Joan Porco testifies

Police reports that she identified son as the assailant made her 'livid'

By JIM CUOZZO

Nearly two years after Joan Porco was critically injured in her Delmar home, the mother of defendant Christopher Porco took the stand in the most anticipated moment yet in his murder trial.

Joan Porco testified in a succinct, soft-spoken manner that she has no recall of the Nov. 15, 2004 night someone quietly entered her 36 Brockley Drive, Delmar, home in the middle of the night attacking her and her husband with a 3-foot long wood-cutting ax as they lay in bed. Peter Porco died as a result of the attack and Joan Porco was severely injured. Their son, Christopher Porco, is on trial for murder and attempted murder in the crimes.

"I am sorry for your loss, and I am sorry to have to call you as a witness, I promise I will be brief," Chief Prosecutor Michael McDermott said to Joan Porco.

Jurors witnessed firsthand and for the first time the severity of

Joan Porco

Joan Porco's wounds by the assailant. McDermott asked the victim if she has any recollection of the night she was attacked and her husband was murdered.

"No, because of the damage that I have, I feel I have amnesia," said Joan Porco. Her only recall about the weekend of the crime was about 12 hours earlier in the day that Sunday afternoon.

"Peter started working on the lawn, and I went to the 'Y' to secure a membership for my family," said Mrs. Porco.

Joan Porco said she was "livid" when she first found out Bethlehem Police Det. Chris-

Uncle says Porco told him he slept in dorm lounge

By JIM CUOZZO

After five weeks of testimony in the Christopher Porco murder trial, the whereabouts of the defendant in the early morning hours of Nov. 15 still remain in doubt.

On Friday, July 28, Porco's uncle, John Balzano said his nephew told him he was sleeping in the student lounge at the University of Rochester's Munro Hall dorm overnight on Nov. 14 and 15 when the attack on his parents Peter and Joan Porco occurred. Peter Porco died from the attacks and Joan was severely injured. Christopher Porco is on trial for murder and attempted murder.

Balzano's testimony of the defendant's whereabouts that night, in Porco's own words, is consistent with testimony re-

"He told me he was at school sleeping in the common room in his fraternity," stated Johnathan Porco to jurors.

Fraternity buddies and residents of Munro Hall in 2004, Joshua Felver-Gant and Gregory Whiteside already testified they did not see Christopher Porco sleeping in the student lounge that night.

In the days following the attacks, Porco told several stu-

Privately owned pharmacies see success

By ANN MARIE FRENCH

There are any number of ways to get prescriptions filled these days. Whether it's at a national chain, in the department store, at the supermarket or even online, there is no shortage of choices available to consumers. One option, reminiscent of the "good old days," is the independent pharmacy, recently growing in popularity.

"Independent pharmacies are on the rise again," said Paul Pagnotta, co-owner of Four Corners Pharmacy in Delmar. Open since March 2005, Pagnotta said about a half-dozen independent pharmacies have opened up in the last several years in the greater Capital District, and most have been successful.

The reason for that, said Pagnotta, is that pharmacists behind the counter are also the owners. They can determine how to staff the store, what services they will offer and which products to stock. For Pagnotta and partner, John Croce, it meant taking their experiences of working for a large, national chain and keeping what worked while making conscious decisions to provide a different feel for customers.

"I am amazed that I can almost name all the customers who come in," said Pagnotta. Establishing a relationship with their customers is a priority for the independents, as well as one of the greatest benefits.

Pagnotta noted that he was able to assist one particular customer in decreasing the amount of money he spends every month in co-payments for medication. When Pagnotta realized money was an issue for the man, he sat down with him to discuss generic alternatives. Pagnotta was able to provide the man with the appropriate information, and questions to discuss with his physician. After speaking with his physician, the customer returned with new prescriptions that decreased his out-of-pocket cost by nearly $100.

"Pharmacists have a responsibility to get to know and interact with patients," said Tom Golden, a pharmacist at Apple Community Pharmacy in Malta. Such a relationship is crucial, said Golden's intern, Katie Fealey.

"People are coming to the pharmacist for healthcare information and using them more and more," said Fealey, an Albany College of Pharmacy student doing a five-week rotation through area pharmacies.

"I don't know if everyone realizes how much of a resource their pharmacist could be," added Fealey.

Pagnotta drove home the point with a question.

"You know the name of the person who cuts your hair, right?" he said. "You should be able to say the same thing about your pharmacist."

Police arrest 2 for DWI, 3 on felony charges

Bethlehem police arrested and charged two with driving while intoxicated (DWI) last week.

• Morris Safford III, 31, of 139 Stage Road in East Berne was arrested and charged with DWI on Sunday, July 23.

Police stopped Safford on a vehicle and traffic infraction. Upon investigating police noticed a strong odor of alcohol. He also displayed extremely bloodshot eyes and impaired speech and motor skills. Police said, Safford admitted to drinking three drinks.

He was arrested after failing field sobriety tests and a blood alcohol content test.

He is scheduled to appear in Town Court on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

• Ellen J. Serafino, 62, of 1 Cherry Ave., in Delmar was arrested and charged with DWI on Saturday, July 22.

Police stopped Serafino after she nearly struck an officer conducting a traffic stop on New Scotland Road. The officer gave pursuit in which he witnessed Serafino driving erratically and crossing lanes on several occasions. She was stopped in the driveway of her home.

Upon investigating police noticed a strong odor of alcohol. She also displayed bloodshot, watery eyes.

Serafino was arrested after failing field sobriety tests and a blood alcohol content test.

She is scheduled to appear in Town Court on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

Felonies

Bethlehem police made three arrests last week on felony charges.

• Jose N. Perez-Zhuni, 27, of 219 East 3rd North St., in Morristown, Tenn., was arrested on a felony charge of illegal entry into the country on Saturday, July 22.

Police stopped Perez-Zhuni on a vehicle and traffic infraction. Upon investigating police learned that he had illegally immigrated to the United States from Ecuador. Police notified the US Department of Homeland Security Bureau of Immigration and Customs Enforcement.

Perez-Zhuni was sent to the Albany County jail pending a return to Town Court.

• Edward T. Jasewicz, 23, of 16A Tice Lane in Glenmont and Christopher M. Schaefer, 22, of 6508 Electric Railway in Cicero were arrested on felony charges of criminal possession of a controlled substance on Friday, July 21.

Schaefer, accompanied by an attorney and Jasewicz turned themselves into police after learning of charges brought against them by the state Department of Health.

Both were arraigned in Town Court and released after posting bail.

They are scheduled to appear in Town Court on Tuesday, Aug. 15.

IN BRIEF

National Grid says work and play safely this summer

With the warm summer weather upon us and families doing more activities outside, National Grid is reminding adults and children to work and play safely near electric facilities by avoiding the "DangerZone."

The danger zone is the minimum 10-foot clearance that should be observed around all overhead power lines. Customers, construction and landscape contractors are also advised to contact Dig Safely New York at 1-800-962-7962 before digging or excavating where underground electric cables and natural gas lines may be present.

National Grid offers the following tips for a safe summer season outdoors:

- Remember that overhead wires usually are bare or only weather-protected, and they carry high voltage. It's safest to assume that all overhead wires are live electric wires.
- Never climb an electric tower or pole, or any tree that is near electric lines.
- Never climb a fence around an electric substation. It is a criminal act and substations contain high-voltage electricity.
- Kites, model airplanes and other toys should be flown only in open spaces, far from any trees and power lines. If a toy gets tangled in a power line, the safest thing to do is leave it there and call National Grid at 1-800-642-4272.

• Don't stand under a tree or pole during an electrical storm. Lightning always seeks the easiest route to the ground; don't let it be you.

• If a wire falls on your car, stay inside. Serious injury or death can occur from contact with the vehicle and the ground.

• Never touch a downed power line or anything coming in contact with a downed line. If you see a person injured near fallen wires, do not touch the victim, attempt to move the wires. Call the fire department and National Grid 1-800-642-4272.

National Grid offers the following tips for a safe summer season in and around your home:

- Avoid touching power lines with any part of your body or with a ladder. Metal parts and moisture conduct electricity, so don't use an aluminum ladder or a damp wooden ladder within 10 feet of power lines. Before erecting a ladder, always look up to be sure you will not contact — or even come close to — any power lines. Always carry ladders horizontally and keep them away from power lines.
- Don't use power tools or any other electric devices while standing on a damp floor or wet ground. Be sure equipment is properly grounded. If the power tool is damaged, you could receive a fatal shock.
- For an added measure of protection, install ground fault circuit interrupters on all outdoor electric outlets. They will help to prevent shock injury.

PORCO ON TRIAL

Detective testifies; defense likens ax head to horse head

By JIM CUOZZO

Everything from mobsters to mysterious strangers and a local newspaper headline of a horse head found at the bottom of a pool overshadowed a full day of testimony from Christopher Bowdish, lead detective in the investigation of the murder of Peter Porco and attempted murder of his wife, Joan Porco. Their son, Christopher Porco, is on trial for those two crimes committed on Nov. 15, 2004.

Bowdish, a 25-year veteran of Bethlehem's police department, was one of the first officers at the scene on Nov. 15, 2004 when Peter Porco lay dead at the bottom of the inside front stairs of 36 Brockley Drive in Delmar. At that same time, Joan Porco clung to life in the upstairs bedroom where the attacks occurred. Bowdish told jurors how Joan Porco motioned and nodded when asked if her son Christopher committed the ax attacks that murdered her husband Peter and severely injured her.

"I first asked her if she could hear, and she nodded up and down several times in the 'yes' indication," said Bowdish.

The detective then asked if any member of the Porco family committed the crime against her and her husband. Bowdish indicated she once again nodded "yes."

"I then asked if Johnathan Porco did this, and she indicated 'no' and nodded up and down 'no,'" said Bowdish.

"I asked, 'did Christopher Porco do this?' and she nodded up and down, indicating 'yes,'" said Bowdish.

Jurors looked intently at Bowdish as he stated he repeated the question to Joan Porco, and she again nodded "yes."

Bowdish said he then apologized to her because he felt sorry for her, and left her bedroom that day as paramedics sedated her.

Much of the jury's day on Wednesday, July 26, was spent hearing Defense Attorney Laurie Shanks cross-examine the lead detective in the case, first questioning his experience as a detective handling homicide cases.

"There is not a tremendous amount of serious crime in the town of Bethlehem, is there?" asked Shanks.

"Actually I wouldn't say that," Bowdish said.

"Is skateboarding a serious crime?" Shanks asked.

Judge Jeffrey Berry, who is presiding over the trial in Orange County, put a quick stop to Shanks' line of questioning.

"I am going to start limiting your cross examination unless it is pertinent," said Berry.

Shanks asked what kind of training Bowdish has in homicide investigations. He said there have been three murders in Bethlehem he has investigated, two in the same year, 2004.

"What you're trained to do is to not contaminate a crime scene," said Shanks.

"That's correct," said the detective.

Shanks then shifted gears and began to ask Bowdish about the 36 Brockley Drive crime scene, where an ax was left in the bed, tucked inside a blanket with Joan Porco lying next to it.

"Did you ever consider it a sign that someone left a bloody ax at the bottom of the bed?" she asked.

"No," said Bowdish.

