Say the word "powerlifter," and the image most people think of is a muscle-bound person capable of lifting a small car with one hand.

Those people would be surprised to see young athletes, middle-aged adults and a 66-year-old man — all of whom looked like the average person next door.

Local nurseries expand while keeping service personal

By ANN MARIE FRENCH

Homeowners who want to plant something in their yard and see it grow often grab their plants or shrubs while at a big box store picking up other house and lawn supplies. It's easy and convenient, but it isn't the only option.

Family owned nurseries in the greater Capital District offer a wider variety of the most popular plants, a host of specialty plants, and a vast amount of experience and knowledge they would like to pass on to budding horticulturists.

"We just love horticulture," said Joan Faddeggon Graves, one of the owners of Faddeggon's Nursery. "We're in this business because we love it."

In fact, her family has owned and operated the nursery since 1920.

"I have five, maybe 10, people working here who have been with us for 20 years," she said. "We're enthusiasts, and we like to impart that to our customers."

Graves said the staff at Faddeggon's works with the customer to make sure the plants and shrubs they are purchasing are going to fit into their lives comfortably, offering alternative suggestions when the care and upkeep of products will not match the time or effort the customer has to devote to them.

"We're all very time poor," said Graves. "So we bring in varieties that are easy to grow and suggest plants people will be successful with." Similarly, Floyd Guernsey III said the customers who come to him are also strapped for time.

"People don't have a lot of time and they don't have the time to take care of it," said Guernsey, owner of Guernsey's Schoharie Nurseries. As a result, he said, his

District cuts clerical staff

Failed budget forces restructuring of staff to compensate

By JIM CUOZZO

Everyone is sharing the pain of having $802,000 cut from the defeated 2006-2007 Bethlehem School budget. Voters rejected the first $73.3 million plan and a second vote with reductions is scheduled for June 20.

Secretarial staff in Central Office Administration has been diminished by one position and a restructuring and consolidation of three positions will become two. Two new positions being proposed include a human resource and an accountant positions. The payroll and treasurers positions in the business office will be eliminated if the new budget is approved, along with a secretary's position in the director of education programs office.

"What we are trying to do with these clerical reductions is to be able to function at least as well as we did," said Superintendent Les Loomis.

Jury selection begins this week in the murder trial of 22-year-old Christopher Porco.

Porco is accused of killing his father Peter Porco at his Brockley Drive home with an ax in the early morning hours of Nov. 15, 2004. Peter Porco was found lying dead on the inside front stairs of the home.

His mother Joan Porco was found by Bethlehem Police lying in a pool of blood on her bed with the ax handle used to murder her husband sticking out of the bed comforter.

Defense Attorney Terrence Kindlon said in most murder trials jury selection would take no longer than one to three days. In the Porco murder trial, Judge Jeffrey Berry of Orange County is allotting up to 10 days for a jury to be selected. Jury selection begins Thursday, June 15, and could last until June 26.

Kindlon believes it will be next to impossible to find a jury in Albany County who does not have an opinion or who hasn't been 'tainted' by all the media attention surrounding the murder. With

Self-funded sports

Booster clubs aim to reinstate programs cut from budget

By JIM CUOZZO

A flurry of mail, e-mails and phone calls from sports boosters and school athletes along with a packed meeting of the Bethlehem school board has prompted the board to allow three sports programs to be self-funded in the 2006-2007 school budget.

Varsity hockey, gymnastics and cheerleading, cut last month by the school board after the first district budget vote in 22 years failed, will be reinstated under the proviso that the school boosters come up with the $52,000 total to fund all three programs next year.

"I am deeply disappointed hockey was cut from the budget," said Maggie Royle, president of the Bethlehem Hockey Booster Club. "Hockey parents are passionate people, and I ask you to allow us to self-fund the program this year so kids in our district can play hockey with Bethlehem varsity jerseys," said Royle. Mike Hynes who has three children active in district athletics also advocated for self-funding sports the board eliminated.

"Their sole objective is not to score another goal, but to represent this school, this town, this community, like other athletes at

Two charged in robbery attempt at Glenmont Wal-Mart store

Bethlehem Police arrested two Albany residents following a robbery inside the Glenmont Wal-Mart store Monday, June 5. Police were called to the scene after receiving a call that a robbery was in progress. When they arrived, officers observed one suspect leaving the store on foot with items, and the second suspect trying to drive away in a vehicle. Christopher J. Bowen, of 274 Livingston Ave., Albany, was charged with felony grand larceny and conspiracy. Inside the vehicle he was driving were two television sets stolen from the store, police said. The second suspect, Lowell McGill, 37, of 107, 4th Ave., Albany was turned over to Albany police on a bench warrant.

Other arrests

Shane Edward Gorman, 2 Belmont Place, Wynantskill, was charged with DWI, driving with more than .08 percent blood alcohol content and operating with a suspended license, a felony. Bethlehem police received a call that a man was asleep in a vehicle off of River Road, in Glenmont, Saturday, June 10. When officers arrived they found Gorman asleep and tried to wake him. He was still inside the vehicle that was parked off the road and on the grass. When Gorman awoke police had him take three different field sobriety tests which Gorman failed. He was subsequently charged and will appear in Town Court at a later date.

• Georgetta Michelle Jackson-Wilmot, 43, of 126 Ida Yarbrough,

Albany was charged with felony grand larceny and forgery. Wilmot was contacted by police after a victim reported having a wallet and credit card stolen from a company vehicle at the Glenmont Job Corps. Wilmot voluntarily came to the Bethlehem Police Station after being contacted and was charged. She will appear in Town Court at a later date to respond to the charges.

Resident to host assessment 'tea party'

By JIM CUOZZO

A town of Bethlehem resident is asking his fellow citizens to revolt and protest over the town's new assessments by holding a Bethlehem Tea Party similar to the Boston Tea Party at the town board meeting set for tonight, June 14.

"Remember when our forefathers threw a 'party' for our former British masters for the levy imposed on tea imports?" asked Brendan Mooney of 38 Ten Eyck Ave. in Selkirk. "On June 14, bring your tea bags and your opinions and speak loudly and clearly on how this new tax (reassessment) will affect you."

Mooney is asking residents to speak out at the public comment period of the next town board meeting and he will be distributing fliers around town reminding people to attend.

"I think it is important for the town to hear loud and clear the excessiveness of these increases," said Mooney.

After downsizing and moving to south Bethlehem, Mooney said his house was reassessed shortly after purchasing it for close to three times its market value.

"My tax rate jumped between 200 and 300 percent," Mooney said. His new home, which he paid $240,000 for, was once on the market for $75,000 and reassessed at $252,000 this past year.

"My wife and I both retired, downsized and got what we hoped was a house for less money and the tax man follows us all the way out here," Mooney said.

Like over 700 other town residents, Mooney has formally grieved his reassessment and has hired a lawyer because he does not believe the town will change the new reassessment on his home.

"This assessment is way overboard, way out of whack and we are getting nothing for it," Mooney said. "It's a pure pillaging of people here in this town."

Town Supervisor Theresa Egan said the reassessments are not about taxation but about valuation. Several town residents filed a freedom of information law requesting to see the new assessments of the supervisor, the town assessor and the members of the town board. "My taxes went up almost $2,500 from the reassessments," Egan said.

The Boston Tea Party symbolically represents how Mooney feels about the issue.

"I want the town board to either repeal, amend, or otherwise diminish the impact of this new levy on the citizens of Bethlehem," Mooney said.

When asked if he will be wearing a revolutionary outfit, Mooney said, "I only have a Scottish outfit."

"I think it is important for the town to hear loud and clear the excessiveness of these increases."

Presbyterians to celebrate 50th

Summer, fall events to mark church's golden anniversary

By JIM CUOZZO

Delmar Presbyterian Church is celebrating the 50th anniversary of the church that was formed on Nov. 18, 1956, with 76 charter members. In those 50 years, the mission has remained constant.

"Mission is the purpose of our church," reads the mission statement. "It is accomplished by loving witness to Christ wherever we are in our everyday lives, and by extending our commitment, through the church, in obedience to Christ, to our neighbors throughout the world."

From the founding pastor, the Rev. George H. Phelps, to current pastor the Rev. Larry Deyss who has been with Delmar Presbyterian over 25 years, every Sunday worship begins with the repetition of the two great commandments, "To love the Lord your God and to love your neighbor as yourself."

"Our sanctuary is modern and informal and lends itself well to a sense of community," said Deyss.

Through the years, Delmar Presbyterian has helped the hungry and the homeless with donations to The Food Pantry out of First Church-Reformed in Albany. "Bread for the World" is another cause on a more global level the church supports to reduce hunger in the nation and world.

