Information superhighway as social scene

Profile sites put the info out there

Technology has advanced greatly over the years, and the Internet has often been the leader. According to The World Factbook put out by the Central Intelligence Agency, there are 203,824,428 Internet users in the United States. Since the country's population is estimated to be 298,444,215 by this July, it's rare to come across someone who doesn't have an e-mail account or some sort of Internet access.

Sending letters or messages by e-mail has evolved into rapidly growing trends such as Instant Messenger and chat rooms. Instant messaging allows people to communicate online in real time. In chat rooms, groups of people can communicate at the same time.

An influential, but less popular trend, was Livejournal, where people could post journal entries online.

A combination of all of these elements has surfaced in Web sites that let people publish online profiles of themselves, something that can be both fascinating and terrifying.

The most popular of these profiles are Facebook, Friendster and MySpace. These sites allow not only online profiles similar to the journal entries. People post their likes, dislikes, and general information about themselves, including hometown and sexual orientation, and can send and post messages on others profiles, much like Instant Messenger.

Board trims budget

Public will re-vote on June 20

By JIM CUOZZO

Over two nights last week, members of the Bethlehem school board cut $802,000 from the $73.3 million budget that district voters defeated on May 16.

Voters will again go to the polls on June 20, where they will see a budget of $72,450,816 for next year. School taxes would increase by an estimated 3.75 percent.

The majority of board members decided it would be better to work toward a second reduced budget that may get approval from the community instead of going directly to a contingency budget that would severely impact programming and services district-wide.

"The budget defeat sent a lot of messages, but it wasn't a vote for a contingency budget," said board member James Derring. "A contingency budget would be crippling for the district."

The budget went down to defeat by 600 votes and was the first Bethlehem budget to be defeated since 1984. Cuts made by the school board during two meetings last week include two

Board seeks funding for golf

Members approve hiring two officers

By JIM CUOZZO

Over 600 residents throughout the Town of Bethlehem have signed a petition to keep Colonial Acres Golf Course in Glenmont forever green.

Randy Fisher of Glenmont is leading the fight to keep Colonial Acres free of residential development.

"There is a tremendous potential concern for development," said Fisher. "This is a Bethlehem-wide issue."

The petition asks for the Bethlehem town board to protect the 33 acres of land that encompasses Colonial Acres so that current and future generations may enjoy its natural features.

"We are eager to work with the town to preserve this without it being a tax burden," Fisher said.

Dan Driscoll, president of the Mohawk Hudson Land Conservancy, said preserving Colonial Acres fits into the town's comprehensive plan. Driscoll said landowners could work to purchase the property together or maybe a bond act could be set up to fund open space. Supervisor Theresa Egan said she has met

RCS OKs $39.1M budget for revote

The RCS Board of Education on Wednesday approved a $39.1 million budget proposal to go before voters June 20.

The proposal is $183,500 less than the 2006-07 budget voters defeated May 16.

Approval of the new budget proposal June 20 would mean a 7.2 percent tax levy increase for district residents. The defeated budget carried an 8.2 percent tax levy increase.

"We listened to the message the community sent to us on May 16 and at the public meetings we have held since the vote. The administration and board of education have worked very diligently to reduce the budget proposal in a manner that respects what we have heard. We have attempted to answer the call for reduced costs while maintaining the level of student and community centered functions. It is now up to our community to determine what happens next," said board of education president John Bonafide.

School Superintendent Vicki Wright said approval of the budget proposal would:

- Keep after-school clubs at their current levels
- Maintain athletics programs

Police Blotter

Retraction

We were wrong.

The Spotlight made two errors in the May 24 police blotter report.

We incorrectly reported that Donald Comtois and Terence O'Connor were charged by the Bethlehem police. Neither Mr. Comtois nor Mr. O'Connor were charged with criminal activity by the Bethlehem police.

We reported that Terence O'Connor of 53 Western Ave. in Slingerlands was charged with criminal mischief. That was wrong. Mr. O'Connor called police and reported an attempt to blow up his mailbox. Mr. O'Connor was not arrested nor charged nor is he under suspicion. It is not known who attempted to blow up his mailbox, but it was not Mr. O'Connor. Police continue to investigate the incident.

In a similar mistake, we reported that Donald Comtois of 34 Greenleaf Drive in Delmar was charged with leaving the scene of a property damage accident. That was wrong. Mr. Comtois reported the incident that occurred at 36 Greenleaf Drive. Mr. Comtois was not arrested nor charged, nor is he under suspicion. Mr. Comtois was not issued a ticket to appear in town of Bethlehem Court.

These were mistakes made by The Spotlight, and we apologize to Mr. O'Connor, Mr. Comtois and their families.

Delmar resident indicted for credit card fraud

Brendan P. Mooney, 24, of Delmar, was arraigned and indicted by the U.S. Attorney for the Northern District of New York on a two-count felony indictment charging him with one count of credit card fraud and one count of aggravated identity theft.

According to information provided by the U.S. Attorney's office, Mooney allegedly used his father's Social Security number and other identifying information without his father's knowledge or permission.

With those cards, Mooney secured seven credit cards that he used between September and December of 2005 to obtain items valued at a total of $78,700. A 2005 Dodge Dakota pick-up truck was one of the items Mooney purchased, police said.

Mooney was released on a $10,000 secured bond. He faces a maximum prison term of up to 10 years, a $250,000 fine, or both if convicted along with mandatory restitution to the victims of the offense.

The investigation was jointly conducted by the Troy office of the U.S. Postal Inspection service and the Albany office of the U.S. Secret Service, Department of Homeland Security.

Lt. Col. Scott Benza

Officer wins award

Son of Delmar residents saved millions for Air Force

Lt. Col. Scott Benza, of the 355th Contracting Squadron, was recently honored as the recipient of the Air Force Outstanding Field Grade Contracting Officer of the Year for fiscal 2005. Benza is the son of Delmar residents Donald and Margiana Benza.

While Benza was deployed as chief of theater contracts, he directed more than $76 million a month, supported 170,000 coalition forces and earned $343 million for the Iraq economy.

"It's awesome," said Margiana Benza. "We went to watch to witness this wonderful award in Washington."

"Col. Benza is a remarkable commander who deserves the recognition he has received," said Col. Michael Spencer, 355th Wing commander. "His hard work while deployed has not gone unnoticed and I congratulate him for a job well done."

Lt. Col. Benza saved the Air Force $1 million by revamping wing-wide furniture purchases, partnered with local vendors, which re-established competition. Benza was also awarded the Bronze Star for his achievements.

"In my assessment, I feel what assisted in winning this level of an award had to do with my performance both in-garrison and deployment to Operation Iraqi Freedom," Benza said.

Margiana Benza said her son is currently stationed in Tuscon, Ariz., but will be deployed to Washington to work in the Pentagon. Benza is also the recipient of a second Bronze Star, according to his family, for his outstanding service in Iraq.

New Scotland residents receive assessment relief

By JIM FRANCO

With the town's informal grievance process complete, a property owner's assessment will jump on average 67 percent — 10 percent less than was predicted — and it could go lower.

Town Assessor Julie Nooney said 256 property owners requested a formal grievance hearing in front of the assessment board of review, a five-member panel appointed by the town board.

More than 900 of the town's nearly 3,000 property owners filed for an informal review of the town's assessment of their property.

"During the informals we gained more information about each individual property and then adjustments were made accordingly," Nooney said, adding that she had expected more formal grievances to be filed since this is the first revaluation in nine years. "If there were errors, we made adjustments."

May 23 was the last day to file a formal grievance, but those still unhappy with their assessment when the town releases the final roll on July 1 will have 30 days from that date to file a small claims assessment review with the county clerk for a fee of $30.

"The low number of formal grievances was a surprise to everyone," said Supervisor Ed Clark. "In discussing it with the members of the assessment board of review, they said that it reflects the effectiveness of the process in which everyone was given the opportunity to schedule an informal hearing and were provided with the results of the hearing. Many were apparently satisfied at the hearing and chose not to pursue it any further."

Never politically popular, a revaluation ideally spreads the tax burden in a more equitable manner so those that have been under-assessed will pay their fair share of taxes and those over-assessed — generally more recent property owners — will not pay more than they should.

The town's revaluation, when complete, will shift assessment to full market value. To accomplish that, Nooney and staff used the recent selling price of properties to assign a value to comparable properties.

It is not clear what the 10 percent reduction in the average assessment increase will mean to a taxpayer's pocketbook. Before the informal grievance process began, 54 percent of the property owners would have seen a tax increase of $250 or more; just over 18 percent would have seen a decrease of $250 or more; and 28 percent would have seen an increase or decrease somewhere in the middle. While the percentages remain the same, the dollar figure may shift slightly.

Such radical changes to assessments and taxes can be attributed to an increased interest in building in the town and the recent nationwide housing surge, which has shown signs of subsiding. To compensate for any downturn in real estate values, residents have the right to challenge their assessment annually.

To make the process smoother, and the changes in assessment and tax bills less radical, Nooney said the plan now is to do a revaluation every three years, which will also earn the town $5 per parcel in state aid.

"I admire our residents' patience with and respect for the laws that govern the assessment process," Clark said. "I also hope this effort has helped us discover ways to smooth out some of the rough spots in the process and upgrade the accuracy of assessments so that in the future it will be easier for everyone."

Choosing comfort over fashion, that's my style

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR

There's a great deal of marketing genius in the world. It promises people elevated social status through the purchase of certain items. It drives people to go out and buy things they are unequipped to handle.

Take low-rise pants, for example.

Here is a true experience: I am in Old Navy and decide to try on a pair of Capri-style pants. I go into the dressing room and put on the pants. They looked pretty good, except that my underwear is sticking out the top.

This is my first experience with low-rise pants, so I'm unsure if the pants are too big and are slipping down or if the waistband is sitting where it's supposed to. I stare at the mirror wondering: Exactly how low is low-rise supposed to go? How much is supposed to rise out?

