Porco jury: four questions

Judge expects trial to begin this week

By JIM CUOZZO

Jury selection began Monday in the Christopher Porco murder trial in Orange County Supreme Court in Goshen. Porco is accused of killing his father and severely wounding his mother with an ax inside their Brockley Drive home in Delmar in 2004.

The trial was moved from Albany to Orange County last week by a state Appellate Court in Brooklyn because of the intense media surrounding the case, and the problems it could pose in picking a jury in Albany County.

"It has been an inconvenience," said Michael McDermott, assistant Albany County district attorney and chief prosecutor in the case. "Everybody working on the trial has been in Goshen since last Wednesday."

Judge Jeffrey Berry scheduled three different rounds of jury pre-screening over a two-day period. The first 80 prospective jurors walked into the courtroom around 10:45 a.m. only to be followed minutes later with close to half the 80-member jury pool

Record turn yields school budget OK

By JIM CUOZZO

It took an additional 34 days, $802,000 in cuts, and one 'no' vote, but the Bethlehem Central school district budget was approved the second time around in a record turnout of over 5,800 voters.

"It's good, good," said Richard Svenson, school board president, of the June 20 re-vote. "The voters have spoken, what a turnout."

The margin of victory was more than 1,000 votes, with 3,473 yes votes and 2,415 no votes.

Overall that's a 1,700 vote swing from when the budget was first defeated on May 16 by more than 600 votes. May's budget defeat was the first school budget to go down in over 20 years.

"I'm thrilled it passed and we don't have to go to contingency," said board member Robin Storey.

Voters streamed to the polls all day long, with 40 people waiting outside the Bethlehem Middle School before the polls opened at 7 a.m. At 9 p.m., when the polls closed, people were still running to the election machines in the middle school gym to make sure

Lambert cleared of rape

By JIM CUOZZO

An Albany County jury decided that 18-year-old German Lambert Jr. was not guilty of raping a Bethlehem Central High School student at her family's Glenmont home last fall.

A two-day trial preceded a two-hour deliberation by the jury on Friday, June 23.

Lambert was accused by Bethlehem Police and the Albany County District Attorney's office of two separate acts of sexual misconduct on Bethlehem High School property along with an additional charge of raping a 16-year-old girl at her family's home on Oct. 13, 2005.

Lambert moved to the area from Houston last fall to live with his Aunt prior to the incidents. He was represented in court by attorney Lee Greenstein. In court proceedings, one girl said that Lambert forced sex on her after a sleepover but according to defense attorneys the girl's testimony was not consistent. The girl was a friend of Lambert's prior to the incident.

At the time of Lambert's arrest his older brother Glen Lambert, said the girls consented to have sex with his brother. "They threw my brother in jail, and there is no evidence," said Glen Lambert to The Spotlight when contacted last fall. Police officers and classmates also testified during the trial. If Lambert was found guilty

The Empire State could become a leader in wind power

By JIM FRANCO

Wind-generated electricity is pollution free, wind is plentiful in the right spots, and since it is produced locally, wind is not subject to world events that lead to spikes in prices like a barrel of crude oil shipped in from the Middle East.

Recent technological advances, like better equipment to find sites with enough wind for wind farms to be efficient and enhancements to the wind turbines themselves, have made wind the fastest growing

New York is home to the largest wind farm east of the Mississippi River. The Maple Ridge Wind Farm on the Tug Hill Plateau in Lowville, about 30 miles north of Rome, will eventually have 186 wind turbines that will produce enough juice to provide electricity to more than 60,000 homes a year.

But, New York lags behind states like Texas and California, which produce the most megawatts of electricity from wind turbines in the county, said Chris Mason, an education director for the Northeast Sustainable Energy Association, based in Greenfield, Mass.

While finding a spot where wind blows at the necessary near constant 7-12 mph is easy, often times selling a wind farm alternative to fossil fuels in the world.

"A lot of people underestimate the value of the benefits," said Marion Trieste, a consultant for the Alliance for Clean Energy New York, a nonprofit consortium of environmentalists, private business and public health advocates that promotes alternative sources of energy. "It is an energy resource produced in New York state and something that will be a substantially useful part of the (energy) mix."

to prospective neighbors is not. Many think dozens of wind turbines, which can stand 320 feet tall, are ugly, dangerous and will decrease their property values.

For example, while most environmentalists, public officials and health advocates favor a proposal to build a 10-turbine wind farm near Gore Mountain in the Adirondack Mountains, there is opposition from some, like the Adirondack Council, that fear it will open the door to more wind

Albany police officer charged with DWI in off-duty crash

Two area police officers were involved in a two car personal injury motor vehicle accident in Slingerlands resulting in the arrest of one officer for DWI.

According to Bethlehem police the accident occurred near Bridge Street in Slingerlands, early Thursday morning, June 22, and neither officer was on duty at the time of the accident.

Sgt. Vincent Foley of Voorheesville was traveling west on New Scotland Road when he crossed over the double yellow center lane into oncoming traffic with his 1996 Chevrolet, police said. Foley struck a 1991 Acura driven by 35-year-old Daniel Micare of Albany. Foley is an Albany Police officer and Micare is a police officer with the Rensselaer Police Department. Foley was taken to Albany Medical Center after the Slingerlands Fire Department extricated Foley from his vehicle. He was treated for minor injuries to his face and leg and was released. Micare was not injured during the crash.

An investigation by police revealed that Foley was intoxicated at the time of the crash and was charged with DWI. Albany Police Chief James Tuffey immediately suspended Foley without pay for 30 days following the accident. An internal investigation has begun by Albany City Police. The investigation into the accident continues by Bethlehem Police.

Bethlehem Police charge woman with DWI

Cassandra Lee Barber, 20, of 1565 New Scotland Road, Apartment 1A, Slingerlands was charged by Bethlehem Police with DWI, and felony aggravated unlicensed motor vehicle operation.

Barber was driving on WaldenMaier Road, in Delmar Sunday, June 25, when she was observed crossing the solid double line and braking erratically, according to a Bethlehem police officer. She will appear in Town Court on July 12 to answer the charges. Barber was also charged with driving with more than .08 percent blood alcohol content.

PBC school honored

The Pieter B. Coeymans Elementary School has been designated a high performing/gap closing school by the New York State Educational Department.

The award recognizes the fact that the school met all applicable state standards for English language arts and math during the 2004-05 school year and made "adequate yearly progress", the state stated.

Specifically, Principal Elisabeth Smith said, the award recognizes the improvements on those assessments shown by students with disabilities, students from low-income families and minority students.

"We are extremely proud of the work of our students, faculty and staff at Pieter B. Coeymans," said school Superintendent Vicki Wright.

Smith said the entire RCS School District has launched many initiatives that improve the performance of students.

Among those are:

- The teaching of phonics
- Writing workshops for the faculty that translated to improved teaching of writing skills in the classroom.

Delmar resident named national Big Sister of Year

Pair says relationship will last forever

By JIM CUOZZO

Delmar resident Betsy Gorman-Bernardi has been named the national Big Sister of the Year. Bernardi was selected from among 470 Big Brothers Big Sister agencies across the country for her eight-year friendship with LaMecca Butler, a 17-year-old honor student from Albany High School.

Bernardi is also the first Capital District resident chosen in the history of the organization.

"God put her in my life," said Butler, speaking about Bernardi. "My adolescence was a rough, rocky road, but she always stuck by my side."

South End, and she said growing up there has been anything but easy.

"She helped me choose and stay on the right path," LaMecca said of her mentor.

Bernardi said she remembers the first time she met LaMecca when she was 9 years old.

"She was wearing lime green overalls and pink sneakers with matching ribbons in her perfectly parted ponytails," Bernardi said. "I was smitten."

County Executive Michael Breslin remembers Bernardi when he met her at St. Ann's Institute, where she is employed.

"Betsy enjoys life and shares it with others," said Breslin. "We need hundreds more of you so we can reach more and more kids."

Becoming a Big Sister is a remarkable experience she never expected, Bernardi said.

"It has taught me forgiveness and faith, and has taught me to see this world as one big village," Bernsradi said.

A press gathering with many Albany school officials in attendance was held at Albany High School's College Center to honor Bernardi's achievement.

"You honor us all with your work, and I congratulate you on behalf of the Capital Region, who should surely be proud," said Eva Joseph, superintendent of Albany City Schools. Joseph remarked that Butler is a school leader who excels in track and is currently an honor student.

"She is an asset to the Albany High School community," said Joseph.

Both Gorman-Bernardi and LaMecca will be honored at the Big Brothers Big Sisters of America gala in Indianapolis this Thursday, June 29.

Both Bernardi and Butler agree they will stay friends forever. "Of course," said Butler. "She's like my real sister."

Board considers skate park

Two residents have found used equipment from Westchester town

By JIM CUOZZO

Two town of Bethlehem residents presented a petition to the town board signed by over 300 people requesting a skateboard park for kids.

Robert Salamone, a physical education teacher at the middle school, and Donna Berger believe they can acquire the necessary funds to purchase a disassembled skateboard park currently up for sale in Croton-on-Hudson in Westchester County.

"It's more and more a legitimate sport, and its popularity continues to grow," said Berger. "We have a great opportunity to allow kids to skate in one place and to keep them there safely."

The parts, according to Salamone, are worth much more than the asking price.

"They spent $60,000 on their park, but they want to get rid of it, and they listed it at $7,000," Salamone said.

Salamone and Berger would like to see the Bethlehem chamber of commerce, several church groups, parents and other community leaders to get together to purchase the park and build it. It would then be up to the town to maintain the skateboard park and staff it.

"I am against this because of the anticipated costs," said resident and former town supervisor candidate Robert Jasinski. "Why is somebody selling this, are they trying to get rid of it?"

The location of the potential skateboard park is another issue. Some residents would like to see it close to town hall on Delaware Avenue.

"It would be very difficult to place it here," said Supervisor Theresa Egan. "I want to quell that rumor."

Egan said cost is her other main concern.

"Before we take on any new financial commitments, it would have to be scrutinized," Egan said. "At this point, it's very premature to make any decision."

