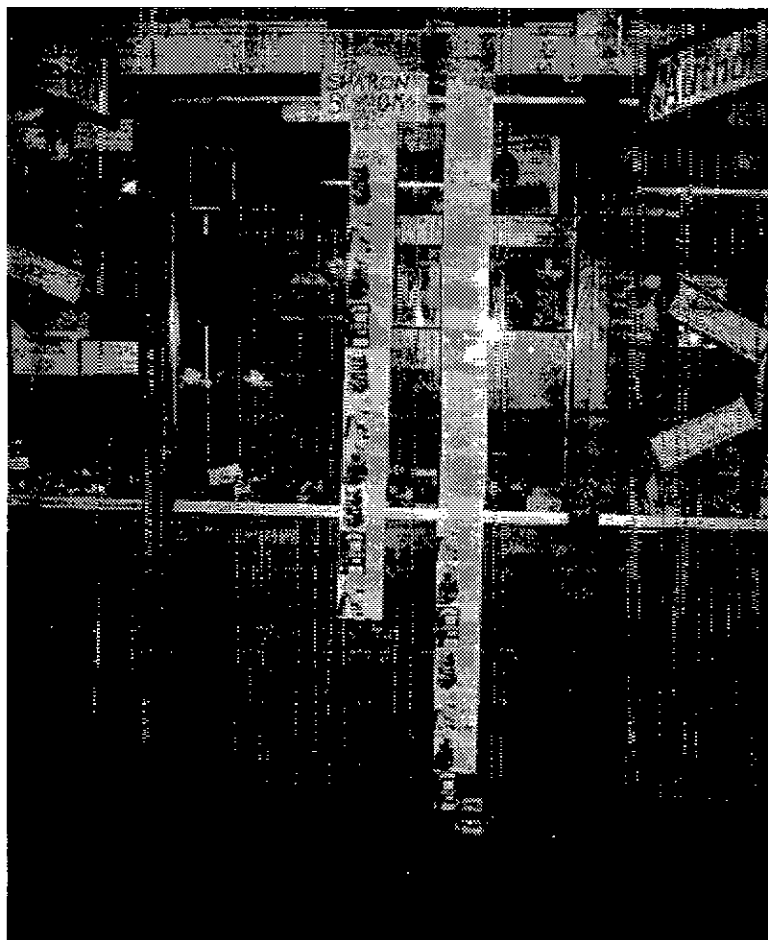

Children and parents scoured their bookshelves looking for books they didn't want anymore. Each class also decorated a backpack to give to the students of Sharon with decorations the kids thought they would enjoy.

"We've got the whole gamut of books, and we had to use discretion in the selection that we sent," said Mouzakes. "We don't want to send all Sponge Bob or Batman."

Sharon Elementary School is similar in size to Clarksville, which was part of the goal. Finding a school comparable in size and student population would help the kids relate, Mouzakes said.

"This gives the kids the idea that they have really done something, and it's fun for them," she said.

Kelsey Bohl, a fifth grade student at Clarksville, said she felt really bad when she heard about the disaster.

Clarksville Elementary School is helping Sharon Elementary School in Jones County, Miss., rebuild its library. Above indicates the number of books donated so far.

"I wanted to do something about it, and I was really happy that the school donated all those books," she said.

Bohl donated about 15 of her old picture books. Alexis Mouzakes, Abby's daughter, donated about the same number.

A second grader, Alexis said she donated about 20 books that she didn't like anymore.

"I feel good," she said.

Kelsey said after the backpacks are sent, she is hoping to keep in touch with some of the students at Sharon.

Donations have been dwindling, however, and the drive is still short of its goal of collecting 2,500 books. The final shipment is scheduled to be delivered Jan. 31.

However, school officials at Sharon Elementary are pleased. They registered the school on FEMA for Kids, a Web site which helps children understand natural disasters, and received a huge influx of calls from schools wanting to help.

"Most of the schools that have helped us have had penny drives and book drives, and just this week we've been able to let kids come back to the library," said Lisa Ishee, educational specialist at Sharon Elementary School. "The kids have been begging for books, they are so excited to see books again. Clarksville school has been great."

Sharon Elementary School is 125 years old and located in Jones County, about 100 miles north of the Gulf Coast. Jones County was the hardest hit intercoastal county, with 115 tornadoes reported and lots of destruction, Ishee said.

"We came back to the school to check the damage, and we would just think 'how in the world will we ever rebuild this?' But it's getting better," said Ishee.

Some teachers had things in their classroom that were there for 20 years, Ishee said, which made the destruction that much more difficult to handle.

"We just wanted to die when we saw the classrooms," she said. "Even though it's gotten better, it will still take two or three years for things to be back to normal."

Drainage slows Kenwood traffic

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

Warm weather and rain has taken the Capital District by surprise, and unfortunately for commuters and residents along Kenwood Avenue, it's also taken their cars for a swim.

"We know there is a drainage problem in that area, but right now we just don't have the means to address it," said Dave Vardigan, assistant resident engineer at the Albany County Department of Transportation.

Most of the staff is on winter and snow duty, he said, meaning less manpower and equipment to mitigate flooding in the area.

"We know we have a problem, but right now, all of our resources are limited," he said. "The weather has caused a real problem. The rain really threw us. If it was snow, we would have been able to handle it much better," he said.

Vardigan expects the DOT to address the problem in the spring.

In another drainage matter, work crews responded to a call from Cookies By Design at the Four Corners Saturday afternoon after the owners discovered a flooded basement.

"We sent our crew out there, cleaned it up and then checked the street line," said Oliver Holmes, commissioner of public works in Bethlehem.

The flooding occurred about 1:30 Saturday afternoon. Work crews were able to pump out the basement with no additional problems.

Amy Pearlson, owner of Cookies By Design, said the flooding was no big deal. Packing materials and non-food items stored in the basement were thrown away, and the basement was professionally cleaned and disinfected.

"Nothing happened upstairs, and nothing touched the food," said Pearson.

'Village scheme' OK'd for new CVS store

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

It won't look like the average CVS.

The CVS that is proposed for Delaware Avenue across from its current location will have weathered wood signs and possibly more decorative molding, giving the building a "Cape-Cod-ish" feeling, according to planners.

Tuesday's planning board meeting approved signage for the project, although the actual project was approved last June. Kari Myers, a representative of CVS, said she and the town planners worked over the last few months to develop the project so it would serve the needs of both CVS and the town of Bethlehem.

"We worked very hard to fit this in the entire village scheme," said Myers.

Signs on the actual building will be internally lighted. The signs by the road will be 10 feet high and lit by three decorative lights on each side. The sign will be made of a material that looks like wood, but weathers better so it will last longer and look good, Myers said.

For months, the project was in "no man's land" according to town planner Jeff Lipnicky, because of the adoption process of the zoning code. Because it received a negative declaration on the SEQR review, the project is exempt from the new zoning code that was adopted shortly after the comprehensive plan.

Town supervisor Theresa Egan said the new design will likely be a great addition to that corner.

"The planning board did a really good job, because the project was being reviewed during the comprehensive plan process, and they did a good job trying to guess what the new requirements would be," said Egan.

It's the town's responsibility to demand high quality, she said, but she admitted it was difficult due to negative impacts some design changes may have on project cost.

"The design will be a bit different, with windows, shingled roofing, and a nice entrance," she said. "The planning board was trying to alleviate the feeling that of too much parking lot. The planning board tried to get them to concentrate on that."

Luke J. Mullen of Elmsmere, owner of the current CVS, said he does not yet know what he plans to do with the site once the new CVS is built.

"I really have no idea right now," he said. "The new CVS won't be up for quite awhile."

Anniversary stirs thoughts of alternative energies

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY

Last week's news that it has been 25 years since the Iran hostages were released woke me up and carried me back instantly. I was 21 again, a senior in college, standing in my friend Marcy's dorm room, unable to breathe as I watched hostages deplane and embrace the families running toward them. Her little television's biggest workout usually came on Sunday nights, when we put popcorn in the industrial-sized silver bowl I'd "borrowed" from my work-study job in the dining hall, and a bunch of us gathered to watch Sunday night episodes of "Star Trek." Our hall mate John liked to call just after we all returned from the library and make reservations.

"One for popcorn and Star Trek," he'd say, and we'd all laugh like we were doing something worthy of Monty Python or Firesign Theater.

While we loved Star Trek, we avoided the evening news with the count of days that our fellow countrymen were being held hostage. I'd lived a semester in Germany, where many of us Americans had had Iranian roommates and come home believing that, really, we could all just get along.

It was John who wandered into Marcy's room while I stood there

Commentary:

Mom's The Word

in tears when the news clips showed the hostages returning to their families. He just started talking, and I held up my hand.

"Oh, you haven't seen this yet," he said. "Sorry. I bawled like a baby when I saw it this afternoon."

While the clutch at my heart remains today when I think of those moments — or see any family that's endured hardship reunited — we flip, protected college students were soon were back to joking. Marcy's Winnie-the-Pooh sat on her windowsill, and one evening, her window shade came down to his nose. John observed that he looked like he was a hostage; and how would he feel if he'd just been released? "I want a steak and a current newspaper," somebody piped up, and it was a phrase we repeated way too often for the rest of the year.

I like to think we've outgrown that sort of flippancy that comes from taking the tiny steps from the protection of our parents' homes to the protection of the Ivory Tower.

Being reminded last week that the release took place just shortly after Ronald Reagan was sworn in also reminded me of the joke I heard the most in January 1981: "What's flat and glows in the dark?" "Iran after Reagan is inaugurated."

Twenty-five years ago, it might have been nervous laughter as we told the flat-and-glows-in-the-dark joke, but there was still a sense of confidence that nothing bad could happen to us. As Iran re-activates its nuclear policy, I feel nervous all over again.

Sept. 11 showed that something really bad can happen to us, and the anniversary of the hostage release made me wonder again if we shouldn't keep water in the basement (bottled, not the kind the rains brought last week); a full tank of gas in the car; and a few cans of Dinty Moore beef stew around. I wondered if the one friend we have who still lives in Manhattan with her family continues to keep a "go bag" packed and ready for her family.

We're not the planning kind, though — our Christmas tree just came down this past weekend. That's partly by design and partly because we put off big chores that involve getting out boxes, sorting and putting things away, and cleaning shelves now dusty after five weeks of Christmas knick-knacks filling space differently than the pictures we usually have displayed. Before Y2K, Chris stockpiled water and canned food; the boys held on to their Halloween candy should a worst-case scenario take place.

Hunting for extension cords in December, I found a few bottles of water from that non-emergency: were they still good to drink, or were they full of parasites? I watered the plants with that water, and while it didn't kill them, I didn't feed it to my family, either.

Events in the news make me hold my family tighter, which I think has as much to do with the fact that at 15 and 13, my children have become less mine and more their own individuals. As we discussed Christopher's midterm exam schedule and his study strategy — a discussion that a few years ago I despaired we might ever have — he actually inquired what I had planned for the coming week. As much as I miss the little children my sons were, exchanges like that are a nice benefit to the fact that they are growing up. We are lucky that, for the most part, our children like us; and we are blessed that they are interesting people.

We talk a lot in our family about world events, mostly because the Internet has been the greatest thing for my husband, who can Willie Winkie, sleeping with a nightcap on my head. We love our programmable thermostat, and I'm coveting a hybrid car.