I step out of the stall and into the main dressing room area and request assistance from a mother shopping with her teenager. Excuse me, I say, but is this how these pants are supposed to lie? They confirm that the pants fit, the mom smiling sympathetically at my bewilderment.

I really like the pants, but I pause to figure out the implications for all my cotton briefs.

True slaves to fashion do not have these types of dilemmas.

But I am not a slave to fashion. I still have blazers with shoulder pads.

And I don't even fully understand the Capri or pedal-pusher style pants. In warm weather I want to wear shorts. If it's cool enough to need pants I want my entire leg covered.

Still, thanks to marketing genius (and at the urging of my fashionable friends), I do own and wear a few pair of Capri pants (I found some that sit right on my waist).

However, I cannot jump on the bandwagon of wearing pajama bottoms in public.

"You'll see college kids wearing them," my friend told me.

Gee, when I went to college I was able to fall asleep in class (you know, those "early" classes that started before noon) in jeans and a T-shirt.

I just can't keep up with the latest styles.

A few years ago my teenage nieces were looking for clothes to wear to a 1980s theme dance. They wanted to know if I saved anything from that era. I'm still wearing my 1980s clothes, I told them.

Now if I had been wearing clothes from the 1970s, such as flare-bottom jeans, I'd be right in fashion. Only in the 1970s I was wearing polyester stretch pants, so I can pretty much forget about my wardrobe cycling back into style.

I've always gone for comfort over fashion.

My 9-year-old daughter has similar requirements ... usually. It's been a challenge to find pants that Rachel finds acceptable, particularly since her requirements change.

Denim is generally not soft enough. Leggings are often too snug in the thigh. Flare-bottoms of any kind used to be annoying.

Now, straight-leg jeans are tolerable. Expensive flare-bottomed leggings from Limited Too are awesome, and it's even OK to remove the store logo during the hemming process. Flare-bottom jeans are still out.

"I have nothing to wear" means "I just want to wear sweat pants to school and I'm going to wear mom down until she relents."

As long as they are not the sweat pants she slept in, I usually give in. Some day she will probably be one of those college kids wearing flannel pajama bottoms to class. I am comforted by the fact that pajama bottoms tend to be modest.

Unfortunately, clothing designers often try to appeal to a young girl's desire to be more grown up. This makes it hard to find appropriate little-girl clothes.

Girls in elementary school should not have to dress like teenagers and college students.

They should not be required to have words printed on the seat of their pants or on the front of every T-shirt.

You may think your daughter is a princess, but must she be forced to advertise that fact in glittery letters?

Really, most kids should be wearing T-shirts that read "Tireless Negotiator" or "Why do I have to set the table?"

On a recent shopping trip, Rachel actually enjoyed trying on clothes. In short order (pun intended), she's going to be taller than me, so I'm looking forward to getting her fashionable hand-me-downs.

Unfortunately, although her clothes may one day fit me, the look will most likely be wrong for a middle-age woman.

I was recently shopping with another middle-age friend. I told her I wanted to buy a white T-shirt. I found one with a V-neck, but declared "this looks like a man's undershirt." This is when my friend gently told me I had aged out of Old Navy. It felt like a dishonorable discharge.

How can I be too old for a store with "old" in the name?

I ended up buying a round-neck white T-shirt. This was still daring for me due to my tendency to spill things. I consider my large collection of all-cotton shirts to be daring enough (cotton-polyester blends clean much more easily), but they are mostly in dark colors. Wearing white means there is a whole list of foods I must avoid, including pizza, pasta, wings, chocolate ice cream, and anything else with sauce or grease.

I am in awe of people who wear white pants. With dark pants and jeans you don't have to worry if you need to sit on bleachers or the grass or whether there are crumbs on the seat inside your car. I would be uncomfortable in white pants.

I get some of my fashion advice from store mannequins, most of which do not have eyes in their heads or the ability to provide information on the comfort level of their outfits.

The mannequins at the mall are comfortable wearing two clingy ribbed tank tops at the same time. I understand this to mean that the layered look is still in.

I took some clingy tank tops into the dressing room to determine what size I should wear. Soon after I exited the dressing room I told my friend about the unpleasant experience.

The large was too large and the medium was too small, and neither worked with my bra straps unless those are supposed to show. Or maybe I do not need undergarments if I am wearing two shirts. But if it's warm enough to wear a tank top, wouldn't I be uncomfortably warm wearing two at the same time?

My friend consoled me with the reminder that there are shirts with "fake" layers that provide the same look without requiring the wearer to double up on fabric. Another time we'll look for some of those, she said.

There are usually solutions to fashion dilemmas, and sometimes unexpected advantages.

For example, I found that an advantage to wearing low-rise pants is that the waistband does not feel uncomfortably tight at a dinner party after you stuff yourself with appetizers and the main course.

Wearing low-rise pants provides an alternative to the less socially acceptable behavior of unbuttoning one's trousers to relieve the pressure of a full tummy. If any of the marketing geniuses had thought of that angle, we might have seen some interesting advertising campaigns.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

Tough all around

In June, two of our school districts will hold a second vote on budgets that the public defeated once. Bethlehem and Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk have both pared down their budgets in the hopes of garnering the public's favor June 20 to avoid being forced to operate under a contingency budget.

School administrators caution that contingency budgets are bare-bones packages, which result in staff and program cuts. This, of course, will filter down to students. In Bethlehem, the problem was exacerbated by a town-wide reassessment that made it difficult for voters to grasp just what their tax bills would be in the upcoming school year.

Editorial

Although only two suburban budgets in the Capital District were defeated — Ballston Spa's results were delayed, but ultimately successful — we worry that this could be a continuing trend. With increases in property taxes and fuel costs, school budgets seem like the one thing we can control.

All of this is happening on the heels of demanding greater accountability from our students. We sympathize with the beleaguered residents who rightly are feeling "overtaxed," but also with the students who will suffer if contingency plans dictate next year's budgets.

It's too bad there's not an easy solution to this dilemma.

Our error

The Spotlight made a serious mistake in the police blotter on May 24 — incorrectly identifying two community members, Donald Comtois and Terence O'Connor, as having been charged by the Bethlehem police, when in fact, they were only being good citizens and reporting improper activity in their neighborhoods.

Mr. O'Connor of Western Avenue in Slingerlands is not a suspect in the attempt to blow up his mailbox, and he was not charged by Bethlehem police.

Mr. Comtois was not charged by police for a property damage accident on Greenleaf Drive, nor was he issued a ticket to appear in Town Court.

Mr. O'Connor and Mr. Comtois have helped to make Bethlehem the sort of town that people seek to live in and raise their families. The Spotlight values all of its community members and does not want to damage any of their lives or reputations.

Accuracy is our top priority, and in this case, we were wrong.

We apologize to Mr. O'Connor, Mr. Comtois and their families for any damages we have inflicted upon them because of these errors.

Red pens and tape on the floor

By JOSEPHINE ORSINI

The writer is a reporter for The Guildland Spotlight.

It has been one year exactly since I graduated from college. I should probably stop saying, "I just graduated from Siena last May." At times, though, it really does seem like it was only yesterday.

I didn't realize that 12 months had passed since my graduation ceremony. That was a rainy day when our school made headlines for moving everything indoors at the last minute, and shutting the doors on families and loved ones, resulting in all of the professors volunteering their seats so that these people could watch their graduates receive their diploma.

Graduating from college was surreal, a sort of deja vu from graduating high school but much more final. Instead of going on to another school and breaking similar schedules of breaks and summers as we all did when graduating high school, graduating college put us all in very different fields, paths and locations.

The choices were start working or continue on to grad school. I was eager to work, I wanted to be on my own and out in the world, and maybe grad school would come later when I knew what I wanted to get a master's degree in. I had never been 100 percent certain of which direction I wanted my future to go, and I think a lot of graduating seniors feel the same pressure to decide what it is they want to do with the rest of their lives.

A number of my friends decided to try making their way in the working world. My friends from Long Island and surrounding areas moved home and searched for jobs in New

Point of View

York City. A handful of people stayed in this area, getting apartments and also searching for work. Some found work almost immediately, while others struggled a bit to find something that they wanted that also required a degree.

I remember phone calls with many of my friends who felt frustrated that their degree enough, I worked up the nerve to ask what happens when the swirl device is not around and was met with a doomed-sounding, "I would not be good."

I was introduced to those who had been working with each other for so long that space was required in order to co-exist. Sometimes this space was enforced by placing lines of tape on the floor, which were removed but certainly left an impression on my mind.

I was originally located next to the only other female reporter in the office who quickly became my confidante and proclaimed partner in crime. Later, I switched locations and inhabited a desk near a person who makes me laugh so much I keep giggling long after the joke is over.

In an office of such creative people, it is no surprise that there are inside jokes about simple items such as staplers and bubble wrap. All the fun helps in a stressful environment. It was an incredible adjustment for me, to be faced with stress at work as opposed to the final exams of college life.

It finally hits you that you really are in the "real" world when your friends who are still in college talk about spring break and summer vacation.

The stress of a deadline melts into the stress of production days, where the final editing of a police blotter can be bloodier from the red pen than the actual content. The sinking feeling when your editor calls you over for a question is not quite the same as being handed a paper from a teacher after it has been graded.

Looking back at the year following my graduation, it is amazing how much has actually happened in what seems like such a short period of time. I started watching the news out of interest, know how local towns get things done through planning and other board meetings, and I have almost perfected my phone etiquette.

Changes have also taken the form of friends getting married, friends losing touch, and parents becoming more eager to give you $20 for no reason. For some of us there is rent, buying groceries and finally understanding why your mother always cleaned your house before leaving guests over. You learn how to cook and to kill bugs all on your own; along with how much different it is to move into an apartment than it is to move into a dorm room; and the list goes on.

All I can say is in a year I have learned an unbelievable amount about personal relationships and career endeavors, but that in reality I have only just begun.