Shanks then pulled out the morning edition of the local Middletown Times Record where it was reported a horse's head was found at the bottom of a councilwoman's pool, and whether or not an ax left on a bed might be considered symbolic, like the horses head threat. Bowdish said he did not see the similarity.

Later in the day, Shanks asked, "Did you know that Frankie 'the fireman' Porco, (a distant relative of Peter Porco's) was a member of the Bonanno crime family?"

"I had not heard that," said Bowdish.

"Did you know he was charged with loan sharking, racketeering and murder?" Shanks pressed on.

"Investigator Kelly of the State Police followed up that lead," said Bowdish.

"Did you ever speak to Margaret Fennel (Christopher Porco's godmother), and do you know if she stated that Joan Porco told her there was a stranger in the driveway weeks before the attacks and that she was scared?" asked Shanks.

"There was nothing registered with the police department on this," Bowdish answered.

After testimony ended, Chief Prosecutor Michael McDermott said neither Frankie "the fireman" Porco nor the mysterious stranger in the driveway are very credible leads. When asked if Joan Porco ever urged authorities to find her husband's killer, McDermott said, "the only correspondence we have ever received from her are letters to the Times Union."

Other testimony from Bowdish centered on the Bethlehem police department's review of 800 hours of video surveillance tape over a three-month period in 2005. Those tapes are a crucial piece of evidence in the Porco murder trial. The cameras show Porco leaving the University of Rochester campus Sunday evening, Nov. 14 around 10:30 p.m. and coming back to the school campus the next morning at 8:30 a.m. Prosecutors believe Porco drove to Delmar in the middle of the night, attacked his parents at home and returned to school. Shanks said Porco could have been anywhere during the hours between 10 p.m. Sunday night and 9 a.m. that Monday morning. Bowdish was asked if he had reviewed the entire surveillance tape. He indicated that he had reviewed portions of the tape. A log kept by police details the officers who reviewed the tape, and they did not see a yellow Jeep Wrangler come and go between the hours of 10 p.m. and 9 a.m.

Shanks asked about a questionnaire sent by police to 400 University of Rochester students asking about Christopher Porco. Questions included whether or not Porco drank alcohol or took drugs prior to the crimes, and if he had ever made any threats toward his parents.

Shanks asked for a mistrial toward the end of the day's proceedings when Prosecutor David Rossi indicated Christopher Porco was excessively drinking alcohol and attending classes drunk, based on the questionnaire answered by students.

"This is a clear attempt to prejudice the jury because they have no evidence," said Shanks.

Berry denied Shanks' motion for a mistrial, but did admonish Rossi for his line of questioning in front of jurors.

"Mr. Rossi, that constituted a bad faith question in my eyes," said Berry. "When you do stoop to something like that, it is not professional."

Berry threatened to sanction Rossi and said a mistrial will be declared if it keeps up.

When McDermott was asked by a TV reporter if he noticed some jurors falling asleep during testimony he asked, "if it's to the cross examination then that's OK."

Coroner establishes time of Porco's death

Shanks says defendant couldn't have murdered father

By JIM CUOZZO

The defense in the Christopher Porco murder trial made an attempt to cast reasonable doubt into the minds of jurors based on a pathologist's testimony of Peter Porco's time of death.

Pathologist Dr. Jeffrey Hubbard was called on Thursday, July 27 as an expert witness for the prosecution regarding the autopsy he performed on the murder victim. By the end of the day's testimony, Hubbard told the jury that, as coroner at the scene of the crime, he estimated that Peter Porco's time of death was anywhere between the hours of 1:30 and 6:30 a.m. on the morning of Nov. 15, 2004.

"This proves it is impossible for Mr. Porco to have killed his father," said Defense Attorney Laurie Shanks to Judge Jeffrey Berry, who decided to allow Shanks to ask questions regarding time-of-death calculations.

Hubbard arrived at the scene of the crime at 36 Brockley Drive in Delmar at about 1 p.m., and based his time-of-death calculations on the body temperature of the murder victim combined with outside factors such as room temperatures, outside temperature and weather.

"The calculations I did do not meet my own standard of a reasonable degree of certainty," said Hubbard.

Shanks said Christopher Porco was last seen at the University of Rochester on Nov. 14, 2004 at 10:30 p.m., and even if jurors believed he drove the length of the Thruway to get to 36 Brockley in Delmar, he would not be able to arrive until at the very least 1:30 - 2 a.m. Witnesses have testified that Peter Porco wandered about the house after his injuries, and Shanks said if Hubbard's calculations are accurate, then Christopher Porco did not commit the crime.

"If you combine his testimony of the time of death with the fact that Peter Porco lived for several hours after the attack, the reality is that Christopher Porco did not kill his father," Shanks said.

Chief Prosecutor Michael McDermott said Shanks' theory did nothing more than perplex jurors.

"I completely disagree with their position, and I think jurors were totally confused by it," said McDermott.

Hubbard also detailed 10 grisly autopsy photos of the murder victim as jurors and courtroom observers looked on. The pictures of the deceased Peter Porco showed vicious ax wounds to his skull, face, jaw, under both arms and various lacerations on his hand and forearm.

"Dr. Hubbard, can you tell me whether or not the ax depicted is capable of producing these wounds on the body of Peter Porco?" Shanks asked.

"All of the wounds are consistent with having been created by this weapon," said Hubbard.

One wound from the ax attack was so severe it created a 1-inch slice from the skull to the brain. The autopsy photos were viewed on a large wall-sized screen just above where the defendant Christopher Porco sits. Friends and family members of Peter Porco, including his sister Patty Szostak, and Julia Cannizzaro, who worked with Peter Porco as a confidential secretary in the Third Appellate District Court in Albany, were visibly shaken by the photos.

Earlier in the day, Janet Hoin from the state Division of Criminal Justice Services testified as an expert witness in the field of latent fingerprints. Hoin said one of the fingerprints in the basement of 36 Brockley Drive lifted from the scene of the crime on Nov. 15, 2004 matched the left-hand pinky finger of Christopher Porco, who is on trial for murdering his father and attempting to murder his mother.

"Does the known fingerprint of Christopher Porco match the latent fingerprint on the basement door?" asked McDermott.

"Yes," said Hoin.

McDermott said the 36 Brockley Drive home was kept in immaculate condition, and he believes the print of Christopher Porco was made the night of the crime.

"It is not one piece or item that makes or breaks the case," McDermott said. "This is just another piece of the puzzle, and we will put all the little pieces together."

Christopher Porco's bank records and statements were also entered as evidence. The records are from accounts the defendant held at HSBC bank and American Express. Lawrence Dean, an employee of Sprint PCS, was asked to look up the cell phone records of Christopher Porco to see if he made any calls to his parents Peter and Joan on Nov. 15, 2004, the day the attacks occurred.

"Were there any outgoing calls on this record for Nov. 15?" asked Assistant District Attorney David Rossi.

"No, there were not," Dean answered.

The murder trial will conclude its fifth week on Friday. The prosecution is expected to conclude its case by early next week.

'Lounge Chair World' would be a great escape

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR

Commentary:

From Robin's Nest

In the morning, the children ask, "What are we doing today?"

Later, after an outing to the park or shopping at the mall or a play date or a trip to the pool, the children want to know "What are we doing next?"

And in the evening before dinner they inquire, "What are we going to do before bedtime?"

These questions come year-round, but in the summer months they come more often since there's no school or homework.

There are lots of ways to help your child fill the time. You can tell your child to pick one or more of the following activities: Clean your room, practice cello, call your grandparents, empty the dryer or dust the family room.

What, none of the choices sounds inviting?

You can tell your child to go outside and play in the yard. Or, go to the basement and play. Or, go to her room and play. Or, read a book, draw a picture, write a story, ride a bike, take a nap.

Don't be surprised when those ideas are met with, "But that stuff is all boring."

Instead of getting frustrated, smile wide and initiate a game of "Toy Giveaway."

Toy Giveaway can be played with any number of children, including one. All you need is a garbage bag or a box. The object of the game is to collect any toys, games, crafts and/or stuffed animals that the child no longer uses. Depending on the condition of the collection, the items are either given away or thrown out.

With Toy Giveaway, every child is a winner since he or she "has something to do." The parents are winners because some clutter will leave the house. The children who receive the toys are winners. And the toys themselves get to be loved again.

Oddly enough, when I get revved up for a game of Toy Giveaway, my daughter suddenly finds an alternate diversion on her own. And yet, I still feel like a winner!

Parents should not feel obligated to act like the social director on a cruise ship. It's OK to take a step back and insist your children occupy themselves (beware of activities that involve any combination of chemistry experiments, water in the basement, and younger siblings).

A good number of lucky children spend time at summer camp where there are lots of activities. There are sports camps, theater camps, dance camps, music camps, science camps, religious camps, nature camps and more. There are half-day programs, full-day programs and sleep-away camps.

Some kids don't want to go to camp. Some kids go but say they don't like it. Some kids like camp, but only tell you about the parts they don't like. Some kids love camp so much that they want to go seven days a week. Watch out for that last group because they'll have high expectations on the weekend regarding their entertainment needs.

Even if the camp offers a diverse range of activities, such as sports, crafts, singing and boating, some campers will still claim camp is boring. Either that or there'll be some other complaint: the pool water is too cold, the counselors are mean (they make the campers swim in the cold pool), the bus is too hot, I didn't have time to finish my art project, my goggles are too tight, my goggles are too loose, I can't find my goggles, my sneakers got wet in the lake, and so on.

Also, there's always something "not fair" happening to kids at camp. For example, my daughter went on a camp field trip to the Great Escape and Splash Water Kingdom in Lake George. It was a beautiful sunny day with temperatures in the mid-70s.

When I asked about the trip she reported that she only got to go down the water slide once, her favorite ride (the Scrambler) was not open, and there was no time to go to the gift shop.

I tried to empathize with her, but while she was floating down the Lazy River on an inner tube I was at work in a pre-meeting to plan for the meeting to select the members of the workgroup who will determine the mission of the project that will accomplish the goals set forth in the new regulations.

"I'm sorry you didn't have fun today," I said to my daughter. She looked at me odd and said, "I never said I didn't have fun." And then, "are we doing anything after dinner?"

Our children's lives are crammed with activities, yet they continue to crave more and more even when they are exhausted. They consider quiet time to be some sort of Extra points would be rewarded for laughing and sleeping. At the end of your visit, you'd go to the prize counter and redeem your relaxation points for gift certificates back to Lounge Chair World.

Lounge Chair World would not have appealed to me when I was a school-age child. While I relish down time now, I'm sure I must have struggled with boredom when I was a kid. And I'm sure I complained about camp. I remember being unhappy about having to swim in freezing cold water and play kickball in the blazing a hot sun.

I remember that we ate lunch in a pavilion across the far side of the field behind the camp building. Inside the building there was a soda machine that dispensed RC Cola into a paper cup! I sometimes bought a soda, but the drink was usually warm by the time I reached the pavilion. And so was my tuna sandwich. I probably complained about all that too.

But I also remember making up group names and singing songs and the smell of the woodworking shop. I remember field trips to a roller skating rink where my friend Amy and I would always win the limbo contest because we were the shortest!

I also remember unstructured time outside of camp, riding my bike on my street and spending hours reading books under the willow tree in my back yard.