The church facility at 585 Delaware Ave. has expanded to meet the ever-growing and changing needs of today's congregation in this busy world. The church is now equipped with space for religious education and fellowship, a library, expanded kitchen and improved facilities for the handicapped. The fellowship hall was a part of the 3,000 square-foot addition built in the mid 1990s

"I have seen the community grow and with that stress levels are higher for families," said Deyss. "We try to be a place to give and support individuals and families, so people receive strength and in turn so they can give."

Nancy Winn has been a member of the church since it was founded in 1956. Now 90 years old, Winn said she and her husband have enjoyed every moment of being parishioners.

"It certainly has been a family to me and my husband for all these years," said Winn. "They are the kind of people who are there, that you can enjoy, and will help when you need them."

About 200 members are the core of the church congregation, but each one is quite active.

"Everybody works here, we are a working congregation," Deyss said. A strong sense of community has kept the church foundation steadfast.

"We sit back from the road, not terribly visible, we don't look like your traditional church with a steeple, but when people come they are very pleased with what they find," said Deyss.

Parishioners who leave the area and attend Sunday worship elsewhere still maintain their close ties to the community and to Delmar Presbyterian.

"People who go away still send us a gift because they still feel a sense of connection here," said Deyss. "We are a small church, but we more or less respond to one another."

Attendance went up at the church after the Sept. 11 attacks, and has remained high since then.

"People are looking for faith, which they can strengthen their lives, and we must not be undone by the things that happen in the world," said Deyss.

The church will be holding 50th anniversary events throughout the summer and fall at the church. On Nov. 18, there will be a dinner at Normanside Country Club. "This is a congregation with staying power," said Deyss. "We are very strong, committed people." Services are at 10 a.m. Sundays, and childcare is available.

GE volunteers bring good things to light

BY JIM CUOZZO

Twenty thousand General Electric volunteers on five different continents, including 180 volunteers from GE-Plastics Selkirk Plant, spent June 7, leaving the workplace and venturing out into their communities to participate in GE Global Community Days.

"This is a great opportunity for employees in different departments to work together and to give back to the community," said Chris Haskell, an employee at GE Selkirk and lead project coordinator for construction of a nature trail project in the town of Bethlehem at the Bethlehem YMCA.

"We have about 22 employee volunteers clearing the trail, trimming, grooming and spreading wood chips to make a nice path," said Haskell. The trail will also have several picnic tables and the creation of several elements for a challenge course for kids using the YMCA's summer camp.

"Our summer camp lasts nine weeks and 100 kids weekly have already signed up to participate," said Matt Crudo, YMCA membership director. "This is the second year GE has come out on Global Community Day to help us with our summer camp, and all the work volunteers provide is greatly appreciated," said Crudo. "We like to have our kids outside as much as possible."

Other GE Global Community Day projects in Bethlehem include refurbishing a nature trail at Five Rivers Environmental Education Center, landscape work at the Good Samaritan Lutheran Center in Delmar, and work at Bethlehem Soccerplex in Glenmont.

Another group of volunteers traveled to Ravena Coeymans Middle School and the Coeymans Elementary School to work on nature trails, create learning pods and other work for the "School Yard Habitat."

Spring rains started to fall again while many Bethlehem area projects were under way, but it didn't dampen the spirits of the GE volunteers participating.

"It's been nice working with everybody," said Haskell.

Hungary, Japan, and India are just some of the countries that GE workers participate in with Global Community Days. Projects worldwide range from free medical check-ups for senior citizens to building an orphanage for disabled children.

"These Global Community Days are a unified effort to demonstrate our commitment to volunteerism," said GE vice president of corporate citizenship Bob Corcoran. Nine different service projects were coordinated this year by GE Selkirk employees. The day ended with volunteers having a barbecue at the GE Selkirk site pavilion to celebrate accomplishments with volunteers and other community representatives. GE volunteers contribute more than 1 million hours of service annually.

What's the name of the puddle on second base?

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR

Take me out to the ball game. Take me out to the crowds.

Oh wait, it's raining, again. The game has been cancelled, again.

The first practice had been cancelled due to rain, but that was in April and everybody knows about April showers. But May showers? And June showers?

Enough already!

OK, I have to admit I didn't mope at the news of some of the rained-out games. But that was only because the cancellations removed the pressure from having to rush from one activity to another.

But after a while there were only cancellations and no games. And even the make-up games were rained out.

Then I started getting bummed. Thing is, my daughter Rachel was enjoying her first season playing softball. And, to my pleasant surprise, I was enjoying going to the games.

In fact, I view the time spent at the ball field as "relaxation with permission" time. You can't easily justify sitting in a lawn chair in your backyard for two hours on a Monday evening, but if you are at your child's ball game it's OK to just hang out.

Are there lots of other tasks that could be accomplished during those hours? Of course!

But at the ball games you can visit with other adults, you can

Commentary:

From Robin's Nest

watch children learning and honing a skill, you can cheer and you can laugh. And you don't have to worry about cooking dinner if there's a concession stand!

Your kid needs to keep her eye on the ball. You need to keep your eye on your kid.

During the first game of the season I was standing behind the bleachers visiting with friends whose daughter was on the opposing team. I kept one eye on my daughter, straight across the field playing third base, so I had the perfect view when she caught a pop fly. A look of amazement and satisfaction spread across 9-year-old Rachel's face.

Meanwhile, I was jumping up and down, clapping my hands over my head. Then I noticed the people around me were cheering, yet I was standing among the families of the opposing team. For a second I thought maybe I'd gotten confused and we hadn't gotten anybody out. But then I realized the parents were cheering for the good play, because that's what these parents do. That's the kind of good sportsmanship the league seeks to promote.

Of course there is a degree of competition and the girls are encouraged to "play to win," but in my daughter's age group, the pervasive spirit is one of learning and having fun.

The girls literally cheer each other on. When their team is up they chant to the batter: "We want a single, just a little single. S-I-N-G-L-E. Single, single, single! We want a double, just a little double. D-O-U-B-L-E. Double, Double, Double!" and so on.

The coaches rotate the players through the different field positions, allowing the girls to learn the game from the various vantage points. I felt nervous watching my daughter cover first base. My nerves turned to pride as she not only caught the ball thrown by the pitcher, but also remembered to tag the base with her foot.

I'm learning a lot about playing ball. For example, I never knew that you are considered safe at first even if you momentarily run past the base. Or that sometimes you can steal a base and sometimes you can't. Or that in certain instances you need to tag the player, but other times just catching the ball and tagging the base with your foot is sufficient.

I can't keep all that stuff straight, but it sure looks like fun.

So one weekend afternoon, when my husband was preparing to do yard work, I told him I wanted a turn at bat. Rachel was at a friend's house, so Jeff and I went over to the elementary school and he pitched to me. We stood on the driest area of grass available, since there were puddles in the bases of the ball field diamond.

Jeff showed me how to hold the bat and line up my knuckles. It felt weird, but he convinced me it was necessary. He had picked up tips from Rachel's Uncle Dave, bat, and follow through after you swing.

"Just pitch," I finally yelled, "I'm just trying to have fun. I'm not joining a league."

There's a great sense of triumph when the bat makes contact with the ball. You hear the sound, you see the ball fly away, and you think to yourself: Yessss!

I remember Rachel's first hit. She didn't make a single, because the pitcher got to the ball and threw it to first base before she got there. But she still derived satisfaction from just hitting the ball.

It was a success in its own right. A wide smile spread across her face. I understood how she felt.

The day Jeff pitched to me he eventually asked for a turn at bat. I relented but I didn't last long as the pitcher/outfielder. I wasn't too keen about trekking out into the muddy field to retrieve the balls that he hit way far out. Plus, my pitching skills are severely lacking, dangerous even, and he spent a lot of time jumping out of the way (I was not trying to hit him, honest.)

In the weeks that followed, it was just rain, rain and more rain. There was thunder and lightning and rain. There was also some sun, but never enough to allow the fields to drain and dry. The team coaches and managers even tried in vain to sweep water off the fields in order to make them usable.

If a non-athlete like me felt disappointed at the washed-out softball season, I imagine the coaches, and certainly the players, took it even harder. Kids playing soccer and Little League baseball faced similar situations.

So next season, "Take me out to the ball game" will need some new verses. We'll need to sing: "For it's root, root, root for some sunshine. If the kids can't play, it's a pain. For it's one, two, three strikes you're out if the fields don't drain!"

In fact, I view the time spent at the ball field as "relaxation with permission" time. You can't easily justify sitting in a lawn chair in your backyard for two hours on a Monday evening, but if you are at your child's ball game it's OK to just hang out.

who coaches a high school team.