After all, it has only been a year.

seemed to qualify them for none of the jobs they wanted, or qualified them for the jobs they did not want. We were faced with getting jobs that we did not even need to go to school for, and felt the pressure to prove our education had not been for naught.

I had friends who pursued their education and went on to grad school, both nearby and some far away. Their continuation of all-night study sessions in the library and sitting in lecture halls I did not envy, but their educational drive I did.

I was lucky to get a job for the people at Verizon Wireless. Yet I kept looking through the classifieds to find a writing job, and after a few months found one and I left my first job out of school for my first real job with a salary and benefits. I entered the world of journalism and met another group of unique individuals who can make me laugh just by entering the room. These people become your family in a way, stepping in where college friends had been, not as a replacement but as the new group of people you interact with daily.

Your co-workers shape your work experience more than the job itself sometimes. The environment of a newsroom breeds unusual behavior, and this can probably be attributed to the lack of privacy without cubicle walls and the leniency in certain aspects of the job to help compensate for the strain of deadlines, late night meetings and difficult interviewees.

My first week on the job introduced me to a reporter with a food obsession, and another reporter who had an object he needed to twirl between his forefinger and thumb at all times. After getting comfortable

Arduini family thanks community for its kindness

Editor, The Spotlight:

As the family of Detective Anthony Arduini, we would like to make a public statement of appreciation for the support bestowed upon us by our community at large when my husband was stricken suddenly with an intracerebral hemorrhage on May 9, and passed with grace on May 11.

As his wife, I knew several things. One, that he was the best husband and father that could possibly be and two, that Tony knew everyone — and everyone knew Tony. What I didn't fully realize was the impact he had made on our community or the fact that we indeed live in a town and county so full of love and generosity.

That Tuesday was so ordinary. It started with a work day for both of us and ended with his favorite meal of roast beef and mashed potatoes. What I didn't know when he went out for his usual after-dinner walk was that the day would truly end and there would be nothing ordinary about it.

Tony collapsed around the corner from our home and would never smile again.

What happened over the next 50 hours would also resemble nothing ordinary but would be nothing short of a miracle. Immediately upon arriving at Albany Medical Center our journey began. We learned what kind of community we live in. We clearly had no idea.

The support did not end with that of family, friends and of course the exemplary men and women of the Bethlehem Police Department. We found ourselves surrounded by our dearest friends; clergy; medical staff, who will remain our friends forever; community leaders and members of our surrounding police agencies. We were never alone.

We wish to thank each and every one of you who carried us through. You know who you are and you must never forget what an important role each of you played in our amazing journey. We especially wish to thank the hundreds who lined the hallways of AMC as we traveled from the SICU to the operating room so Tony could be an organ donor. Even during those oppressive moments our family was not alone.

In the next few months, many of you will hear my husband's name for another reason. The Porco trial is coming up and my husband and his dear friend of forever, Detective John Cox, will not be present to testify to what is truth, and only truth. There will be those who will take their death as an opportunity to make statements that clearly are inaccurate. On May 17, there was a lovely Spotlight article about my husband. The very next week, on May 24, I evidenced exactly what I am saying to you now.

The worst has happened to our family and we will not be scratched by the ignorance of others. As you read this, may I reiterate our gratitude and ask you to keep Tony, as well as Cox and, of course, Kevin Shea, in your prayers.

The Spotlight must apologize for its mistake

Editor, The Spotlight:

Having been made aware earlier this week of the actual circumstances surrounding a terrible situation experienced by a neighbor of mine, I was completely shocked and appalled to read in this week's edition of The Spotlight that your paper wrongly reported that Terence O'Connor had been charged with/arrested for a crime for which he was actually the victim.

As a resident of Slingerlands, I depend on The Spotlight for local news that is geared toward the interest of our small and intimate community. For your staff to so erroneously report a story about one of this town's best residents is inexplicable and inexcusable. Mr. O'Connor has generously donated his time and money to a number of local nonprofits and charitable organizations, including the local Little League, Babe Ruth, softball and soccer leagues. In addition, he has dedicated countless hours of his time to local charities, including the Center for the Disabled and To Life! While I understand that all organizations make mistakes, I would certainly hope that your publication would issue a complete and prominently displayed retraction.

Unfortunately, while many of the citizens of Bethlehem will immediately know that the story that your paper published was completely bogus, your paper is read by people throughout the Capital District. The usual 1-inch by 1-inch retraction on the bottom of page 8 just won't be seen by most of your readers nor will it have the same impact of the original story.

If your paper chooses to take the normal route of printing an innocuous retraction, I assure you that I, along with many, many other residents of this town, will cancel our subscriptions to your paper immediately.

Writer finds reval is 'taxation without representation'

Editor, The Spotlight:

What follows is an excerpt from a letter sent to Supervisor Theresa Egan and Town Assessor David Leafer on May 17.

Dear Supervisor Egan and Mr. Leafer:

We received on May 12th a

"Notice of Change of Assessment" from the town regarding our Selkirk home. I waited five days to respond because of the anger I felt on learning that our monthly tax bill will increase by $2,800, $233 per month. I strongly protest this action and will file a grievance and follow whatever appropriate actions are necessary to reverse it.

I need the "Comps," as I was told by Mr. Leafer's staff - comparable sales data that were done by the state, that led to our new valuation. I want to know immediately and specifically what "comps" were used.

Most immediately I wanted you to know how we felt in very personal terms and what this increase will mean to us. We moved last year from Delmar to escape what we felt was an excessive tax burden. We moved to downsize our budget and add quality of life to a fixed, pension-based income. Last year, the suburban plot where we raised our family had a tax bill approaching $8,000. In less than one year, you have managed to undermine the primary reason for our move by increasing by almost 400 percent the assessed valuation on our new home and doubling the monthly tax bill we pay.

This is unacceptable.

Our income is set in stone. We receive no COLAs, no state aid, no federal grants. We must live on what we have now. An increase in our budget by hundreds of dollars means we must cut from somewhere ... not write a new grant application to make up the difference. I strongly suggest that both the town and school district of Bethlehem live by the same guideline rather than passing the cost on to people.

In practice, this would mean cutting services equal to the level of the tax impact on its citizens by the reassessment or alternatively increasing services to show something for the dollar added to the public coffers. For example, if I could value the services we receive in dollars and cents and equate the increase with increased services then perhaps, just perhaps, I might be satisfied. But, is Bethlehem planning on adding sewers to our street? Is Bethlehem planning on adding a storm drainage system in this area in South Bethlehem, which is prone to flooding? So, what does this increase buy us? Zip.

Town opens formal grievance period

What services are being cut to diminish the burden of the reassessment? Zippo. In other words, we have government growing government under the guise of the "fair value reassessment."

We did not vote for this reassessment, which by any other name is a tax increase. Wasn't a revolution fought over taxation without representation? When the costs of such governmental action are so personal, then such governments should be held accountable at the ballot box rather than by administrative fiat. Put the assessment up for a vote!

When I voted against the school budget, I was somewhat heartened to see the many older folks voting. Based on the welcome outcome of the school budget today, apparently we are not alone. If only our town officials were as astute. Hey, perhaps my additional $2,800 a year in taxes to the town might be used to offset for seniors the costs of premiums for their new Part D under Medicare? That truly would be a value added.

Brendan Mooney
Selkirk

Turnout was light the first morning that Bethlehem's board of assessment review held formal grievance meetings at the town hall auditorium on Delaware Avenue.

"I was expecting a line out the door," said Supervisor Theresa Egan on the morning of May 23. "But when I got here at 7:20 a. m. there were 10 people. We were prepared for quite a few more." Egan added.

Egan believes people who took part in the informal hearing process in March might have had many of their questions answered.

"I think the assessor's office did a phenomenal job going through the informal hearings, where over 1,900 took part in that process," Egan said.

The town is able to supply residents with a wealth of information to go with the grievance process.

No hearings are held by appointment. A numbered ticket is handed to petitioners when they are present, along with their grievance packet if they have previously submitted information to the assessor's office. If you are submitting your information for the first time on the day of the hearing, it should be signed in by a member of the assessor's office staff.

Every property owner appearing at a hearing must have his or her completed documents ready for submission to the BAR. Each new hearing session begins when the next number is called. Every applicant receives five minutes with the BAR to address concerns.

"The BAR members are very knowledgeable," said Town Assessor David Leafer. "All three members have mortgage and real estate backgrounds and are very experienced." Leafer said many town residents took part in the informal hearing process that began in March.

"In seven weeks, 1,936 people participated in informal hearings and 60 percent of those received direct adjustments," said Leafer.

As of Thursday, May 25, over 630 people had filed formal grievance applications and 250 had been reviewed.

"Doors have opened at 7 a.m. and people who have shown up have been able to get through," Leafer said. The deadline for filing a formal grievance with the town of Bethlehem has been extended to June 2. The BAR will hear more formal grievances on Wednesday, May 31, and Friday, June 2.

"It's been a long process and a tiring one but a smooth one," Leafer said. Staff has been working long hours for the past six weeks in the assessor's office with 12 to 14 hour days and much weekend work to prepare.

"Some nights we have worked as late as 1:45 a.m.," Leafer said. "I've met a lot of nice people this way and residents have been very complimentary to staff."

with the landowners and spoke with representatives of Gov. George Pataki's office to see what type of state funding is available.

"We have also reached out to a not-for-profit group for land acquisition to appraise the property," Egan said. "We have to know what kind of value is attached to the property."

In a letter presented to the town board, Bethlehem resident and vice-president of Audubon International of New York, Howard Jack, said Audubon International hopes this important green resource and leader in environmental stewardship can be preserved in this community, rather than developed into additional housing.

"A golf course like Colonial Acres not only serves golfers, but offers a variety of habitat for birds and other wildlife," Jack wrote.

Board member Kyle Kotary believes the town needs to take every opportunity to save this

"We have a lot to consider," Plummer said. "We are not even close to the point where this would go to a referendum."