It's these types of memories that I hope my daughter will have. I want to teach her to enjoy down time and simple reflection. I want her to appreciate that sometimes doing nothing can be the most satisfying choice of activity. For, all too soon, "there's nothing to do" becomes "there's not enough time in the day" and a longing for those lazy summer days of youth.

punishment. They are so easily bored.

I, on the other hand, am never bored. I do get restless and I do find particular activities boring. And I often feel I'm not using my time efficiently. But I have no problem with down time.

If I were to build an amusement park, it would be called Lounge Chair World. It would be within one hour's drive from my home. Air-conditioned buses would shuttle customers from the parking lot to the front gate. The friendly ticket collector would slip on the unlimited lounging bracelet and you'd be free to roam and lounge.

Lounge Chair World would have pools with water warm enough so you could easily walk right in, yet cool enough to be refreshing. You'd have a choice of sunshine or shade, cushioned chairs or bamboo mats. You could sit up straight or recline, or alternate between the two. Each section would broadcast different audio, such as sounds from nature (birds, the ocean, etc.), classic rock or silence. There'd be a library of paperback books, unlimited cold drinks and ice cream.

At Lounge Chair World you would earn relaxation points.

Teamwork at its best

Once in a while, but certainly not often enough, a common-sense program for kids who really need it works out.

One such program is working out really well for kids in our area, Schenectady Inner City Ministry's Computers for Kids program. The students not only learn computer basics, they learn how to repair and add hardware to computers. Kids in the program do not have access to computers at home, so this program provides an opportunity for them to both access and acquire a computer of their own.

It doesn't take a rocket scientist to figure out that almost every imaginable job today requires some knowledge of computers. Computers for Kids is a very practical tool to give inner city kids a leg up to enter the work force or college. They also develop a sense of ownership and responsibility as they learn new skills and can end up with a computer of their own.

Ignoring inequities will only cause problems later on for kids who've already been left behind because they do not have the tools to help them in school or in the work place. Without computer skills, kids in school are at a disadvantage.

GE's Elfun Society donates the computers that are used in the program. The incentive in the program is that the kids get paid, and the money can be used to buy a computer once they've been taught how to use it and repair it. It also takes the pressure off beleaguered parents who simply cannot afford an expensive computer set-up for their kids.

SICM also receives help from Schenectady County's Job Training Agency and partners with the Schenectady school district.

Topping off the support is the Troy Savings Bank Foundation's $15,000 donation for the program now in its second year.

What a wonderful result of teamwork and innovative thinking.

We would hope that other inner city programs evolve to give those kids at least a chance to develop technological skills that would enhance their chances of success in the future.

There may even be a need for such a program in suburban school districts, where some families find it difficult to make ends meet.

Hats off to SICM's creators, advocates and supporters. The program clearly shows that a group effort can make things happen.

Beware of the Medicaid trap

By LOUIS W. PIERRO, Esq.

The writer chairs the committee on long-term care reform of the New York State Bar Association Elder Law Section; served as chair of that section and of the estate planning committee. He is founder and principal of the Pierro Law Group, LLC.

New laws designed to severely limit access to Medicaid went into effect in New York on Tuesday, Aug. 1. Targeting middle class seniors and people with disabilities, the design of the legislation will force all but the most affluent who suffer from chronic illness to spend their entire life savings before Medicaid, the only program that pays for long-term care, steps in.

The controversial provisions enacted through the Federal Deficit Reduction Act of 2005, which deadlocked 50-50 in the U.S. Senate requiring a tie-breaking vote by Vice President Dick Cheney, and passed the U.S. House of Representatives by a mere two votes, will deny access to Medicaid for chronically ill and disabled applicants, and prevent eligibility for benefits until all assets are spent down to $4,150, and income is spent down to $50 per month.

The new laws were hailed as reigning in Medicaid costs, but the total savings nationwide are projected to be under $4 billion total. Contrast that with spending $3 billion per week on the Iraq war, or with the government's push to repeal the estate tax for the wealthiest among us at a cost of $750 billion.

Is essential health care such a luxury that Americans must be destitute to get help paying for it? Can tax cuts for the rich be justified when runaway deficits give the government an excuse to slash essential Medicare and Medicaid benefits?

The new rules expand the "look-back period" for transfers of assets prior to Medicaid application from three to five years.

New York's seniors and disabled persons will bear the increased burden of providing financial documentation for five years with their Medicaid applications, while today in most cases, it is difficult for clients to obtain even three years of statements. In fact, certain financial institutions may not retain a customer's monthly statements (including deposit slips and cancelled checks) for longer than three years.

There can be no doubt that in a post-DRA environment, the ones who will suffer are the chronically ill and medical providers. One can only hope, for the sake of our nation's chronically ill citizens, that either a constitutional challenge to the DRA will prevail or that reform legislation, once the impact of the DRA is truly understood, will prevail.

Even more devastating will be the way a penalty period is imposed, with the new rules running the penalty not from the date an asset was transferred as current rules do, but rather from the date an applicant is already in a nursing home, has spent down $4,150 in total assets; and files a Medicaid application.

The penalty generated by any transfer of assets in the previous five years is one month for every $6,872.00 gifted, which would penalize an applicant only after all other assets are spent. For transfers prior to Feb. 8, the penalty period commences on the first day of the month following the month of transfer, which allows Medicaid applicants to make uncompensated transfers (i.e., to children, charities, churches, temples) and qualify for Medicaid as long as the individual privately paid for care (or waited out) the resulting penalty period. Such a statutory system was fair and, most times, not harmful to our seniors and disabled clients when properly applied.

Under the DRA, however, the federal government penalizes seniors when they are most frail and vulnerable — only when they are receiving institutional level care and have just $4,150 to their name.

The impact of the new Medicaid rules is that anyone who requires chronic care Medicaid benefits will not qualify until all available assets are spent down to $4,150, and five years have passed since any transfers were made.

Consider the following example. Assume that in 200 Mrs. Smith, a widow, transferred her home worth $164,920 to her three children, and that she had $200,000 in the bank. In 200 Mrs. Smith suffers a stroke and needs nursing home care, which costs $8,330 per month ($100,000 per year).

Mrs. Smith uses her life savings of $200,000 to pay for her care for two years, and by 200 spends down to $4,150, the Medicaid eligibility level. Although already on Medicare and even with Medicare Supplement insurance costing $250 per month, no benefits are payable toward Mrs. Smith's nursing care, and once she runs out of money, she must apply for Medicaid.

Under the new law, even after spending her $200,000 life savings Mrs. Smith will be ineligible for Medicaid for two more years, or until 2011, because of the transfer of her family home to her children.

2006. The penalty for deeding the home is 24 months ($164,920 ÷ $6,872 = 24), and now, if made within the past five years, the penalty doesn't run until the date she's in a nursing home, under $4,150 in assets, and applies for Medicaid. Who pays for Mrs. Smith's care for two years while the Medicaid penalty runs? The children?

Given these changes, consumers and providers alike will need the guidance of experienced elder law attorneys schooled in the complex and burdensome Medicaid eligibility rules to navigate the minefield created by the DRA.

There can be no doubt that in a post-DRA environment, the ones who will suffer are the chronically ill and medical providers. One can only hope, for the sake of our nation's chronically ill citizens, that either a constitutional challenge to the DRA will prevail or that reform legislation, once the impact of the DRA is truly understood, will prevail.

The new rules leave many unanswered questions, and the truth is that the new laws were put in place not to solve the long-term care crisis, merely to cut the Medicaid budget. It is now up to each individual and family to seek expert advice on how to plan for long-term care, and to do it as far in advance of the need as possible.

The purchase of private long-term care insurance, creative financial planning, and legal planning using trusts are all options — but under the new rules, waiting to plan is not an option.

To avoid the "Medicaid Trap," the time to act upon the viable options and start the process with appropriate professionals is now.

Your Opinion in the Spotlight Indian Ladder to host Wild Week this month

Cure diabetes team to walk Sept. 17

Editor, The Spotlight:

For the eighth consecutive year, our community will be coming together to participate in the Walk to Cure Diabetes, sponsored by the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation.

Over the past seven years, the community has rallied around this important cause — finding a cure for diabetes — by participating in the event as a team called Bethlehem Cares. Thus far, our team has raised more than $150,000, all of which has gone directly to research to find a cure for diabetes and its complications.

On Sunday, Sept. 17, Bethlehem Cares will participate in this year's Walk to Cure Diabetes at Corporate Woods in Albany.

You can join us as a walker by calling us at 439-6894, by pre-registering at www.jdrf.org, or by using one of the walk brochures found in many area businesses. Remember to sign up as a member of the Bethlehem Cares community/family team.

If you are one of the first 150 people to turn in at least $25 for diabetes research, you will receive a free team T-shirt. We would like to thank our business friends for sponsoring our T-shirt this year, especially our presenting sponsor, DeGraff, Foy, Kunz and Devine. Our team also has four gold sponsors: the Kiwanis Club of Delmar; Meadowbrook Farms; Nigro Companies; and Price Chopper.

We would also like to thank all of our silver sponsors: Allen & Taub Plumbing and Heating; Bethlehem Family Practice; Callanan Industries; Capital Cities Imported Cars; Capital District Oral & Maxillofacial Surgeons; Choices Hair Studio & Day Spa; Crossroads Ford Mercury; Drs. Decker, Sbuttoni, Boghosian, DiCerbo & Lawless; and Robert M. Deitz, DDS.

Also, Delmar Pediatrics; Farm Family Insurance Companies; First Care of Delmar; Klersy Building Corp.; Michael F. Lyons, DMD; Mr. Subb; Northeastern Dental Lab; and Re/Max Premier.

The next time that you visit one of these businesses, please thank them for supporting their community and for supporting diabetes research.

If you can't join us for the walk but would like to make a donation, you can mail your check (made payable to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation) to Bethlehem Cares at 65 Boylston Drive, Delmar 12054.

Thank you for helping us show that Bethlehem really is a caring community!

Indian Ladder Farms and Kaving Crow Awareness Center will be combining resources this summer to provide a Barn School with a new and exciting twist.

While investigating the lives of the native people who traveled and lived in our area before European influence, participants of Camp Wild Week will explore their abilities in primitive skills such as spear-throwing and wigwam building.

During the week, campers will track animals, build fires, develop survival skills, throw atlatls, and fine tune their awareness of the natural world through a variety of fun and challenging activities based on the customs and beliefs of the Iroquois Mohawk and other native northeastern woodland peoples.

The week will be led by Vince Walsh, owner of Kaving Crow Awareness Center.

Walsh is licensed NYS guide and graduate of Paul Smith's College in the Adirondacks.

Camp Wild Week will run Monday through Friday Aug. 28 through Friday, Sept. 1 from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. at Indian Ladder Farms.

Tuition is $200 per camper. Camp is open to children ages 9-13 or fifth through ninth grade.

Space is limited to 12 campers, so please call 765-2956 or e-mail at baileyliet@yahoo.com to enroll your child.

V'ville board will check out skate park property

By ART STEIN

The Voorheesville village board is looking into the construction of a skate park. While plans are still preliminary, the village is examining issues such as location, equipment and insurance liability. Will Smith, superintendent of public works for the village, plans to contact the village of Croton-on-Hudson, which is in the process of closing its park and plans on selling some or all of its equipment. Smith also plans to visit Rotterdam to discuss with town officials their experience operating a skate park. Smith also provided the board with pictures of skate parks and companies that sell equipment.