I'm a lefty and I tend to hit the ball directly to the first base. As Jeff got ready to pitch, I told him it seemed like I would be aiming right toward a puddle-filled area in the adjacent ball field. He told me not to worry about it. Clearly he didn't think I'd be able to hit the ball very far.

I surprised both of us as I hit ball after ball and he went running out to retrieve them into the muddy areas of the field, beyond the nearby puddles. Granted, he is an excellent pitcher, and he threw me nice, slow underhand pitches.

At one point my husband turned into a coach, offering various pointers. There was too much to remember: keep your knuckles in a row, line up with the pitcher, keep a firm grip on the bat, don't choke up too far on the

Hammering fraud

Summer time and the livin' is supposed to be easy.

But after you've called a dozen or so contractors with no luck on that bathroom, kitchen or other home renovation project, you're finding things aren't as easy as they are supposed to be.

Some contractors you've called are too busy, some don't work in your area and others could only schedule a job months in advance.

Neighbors, friends and even relatives are reluctant to give you a name because of their own horror stories.

Editorial

This week, a press release from the state Attorney General's office cited a probe into unscrupulous home improvement contractors. Unfortunately, many people have found out the hard way. Some find themselves out of a considerable amount of cash with little or no work completed to show for it, and your "contractor" no longer answers his phone.

The Attorney General's office is currently investigating a number of complaints about home improvement fraud. If you believe you have a claim, call the consumer help line at 800-7755.

Chances are, though, you have likely been the cause of the conniving contractor's scheme.

Did you require references? Did you check the references? Insist on a contract? Get several estimates? If you answered no to any or all of these questions, your goose is cooked.

Sadly, we're prone to be too trusting to someone who has a glib line and smooth delivery. It's not just the older or naïve folks who get scammed; we're all vulnerable.

All homeowners should be on alert and here are some tips from the AG's office to consider before hiring a contractor:

- Never agree to have work done on the spot or by anyone going door-to-door.
- Shop around. Get at least three estimates that include specific information about the project.
- Never pay the full price up front.
- You have three full days to cancel after signing a home improvement contract, but all cancellations must be in writing.

It's heartbreaking to think your long-awaited home project could be spoiled by an unscrupulous contractor, but it's a fact that they are out there, and that many take the money and run.

Don't be a victim; follow the simple precautions recommended by the AG's office, and chances are you won't be bilked of your hard-earned cash.

The car pulls into the driveway and everyone jockeys for position.

Here comes Dad.

A hard day at work, 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., of course, and I am home with my loving family.

Awaiting me are the day's newspapers — The Spotlight — and a big easy chair for my weary body.

Feet up, cold drink in hand, and my two quiet children, J.W. and Joseph, at my side help me relax before a seven-course feast my wife Julie spent all day preparing for the family. We then sit down for a nice meal full of polite conversation and discuss our days at work, school or home.

Wrrrruppppp (that is the sound of a stylus scraping across a L.P. record, for those who remember vinyl).

Fast forward to June 2006.

The car rips into the driveway at 5:45 p.m., tires smoking and driver sweating after a 45-minute un-air conditioned trip up the Northway. I step out of the car, through the garage, trip over the wagon left in the way and not seen because the light bulb is cooked.

The chaos has just begun.

It is baseball night.

What is that, you ask?

Two games, two boys, at 6 p.m. and 10 minutes away.

I am greeted with "Where is my glove?" from 11-year-old J.W., and the sight of 6-year-old Joseph who clearly had found the largest, deepest pool of mud on the planet just 15 minutes earlier.

Julie greets me in the kitchen and rips off three commands.

"You have five minutes, get the water bottles and watch out for the pile of mud in the hall."

Too late on the last one.

Now hopping through the house as the one-sock wonder, I do the quick change, return

Point of View

downstairs with the lost glove and don a determined look on my face.

We are going to make it, at all costs.

Julie packs our dinner in a recycled Stewart's bread bag, gracefully bounds over the want. Children must be taught this, too.

We started this with J.W. and Joseph at an early age with the one-activity rule. Each boy has one choice per season for sports or major activities. The do-it-all approach does no work for us. We tried it for a while and the children's schedule became more complicated than the adults' mud and out the door. She is serving a meal of veggie corn dogs, soy nuggets and a grilled cheese sandwich, all to go.

Ward Cleaver never had it so good.

As the McIntyres strive to make life more like the '50s, the realities of modern living produce plenty of roadblocks.

Many of the roles played by the parents of earlier generations no longer apply in 2006. Fathers provide childcare, cook, and clean (although not well enough) as mothers work full-time, do the taxes and mow the lawn. This shift is not always a bad thing. It provides role models to our children that both men and women can perform the tasks, but we must also teach our children that these things have consequences.

For example, we do not believe that anyone can do anything that they want or can be anything they want to be without making sacrifices. This is the part that the big, purple PBS freak leaves out of his songs.

It is great to encourage our children to be the best they can be, but we must also teach them that the baggage may be heavy if you want to be on top. It is impossible to be the head of a multi-national company, keep a country club membership, hit all the PTA events, be a homeroom parent and still be on top of that elusive baseball glove on game night.

As parents, Julie and I have found that parenting is a full-time job and we cannot do everything, much as we might Tearing from one event to another did not instill in the boys that any one event was very important, and it almost killed Julie and me.

This season it is hard enough with two in baseball at the same time.

Over the past 50 years, parents have wanted to do more for their children than their parents did for them. There is a point, though, where more is not always better. The question I ask is: "Was my life that bad without all this stuff?"

As a father, I force my boys to cut wood with me, come to the hardware store with me, help me cut the grass, make a family dinner together, go to baseball games, and, most important, to stay at home to play in the mud. I want them to see that my choices include them and a dad is more than just a ride to the next activity.

I acknowledge that we are very fortunate to have choices that many families do not because of financial restraints, structure or simply lack of time.

Modern fatherhood is evolving as motherhood has. We are doing things that our fathers would cringe at, and giving up things they would not or could not. It is a great time to be involved with your children, and nothing is more rewarding.

Making the best choices for your children is not always the most popular or politically correct thing to do. Those choices may make your children think that they are different from everyone else.

But isn't that the point?

March to support school re-vote

Editor, The Spotlight:

Our children need the support of all Bethlehem town residents. In this very difficult time, we are faced with the elimination of teachers, support staff, programs, field trips, and many other items as a result of the defeat of the original school budget proposal.

The debate surrounding the wisdom of that proposal notwithstanding, the reality is that many important elements of the budget have now been cut. We urge all district residents to review the new proposal and its attendant cuts. In our view, any further cuts would have serious long-term consequences and adversely affect the quality of the services that our school district can offer.

The Bethlehem Central School District provides our students with a quality education. We urge all residents to support the revised budget proposal by voting on June 20.

Please show your support by participating in the "Bethlehem Families March for the School Budget" which will take place on Thursday, June 15 at 4:30 p.m. The march will proceed from the middle school to the Four Corners to show our support for the students of the Bethlehem Central School District.

Our children are worth the cost of a Bethlehem education

Editor, The Spotlight:

Listening to the voters, the board of education has combed through the district school budget and committed to an additional $802,000 in reductions. Did they find fluff? I think not, given that the reductions include teaching staff at every level from elementary to high school, elimination of field trips and reductions in funding for elementary arts education programs, not to mention reductions in funding for athletic and intramural programming.

We live in a district with a school system that enjoys an excellent reputation on many levels, from cost per pupil, to overall performance, to graduation levels and more than holds its own against other similar school districts in the Capital District. In fact, many of us chose to live here so our children could receive an excellent public school education. And that does cost money.

Are our children worth it? Administrators Les Loomis, Mike Tebbano, Steve O'Shea and Rita Levay seem to think they are, and they are demonstrating this by giving up their pay increases next year. At the last budget meeting, each spoke of this being just a "small effort" on their part. But this "small effort" will impact their salaries in the future, and potentially their pensions. This "small effort" does, however, speak volumes about their commitment to this district and to the programs they have worked so hard to build.

It also points out that we need to take a hard look at our own commitments. It is disheartening to see so few people turn out to attend the budget discussions, especially when we turn out in droves for sporting events. Everything costs more these days. Just as our health care costs and energy costs have increased, so have those of the district. Would a broader tax base from businesses help? Absolutely, but that takes time and effort, and our schools cannot wait.

Each cut takes a little more of the vitality and strength from our schools. Please take the time to learn the facts about our budget. And show your support by voting for the budget on June 20.

High school group urges 'yes' vote

Editor, The Spotlight:

As officers for the BCCO this year and next (BCCO is the Bethlehem high school parent-teacher organization), we are writing to urge the community to support the school budget at the revote on Tuesday, June 20. We believe the current proposal takes into account concerns raised by residents regarding the proposed tax rate increase while attempting to preserve as much of the education programs as possible. We are very concerned a contingency budget would be devastating to Bethlehem students next year and for several years in the future. This community prides itself on the quality of a Bethlehem education. Please support the budget on June 20.