The town board authorized a motion to apply for a state grant that has a deadline of May 31 to see if any eligible funding can be found to purchase the property.

The town board also voted to approve the hiring of two new police officers for the Bethlehem Police Department that has been severely depleted recently. Bethlehem Police Chief Lou Corsi made a request for three new officers in his staffing proposal to the town board. The town however agreed to hold off on hiring the third new officer for at least a three-month period, and Corsi accepted the decision.

"I appreciate the chief with us in this regard," said board member Tim Gordon.

"We have also reached out to a not-for-profit group for land acquisition to appraise the property. We have to know what kind of value is attached to the property."

space. "I think this is a great opportunity to preserve a wonderful parcel in this town and to enhance our existing recreational opportunities," Kotary said. Board member Daniel Plummer let residents know at the meeting that the town of Bethlehem is not ready to take action on this issue at this time.

currently are offered. (Monday runs would be eliminated)

- Restore funding for the majority of field trips

Responding to the input of community members, the reductions approved by the board on last Wednesday were designed to ensure the best possible educational experience for students in light of the financial difficulties the district is addressing.

The restructured budget reduces spending by:

- $25,000 in overtime spending on custodial, maintenance and transportation.
- $70,000 through a reduction in custodial positions. The custodial cuts are made possible through the adoption of a new accompany a contingency budget, Wright said.

Under state law, the June 20 vote on the restructured budget is the last opportunity the community will have to approve a budget and avoid more dramatic cuts that would accompany a contingency budget.

"This is by no means meant to be a threatening statement. This is just the reality of the situation we as a district now face," said Wright.

"We have worked hard since May 16 to develop a spending plan that reflects the message delivered by voters and the needs of students. We hope that the community agrees on June 20 that we have accomplished that task," Wright said.

proposed teachers at the high school, three new middle school teachers, one custodian, a technology specialist and the elimination of ice hockey, gymnastics, all field trips and six new extracurricular clubs.

Superintendent Les Loomis, assistant superintendents Michael Tebbano and Steve O'Shea, and Director of Pupil Personnel Services Rita Levay have voluntarily foregone their salary increases for the coming year.

"This district is lean," said Loomis. "It is not as though anyone is getting rich working in the Bethlehem school district."

The high school and middle school hold close to 3,000 students between them, and are led by just a principal and assistant principal in each building.

Many parents and teachers present at last Wednesday's meeting said the district should go back and vote on the same, defeated, budget that called for a 5.45 percent tax increase. They thought this time would get out the "yes" vote.

"I am here to urge you, to plead you, to go for a revote," said Angie Randles, Slingerlands Elementary School PTA copresident. "I am just not ready to give up, and I don't think the community is ready to give up."

"We will go and get the vote out," urged parent Lisa Allendorf, but not everybody in the crowd was ready to stand up and put the same budget back to voters.

"I really don't think you can send this same budget back for a revote without making some cuts," said resident Tom Brady.

"It's time to get back to the basics, reading, writing, and arithmetic," said Norm Moran. "Stop offering a panacea of all kinds of subjects and teach what children need to further their education."

Board member Stuart Lyman said the community spoke clearly, and it is his belief they want a contingency budget to be presented on June 20.

"People who have voted 'yes' in the past have changed their minds dramatically," said Lyman. "I don't think you can change 300 or 600 people in three weeks."

"Why don't we cut salaries of administration and clerical?" asked parent Pamela Dutcher. "Why do we go for the jugular instead and cut, music, art, teachers?"

Past board president and current board member Robin Storey said the board, the students and the staff should have seen this coming.

"No matter what, we are going to educate our children," said Storey. "Bethlehem Central will survive this somehow."

Should the June 20 budget be defeated, the district would then have to go to a contingency budget, which means the district would have to cut another $598,000 from its original proposal.

Under the new proposal, taxes would go up about $122 on a house assessed at $200,000. The original increase was $178.

"In making these painful reductions, every member of the board spoke of their respect and appreciation for the commitment and performance of the BC staff in delivering an outstanding educational program for a reasonable expenditure," Loomis said.

Picnic honors Delmar, Bethlehem EMS volunteers

BY JIM CUOZZO

Delmar's emergency volunteers were honored at a picnic on May 20, capping off National Emergency Services week.

The picnic held in the pavilion on Feura Bush road next to the Delmar Fire Department honored more than 80 volunteers of Delmar and Bethlehem EMS groups.

"We're very proud of our volunteers," said Steve Kroll, public information officer for the Delmar EMS. "These volunteers give up a lot of their time, and we like them to receive the recognition they so deserve."

The combined Delmar and Bethlehem Volunteer EMS personnel answer about 300 calls a year combined for medical assistance. The Bethlehem Volunteer EMS covers Glenmont and Selkirk, and the Delmar EMS volunteers cover Elsmere, Delmar, and Slingerlands. Most EMS personnel take at least 100 hours of training; others who become paramedics log over 1,000 hours of emergency medical training.

"National EMS week is a time to take a step back and recognize the members work for the community all year long," Kroll said. "We have a very special group of people dedicated to this community."

Rod Raynor, captain of Bethlehem Volunteer Emergency Services, says there is always a need for more volunteers.

"This town is growing fast," Raynor said. "We're always recruiting volunteers."

Kroll agreed that the need for volunteers is great.

"We live in an aging population, and people are living longer," Kroll said. "They are also living with chronic conditions and many of these elderly need more assistance."

Anyone can volunteer to become a community EMS provider. "If you have a little time and you have an interest in learning CPR, first aid or emergency service, then you might consider volunteering," Raynor said.

In addition to the many hours of work the volunteers perform training and on duty, there is also much-needed community service projects that both groups participate in.

"We hold blood pressure clinics and work with Boy Scouts and Cub Scouts to offer first aid classes," said Raynor.

"We participate in many community service events, including the Bethlehem High School Health Fair and the Delmar Dash," said Kroll. "Any time there is a gathering of large people, we are there to provide EMS service."

There are married couples, fathers and sons, and father-and-daughter teams, all who volunteer to be a part of the EMS life-saving community.

"About one-third of our EMS service personnel are women," said Kroll.

National EMS week was recognized in Washington with a celebration with more than 2000 fire and emergency service leaders from throughout the nation at the annual National Fire and Emergency Services Dinner.

JUST WHAT YOU INSPECTED

While a prospective buyer can be expected to have a professional inspection conducted on any home he or she has offered to purchase, a seller should arrange for an inspection of his or her own prior to putting their home on the market. Preliminary home inspections reveal problems that can be fixed before the prospective buyer's inspection turns them into potential sticking points in the negotiations. As a preemptive measure, the seller's inspection report helps assure prospective buyers that there is nothing to hide and there are no surprises ahead. It is better to be proactive and forthcoming than to wait for the buyer's inspection report, which is sure to uncover any problems that the house might have.

A home inspection can make or break a house sale. Therefore, a preliminary home inspection done by the seller will definitely create a smoother real estate transaction.

Remember, I can recommend the right inspector for your home. Let my experience help you with your home buying or selling experience.

Use Your Power To Choose.

In New York's new competitive energy marketplace, you no longer have to buy your electricity and natural gas only from your local utility. Instead, you can shop among the new Energy Service Companies (ESCOs) that are competing for your business. This change should bring efficiencies and innovations that will give you better value for your energy dollar.

The combined services once offered by your utility have been split into two parts — supply and delivery, with the supply portion open to competition. You can choose to switch to an ESCO or continue buying your energy supply from your utility.

Regardless of where you buy your supply, your utility will still deliver energy to you through their existing wires and pipes. The safety and reliability you depend on won't change, and you'll still call your utility during emergencies or service interruptions.

A new choice for your energy supply

When you shop for electricity, you can now consider selecting Green Power providers for some or all of your supply.

Green Power providers supply environmentally friendly electricity generated from renewable fuel sources such as solar, wind, biomass, geothermal and low-impact or small hydro. For only a few pennies more a day, you can choose Green Power and make a world of difference for generations to come.

The Environmental Disclosure Label

Another benefit of New York's competitive market is that you now have access to information that lets you assess the environmental impacts of the energy you buy. Twice a year in your electric bill you receive an Environmental Disclosure Label showing the mix of fuels used to generate your electricity and the related air emissions. Knowing about electricity generation, fuel sources and their environmental impacts will help you make informed choices. You can also receive this information by visiting www.PowerToChooseNY.com and entering your zip code.

Strength in numbers

Purchasing electricity and gas with others, called "aggregation," gives your group greater buying power and may save you money. For example, the Municipal Electric and Gas Alliance (MEGA) members (municipalities and school districts in Central New York) saved approximately $2.7 million on their electric bills last year, which translates into average savings of 12%. The Council of Industry's Electricity Aggregation Group, representing more than 40 members, saved approximately $1 million in 2005, representing a savings of 10%. You may belong to a community or business association that can coordinate with ESCOs for the best package of prices and services. For a sample of a Request for Proposal for Bids for your group's use, go to www.PowerToChooseNY.com and click on Contact Us and send us an e-mail, or call us at 518-474-1540.

Choosing a supplier

To shop for an ESCO, evaluate their offerings, compare them with your utility's offering, and decide which is best for you. You should:

1. Call your utility or the Public Service Commission at 1-888-Ask-PSC1 (1-888-275-7721) for ESCOs serving your area. Or go to www.PowerToChooseNY.com or your utility's Web site for a list, and then call the companies. The ESCOs and their offers do change, so continue to check periodically.

2. Compare prices, services and terms offered.
3. Consider customer services such as toll-free numbers, Web sites and complaint handling.
4. Check out billing and payment options.
5. Confirm the details of the agreement.
6. Choose your supplier and monitor your bills and service. If you are not satisfied, you can switch back to your utility or to another ESCO, subject to any applicable contract terms.

For a list of ESCOs and more information, visit the Public Service Commission Web site at www.PowerToChooseNY.com, call 1-888-Ask-PSC1 (1-888-275-7721) or contact your local utility listed below:

interested in choice/competition may call 1-800-490-0025.