"I really feel the kids need to have an area of their own, instead of skating in areas designed for something else and constantly being chased off. We have provided areas for basketball courts, tennis courts, and this is just another part of our community," said Smith. If the skate park is constructed, it will most likely be at the village park.

Village Attorney Anne-Jo McTague proposed a resolution that was adopted by the board, whereby the village will enter into a cooperative purchasing agreement with the Albany County Department of General Services Purchasing Division. The objective of the co-op is for municipalities in Albany County to achieve economies of scale through the joint purchase of certain goods and services. Smith reported that during the July 4 weekend, tires were slashed on trucks parked at the department of public works garage, and graffiti was written on the back of the salt shed. Smith estimates the damage to be approximately $2,000.

The joint water interconnect project with the town of Guilderland is continuing to move along, although the original targeted completion date of this summer is being pushed back to November. The interconnect project represents the final phase of the village's water system project.

The village board is in the process of conforming to United States Environmental Protection Agency and state Department of Environmental Conservation Storm Water Phase II requirements by implementing a new storm water management program. The purpose of the program is to revise regulations and establish guidelines that will clean up and protect the streams, rivers, ponds and lakes of the state. The program will include the passage of new local laws that will prevent certain improper discharges to the village's storm water system as well as control runoff from construction sites. The interconnect will provide an alternate supply of water in the event of an emergency.

"The bids for the work have been consistent with what we originally anticipated," said Smith. Smith added that letters to those residents wishing to hook up to the water service have been sent out.

Mayor Robert Conway met with World Changers Church International, a national organization of young people who are spending approximately a week in the village performing community service work.

"They are a very enthusiastic group," Conway said. "I was there to meet with them at 7 a.m., and they were up and ready to go. They have been working on a couple of jobs in the village, and they are very well supervised and appear to be doing a very good job."

The village's plan to construct a new sidewalk that traverses the CSX right-of-way down to Pine Street is moving along slowly, but the board anticipates completion by the end of the year.

Village Clerk/Treasurer Linda Pasquali presented the board with insurance figures for the village.

"As a credit to everyone who works for the village, insurance premiums have gone down by about $12,000" said Pasquali.

Pasquali also announced that there are two concerts coming up at the Gazebo: a jazz concert on Wednesday, Aug. 2, and a pop band on Monday, Aug. 14.

The next board meeting is scheduled for Tuesday, Aug. 15, at 7 p.m.

Poor Man's Auction

Ephesian House will host a Poor Man's Auction this Saturday, Aug. 5, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. in the parking lot of Faith Plaza on Rt. 9W in Selkirk. Small items will be for sale at reasonable prices.

The auction will benefit Teen Challenge and Ephesian House.

Ephesian house's mission is to provide a home for women and children who have been the victims of domestic violence.

Teen Challenge provides prevention and intervention via crisis counseling and high school assemblies focusing on the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse.

The Ephesian Shop and Susan's Diner will be open all day.

Splash park to open

"Splash Islands" opens this Saturday, Aug. 5, at the Elm Avenue Park pool.

There will be a magic show by J. Ernie McHale at noon; a family music extravaganza at 1 p.m. featuring Mark Rust; Action Bounce from 2 to 4 p.m.

Supervisor Theresa Egan will cut the ribbon that officially opens the splash park at 3 p.m.

There will be free giveaways. Admission to the pool complex is free with 2006 validated pool pass.

Island Ink Jet celebrates one year at Four Corners

By CATHERINE LUKE

On July 17, a local establishment marked the one-year anniversary of helping its customers live in a more environmentally friendly manner by refilling used ink cartridges for computer printers about half of what it costs to purchase a new cartridge.

Customers who came by the one-year party were treated to cake, coffee and $5 ink cartridge refills.

Supervisor Theresa Egan and

Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce president Marty DeLaney joined local business leaders to celebrate Island Ink Jet's anniversary. Roger Wyland of FOX Sports Radio 980 AM and News Channel 13 broadcast from a perch in the shop's front window throughout the morning.

When Mark Tremont, Island Ink Jet's proprietor, was considering where to open his store, he became attracted to the community feel and prime location of his current niche in the Four Corners. His decision was further influenced by word that Delmar is an environmentally conscious area.

He has found that to be true.

So far, Island Ink Jet has recycled more than 15,000 cartridges, helping to lessen the 300,000,000 cartridges dumped into North American landfills on an annual basis.

The benefits of refilling at Island Ink Jet rather than purchasing new cartridges are threefold, Tremont said.

"You save over 50 percent, the quality is just as good, but more importantly, you recycle," he said.

Egan expressed her admiration for Tremont's business, saying that the fact that Island Ink Jet is celebrating one year at its Delmar location says something in itself. Egan is pleased with the implementation of environmentally friendly conduct by Bethlehem businesses, as well as the way the community has backed them.

"All of our small businesses are being very proactive, and we support their efforts," she said.

DeLaney, president of the Bethlehem chamber of commerce, said she was thrilled about the anniversary of the friendly Four Corners business.

DeLaney is particularly impressed with Mark Tremont's mind for his trade.

"Mark is a great addition to our business community because he really understands how business works," she said.

DeLaney said Tremont spearheaded the show of cooperation among the Four Corners business community by involving many of the stores in the anniversary event.

Customers at last week's celebration received bags containing advertisements, business cards, menus, and discount coupons to Island Ink Jet and neighboring businesses.

Island Ink Jet mounted photos that Marty Kerins Jr. of Moment Catcher Photography took to show that Island Ink Jet's cartridge quality is as good as brand name cartridges.

Kerins is an Island Ink Jet customer.

"The quality of my images is everything," he said. "You cannot tell the difference."

In addition to its Delmar location, Island Ink Jet kiosks can be found in Colonie Center and Price Chopper stores in Clifton Park, Latham and Schenectady. Additional expansion is planned throughout the Capital District and Upstate New York. For information, contact Island Ink Jet at 478-0140.

Church plans family worship nights

First Reformed Church of Bethlehem will host three family worship and nature nights. The gatherings will take place on Wednesday, Aug. 2, Aug. 9 and Aug. 16. You are invited to bring a picnic and join us at 6 p.m. for supper on the lawn. The program begins with a short service at 6:45 p.m. in the outdoor chapel and will be followed by several activities including nature hikes, discussions and art response. The activities are geared for all ages and interests, so everyone should plan to come. Each evening ends at 9 p.m. after singing around a campfire.

Board talks location, location, location

Town hires two new police officers

By MARY LANNON

The town board will keep its meetings at town hall despite a call by one town board member to bring "government to the people."

Sam Messina suggested changing the location and time of town board meetings to try and attract a larger and more diverse crowd. But he readily agreed to an incremental approach at a relatively routine 30-minute meeting that began as usual at 5:30 p.m. last Wednesday in the main town hall meeting room.

"My belief is that government should try some innovative things, and we should bring our ideas to the people," Messina said.

He added that he did not wish to be like state government that sometimes forgets it extends outside Albany. His travels around Bethlehem have also convinced him of the need for change.

"I did hear comments about bringing the government closer to the people," he said.

Town Supervisor Theresa Egan said that she believed the regular schedule actually helped people make the meetings. Town board member Kyle R. Kotary suggested a middle ground.

"I think it's a good idea (Messina's proposal) where feasible and where appropriate," he said.

In cases in which the focus of the meeting concerns only a part of the town, Messina said, it would make sense to change locations. Individual hamlet planning soon to be under way would be specific example of a reason to change locales, he said.

In other news, the board appointed two new police officers, each to earn a salary of $43,855. They are both transferring from other police departments, Egan said, so they will be up to speed in three months rather than the six months it takes to train non-transfers. One more police officer is expected to be hired in the next six to eight weeks, she added. The board accepted the retirement of Officer Joseph M. Mosca Jr., who stepped down July 14, after serving since Dec. 17, 1977. Two other members of the police force, John Cox and Anthony Arduini, died in recent months.

The board also approved William Vail to serve as outreach worker for senior services, effective July 31. The opening generated 71 applicants, said Karen Pelletier, director of senior services. Vail stood out, Pelletier said, because he had experience both with seniors and with families. He has also worked in hospice care, she said.

"We think he's very qualified. We're very pleased to have him," she said.

In other appointment news, the board appointed Gil Boucher as acting building inspector.

New Scotland to hold hearings for two new laws

By ROB IRWIN

The town of New Scotland will be holding two public hearings on Wednesday, Aug. 9, to receive the community's feedback on two recently proposed local laws.

The public will be able to comment on the proposed right-to-farm law and a new law regulating unreasonable noise.

According to the current draft of the right-to-farm law, it would "limit the circumstances under which farming may be deemed a nuisance."

The right-to-farm law allows farmers to conduct their work reasonably without fear of being penalized or prosecuted through legal action. The spirit of the law is to reduce the loss to the town of its agricultural resources in the face of increased development.

"The main point of it is to give an awareness to people that farming is going on," said Councilman Doug LaGrange, who proposed the law. "It's just one more encumbrance you can relieve the farmers of."

"It's very common in New York state," said New Scotland Town Supervisor Ed Clark. Clark cited the smell, like that of manure, and tractors and wagons slowing traffic as common complaints in a community where farming exists.

Right-to-farm laws protect farmers and allows the to work when it's best.

"If the farmer can make the most of a few sunny days, he can get out there and get it done," said Clark. "As long as the farmer is practicing ordinarily accepted methods of farming, he can't be interfered with."

"Farms are very good for the community," said Clark, citing, amongst other things, the favorable ratio of taxes paid by farmers to services rendered to farms by the town.

According to the minutes of a June 14 town board meeting, LaGrange advised that the county's right-to farm law, still some six months away from being enacted, would mirror New Scotland's law. The state's right-to-farm law and the county's, if it is accepted, would help reinforce the local law.

The second public hearing scheduled for Aug. 9 will focus on the town's new noise control law.

"There were complaints by a number of people," said Clark.

Clark said that if he had to characterize the types of noise that draws complaints, it would be people playing music too loudly at night. The ordinance would be the first of its kind in the town.

"You can't do anything about it without an ordinance," said Clark.

The proposed law states: "It is hereby declared to be the policy of the town of New Scotland to prevent unreasonably loud, disturbing and unnecessary noise and to reduce the noise level within the town."

Unreasonable noise, according to the law, is anything "that a reasonable person of normal sensitivities would not tolerate under the circumstances" or any noise which is unnecessary. The law provides exemptions for noise from churches, synagogues, schools, emergency vehicles and municipal sponsored or approved events.

Penalties for violation of the ordinance are subject to a fine up to $250 for each offense.

Drafts of both laws are available for review at the New Scotland town hall.

Sitcom family takes to the stage in Voorheesville

By ROB IRWIN

The Brady Bunch will be visiting the village of Voorheesville in the month of August.

Mike and Carol's famous blended family will take the stage at Voorheesville Elementary School in a rendition of three of the most recognizable episodes of the 1970s television show "The Brady Bunch."

The play, as performed by the Classic Theater Guild of Voorheesville, will attempt to bring to the stage the iconic characters from the early '70s.

"We had to make some changes to adapt it to the stage," said one of the show's directors, Deborah Conti. "Obviously, television is different."