"Wrong strategy, Mom," Christopher — who wears short-sleeved Hawaiian shirts all winter — told me. "We need to use up the fuel supply before people will really come up with alternatives." His current favorite riff is George Carlin's, pointing out how long our planet has been here, and that it's darn likely to survive anything we can do to it.

But the ecology was the hot topic in my teen years, and I feel compelled to do my bit to save the earth. Two summers ago, that involved the purchase of an electric lawn mower, which is awkward to use, and had me believing for the first time that the oil companies really do control the world. It should be easier to get and run appliances and devices that use renewable energy.

We are lucky in our state to have some green energy policies in place; those wind farms might not be so beautiful on the landscape, but if they can reduce our dependence on depleting the earth's resources, they might be the way to go. And Christopher is partly right: there won't be alternative fuel sources till the public demands them, and we won't really demand them as long as the alternatives remain pricey.

So this winter, I'm keeping the non-liquid kind of nightcap handy so I can sleep warm in my chilly house; and I'm dropping my elected officials a line, requesting strengthened development of alternative fuel sources.

I'm not the only person advocating less dependence on foreign oil, nor the one who sees breaking that dependence as a way of fighting terrorism. In 25 years, I hope to be chatting with my grandchildren — in the warmth of my solar-heated or wind-powered home.

now follow international events with ease.

"The Middle East has always been a problem, hasn't it?" Cormac observed post-9/11, making the observation that is the starting point for future generations of historians and political scientists.

Our boys love the flat-and-glows-in-the-dark joke. Cormac especially is an advocate of get-them-before-they-get-you, and getting rid of threats suits him better than staying up nights worrying about the source of the next blow. He frets about Osama bin Laden's whereabouts the way I used to worry about nuclear annihilation when I was a little girl in the Cold War era.

I kind of keep newspapers away from him, and am glad that our evening schedule doesn't include the nightly news. He knows a lot already, but I let him filter it through more liberal friends and his father's excellent information and interpretation.

We, like many Northeast families this winter, are also looking at world events through the lens of our heating bills, and the cost of filling up our automobiles. Our house is already cold enough that my 89-year-old grandmother wears long johns when she visits us between October and May; I look like Wee

Five Rivers announces events

Five Rivers Environmental Education Center, 56 Game Farm Road in Delmar, is announcing new events:

"Animal Tracks Walk," a program on winter animal tracks will be held on Saturday, Feb. 4 at 2 p.m. On this outdoor ecology walk, center naturalists will explain how wildlife tracks can reveal not only the identity of the animal but also where it came from, where it was going and what it was doing. Join us for an in-depth look at animal tracks and traces in winter as we celebrate the National Wildlife Federation's 70th Birthday. This program is free. Participants should dress for the weather. For information, call Five Rivers Center at 475-0291.

An introductory snowshoe walk will be held on Sunday, Feb. 5 at 2 p.m. The best way to fight cabin fever is to take the wilderness cure. ## New Scotland water system needs upgrades

Bethlehem maintains it; seeks money to fix it

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

The town of Bethlehem applied for a grant to help provide funds for a study of the water system in New Salem. The money would fund upgrades to the system, which has been serving a small number of residents of New Scotland for more than a century.

"This is actually in the town of New Scotland, but the town of Bethlehem maintains it. It needs upgrades," said Supervisor Theresa Egan. "We're trying to find money to do this study, and then have the town of New Scotland take over."

The grant is new this year, said Oliver Holmes, commissioner of the Bethlehem public works department. A total of $200,000 could be granted to both municipalities, with a match of $10,000 from each community.

"We want to take a comprehensive look at the system, do some survey work on the water lines and do a lot of legal research on some of the old agreements," said Holmes. "This grant allows municipalities the money for a joint venture. In this case we would be looking at the areas in New Scotland that Bethlehem provides water to.

It's an old agreement."

Finding a better way to provide service to the approximately 300 customers will require survey work on water lines, and legal research to see who really owns the system.

"There are efficiencies to be gained by this study," he said.

The shared grant is in line with the town's overall goal of working closely with other municipalities.

"I think this is a great chance to use a regional approach," he said.

If the grant is awarded, it will likely be in last spring, Holmes said.

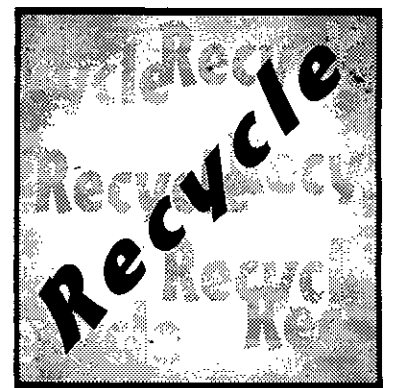

The town also approved the addition of an intern to assist the interdepartmental management advisory committee, which was formed last year to review town departments and make necessary changes to improve efficiency.

The committee, which includes Egan, board member

Sam Messina, Director of Economic Planning and Development George Leveille, Comptroller Judy Kehoe, and Jeff Danmeyer. MIS director, took on intern Dan French, who will spend 20 to 30 hours a week working with the committee, Egan said.

Although the review will be an ongoing process, initial recommendations should be completed in a year, Egan said.

"This committee provides us with benchmarking information, and we're looking at other ways to gain efficiencies in the town," she said.

Cellist brings Albany alive

Beat cabin fever

For many of us the countdown to spring is well under way. January is just about over, and in between fluctuating temperatures, 30-plus degree days are a reminder that before long spring will arrive.

Even the skiers must be eager for a change of season, since snow this year didn't keep many of the slopes fit for any sport.

But between now and actual spring, we need to find ways to beat the blahs, otherwise known as cabin fever.

The Writers Institute has a smashing lineup of authors and films, which began with Angela's Ashes writer Frank McCourt speaking on Tuesday.

Editorial

This Friday, Eugene Ionesco's "Rhinoceros," with Zero Mostel and Gene Wilder, should be just the remedy for a serious case of the blahs. This, followed by two more illustrious novelists, Susan Vreeland and Julian Barnes, will take us into February in fine fashion at the Writers Institute. These events are free and take place at the uptown University at Albany campus unless otherwise noted. Call 444-5620 to check on times and location.

If live theater or musical performance, however, is more to your liking, there's plenty on deck to whet your palate.

Albany's Cap Rep, in its 25th anniversary season, is presenting "8-Track, the Sounds of the 70's" (see our coverage in the Entertainment pages).

For information on this and upcoming shows, call the box office at 445-7469.

Cohoes Music Hall will feature "Ain't Misbehavin'." Call 237-5858 for information on this performance and the rest of the 2006 roster.

Proctors in Schenectady will feature "The Phantom of the Opera" in February. For ticket information, call 346-6204.

At the New York State Theater Institute, take a glimpse behind the scenes of the crafting of the Declaration of Independence with the musical "1776." NYSTI's phone number is 274-3256.

And for those who insist on braving the outdoors in winter's last gasp, there are numerous programs at Five Rivers in New Scotland and at Thacher Park and the Nature Center there. Many programs are suitable for children.

Five Rivers, for example, will feature maple sugaring open houses on Saturdays and Sundays in March from 1:30 to 3:30 p.m. and The Great Backyard Bird Count on Saturday, Feb. 18, where you can help the Cornell Laboratory of Ornithology and the National Audubon Society track the distribution and abundance of winter birds.

Another sure winner at Five Rivers should be Dr. Seuss' Birthday Celebration with a visit from Cat in the Hat and prizes for the Seussiest get-ups.

All in all, there is plenty to keep us occupied until winter's end.

Yo-Yo Ma just part of downtown excitement

By WILLIAM A. KELLERT

The writer is advertising director at Spotlight Newspapers.

When it comes to being a music critic, I may not know much about the technical aspects of the art of classical music, but I do know what I like. And, I do know good theater.

This past Friday evening, the world of classical music was presented with an exciting evening of theater.

For starters, Albany and environs were treated to one of the highlights of the arts calendar's year. Yo-Yo Ma performed with the Albany Symphony Orchestra.

The excitement in downtown Albany on Friday was electric. The streets were literally packed with folks going to the Palace Theatre, Capital Rep, coming and going from the various dining and drinking establishments in the area. Friday night in Albany was reminiscent of a "big" city or the Albany that those of us who grew up in this area have heard stories of from grandparents and parents of how everyone used to be downtown on a weekend evening as all things social emanated from there. It was great fun to be a part of the excitement, greeting friends and acquaintances, getting caught up in the entire festive nature of the goings-on. The mighty Palace Theater too was breathing with new life. The well-publicized renovation work long since completed, the Palace seemed to come alive all over again for the evening ahead. The theater was packed. From the orchestra to the back rows of the balcony, there was not a seat to be had. Truly, the only thing missing was the formal dress attire that, 40 or 50 years ago, would have been the standard for such an event.

The orchestra members made their way to the stage and began that wonderful pre-performance performance of tuning up. The ASO's Maestro David Alan Miller entered stage right and greeted the audience's warm applause. He began the evening, as he does most, by welcoming and offering a bit of explanation of the evening ahead. As if everyone were not already keyed up, Miller upped the ante by saying how excited he was to have "the greatest figure in the entire classical music world" performing.

Point of View

Cynicism being my middle name, I began to think back on some past visits with ASO, albeit, I am loathe to admit, many years ago, and began to ponder whether or not our hometown group would be able to measure up to such standards. Mr. Miller departed from the stage briefly for the orchestra to begin its formal final tuning. The first violinist stands and every member tunes his or her instruments to hers... we are all in sync, let the music play on!

The first piece was a short world premiere performance entitled "Poestenkill Pastoral" composed by Chinese native Bun Ching Lam as a tribute to her adopted homeland. The piece was intriguing, pleasant, as it took the audience through the change of seasons in the Hudson Valley, beginning with a thunderstorm and moving through the fall, then cold frozen winter and culminating with the light budding of the maple leaves as the harbinger of spring. Lam's piece was a pleasant prelude to the repast that followed.

Yo-Yo Ma made his entrance along with violinist Colin Jacobsen. Jacobsen is one of Ma's group of protégés that tour with him in a group known as Silk Road Project.

The first piece was Brahms' "Double Concerto in A Minor, Opus 102." Now, this is the part that I must confess you lose me technically. I don't know a concerto performed in A Minor from one performed in A Major. I wouldn't know Brahms' Opus 102 from 103, but again — and I feel certain that lack of knowledge or expertise extended to the better part of the audience that evening — I do know what moves me.

Ma's emotional involvement is as exciting to watch, as his music is to hear. His fingering on the cello, the unmitigated joy that this man so obviously gets every time he plays, is exhilarating. Mr. Jacobsen and Mr. Miller, too, obviously enjoy their work. The sideways glances of Miller to Ma; the smiles passed between them; and Miller to the orchestra; makes you realize that you are watching art being made, not just listening to music.

The piece is a wonderful conversation of violin talking to cello, the sparring back and forth and the occasional injection of the orchestra, first as responder, then more obviously becoming a greater force in the conversation, beginning to form its own voice, is great fun to observe. Throwing a devil-may-care attitude, the gypsy music takes over the end of the piece and you can almost see everyone dancing in the streets. Thank goodness it was time for intermission.