Use Your Power To Choose your energy supplier.

In the past, you had no choice of who provided you with your natural gas and electricity supply – it was your local utility.

Well, things have changed.

In New York State, companies other than your local utility, called Energy Service Companies (ESCOs), are competing to provide you with electricity and natural gas. No matter which supplier you choose, your utility will still deliver your energy safely and reliably, and respond to emergencies.

Why Choose an ESCO?

Competition gives you greater choice and better value for your energy dollar in purchasing energy products and services, including:

Fixed Pricing – Some ESCOs offer a fixed price for your natural gas or electricity supply.

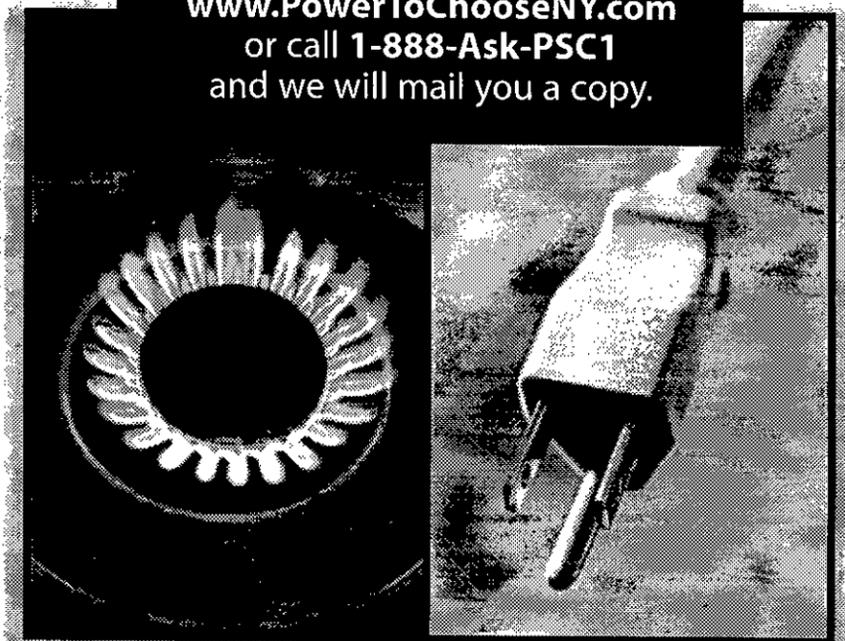

Variable or Capped Pricing – You may see a variety of offers from ESCOs, including a variable price and capped pricing mechanisms tailored to meet your individual needs.

Green Power – Some ESCOs offer products from renewable energy sources that are environmentally friendly such as solar, wind, biomass, and hydropower. New York State and the Public Service Commission have made a commitment to promote the use of Green Power and foster the development of renewable energy generation resources. Purchasing Green Power helps the environment and encourages alternative power generation.

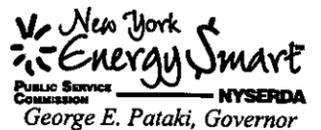

Other Value Added Benefits – Ask about other options including appliance repair, service contracts, and other benefits.

Join the over one million New Yorkers who have already made the choice to switch to an ESCO!

June potluck and book discussion

Stolen Figs and Other Adventures in Calabria by Mark Rotella Calabria, the region at the toe of Italy's boot, is not a glamorous tourist mecca, but Mark Rotella wanted to visit the region where his family came from.

His father, who hadn't been back in 30 years, is at first reluctant to accompany his son, but finally agrees. Mark returns several times alone, traveling the region with Giuseppe, postcard seller and Rotella's self-appointed guide.

They partake of the hospitality, participate in festivals, and enjoy the food and wine.

In an attempt to recreate some of the mouth-watering food, we invite you to bring a dish for a potluck, which starts at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday, June 14 before the discussion. Sign up is necessary.

Book discussion

There will be a book discussion for grades 2 and 3 Friday, June 2, at 7 p.m. Parents are welcome to participate or socialize with coffee. The library will be closed except for the meeting.

Storytimes end

The final spring storytime will be held Friday, June 9, at 10:15 a.m. Storytimes resume July 11.

Get ready for summer reading activities

"Summertime, and the readin' is easy" at the library. Planning is in full swing for a busy, fun-filled season.

"Books, A Treasure" is this year's theme for summer reading programs across New York state. Children in kindergarten through grade 8 can register at the library beginning June 26. Besides reading and reporting on books, participants will enjoy special events, craft and writing workshops, book discussions, cooking classes, prizes and games. Look for details in the upcoming summer edition of footnotes, the library newsletter.

Writingworkshop

Reading and writing are, of course, close relatives. Children entering grade three and up can register next Monday, June 5, for our annual Children's Writing Workshop. Now in its 15th year, the workshop takes place on five consecutive Friday mornings beginning July 7. Participants write, revise, edit, illustrate and bind their own books. Each week, a guest author will talk about a different stage in the writing process. Adult volunteers are welcome; call 439-9314 for information.

Student volunteers

We couldn't run our busy summer schedule without our student volunteers. Middle school students help staff the summer reading desk, read to children, help with activities and assist library pages. Applications are available at the library and the middle school. Volunteers attend an orientation and work at least six hours between June 26 and August 23. Orientation sessions are scheduled Thursday, June 22, 7 to 8:30 p.m., and Friday, June 23, 2 to 3:30 p.m. There is still room for several volunteers; call 439-9314 for information.

Summer reading for adults and young adults

This year we're offering "Basking in Books," a summer reading program for adults and high school students. From June 26 to Aug. 18, read books in any genre — classic or current, fiction or nonfiction, sci-fi or fantasy, biography, mystery and more. Read books in any form: print or large-print, cassette or CD, or download an audiobook or e-book from our Web site.

Fill out a comment slip for each book you read. Slips will be posted at the information desk for other readers to see. Each slip will be entered in a weekly drawing for prizes from local merchants.

Watch for the Basking in Books display at the information desk.

Bethlehem residents approve library budget

By JIM CUOZZO

Although Bethlehem residents voted down both the district budget and the bus proposition on May 16, they approved the library budget. The Bethlehem Public Library Budget passed 2603-2184.

"The community has shown their support for the library year after year," said Library Director Nancy L. Pieri. "We are very grateful and very appreciative of their support." Pieri said this year's library budget vote was not as close as those of years past.

The approved library budget totals $3.85 million, an increase of 3.24 percent over the current year's budget. Salaries and benefits make up $2.59 million, a $140,000 increase over this year's budget, with another $300,000 for library materials. Gas and electric costs went up $27,000 to $115,000.

If the library budget were defeated like the school district's budget was last week, Pieri said they would go to a contingency budget that would have resulted in reductions across the board.

"The community has shown their support for the library year after year. We are very grateful and very appreciative of their support."

Nancy L. Pieri

"We would have reverted to last year's budget and that would have meant cuts," Pieri said.

Bethlehem's library is accessible to disabled patrons. It offers a community room, separate meeting rooms and public access TV programming for the community. It has community partnerships with several different organizations and has a program delivery service for residents with medical conditions who cannot visit the library.

"We are a very busy library all the time," said Pieri. "About 25,000 to 30,000 people on average come through our doors in a month."

Bethlehem's library offers programs for both seniors and adults, along with a number of children's programs including a new story hour in Clarksville. Another spring and summer project for the library includes the demolition of two houses along Borthwick Street.

"The extra space will be used as a part of the library grounds for green space," Pieri said.

Tamra White and John Sobiecki were elected to new terms on the library board of trustees. White will serve a full term, while Sobiecki will serve a partial term.

June activities at the library includes the Delmar Writers Group meeting on June 9, and a Veterans Oral History project throughout the month. Veterans living in Bethlehem who served in World War II, The Korean War, or the wartime defense industry can participate. Thursday, June 8 is the annual "Friends on the Green" family picnic at 6 p.m. on the library grounds. The event offers live entertainment and is open to the public.

Rotary plans its annual fund-raising event

BY JIM CUOZZO

If you are an avid golfer, your golf clubs might be getting a bit rusty from all the spring rain. The Rotary Club of Delmar is promising some good weather its third annual Teeing for Charity event, the club's biggest fundraiser, to be held June 12, from 8:30 a.m.- 5:30 p.m. at Normanside Country Club.

"We have our own person in charge of weather and we're hoping it will be good," said Vickie Plotsky, director of Delmar's Rotary Club. "We had about 70 golfers last year and many sponsors and a lot of local businesses help out."

Teeing for Charity raised $7,000 last year and this year the group hopes to raise even more.

"The first year of our event we raised $5,000 and last year $7,000. This year we have three signature sponsors and we are hoping to raise $10,000," said Plotsky.

Proceeds for the annual tournament go to 11 different community projects throughout Delmar, Ravena and the surrounding region, including the Glenmont Job Corps, Bethlehem Youth Court and the Bethlehem and Ravena Senior organizations.

"We really try to support significant local charities as much as we can," said Plotsky. The Ravena Senior Center and the Bethlehem Senior Projects each received $1,000 from the Rotary Club of Delmar.

The local club also raises money for an international student exchange program, which allows students from this area to spend 10 months in another country, and a student from abroad to live here for a year. This coming school year the club is sending Dillon Ruxton, a senior from Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk High School, to study in Japan. The club is also hosting Severine Lekeu from Belgium, a senior at Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk.

"The opportunities to give and share are limitless," said club president Ginger Landry.

"We network with districts all over the world to meet their needs."

The Delmar Rotary Club has been in existence since 1957, and beyond contributions to local charities, the club also supports Rotary Foundation International Projects.

Another major fundraiser is the club's annual fruit sale. The Delmar Rotary Club has donated over $35,000 to local charities in the past 10 years. The club is growing with 19 members currently, and welcomes more..

"We currently meet Wednesday at 7:30 a.m. at the Normanside Country Club and members would help with service projects or serve on club subcommittees," Landry said.