Board member Kyle Kotary said he is open to the possibility of the town having a skateboard park.

"We are willing to look at it to see the potential," Kotary said.

"I think we have the opportunity to do something important here," said board member Tim Gordon. "It just has to make sense."

Church leaders and others in the community have been asking for the town to step in to limit the amount of skateboarding kids do on church property and other private property at all hours of the day and night.

"We need to find out what experiences other communities have had with a skateboard park so we can learn by that and are guided by that," said board member Sam Messina.

Egan said another concern is whether or not the kids will show up to use the park once the effort is made to have one.

"Part of the culture is being where you're not supposed to be when skateboarding," Egan said. "If we build it, will the kids even come?"

Egan said more time is needed to research the issue with Nan Lanahan, town recreation administrator. Scott Johnson of The Shelter, an indoor skateboard park in Albany will also be contacted for input.

State gives Bethlehem Central good grades

Graduation rate is 92 percent

By JIM CUOZZO

Testing scores in English, math and science at Bethlehem Central School District continue to exceed state and federal standards.

A district report card issued by the State Education Department shows that Bethlehem has made adequate yearly progress on all exams and among all subgroups, and is designated a District in Good Standing.

"There is an awful lot more that goes on here than that report card, but we are very proud of our scores and our high graduation rates," said Assistant Superintendent Michael Tebbano. "Kids come here very well prepared."

Bethlehem schools, in the years 2004-2005, attained a 92 percent graduation rate and a .03 percent overall dropout rate. Bethlehem's graduation rate is quite a bit higher than the statewide rate of 64 percent. In fact, the state average is a concern currently being addressed.

"The Board of Regents are considering new reforms to improve high school graduation rates," said Richard Mills, commissioner of the state Department of Education.

Ninety-four percent of the graduating students in Bethlehem received Regents diplomas, with 61 percent receiving advanced Regents diplomas. Scores in English, math and science were also high, with 95 percent of all graduating students passing English Regents and 93 percent passing high school math. Within that score, 55 percent of high school math students received scores between 85 and 100.

"This is a very strong score," Tebbano said. "We tied for first in the Suburban Council with these scores. Bethlehem's School District is considered one of the top academic schools in the Capital District, but actual rankings are not a high priority."

"The state Education Department doesn't want to view it that way," said Tebbano, "and we don't look to rank one better or another. We do have a very strong educational program."

The only testing scores that consistently level off in the district tend to be around the time students enter eighth grade.

"Middle school tends to be a problem in different levels in different areas of the state," Tebbano said.

School attendance will be a fourth indicator on future scoring standards set by the government, and poor attendance in many school districts is now being directly linked to poor graduation rates in several school districts.

"As attendance falls below 92 percent, graduation rates decline significantly," said Mills.

"When attendance reaches 88 percent, graduation rates plummet," Mills wrote in a released statement on state report card scores.

In Bethlehem, both attendance and scoring is strong and Tebbano credits the combination of an outstanding faculty and parents who strive for a quality education as key factors.

"This report demonstrates our commitment to quality educational programs being strong in this district," Tebbano said.

The library beckons with its endless possibilities

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR

Commentary:

From
Robin's Nest

The automatic doors slid apart. My husband, daughter and I walked into the building and then scattered in different directions. Jeff went to the DVD section, Rachel went to find a chapter book, and I scanned the shelves of adult fiction. Later we reunited at the circulation desk.

"You know that happy feeling you get when you walk through Home Depot?" I asked my husband. "All the tools, lumber, parts, and endless possibilities? Well, that's the way I feel when I'm in the library."

I love the library. Sometimes I feel like I missed my calling. When I was applying to college I didn't even realize there was a major called library sciences. I guess I never considered the background of librarians. How ignorant to assume that all it takes is a love of books to become a librarian!

A career that involves spending every day in the library sounds mighty enticing. And then I consider the less glamorous side: Librarians work evenings and weekends, and they spend a lot of time on their feet. Also, librarians help library patrons; they don't get to sit around all day reading books. Ah, so much for the career change.

Youth-services librarians are my heroes. These individuals encourage children to love reading. They develop and host a variety of programs, so that beginning in the pre-school years and continuing through the teens, children will continue to be exposed to the library's many resources.

Each month I eagerly await Footnotes, the newsletter from the Bethlehem Public Library. For years I've been looking forward to participating in our library's Mother-Daughter Book Club with my daughter.

Like me, Rachel is an avid reader, often pleading, "but I'm in the middle of a chapter," when asked to set the table or get ready for bed or clean her room or just about any other request.

Alas, the book club meetings held this past year have been restricted to "fifth grade and up." In the past the restriction was "fourth grade and up," but once Rachel reached fourth grade, they upped the grade level. The librarians assured me this is based on the particular book selections, and not a conspiracy to keep my family from participating. (I'll reserve judgment until fall, when my daughter will be a fifth grader. If the club is then restricted to "sixth grade and up," I'll know something's awry.)

Rachel became interested in the book club concept when I joined an adult group that was co-founded by one of my friends from graduate school.

The original plan was for members to take turns hosting an evening of drinks, desserts and discussion on the first Tuesday of each month, beginning at 8 p.m. There were about eight members at that time.

Soon the gathering was moved up to 7 p.m. and the format turned into a dinner party. With members spread throughout Albany, Rensselaer, and Saratoga counties, it was tricky for everyone to get home, get dinner and make it to book club on time. Incorporating dinner into the meeting solved this dilemma.

At one point, the group mushroomed to 17 members. At the first dinner meeting I attended, the host served an extremely delicious homemade meal, including tossed salad, chicken marsala, and a tortellini dish. We ate on pewter plates.

Feeling unable to compete, I put off hosting as long as possible. I simply wasn't up for throwing a dinner party mid-week subsided and I took a turn. I ordered in a tray of eggplant parmesan, made a tossed salad and garlic bread, and cooked a pot of pasta. Dessert was store-bought cookies. The plates were disposable.

Some folks think book clubs are too much work, that they take the pleasure out of reading. I suppose this could happen if you don't enjoy any of the books or the company. Some people also don't like the pressure of having to read a book within a prescribed time frame. For them it's like going back to school. For me, the deadline of an approaching club meeting ensures that I reserve time for my favorite leisure activity: reading.

What I especially like about my book club is that the members of the group have different viewpoints. Although there are instances where a book evokes a similar overall response from most members, often there are individuals with unique interpretations. Sometimes within the group one person may absolutely love a book while someone else may comment, "I just couldn't get into it at all."

Everyone is encouraged to bring suggestions for what the group should read. I solicit ideas from friends who are in other book clubs. Others check out The New York Times' best seller list. After four or five selections are presented to the group, the voting begins.

Voting works like this: The first time around you can vote for as many choices as you want. Eventually the choices are narrowed down and you must cast a vote for a single book.

Quarterly, the group reads nonfiction books and classic novels. All four selections are made in November. This gives members extra time to obtain and read the books, which tend to be longer and sometimes more difficult reads.

I know it sounds complicated, but really it's not. The group is fairly informal; members are welcome to attend even if they haven't finished (or even opened) the book. Often, discussion about the book concludes while we're consuming hors d'oeuvres. That leaves dinner and dessert time to catch up on each other's lives and also to pick the book selection for the following month.

Through my book club, I have read and enjoyed books that likely wouldn't have otherwise come to my attention or that I would have ignored based on an aversion to the topic or writing style. Among my favorites are The Red Tent by Anita Diamant and Wicked by Gregory Maguire. I have read not only the group's official selections, but also many of the runner-up books.

I generally vote for books that are available at the library. I love books, but I'm not one for re-reading them. With my house bursting with clutter, I don't want discarded books gathering dust. And quite frankly, I don't want to buy a book if I don't like it.

This leads me back to my favorite place: the library. For when I go to pick up my book club selection, I can also browse through the DVDs for a family-night movie, or research the parent-teacher shelves for parenting tips, or even just plop down in the periodicals section and flip through a magazine. Or I can open my spiral-bound notebook and plant the seeds for my own story. Ah, the endless possibilities.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

There are other ways

The current Scotia village board and Mayor Michael McLaughlin seem to have turned a deaf ear to groups and residents opposed to killing almost 200 Canadian geese in Collins Park.

One of the most prominent objectors at a recent meeting was state wildlife pathologist and hunter Ward Stone who said, among other things, gassing the geese would serve as a poor example to children. Getting rid of something that is perceived by some as a nuisance is not the kind of message kids should hear from their elders.

Editorial

We wonder whether the mayor and board members will be at the park to oversee the killing set sometime in the next week or two.

We think the mayor and the board tried to assuage the anger of some who object to the goose gassing by saying the breast meat of the animals will be donated to local food pantries and shelters. The fact that Canadian geese are so prolific indicates that their meat is not in any great demand. Perhaps the livers from the gassed geese could be marketed to the more financially secure folk in the form of foie gras.

Donating the meat to anyone, however, isn't the issue.

No one is sure that killing the geese will serve any purpose. Some "experts" claim that the goose population at Collins Park will not change as more geese will come to the lake when the others are long gone and digested by the unsuspecting homeless people or the foie gras types.

Essentially, killing these geese without knowing whether or not they are a real health hazard and whether the outcome will make any significant changes in the park does not make sense.

We believe the mayor and the board should really listen and be big enough to admit that they could be wrong in pursuing this course of action.

We hope that reason prevails in this situation that has somehow grown way out of proportion. We think elected officials should be more flexible than they have been. Compromise is sometimes necessary especially in political matters.

Given the brouhaha that has erupted after the decision to kill the geese was announced and the uncertainty of the outcome of destroying 200 or so of the animals, why not do what is reasonable and find another "solution?"

You can never be too careful when dealing with computer security. Here's a quick Q&A to with some reminders — or new tips — about computer safety.

Q: Is there really anything to be concerned about using e-mail and the Internet?

A: Sitting in your home you might be physically safe, but if you are surfing on the Internet without the proper protection, you are looking for trouble. You could be prone to viruses, worms, spyware, bots, phishing, pornography, identity theft, Trojans, and spoofed sites.