The second act was Beethoven's "Triple Concerto in

Friday night in Albany was reminiscent of a "big" city or the Albany that those of us who grew up in this area have heard stories of from grandparents and parents of how everyone used to be downtown on a weekend evening as all things social emanated from there.

C Major, Opus 56," triple concerto being for piano, violin and cello. Aside from Ma, the second act soloists were Joel Fan, pianist, and Jonathan Gandelsman, violinist, also of the aforementioned Silk Road Ensemble. All three young men certainly are able to hold their own on the stage with Ma. Experience and time will certainly help to polish their talents but they, in particular Joel Fan, are inordinately talented performers. Beethoven's piece toyed with the audience, as the musicians sparred back and forth, tossed the musical lead from one to the other and then to the orchestra itself. The second movement of the piece was more reflective, thoughtful and calmer. The final movement brought us back full circle to where we began, after allowing each of the soloists to shine again.

For an encore, the audience was treated to the quartet performing a wonderful and lengthy Brahms piano quartet. Again, it was as much fun watching Ma and observing Miller standing at that point at the side of the stage, as it was listening to the music.

Leaving the theater, one could not help but be impressed not only by the size of the crowd but the diversity of ages in the group. And like leaving a rock concert, everyone was exhilarated, electrified and wowed by what they had just participated in.

Oh, and how did the ASO hold up? Were my fears of local small town embarrassment against the Maestro warranted? No. Not in any way. I was pleased and proud to see how far the orchestra has come along. David Alan Miller has molded the musicians and helped them grow to a point that they not only hold their own with world class talent, they too were a joy to listen to, and I look forward to my next visit...which won't be as long again as the past one!

Look familiar?

Editor, The Spotlight:

Customers leave their personal valuables at Perfect Blend all the time. For the most part, we can identify whom to call based upon names and phone numbers in wallets, on cell phones, in book bags, or inside pocketbooks. For clothing items, we sometimes recognize an article of clothing someone had on and let him or her know they left their sweater or jacket here. More often than not, we can call a customer, or if we can't reach them, they retrace their tracks and come back to claim their lost item.

We are stumped with a package that was left at Perfect Blend last week. Someone left it here under one of our front tables the afternoon of Monday, Jan. 9. The package contains several black and white family photographs from the 1950s and 1960s. Also found were bus tickets, a Mass card and cash in a bank envelope. We tried calling Trailways to identify the purchaser of the tickets, but they were purchased for cash and cannot be traced.

Our concern is that this package belongs to an elderly individual who may not remember where they were last week, or where they left the package.

If any of your readers can help us find the owner of this package, we would greatly appreciate it. Please have them call us at 439-6537 or stop by and ask for Roberta or Rhonda.

A special kudos to our night managers for their honesty and concern.

Thank you.

Writer urges meat and dairy-free diet

Editor, The Spotlight:

Dec. 26 marked the tragic anniversary of the world's worst natural disaster, when a giant tsunami extinguished the lives of nearly 200,000 people in Indonesia, Thailand, India, Sri Lanka, and other countries on the Indian Ocean.

Yet, each year, seven times as many Americans die of heart disease, stroke, cancer, and other chronic killer diseases that have been linked conclusively with consumption of meat and dairy products. Meat consumption also dumps animal waste in our waterways, destroys wildlife habitats to grow animal feed, and tortures innocent animals in factory farms and slaughterhouses.

Because of the many benefits it brings to us and our planet, let's make a New Year's resolution to replace meat and dairy products in our diet with wholesome, delicious vegetables, fresh fruits, and whole grains. With every supermarket featuring a large variety of these foods, as well as a rich assortment of soy-based veggie burgers, soy-dogs, delicious, ready-to-eat frozen dinners, and soy milk and ice cream, it's got to be the easiest resolution we'll ever keep.

Thanks to Delmar Fire Vols

Editor, The Spotlight:

We recently had occasion to call upon the Delmar Fire Department. We wanted to publicly thank them for the way they handled our crisis.

We were particularly impressed by the professionalism they showed throughout the whole ordeal. From the time I called to report the situation until the time they left, everyone we interacted with was helpful and kind.

Even though our problem turned out to be minor, everyone was concerned about our well-being. Both the firefighters and medics were respectful and caring.

We are lucky to have volunteers like this in Delmar.

Mark Twain's classic tale comes to BCMS stage

America's favorite fictional rascal at BCMS

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

Lots of dancing and singing marks the upcoming middle school production of "Tom Sawyer," as well as a hands-on learning experience for all middle school students interested in theater. Of the 85 students involved in the production, only half are part of the cast.

"There are a lot of kids who audition, and many of them would rather work as part of the crew," said Mary Katherine Daly, musical director and general music teacher, who is new to the district. "The great part about this show is that it's not just about the people on the stage. There are students who are sewing costumes and learning the technical parts of putting on a show. It's really hands-on."

Workshops to train the cast members in music and dance took place in mid-October, and rehearsals started in November.

The musical version of the Mark Twain novel is set in 1840 in St. Petersburg, Mo. In the course of the story, Tom Sawyer, played by Christopher Barron, matches wits with his stern Aunt Polly, falls in love with feisty Becky Thatcher, played by Adi White, and goes on the adventure of his life with Huckleberry Finn. Along the way, the audience meets the terrifying villain Injun Joe, Tom's bratty half-brother Sid, and all the other boys and girls in the village.

Frank Leavitt, director and producer, has an easier job this year with the addition of Daly and choreographer Ailisa Fardella, a graduate of Manhattanville College and an intern at the school. As educational outreach coordinator for Capital Repertory Theater in Albany, Leavitt also worked as the musical director in addition to his directing and producing duties. The additional help this year leaves him time to really concentrate on character development.

Ian Dembling, Seamus Barrett, Chris Barron, Nathaniel Edgar and Matt Greenberg get ready for Tom Sawyer.

"You don't necessarily see the intricacies involved, but there is a right way to do things and a wrong way," he said. "This is the right way."

Tom Sawyer is a good production because many of the characters in the play are the same age as the students, Leavitt said. The educational value is just as important as the entertainment value, he said. Also, the vocal demands are not too much for middle school voices.

"When you choose for middle school students, you have to find material that is not too challenging as far as the acting, and vocally not too demanding," said Leavitt. "We look for pieces that have breadth to them, and we try to find shows that can highlight the skills of the kids. Tom Sawyer is a very long, good story, and the way the play was written was great. It's theatrical as well as being a great story."

Education is first and foremost in Leavitt's mind, which means, ironically, that the focus is not on putting on a good show. Having a good time and educating the students about theater production is the main focus. The rationale is if the students learn to develop their skills and enjoy doing it, they will walk away with knowledge of how a theatrical production works.

"Otherwise, there would be a lot of yelling, and that's not going to teach them anything," Leavitt said.

Much of the music in the show is three- and four-part harmony, said Daly.

"What's nice about the middle school is the range of voices," she said. "It fits them vocally very well."

Performances will be at the middle school at 7 p.m. Thursday, Feb. 2; Friday, Feb. 3; and Saturday, Feb. 4. A snow date is scheduled for Sunday, Feb. 5 at 3 p.m. Tickets are $5 and may

Service group seeks worthwhile community projects

By STEPHANIE LUBIS

The Delmar Rotary just can't find enough to do.

There are about 20 members of the Delmar Rotary, and they are currently looking for some hands-on projects to do around the area.

"Things like fixing shelves, or other kinds of things that would take about a day or two and would require about eight to 10 people," said Tom Burdick, president-elect, of the projects the Rotary's seeking.

In the next two months, the Rotary is hoping that people in the community will help them with some ideas of what can be done to improve the town, said Rotarian Vicki Plotsky.

Part of Rotary's commitment is to do four kinds of service: international, local, vocational and community, or hands-on. Although the Rotary holds annual fund-raisers to benefit local organizations, Plotsky said a series of hands-on projects would help build a stronger sense of community.

"We haven't been able to swing the hands-on projects in previous years," said Plotsky.

The Rotary hosted a breakfast last Wednesday and invited town Supervisor Theresa Egan to speak and offer suggestions of work that could be useful to the town.

"There are certainly things that will be coming up in the future that we will need some help with," said Egan.

Currently, Egan is circulating the Rotary's petition to the town's department heads.

One of Egan's ideas is to coordinate all the service clubs in town. Creating a council that would periodically meet to discuss projects to work on is something she will encourage, and pooling resources for grand-scale projects is a possibility.

"We have the Rotary, the Kiwanis, the Lions, and so many more," she said. "There are a huge number of volunteers, but we don't have great organization among them. They do great individual projects, but it would be great to something in a grand way."

Many beautification projects could receive the Rotary's help, including landscaping near the traffic rotaries being built for the planned Slingerlands Bypass on Route 85.

Project proposals should include a one-page description of the project, and other details like cost and special skills required, and the expected improvements.

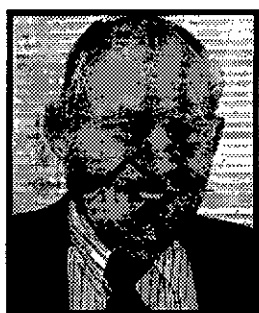

The Delmar Rotary host two major fund-raisers each year. Now through February the Rotary sells oranges and grapefruits, and in June, it holds a Teeing for Charity fund-raiser at the Normanside Country Club.

For information, contact Ginger Landry, club president, at 424-9204 or by e-mail at vlandy@nycap.rr.com.

It is extremely important to price your home properly from the start. To best help set a realistic listing price, real estate agents and sellers must take into account the value of "comps". This term refers to comparable sales prices preferably of similar homes within the seller's own neighborhood or area. The three most important elements in finding comparable properties are location, square footage and amenities in the home. Real Estate Agents are able to properly compare and contrast the comparables in order to help determine the proper market value of a property. Moreover, if you price your property at market value, thus exposing it to a greater percentage of prospective buyers, you increase your chances for a sale. Perhaps no other step in the selling process is as critical to assure a sale, because unless a home is priced correctly, it will not draw offers.

When it comes to listings, I have expert knowledge of the Bethlehem area and can confidently price your home. I use my 15 years of experience to insure you maximum value for your property. Remember, homes priced correctly sell quicker and prevent the need to reduce the price later.

Capitol Chamber artists in concert at the library

The library's winter concert series, "A Little Sunday Music," continues Sunday, Feb. 5, with a performance by the Capitol Chamber Artists. On the program are works by J.S. Bach, John Dowland, Paul Paray, Pachelbel and others.

Celebrating its 38th season, Capitol Chamber Artists has established a national and international reputation for musical excellence in live performance and recording. In 1989, the ensemble made its New York City debut to critical acclaim at Weill Hall. CCA received one of the first National Endowment for the Arts consortium grants to commission composers Andrew Imbrie and George Walker.

CCA's 1991 recording (Centaur Records) of commissioned works is distributed throughout the U.S., Europe, Asia, Canada and Australia. In 1995, Albany Records released CCA's performance of Pulitzer prizewinner George Walker's Poem for soprano and chamber ensemble. The New York State Council on the Arts awarded CCA a Challenge Grant to record Haydn's 12 London Symphonies for Centaur Records.

Funded by the New York State Council on the Arts and the Vermont Arts Council, CCA performs more than 100 concerts a year in New York and Central Vermont. The ensemble has been heard on NPR's Performance Today.