Golfers for the Rotary Club of Delmar Golf Tournament can register by sending a check for $125 payable to the Delmar Rotary Foundation, P.O. Box 244, Delmar 12054, or contact 439-4212.

Expert IRA advice.

The strategies you need and want to know about.

Tap the knowledge of financial advisor John Gigliello as he provides the answers to the big questions in IRA distribution today. He has been trained by Ed Slott, CPA, America's #1 IRA distribution expert and author of the book, The Retirement Savings Time Bomb and How to Defuse It.

#1

Question: I just inherited an IRA...what should I do?

Answer: First of all, incorrect "titing" could possibly destroy your inherited IRA. If you are a nonspouse beneficiary of the IRA, the IRS stipulates that the deceased's name MUST stay on the account. Nonspouse beneficiaries cannot retitle inherited accounts in their own name. If you do, the account becomes taxable immediately and magically, it disappears. To avoid this costly mistake, make sure the deceased owner's name remains on the account, forever.

These and other complex questions can be made easy in the hands of a pro. Please call for an appointment.

Mac-Haydn presents well worn fabric in 'Forever Plaid'

By W.K. AARON

The Memorial Day weekend ushered in the unofficial start of summer. It also brought with it the official start of the 'summer theater season. What better way to kick off both than with a drive through the bucolic countryside into Columbia County to the Chatham-based home of The Mac-Haydn Theatre? The answer is quite simple: with the current production of "Forever Plaid," there is no better way to welcome summer.

This goofy revue centers on four young, eager male singers killed in a car crash in 1964 on the way to their first big concert, at the lounge in the Holiday Inn. They have been miraculously brought back to earth to fulfill their dreams and perform the show that never was. The show is a compilation of some of the greatest hits of the '50s and early '60s, along with delightful patter that keeps the audience laughing. A highlight of the show for anyone over the age of 30, is the three minute and 11 second rendition of "The Ed Sullivan Show," complete with spinning plates, dancing seals and Topo Gigio, the Italian mouse, asking for his traditional good night kiss from Eddie.

What makes or breaks this show are the voices of the four men, and their ability to carry the tight harmonics that made '50s pop music so classic. In the spirit of The Lettermen and The Four Tops, Byron DeMent, Felix Hess, Jason Paul and Sean Quinn do a yeoman's job. Their harmonies are right on. Their overly exaggerated choreography is impeccable. The great thing about this show and this production in particular, is how well matched the quartet is; no one actor outshines another, making it a true ensemble piece. Byron DeMent's strong tenor and falsetto plays beautifully against Sean Quinn's rich bass. Paul and Hess soundly fill out the mid-tones of lead and baritone.

Robert Randle's direction is effortless and his choreography is perfect. Triza Chappell's costumes capture the feeling of the time; Andrew Gmoser's lighting sets the mood. Musical Director Phillip Kirchman has done a great job of getting the sounds to meld beautifully and adds to the performance with his on-stage piano accompaniment.

If you enjoy an evening of music with standards like "Catch a Falling Star," "Matilda," "Moments to Remember," "Sh Boom" and "Love is a Many Splendored Thing" to evoke memories of your past, then you will love "Forever Plaid."

If this is any indication of what the theatrical venues have in store for the area this summer, then it will be a great summer of theater.

Performances of "Forever Plaid" are Wednesday, May 31, at 2 and 8 p.m.; Thursday and Friday, June 1 and 2, at 8 p.m.; Saturday, June 3, at 5 and 8:30 p.m.; and Sunday, June 4, at 2 and 7 p.m.

Tickets are $23.50 and $24.50 for evening performances, $23.50 for all matinee seats. Children younger than 12 with an adult are $12.

Discounts are available to senior citizens. For information, call the box office 392-9292 or visit www.machaydntheatre.org.

Paying Off Your Mortgage Is A Mistake!

Most homeowners believe the best way to quickly pay off their home is by simply paying extra principal payments on their mortgage. Other homeowners believe in bi-weekly mortgage payment plans, while some use a 15-year mortgage versus a 30-year amortization. The fact is... none of these methods are the best way to own your home "fee and clear."

What is the best way? We invite you to come find out... and learn how to wisely accelerate the pay-off of your home mortgage! Attend our seminar, "Common Sense Strategies for Successful Equity Management," brought to you by The Fenway Financial LLC and Albany Mortgage Group. This is one opportunity you will not want to miss. A picturesque view (above) from the Normanskill Preserve, across from the Stevens Farm.

Local conservatory is a breath of fresh air

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

It finally feels like spring, and if that's giving you a hankering to get outside, the Mohawk-Hudson Land Conservancy has just the ticket for you this weekend. This Sunday, June 4, is Bethlehem Family Day in the town of Bethlehem. Volunteers will be stationed at three of the conservancy's preserves in the town of Bethlehem, offering information about trails and refreshments to keep you going.

"We're hoping that people will come out and be aware of the preserves," the conservancy's Executive Director Jill Knapp said. "Most of the trails are easy, and we hope to have them all marked by the family day. They're really pretty properties, and they're close, so you save gas getting to them. We do allow pets, too."

While the conservancy has 13 preserves throughout the Capital District with a total of 854 acres, Sunday will focus on three Bethlehem preserves, all accessed from Route 443, Delaware Avenue, one of Bethlehem's thoroughfares.

The preserves are the Phillipinkill, the Swift, and the Normanskill. The Phillipinkill and the Normanskill preserves are near the streams that give them their names.

The Phillipinkill Preserve is accessed from the housing complex called The Mansions on Fisher Boulevard off Delaware Avenue in Delmar. The preserve contains nearly 20 acres.

"We've got about 3,100 feet of lot of wild flowers out there, flowering dogwood, and on a recent walk, I scared up three deer. It's also loaded with birds." Parking for the Swift Preserve is at the end of Evelyn Drive.

The Normanskill Preserve is on the site of the 2000 landslide.

It's a 12-acre preserve that's part of a total of 46 acres that the conservancy holds in that area.

"The Normanskill is more diverse," Knapp said. "Parts of it are wooded. There are a lot of trout lilies in bloom."

Bagdon Environmental is allowing parking in its lot, located just on the Bethlehem side of the bridge over the Normans Kill between Albany and Bethlehem.

trail there," Knapp said. "There's a beautiful stand of beech trees there, and there's evidence of either a muskrat or a beaver. There are also lots of flowers — May apples, jack-in-the-pulpit, and wild geranium."

Parking is allowed at the rental office of The Mansions.

The Swift Preserve is off Evelyn Drive, across from Bethlehem Central High School's athletic fields on Delaware Avenue. The Swift Preserve is mostly wetlands, and came to the conservancy as mitigation for development in the area.

"There are 21.6 acres there," Knapp said. "Since it's wetlands, people won't be able to walk through all of it. But there are a 1992 as the Albany County Land Conservancy. It is a 510 c 3 nonprofit organization, funded by donations, grants and membership. Altogether, it has 13 preserves on 854 acres.

"Most of the land has been donated," said Knapp, a Latham native who had been the executive director of a conservancy in Iowa and a cooperative exchange educator before joining the Mohawk-Hudson Land Conservancy in October. "Some were county tax foreclosures."

The Friendship Singers of Delmar recently held a benefit concert for the conservancy, which raised $812.

The conservancy is currently working to obtain a Hudson River Estuary grant to put interpretive signage into some of its preserves. It operates out of the Community Methodist Church in Slingerlands.

Bethlehem Family Day is scheduled for Sunday, June 4, from 1 to 4 p.m. at the Swift, the Phillipinkill, and the Normanskill preserves.

"We hope that people will come with their families and pets," Knapp said. "These are pretty properties, close by, and people can save on gas to get to us."

Szelest's saves help Lady Eagles win another title

By ROB JONAS

Emily Szelest made certain there would be no comeback victory for the Shenendehowa girls lacrosse team.

The senior goaltender stopped 10 shots to help Bethlehem defeat the Plainswomen 8-4 in Tuesday's Section II, Class A championship game at Colonie Central High School.

"I think she was the difference in this game," said Bethlehem coach Dawn Austin. "When push came to shove, Szelest came up big."

"She played like a true All-American," said Shen coach Jeanne Frevola. "I think that took us out of our element. Our shooting wasn't what it was."

Coming off a 15-11 comeback win over Guilderland in the semifinals, Shen (13-7) had several scoring opportunities early on, but Szelest and the Bethlehem defense hunkered down and kept the Plainswomen off the scoreboard. That series proved to be critical, as the Lady Eagles (18-2) took the momentum with goals by Halley Quillinan, Tee Ladouceur and Cate Quinlan over a span of 3:37 that gave them a 3-0 lead.

Bethlehem expanded its lead to 6-0 before Shen's offense gained some momentum on goals by Tara Akstull and Sarah Novick over a 41-second span. Quillinan squashed Shen's momentum, though, by scoring off a pass from Ladouceur to give the Lady Eagles a 7-2 lead. After that, Shen never got closer than four goals.

"Shen has a lot of offensive weapons. The fact that my defense could shut them down as well as they did was great, and when they did break through, Szelest was there," said Austin.

"There were a few fast breaks, and (our defenders) all hustled back there to stop them," said Szelest, who has been Bethlehem's starting goalie for half of the Lady Eagles' eight consecutive Sectional titles. "The Shen players tried to get the quick passes inside the 8-(meter mark), and our slide did a good job of disrupting that."

Szelest sealed the victory with one last flourish. With senior defender Natalie Singer serving a three-minute penalty for a yellow card and Bethlehem protecting a four-goal lead, Szelest made four saves including one on a free-position shot by Olivia Jarem.

Quillinan scored four goals, and Quinlan contributed three goals for Bethlehem.

ships. Stone helped Stonehill win the NCAA Division II title, while Gersuk guided Northwestern to the Division I crown.