The decision to do a stage adaptation of "The Brady Bunch" was suggested by the theater guild's president, Ed Bablin, following last year's production of "The Twilight Zone," in which Conti had a role. The decision was made to make a television adaptation a summer tradition and "to make it light and fun."

"This had been done off-Broadway in the early '90s," said Conti, who contacted the

"I think because of the light comedic nature of the material, a lot of laughs are shared."

Deborah Conti

producers of that show for some tips.

Conti said she then transcribed three complete episodes from DVDs after contacting Paramount Studios for permission.

"Basically I determined (the shows) by which seemed to transfer best to the stage," said Conti. "Ones that people were most familiar with."

The production features three full-length episodes, which may be familiar to those who followed the show in prime time, or in its many runs in syndication.

Conti chose the episode in which Marcia receives a swollen nose after being hit by an errant football with which the Brady boys are playing, that results in her missing a date. Conti also chose an episode where Jan becomes tired of having so many brothers and sisters, and eventually becomes excluded from the rest of the Brady's activities. The final episode chosen is the one in which Greg decides he is not hip enough, and his father lends him his study to turn into a "groovy bachelor pad."

Conti said the cast is having a good time reworking the classic episodes for the stage.

"I think because of the light comedic nature of the material, a lot of laughs are shared," said Conti. "At first it wasn't believable to me that (the cast) was a family, but now I'm starting to see that, especially in the more tender moments."

Conti said another deciding factor in choosing the episodes was to ease the set changes. She said episodes would mostly take place within the famous Brady house, instead of on some of the Brady's offshoot locations, notably the Grand Canyon and Hawaii.

The set, said Conti, will be as accurate as a stage set could accommodate.

"Even Mike Brady couldn't design something that elaborate for the stage," said Conti, of the patriarchal architect of the Brady family.

Conti said they are also working on including classic commercials into the production, and it may even include some television studio staples, such as an applause prompts for the crowd.

"We want the audience to feel like a TV audience," said Conti.

The show will run Friday, Aug. 18 – Sunday, Aug. 20, and Friday, Aug. 25 – Sunday, Aug. 27. Friday and Saturday shows will begin at 8 p.m. and Sunday shows at 2 p.m. Shows are $7 for adults and $5 for seniors and children under 13. For information or reservations for groups of six or more, call 459-9826.

The Classic Theater Guild has recently moved from the Hilton Performing Arts Center in Albany to its new location in Voorheesville.

topher Bowdish said she nodded 'yes' that her son Chris had committed the crime.

"It sounded like the most absurd thing I ever heard," Joan Porco said.

Porco was called by the prosecution as a witness to allow into evidence e-mail correspondence between her and her son Christopher from January to November 2004.

"You have looked over these e-mails with your attorney," asked McDermott.

"Yes, but I can't see them because of my eye," said Joan Porco, who is now blind in one eye from the attack and is only able to read with the other eye through a magnifying glass.

Thirty e-mails were submitted to the court, including several correspondences from Joan to Christopher Porco questioning her son's action or lack thereof regarding his financial affairs in the summer and fall of 2004. She also questioned her son's unwillingness to confront his parents with the truth.

"Honesty and integrity are the most important things in life," said Joan in an e-mail to her son in September 2004. Another e-mail from October asked why Christopher Porco is not accepting phone calls from either his parents or his brother Johnathan.

"Don't you want to talk to us?" asked Joan in an e-mail. "Are you hiding something?"

In another message, Joan Porco stated that her other son Johnathan tried to contact Christopher 40 times in regard to selling a computer on eBay. Christopher eventually told his mother he was trying to finance his own education in the fall of 2004 at the University of Rochester by selling merchandise over the Internet.

"He said he had a company where he was selling computers online and he had sold several in addition to working at the veterinary hospital," said Joan. Christopher Porco has worked at the Bethlehem Veterinary Hospital since he was in high school.

McDermott characterized Porco's online sales in a different way to the media, saying one of the computers sold was Joan's that was stolen from the family home and auctioned by Christopher Porco on eBay.

"It was another scam where the mother was victimized," said McDermott.

In an e-mail two weeks before the attacks, Joan Porco questioned her son's ability to reason by not addressing several outstanding loans heading to delinquency.

"We do not want companies calling here anymore," said Porco. She asks a number of questions in the e-mails. "This is very upsetting to us." "What are you thinking of?" "A due date is a due date, what don't you understand?" "Are you crazy?"

When asked by Defense Attorney Laurie Shanks if she felt her son Christopher was crazy, Joan Porco stated unequivocally "no."

"I didn't think he was mentally ill," said Porco. "I was just trying to get his attention. I was angry."

She also told the jury that neither Christopher nor Johnathan Porco ever showed any violence toward anyone.

Joan Porco was scheduled to take the stand for a second day on Tuesday, Aug. 2, mainly due to Shanks' several hours of questioning to elicit several comments about Joan Porco's life, about Peter Porco and about her two sons. She recalled in great detail growing up in Gloversville in a close family where her father operated a glove business.

"Family was always important to me," said Joan Porco as Shanks explained to jurors how Joan Porco's own parents died when she was young. She recalled the first time she met her husband Peter on the University of Albany campus in 1972 and when they married on June 8, 1974. Joan Porco said that both she and her husband spent as much time as possible with their two sons as "... I came to realize the truth really isn't what they (the police) were after. They were after convicting my son Christopher."

Joan Porco

they were growing up.

"We were a very close family, and Peter always wanted to be there for the boys," said Porco.

Joan Porco told jurors she was the disciplinarian and the boys would go to Peter whenever they needed him. She recalled Christopher Porco as being very perceptive and very much like his father.

"I think Chris has many of the same traits his Dad had," said Joan Porco. "I see Peter in Christopher a lot."

Shanks tried to find out when Joan Porco first realized her husband Peter had been murdered.

"It did take me quite a lot of time to accept what had happened," said Joan Porco. She also did not recall when she first understood that her son Christopher was the authorities' main suspect.

"I had no idea at Sunnyview (rehabilitation hospital in Schenectady) he was the only one they were focusing on," Porco said. "Since that time I came to realize the truth really isn't what they (the police) were after. They were after convicting my son Christopher."

Shanks asked Joan Porco about a mysterious stranger she claims to have seen outside her home two times prior to the attacks.

"I happened to be on the porch when I saw a man with a very slight build walk up the driveway quickly like he had something to do. As soon as the light came on he walked back down the driveway," Porco said in a raspy voice as she cleared her throat several times at the end of a long day of testimony. She stated she was very scared and concerned about the stranger who also appeared in the daytime. Joan Porco did not inform the two incidents of the mysterious stranger to local authorities until after the attacks on Brockley Drive several weeks later.

Joan Porco's attorney and family friend John Polster stayed in the courtroom next to the defense team of Shanks and Terence Kindlon during testimony. McDermott questioned if Mrs. Porco ever asked Christopher where he was on the night of Nov. 14, 2004.

"My attorney, John Polster had asked me not to discuss the case with Christopher or anyone and I have not," she stated.

Christopher Porco told several witnesses that he was sleeping in the student lounge at Munro Hall dorm at the University of Rochester when the attacks occurred. Many of those same witnesses, including several university students, testified that they had not seen Christopher Porco in the student lounge at Munro Hall during the overnight hours of Nov. 14 and 15.

Porco was first seen that next day Monday morning around 8:45 a.m. jogging under a bridge in the direction of the dorm.

dents he gave his dorm bed up for an out-of-town guest from his fraternity, and he would sleep in the student lounge.

Marshal Crumiller is the last person to identify Porco's whereabouts on Sunday evening, Nov. 14, 2004. The two ate dinner at a restaurant close to the campus before Crumiller left Porco at 10 p.m.

Prior testimony Crumiller gave the jury is that Porco was going to do yard work for his aunt and uncle, John and Barbara Balzano, who live in Fairport, a suburb of Rochester. Barbara Balzano earlier testified that Porco never came the next day

"This was brought into evidence to show that police conducted a very thorough investigation. There was no third party DNA found at the crime scene."

nor was he asked that day or ever to do yard work for them.

John Balzano stated during pre-trial testimony that he picked up the defendant from school on the afternoon of Nov. 15 and drove him to Albany Medical Center to see his mother Joan Porco, Balzano's sister.

At the time, Joan Porco was in critical condition and undergoing several hours of surgery to repair damage inflicted by an attacker wielding an ax on her and her husband at their home at 36 Brockley Drive, Delmar, the night before. Peter Porco died from the attack.

Balzano also stated during pre-trial testimony that when he arrived at the campus to drive Porco to Albany, "he was very quiet, still, almost dark because I didn't recognize him."

Bethlehem Det. Christopher Bowdish testified on Wednesday that an all points bulletin was issued for Porco the afternoon he was a passenger in his uncle's car.

Before testimony began on Friday, Judge Jeffrey Berry told jurors both the defense and prosecution agreed to allow into evidence the Porco family's life insurance policy.

"The parties agree, along with Christopher Porco himself, that Joan and Peter Porco had a life insurance policy on their life and that Johnathan and Christopher Porco were alternate or main beneficiaries on these life insurance policies," said Berry.

Prosecutors indicated throughout the proceedings that Christopher Porco was in heavy financial debt and would benefit from the death of his parents Peter and Joan.

DNA expert and forensic scientist, Urfan Mukhtar, performed several DNA tests of swabs extracted from the scene of the crime by police investigators. The evidence shows that all of the samples of fiber, fingerprint scrapings, blood or other swabs taken from 36 Brockley Drive after the crime are those of Peter and Joan Porco.

"This was brought into evidence to show that police conducted a very thorough investigation," said Chief Prosecutor Michael McDermott. "There was no third party DNA found at the crime scene."

State Police forensic scientist Richard Brunt collected several items of evidence at the Delmar home crime scene and from Porco's Jeep Wrangler. The items were mostly blood samples and fingerprints, to be swabbed and tested.

"The only area which I did find blood was on the driver's side floor mat underneath that tested positive for blood," Brunt said.

Defense Attorney Terence Kindlon said the blood print found in Porco's car was between the floor mat and carpet indicating it could have been made at any time.

Two wristwatches of Peter Porco's, a Timex and Seiko, were also thoroughly examined for prints or blood. The Timex band was found broken, as if cut by an object such as an ax, when police arrived. Brunt said the watch tested positive for blood and was retained for DNA analysis.

The prosecution's case is based largely on circumstantial evidence up to this point. A neighbor of the Brockley Drive home was expected to testify on Monday that Christopher Porco's Jeep Wrangler was seen at the location during the overnight hours when the crime was committed.

The defense, led by Terence Kindlon and Laurie Shanks, believe their client is innocent and the prosecution is trying to make an alibi case.

Joan Porco was also scheduled to be a witness for the defense. Shanks said they haven't made a decision on whether Christopher Porco will take the stand in his own defense.

National Grid offers tips for efficient AC

For much of the year, upstate New Yorkers are concerned with staying warm. But a more welcome "problem" — keeping cool — faces us in the summer months, as warm weather sends us in search of shade, shorelines, and air-conditioned spaces. National Grid offers the following suggestions for keeping homes air-conditioned in the most energy-efficient way possible:

- If your air conditioner has an outside air option, use it sparingly. It is far more economical to re-circulate and cool the indoor air than to cool down the hot outside air to comfortable room temperatures.