The artists

• Flutist Irvin E. Gilman, CCA's cofounder, holds music degrees from Oberlin Conservatory and the Manhattan School. He was assistant principal flutist with the Detroit Symphony for 12 years and principal flutist with the Albany Symphony for 15 years, during which time he held professorships at University at Albany and Bennington College. Gilman has performed with the Philadelphia Orchestra and other renowned orchestras, and recorded with Centaur and Albany Records. He is also a published poet.

• Violinist, violist and CCA cofounder Mary Lou Saetta holds music degrees from the Eastman School. A Tanglewood Fellow and past faculty member of Union College and The College of Saint Rose, she has performed with notable orchestras including the New York City Ballet Orchestra, SPAC Orchestra, and Albany Symphony, and recorded with Centaur and Albany Records.

• Cellist Helene Annas is also a graduate of the Eastman School. A guest artist with Lukas Foss' Creative Associates series at Carnegie Hall and Buffalo, she has performed with the Albany Symphony, Williams College String Quartet and Northeastern New York Philharmonia. She was a faculty member at SUNY College at Buffalo, UAlbany, Simon's Rock College and the Pittsfield Community School, teaching cello and chamber music. She has performed with CCA for more than 15 years.

• Tenor and pianist Dan Foster was trained at Westminster Choir College as a singer, pianist, organist and conductor. He has sung at the Spoleto Festival International and Austria's Pitten Festival, toured in Europe and Asia, and performed and recorded extensively with the New York Philharmonic, Philadelphia Orchestra, Orchestra of Saint Luke's, and the early music ensemble Fuma Sacra. He is founding artistic director of the Aoele Consort.

"A Little Sunday Music" is sponsored by Friends of Bethlehem Public Library. It is free and open to the public. The series concludes March 12 with the Eribeth Chamber Players.

Copies available at the information desk. New members welcome.

increases in all segments of local government, such as school, county, town, fire and ambulance.

One important source of information that the town uses to verify the accuracy of the data being used to value property is on the data mailers sent to all town residents almost one year ago. Residents were asked to either confirm that the information about their property was correct, or update the data to reflect any changes or improvements, and then mail them back to the town.

Concerns came up during the meeting about responses that might be less than truthful. "There isn't much we can do about that," Nooney said. "It's basically assessment fraud." Nooney then reassured community members that the assessor's office does everything possible to make sure they are using accurate data.

Town resident Marlene

Buzzard asked if assessors had gone inside any homes during the current reassessment. Nooney said there simply is not enough staff to make that feasible.

As part of the final phase of this process, all property owners can expect to receive an assessment disclosure notice from the town on or around Feb. 9. This is the first notification of new assessments.

Project Monitor Bob Kitchen spoke about the taxes shown on the disclosure notice.

"It shows about 95 percent of your total tax bill, the three main parts," he said. Those three parts are county taxes, town taxes (general fund and highway), and school taxes.

"If your assessment changes by 65 percent (from last year) your taxes will be about the same," Kitchen estimated.

The notice will contain information about informal meetings the town will hold in February and March. These hearings will be scheduled by appointment for residents who have any questions or wish to review their preliminary assessment. Residents can sign up for 15-minute blocks of time.

Nooney said that anyone who believes there is an error in their assessment, must bring in any supporting documents they have to support a request for an adjustment.

Nooney said the step after that would be that "property owners will be notified by mail of the determination of the assessor's review from support supplied at the informal meetings."

What happens if a resident does not agree with the assessor's determination? Nooney said that at this point a grievance application must be filed with the assessor's office and an appointment scheduled for the grievance to be heard before the board of assessment review. She stressed that all applications must be submitted no later than the fourth Tuesday in May.

Regarding the availability of information on this entire process, Nooney emphasized,

"There is tons of information. I'm always available in my office if anyone has any questions."

Residents can reach Nooney at 439-9020 or by e-mail: jnooney@townofnewscotland.com.

Additional information about the assessment process is available at town hall, 2029 New Scotland Road, or online, www.townofnewscotland.com. By going online, residents can view digital photos of all town properties as well as information on details such as size and improvements.

Board

Superintendent Les Loomis.

Some of the classes, such as social studies and science, can go "a mile wide and an inch deep" said Loomis.

"That is not our goal, and students don't really use study skills for those classes," he said.

The study skills program will be fairly generic, Loomis said, so that what students learn there can be applied to all their classes.

Additional computer applications as well as keyboarding will be offered as part of the program.

The studio art program will enable eighth grade students to get a jump-start on art courses. Unlike the other curriculum changes, studio art will be offered after school due to packed schedules at the middle school. However, the decision to include studio art as a middle-school curriculum choice was not as easy as the other offerings.

"I feel that this is a form of high school staffing, and that is inappropriate at the middle school level," said Stuart Lyman, vice president of the school board.

He is concerned that the middle school class would be competition with the high school classes, meaning that allocating staff to the middle school might cut out a high school class. He's also concerned that students might be disappointed if the class doesn't take place.

The board is currently in the process of looking at curriculum and staff changes as it prepares the budget for the 2006-07 school year.

"To approve this now, it may be misleading because the class may not be funded if it is in a competition situation with other high school classes," said board president Richard Svenson.

Studio art is being offered for those students who are very serious about art, and who want to have opportunity to explore as many art classes as possible during their tenure at the school.

"We view this as an enhancement of the art program, not just to satisfy the state acceleration mandate," said Loomis.

Blog makes its debut on library Web site

The Pied Piper of Books has made its debut on www.voorheesvillelibrary.org. Pied Piper is a blog written by Joyce Laiosa and Gail Brown of Youth Services. To find it, visit www.voorheesvillelibrary.org and click on the Youth Services link at the right of the screen, then pick Teen Spaces, which will lead you to the blog, as well as some other great resources. The blog contains a schedule of teen programming at the library, and reviews of popular books and movies. It also enables viewers to post their comments, which people can respond to. It is a fun new experience and we can't wait for you to check it out.

One of the first suggestions on the blog is that readers start keeping a list of what they read this year. Write down the date, title, author, fiction or nonfiction, and make a code of how well you liked the book. Readers can rate the book with the words Ugh, Okay, or Terrific, or make a star rating system. Keep track of how many books you read. The suggestion also works well for adults who want to remember favorite authors or recommend great books to their friends. Everyone should have a personal book list!

Kindermusik

The Feb. 2 Lapsit stories session at the library will provide an engaging experience of learning and bonding for parents and their baby through the magic of Kindermusik. The program presents a unique blending of creative movement, vocal play, object and instrument exploration and a colorful literature component. If you have a child two years or younger, sign up. Space is limited. The event starts at 10:15 a.m.

Kids' book discussion

• Ready Freddy: Tooth Trouble by Abby Klein will be discussed by second and third graders Friday, Feb. 3, at 7 p.m. It's not too late to sign up at the reference desk and pick up a copy of the book.

• The first meeting of the new middle-school book discussion group, Book Chatters, will be Saturday, Feb. 4, at 3:30 p.m. If you are interested in joining, call Joyce Laiosa at 765-2791.

Program nears end

Food for fines is almost over; you have until Jan. 31 to bring in your overdue books, tapes and videos with a canned good to reduce your library fine.

Tigers and photos

Everyone loves Rory Alt's tigers in the display case. Come in and see them before they move back to Rory's bedroom. See also Craig Shufelt's car photos in the hall gallery.

• All library programming is free (unless otherwise noted) and open to the public. Voorheesville Public Library is located at 51 School Road, Voorheesville. For information, call 765-2791 or visit www.voorheesvillelibrary.org.

Eat Better

With Dental Implants

On average, a denture patient with an excellent fitting eats at 15%-20% efficiency compared to a person with natural teeth. As the jawbone shrinks due to the loss of both tooth crown and root, chewing efficiency is reduced even more. This makes it increasingly difficult for denture patients to eat certain foods. Dental implants, on the other hand, can restore chewing efficiency that is comparable to that of natural teeth. This is because dental implants replace the entire tooth crown and root, which is implanted directly in the bone. In addition, a full denture covers the palate of the mouth and reduces the ability to taste foods. With dental implants, the palate is exposed for full taste enjoyment.

Many orthodontic problems can be corrected as easily and as well for adults as children. Teeth that work better usually look better too. And a healthy, beautiful smile can improve self-esteem, no matter what your age. To schedule a consultation for orthodontic treatment, call our office. Our services include pediatric care, tooth whitening, root canal, dentures/partial, implants, crowns and bridges and much more.

We are general dentists who are certified by the International Association for Orthodontics.

P.S. A dental implant will initially cost more than a bridge or dentures, but it will more than make up for the extra cost in terms of comfort, function, and appearance.

If you got them all right, you'll want to not just run, but hustle, to Albany's Capital Repertory Theater to catch "8-Track: The Sounds of the 70's," running now through Feb. 12. (Get it? Hustle, as in "do the...")

The four-person cast is energetic and upbeat enough that everybody will have a good time, but on opening night, it was clear that those enjoying the show the most had lived the polyester, palazzo-panted decade. Each song was greeted with laughter that ranged from ripples to guffaws, and when baritone Nik Rocklin took the stage in low-slung, frayed bell-bottom jeans, boots that you'd hope were manufactured by Frye, a polyester shirt that shouldn't be allowed too close to an open flame, and hair parted in the middle and hanging past his shoulders, most of the women in the audience surely agreed with what Cap Rep's Artistic Director Maggie Mancinelli-Cahill said at the reception following the opening night show.

"When Nik comes on stage in that first act," she said, "he looks like all the boyfriends I've ever had."