Q: How do you get a virus?

A: Viruses can tag along with music, movies or other programs which are downloaded.

The writers of viruses can be very devious. Sometimes e-mail messages are used to lure a person to open what may seem to be an innocent photo, but hiding inside is a virus. Other times they take advantage of a flaw in software, which allows the virus to be run.

Q: Why are viruses so dangerous?

A: A computer infected with a virus can have disastrous results, ranging from sending out messages to stealing information. E-mail or your computer can come to a grinding halt. Businesses or ISP's scanning for viruses may reject your e-mail if your computer is infected. The virus could be used to attack other computers or Web sites, putting the blame on you. Viruses can delete or make data on your computer unreadable. A virus could also send out an embarrassing e-mail in your name to everyone in your e-mail list.

Q: What is a Trojan horse?

A: Trojan horses typically contain software with the ability to allow a hacker or criminal to take control of your computer. Trojans can record keystrokes. You could be accessing your bank account or pay online service and your user name and password could capture everything you type, then send it to a third party. If you have an Internet camera attached to your computer, someone could turn the camera on when you least expect it, save the images, and send them to someone, or turn your system into a streaming Web site. Viruses can contain Trojans and Trojans can contain viruses.

Q: What is a worm?

A: A worm works like a virus, but does not need another program to run as it has the ability to recreate or clone itself.

Q: What can be done to protect against viruses?

A: Install a high quality anti-virus program and keep it up to date. Many of the programs today do this for you automatically if you have a broadband connection. Be careful about reading e-mails. Don't open any attachment unless you are absolutely sure it is safe, or you are willing to gamble your data on it.

Q: What if I get a virus?

A: Unplug your computer from the Internet, then call a professional.

Q: What makes my computer slow down?

A: The most likely suspect is spyware, software which allows companies to collect information about your browsing habits. That software on your computer puts a burden on the processor and memory of a computer, and slows it down. Spyware does not have the ability to spread to other computers, but it can create a major headache for computer users. Some symptoms of spyware are pop-up windows appearing, new browser windows opening on their own, your home page changing, and being redirected to a different site when you type in an address.

Q: How can I protect myself?

A: Don't go to pornography or gambling Web sites as they are typically very bad for spyware. Don't download anything. Check out programs designed to protect you against Spyware, and high security settings for your computer.

Q: What are cookies?

A: A cookie is a small piece of data stored on your computer, which allows others to get some information about you, but are not a threat to the information on your computer. You can turn cookies off, but they also have a beneficial value as they allow Web sites to keep your preferences available to you.

Q: Are dial-up users safe from spyware?

A: No. In fact dial-up users are susceptible to having their computers dial pay-for-services.

Q: How do I protect children from predators on the Internet?

A: The No. 1 proactive measure is to have the computer in a central area of your home, like the kitchen or family room. While it is very possible for a child to view inappropriate material on TV, the program cannot reach out and do harm to your child. People on the Internet can and do. Your children may push back, but this is one of the safest methods to help protect them.

Q: What is spam? How do I deal with it?

A: Free limited time offer, Fw: FYI, Look rich, Re Account #2344234, Your loan has been approved, are just some of the spam recently seen. It's been estimated that half of all e-mail is spam. spam does not have the ability to destroy data, but many spammers use the computers taken over by viruses or Trojans to send spam, bringing the computer down to a crawl. Just like too many cars on the highway at the same time, too much spam takes up bandwidth. To avoid spam, you can set junk and/or adult filters in your e-mail software. You can also create rules, which delete or re-route Spam to your deleted items folder based on certain words in the spam. Additional software is also available to help alleviate spam. Never reply to Spam, click unsubscribe, or click any link in spam. Turn off the preview pane in your e-mail program. If it's Re: and you didn't send it, it's spam. Use common sense. If it looks like spam and smells like spam, it's spam.

Q: What is a hoax?

A: Subject: Notice from National Internet Security Defense Department. We have detected a virus on your computer and below provide you with the necessary steps to remove it. Please follow these directions at once as the virus will destroy data 23 hours after the computer has been infected. Search your computer for the following file and once found, permanently delete it. If someone had taken the above steps, they would have deleted a file which was necessary for their computer to run, rendering their computer dead in the water.

Q: What are some other types of hoaxes?

A: You receive a message from Citibank indicating there has been a lot of activity on your account and you need to verify certain information. Another hoax was an e-mail being distributed stating Microsoft was conducting a test and if you sent the e-mail to a certain number of people, Microsoft would send you a check. They were supposedly doing this to help them with marketing — something Microsoft hardly needs anyone to assist with marketing. Use common sense to detect a hoax. If someone called you on the phone and said check your car for wires coming from the engine, which could cause fires and you should cut them. Would you?

Use common sense and keep yourself safe online.

Maligning Arduini is despicable

Editor, The Spotlight:

As the wife of the late Detective Anthony Arduini, I predicted in my May 31st letter to the editor; there would be those who would use a tragic death to advance the opportunities of others.

There have been despicable comments made about my husband. An attempt has been made to destroy my husband's reputation, and put into question his integrity and honesty by suggesting he participated in an action that is not only illegal, but goes against the core values by which he set the standards for his own life and the lives of his children. In addition, defamatory remarks have been made about my children.

If Tony were here, he would rise above the misleading comments about himself and say to me — as he did with all issues in life — that when the day is done and the next morning comes, you still have to be able to look yourself in the mirror.

The difference? My husband's not here, and I have no intention of giving a free pass to such vehement lies. To suggest that my husband would do something so culpable as to fabricate evidence against anyone, including Christopher Porco, is a sad attempt at bolstering a defense case by using a dead man rather than solid evidence.

Shame on Porco as well for treating friends so reprehensibly. My kids grew up with Christopher and have some very fond memories of happy times they shared together. They were friends and certainly not boyfriend/girlfriend. The only difference between my children and the this group of teenagers is the fact that those kids don't have a Bethlehem Police detective for a dad or a convenient target.

The fabrications have hurt my family immensely. As we attempt to make sense of the tragic loss of a father and husband, as well as the loss of "Uncle" John (Cox), we are grateful for all the calls and letters from our community as well as all the clergy, doctors, lawyers, bail bondsmen and other professionals whose lives my husband touched and left only a memory of honesty and fairness.

I am confident in the honesty of the Bethlehem police department, with which my husband so proudly served for 31 years. I am also confident that after the Albany County District Attorney's Office presents its case, all the distractions created by the defense counsel will not affect the outcome of this trial.

Know dangers of underage drinking

Editor, The Spotlight:

We feel that not enough teens know about the dangers of underage drinking. As an advocacy project for our eighth grade health class, we are trying to increase awareness about the dangers of underage drinking.

The 2003 Youth Risk Behavior Survey said 45 percent of teens in ninth to 12th grade have consumed alcohol in the past 30 days. It can be very harmful for teens by causing alcohol poisoning, liver failure, stomach ulcers, heart disease, and that's just a part of the list.

Underage drinking can lead to fights in school, poor grades, crime and unprotected sex.

We want to discourage teens from drinking alcohol before they even start. Teens need to think about the consequences.

Kudos to most dedicated policeman

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am a lawyer in private practice and have lived in Delmar for 22 years. In that time, I have been to Town Court on numerous occasions and got to know Toni Arduini.

There is a natural tension between a lawyer, defending a client and a police officer who made the arrest. Tony never let that interfere with his good judgment and on more than one night he went along with a more lenient disposition so that a young person could have a second chance.

He took pride in following the young person along, and over time would exchange updates on the good results he fostered as boys in trouble turned into men with a future.

As our children went through Bethlehem Central High School, I was glad to see Tony at games and dances — I knew he would keep a lid on things but would still allow a good time to be had.

Tony had the touch. As a lawyer, I will miss his willingness to listen and adjust. As a parent, I will miss his presence.

As a citizen, I will miss the most dedicated policeman I ever knew.

Athlete of the Year is grateful for support

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am writing to publicly thank the Sports Foundation of the Capital Region and its many sponsors for naming me 2006 Female Scholar Athlete of the Year.

There were over 150 equally deserving nominees present at the 2006 Scholar Athlete of the Year. It was a very exciting and unexpected moment in my life, and I am honored to accept this award.

I have many people to thank at Bethlehem Central High School:

Principal Abba, Athletic Director DeMeo, Coach Elmendorf, Mr. Villa, and my great teachers, close friends and teammates at Bethlehem. There are many student-athletes at BCHS that are equally deserving of this award, including our male nominee, Steve Hannigan, and I am proud to indirectly represent all of their accomplishments as well.

I would also like to thank the many coaches I have had over the years, my elite-ball sponsors, and especially my travel coaches at the Adirondack Magic. The last four years with the Magic has been a great experience and I have been lucky enough to be a teammate of many of our area's best softball players. In addition, I would like to thank Kevin Smith and Mike Serbalik from All-Star's Academy who have been my hitting instructors for the last decade. Your collective efforts have helped me become a better athlete. Thanks.

Finally, I would like to say thanks to my closest friends, Emily and Liz, and especially to my family, my sister Mary Beth, my brother Matt, my mom and dad. With your love and support anything is possible.

Towns need to utilize fuel saving measures

Editor, The Spotlight:

Every morning we wake up, put on a pot of coffee, let the dog out, and tune into the news just to learn gas prices are bouncing up and down. Remind you of Groundhog Day? I'm sure it does.

And, day in and day out, we are reminded of how we can save at the pump by practicing gas saving tips such as driving responsibly, keeping our tires properly inflated, and staying on top of vehicle maintenance.

These are all great reminders, and those who are serious about saving money at the pump will heed these tips. However, there's more opportunity for motorists to conserve fuel, but only with the help of local townships. For example, traffic signal improvements (such as optimizing signal timing) rank as one of the most cost-effective energy conservation strategies in populated areas.

A car engine idling at an untimely red light — such as the light at Sand Creek Middle School on Sand Creek Road in Colonie, that operates even when the school is closed — not only wastes fuel, but it also emits pollutants into the air. In contrast to many other roadway improvements, traffic signal improvements generally involve minimal traffic disruption, relatively low costs, and little downside risk. The Federal Highway Administration estimates that the benefit-to-cost ratio of traffic signal timing optimization projects 40 to 1.