Revised RCS budget will let district's good work continue

Editor, The Spotlight:

I would like to take this opportunity to urge all RCS Central School District residents to go the polls on June 20 to have a say on the future of the school district.

Voting on the budget proposal will take place from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. at RCS High School.

The board of education, administration and I have worked diligently in the past few weeks to revise a budget proposal that takes into account the multitude of comments we have received in the wake of the defeat of the initial budget proposal on May 16.

We believe the $39.1 million plan that we put forth accomplishes that.

Now it is up to the residents of the district to tell us what they think.

As a resident of this community, I understand the concerns residents have expressed about taxes. I also know that the key to building a strong community and nation with a bright future is a sound educational system.

The board of education, administration, faculty and staff work hard every day to provide solid education opportunities for all youth in this community.

Some recent statistics provide examples of this. Did you know that the number of RCS graduates pursuing education in college or technical schools has steadily increased up to 80 percent last year? In addition to that, dozens of our students earn college credits while still in high school through our advanced placement courses.

Did you also know that many of our students learn valuable career and life skills through BOCES and that one of our seniors this year took second place in a national lodging management competition?

From the scholars program in our elementary schools to the AP program in the high school, RCS students are constantly challenged to perform at their highest levels and to pursue their dreams.

The board of education and administration believe that the budget put forth on June 20 will allow this great work to continue.

Please remember to vote on the proposal and have a say in the future of the RCS community.

Vicki Wright,

RCS School Superintendent

Varsity hockey, gymnastics and cheerleading were cut last month by the school board after the first district budget vote in 22 years failed.

Sports

Bethlehem Central," said Hynes.

Gymnastics and cheerleading had their say too. "I speak as the father of three girls with one on the gymnastics team," said Jay Smith. "We remind you to keep us in your deliberations because we feel we can raise the money to cover expenses in the district," said Smith.

Over $800,000 was cut from the failed $73.3 million district budget whittling the tax increase from 5.45 percent to 3.75% for the second budget vote on June 20. "This $800,000 reduction has affected every student in the district, over 5,000 students," said Superintendent Les Loomis.

Many parents complained that certain sports programs are being singled out for cuts without the input of the community. "Why do we have to beg to self fund these three sports while other sports go funded," asked Michelle Andriano, high school cheerleading coach.

"In better times, there would have been more opportunity for input," said board president Richard Svenson. "We're getting to the point now where our first budget was defeated, and we quickly need a revote," said Svenson.

Several board members questioned the legality of self-funded district sports and the liability involved for the district. "In the past, the district pays the funds, we bill the booster clubs, and they pay the cost for the rest of the season," said high school principal Chuck Abba.

Coaches of all three sports also said they would coach without taking a stipend for the work involved. "I would not want to have coaches work for free," Loomis said. The board unanimously agreed to self-fund the three sports but not without doubt.

"I have severe reservations about self funding," said board member James Lytle. "I am uncomfortable asking the community to fundraise for certain sports." Lynne Lenhardt recently re-elected to the board

Cuts

A high school switchboard operator has been transferred to the Student pupil personnel office and a middle school telephone operator's position was cut. The district will now go to an automated attendant at the central office, high school and middle school.

Administrators opted against taking any pay raises in the coming year. That includes Superintendent of Schools Les Loomis; Rita Levay, director of pupil personnel; Michael Tebbano, assistant superintendent, and head of instructional programs, and Steve O'Shea, assistant superintendent in the finance office.

"Administration and others in the central office felt we should take the lead and show our concern for a new three-year term along with Lytle also expressed uncertainty about the inequities of self-funding. "I am willing to do this for a year to save the program," said Lenhardt.

The first failed budget vote is causing other side issues in the district. The school bus proposition that also failed in May will not be brought back up for a vote. Central administration clerical staff has been cut back, and restructures due to the budget defeat.

"If a re-vote fails, a second defeat forces us into a contingency budget and for us means another $590,000 in cuts and a tax rate reduction to 2.4 percent said Loomis. "If it goes down a second time it sends a very discouraging message," Loomis added.

The school district administrators also decided not to ask for raises in the coming school year. The second school district budget vote will be held June 20, from 7 a.m. to 9p.m. at the middle school.

"We are all going to wait and see what the community has to concern over the budget defeat and do our part in keeping the budget reasonable," said Loomis.

One proposed high school teacher, one elementary teacher and 1.45 middle school teachers proposed for grades six through eight is eliminated. Sports booster clubs in the district will fund varsity hockey, cheerleading and gymnastics at a $52,000 savings to the district. Chaperones have been reduced and six new extracurricular clubs will be cut.

"I think this community expects us to do everything possible to deliver high quality education but with a substantial cost avoidance," said Loomis.

Richard J. Harte is a Bethlehem School District resident who will be voting 'No' a second time around. "I am not opposed to funding education, but I do think budgets go overboard at times," said Harte. "Cut back on the perks," Harte added.

School board president Richard Svenson said taxpayers have been heard and changes have been made to the second proposed budget.

"We hope this data and analysis will show the impact of these budget cuts," said Svenson. Loomis said people who support the district need to come out and be more active.

Even the town of Bethlehem will see a direct impact. The failed budget called for an increase of $30,000 in the amount of funding the district pays for two school resource officers provided by the town through the Bethlehem Police Department. The district originally allocated $30,000 annually for the SROs and increased that amount to $60,000 for the new fiscal year. Since the first budget was defeated the board cut their total allocation at $45,000 or a $15,000 increase from the current year. These school resource officers provide a valuable service to the district and we know the Town is picking up a majority of the cost," said Svenson. A rally to support the new budget up for a vote on June 20, is scheduled to be held Thursday June 15, at 4:30 p.m. at the Four Corners in Delmar. Supporters will walk from the middle school to the Four Corners with signs asking the community to vote 'Yes' for the budget next week.

Change

that in mind, Kindlon filed a motion last week to have the trial moved to another county. That motion is expected to be reviewed this week in the 2nd Judicial Department of the State Supreme Court Appellate Division in Brooklyn. Peter Porco worked as a law clerk for the 3rd Department of the Appellate Division. Kindlon believes the most logical place to change the venue for the Porco murder trial would be Orange County where Judge Berry lives. But Albany County District Attorney David Soares said there shouldn't be a problem finding a jury in Albany County that is not biased.

Meanwhile, Judge Jeffrey Berry has yet to rule on key pieces of evidence submitted during pre-trial hearings last month. That evidence includes a six and a half hour videotape of Bethlehem Police interrogating Christopher Porco inside the squad room of the department on Delaware Avenue, the night following the attacks. During that interview Porco's mother Joan was in critical condition at Albany Medical Center Hospital recovering from her wounds. John Polster, an attorney and family friend, was waiting in the hallway of the Bethlehem Police Department while Christopher Porco was being questioned. Polster said during pre-trial testimony he was acting as Christopher's attorney at that time. Christopher Porco told police however Polster was just a friend of the family and not his attorney. Porco denied any involvement in the crime but refused to take a lie detector test when asked by police that evening.

Kindlon believes his client's rights were violated when Porco was not orally read his Miranda Rights, but instead initiated a statement prior to questioning that advised him of his rights.

Porco is currently out on bail and living with Elaine LaForte and her family in Glenmont. Porco is an employee of Bethlehem Veterinary Hospital owned by LaForte. Prosecutors believe Christopher Porco committed the crimes against his family because he was having financial problems while attending the University of Rochester where he dropped out in 2003 but re-enrolled in 2004. E-mails between Porco and his mother and father prior to the attacks show a very strained relationship. The e-mails made public in other media reports reveal that Christopher Porco was forging his father's name on loan documents and was delinquent on both his college tuition and car payments on his yellow Jeep Wrangler. It is the Jeep Wrangler that prosecutors believe Porco used to drive from the murder scene on Brockley Drive back to the University of Rochester undetected before police arrived on the crime scene the next morning. The Brockley Drive home was also the scene of two prior burglaries in 2002 and 2003, when computers, and other electronic equipment were stolen, but no arrests were made. After extensive legwork by police and prosecutors, they believe the items stolen from the prior burglaries on Brockley Drive were sold on e-bay, a large online, Internet auction house, and sold by Christopher Porco by using his e-bay online account. Although police took articles of clothing from Christopher Porco the night he was questioned along with fingerprinting him, there is little forensic evidence connecting Christopher Porco to the crime scene. The trial is expected to begin in a matter of weeks.