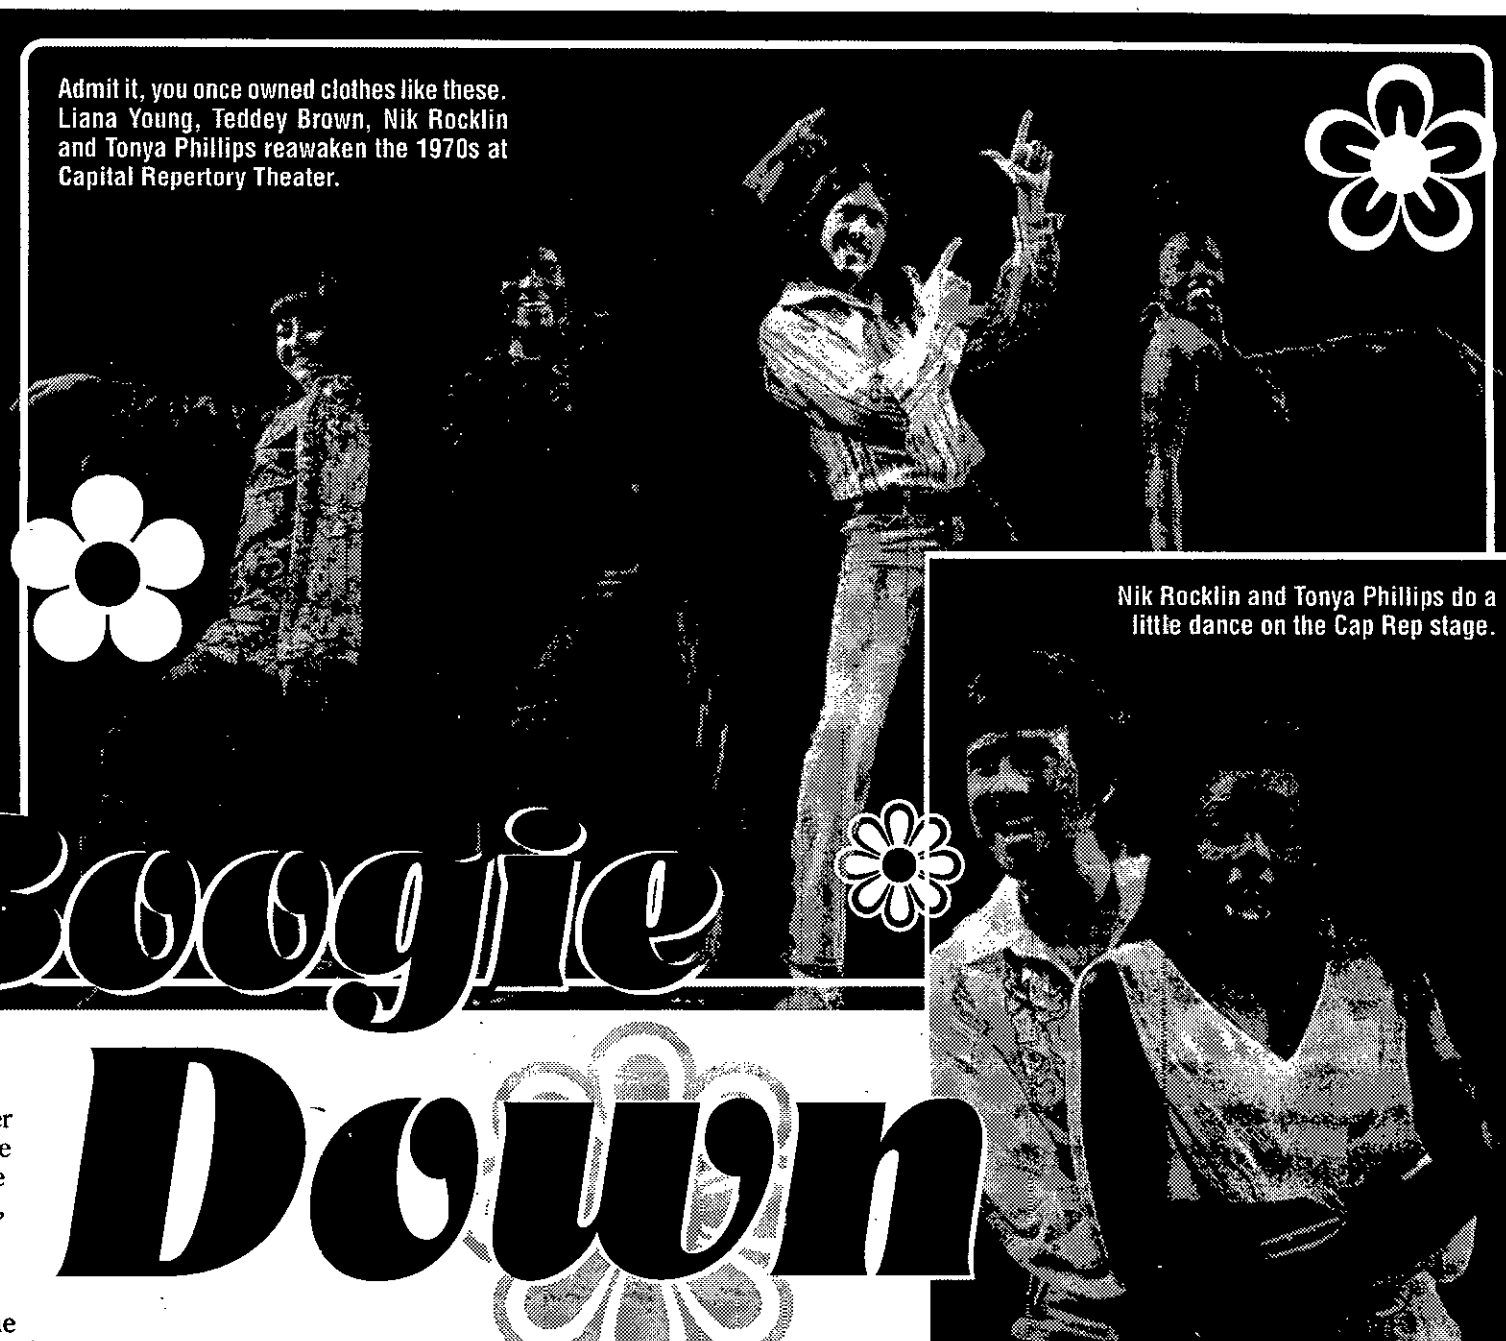

Rocklin's swagger is dead-on. All of the costumes help move the show through the era that saw the end to Vietnam, Nixon's presidency, the coming and going of disco, and ushered in the preppy era. No wonder a lot of the clothes and music are something that make us grin ruefully when we see them again.

And yet... "8-Track" is a good night out. Rick Seeber, a Cold Spring, Putnam County, native and now a Denver resident, conceived and wrote the show five years ago, with three out of four of the current cast members in mind. The evening's songs are grouped around eight "tracks," which include "Not sold in stores" (remember K-Tel television promotions?), "War and Peace," "Road Trip," and of course no homage to the '70s is complete without a tribute to disco.

"I'm a musical director in recovery," Seeber said on opening night. "I thought this show up in 1990, and a theater I worked with in Milwaukee trusted me, and took a chance. I had dialogue at first, but I hated that. I also hate the word 'revue.' I had a list of titles for the show, and settled on '8-Track.' Then I came up with different scenes. Every song is there for a reason; there's a connection between them."

The cast does a good job enhancing the songs with great dancing, excellent facial expressions, and enough acting to put the lyrics in context.

"We had to make sure everyone understood the words," 32-year-old Rocklin said. The cast listened to Tonya Phillips, the show's soprano, picked up the task of choreographer for the Cap Rep production.

"I choreographed it as a singer, thinking about how I would dance if I were singing," Phillips said. "I watched a lot of Earth, Wind and Fire."

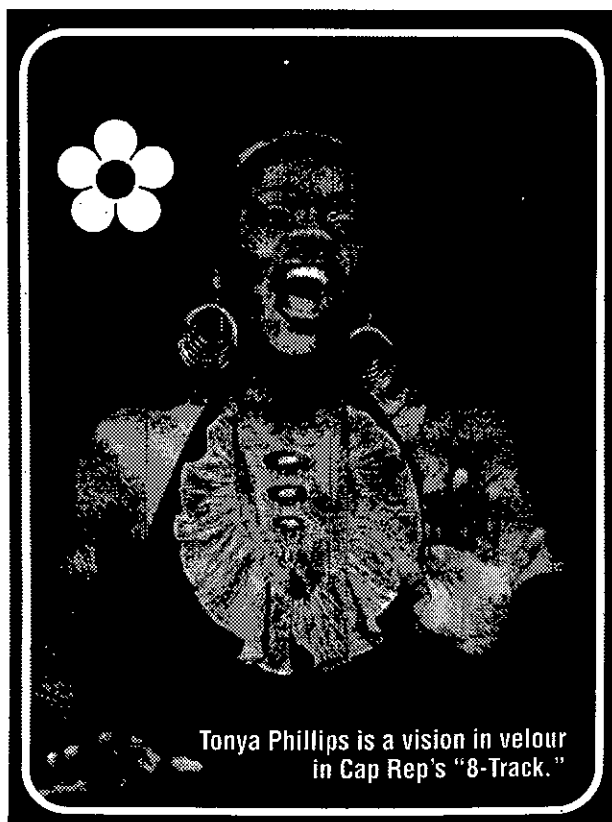

Phillips, 33, also drew on her own childhood.

"I was a pre-teen in the 1970s," the Orlando, Fla., native said. "My whole family was into music. The older kids in our neighborhood would take the younger kids to the gym, play music, and teach us these songs and how to dance to them. I also love to watch 'Good Times' and 'What's Happening.'"

Phillips' favorite songs in the show are "Takin' it to the streets" and "Until you come back to me."

Teddey Brown added soul to the show, with an Afro that looked like it needed scaffolding and striped denim bell bottoms in the early part of the show; wide-wale corduroys and a shirt with horizontal stripes later in the show. His winsome facial expressions drew the audience in completely, and let us laugh at ourselves as much as the numbers he sang well.

Liana Young brought a charming twang to a lot of her songs, and her costumes reminded us that yes, too many patterns can be a bad thing. Her mini-skirt in the first act was a reminder original recordings of the songs and went to the Internet to figure out what exactly they should be singing.

They also did a little research about the era.

to every 1970s-era Catholic school girl about why uniform skirts had to be long enough to touch the floor when you knelt.

"The show takes people away," she said. "It lets them reminisce."

That's exactly what audience members Danielle Boudreau, 43, and Edie Guilbault, 42, found.

"I knew every word to every song," Boudreau said. "It was a carefree and easy time, and now we're remembering it."

"There were some classics in there," Guilbault said.

You can check out the classics on Cap Rep's stage, and as the theater always does, it's offering events around the show. This Saturday, Jan. 28, and next Saturday, Feb. 4, after the 4 p.m. show and before the 8:30 p.m. show, Jennifer Girard of the Arthur Murray Latham Studio, will offer mini-dance lessons upstairs at the Victory Café. Cost is $5 per person.

Discussion nights with Mancinelli-Cahill are scheduled for Jan. 25, Feb. 1 and Feb. 8, after the show; and on Sunday, Feb. 5 at 1:30 p.m. with a complimentary continental breakfast.

Regular performances are at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday; 8 p.m. Fridays; 4 and 8:30 p.m. on Saturdays; and 2:30 p.m. Sunday. Tickets range in price from $34 to $42, and discounts are available for teachers, those under 30, over 65, and for groups of 10 or more.

Capital Repertory Theater is located at 111 North Pearl St. in Albany. For information or to purchase tickets, call 445-7469 or visit the Web site, www.capitalrep.org.

Gillham's shot lifts Bethlehem girls past Colonie

By ROB JONAS

The Bethlehem girls basketball team has made some significant strides this year, but what the Lady Eagles accomplished last Friday was a giant leap.

Leah Gillham hit a shot with 19 seconds left in the fourth quarter to help Bethlehem defeat Colonie 44-43 in a Suburban Council Gold Division game. It was the Lady Eagles' first win over the Lady Raiders in several years.

"It was a big relief," said Bethlehem coach Mark Nealon. "They beat us by 24 points the first time. This was a huge swing."

Bethlehem (4-6 league, 8-7 overall) withstood a lot to pull out the win. After taking a 12-5 first quarter lead, the Lady Eagles struggled in the second quarter and fell behind by five points at halftime.

Rather than panic, Bethlehem returned to its game plan in the third quarter. The Lady Eagles kept driving through Colonie's notoriously tough full-court press and attacking the basket. Though it only resulted in keeping the score close entering the fourth quarter, the statement Bethlehem made to Colonie was clear — the Lady Eagles weren't going to back down this time.

"As the game kept going on, it was back and forth, but the longer it stayed close, the more confident we became," Nealon said.

The lead changed hands several times in the fourth quarter before Gillham hit her shot. Still, Colonie (6-3, 8-4) had opportunities to take the lead in the final 19 seconds. However, the Lady Raiders missed two layups, and then Kelly VanValkenburgh — who led all scorers with 17 points — misfired on two free throws.