That is, for every $1 invested in optimizing the timing of traffic signals, $40 is returned to the public in time and fuel savings. How can we see that fuel-saving traffic improvements such as these are implemented in our hometowns?

Are townships currently in the process of addressing these opportunities?

Get exercise every day

Editor, The Spotlight:

Did you know that lack of physical activity could lead to the No. 1 killer in America — heart disease?

To prevent this, everyone needs to get at least one full hour of moderate to vigorous physical activity every day.

This can be anything from running to mopping the floor or cleaning the house.

Physical activity can strengthen the immune system and make you feel more energetic. It can even strengthen your bones and raise life expectancy.

Keep yourself healthy and happy by getting your exercise every day.

Fire district needs info

Editor, The Spotlight:

The Selkirk Fire District needs help from the residents in our district. We are trying to locate properties that have long driveways (800 feet or longer). The reason for this is that our fire trucks carry 1,000 feet of large water supply hose.

When we arrive at a structure fire, a water supply has to be set up. If the driveway is long, the truck drops the end of the large hose at the end of the driveway by the road, then proceeds up the driveway toward the building. By knowing the driveway is longer than the hose, we drop the end of the hose farther down the driveway, where the next truck will hook into the hose. Helping the fire company will speed up the water supply needed to put out the fire, which will reduce the time to extinguish the fire and reduce damage.

Send us a note or e-mail us your name, address and your phone number.

Fire personnel will make contact with you, and we will come out and measure the driveway.

Bethlehem's second budget passes, prompting reaction from school board president Richard Svenson, bottom right.

Jim Cuozzo

Charm

their vote counted. There were parents with their children in baseball uniforms, others on bikes, and some people even brought their dogs with them right into the election booth. Hundreds of people came in to vote in the last hour.

"A great big thanks goes out for supporting children and the future of the district," Svenson said. "This will give the board confidence in our future decision making."

The record turnout combined with difficult cuts the board made after the initial budget defeat were keys to the approval the second time around, according to Superintendent Les Loomis.

"This community really stepped up for its children," said Loomis.

Another key factor of the overwhelming majority of yes votes was the Parent-Teacher Associations that stepped up to support the district by calling neighbors, circulating fliers and holding a public march and rally prior to the vote to support the school budget.

The new and approved spending plan totals $72.5 million, down from $73.3 million and holds a 3.75 percent tax increase, down from the original 5.25 percent increase.

"It's a total turnaround," said board member Stuart Lyman. "Now the focus is back to board of education point of view," Lyman said.

Several hardships will need to be endured for at least a year with the new school budget. Funds for varsity hockey, gymnastics and cheerleading were taken out of the new budget and will be self-funded by sports booster clubs in the new school year

RCS voters approve budget

Second vote passes by 70

Voters approved a $39.1 million Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk School District budget with $183,000 of reductions the second time around by a vote of 955-885.

The budget cut overtime spending for maintenance and custodians along with reducing the custodial staff.

"This is a joyous day," said Superintendent Vickie Wright in a written press statement from the district. "I want to thank the residents of this community for their support of the district."

The new approved district budget still raises taxes 7.2 percent, down 1 percent from the initial proposal. The budget keeps after-school clubs, maintains athletic programs and restores funding for the majority of field trips.

"It gives us great pleasure to be able to continue to present quality educational programs. We thank the public for their support and their recognition of the importance of a quality educational system," said board president John Bonafide.

The impact on tax rates is expected to be determined in August when all information is available from the district's four towns. The first district budget went down to defeat in May by a vote of 917-888. The approved budget will also maintain a full schedule of band and chorus concerts, and keeps the positions of aquatics director and health office aide.

There was more good news for Wright this past week. The board of education extended her five-year contract for one more year. Her new contract runs through

"Ms. Wright has brought positive leadership, change and vision to our district," said board member Sandra Marston. Wright's new contract calls for a 5 percent increase for the next school year and additional bonus performance incentives for the following years. Her current salary is $128,927.

"We are fortunate and thankful to have a superintendent willing and able to devote the attention, energy, enthusiasm and effort to our students, district and community," added Bonafide.

In other district news, board member Mike Robbins announced his resignation due to time constraints effective June 30. Clifford Nooney, who received the fifth highest vote total in last month's six-way race for four seats on the school board, will replace him.

Terence Kindlon leads the way as Christopher Porco walks with his mother Joan in Goshen on Monday.

Jury

excluding themselves from the trial because of time constraints.

"Our biggest hurdle is to find jurors willing to sit from four to six weeks," said McDermott.

One potential juror who identified himself only as Jose said he was from Newburgh, worked in Connecticut and knew nothing about the case.

"My boss didn't take it very well when he heard I was on the jury," he said.

Berry asked potential jurors four questions:

- Do you have the ability to serve as a juror for a trial that could last up four to five weeks?
- How many people have heard about the case?
- How many people, because of the nature of the crime, cannot be a fair or impartial juror?
- How many people for any other reason feel they cannot be fair or impartial?

A handful of people raised their hands to be excused because they had already heard about the case.

"This is especially delightful," said Defense Attorney Terence Kindlon. "Of all the people we saw this morning, only three of them had any information on this case at all." Another five to six people asked to be excused after they had been told the way in which the crime was committed.

Only two members of the media could be present at one time while potential jurors were being pre-screened by the attorneys. That left the remainder of the TV, newspaper and other electronic media journalists to wait and sit outside the courtroom.

Meanwhile as of late Monday afternoon, June 26, there was still no word about when Berry would release his ruling on pre-trial evidence, including a six-and-one-half hour interrogation of Christopher Porco by Bethlehem police, and a nod some witnesses say Joan Porco gave to police the morning after the attacks, allegedly indicating her son Christopher had committed the crime. Joan Porco has no recollection of the attacks since that time and denies her son is responsible for the crime.

Once again, Christopher Porco escorted his mother into the Orange County Courthouse with camera lights flashing. McDermott said there are 135 witnesses for the prosecution and 90 percent of those witnesses will be called, including Joan Porco.

"Joan has been served a subpoena and is on our list," said McDermott.

Joan Porco attended every day of the pre-trial hearings in Albany County Court, but McDermott believes she should not be in the courtroom when the trial begins.

"We are going to ask the judge to exclude all witnesses from the courtroom," McDermott said.

"All we are looking for is a fair trial," said Kindlon. "Hardly anybody knows about the case here."

McDermott believes the jury will be selected and seated no later than late Tuesday.

"It throws a monkey wrench in our plan being down here, but we're confident," McDermott said.

"So far there is nothing especially good and nothing especially bad," Kindlon said. "Just normal."

The trial is expected to begin immediately following jury selection.

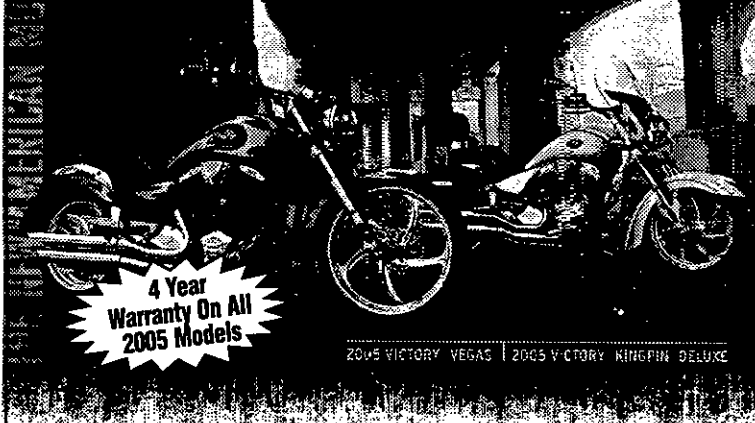

When the Christopher Porco murder trial begins, Spotlight Newspapers will post daily coverage on its Web site, www.spotlightnews.com.

he could have faced up to 25 years in prison. He still has several misdemeanor charges of sexual misconduct against him. Those charges are from alleged sexual acts of misconduct at Bethlehem High School. Lambert was also suspended from school after he was charged. The incidents on school grounds allegedly occurred in two different boys bathrooms with the same 14 year old student. The school district even considered purchasing security cameras for high school property following the incidents.

They sing and they see the world doing it

Local residents are members of Harvard's singing group

By JESSICA HARDING

Evan Siegel, a Bethlehem native and senior at Harvard University, is off to see the world. The 21-year-old member of the Harvard a cappella group The Din and Tonics will be traveling literally around the world this summer singing with the group.

The Din and Tonics is a prestigious all-male singing group with 12 members. The group sings mostly jazz from the 1920s, '30s and '40s, but also perform songs from a variety of genres, and performed recently at Temple Beth Emeth in Albany, where Siegel and fellow BC graduate Jeffrey Barnet were members before leaving for college.

Every other year, The Din and Tonics go on a world tour for 11 weeks during summer vacation.

"We are going to an unbelievable collection of cities," Siegel said by phone recently. This year the group will fly to Dublin, travel across Europe, then to Shanghai, across Asia, then to Australia, San Francisco and home.

Members of The Din and Tonics don't pay for anything while touring. They use the Harvard network to find places to stay, and Siegel said usually hotels put them up and pay for their meals.

"The Harvard alumni network is amazing and far-reaching," Siegel said.

This is Siegel's second year with The Din and Tonics. He said the audition process is pretty rigorous. Potential Dins try out for about a week, performing songs and surviving cuts. Siegel said the number of people auditioning varies anywhere from 20-60 people, from which the group usually takes about four.

Siegel said hardly anyone performs with The Din and Tonics for their entire Harvard career because the schedule is too demanding. The group performs about 150 concerts a year, and travels a lot.

Every winter the group spends its break in Vail, Colo., singing and skiing. Spring break is spent in Bermuda at the Fairmont Southampton Hotel. Siegel said the hotel gives members of the group rooms and provides their meals in exchange for performances.

In addition, The Din and Tonics perform at private parties and functions. Siegel said the price tag is pretty high to book a concert with the group.