- Ceiling fans circulate air allowing for comfort at a higher thermostat setting.

- Reducing humidity will increase comfort at even warmer temperatures. Try using a bathroom exhaust fan when you shower, don't dry firewood in your basement, don't vent your clothes dryer inside, and put houseplants outside during the summer.

- Clean the air filters on room air conditioners monthly.

- Central air conditioning units should be inspected, cleaned, and tuned by a professional once every two to three years.

For more energy-saving tips, visit www.nationalgridus.com and click on "Energy Efficiency."

High-speed Internet at dial-up prices.

(Isn't it time you ditched dial-up?)

Get high-speed Verizon Online DSL (up to 768 Kbps) for just $17.99 a month when you sign up for a year. Now that's really something. Especially when you're probably paying about the same for your dial-up. And forget about cable — it's usually way more.

- Click and connect to the Web in an instant. No more waiting to dial in.

- Talk on the phone and surf the Net at the same time, on the same phone line.

- Download large files in the time it takes you to tie your shoes.

Finally, you'll be able to do everything you can't with dial-up — for about the same price. When can you do so much for so little, why wait?

Call 1-800-504-7668 to sign up. And you'll even get a modem at no charge if you sign up online. As you can see, there's never been a better time to get rid of dial-up.

Bethlehem Neighbors for Peace to screen 9/11 movie

In recognition of the fifth anniversary of the 9/11 attacks, the local peace group Bethlehem Neighbors for Peace will host a screening Loose Change 2nd Edition Aug. 3 at 6 p.m.

The documentary investigates the story of 9/11 as told by The 9/11 Commission Report and will be shown for free at Bethlehem Public Library, 451 Delaware Ave., Delmar. The film had over 10 million viewings on the Internet in May alone, and has prompted Vanity Fair to say, "It may be the first Internet blockbuster movie." Dylan Avery, Korey Rowe, and Jason Bermas, the controversial filmmakers, will be attending to answer questions after the screening.

The film shows the direct connections between the attacks of Sept. 11, 2001, and the United States government. Evidence is derived from news footage, scientific fact, and most important, Americans who suffered through that tragic day. The filmmakers encourage viewers to "take nothing we say at face value. We highly encourage you to research this information yourselves and come to your own conclusions."

On Tuesday afternoon, Aug. 8, the Uncle Brothers will bring their songwriting talents and Celtic-based music to the RCS Middle School cafeteria for a family concert. The free performance begins at 12:30 p.m. Bring cushions and beach chairs. The concert celebrates the last week of summer reading programs sponsored by RCS Community Library.

RCS library rewards adult, teen readers

The RCS Community Library is rewarding adult and teen readers.

For every three books teens and adults finish, they can enter a coupon in the Frequent Reader Program that makes them eligible for weekly drawings for small, but interesting prizes. Contributions of homemade items to our prize pool are also welcome.

Weekly winners include Susan Farrell-Melick, Renate LaPlante, Brian Melick, Donna Hamilton and Peg Hopper.

Reading rewards for children

The school-age summer reading program, Books — A Treasure!, continues through Aug. 10. Each book kids read will earn them a certain number of beads, which can be traded in for many exciting prizes in the library's treasure chest.

Families are welcome to join the summer reading program independently. This is a great option for kids who are either too busy or too independent for group activities, and for young children who listen to adults read aloud to them.

The library has copies of summer reading lists and assigned books from the RCS schools.

Delayed opening

On Friday, Aug. 11, the library will open at 1 p.m. This brief holiday enables the library staff to treasure books again, despite the hectic pace of the previous six weeks.

• All library programming is free (unless otherwise noted) and open to the public. The RCS Community Library is located at 15 Mountain Road, Ravena. For information, call 756-2053.

V'ville proposes $5.82 million building project

Project will carry no tax impact for public

By ROB IRWIN

The Voorheesville Central School District board of education voted unanimously at its July 17 meeting to seek public approval for $5.82 million in building renovations.

Approximately 89 percent of the capital project would focus on the elementary school building, addressing heating, ventilation safety and accessibility needs. The project will take two summers to complete.

According to Assistant Superintendent for Business Sarita Winchell, since the project was outside of the district's general budget, it requires separate voter approval.

"Many of the elementary school buildings require continuous repair, which is costly," said Superintendent Linda Langevin. "The proposal would create a better learning environment for our students while improving efficiency, costing less to maintain."

Another option that was researched, said Winchell, was completely replacing, rather than renovating, the elementary school.

"If we were to build that square footage for that building, it would cost $28 million," said new fire alarm system, replacing original single pane windows in the 1963 wing and removing asbestos tile classroom floors in the 1930s and 1940s sections of the building.

"That building has really had nothing substantial done to it since 1989," said Winchell.

The proposal would be funded by a $4.88 million bond issue, repayment of which would begin in conjunction with the retirement of the bond from the 1989 project. Winchell said this means that there will be no new tax impact on the community.

Additionally, the district would use the $500,000 capital reserve along with the reserve's interest earnings and $409,000 state grant from Expanding our Children's Education and Learning (EXCEL). About 64 percent of the project would be eligible for state aid reimbursement.

Work at the high school and middle school, about 10 percent of the project, would rebuild the tennis courts, repave the gym

"Because this carries no tax impact, I would hope that the taxpayers would see this is a deal. You don't want your facilities to fall into disrepair."

Sarita Winchell

Winchell, who added that only $5.5 million of that cost would be eligible for state aid. "It's foolish to even remotely consider replacing that building."

Fifty-one percent of the proposal would involve rebuilding the heating and ventilation system throughout the elementary school, some parts of which is nearly 45 years old.

Additionally, a limited number of classrooms and offices on the third floor would be air-conditioned.

Other work in the elementary school would include replacing the elementary gymnasium/auditorium flooring, installing a

Campout raises money to build Habitat homes

Volunteers sleep out to raise money for Habitat for Humanity

By ROB IRWIN

From Aug. 10 to the 17, campers will gather in Tawasentha Park in Guilderland to raise money for Habitat for Humanity with a tent-a-thon.

"Like a walk-a-thon, they go and get pledges," said Kevin Conley, a contact for United Methodist Church, the main sponsor of the event. "It's a fundraiser that's intended to help Methodist churches build one of the Habitat homes."

Campers will solicit pledges for the number of nights that they camp out in the town park.

"They'll collect money from family, friends and co-workers," said Ericka Small, development director at the Capital Region Habitat for Humanity. People can camp for one night, or for the whole time.

Small said typically, the weeklong event attracts approximately 100 campers, and raises a sizeable amount of money toward building a new Habitat house.

Fundraisers enjoy an evening campfire during last year's tent-a-thon.

"It's actually a wonderful experience," said Tim Condon, the event's volunteer coordinator, who camped out for the first time last year. "The actual event itself is sitting around a campfire, meeting new people."

Condon said that on any given night, there may be 20 people camping out, and some nights that number has spiked to 80.

"The variety goes from singles to families with children to the young and old," said Condon of the campers. "It mainly is local people."

Condon said some people get up in the morning for breakfast, go to work and return to their tents in the evening for dinner. The Tent-a-Thon offers daytime security to keep an eye on campers' property.

"In the 13 years of the event, there hasn't been any incident in which the police needed to be called," said Condon.

In the event's first year, Condon said, campers slept out behind the McKownville Methodist Church, and the event stayed a grassroots church event for 11 years. Its popularity called for an expansion in the last few years.

"Last year, actually, we raised about $15,000," said Small. "It varies a lot year to year."

Condon said the highest donation year the event has seen was in 2004, when the remnants of Hurricane Ivan swept through the area.

Area businesses and restaurants support the event supplying dinner and breakfast each day. Two free concerts will be held at Tawasentha Park during the tent-a-thon.

"Traditionally, the United Methodist church has been a great supporter of Habitat," said Small.

Habitat for Humanity typically will build four or five houses a year in the Albany area, Small said.

"It costs (Habitat) about $75,000 to build a house in Albany," said Small. Habitat for Humanity will then sell the home, at zero interest, to a low-income family for $60,000.

Much of the money for building the homes comes from fundraising events like the tent-a-thon. The houses are kept affordable through business and corporate donations, private grants, special events, donations of building materials, volunteer work and from a donor base of about 8,000 people.

According to the Habitat for Humanity Web site, the Albany chapter was created in 1988 to provide home ownership opportunities in partnership with low-income households. Habitat's mission is to build simple, decent, affordable houses. Habitat sells homes with no interest to families that meet a set of criteria.

Since 1976, Habitat has built more than 200,000 homes in the United States and in 100 countries around the world.

Bethlehem native directs a 'tale as old as time'

By CATHERINE LUKE

Directing a play is like putting together a puzzle.

"Only this one has more pieces," said Owen Smith, director of the current Park Playhouse production of "Beauty and the Beast." Recently, the Delmar native had the chance to prove how thoroughly he was involved in the patchwork of his show when an ensemble member became too sick to perform. There are no understudies, so Smith stepped in and took over the actor's role for the evening. This makes things "all fit in," he said.

Smith is a graduate of Bethlehem Central High School, where his theatrical endeavors first started. Following graduation, Smith attended SUNY New Paltz, where he obtained a degree from the theatre arts department.

While there, Smith pursued his passion for the theater. It was in New Paltz's Black Box Theatre, an entirely student-run venue, which Smith was able to truly get a feel for what it takes to put on a performance. The Black Box hosted between four to 10 plays per year. Smith said that the beauty of that particular theater was in how it allowed aspiring theater professionals to carry the full weight of a production, and taught them how to take full responsibility for their productions. It forced them to realize that they must put the required work into a project or it would flop, and no one wants a flop.

"It really shows you how to do the job," Smith said of the program in which, among other accomplishments, he produced "Batboy: The Musical."

Since graduation, Smith participated in the 40th anniversary tour of "Fiddler on the Roof" with Troika Entertainment. Smith spent seven months traveling to 43 states as a member of the ensemble and standby for "The Constable."

He described the experience as a fluent and ever-changing routine that seemed to entail nothing routine at all. While playing in large cities as well as rural towns, the state of mood and health of the cast fluctuated, allowing for parts to be swapped and played by various members of the traveling cast, barring staleness in the production. Smith felt fortunate to have been able to see much of the country via such an eventful and educational odyssey.

Of late, the Clockwork Theatre and Theatre for a New Audience in New York City claim Smith's time and talent. The Clockwork Theatre is a nonprofit company recently founded by graduates of SUNY New Paltz. Smith described it as an establishment where friends work with friends, where productions benefit from a collaboration of individuals' skills, and where part of the fun lies in the ability for everyone to share their input.

The Clockwork Theatre tends to put on more modern plays as opposed to the more classical style of Theatre for a New Audience, where Smith dabbles in the business realm of theater as the head of the membership program.

Though Smith's training and performing experiences have been varied, there has been one constant set that Smith returns to during the summer months, and that's Washington Park's Park Playhouse in Albany, a theater community where Smith has prospered.

Smith's roots are based in Park Playhouse II, a summer camp style training program where about 25 students are chosen following auditions to work with professional actors and directors on various aspects of production. A graduate of this program, Smith has gone on to serve as the director and musical director for the program, heading productions of "Into the Woods" and "The Wizard of Oz."