"The last couple of seconds seemed to take forever," Nealon said.

Meg Olsen led a balanced Bethlehem attack with 13 points. Alex McCullough contributed 10 points, while Gillham added nine points.

"Leah's been consistent all year long," Nealon said. "Once in a while, someone else contributed double digits (in scoring), but then everyone has been contributing rebounds and steals."

The victory over Colonie gives Bethlehem consecutive league victories, as well as a big confidence boost heading into Friday's cross-divisional game at Shaker.

"We have three games left in league play (before the Suburban Council Tournament)," Nealon said. "What we've got to do is concentrate on these next three games, but especially the Shaker game since it's the next one on the schedule."

RCS pulls minor upset

In other girls basketball action last Friday, Ravena-Coeymans-

Selkirk edged one of the Colonial Council's top teams, Cohoes, 36-33, while Voorheesville lost to Mechanicville 47-26.

RCS (4-7, 5-8) outscored Cohoes (8-3, 9-4) 21-16 over the second and third quarters to grab a three-point lead and held on through a tight fourth quarter to earn the home win.

Trish Norton scored nine points, while Katelyn Matousek and Jeannine Rider each added eight points for the Lady Indians. Andrea Butler led Cohoes with 11 points.

In Mechanicville, the Red Raiders (7-5, 9-5) outscored Voorheesville 29-7 in the first half and never looked back in handing the Lady Blackbirds their 10th loss in 11 league games.

Samantha Brown had 14 points, and Kelly Murphy added 12 points for Mechanicville. Brittany Vogel scored 14 points for Voorheesville (1-12), which played without leading scorer Brigit Feeney.

Booster club resumes tradition

By ROB JONAS

The Bethlehem Central Swimming and Diving Booster Club celebrated its first anniversary by resuming a tradition started more than a decade ago.

Prior to the start of last Thursday's boys meet between Bethlehem and Saratoga, the booster club presented two banners with the names of this year's swimmers for the boys and girls teams.

"It's a tradition that we're resurrecting," said booster club chairwoman Beth Garbo. "It represents a lot of laps and a lot of dives, and it honors their commitment to the sport."

The new banners will eventually join others that adorn the walls of the high school pool — ones that honor teams that have won or challenged for Section II titles over the last 15 years.

"I think it's great for the history of the team," said Bethlehem boys swim team coach Doug Gross. "Bethlehem has a great history in Section II swimming, and it's great that it's being recognized."

The fact that the Bethlehem Central Swimming and Diving Club has only been around for one year is surprising, since it's been one of the signature sports at the school. However, Garbo said parents have been involved with the team for years before the club began.

"Swimming and diving is one of the sports where parents have a deep connection, and it allows the coach to coach," she said.

"We're certainly pleased that we're finally organized," added past chair Wilma DeLucco. "Last year, we had five people who were saying let's have a club."

Along with the team banners, another sign was debuted at the Bethlehem-Saratoga meet — an orange one that simply says "Eagles' Nest." That sign will hang wherever the swim team competes, whether at home or on the road.

The booster club has other projects its working on.

"We'd like to replace the old record board, and we'd like to purchase a new electronic timer (for the pool)," DeLucco said.

Eagles swim by Streaks

The Bethlehem boys swim team celebrated the banner presentation last Thursday by beating Saratoga 105-81 to raise its record to 6-1.

Larry Gloeckler and Sean Kennedy led the Eagles by winning two individual events apiece. Gloeckler took first place in the 200-yard freestyle with a time of 1:51.06 and the 500 freestyle with a time of 5:03. Kennedy won the 200 individual medley in a time of 2:06.69 and the 100 butterfly in a time of 55.31 seconds.

Drew Acquaviva and Tyler Dudas also won individual events for Bethlehem. Acquaviva won the 100 backstroke with a time of 58.78 seconds, and Dudas took first place in the 100 breaststroke with a time of 1:06.10.

lost to the Raptors (Toronto had a double-digit halftime lead). Seriously, someone in the Lakers' front office might want to consider giving Bryant a better supporting cast than Lamar Odom and a bunch of role players. Bryant isn't going to deliver an NBA championship on his own.

By the way, I just looked at the Eastern Conference standings for the first time since ... well, since the NBA season started. There are only six teams in a 15-team conference that are above .500, and four of them are in the Central Division (Detroit, Cleveland, Indiana and Milwaukee). Meanwhile, the Western Conference has eight teams above the .500 mark as of Monday. I'm not saying the Eastern Conference is weak — not when Detroit owns a 32-5 record. I am saying that there may be a bit of a competitive imbalance, though.

I do have a baseball rant I need to get off my chest. Has Omar Minaya gone insane? How many relief pitchers do the New York Mets need? After Saturday's trade that sent Kris Benson to Baltimore for Jorge Julio and John Maine, the Mets officially have four starting pitchers and (this is just an estimate) 12 relievers.

I know the bullpen was a weakness last year, but overloading on relievers — mostly middling relievers, at that — isn't going to make the Mets any better. Plus, Minaya traded away two starters (Benson and Jae Seo) who combined for 24 victories last year to get four of his new relievers. And to think this is the same general manager who was lauded for signing Carlos Beltran last year.

Finally, let me say a word about Alex Ovechkin's sprawling, sliding goal he scored last week that made all the highlight reels — awesome. And I think that might be an understatement.

January 2006

Dear Valued Customers:

...for all your pets needs

The sudden loss of a best friend causes sadness and anger. When any of us experiences the loss of a pet we feel comparable emotions to the loss of a loved one. This is for certain because that pet is a family member.

When Reigning Cats and Dogs agreed to care for Ollie and Junior over Christmas weekend, the owners and staff did so without reserve. Some kennels do not board pugs, but we've made no such distinction. The pugs were boarded in our kennel along with 51 other loved animals. They were bathed and dried along with 11 other dogs on December 26 in preparation for returning to their family, the Luries. The accidental death of the pugs was determined to be just that, an accident. Junior and Ollie were placed in the usual wall units for drying. The dogs were under the heated dryer for only about thirty five minutes. This is standard procedure. In the time between the pugs being placed in the drying unit and their distress, their bather, Fran, was bitten by another dog. She was advised to go home by the kennel manager, Danielle. Danielle was fully aware that Fran had left Reigning Cats and Dogs that afternoon. She was also well aware of her responsibility in monitoring the dogs that were drying in the downstairs grooming area. Danielle and Fran returned to the grooming area in preparing for Fran to leave. At that time, Ollie and Junior had been drying for 35 minutes with a dryer set on a 3 heat, given a 1-9 range. A dryer was removed from their drying cage. Two small fans and two standing fans were rearranged on all of the drying dogs. One dryer remained on a German Shepherd situated below Ollie and Junior. Ollie and Junior were fine at this inspection and in their bath. One hour later, Danielle, our kennel manager, found Ollie and Junior in distress. Emergency procedures were followed by taking the two dogs to their vet, and subsequently to the emergency clinic, since the Delmar Animal Hospital was not open for business that day.

We are deeply saddened by this unfortunate set of circumstances. However, on that day, Reigning Cats and Dogs followed the exact procedures that are in place 365 days a year to safeguard each animal in its care. Ollie and Junior showed no obvious signs of being in distress when they were first checked by Danielle. Ollie and Junior were not purposely left in dryers to overheat in an attended, unsupervised situation.

As the owners of Reigning Cats and Dogs, we can only relate to you the incident as it occurred. We have nothing to hide as evidenced by our immediate cooperation in the Bethlehem police investigation. We assure you that a consistent level of care and attention is given to each of the animals cared for at our facility for grooming or boarding. Our dedication to the animal community as well as to the individual care of animals has never wavered in our sixteen years of business.

Sixteen years of caring for our customers and their best friends has been a job which we have taken very seriously and with great responsibility. Our safety record verifies our commitment to our customers and their pets. We have had only one insurance claim filed by us during those years. This was for an injury to a pet's leg when he jumped from the grooming table. These sixteen years of service translates into approximately 116,800 boardings and 48,000 grooms for our trusting customers. Our facility is also one in which any dissatisfaction or problems are often settled through discussion and negotiation. In the case of the Luries, such discussion was abbreviated with the threat of a lawsuit, and monetary claims by the Lurie's lawyer, Mr. Wander, on December 27. Even after the threatened lawsuit, we asked for the autopsy report emergency records so we could understand the details of the tragedy and then respond to the Lurie's questions. We have never received the reports. The day after the incident, December 27, Richard Pulice spoke to the lawyer and Michael Lurie. He clearly expressed his sorrow as well as his interest in finding out what had happened to Michael Lurie. Mr. Lurie stated that we would get through this.

Our facility has been one of the only USDA certified kennels in the area since 1995. This certification holds Reigning Cats and Dogs to a higher standard than most other boarding facilities since we are subject to random USDA inspection visits. These standards include the quality care of animals in every respect. Our family and staff are proud of that certification and we have promised ourselves and our customers to live up to it every day. Man's best friend deserves that consideration in the kindest care that Reigning Cats and Dogs will continue to offer. In this way, we fulfill the goals that got us into this business sixteen years ago.

Sincerely,

Maureen and Richard Pulice

'Birds break losing streak

The Voorheesville boys basketball team ended a two-game Colonial Council losing streak with a 55-37 victory over Mechanicville last Friday.

The Blackbirds (9-3 league, 10-4 overall) outscored the Red Raiders 14-6 in the first quarter and then used an 18-5 second quarter run to build an insurmountable lead.

Nick Duncan scored 19 points, and Greg Klopfer added 11 points for Voorheesville, which maintained a one-game lead over Albany Academy and Schalmont for first place in the Colonial Council.

In other Colonial Council action last Friday, the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Indians dropped below .500 with a 52-36 loss to Cohoes.

The Indians (5-6, 6-7) were within six points of the Tigers entering the fourth quarter, but Cohoes outscored RCS 21-11 in the final period to pull away for the 16-point victory.

Corwin Hendy had 19 points for the Indians. Jordan Tessier and Joe Cioffi each scored 11 points to lead Cohoes.

Indians split at N/S Duals

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk wrestling team split its four matches at last Saturday's North/South Duals in Hudson Falls.

The Indians lost to Foot-hills Council powers Queensbury and Hudson Falls, but rebounded to defeat Scotia-Glenville and South Glens Falls.

Joe Persico (103 pounds) and Nate Graham (160) won all of their individual bouts to lead RCS. Andy Lyman (96), Emmanuel Hernandez (112), Cody Legg (140) and Dillon Ruxton (171) won three of their four matches.

The losses to Queensbury and Hudson Falls were only the second and third dual matches that RCS has lost this season. The Indians are undefeated in Colonial Council matches.

In other wrestling action last Saturday, the Voorheesville Blackbirds placed third at the Kossman Tournament.

Seven Blackbirds placed in the tournament, led by Alex Zvinovsky's victory in the 171-pound finals. Taylor Treadgold (103) and Matt O'Brien (160) finished second after losing in the finals, while Andrew Clark (125) placed third after winning the consolation bracket final. Frank Kaus (119), Jim Sheedy (130) and Jake Marks (152) were fourth.