Academics should be school district's No. 1 priority

Editor, The Spotlight:

I read in the June 7 edition of The Spotlight that "... there is a strong group of people who are angry ... because they ... didn't vote" in favor of the school budget. Well, I did take the time to vote and I am still angry. I know as a town resident I am responsible to subsidize the education of our youth and like most residents, I do so willingly.

I am angry because after the defeat of the budget, I did not hear or read from any of our students about the loss of scholastic programs. I am angry because they did not cry out over teacher losses. I am angry because they were upset over the loss of hockey, cheerleading, field trips, etc.

Yes, I know how important these are to the overall education of our youth, but they are not the MOST important, as so many seem to think. I only wish I had heard the students, not the parents, speak out passionately about education per se. I guess the clincher was when I picked up the local daily paper shortly after the vote and read a quote from one of the Bethlehem students. He said, and I paraphrase, I only went to BCHS because that is where I could play the sport I wanted, and it was cheaper to play it there than anywhere else. It may have been cheaper for his parents, but it isn't for me. Yes, I'm angry, too ... and guess how I'm going to vote!

Thank you, Bethlehem, for finally saying no

Editor, The Spotlight:

We have been scammed for years by this state and local government, and all we ever do is vote yes and then get scammed again for another year. Let's hope this no vote is the beginning of a new trend in our town. These schools are pathetic. We are paying $12,000+ per kid per year for a mediocre education at best. We are being scammed.

America can do better than this. The teachers make too much. Their union is too powerful. The government is too inept to do the job adequately. Let's wake up and change things. Why are they in charge of educating our kids? Why are they allowed to take our money to do it? How about some new ideas?

Not to sound too radical, but how about parents taking the responsibility to get our kids educated instead of just blindly handing it over to this government? Vouchers sound like a good start. Of course, if we take any power from them, our real estate prices will plummet and our children will suffer.

Come on Bethlehem, wake up, let the foolish deception end. It's obvious these government schools are a failure and that we need to do something soon before it's too late. Please continue to vote no and tell them enough is enough. We're mad as hell, and we're not gonna put up with it anymore.

VACATION HOMES

It used to be that only a small percentage of people had vacation homes to which they escaped to relax and enjoy life. Today, second homes are not just for the "well to do" anymore. In fact, one out of every three home sales in this country is a second home. The fastest growing group of buyers in the second home segment of the real estate market is the 55-64 age group. As these baby boomers approach retirement, they have both the money and the desire to purchase second homes which they increasingly see as good investments. No longer solely restricted to warm weather retreats, second homes are being purchased anywhere that the pace of life is slow and the quality of life is high.

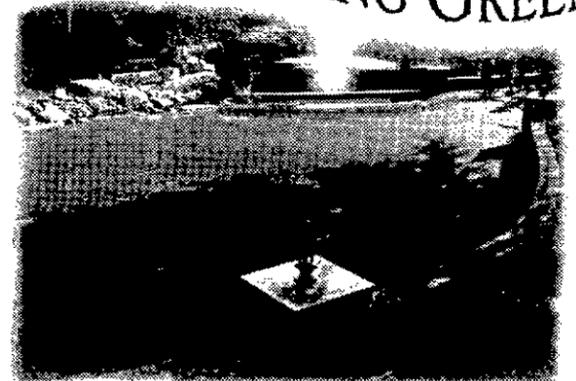

Vacation homes are definitely becoming more common. Nationwide, sale prices of second homes have risen nearly 25% since 2001. Now is the time to buy that second/vacation home and there are currently many to consider.

Remember, I can find you the perfect, affordable vacation home and even link you with real estate agents in other states. Whether you want a vacation home 30 minutes away or 3 hours away, just give me a call. I would love to help you relax and enjoy life even more!

Bethlehem school taxes pay off in college search

Editor, The Spotlight:

We all wonder where our hard-earned dollars are going, and if they are being well spent by the people entrusted with it. We wonder if we make the right decisions for our children when putting them in one school district or another. We wonder if we have done enough for our children so they will go out into the world armed with the knowledge and social tools necessary to compete. We wonder if we should put our money into something we may not directly use.

We can stop wondering and here is irrefutable proof . . .

With the skyrocketing cost of college, people naturally want the best education for their children for the least amount of money. Increasingly, students are choosing the SUNY system, making the pool of applicants in it more competitive than ever. This has resulted in an increase in the already excellent quality of the students attending the schools, the difficulty getting into many of them, and the quality of the education being demanded of them. Geneseo is considered one of the very best in the SUNY system and the most difficult to get into. It is also considered one of the best colleges in the country, both public and private. The average GPA (grade point average from four years of high school) of incoming freshmen was a 94 last year.

How does that prove our money is well spent in Bethlehem?

An admissions counselor from Geneseo recently clarified that while the average GPA of incoming freshmen is a 94, the number is weighted based on the difficulty of the school the student is graduating from. She specifically said that, "For example, a GPA of 85 from Bethlehem is considered a 92 to us as we compare a Bethlehem student with those from other high schools."

They value our children. They seek them out because they know they will be well prepared and are highly likely to do well at their school. This is a testament to the hard work being done by the teachers, counselors, coaches, administrators and community.

There is your proof. What a wonderful testament to the work and money invested in the future of our children.... the budding doctors, lawyers, artists, carpenters and architects who will be enhancing our community in the future. While a resident may not have a child in the district right now, they reap the benefits of it every day as they participate in a community built by it ... a community to be proud of.

The increase in the value of our property (and unfortunately our taxes) has been painful for many. It is also a testament to what is going right here. People want to be here, due in a large part to the success of the schools. Their desire to be here has driven up the prices of our homes as well as increased the need to improve and expand the school system. It is the cost of success. We should be proud of what has been accomplished by the high standards set by the residents of Bethlehem and we should strive to maintain those standards as we accommodate our newest citizens.

I would like to thank the good people of Bethlehem for making this commitment to our children and to all of our futures. For an additional $10 to $20 per month, we can help to assure the quality of our school system continues for years to come. Please consider this when voting June 20 for the school budget.

Voting 'no' does not mean lower taxes

Editor, The Spotlight:

I went to the school board meeting last week to hear the status of the school budget and what the impact of another defeat would be (leading to a state-mandated contingency budget). As Superintendent Les Loomis detailed the current cuts, as well as the potential ones, I was especially drawn to the chart that displayed the taxes for homeowners.

I know that many people have been affected by rising costs in nearly every area of our lives. I also know that many people are tying the rise in our assessments to the school vote. Several people feel that by defeating the budget, our taxes will decrease significantly, and vice versa, if the budget passes, our taxes will rise significantly.

I urge everyone to take a look at the actual figures. You can calculate your school taxes on the school's Web site: <http://bcsd.k12.ny.us>.

You will find that if you vote NO, your taxes rise approximately $80-160 per year. A NO vote also leads to more cuts. I urge you to look at the list of cuts, and imagine all the people (mostly students) that are affected.

Several students spoke at the meeting, demonstrating the qualities that the district strives to nurture—respect, integrity, responsibility and civility, not to mention eloquence and passion.

If you vote YES, your taxes will rise approximately $122-244 per year—$10-$20 dollars a month. The high end for homes is valued at more than $400,000. Again, I am under the impression that many people feel a NO vote will decrease their town taxes significantly.

Unfortunately, this is not the case. Our taxes are going to rise a bit, just like everything else, it seems. But, if we look at the actual figures and see the difference between a NO and YES vote ... the dollar amount is not too great, but the difference it will make to our town's kids, who are relying on us to show them what is important—I think that is immeasurable.

Knowing the growing uncertainties these kids face in their future, and how they can't help but take a budget defeat personally, watching these students speak, I couldn't help but think of how our extra dollars next year will be so worth spending, no matter what we have to cut back on at home. They will see our values in action.

If the vote fails, we will have many, many more kids with far less to do to keep them happy, busy, motivated, etc.

Please vote on June 20.

Going on vacation? Get your audiobooks at the library

June is Audiobooks Month, and Bethlehem Public Library has acquired many new offerings just in time for summer travel. In response to popular demand, we have purchased about 100 new titles in CD format, including second copies of popular fare. Summer travel can be hectic, and audiobooks provide a perfect diversion as you get from here to there. Many provide excellent family listening in the car; many more help drown out the drone of jet engines and help you forget how cramped your legs are.

Get down with downloadables

In addition to books on CD, the library offers digital books that can be downloaded to your PC and transferred to a portable listening device. Downloadable audiobooks are just the thing for vacationers, because they automatically expire after three weeks. There are no late fees and no need to return anything to the library.

Our NetLibrary downloadable service provides unlimited copies of several hundred titles. All you need is your Bethlehem Public Library card. NetLibrary, and its companion digital library OverDrive, are accessible from our Web site.