The Din and Tonics were in the movie "Mona Lisa Smile" and performed at the premiere of the film. Siegel said the group has performed for Sharon Stone, Bill Clinton, Jessica Lange and many governors and ambassadors. Siegel said meeting John Lithgow was the most exciting to him.

Music has always been an important part of Siegel's life. He has been playing the piano since kindergarten and was a serious classical saxophonist. Siegel said it was when he was in the studio performing the saxophone that another musician convinced him to join the singing group "Bass on Up" at Bethlehem Central High School. He performed with the group through high school.

Siegel also participated in choir at Bethlehem High School and performed in the musical productions.

Siegel's major at Harvard is linguistics with a related field in theater. He spends most of his free time performing in drama and musicals. He has spent the past three summers with professional theater companies and plans to move to New York to become an actor when he graduates.

"I caught the bug and now pretty much all I do is theater and singing," he said.

Siegel just finished doing an Irish play and said he can't wait to visit Dublin because he wants to see how his Irish accent holds up. He is also excited about visiting other cities.

"I'm pretty psyched about Rome and Athens, I heard Prague and Strasbourg are amazing too and Bali," he said.

SAFE AND SECURE

Whether your home is being shown to a house-hunting couple or is on open house display, strangers are walking around, observing and taking notes. The important thing is that they are not complete strangers. With this in mind, real estate agents carefully pre-qualify the people with whom they tour your home by becoming familiar with their financial situation and circumstances. During open houses, the listing agent makes sure to meet each individual entering your house and requests, at the very least, their names, addresses and phone numbers. Even so, it makes good sense to remove or relocate valuables and move them to a safe place.

Security is paramount especially when your home is on the market. Before house showings, remove all fragile items, such as china, crystal and glass as well as jewelry, family heirlooms and other valuables.

Remember, "Count on Cathy" as your listing agent. I will use my 15 years of experience to help you make your home safe and secure.

Glenmont couple loving it at McDonald's

Owners hope to renovate Delaware Avenue restaurant

By JIM CUOZZO

You might think of McDonald's as a good place for a burger, ice cream cone, some pancakes, a cup of coffee or even a healthy salad. But you probably never thought of McDonald's as a place to meet your wife.

James and Sherri Fox are co-owners of the McDonald's Restaurant in Delmar on Delaware Avenue, along with three other area McDonald's. At age 39, James Fox has recently been selected as one of 40 Capital District residents under 40 years of age identified by the Capital District Business Review for their outstanding business accomplishments in a "Forty under Forty" special section.

Both Foxes began working at different McDonald's on

James and Sherri Fox stand outside their McDonald's Restaurant on Delaware Avenue in Delmar. Jim Cuozzo

Long Island when each was 15, and eventually worked at the same McDonald's where Sherri was Jim's boss for a short time.

"We both started as crew kids; she was my boss for awhile, now she is my boss full time," said Jim Fox.

Both say they have very much enjoyed working for McDonald's and ultimately owning their own McDonald's restaurants in the Capital District.

"It was a huge commitment," said Sherri Fox.

"But McDonald's was behind us 100 percent," Jim Fox added.

"They provided us with field staff and construction people to help us remodel the restaurant on Holland Avenue (in Albany)." The Foxes new goal is to renovate the existing Delaware Avenue McDonald's.

"We want our four restaurants to be the best in Albany County," said Jim Fox.

The couple has two boys and they live in the town of Bethlehem, with a simple commute to work, another advantage of living in the Capital District.

"We love living here, it's close to everything," said Jim Fox. There are 75 McDonald's restaurants in the area, and 20 of those are individual owner operated.

"Right now if something breaks, I'm the maintenance department and if there is a personnel issue with an employee, I am the human resources department," he said. Being an owner operator, according to the Foxes, allows you to know your employees better.

"We try to run our business like it is our family," he added. "We just try to run good restaurants."

The four McDonald's restaurants owned by Jim and Sherri Fox employ close to 200 people.

"This is the only job I know," said Sherri. "It's a great place to work while raising your family."

3tArchitects firm welcomes new project manager

3tArchitects, an Albany-based architectural firm offering an array of professional design services for individuals and organizations wishing to create meaningful spaces, buildings, communities or business environments, has added Marc Bailey, AIA CNU, of Delmar, to its senior management team as architect and project manager.

In his new position, Bailey will oversee many of the company's existing projects and assist in the regional growth of the Broadway-based firm. One of his first assignments will be the construction oversight of a contemporary, green designed urban residence located in the heart of Albany's historic district. The master planning of a 500,000 square foot corporate office community is another project that will benefit from Bailey's broad experience.

A native of New Jersey, Bailey moved to Albany five years ago to join Collins + Scoville as a project architect working on Saratoga schools. He previously worked for smaller firms in Maryland, Georgia and Colorado, mainly involved with projects of a more intimate scale, including production and custom home design, restaurants, daycare facilities, dental offices and commercial office buildings. Most recently, Bailey worked for Troy-based Dominick Ranieri Architects where he expanded his expertise in residential work to include multifamily projects and the planning of New Urban Communities.

A graduate of Virginia Tech, he holds undergraduate degrees in architecture and building construction. Bailey resides in Delmar with his wife and three sons.

Library to present fall series on aging

Aging is one of our least favorite things. The issues of aging are being faced by all of us, not only for ourselves, but perhaps on behalf of our parents or other relatives.

Sue Kidder, the town of New Scotland senior coordinator, is planning to present a series of age-related seminars offered by the Caregiver Connection beginning in the fall. The diversity of topics offered include Talking with Your Parents about Their Future, Options and Resources for Older Relatives, Planning Your Lifestyle as a Retiree, Caregiving as a Family, The Nursing Home Decision, and Understanding Depression. The complete list of topics is available at the town offices and the library. We are asking you to check the list and indicate your top choices for presentation at the seminars. These informational meetings could be a valuable resource which we hope many of you will take advantage of. Ask at the library.

Mmm, sweet

Kids can drop in and make their own ice cream sundae and chat about the best books to read this summer on Thursday night, June 29 at 7 p.m. There will be door prizes, a craft table and an "I Spy" game. Parents and siblings are invited. No signup is necessary.

Holiday hours

The library will be closed

Voorheesville Public Library

Monday and Tuesday, July 3 and 4, for the Independence Day holiday.

Summer reading kickoff

The grand kickoff event for the summer reading program will be July 6 with The Storycrafters presenting "A Glimpse of Gold, A Knock at the Door & Other Hidden Treasures." It's lively, it's laugh-filled and it's all free. Kids in kindergarten and older can sign up for the reading program now. Receive your reading packet and learn about more great summer plans we have.

Book discussion

The HA HA by Dave King is the topic of the July adult book discussion. A disabled Vietnam veteran is asked to take care of his ex-girlfriend's son while she is in rehab, and his world is turned upside down. Pick up a copy of the book at the reference desk. Group meets July 19 at 7 p.m.

Plan on this

Mark these dates for our summer lawn concerts: July 12, The GTOs; July 26, Dyer Switch Band; Aug. 9, Annie and the Hedonists.

Village park

Joyce Laiosa will be entertaining with stories at the summer recreation program in the Voorheesville village park every Thursday at 11 a.m. beginning July 6.

Storytimes

Regular storytimes resume July 11 on Tuesdays (only) at 10:15 a.m.

Library exhibit displays the world of children's play

A portion of "Small Traditions: the folklore of children," on loan from the Arts Center of the Capital Region, will be exhibited at the library in July and August.

"Small Traditions" was on view at the center from December 2005 to March 2006, curated by Mary Zwolinski, head of ACCR's Folk Arts Program. The exhibit focused on the world of children's play — a world apart from the play adults organize for them, with its own rules and raw materials.

The following is excerpted from the curator's notes: "The

Check It Out Bethlehem Public Library

[world] made and directed by children themselves ... can include secret hiding places, vernacular architecture, toys and playthings constructed out of recycled debris or other items, impromptu games, riddles and made-up stories.

A child's world is different ... from the world adults create ... in that no actual money exchanges hands (pretend money is acceptable), no adults create and oversee the rules of the games (although children themselves may do this) and there is no formal guidebook ... other than the verbal rules and guidelines they create by and for themselves.

The play is spontaneous, yet may continue and expand over days, weeks and even years, mysteriously handed down from child to child, generation to generation. In this particular place, the child is the absolute ruler of the world."

The "Small Traditions" exhibit will be directly opposite the interior doors of the library. In addition, the lobby display case will hold items reflecting Bethlehem residents' childhood memories. Come and see. You will remember the places and play of your childhood, and your children will recognize a world not so different from their own.

The original exhibit was funded by the Folk Arts Program of the New York Council on the Arts, a state agency, and The Arts Center of the Capital Region. The library exhibit is made possible by the generosity of The Arts Center of the Capital Region, 265 River Street in Troy, www.artscenteronline.org.

For information on this exhibit or other folk arts programs, call the arts center at 273-0552 ext. 225.

Membership into the society is by invitation only, to students in all fields of study.

3tArchitects Scott Townsend becomes Charrette Facilitator

Scott Townsend, AIA LEED, principal of 3tArchitects, recently met all of the requirements to achieve the status of Green Communities Charrette Facilitator.

Green Communities is a 5 year, $555 million national initiative whose goal is to build more than 8,500 environmentally healthy homes for needy families. This groundbreaking effort is a partnership of The Enterprise Foundation and The Enterprise Social Investment Corporation (Enterprise) and the Natural Resources Defense Council (NRDC), along with the American Institute of Architects, the American Planning Association and leading corporate, financial and philanthropic organizations.

"Green Communities is an initiative that is transforming the way people think about, locate, design and build affordable housing," said Townsend. "I sought this designation because it is consistent with a central mission at 3tArchitects — to incorporate green design into our projects and to complete projects with admirable socially conscious goals."

R-C-S Library offers a treasure trove of summer activities

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk library will be open Saturday, July 1, and closed Monday and Tuesday, July 3 and 4, in observance of the Independence Day holiday.