Eagles fight to the bitter end

BC challenges Shaker/Colonie before losing

By MIKE CIOFFI

It was "Big Orange Freakout" night at the Bethlehem Area YMCA for the Bethlehem Eagles hockey team last Friday night and they came out ready to play against a tough Shaker/Colonie team.

The end result was not what the Eagles had hoped for in trying to give their enthusiastic fans a win, as the Jets defeated Bethlehem 3-0.

"It was one of those nights where we had to grind it out," said Jets' coach Sean Williams. "We had a lot of scoring chances that we didn't put in."

The Jets got on the board at the 8:52 mark of the first period. Andrew McDonald took a feed from fellow forward Gary Berberich and put a shot past Eagles' goalie Tim Crowley, who stopped 24 shots in the loss.

"Tim was great tonight," said Bethlehem coach Mike Griffiths. "He's been a backup, and we decided to switch things up and it worked out. The guys really get behind him."

The Eagles (2-8-3, 4-10-3) had a number of opportunities to tie the game up in the third after a scoreless second period. They continued to battle hard, but could not get one past S/C goalie Eric Woanin, who stopped all 17 shots he faced to earn his first career shutout.

"The kids showed tonight that they're still working hard out there, even though our record isn't the best," said Griffiths.

The 1-0 game turned into 3-0 after the Eagles pulled Crowley in favor of an extra skater. The Jets tallied two empty net goals—one at the 13:55 mark by Ryan Tibbits, and one at 14:41 by Demers.

The Jets, who were winners of five in a row, didn't play their best game coming off wins against Burnt Hills/Scotia and a 3-1 victory at Shen.

"The kids showed tonight that they're still working hard out there, even though our record isn't the best."

Mike Griffiths

"You're going to have these nights, and I credit our kids for that. I thought they did an excellent job of continuing to battle and fight, and they pulled it out in the end," added Williams.

Rally falls short

The Eagles followed up their loss to Shaker/Colonie with a 7-1 loss to Burnt Hills/Scotia-Glenville last Saturday at Union College.

Bethlehem fell behind 6-1 before beginning a furious third period rally to make it close. Rod Marshall got the Eagles going with a goal off an assist from Er Hill at the 3:26 mark. Then, Ma Bub converted an Andre Vincent pass into a goal at 8:29 to get Bethlehem within three.

Eric Nichols tallied three seconds later to give Burnt Hills/Scotia a 7-3 lead, but Vincent and Eric Russo scored goals 3 seconds apart to help Bethlehem finish the game strong.

Tom Dolfi added a first-period goal for the Eagles, who were outshot 45-25. Crowley stopped 31 shots before being replaced by T.J. Caswell, who made 32 saves.

Bethlehem faces Mohonasen/Schalmont Friday and Guiderland Saturday at the Bethlehem Area YMCA. Both games start at 7:50 p.m.

Steelers prove this 'expert' wrong again

By ROE JONAS

So many thoughts, so little space in this column to put them all in.

Let's start with Kobe Bryant. Well ... maybe not. I don't want to give him top billing, even if he scored 81 points against a hapless Toronto Raptors team. Let's wait a bit before we get to him.

Remember how I said Pittsburgh was lucky to get to the AFC Championship game? I take that back. After what the Steelers did to Denver in the Broncos' home stadium Sunday, they aren't lucky—they're good. Really, really good. And I'm not just saying that because there's two Pittsburgh fans in the office telling me that I was off base.

From the sports desk...

All anyone has to see to find out how well the Steelers are playing right now is the halftime score—Pittsburgh 24, Denver 3. They took Denver's raucous crowd out of the game, just like they did in Indianapolis, by completely shutting down the Broncos' offense and taking advantage of a pair of Denver turnovers. By the time the Broncos got going, it was too late. No one is going to come back from a three-touchdown deficit against a Bill Cowher-coached Pittsburgh team.

I do have one piece of sobering news for Steeler fans, though (and believe me, I am smiling as a type this): the last time a team won three consecutive road games to get to the Super Bowl was the 1985 New England Patriots. And as any Patriot or Chicago Bear's fan will tell you, that Super Bowl was not pretty. Just the fact that William "the Refrigerator" Perry scored a touchdown for Chicago as part of the 46-10 blow-out makes it ugly (and by the way, this is the 20th anniversary of that game).

Meanwhile, I don't mind saying that I'm happy to see Seattle finally reach a Super Bowl. However, it just reinforces the fact that Cleveland hasn't been to one since the game began in 1967. And at their current rate, it's more likely that we'll see a Super Bowl between Arizona and Houston before we see the Browns get there. Between the fact that Cleveland plays in a tough division (Pittsburgh, Cincinnati and Baltimore—oh crud!) and how much roster cleanup is left to do before the Browns can actually contend again, I don't see a lot of hope for my Browns. At least, not before the 2010 season.

Now, back to Kobe Bryant. The fact that he scored 81 points in a game on 28-of-46 shooting from the field is very impressive, but it also reinforces the fact that Bryant is the only good player the Los Angeles Lakers have. I mean, Bryant hadn't scored 55 second-half points, the Lakers might have Ballston Spa), the Eagles were the first team I knew that beat the Cowboys on a regular basis. So, they kind of stuck with me."

"The New York area teams are the ones who I usually go for, but I follow the Giants the most," said Gunderland girls soccer and Nordic ski team coach Barb Newton. "They were always on at home, so I just grew up a Giants fan. I even named my first dog Tucker after (former Giant) Tucker Frederickson."

Shaker football coach Dennis Bender chose the Giants to be contrary to the kids he grew up with. The only difference was Bender grew up in Pennsylvania, where rooting for anyone other than the Eagles or the Steelers was considered unusual.

"It was kind of like I was a (New York) Mets fan, and everyone down there was either a (Philadelphia) Phillies or (Pittsburgh) Pirates fan," Bender said. "I just said no way (to rooting for a Pennsylvania team)."

Bender wasn't the only member of his family to go against the grain. His sister became a Washington Redskins fan.

"I don't know how that happened," Bender said. "Maybe it's because she saw how big of a Giants fan I am, and she saw the Redskins beat the Giants on a regular basis. So, she decided to root for the Redskins."

Family ties also determine football allegiances, such as Scotia-Glenville wrestling coach Ron Ashcraft's love for the Cowboys.

"I've been a Cowboys fan with my dad and my uncle since I was a kid," Ashcraft said. "My whole family are Cowboys fans."

On occasion, allegiances are determined by who a coach knows on a team. Two area high school football coaches, Niskayuna's John Furey and Saratoga's Blase Iuliano, have former players on NFL rosters — Niskayuna graduate André Davis just completed a season with the defending Super Bowl champion Patriots, while Saratoga's Anthony Weaver ended his fourth season with the Baltimore Ravens.

A Giants fan by nature, Furey said he would have jumped ship for the Patriots if the two teams had met in this year's Super Bowl (both teams qualified for the playoffs, but got knocked out).

"There's nothing more that I would love to see than someone I know winning the Super Bowl," Furey said.

Though Weaver and the Ravens didn't qualify for the playoffs, Iuliano could still see a friend of his earn a Super Bowl ring this season.

"I've got a friend coaching in Carolina, Mike Maser. So, I'd like to see the Ravens in there, but right now I'm pulling for the Panthers," Iuliano said.

Other coaches chose their allegiances based on pro players or coaches they admire.

Shenendehowa's Brent Steuerwald said he eschews rooting for a single team in favor of cheering for coaches who deal with the pressures of the NFL well, such as Seattle's Mike Holmgren and Indianapolis' Tony Dungy.

"But when the Eagles lost, I really wanted to watch the playoffs because it's so wide open this year."

"Of the four teams that are still in it (as of last weekend), I'd like to see the Steelers win it," said

Saratoga High School athletic director Bob Stuhlmaker, who is a Chicago Bears fan.

"They play the type of football I like — hard-nosed, smash-mouth football."

Bethlehem girls lacrosse coach Dawn Austin, a die-hard Eagles fan, said that last year, she had been worried that she'd miss the Super Bowl between Philadelphia and New England because she was due to give birth to her first child. As fate would have it, she gave birth one week before the game was played.

Now that her team isn't involved in the playoffs, Austin said she'll still watch the Super Bowl. "Football is football. I'm definitely going to watch, no matter who is in it," she said.

And that will likely be the story in every community across the United States. As much as baseball would like to claim it's the national pastime, there aren't World Series parties held in sports bars and private homes across the United States. But when it comes to the NFL and the Super Bowl, nearly everyone is drawn into the drama.

"I enjoy watching it, no matter who's playing," said Sausville.

Super what?

By STEPHEN PAUSE

For diehard sports aficionados, Feb. 5 is Super Bowl Sunday, a holy day of obligation to pay homage to the football gods, a time for beer and wings, machismo companionship and testosterone-induced mayhem. For others, it's simply Sunday, Feb. 5.

For those who don't find particular enjoyment in the gladiatorial combat that is "the Big Game," there are a number of events in the area that can satisfy the tastes of those willing to step out of the mainstream and not devote the whole day to the pregame shows that start before noon, or the game itself around 6 p.m.

People not likely to watch the Super Bowl probably won't be interested in "Miracles: New York's Greatest Sports Moments," but that is just one of three special exhibits at the State Museum in downtown Albany.

There is also an exhibit by photographer Anne Zane Shanks, featuring 75 prints of her work. Shanks' photos, which cover America in the 1950s through the 1970s, cover such topics as travel, celebrity portraits, and changing times in America.

The museum also has an exhibit titled, "The World in Brooklyn: Selections from the Brooklyn Museum." The exhibit features artwork from across the world collected through the 10 cultural departments of the museum, and demonstrates how the values of a culture can be shared through art.

The State Museum, located at the Empire State Plaza in Albany, is open seven days a week, 9:30 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Albany Institute of History & Art opened an exhibit this weekend titled "Excavating Egypt," which chronicles the finds of archeologist William Petrie, said to be the father of Egyptian archeology. The exhibit features 221 of his finds, many never before seen by the public.

Another exhibit ongoing at the museum features the works of Alice Morgan Wright, an Albany native thought to be one of the first sculptors to experiment with cubism and futurism. The Institute, located at 125 Washington Ave., Albany, is open from noon to 5 p.m. on Sundays.

Another form of art always available is film, though the first few weeks of the year are a notoriously slow time in terms of cinema, and 2006 is no different. That means moviegoers will have to choose between a pair of sequels, "Underworld: Evolution" and "Big Momma's House 2," or a remake, "When a Stranger Calls," based on the 1979 horror classic.

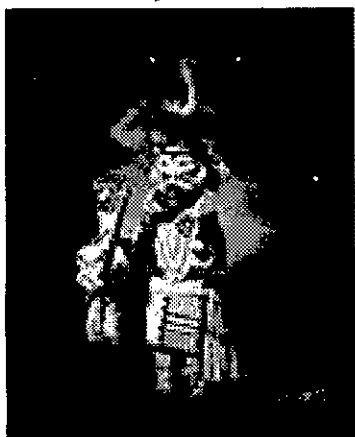

Similarly, the rental world is just as sparse. The unrated version of the John Carpenter cult classic "The Fog" came out this week, and other than that, next week's choices are a toss-up between "Corpse Bride" or "The Legend of Zorro." That leaves few alternatives to football, unless of course you've been waiting for the third season of "The A-Team" or "Knight Rider," in which case you'll have plenty of rental choices to keep you busy though the game.