To create your free NetLibrary account, go to www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org, click on "downloadables" and follow the directions. OverDrive does not offer unlimited copies, but you can put a copy on reserve. All downloadable titles are integrated into the library catalog.

Look for our display at the information desk. For a list of the library's latest audiobook and downloadable audiobook acquisitions, go to our Web site and click on "what's new." Here's a sampling of our collection:

Book ends

Library closed

The library will be closed Friday, June 16, for a staff development day. Outdoor bookdrops will be open; there will be no telephone service. Patrons may access the catalog and other library services online at www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org. The library will reopen on Saturday, June 17 at 10 a.m.

New summer reading program

"Basking in Books," a summer reading program for adults and high school students, begins June 26 at the library. Participants are invited to read books in any genre and fill out a comment slip for each book they read. Slips will be posted so that comments can be shared with other readers. Each slip will be entered in a weekly drawing for prizes from local merchants. Comment slips are available at the library information desk.

Program runs until Aug. 18. Call 439-9314 for information.

K-8 reading program

"X" marks the spot for "Books—a Treasure," the library's summer reading program for grades K-8. Program runs July 3 to Aug. 10. Free books and prizes, crafts and special events. Registration is ongoing during library hours. Call 439-914 for information.

Children's writing workshop

Registration is still open for the library's summer writing workshop for children entering grade 3 and up. Youngsters meet on five consecutive Fridays, July 7 to

Aug. 4, from 9:30 a.m. to 11:30 a.m. to write, revise, illustrate and bind their own books. Local authors will talk about different stages in the writing process. Participants must commit to four of the five sessions. Adult volunteers welcome. Call 439-9314.

Use Your Power To Choose.

In New York's new competitive energy marketplace, you no longer have to buy your electricity and natural gas only from your local utility. Instead, you can shop among the new Energy Service Companies (ESCOs) that are competing for your business. This change should bring efficiencies and innovations that will give you better value for your energy dollar.

The combined services once offered by your utility have been split into two parts — supply and delivery, with the supply portion open to competition. You can choose to switch to an ESCO or continue buying your energy supply from your utility.

Regardless of where you buy your supply, your utility will still deliver energy to you through their existing wires and pipes. The safety and reliability you depend on won't change, and you'll still call your utility during emergencies or service interruptions.

A new choice for your energy supply

When you shop for electricity, you can now consider selecting Green Power providers for some or all of your supply.

Green Power providers supply environmentally friendly electricity generated from renewable fuel sources such as solar, wind, biomass, geothermal and low-impact or small hydro. For only a few pennies more a day, you can choose Green Power and make a world of difference for generations to come.

The Environmental Disclosure Label

Another benefit of New York's competitive market is that you now have access to information that lets you assess the environmental impacts of the energy you buy. Twice a year in your electric bill you receive an Environmental Disclosure Label showing the mix of fuels used to generate your electricity and the related air emissions. Knowing about electricity generation, fuel sources and their environmental impacts will help you make informed choices. You can also receive this information by visiting www.PowerToChooseNY.com and entering your zip code.

Strength in numbers

Purchasing electricity and gas with others, called "aggregation," gives your group greater buying power and may save you money. For example, the Municipal Electric and Gas Alliance (MEGA) members (municipalities and school districts in Central New York) saved approximately $2.7 million on their electric bills last year, which translates into average savings of 12%. The Council of Industry's Electricity Aggregation Group, representing more than 40 members, saved approximately $1 million in 2005, representing a savings of 10%. You may belong to a community or business association that can coordinate with ESCOs for the best package of prices and services. For a sample of a Request for Proposal for Bids for your group's use, go to www.PowerToChooseNY.com and click on Contact Us and send us an e-mail, or call us at 518-474-1540.

Choosing a supplier

To shop for an ESCO, evaluate their offerings, compare them with your utility's offering, and decide which is best for you. You should:

1. Call your utility or the Public Service Commission at 1-888-Ask-PSC1 (1-888-275-7721) for ESCOs serving your area. Or go to www.PowerToChooseNY.com or your utility's Web site for a list, and then call the companies. The ESCOs and their offers do change, so continue to check periodically.

2. Compare prices, services and terms offered.
3. Consider customer services such as toll-free numbers, Web sites and complaint handling.
4. Check out billing and payment options.
5. Confirm the details of the agreement.
6. Choose your supplier and monitor your bills and service. If you are not satisfied, you can switch back to your utility or to another ESCO, subject to any applicable contract terms.

For a list of ESCOs and more information, visit the Public Service Commission Web site at www.PowerToChooseNY.com, call 1-888-Ask-PSC1 (1-888-275-7721) or contact your local utility listed below:

Use Your Power To Choose your energy supplier.

In the past, you had no choice of who provided you with your natural gas and electricity supply — it was your local utility.

Well, things have changed.

In New York State, companies other than your local utility, called Energy Service Companies (ESCOs), are competing to provide you with electricity and natural gas. No matter which supplier you choose, your utility will still deliver your energy safely and reliably, and respond to emergencies.

Why Choose an ESCO?

Competition gives you greater choice and better value for your energy dollar in purchasing energy products and services, including:

Fixed Pricing — Some ESCOs offer a fixed price for your natural gas or electricity supply.

Variable or Capped Pricing — You may see a variety of offers from ESCOs, including a variable price and capped pricing mechanisms tailored to meet your individual needs.

Green Power — Some ESCOs offer products from renewable energy sources that are environmentally friendly such as solar, wind, biomass, and hydropower. New York State and the Public Service Commission have made a commitment to promote the use of Green Power and foster the development of renewable energy generation resources. Purchasing Green Power helps the environment and encourages alternative power generation.

Other Value Added Benefits — Ask about other options including appliance repair, service contracts, and other benefits.

Join the over one million New Yorkers who have already made the choice to switch to an ESCO!

Girls earn Scout silver awards

The Girl Scouts, Hudson Valley Council, announces that Laurie Giordano, Marisa Shuman, Kathleen Tucker all of Delmar, and Alison Arditi of Glenmont, have earned the Girl Scout Silver Award, the second highest award in Girl Scouting.

The Girl Scout Silver Award is earned by Girl Scouts who are in grades 6 through 9 or ages 11-14 who have completed a wide range of Girl Scout and community experiences. The award recognizes a commitment by girls who work to better their own lives and the lives of others. After requirements in leadership building, living skills, career exploration and a commitment to improving themselves are completed, girls must complete a Silver Award project that takes a minimum of 30 hours to complete.

For their projects, the girls collected used soccer cleats and donated them to members in the community who could not afford them otherwise.

The girls are all students at Bethlehem Central High School.

Native son will make us laugh

BY JIM CUOZZO

Albany High School graduate Todd Levin will be performing stand-up comedy this Saturday, June 17, at the Lark Tavern in Albany.

Levin will be a part of "The Brew Ha-Ha" performing with Mike Irwin. Both Levin and Irwin now live in New York City. Levin was recently featured as a guest comic for the Comedy Central Series called "Premium Blend," showcasing new comedy talent.

"My comedy is highly exaggerated storytelling," said Levin, who is making his first appearance performing in Albany since moving to New York City. "I have some friends here who will be at the show and I am happy about that."

Levin is currently a freelance writer who has also been performing stand-up comedy on a weekly basis the past four years.

"I perform as many times as I can each week," said Levin. "New York City audiences are open to hearing everything and they do give people a chance."

The exposure on Comedy Central has landed Levin other gigs as well. He credits comedians Bill Cosby and Bob Newhart as major influences in his work.

"I began doing stand-up when a friend of mine asked me to read some pieces at a show he was performing for," Levin said. "From that day I began to read less and talk more and began to tell more stories and jokes."

Levin currently lives in Brooklyn and has had articles published in The New York Post, Time Out NYC, Metropolis, and Glamour Magazine. In February he traveled to Aspen, Colo. to appear at HBO's Annual Comedy Festival. Todd is the son of Mike and Marsha Levin of Delmar. The show on Saturday Night at the Lark Tavern begins at 8:30 p.m.

Delaware Plaza welcomes paint store

Sherwin-Williams schedules open house for Saturday

By SHELLEY GEBHARDT

Delmar residents have a new option of places to go for home-improvement projects involving painting.

A new Sherwin-Williams opened May 1 at 180 Delaware Ave. in Delaware Plaza. Store manager Christina Thompson encouraged residents to stop in and said business began "better than we expected."

She said the store offers a one-on-one atmosphere that consumers cannot get at some of the bigger chains.

The plaza is glad to have the national chain in its offerings.

"[Sherwin-Williams] is very positive for the plaza in terms of bringing people in," said Debbie Battaglia, administrative manager of Delaware Plaza.