Chances are, McDonald won't be the last Section II player to have an impact at the college level. Bethlehem's Katie Rowan and Delmar's Mike Leveille were among the top goal scorers for their respective Syracuse University lacrosse teams, and both of those programs have bright futures. Also, keep an eye out on Niskayuna graduate Matt Bryan, who could see a lot more playing time at Johns Hopkins next year after recording three goals and an assist in a reserve role this season.

• I said the Section II baseball playoffs were going to be wild, but this is ridiculous. The top four seeds are gone in class CC, seven of the top eight seeds in class B have been eliminated and the top seed in class D (Germantown) is done, thanks to Schenectady Christian's 5-1 victory Saturday.

Of course, this is what happens when you only get one shot to beat a team you may not have seen all season. If Voorheesville could have played a three-game series against Johnstown in the class B quarterfinals, the Blackbirds probably would beat the Sir Bills twice. But in a one-game scenario, all it takes is one bad inning to end a season (in Voorheesville's case, it was a four-run Johnstown rally in the top of the seventh that led the Sir Bills to a 5-3 win).

At least, class AA has gone according to plan — the Suburban Council's plan, that is. The top three Suburban Council teams from the regular season are in Wednesday's semifinals, and the fourth is Foothills Council champion Queensbury, which was given the top seed in the Suburban Council's bracket after a coin flip determined which side the Spartans would represent. Another coin flip may be needed to figure out who will win the title because Shenendehowa, Columbia, Colonie and Queensbury are all very talented.

• Saratoga County's reputation as a rowing power was reinforced over the weekend when Fish Creek hosted the Scholastic Rowing Association Championships. The Saratoga Rowing Association earned a silver medal in the women's lightweight eight-plus-coxswain finals and a bronze medal in the men's lightweight four race, and Friends of Shenendehowa Crew grabbed a silver medal in the women's lightweight four division.

What's more impressive about these teams' accomplishments is that the rowers are not part of a school-sponsored athletic program. They and several other Section II clubs have to raise their own money to purchase equipment and travel to competitions. Few sports outside of rowing require that type of monetary support from the community, and yet it doesn't hinder the sport's development.

• Finally, a special nod to the Voorheesville boys track and field team.

The Blackbirds turned in one of the program's best performances by placing second at the class B meet. Though Fonda ran away with the team title with 142 points, the Blackbirds received a strong all-around effort from junior Kyle Jacobs to finish second with 68 points. Jacobs was responsible for nearly half of that total alone after winning the 110- and 400-meter hurdles, as well as the pole vault.

Eagles end five-year drought

By ROB JONAS

The Bethlehem boys tennis team won its first Section II, Class A title since 2001 in style last Thursday.

The Eagles received key three-set wins by their No. 2 singles player and their No. 3 doubles team to defeat Guilderland 6-3 in the championship match.

"That was very sweet. That was a nice win," said Bethlehem coach Steve Smith. "I'm very happy, especially for my seniors."

Guilderland appeared to be the favorite heading into the finals. The Dutchmen had most of their players back from last year's Sectional championship squad, and they had beaten Bethlehem 8-1 in their most recent meeting three weeks ago.

"I think that (last loss) helped us," said Smith. "They came in a little overconfident, and for good reason. They were the defending champions, and they were coming off that win."

But like they did when they beat Guilderland 6-3 at the start of the season, the Eagles won all the three-set matches to pull out the victory. Cory Gross edged Kevin Gioia 6-3, 5-7, 6-4 at No. 2 singles, and the No. 3 doubles team of Brian Potter and Josh Levy won the final two sets of their match by identical 6-1 scores after dropping their first set 3-6.

Jesse Hoffman, Pete Collins and Mike Amico had straight-set victories in their singles matches for Bethlehem. The Eagles' No. 2 doubles team of Kyle Gross and Kevin Pittz also won in straight sets.

The Sectional title wraps up the overall season for Bethlehem, but Gross and fellow senior Robert Hoffman aren't done. Bethlehem's top two singles teams will be doubles partners at this week's New York State High School Tennis Tournament at the National Tennis Center in Queens. Gross and Hoffman qualified two weeks ago by placing third at the Section II doubled tournament.

It will be the first trip to the state tournament for Gross and Hoffman, who have a combined nine years of service to the varsity tennis team.

"Robert has bookend (team) titles. The last one he won was in eighth grade," said Smith.

Johnstown scores four runs in seventh to beat V'ville

By ROB JONAS

The Voorheesville baseball team had been the king of late rallies until it came across the Johnstown Sir Bills.

Johnstown scored four runs with two outs in the top of the seventh inning and held on to beat Voorheesville 5-3 in Saturday's Section II, Class B quarterfinal game at Swift Road Park.

"We'd been winning games late, and it finally caught up to us," said Voorheesville coach Hank Czerwinski. "You can't win every game like that."

Johnstown out-hit Voorheesville 10-2, but Blackbird pitchers had worked themselves out of jams several times before the Sir Bills pieced together their two-out rally in the seventh inning off reliever Pete Lindner.

"Bringing in Pete (a second-team All-Colonial Council pitcher) looked like a great idea at the time, but they were scrappy," said Czerwinski.

Jim Hiller drove in two runs with a double and a single, and Ryan Brown added three singles for Johnstown. Justin Arico had one of Voorheesville's two hits.

"Their pitcher went the whole way, and he never gave up. He kept us off-balance the whole game," said Czerwinski.

The loss ended a season in which the Blackbirds rallied from an 0-3 Colonial Council start to win their second consecutive league title.

"Overall, it was a phenomenal year," said Czerwinski. "We started the season with 12 players, and we lost a couple of starters to injuries. So we had to call up from JV players, and they a great job for us. It was a complete Voorheesville program effort."

The Blackbirds advanced to the quarterfinals by knocking off Cairo-Durham 10-3 last Thursday at Swift Road Park. Voorheesville put the game out of reach by scoring six runs in the bottom of the sixth inning.

Arico and Andy Catellier each belted two-run home runs to lead the Blackbirds, who split two games with Cairo-Durham at the start of the regular season.

Warriors beat Indians

In other Sectional action Saturday, Averill Park jumped out to a 4-1 lead and held on for a 6-3 quarterfinal victory over Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk in a class A contest.

Paul Deeb hit a two-run home run, and Jared Morine added a double and a single for the Averill Park Warriors.

Frank McDonagh belted a two-run homer in the bottom of the second inning for the Indians.

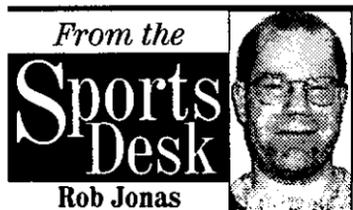

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk ended its season with a 15-10 record.

While you were watching something else ...

By ROB JONAS

So much happened during the Memorial Day weekend that I'm not going to bother narrowing my column down to one topic. Instead, here are some highlights you might have missed:

- That loud cheering some of you may have heard around the region on Sunday was not a reaction to Barry Bonds hitting home run No. 715 or Sam Hornish Jr. passing Marco Andretti to win the Indianapolis 500. Rather, it was the sound of numerous SUNY Cortland graduates celebrating the Red Dragons' 13-12 overtime victory over Salisbury in the NCAA Division III men's lacrosse finals in Philadelphia.

"It was unbelievable," said Niskayuna boys lacrosse coach Mike Vorgang, one of several Cortland alumni now guiding Section II programs. "At first, I watched it as a lacrosse fan, but as the game remained close, the juices started flowing again."

Vorgang is also part of a smaller local Cortland fraternity — Section II coaches who used to play lacrosse for the Red Dragons. He — along with Bethlehem's Dave Rounds and Schenectady's Dave Trahan — are part of a proud past at Cortland that includes several Final Four appearances and an NCAA Division II title in 1975.

"Lacrosse was a little bit different back then," said Vorgang, who played at Cortland in the early 1990s. "We played a lot of Division I schools ... because there weren't as many teams."

Cortland's victory was significant on two fronts. Not only did the Red Dragons end a 31-year championship drought, but they also ended Salisbury's 69-game winning streak — the longest for any lacrosse team in NCAA history.

- Some Blue Bison pride was also on display in Philadelphia Sunday. Shaker High School graduate Mike McDonald earned the Most Outstanding Player award after scoring four goals to lead LeMoyne College to a 12-5 victory over Dowling in the NCAA Division II finals.

McDonald isn't the only former Section II player to make an impact in a national championship game in recent years. Last season, two area products — Guilderland's Lauren Stone and Loudonville's Ashley Gersuk — were the winning goaltenders in the NCAA Division I and Division II women's lacrosse champion-the person whose profile it is, if they choose to post one, which most do.

The benefits of these sites are that they serve as a way to express one's self through music and design, and describe their qualities without having to say it aloud. Long-lost friends can find each other on the sites and catch up on each other's lives. Most find it easier to keep in touch by using these Internet time-savers, sending messages when they get a free moment instead of trying to catch someone with an equally hectic schedule on the phone.

"I find that MySpace is a common meeting place for kids who you don't see so much because of our busy schedules," said Stephanie Li, a junior at Guilderland High School.

Li had attended an assembly at school where a school resource officer gave a presentation on how easy it is for absolutely anyone to locate a person based on information given in these online profiles.

Sometimes kids can be harassed because of the information in their profiles, or receive unwanted contact from numerous strangers.

"That's happened to me. I used to have my grade, age and location, and random people kept messaging me," said Li, who then removed that information from her profile. "It could have resulted in something serious, which is why I got rid of it."

The negative aspects of these online profile-sharing sites are quickly making headlines since most of the people frequenting these sites are between the ages of senger and online games, a stranger can establish a direct one-to-one access to children," said Bloch.

The problem of online pursuers is being addressed by law enforcement officials. Increasingly, undercover detectives pose as young children, who predators approach, engage in online conversations and try to arrange meeting times.

MySpace, the site that receives an abundant amount of heat from the public, has attempted to step in and take an active role in making the site safer for young adults, through a number of measures. One of those included a recent appointment of a security officer.