"Beauty and the Beast" has by far been my largest opportunity," Smith said. "I am working with a fantastic group of 25 who all really want to be there."

Smith said it is the story, the energy, and the larger-than-life costumes that really create the magic of the tale. But it is the core of the tale that Smith is most moved by.

"First, it is a love story," he said. Smith expands upon this in the director's note in the program, elaborating on how the tender compassion, understanding, and love shown by characters such as Belle toward the Beast can be seen as a lesson to be modeled by society, on openness and acceptance.

The production of "Beauty and the Beast" has generally been met with positive feedback.

"Reviewers can be tough, but you just don't think much about it," Smith said. "I can't waste too much time worrying about what I can do to get good reviews."

"People come to the Park Playhouse for the experience—with family, kids, a loved one," he said. "The show is the backdrop for the whole evening. Part of the fun is sitting outside with these loved ones and sharing the experience."

Smith said his Park Playhouse ventures never become repetitive. "Park Playhouse has continually offered me things I've wanted to come back for," he said. "It is rewarding and fun."

The Apple Community Pharmacy in Malta is one of several independent pharmacies that are growing in popularity.

Ann Marie French

Return

themselves in the community by customizing their services. At Menges & Curtis Apothecary in Saratoga Springs, pharmacist and co-owner Michael Lenz is known for the compounding of medications.

"Compounding takes time," he said. "What we do is really a specialty. We have a compounding lab here. We literally make it from the beginning to the end."

Lenz is able to make capsules, suppositories, and topical creams and help with providing unique doses or special flavoring. Best known for the work he does for menopausal women, Lenz said he also does pain medicine compounds, pediatric compounding and has recently branched into veterinary compounding.

"There are so many neat things that we can do," said Lenz. "There's a real need for it out there in this community."

Pagnotta said compounding is a part of his business as well, but added that like other independents, he offers a large variety of durable medical goods such as canes and walkers. Golden noted that he carries a broad selection of hospital and surgical supplies as well. Typically, the big chains do not have the time or amount of staff necessary to offer those types of products and fill out the insurance paperwork often required for them.

Another feature that distinguishes the independent pharmacies from their competitors is what is sold in the retail sections of the stores. Lenz noted that Menges and Curtis has developed its own line of skin care products. Cards, candles and lotions are also some of their products, but Lenz said they also carry unusual items not found elsewhere in the immediate area such as Marvis toothpaste.

"One-third of the stuff on our shelves people have requested or looked for it," said Pagnotta, who added that the level of service is what really sets his pharmacy apart from others.

"That's where we can compete," said Pagnotta, who doesn't find it unusual to walk a prescription out to a customer's car. Delivery is also available, although it is primarily utilized by senior citizens. Lenz also provides a delivery service within the city of Saratoga Springs but is considering expanding it.

Pagnotta, Lenz, and Golden all said that despite their respective pharmacies being closed by early evening, each of them is available after hours. Golden noted that Apple Community Pharmacy has a pharmacist on call 24 hours a day, seven days a week to answer customers' questions or fill a prescription. Similarly, Pagnotta and Lenz noted their phone numbers are provided either by calling the business number or in the phone book for patients to utilize for after-hours issues.

Pagnotta said his business is continuing to grow on a daily basis and he believes that his customers are unlikely to leave, unless of course they move out of the area. He said he believes that many people have misconceptions about independent pharmacies.

"One big fallacy is cost," he said. "People think it will be more expensive." Pagnotta, Lenz, and Golden all agreed that independent pharmacies are able to accept most insurance policies available. While there will certainly be exceptions, the men say those are few and far between. Each of the pharmacies also provides Medicare billing for the durable medical equipment products they offer.

"I think it's an exposure issue," said Pagnotta. "For the most part, people don't know an independent pharmacy."

Figuring out the most cost-effective prescription plan can be daunting

By JENNIFER FARNSWORTH

When you combine all of the new prescription drugs being offered today with all the different types of health insurance plans, it can lead to a confusing process for some. If you add in terms like Medicare Part D, "carved out," formulary and non-formulary, it may seem like having your pharmacist fill a prescription is something like a second job. Understanding your health benefits and getting to know what your options are can help to ease the pain.

The best place to start is by understanding your health coverage. Many health insurance companies, such as Capital District Physicians Health Plan, have prescription benefits "carved out," or administered by a prescription benefits carrier. CDPHP said 98 percent of all pharmacies in the country participate with Caremark, the company which administers its customers' prescription coverage, or who they're "carved out" with.

"We have over 60,000 contracted pharmacies across the country," said Eileen Wood, vice president of pharmacy professional services for CDPHP. A key point for consumers and patients to understand is that prescription coverage through an employer is coverage decided by the employer. Wood said it is up to the employer group to choose the coverage it offers to employees.

"Over 90 percent of our members have an RX (prescription) rider," Wood said. "The employer often determines the coverage based on premiums. The higher the co-pay, the lower the premium. It depends on what the employer can afford to contribute. Pharmacy benefits have become the fastest growing health expense in the country. Employers find themselves struggling to help keep up."

For those not covered by an employer, programs such as Family Health Plus, Child Health Plus and Medicare Part D exist. In February, the state Department of Health designed a plan to monitor and report on the process of the Medicare Part D program. The new federal drug program offers prescriptions to Medicare beneficiaries. The Medicare Part D plan allows for some prescription assistance for recipients. The drug benefit will not be part of the traditional Medicare program, but rather will be offered through private insurance plans, according to the Medicare Center for Advocacy.

"We have worked hard during the past 11 years to ensure that all New Yorkers, including seniors, and the disabled, have access to quality health care," said Gov. George Pataki in a February 2006 press release.

Gary L. Wilson, M.D., medical director for CDPHP, said that drugs are significantly more expensive than they were in the past 20-30 years.

"The complexity of the drugs available in the market has grown tremendously, there are so many different drugs now offered and by different manufacturers as well," said Wilson.

In addition to understanding what your plan covers, Wood said it is just as crucial to take the time to discuss your options with both your physician and your pharmacist. She advised discussing the use of generic drugs with your doctor.

"Generics are often suitable for our members and that decreases the overall expense they pay out," Wood said. "Talk with your doctor about available generic options or visit your health insurance Web site for information."

Wood said CDPHP lists all of the brand name drugs it covers, also known as formulary, along with the approved generic options. With many people today on maintenance drugs, prescriptions by mail are becoming a common way to purchase drugs. People with this option find it can save four co-pays a year per prescription, saving some patients hundreds of dollars. The health care provider writes a prescription for three months at a time with three refills. This is also a good option for those on maintenance medications who cannot always make it to the pharmacy.

The local pharmacist can also be an excellent resource for knowing the best bet for prescription options.

"A pharmacist's job today entails much more than simply preparing and distributing prescriptions, and they are the most accessible members of the health care profession," said John Roberts, R.Ph. and senior vice president of CVS store operations. "A pharmacist represents something rare for consumers today, instant access without an appointment to a trained healthcare professional who can help them out. Our patients consider us to be a partner in their healthcare and it's important for them to know that pharmacists are always ready to advise them on both simple and complex concerns about their medications and their health."

Many pharmacies, such as CVS, now offer pharmacy benefit management, mail order, and information on their company Web sites.

Kristin Marshall, public relations account manager for CDPHP, said the company has received some inquiries about obtaining prescription drugs through Canada.

"Obtaining prescription drugs through Canada is an issue we've all seen in the media. Many patients with multiple scripts, particularly seniors, have thought of this as an affordable option. There are hazards to this method and consumers should be aware of the risks," said Marshall.

Marshall said according to a recent Dow Jones Newswire report, the majority of prescription drugs ordered from Web sites believed to be Canadian pharmacies originate outside of Canada.

"We do not get inquiries from patients as much as we do from employers looking to save money," Wood said. "There is no such thing as a Food and Drug Administration (in Canada), like we have here, where consumers are protected."

Wood said sorting through prescription drug plans, different medications, and pharmacy options does not need to be overwhelming.

"As healthcare looks to the future, the biggest way can continue to aid members is by stressing the importance of learning more about generic options and becoming educated so that they can approach providers with questions about options and really understand their health plans, whether they be state-funded or through an employer," said Wood.

Joseph Leese

Joseph Leese, 89, of Delmar, died Tuesday, July 25, at St. Peter's Hospital in Albany.

Born in Iliion, he graduated from Iliion High School and summa cum laude from the former State Teachers College in Albany.

He taught English at Port Byron Central School before joining the OSS as a code analyst during World War II.

He earned a Ph.D. in psychology from Columbia University. He taught at the Horace Mann School in New York City, then became professor at Auburn University (Alabama), where he served with the Southern States Workshop concerning resource use in the south.

In 1948, he was appointed professor at SUNY Albany, where he organized the Capital Area School Development Council.

He was awarded a Fulbright Scholarship at the University of Bergen, Norway, and served as consultant to the ministry of education there. After a term with the Marshall Recovery Act, he returned to Albany to engage in programs for gifted students in area schools.

In 1960, he received a grant from the Keetering Foundation to pursue those programs. He taught at Manchester University and the University of Reading, both in England, and served as consultant to the department of education and science there; and also as consultant on the island of Cyprus. He taught at several other American universities: at Berkley in California; Chapel Hill in North Carolina; at College Park in Maryland and at Syracuse University.

He was a member of the International Association of Professors and Lecturers, the American Association of University Professors, Inter-national Torch, Bethlehem Lodge 85 F&AM, Green Valley, Ariz. BPOE 2592, Albany Country Club and the St. Andrew's Society.

The place is Ernesto's Cantina where Guillermo (Robert B. Cordell-left) and brother Ernesto (Michael Lluberes- right) vie for the hand of the lovely Rosalinda (Tracy J. Wholf - center) who must choose between lust and love in "Five Course Love."

Summer's a time for love at Capital Rep

By W. K. Aaron

It's summer, and love, light comedy and music are in the air in downtown Albany with Capital Repertory Theatre's 26th season opener, "Five Course Love." The Gregg Coffin regional premier is a fairly mindless adult romp through the trials and tribulations of girl meets boy, boy loses girl, sometimes boy gets girl and occasionally gets boy too. Presented in five vignettes, the one act, 90-minute show is funny, lighthearted and has a mix of mostly forgettable but enjoyable music. The show is made up of tales of romance placed in five different restaurants.

The plot, which is practically nonexistent, moves from a 1950s diner, to a country western barbecue, to an Italian trattoria, a German cabaret and back to the diner. Adam Peltz's direction moves the actors through the scenes with a lighthearted ease that combines slapstick and schtick with romance. Peltz who doubles as choreographer, is more deft at direction than choreography, though the performers certainly get an athletic workout.

The stage is transformed into a wonderful recreation of a stainless steel 1950s diner replete with red leatherette banquette. The audience is afforded a view into the kitchen through the window pass-through. This time, however, the band is cooking up the treats on the other side. Randy Glass, music director and pianist, along with Brendan Coyle on drums and Michael Wicks on bass, make up the show's versatile trio.

Speaking of trios ... the show 15 characters are played by three very talented performers. Robert B. Cordell, Tracy Wholf and Michael Lluberes pull off a multitude of character transformations, costume changes and virtually kept the small but appreciative crowd laughing nonstop. All three have wonderfully strong singing voices, a certain athleticism in their dancing and the ability to not be afraid of making complete fools of themselves with total abandon in front of an audience.