Walking through the plaza, it's easy to notice customers sporting Sherwin-Williams bags. Battaglia said many of the residents in Delmar like to support their local stores. Also, she said, "some people just like their brand of paint."

The new store is inviting homeowners to its grand opening this Saturday, June 17. Products in the store will be discounted and lunch will be catered. Thorason said prizes will be given away throughout the day.

According to a release from the company, Sherwin-Williams offers a "broad selection of easy-to-use, pre-coordinated color scheme cards that can help you choose the perfect palette of hues for your interior or exterior."

For information about Sherwin-Williams, visit the Web site at www.Sherwin-Williams.com. Store hours are Monday - Friday 7 a.m. to 7 p.m.; Saturday 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.; and Sunday 10 a.m. to 4 p.m.

Question: Should I name a trust as my IRA beneficiary?

Answer: Most people don't need to name trusts as their IRA beneficiaries. It's costly, cumbersome and there's no tax benefit that can be gained with a trust that cannot be gained without one! The only reason to name a trust as the beneficiary of your IRA is for personal (non-tax) reasons, such as restricting access to the build-up by beneficiaries who might be too young, mentally incompetent or prone to squandering it on a hot new Porsche or cool vacation. IRA trusts are complicated, so don't use one unless you know what you are doing and it's the only solution.

These and other complex questions can be made easy in the hands of a pro. Please call for an appointment.

By W.K. AARON

a lesson in life

What do you get when you combine two outstanding performers, flawless stage direction, a wonderful set, great lighting and a script that makes you laugh and cry? You get "Tuesdays with Morrie" currently being presented at Curtain Call Theatre in Latham.

"Tuesdays with Morrie" by Jeffery Hatcher and Mitch Albom is the retelling of Albom's book about his relationship with Morrie Schwartz, Albom's sociology professor at Brandeis University, and his reconnection with Schwartz 16 years after graduation after seeing a story on him on "Nightline." Schwartz is diagnosed with ALS, commonly referred to as Lou Gehrig's disease, which is debilitating and always fatal.

The play is a story of living and not dying ... that is perhaps the greatest message that emerges from the show. The story traces Schwartz's decline and eventual death. The story centers on life, however, focuses on the things Schwartz has to do while those around him tend to want to focus on the inevitable end.

Schwartz is Albom's life coach; we see how the 30-something sports reporter who appears to have the world on a string, truly is the one spinning out of control. The 78-year-old Schwartz helps him put life into perspective.

The production, deftly directed by Curtain Call's Artistic Director Steve Fletcher, is seamless. He pulls the most from his performers, making them walk a range of emotions without ever appearing unbelievable. Richard Lounello, Paul Richer is without exception one of the Capital District's greatest theatrical treasures. He consistently manages to inhabit his characters completely with a focus rarely seen on the local stage. Morrie is no exception. We are taken by the sheer magnitude of his performance, not only the physical manifestations of the illness, but the emotional journey his character endures.

Each character is on a journey and each journey has a different end. We watch Lounello reach his emotional peak in a riveting scene at Schwartz' bedside. The emotional catharsis of his character is complete. It is also the emotional peak for the audience. Richer brings his character to its peak when recalling the death of his mother. Together, the two performers present a near perfect evening in the theater.

Dee Mulford's set design works remarkably well on Curtain Call's limited stage. John Miller's lighting brings a warmth to the production that rounds it out.

"Tuesdays with Morrie" is an opportunity to see theater at its finest. The production runs Wednesday through Saturday evenings at 8, Sunday matinee at 2 p.m., now through July 1. For information, call the box office at 877-7529 or check the Web site at www.curtaincalltheatre.com.

CURTAIN CALL THEATRE

as Albom, works the gambit of emotions from A to Z with aplomb and ease. He takes the audience with him on the journey of self-discovery and growth that is as much a trip for the audience as the character.

Dolphins offer summer morning swim program

The Delmar Dolphins swim club is offering its annual summer morning program at the Elm Avenue Park pool.

Sessions run from 6:45 to 8:45 a.m. Mondays through Fridays, beginning June 26 and ending Aug. 4.

The program offers an opportunity for middle and high school swimmers to maintain their fitness levels and technique between scholastic seasons. It also gives college-age swimmers a chance to stay in shape and still have time for a summer job.

Bethlehem swim team alumni Josh Alfred and Chris Rooney will be coaching the program.

The summer morning swim program costs $160. There is an additional $32 insurance fee for those swimmers who have not joined USA Swimming.

For information, visit the Dolphins' Web site at www.delmardolphins.com or call 475-0441.

...ury to the end. And like Harrington, Van Heusen started a lot of young players, which bodes well for Scotia-Glenville's future.

• Best individual achievements:

Halley Quillinan, Bethlehem girls lacrosse — Every opponent tried to stop the Syracuse University-bound senior by double- and triple-teaming her, but Quillinan still led Section II in goals (97) and points (145) by a wide margin. Bethlehem may pride itself in a team-first philosophy, but without Quillinan, the Lady Eagles might have had a harder time winning their eighth consecutive Sectional title.

Brittany Dexter, Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake track — She capped one of the great track and field careers in school history by winning the state title in the high jump. Her school record of 5 feet, 8.5 inches may be tough to top.

Hunter Moffatt, Colonie baseball — The University at Albany-bound senior was a model of consistency all year on the pitcher's mound, winning virtually every start in helping the Garnet Raiders reach the state finals. Moffatt also showed the heart of a warrior during Sectionals in throwing 131 pitches in a complete-game victory over Guilderland in the quarterfinals and tossing nearly the same amount in a nine-inning performance against Shen in the finals.

Noah Fossner, Niskayuna boys lacrosse — After five years, you almost came to expect some great saves out of Fossner. But in a season when he didn't always have the offensive support he had become accustomed to, he provided a spark with his play between the pipes. Fossner may be the Martin Brodeur of area high school lacrosse goaltenders.

• Best team achievements:

Colonie and Schalmont baseball — Two long-time powers ended two long championship droughts to represent Section II in the state tournament. Colonie ultimately went further than any other area baseball team, but both the Garnet Raiders and Sabres should be recognized for getting out of a highly-competitive section. Shen also deserves recognition for reaching the class AA finals two years in a row.

Shen softball and Bethlehem girls lacrosse — They kept their dynasties going in the face of increased competition.

Bethlehem boys tennis — Once accustomed to winning Section II championships, the Eagles were the underdog against Guilderland in the class AA finals and came away with a hard-fought 6-3 victory. On top of that, the Eagles' two seniors — Robert Hoffman and Cory Gross — got an extra treat by qualifying for the state doubles tournament.

Schenectady Christian baseball — A team that has played at the varsity level for two seasons reaches the Sectional semifinals by knocking off top-seeded Germantown in the class D quarterfinals. That deserves a tip of the cap.

Finally, to all the senior athletes about to graduate, good luck in college. And to all the other athletes, see you in the fall.

to powerlifting. Naughton has assembled a team from his gym that goes out to regional and national tournaments sponsored by the Amateur American Powerlifting Federation — an organization that drug tests all of its competitors.

"We only enter drug-testing competitions," said Naughton. "With science, you can do better than you can with drugs. The science in strength training has come so far, you don't need drugs."

Like the gym itself, the team has a diverse age range from teens to senior citizens.

"I started training here for ice hockey, and he (Naughton) told me about the powerlifting team. So, I'm doing it during the off-season," said Feldman-Reich.

Ultimately, it's the satisfaction of lifting a little more each time that drives these powerlifters.

"I went somewhere else (to work out) for 18 years, and I'll never go back," said Cannizzaro. "I love it here."

"I'm just enjoying the ride and seeing where it takes me," said Feldman-Reich.

Jim Franco

Exceeding their goals*Powerlifters aim to beat their personal bests

By ROB JONAS

Say the word "powerlifter," and the image most people think of is a muscle-bound person in a tank top capable of lifting a small car with one hand.

Those people would be surprised to see who was competing at Saturday's in-house powerlifting tournament at Cutting Edge Sports and Science in Albany. Instead of people with biceps as big as car stereo speakers, there were young athletes, middle-aged adults and a 66-year-old man — all of whom looked like the average person next door.

Cutting Edge owner Dyke Naughton said that powerlifting isn't designed to build muscles. It's only purpose is to make people stronger.

"We don't make you look better, we don't make you look bigger," Naughton said. "We just make you faster and stronger."

The results can be pretty amazing. Burnt Hills resident Roz Warren dead-lifted 150 pounds at Saturday's competition, and he's only 10 years old. Albany resident Julia Cannizzaro, who joined Naughton's gym 16 months ago, lifted a personal record 185 pounds. Paul Burgess of Indian Lake, who only joined eight weeks ago, lifted more than 500 pounds.