Effective earlier this month, Hemanshu (Hemu) Nigam, director of consumer security outreach and child safe computing at the Microsoft Corp., became MySpace's chief security officer to oversee safety, education and privacy programs and law enforcement affairs for the site.

"Hemu is a proven leader in online safety and security. We are fortunate to have him join MySpace, help us educate the public and protect our members' safety and privacy," said Chris DeWolfe, CEO of MySpace, in a written statement.

"I find that MySpace is a common meeting place for kids who you don't see so much because of our busy schedules."

14 and 25.

"In 1995, 2 million kids were using the Internet... in 2005 there were 75 million," said Cindy Bloch of the state Division of Criminal Justice Services, Missing and Exploited Children Clearinghouse during a presentation in Clifton Park on Internet safety in March.

The popularity of these sites among a younger generation does not go unnoticed to anyone, especially Internet predators who are using the sites as virtual open doors to children.

"Through the use of chat rooms, e-mail, Instant Mes-

Officer Martin Manjak. "Try to engage in a conversation with your child about what it means to have everyone in the world reading about you."

Parents may be shocked by some of the photos or language that their children have on the pages they post through online communities. Also of concern is the information that children name, address, and date of birth, identity thieves can easily assume someone's identity, which they promptly try to capitalize on by signing up for credit cards and loans. Victims are often required to pay for the credit assumed with their identity. Personal safety and safeguarding against identity theft require some thought before giving out personal information.

Another good reason to use caution is that many people tend to say or do things with friends and family that might be embarrassing if people who don't know them well enough not to judge them out of context — like bosses or clergy — heard or saw them.

Also, some anecdotal evidence exists to show that college recruiters and employers are searching online for background information to supplement applications.

Since Google® is the largest and most popular Internet search engine, this means that photos of teenage parties or nudity, along with how a teenager, "def likes to smoke mad weed," are cached for retrieval long after the people posting them forgot they had put them online.

Comments or photos posted online that seemed "cool" or funny when the poster was a teen may return to haunt them later in life, perhaps limiting opportunities they would otherwise have had.

"Understand that once you put something on the Internet, you really lose control over it, especially photos. It can go anywhere."

post about themselves, which can include a child's age, address, or phone number. Experts warn parents to educate their children about the details they give regarding their daily activities.

"Understand that once you put something on the Internet, you really lose control over it, especially photos," Manjak said. "It can go anywhere."

Safeguarding identity is important in protecting against identity theft, or access to money. Telling the world that, "Today is my birthday," widens the risk of identity theft, especially if age is mentioned in the birthday announcement.

Slow: danger ahead

Too much information on the Internet can lead to danger

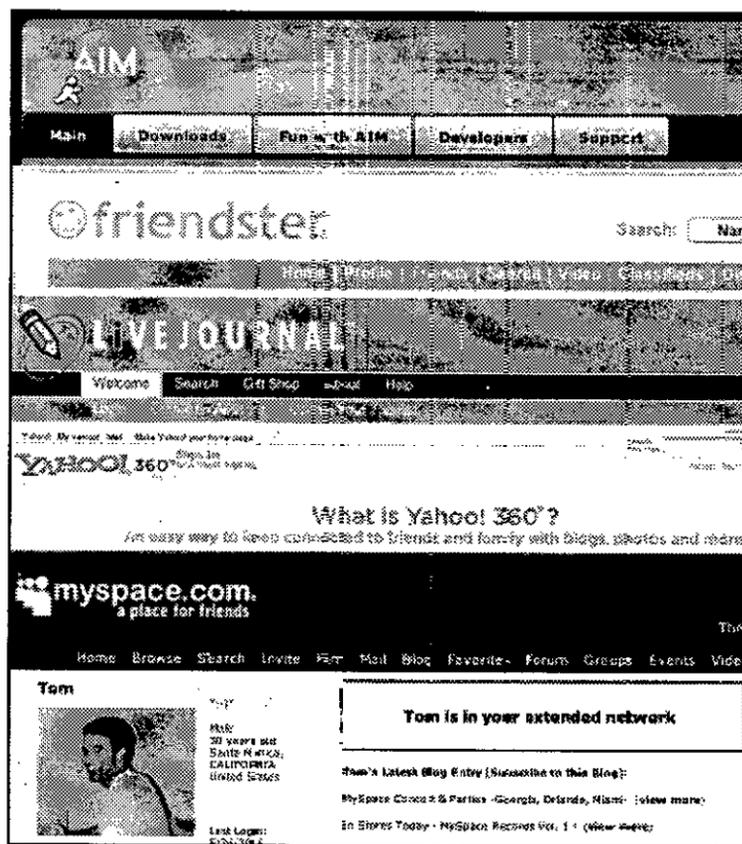

By TONY GRAY

MySpace, Friendster, Facebook, and AIM are great ways to update family and friends about what's going on in your life, but it can be important to limit the type of information that goes on these Web sites.

The online communities mentioned above give members a chance to define themselves, but the freedom to do so does not come with impunity. The consequences for posting inappropriate material on the Internet can be as mild as embarrassment, or it can create a legal liability. The worst case involves posting information that places people in danger.

Even adults sometimes relax their vigilance and place personal information online that can have unpleasant consequences. Children often have difficulty understanding how dangerous it can be to reveal too much personal information about themselves, and parents are constantly warned to monitor their children's Internet activity to protect them.

"Ask your child to show you their site and you will be surprised that they do have one," said the University at Albany's Information Security

Some of the more popular online profile sites: AOL Instant Messenger, Friendster, LiveJournal, Yahoo 360 and MySpace.

"MySpace has always been committed to an industry leading role in Internet safety and will continue to partner with all stakeholders including parents, educators, law enforcement and safety groups," he said.

But how safe can the Internet be, even with regulations and limitations, if that is even possible?

MySpace has taken several measures to include safety tips at the bottom of each page of its site and profiles, for both children and parents. Profiles are also monitored to ensure members are not violating the terms of use, such as posing nudity or other inappropriate material.

The site also warns users not to put personal information such as addresses and cell phone numbers in their profiles. Users of the site can send in complaints if they are experiencing any issues related to privacy or safety.

High schools also have the option to create a moderator, a type of school profile on MySpace, where the person who is charged with being the moderator can report issues or inappropriate behavior among students.

MySpace requires users be 14 years of age or older, and MySpace can penalize or delete inconsistencies with information and age provided.

Li said she didn't think that an age limit would make a difference.

"It's the Internet... it's always going to be something relatively dangerous," she said. "I think it's more important for parents to monitor the safety for their children."

Students get vivid lesson on drinking and driving

By KATHERINE McCARTHY

Gowns, tuxedos and limousines think about what most students think when they plan for their proms. Last Friday, the Bethlehem police department put another thought into the minds of juniors and seniors: the potentially fatal results of drinking and driving.

Using two wrecked vehicles donated by Roberts Towing, volunteers, and about 30 students from the police department, the Delmar Rescue Squad, the Delmar Fire Department, Slingerlands Heavy Rescue and Applebee Funeral Home staged a re-enactment of an hour that would follow a fatal accident.

BC seniors Andrew Smith and Jacqueline Rosenthal, in dressy clothes and smeared with fake blood, played the students; Eric Kerr played the drunk driver who hit them. Bethlehem Sgt. Craig Sleurs narrated the incident in the parking lot on Van Dyke Road as students in T-shirts, flip flops, and toting back-straining backpacks squinted into the sun.

After Sleurs welcomed the students, town board member Sam Messina addressed the students. Messina's son Matthew died after being struck by a drunk driver.

"You would have liked Matthew," Messina said. "He would have been 27 now. Think about what you love most, and think what it would be like to lose it because somebody got behind the wheel of a car when they were drunk. If you or a loved one is killed by a drunk driver, life changes, and it won't ever change back. Have the courage to not drive if you're drunk. Have the courage to not get into a car with somebody who is drunk."

After Messina spoke, Sleurs began the re-enactment, telling students that an accident had been reported. In the first real warmth of spring, the students chatted with each other until the sounds of a siren could be heard. In one car, Rosenthal screamed at Smith, "Andrew! Andrew!" as Smith lay inert against his headrest. Kerr stepped out of his car and wove between his and the students.

Two police cars arrived, and one policeman administered field sobriety tests to Kerr's character, and another talked with Rosenthal. Rescue trucks were next on the scene, and the fire department assessed and secured the vehicles. Police officers used pepper spray "and some force," Sleurs narrated, to subdue Kerr's character.

One assessment came quickly from the rescue squad. "Don't worry about the driver, he's dead," a paramedic announced. Volunteers put a yellow sheet over Smith, and rescue workers smashed in car windows to get to him and Rosenthal.

"At the discretion of emergency workers, the body can be taken to a funeral home or the hospital," Sleurs narrated as a hearse from Applebee's funeral home arrived. "Unfortunately, sometimes family members arrive too soon."

Lorraine Boyle of the high school played Smith's mother, screaming and practically collapsing over Smith, wrapped in a body bag and left on the parking lot ground, and eventually being led away by rescue workers as Peter Applebee oversaw Smith's conveyance into the hearse.

Heavy rescue removed the roof of the students' car and Rosenthal went into an ambulance. Students applauded as the ambulance pulled away, and cheered even more loudly as Smith returned under his own steam to the parking lot.

"This works better than telling the students the results of drunk driving in a lecture hall," Bethlehem Lt. Thomas Heffernan said. The program is offered to juniors and seniors every two years. In Bethlehem, the junior prom has passed, but the senior ball is coming up.

Some of the students agreed with Heffernan about the effect of seeing a re-enactment. "It's better to see it played out than just listen," said senior Caitlyn Edmundson.

"It showed the bad effects," said senior Laura Marmulstein. "Drinking and driving is just stupid. Some kids say they will do it, so I just say that I'll drive." "It kind of freaks you out to see how long it takes rescue workers to get there," said senior Brian Storey.

"It was an interesting way to show it," senior John O'Brien-Carelli said.