After July 4, Saturday hours will be 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. until Labor Day. Weekday hours will not change. They are Monday-Thursday, 10 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. and Friday, 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Summer programs fast approaching

Information about the library's summer programs is in its annual newsletter distributed in May, and on its Web site, www.uhls.org/rcscl.

All programs begin after the Fourth of July holiday. For questions or information, call 756-2053.

Two youth programs require pre-registration: Chess Club for Kids, Wednesdays, 4 p.m. — a beginners' group for children of any age — and Young Writers Workshop, beginning July 6, Tuesdays or Thursdays from 2 to 3:30 p.m., for children entering 4th grade who would like to write, illustrate and bind an original story. To complete a book, kids need five or six sessions.

Romp & Read neighborhood story-and-play times have a summer schedule. The Tuesday session at Selkirk Firehouse, Route 396 east of Route 9W, will continue to be at 10 a.m. The Friday morning session at the library also will continue to be at 10 a.m. The third session will be at Mosher Park pavilion Thursdays at 10 a.m. The pavilion is on the Winnie Avenue side of the park. The program is for children 5 and younger, with a parent or caregiver.

Positively Preschool Stories and Crafts will continue to be on Thursdays at 11 a.m. at the library. The program combines stories and crafts on a common theme and is for children preschool through kindergarten.

Reading, beads and treasures

A treasure is the 2006 theme of the school-age summer reading program. It combines read-alouds, thematic activities and crafts, and the Traveling Library paperback loan collection. Kids sign up at the programs and receive a booklet in which to track their summer reading. They earn trading beads for their reading, and can cash them in for prizes from our treasure chest. There are two sessions at the library: Mondays and Wednesdays at 6:30 p.m. The others are at town recreation programs, as follows: Bethlehem Recreation Program, A.W. Becker School, Thursdays at 1:30 p.m.; Coeymans Food For Thought Program, RCS Middle School, weekday mornings; New Baltimore Recreation Program, Cecil Hallock Park, Route 54, Thursdays at 9:30 a.m., from July 20 to Aug. 10.

Families also can join the summer reading program independently at the library.

Celebrate reading season

There are two end-of-season events. On Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 8, the library will host a free family concert with the Uncle Brothers. They perform Celtic-American style children's music, and the instrumental quality is high. There is an Uncle Brothers CD in the library's collection.

On Thursday, Aug. 10, at 7 p.m., the Treasure-Seekers Party and Young Writers Reception will celebrate the summer's accomplishments together. We will distribute family tickets to small but interesting prizes.

The Frequent Reader Program for adults and teens rewards voracious summer readers. You can enter a coupon for every three books you finish. This makes you eligible for weekly drawings for

• All library programming is free (unless otherwise noted) and open to the public. The RCS Community Library is located at 15 Mountain Road, Ravena. For information, call 756-2053.

Do You Have Type 2 Diabetes?

Is your diabetes not being well controlled?

We are looking for male and female Type 2 Diabetic patients, ages 18-80 years old, to participate in a research trial. If your diabetes is not being well controlled with your current oral diabetes medication, you may qualify for this 26-week study to assess the safety and effects of a new investigational inhaled insulin treatment for diabetes. You may qualify to participate if you are:

- A Type 2 Diabetic diagnosed at least 6 months ago
- Currently taking two or more oral antidiabetic agents, but not taking insulin
- Not well controlled with current diabetes medications
- A Non-smoker
- 18 to 80 years of age

Qualified participants will receive study medication, study-related clinic visits and laboratory tests at no charge during the study. You may be compensated for your time and travel.

If you are interested in participating or want additional information on whether or not you may qualify, please contact Dr. James Desemone of The Goodman Diabetes Service at Albany Medical Center at (518) 262-6915.

Berkshire Bank arrives in the Capital District

It's amazing how things occur in spits and starts in the world.

Some weeks it appears as if the entire world is on vacation or you are on permanent "hold;" in other weeks, it's as if the world is in a perfect state of chaos. It seems as if this week falls squarely into the former category.

So, no pithy words of wisdom, no insightful glances into the world we call "media," rather we shall forge headlong into the happenings of our clients around the community.

Welcome to Berkshire Bank

Notes from the
Advertising Desk
Bill Kellert

which has opened three new branches in our neighborhoods: 180 Delaware Ave. in Delmar, the Columbia Turnpike in East Greenbush and at Guiderland's 20 Mall ... Also on the financial front, SEFCU announces plans to open four new branches, two in our neck of the woods, in One Commerce Plaza at 99 Washington Ave. in Albany, and at 7 Lowe's Drive in Wilton. Both are scheduled for mid-September openings. The others, one each in Binghamton and Syracuse, where our sister papers are, are on the boards for a late September opening ... Upper Union Street BID, in Schenectady, recently unveiled a new logo ... Seton Health Foundation in Troy announced the appointment of Michael Danieli as chair of its board of directors ... Seton's annual Golf Invitational included over 130 golfers and raised in excess of $50,000 ... Paula Gaies and

More than 20 employees gave of their time for this most worthwhile endeavor ... Saratoga Polo Association, one of the four oldest clubs in the U.S., opened its season on June 16, thus kicking off the "Saratoga Season" ... The Sidney Albert Albany Jewish Community Center was the recipient of a $2,000 grant from First Niagara to support the longest continuously running aqua movement class for seniors on the east coast ... finally, Castello's Restaurant on Nott Terrace in Schenectady celebrates its fifth anniversary.

And that empties out the papers on my desk for another week. As always, if you have anything you'd like to see in the column, feel free to send me an e-mail at: kellertw@spotlightnews.com. We can't guarantee they will all get in, but we'll give it our best shot.

A very happy and safe Independence Day to you all ... and we'll see you after the 4th!

IN BRIEF

Pierce Communications retained by Tangora Technologies

Pierce Communications, a full-service public relations and public affairs firm located in Albany, has been retained by Tangora Technologies of Delmar, one of Tech Valley's leading designers and providers of home integration technologies and heating and cooling systems, to provide public relations and communications services.

Tangora Technologies provides award-winning design, installation and service in the areas of structured wiring, home automation, security, multi-room audio systems, home theater, heating and air-conditioning and central vacuum, and has found a particular niche with custom home building and renovations.

Allstate awarded community award

Allstate Insurance Agent Rick Schrade whose office is located at 636 Delaware Ave. in Delmar has been awarded the Agency Hands in the Community Award for his commitment to volunteering in the community. With this award comes a $500 grant from the Allstate Foundation for the Albany Rowing Center where Schrade volunteers.

Schrade received this award as a result of his active membership and involvement with the Albany Rowing Center. He has been a significant contributor to the program.

Sara Crowley, territorial distribution leader at Allstate Insurance Company, nominated Rick Schrade.

"Rick is an active member of this community," said Crowley. "He is a respected member of the business community, protecting people with insurance and financial services products. He also makes a point of getting involved personally by dedicating his time and efforts to making a difference in people's lives."

"Allstate believes that it is very important for corporations to take an active interest in the communities they serve. Allstate is proud to support the Albany Rowing Center through the Allstate Foundation," concluded Crowley.

Kings Chapel holds kids' Fiesta Summer program

Kings Chapel in Glenmont invites children to a Fiesta Summer Program which runs from July 10 to 14.

The program is from 6 to 8 p.m. for ages 3 through 12.

For information, call 439-9955.

Expert IRA advice.

The strategies you need and want to know about.

Tap into the knowledge of independent financial consultant John Gigliello as he provides the answers to the big questions in IRA distribution today. He has been trained by Ed Slott, CPA, America's #1 IRA distribution expert and author of the book, The Retirement Savings Time Bomb and How to Defuse It.

Question: When must I start withdrawing money from my IRA?

Answer: This day of reckoning has a name....it's called the required beginning date (RBD) and it's the date that you must start taking your required minimum distribution (RMD.) The RBD for IRA holders is April 1 following the year you turn age 70½. This date is only for the first year's distribution however; each subsequent year's distribution must be taken by December 31st of that year. DON'T FORGET OR IGNORE YOUR RBD DATE!! There are severe tax penalties if you don't take your RMD.

These and other complex questions can be made easy in the hands of a pro. Call the office today for help in calculating your RMD.

Stanford White designed the Stockbridge, Mass., building that is now home to the Berkshire Theatre Festival.

From the Berkshires to Broadway

By WILLIAM A. KELLERT

In 1928, Mabel Choate, doyenne of the Berkshire landscape, decided that the casino designed by famous architect Stanford White, located in the heart of Stockbridge, was an eyesore, since it had fallen into neglect and abandonment. A team of horses was hired to move the building to its current location on Main Street, and the home of the Berkshire Theatre Festival was born. Situated on 5 acres, the property now houses the theatre festival, and its onsite barn, the Unicorn Theatre, is celebrating 10 years of emerging and alternative theater.

Now settling into her 12th season at Berkshire, nine of them as executive director, Kate Maguire said, "while the Unicorn as dedicated to emerging ideas and emerging talents, the two stages have come to be mixed in their focus."

The festival is one of the oldest performing arts venues in the United States and the single oldest in Berkshire County.

The summer brings the arts to life in the Berkshires, and the theatre festival is one of the best examples of the life being breathed there. This year the calendar is an eclectic mix of theater. From Tennessee Williams' "Night of the Iguana" to Wendy Wasserstein's "Heidi Chronicles" and the current production of "Amadeus" on the main stage, to the Unicorn's productions of the revival of Terrence McNally's "Where Has Tommy Flowers Gone?" to the world premiere of "The Pilgrim Papers," this season has something for everyone.

According to Maguire, the theater has "a good team on the main stage; a core group of actors, directors and designers all returning to work with BT."

Over the years, the complexion of the theater-going audience has changed in the Berkshires, from the day-trippers to a larger concentration of second-home owners, most of whom have chosen the Berkshires expressly for the culture the area has to offer. As a result, Maguire said, the populace has allowed, and in fact demanded, a more sophisticated repertory in terms of the arts.

That's a bonus for those of us in the Capital District.