As a last resort, there are scant alternatives on television, including the usual eight hours of "Law and Order: Criminal Intent" on Bravo, preceded by a four-hour mini marathon of "Queer Eye for the Straight Guy," aptly named the "Fabulous Bowl II." The Sci-Fi Channel will also keep with its usual Sunday helping of movies, choosing "Species" and "Star Trek: First Contact" to combat the game.

The History Channel will chronicle one of America's other greatest pastimes, eating, with four hours of its series "American Eats."

If all else fails, there is the recently released Stephen King novel "Cell," said to be his goriest and most horrific novel in years.

Hmmm — that's almost as horrific as a Sunday without football.

This kachina doll is one of the pieces that can be seen at the State Museum in downtown Albany.

Mention names like Terry Bradshaw, Joe Montana or John Elway... (and) you'll soon have a conversation going with a total stranger who remembers what each of them did in the Super Bowl.

"The deeper I got into football, the more I got into the coaching styles," he said.

Former Shaker football coach Mike Cavotta developed a love for the Green Bay Packers in the 1990s when they had Reggie White and Brett Favre. That allegiance is in jeopardy, though. Cavotta — who once took out an ad in a newspaper declaring his support of the Packers — said he will become a free agent if Favre, Green Bay's long-time quarterback, retires.

"I'm being courted by three teams — the Patriots, the Giants and the Jets," Cavotta said. "When I picked the Packers 15 years ago, they were down in the dumps. So based on that criteria, I guess I'd go with the Jets right now because they're down."

Nothing like the playoffs

Whether their teams are still involved in the NFL playoffs or have long since hit the golf courses, most of the people surveyed for this article agreed that they plan on watching the Super Bowl on TV Feb. 5.

"When the Yankees lose, I'm done with baseball," said Johnson.

Weather doesn't keep students, skiers away

Winter enthusiasts
travel to Maple Ski Ridge

By JIM CUOZZO

A mid-January late afternoon sun beamed over the hills of Maple Ski Ridge on Mariaville Road in Schenectady just one day after heavy rains had doused the Capital District. But those rains didn't stop 130 students of the Schalmont School District who come out four times a year to learn to ski at Maple Ski Ridge. These students and plenty more children and adults lined up in mid-40 degree weather to snowboard and ski at the oldest family-run ski facility in the Mohawk Valley area.

The story of Maple Ski Ridge is a simple one. In 1960, George and William Mulyca enjoyed skiing at Scotch Valley.

"My dad and his father felt they could make a ski area in their backyard and they bought a tractor and built a rope tow," said Carolyn Lattart, George Mulyca's daughter. "From 1962 to 1964, the skiing was only for private use, then all their friends and family wanted to ski there and Maple Ski Ridge became open to the public in 1964," Lattart said.

The first price of admission was only $3 for a full day of skiing and the first concession stand offered hot chocolate, coffee and hot dogs. In 1970, snowmaking operations were installed and the first chair lift arrived in 1972. The triple chair lift was added in 1990. Maple Ski Ridge now has an expanded lodge with fireplace and an array of items to eat and drink in the restaurant.

Owned and operated for three generations by the Mulyca family, Maple Ski Ridge is the only ski area less than 30 minutes from most Capital District residents.

"This is a real gem," said Lattart, who also works in the kitchen, handles catering and even works with the four-member crew that makes snow daily.

"It takes 14-hour shifts to make snow," Lattart said. "It all depends on the weather."

Ninety hours of work to make snow over the past several days went awry when heavy rains rolled down the hill, melting the freshly made snow.

"As a person who makes snow it is sad and upsetting," Lattart said of the precipitation. "Last year we fought the cold and this year we're fighting the rain. It's like farming in reverse — we want cold and dry and the farmers want it warm and wet."

Snowboarding now equals the popularity of skiing at Maple Ski Ridge.

"I believe it's half and half, with 50 percent of our customers skiing and the other 50 percent snowboarding," Lattart said.

More children are learning to ski because of the improved conditions and safer equipment throughout the industry said Lattart.

"Skiing is safer now than it was 10 years ago and much safer than it was 20 years ago, plus our trails are groomed daily and conditions are usually good," Lattart said.

Maple Ski Ridge is busy now through the end of March, according to Lorraine Moyer, who handles group sales and special events. A 24-hour ski-a-thon to benefit the American Heart Association will be held Friday and Saturday, Feb. 3 and 4.

"Last year we raised $3500 and we hope to double it this year," she said. The Snapple Snow Box derby is Feb. 11 and March brings a Beach Party with pond skating and a barbecue. The facility is also open yearround to cater special events. You can reach Maple Ski Ridge at 381-4700 or at the Web site, www.mapleskiridge.com

An advocate for business

By Marty DeLaney

Since 1957, the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce has provided services and programs to meet the needs of business people in the area. Ideas for programs come from members and the community at large. The Chamber refers hundreds of inquiries to its members each year, and answers all kinds of questions about the area. The chamber is often the first place contact is made whenever someone is looking for information about our town. Policies and procedures are set by an eighteen-member board of directors made up of a cross section of local business and professional people.

An important service the Chamber provides is CertifiChecks, a gift certificate program that lets people purchase gift certificates that can be used JUST LIKE CASH at over 75 participating locations. This means that anyone who has a gift to buy for a hard to please person can let the recipient choose where he or she uses the gift certificate! CertifiChecks come in denominations of $5, $10, $25 and $50 and are easy to order either at CertifiChecks toll free telephone number, 1-877-770-4438 fax or at www.bethlehemchamber.com

Another great service is a free listing and 500-word business description on the bethlehemchamber.com web site. Now anywhere, any time, information is available about businesses: where they are, what they offer who to call. The Chamber also offers a printed directory of members, available free of charge to anyone who asks.

Chamber members for many years have been offered discounts on all kinds of services. Web site hosting and design, long term care discounts, incentives for payroll processing, discounts at a local optician, employee benefits and many more member to member discounts. The chamber staff, too, offers group Dental and Health Insurance to make it easier for business people to concentrate on running their business.

The Chamber honors local business and professionals all year long for their many accomplishments. By recognizing "unsung heroes" the community as a whole benefits from the continued support of volunteers who make this a great place to live, work and play.

Affiliated with the Chamber Alliance of New York State, YOUR chamber of commerce is the community development agency that always asks, what can we do for you?

Bethlehem Chamber: A glimpse into our past . . .

Back in the late 1950s, there was much debate within the "Delmar Business Association" about what direction to take. For as long as anyone could remember the business district in the town started and ended around Delaware Ave. Now businesses were starting to crop up in other areas of Bethlehem. By late 1957, the association re-formed as the

Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce

In Business for Business

Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce. Nearly 50 years later, although the Chamber is a much larger organization, its mission remains the same: to promote good business practices, a favorable business environment, community prosperity and good government relations while working to make Bethlehem and the surrounding area a better place to live.

Most of the original Chamber members represented businesses located around what was then known as the heart of the Tri-Village area. The main focus in those days was beautification, park benches, flowers, festivals and sidewalk sales, and encouraging businesses to locate here. There was a tree planting committee – which was always active and continues to this day.

If Bethlehem back in the '50s sounds a little like Norman Rockwell's small-town America, that's pretty close to the mark. Everything you needed was here. Pharmacies, a five and ten cent store, movie theater, butcher, bakery, Annie's Hatbox, the Delmar Department Store, Delmar Bootery, a barber shop, two bowling alleys and a roller skating rink; and the list goes on.

There was an A&P, the Empire Market, a Gulf station, Libby's restaurant (where Sweets & Treats is now), and the corner store where you could buy beer, cigarettes and penny candy for the kids. Tony and Grace Little operated the store for many years, before Nelson Isdell took it over. They had a little lunch counter in the back. Libby's was a famous hangout for high school students.

Of course, with Bethlehem still very much an agricultural community, there was Schnurr and Woods Feed and Seed, with a mill in the back, somewhat like what Agway is today. You could buy 150-pound bags of feed. It was a mix between a hardware store and a country store, a fascinating place.

And lest one forget, there was the Three Elms, which according to some old timers didn't have a very good reputation. You wouldn't stay in business very long if you were caught in that place. It eventually burned down.

There was really no need or desire to trek into Albany for the basics, according to Bob Jackson, former owner of Delmar Lumber (now Curtis Lumber). "We were a little bit isolated. It seemed like quite a distance into Albany at that time." Where the State Dep't of Health is now was open land. That's where they put the Circus when it came to town," Jackson remembered.

From 1957 until the mid-1980s, the Bethlehem Chamber was a largely volunteer organization. "It really didn't become a professional organization until we hired a CEO," said Robert Verstandig of Verstandigs Florist and former member of the Chamber Board. All that changed in 1985, when the chamber had 175 members and the Board of Directors decided to hire Marty DeLaney as its president.

Today, the Chamber has over 650 members, primarily from the immediate Bethlehem Area, and from the entire Capital Region. A full-time team of employees manage an office in Main Square on Delaware Avenue.

Ranked 9th of the 25 largest area Chambers of Commerce (Capital District Business Review 2005), the Chamber has an annual operating budget of over $200,000 and administers a nearly $2 million health and dental insurance program.

The Chamber actively participates in the Tech Valley Chamber Coalition, as well as the New York State Alliance of Chambers. An 18 member Board of Directors, representing all facets of the membership, provides expert oversight of the Chamber's goals and programs.

What can business people and the community learn from their chamber of commerce?

Hundreds of business people gather at chamber events: During the past year, we've hosted Business after Hours, Business at Breakfasts and lunch seminars. "Guerilla Marketing" was the topic in February, where attendees learned marketing secrets. "Goals with Gusto" addressed goal setting and how to make your business and personal dreams come true. We joined with other chamber members for a Day at the Track, a Dutch Apple Cruise, our very popular Golf Tournament and a Holiday Mixer, welcoming hundreds of business people and offering them a chance to network extensively in relaxed settings.

Bethlehem Town Supervisor Terri Egan gave the State of The Town address and Town Justice Frank Milano talked about "Presenting a Winning Case in Court." Our financial and investment expert, Jerry Pittz conducted a seminar about the stock market, and another member talked to us about understanding credit scores. A member attorney discussed labor laws and how to hire and fire. The Bethlehem Library staff walked us thru their wireless internet connections and services available to businesses. Our Business Expos attracted hundreds who gathered at the American Legion

Hall to see what new products and services local businesses offer.

What's so special about Bethlehem's business people?

Just ask Jim Giaccone, owner of the popular restaurant My Place & Company (pictured here) or Christine McCarroll, who with husband Jim owns McCarroll's The Village Butcher; or Cathy Griffin of Re/Max Premier, and Steve Bolduc of Keystone Builders. These special people are all past winners of Bethlehem's Business Person of the year award!

The Chamber of Commerce tracks business people who make their community special by volunteering. At the annual Chamber award dinner, volunteers are recognized for their contributions. Knowing how important it is to give back to their community, our business leaders do so without any expectations - just the smile on the faces of the people they help.

They work with disabled residents or cook in soup kitchens and deliver meals on wheels. They coach sports teams and serve on the boards of local not for profit organizations. They are police officers and fire fighters; town officials, teachers and mentors. They are employees of companies large and small volunteering in diverse ways with one goal in mind: selflessly helping others and we are very fortunate to have them here in Bethlehem.