"(The best part of powerlifting is) just the personal satisfaction of doing something no one else can do," said Burgess, who drives with his son nearly two hours one way once a week to work out at the converted warehouse off Central Avenue. "At 50 years of age, you're supposed to be going downhill, not uphill, and I feel pretty good about that."

"It's a lot of fun," added 15-year-old Claire Feldman-Reich of Albany. "You get a huge rush afterward because everything you accomplished is right there on paper."

There are three disciplines in powerlifting — squats, bench press and the deadlift. Squats require competitors to hold the barbell at shoulder length behind their backs as they bend at the knees and get back up. In the bench press, competitors push a barbell up from their chest while lying on their backs and hold it steady. In a deadlift, competitors pick the barbell up off the ground without bending their knees.

The goal is the same in all three disciplines — to lift more than your previous best.

"It's just a sport," said Naughton. "It's a very gratifying sport — 90 percent of the time, you're competing against yourself. But it's still just a sport."

"It helps in terms of motivation, as well as in terms of conditioning," said Kevin Warren, Roz's father and a fellow competitor at Saturday's tournament.

Beyond individual achievements, there can be a team aspect

Saluting the best of spring sports

By ROB JONAS

No more school, no more books, no more coaches' dirty looks.

It's time to reveal the best of the spring 2006 season (in no particular order):

• Toughest task — repeating as Section II champions.

Say what you will, but it's hard to win two Sectional championships in a row ... let alone what these teams accomplished:

Shenendehowa softball: The competition is always fierce in class AA because all the good teams seem to have a superstar pitcher. To be able to conquer the competition four consecutive years like the Plainswomen have done is quite an achievement.

Bethlehem girls lacrosse: Winning eight consecutive Sectional titles is doubly impressive, especially since Guilderland and Shen are catching up to the Lady Eagles in terms of talent.

Niskayuna boys lacrosse: The Silver Warriors graduated their entire starting attack from last year's class A championship team and repeated the feat on the strength of their defense.

• Best coaching performances:

Bob Anderson, Schalmont baseball — Anderson took a team that was 4-7 and turned it into Schalmont's first Sectional championship since 1978. Most teams that start like that don't wind up winning 11 out of their last 14 games like the Sabres did during their run to the class A title.

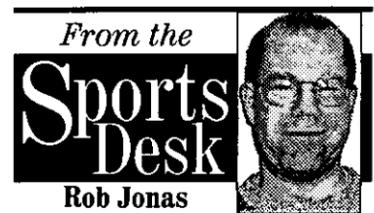

Jeanne Frevola, Shen girls lacrosse — After giving up five goals to Guilderland in the Sectional semifinals, it would have been easy for anybody to pack it in. But Frevola convinced her players that they could turn it around, and the Plainswomen responded by outscoring Guilderland 15-6 the rest of the way to advance to their first class A final in a decade.

Jeff Harrington, Saratoga softball — From nearly missing Sectionals to reaching the class AA final by beating Shaker and Big 10 champion Troy, it was a heck of a ride for a young Blue Streak squad. Somehow, Harrington pushed all the right buttons to make it happen.

Darren Van Heusen, Scotia-Glenville boys lacrosse — Injuries depleted an already small roster (by lacrosse standards), but the Tartans made the class B finals and battled top-seeded Queens-

The man-made pond and fountain at Kulak's is one example of landscaping trends.

Jennifer Farnsworth

By JENNIFER FARNSWORTH

If you're still looking for the perfect summer plant, you're in the right state. According to the New York State Agriculture Commissioner Patrick H. Brennan, there are over 800 commercial greenhouses and nurseries in the state. Brennan said that New York ranks fifth in the nation for floriculture production, generating $209 million last year.

John Kulak, of Kulak's Nursery in Rexford, says the key to good business is quality and service.

"We have a commitment to our customers to offer them a variety of products that are updated from year to year. People like to come and see fresh ideas, ideas that they can replicate at home," said Kulak.

Kulak's is about more than plants and flowers. The nursery has operated a landscaping business for over 20 years, which helped them establish a name before entering into the nursery business, now in its third season. Like many other nursery and garden centers, the industry has expanded and now offers 10 different types of mulch, stones, pottery, fountains and small trees. As many people look to do-it-yourself projects for their homes' interiors, they look to improve the exterior as well.

"The majority of our business is homeowners who live eight to 10 miles away, although we have had people come in from as far north as Lake George. We even had women from Connecticut buy a Christmas tree this past year," said Kulak.

Spring and summer is not the only time of the year you will find a crowd at places like Kulak's. Christmas time has also become a busy season where many nurseries sell a wide variety of fresh Christmas trees and wreaths. The gifts departments are filled with ornaments and seasonal gifts, which is just another "branch" of today's nursery.

"Christmas season has almost become as busy as summer," said Kulak. "People drive by and they see a crowd. People bring their whole family to pick out a tree. They see friends and neighbors and it is really a nice experience. We have Santa visit and serve hot chocolate, the customers love it."

At Price-Greenleaf, a longtime Delmar nursery where the fourth generation of family is now working, owner Jim Plummer said that although the business is by weather, they are still seeing many customers looking for that special something to plant this season.

"The business hits a lull when you have a week of straight rain, but as soon as the sun returns people get right back on track with their gardening," said Plummer.

One of the most requested items this year is the Knockout Rose, a form of shrub rose that is self-cleaning. Plummer says it reaches about 2-3 feet tall. He said the boxwood is making a comeback this year along with the dwarf Alberta plants which also get to be about 3-4 feet tall.

Another item growing in popularity is topiary plant art. Topiary, which is sculpted plants and hedges, originated in Williamsburg, Va. in the 1690s, according to "The Complete Book of Topiary," a book by Barbara Gallup and Deborah Reich. This year Kulak's has a variety of suns, moons, even a dog topiary.

Variety is really what seems to attract many gardeners. Karen Kulak, who works with her husband in the family business, said that patrons love to see new ideas and variety.

"If you have something in mind and we don't have it, we can get it for you. We always try to stay on top of what's out there and what people are looking for," says Kulak.

Both Plummer and Kulak stressed the importance of supporting local nurseries just as support is essential for local farmers. Plummer said that their nursery supports organizations like Little League, which helps remind people that the business is still there.

"Supporting New York's green industry does more than beautify your home or business; it generates economic activity on the local level and provides seasonal employment for thousands of New Yorkers," said Brennan. "Bring your family out to one of New York's many greenhouses and select your favorite foliage, and do your part in keeping New York green and gorgeous."

family-owned business, started 117 years ago, has changed to accommodate that type of clientele. Guernsey and Graves note that they offer personalized service such as delivery, designing, and installation for customers who prefer that the professionals be in charge of creating their beautiful home landscape.

Customers walking into Guernsey's establishment notice right away that he offers something different than what they would find at a large retail store. He said all of his products are in beds, as they grow their own flowers, plants, and shrubs. Guernsey noted that independent nurseries have been the people behind the growing business of horticulture. The things that set them apart from bigger retail chains is "service, quality and availability," said Guernsey.

"I offer individualism. I take time with people," he said. "I don't have one kind of maple tree. I've got five. There are different sizes and shapes and about 1,000 varieties. You get the unusuals."

While Graves said they don't grow their own plants, the owners do "spend the winter going to seed places and asking growers to do contract growing." She said that is how their nursery is able to offer items that are different and unique to the area.

As for big box? Well, Guernsey admitted that the local, independent nurseries and greenhouses are affected by their presence. He said he spends a great deal of money on various forms of advertising to get people to come by the nursery. Guernsey said customers should expect prices to be a bit higher than they might generally see at the big box stores.

"Prices are higher because the quality and material is better," he said. Along with the increased variety, local growers tend to roadside presence," said Graves of Faddegon's. Most of their advertising budget is spent on an existing mailing list for preferred customers. With the list topping out at about 11,000 names, Graves said the mailings provide an opportunity to make customers aware of new products and technology as well as to encourage them to return to the store.

"We try to reward the customers we have," she said. "We depend on repeat customers. We can't compete with the big boxes. We don't even try. If we tried to do that, we couldn't stay in business."

Guernsey acknowledged that Mother Nature is his No. 1 competitor but did state that local nurseries and greenhouses need to be supported.

"Help support local farmers, we are a dying breed," he said.

"We're all very time poor, so we bring in varieties that are easy to grow and suggest plants people will be successful with."

have more product that is greater in size. Staff members at independently owned greenhouses and nurseries are assigned watering tasks or moving plants to bigger pots if they are not being grown in beds.

"We are very fortunate because we have a very large