No more than a scant hour's drive away, the Berkshires offer a magical array of artistic delights. We locals have known for years what treasure trove of artistic delights lay nestled in the Berkshires; the Berkshire Theatre Festival may well be one of the crown jewels in the treasure.

The theater has, in years past, played host to the likes of Lois Nettleton, Richard Chamberlain, "Sex and The City's" Chris Noth and Judy Kaye, who last year, took her show, "Souvenir" to Broadway to great critical acclaim after a tryout run in BTF.

An affordable drive in these gas-cost conscious times, an opportunity for a wonderful getaway and the chance to experience world-class theater await this summer in the Berkshires. Jonathan Epstein stars in the not-to-be-missed current main stage production of "Amadeus" through July 8. band responsible for songs like "One Week" and ... well, "One Week") and was even judged by Monday Night Football viewers to be the best player/musician in a season-long contest.

"It's been a lot of fun for me, and now I'm in a good circle of friends in the Boston area," said the former New England Patriot.

That's the wonderful part about music — or art, or poetry or any other creative activity. When life frustrates you, you can take it out on a piece of paper or another inanimate object — like the drums or the guitar. Then, you can go commiserate with other people who have done the same and form support groups, otherwise known as rock bands.

Of course, those support groups can be a bit dysfunctional (think of the term "creative differences"). But that hasn't soured Doug on being in the Flutie Brothers Band.

"There's a lot of headaches that come along with it, but I try to push those aside on the other members and concentrate on the music," he said.

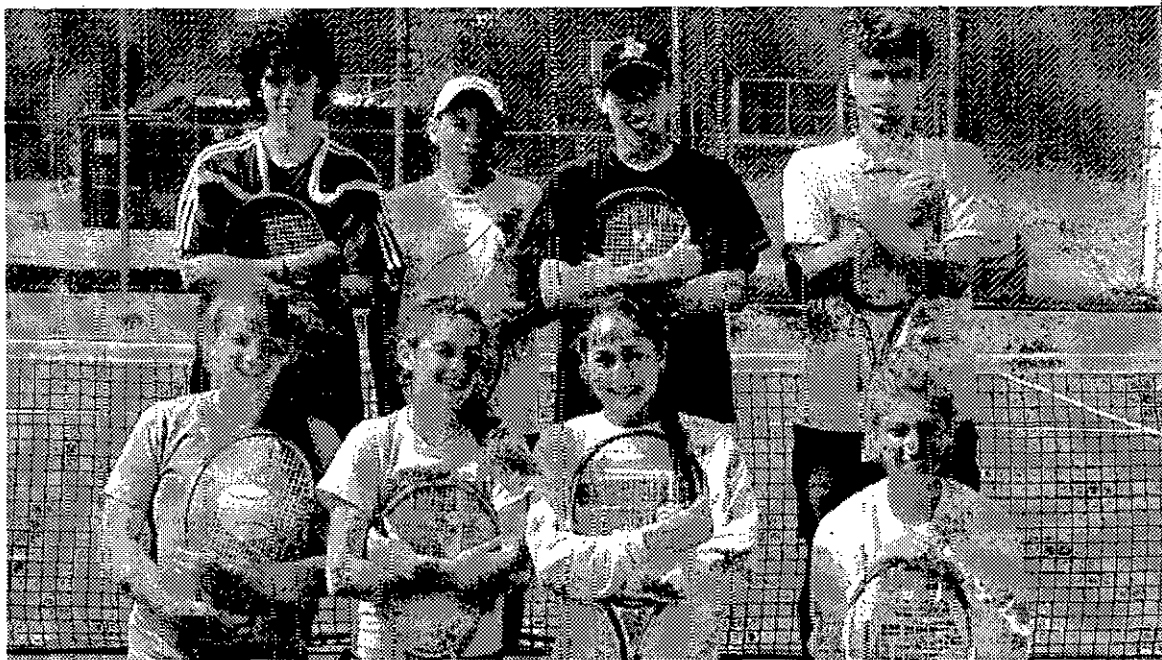

Still, Doug had football to take his mind off of any band problems. Now, all he has is his upcoming gig as a studio analyst on ABC's college football broadcasts. That can't occupy his mind nearly as much as when he was playing in the NFL, where even the backup quarterbacks have a lot of information to cram into their brains.

"The game has gotten very complicated," said Flutie. "Even the guys who are Pro Bowlers — they have to work their tails off now."

But if Doug starts missing the adrenaline rush he got on the football field, music can provide that for him.

Just don't expect to see the Flutie Brothers headline Madison Square Garden anytime soon.

about as spent as they are, if not more spent."

Springstead also has had surgeries on both of his knees in recent years. But he forgets about that once he hits the field.

"You get the energy from the suit and the crowd, and you don't feel the pain," Springstead said. "Between the braces (on both knees) and the adrenaline, you don't feel it."

Plus, Springstead doesn't want to disappoint his biggest fan — his 4-year-old son Mikey.

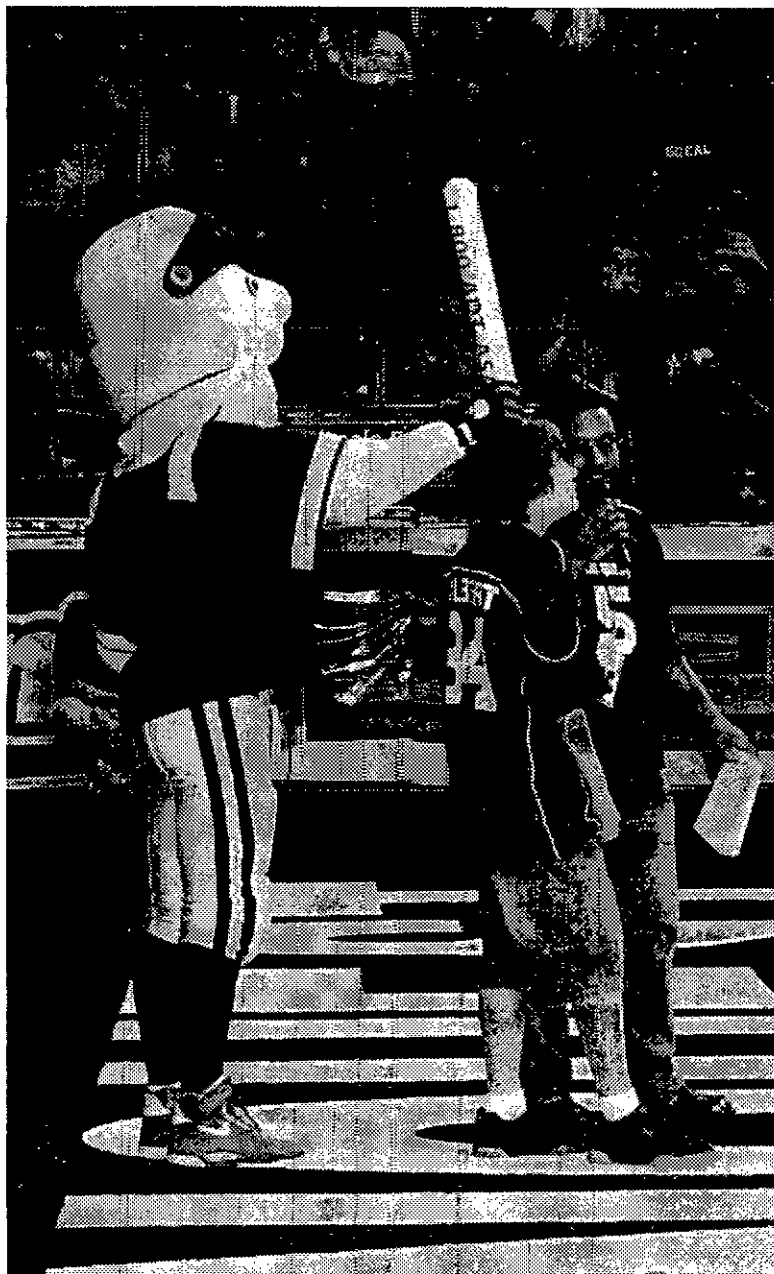

"He absolutely loves it," Springstead said. "We were in Hollywood Video the other day, and there were these ValleyCat schedules at the counter. My son pointed to the schedules and said to the cashier, 'That's my daddy,' because he saw SouthPaw."

Springstead's only regret is that he can't watch the games with Mikey. That job is left to his wife Eileen.

"It's hard on her. She brings Mikey to the games, which is what a father usually does," said Springstead. "That kind of makes me sad. I see him sitting up there, and it's cute and all. But you'd like to be up there with him."

Still, to do all the things he gets to do as a mascot is what makes it all worthwhile to Springstead.

"This is when you know you're having fun as a mascot — when you pose for a picture and you're smiling under your mask," he said. "It's kind of weird because you know no one can see you smile, but you're smiling anyway."

Rob Jonas

By ROB JONAS

Is it safe? I saw Pat Riley dancing on TV last Friday, and I wanted to be sure he'd stopped before I began writing this week's column.

Actually, athletes and music don't usually mix well. Think of all the Shaquille O'Neal, Allen Iverson, Bronson Arroyo and Deion Sanders CDs that are now being used as coasters, and you get a pretty good idea of what happens when athletes think they can also be rock/rap stars.

Occasionally, though, athletes get it right. For instance, Bernie Williams didn't swing for the fences with his first album. He simply played his electric guitar and surrounded himself with some capable musicians for a jazz album. Nothing spectacular. Nothing poppy enough to be played on commercial radio. Just a little something to prove the Yankee outfielder has some decent chops.

Then, there's Doug Flutie. He and his brother Darren were in Albany last Thursday with their rock band, the Flutie Brothers. Yet, they were sensible enough to let the other guys take the spotlight while they quietly did their thing — at least, as quietly as a drummer (Doug) and an electric guitar player (Darren) can get.

Neither Flutie has delusions of grandeur, either. For them, music is not about selling records — it's about giving them a creative outlet that they couldn't have on a football field.

"Music has always been a release for me," Doug said earlier in the day. "In college, I'd go down to the basement, turn up the stereo and beat the hell out of the drums."

(Side thought: perhaps it was a reaction to getting beat up by opposing pass rushers?)

Doug must have gotten particularly good through all those basement sessions. The now-retired NFL quarterback has played with members of Boston, Aerosmith and Barenaked Ladies (you remember, the

The best job in sports

Springstead enjoys double life as teacher and mascot

By ROB JONAS

You wouldn't likely recognize Michael Springstead if you saw him on the street, but you've met him if you've been to an Albany Conquest game.

Or a Tri-City ValleyCats game.

Or an Albany River Rats game.

Springstead is the man behind the mask — or masks, in this case. He's the giant-headed Roman in a football uniform known as Kid Quest, the pumped-up ValleyCat known as SouthPaw and the half-human, half-rodent known as Rowdy the River Rat.

That's right. Springstead is a professional mascot.

"I guess I have Peter Pan syndrome," Springstead said. "People ask my age, and I'll ask, 'Chronologically or maturity?'"

For the record, Springstead is in his mid 40s, and when he's not entertaining sports fans at Pepsi Arena and Joe Bruno Stadium, he's teaching sixth graders at Loudonville Elementary School.

None of which was planned, by the way.

"A lot of my family members were in education, and I swore I didn't want to follow them. I wanted to be the next Donald Trump," said Springstead. "But I've always had something about working with kids. My wife and I were at the beach one day, and she saw how I was playing with some of the kids — organizing games and such. My wife turned to me and said, 'Why not go into teaching?'"

Going into teaching might have been his wife's idea, but becoming a mascot? Where did that come from?

"When I first started teaching, we'd go sing the National Anthem (at sporting events)," Springstead said. "I thought it would be cool if when we first did it at a Rats game, I'd be Rowdy. So I called and asked, and they said they already had somebody playing Rowdy, but would I be willing to be Santa Claus because they needed a Santa. So I wound up playing Santa for them, and I guess I did a good job because they wound up asking me to be Rowdy."

Once Springstead got a taste of being a mascot — the handshakes from adults and kids alike, being involved in on-ice promotions such as T-shirt tosses and contests and just having good, clean fun — he didn't want to let it go. He went from playing Rowdy to playing Homer the Diamond Dog (back when the Albany-Colonie Diamond Dogs inhabited Heritage Park), Wolfgang (from the short-lived Albany Attack indoor lacrosse team), Kid Quest and SouthPaw.

"You become the character," said Springstead. "Once that suit goes on, you're not Michael Springstead. You're Rowdy or Kid Quest or Wolfie (Wolfgang's nickname)."

Those mascot suits aren't light, either. Depending on the material being used, becoming one of those characters means wearing more than 10 pounds of clothing, including the head. But Springstead is used to it by now.

Springstead

"It's almost become like a second skin," he said. "Even with the floppy feet, I can still run down the stairs."

Running down the aisles at the Pepsi Arena is one thing. Skating on the ice as Rowdy — as Springstead does routinely during the AHL season — is another matter entirely. However, Springstead said he's mastered that, too.

"I swear to my dog that I can skate better as Rowdy than when I skate as myself. It's weird," he said.

Springstead's athletic ability inside one of those mascot outfits has something to do with his upbringing. As a teenager at Shaker High School, he ran on the boys cross country team coached by his father Ed.

uid," said Springstead, who added that he loses an average of eight pounds per game.

The athletes take notice of Springstead, too. Prior to the Conquest's most recent home game June 17 against Louisville, an injured Conquest lineman stopped by Springstead's locker room to talk about the progress he was making from shoulder surgery — a procedure Springstead had himself two years earlier. During the game, Conquest players returned Kid Quest's pats on the shoulder or back when they lined up in the end zone for a kickoff.

"It's pretty cool, it's fun, and in all honesty you're kind of like a behind-the-scenes celebrity," said Springstead.

Interacting with the players isn't as fun as interacting with the fans, though. No matter which character Springstead plays, he always makes a point of being

"Once that suit goes on, you're not Michael Springstead. You're Rowdy or Kid Quest or Wolfie."

Michael Springstead

"I loved it," said Springstead. "Some of the best memories were the car rides to and from school and the practices."

"He was a good runner in high school," Ed added.

Not that being a mascot isn't a sport in itself. Springstead approaches every game almost like the athletes he cheers for — he eats lightly before a game, he keeps plenty of water and Gatorade stashed in his locker room to replenish the fluids he sweats away and he even wears the same athletic underwear that the players wear.

"The most I ever drank (during a game) was two gallons of liq-in the crowd to get the fans going — or at least have some fun with them.

"My best friend told me not to use this quote, but (wearing a mascot outfit is) wearable alcohol. It allows you to do things you wouldn't ordinarily do," he said.

There is a price to be paid for all the fun Springstead has, though. After spending entire games in near-constant motion, his energy level takes a hit once the adrenaline wears off.

"You're beat," he said. "You don't have the aches and pains that the players are taking, but I'm

Old power, new revenue

Wind power could be profitable for private business

By JAMIE D. GILKEY

With the memory of record high prices at the gas pump still fresh in the minds of Capital District drivers and the prospect of steep air conditioning bills facing consumers this summer, some are looking to an old energy source as a way of saving consumers a bundle. The result may mean that less than two years from now, the electricity used in your home comes from something as basic as a gust of wind.

Wind power has had its champions for years among environmental advocates viewing it as a simple way to harness an abundant natural resource. Pointing to the windmills erected by the Dutch centuries ago, attorney Ken Bond noted the historical connection between the state and that part of the world during a recent daylong wind power conference in Albany.

"The Dutch actually founded New York and perfected the windmill," he said. "Now we're coming back to that same technology."

The move toward wind in New York has already drawn the attention of more than 15 private companies considering building facilities at 30 different locations. The building boom is backed by "major financial powerhouses from Wall Street like Goldman Sachs and JP Morgan," said Bond.

Government projections show at least 784 major wind turbines being built in the next year and a half, some of which could stand over 400 feet tall.

The construction is mostly clustered in the state's rural areas far from the Capital District, but its impact could change the way we think about energy forever.

Since late 2004, a round of state initiatives tailored to encourage the generation of electricity by wind-driven turbines have kicked into high gear. Combined with higher prices for fossil fuels like oil and natural gas, state policies have become the catalyst for major new economic development taking place in New York in the next decade, according to John Saintcross, a senior project manager with New York State Energy and Research Development Authority. By 2013, the state expects more than $1 billion in new economic development as a result of wind power.

Policymakers believe that visible projects is a tool kit designed to guide local governments that are considering whether to allow construction of wind turbines in their community.

"It includes copies of all types of information that could prove helpful to communities facing siting issues," said Jeff Peterson with NYSEDA. The energy agency has also taken on the task of studying the impact facilities known as wind farms have on wildlife like birds and bats.

The stage for state involvement was set when Gov. George E. Pataki's administration created a Renewable Portfolio Standard (RPS) in September 2004. Establishing a framework that makes wind energy a key priority, RPS sets the goal of generating 25 percent of the state's retail electricity from renewable energy by 2013. That's a dramatic jump from the 19 percent share renewable energy currently holds and much of the increase is expected to come from wind power. Next month could be crucial when state officials hold an auction in which wind power companies will compete for contracts to supply the state's electric system.

State tax dollars are already being used to provide a major subsidy to wind power in Lewis County, a small rural community in western New York. There a company known as Flat Rock Windpower LLC is looking to operate a series of 186 state-of-the-art wind turbines on the Tug Hill Plateau.

In a unique move, the sites for those turbines are included in an area the state has designated as an Empowerment Zone and much of the $8 million local government will receive from Flat Rock will be reimbursed by the state. "We wouldn't have even considered approving the turbines if it hadn't been for the substantial payments we are receiving," said Lewis County Attorney Richard Graham.

That big private sector investment requires an equally large commitment from state government and NYSEDA has taken the lead in making it happen.

"If utilities are not going to get their costs covered, they are not interested in incurring those costs," said Saintcross.

Among NYSEDA's more farms and ruin the "forever wild" flavor the park is famous for.

It is an old battle. On the one hand, the 6-million-acre Adirondack Park is the only place in the country outside of Alaska that includes 9,000 square miles of protected natural forest landscape. On the other hand, utilizing wind energy reduces the nation's reliance on Midwestern coal-fired power plants that spew toxins into the atmosphere causing acid rain that kills off lakes, trees and other foliage within that same 9,000 square miles.

"These things have to be weighed in context," said ACENY Executive Director Carol Murphy, adding the site is a former mining operation and is one of the few spots in the park already zoned for industrial use. "We need additional electricity so what are our options? Burn more fossil fuels? Build a new nuclear plant? We need to move forward with renewable energy."

She said New York has the potential to become one of the "windiest" spots in the nation. "We have no problem finding the spots. The problem is getting public acceptance of building them at those spots," she said.

In addition to the obvious value of chipping away at the costs of using crude oil and other fossil fuels — symbolized by the ever present threat of a gallon of gas crossing the $3 threshold and ongoing global warming — proponents say wind farms are an economic boost to the area.

As Adirondack Wind Partners work its project through the permitting process, one selling point it is using is the need to hire 75 construction workers to build the farm and up to three full-time employees once it is up and running.

Noble Environmental Power, which has three large wind farm projects pending approval in the northern part of the state, says it will create 725 jobs in the towns of Altona, Clinton and Ellenburg and pay $1.7 million a year in taxes.

"Wind parks provide tremendous benefits to both the environment and the economy," said Noble Environmental Power CEO Charles Hinkley in a statement. "Our wind parks will provide a huge boost to the local economy and, by making tax payments to local schools, help reduce pressure on local school property taxes."

As wind becomes more prevalent in New York, a phenomenon taking place in the western part of the state benefits the long-struggling family farmer. Generally, wind farmers pay traditional farmers $5,000 per mega-watt of electricity produced per year from turbines built on their land. A standard turbine needs less than an acre of land and produces 1.5 megawatts or more a year.

"It will help keep the farm from being sold into subdivisions and keep the land in the family," Murphy said. "New York has the reputation of being progressive on environmental and energy issues and we have been leaders in a lot of ways, and we should continue that tradition with wind."