The Star-Lite Diner, a 1950s style restaurant straight out of "Grease," finds a bookish waitress named Kitty (Tracy J. Wholf) reading romance novels and looking for Mr. Right while single guy Matt (Robert B. Cordell) is driving to another blind date in hopes of finding the girl of his dreams in "Five Course Love."

The show is definitely an adults only evening. At times the material goes from naughty to downright smutty, yet always with a great deal of fun. Not for the prudish, much of "Five Course Love" comes across as an uncensored "Saturday Night Live" skit. Not looking for a mind-bending, thought-provoking evening out? Want to escape the heat of the dog days of summer for a brief moment? Just looking for a good laugh as a way to forget the troubles of the world around you? If so, then Cap Rep's "Five Course Love" is the perfect dessert for a hot summer night.

"Five Course Love" runs

Tuesday, Wednesday, Thursday evenings at 7:30 p.m.; Fridays at 8 p.m.; Saturdays at 4 and 8:30 p.m.; and Sundays at 2:30 p.m. through Aug. 19. Tickets are $24 to $39. For information, call the box office at 445-7469 or visit www.capitalrep.org.

Sofia (Tracy J. Wholf) has been meeting wiseguy Gino (Robert B. Cordell) in secret at the Trattoria Pericolo while her mob boss husband Nicky has been doing time in this Soprano-ish operatic love triangle in "Five Course Love."

at Giants Stadium — only the service entrance at the back of the stadium, which is a lot more unsightly than the RACC. And players aren't exactly in the mood to stop and sign autographs following a game, especially if they lost.)

So as Giants training camp rolls on through the dog days of August, thousands more people will trek out to the University at Albany for a morning or afternoon of watching their favorite players run the same routes over and over just so they can then say they got to see Eli Manning throw a perfect strike to Plaxico Burress and then get both of their autographs.

It sounds impractical to me, but I'm not going to argue with that many people. Just remember to stay hydrated in the summer heat, and bring along a book to read when things get really boring.

This week at Saratoga

The second week of the Saratoga Race Course meet begins with the two-day New York Stallion Series Wednesday and Thursday. The Cab Calloway division for 3-year-olds takes center stage Wednesday, with the 3-year-old fillies competing Thursday for the Statue of Liberty division title.

Friday features the running of the Grade II Honorable Miss Handicap for fillies and mares 3-years old and up. The six-furlong race has a $150,000 purse.

Saturday is Whitney Day at the track. Two stakes races highlight the card — the Darley Test for 3-year-old fillies and the Whitney Handicap for 3-year-olds and up.

Sunday features the third giveaway at the track — the annual Saratoga T-shirt day. On the track, the Grade II Fourstardave Handicap for 3-year-olds and up highlights the racing card.

The second week wraps up next Monday with the National Museum of Racing Hall of Fame induction ceremony at the Fasig-Tipton Pavilion in the morning.

Matt Branigan accounted for two of Bethlehem's three runs in the first game with a homer in the top of the fourth inning. Dan Lanchantin then belted a two-run shot during Bethlehem's four-run rally in the second game.

Bethlehem can still make the Babe Ruth World Series by winning the Mid-Atlantic regional that starts Thursday in State College, Pa.

"We're facing teams from Maryland, Pennsylvania, New Jersey and Delaware, and it's going to be great competition down there," Felitte said. "I think it's still an honor for those kids to go down there and play in that tournament."

Marler makes match play at state amateur tournament

Bethlehem Central High School student Andrew Marler reached the first round of match play at the New York State Golf Association men's amateur championship tournament July 18-22 in Troy.

Marler, who will be a senior in the fall, made the 32-player cut with a 5-over-par 147 during the two qualifying rounds. He then lost to Scotia's Tom Cooper 2 and 1 in the opening round of match play.

Marler represented his home course of Colonie Country Club in Voorheesville at the state tournament.

Marler and fellow Bethlehem students Michael Mashuta and Ryan Prinzo are in suburban Syracuse this week for the NYSGA's annual Junior/Boys Amateur Championship at the Drumlins Country Club.

News & Notes

Spots remain for second camp session

The Bethlehem Lady Eagles Summer Basketball Camp still has openings for its second session Aug. 14-18 at the Sydney Albert Albany Jewish Community Center on Whitehall Road.

The session is open to boys and girls entering grades three through five. Each camper will be grouped by age and ability and will be taught individual skills through drills and games. Campers have equal playing time throughout the sessions.

The camp is taught by Bethlehem varsity girls basketball coach Mark Nealon and assistant coach John Hooper. Additional coaches and Bethlehem girls basketball alumni will be assisting Nealon and Hooper.

The cost is $100 per camper. Registration forms and checks should be sent to Mark Nealon, 6 Terrace Place, Troy 12180.

For information, contact Nealon at 273-1184 or Jeremy Klugman at 526-5276.

V'ville requests physical forms

Clayton A. Bouton Junior/Senior High School athletes participating in fall sports must have a current physical examination and a parent permission/health history form on file in the health office by Aug. 14.

Students will not be allowed to participate in team practices until they submit their forms.

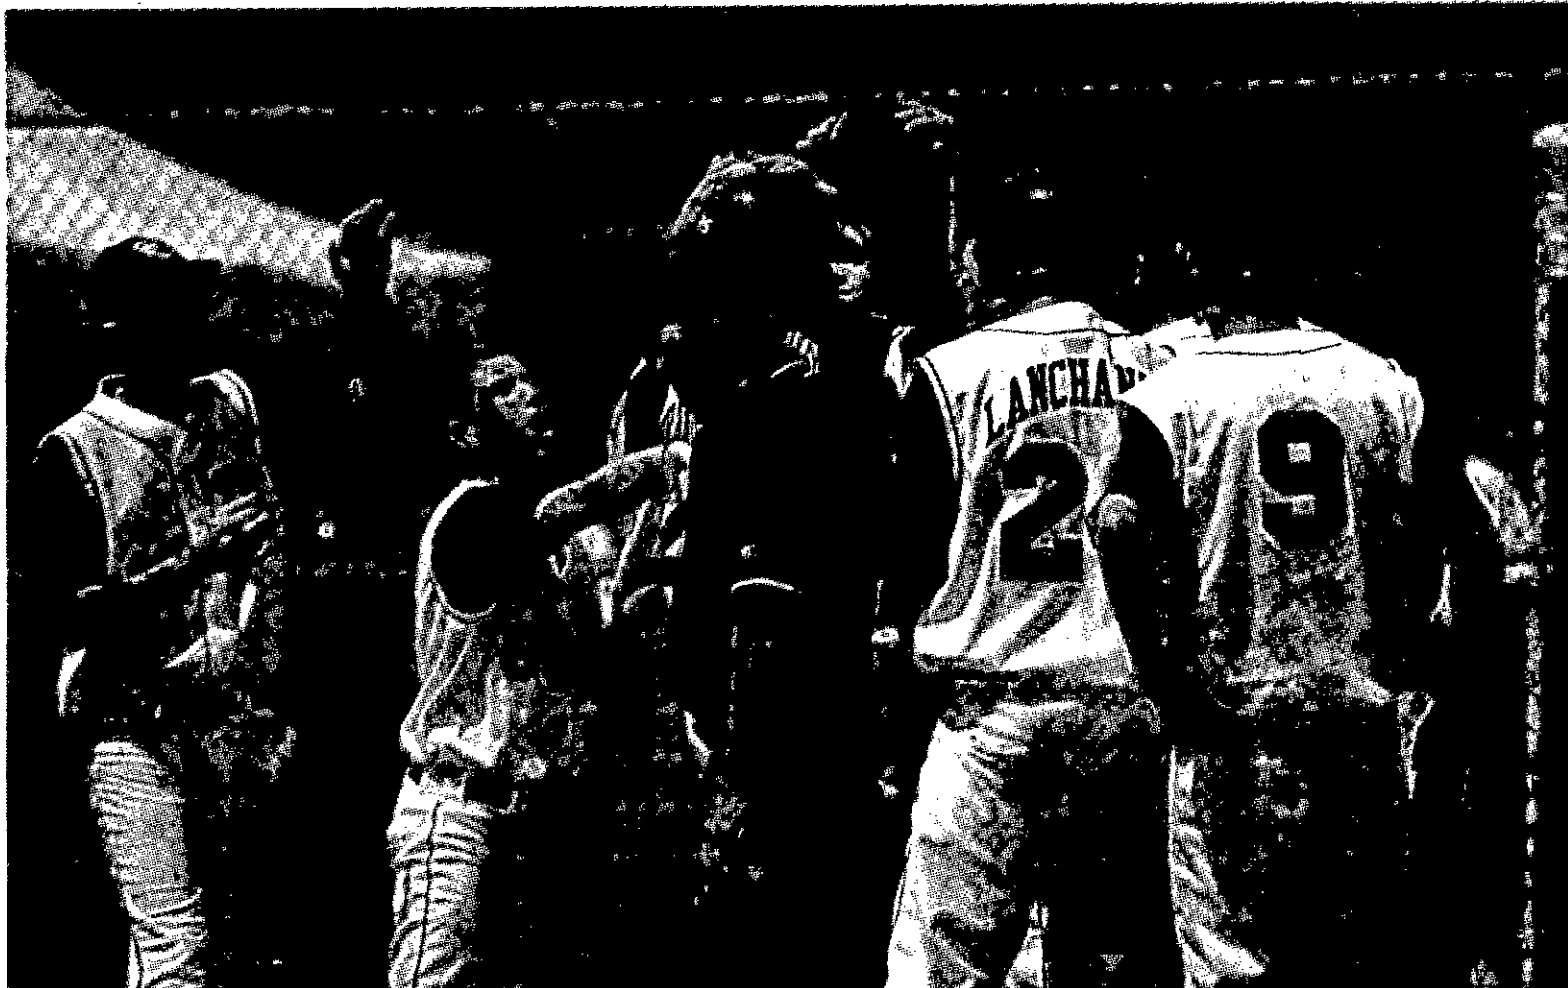

Varsity and junior varsity football tryouts begin Aug. 14, while all other varsity and junior varsity sports begin tryouts Aug. 21. Modified soccer, cross country and girls volleyball begin Sept. 1.

Forms are available in the high school foyer.

For information, contact high school athletic director Joe Sapienza at 765-3314, ext. 208.

Kiwanis slates golf outing

New Scotland Kiwanis is holding its annual golf outing Aug. 14 at Orchard Creek Golf Course in Altamont. The event includes lunch, dinner, contests and team prizes. Proceeds benefit the Children's Medical Center at Albany Medical Center. For information, call Peter Luczak at 482-4425.

South Colonie denies Bethlehem

District champs rally for state title and World Series berth

By ROB JONAS

The Bethlehem All-Stars left the door open a crack, and it was all South Colonie needed.

South Colonie beat Bethlehem by scores of 13-3 and 10-6 Saturday at Line Drive Fields in Delmar to win the Eastern New York State Babe Ruth 15-year-old division championship and earn an automatic berth to the Babe Ruth World Series in Clifton Park.

"Obviously by getting to the last inning and the last out, I told the kids I was pretty pleased with how far we got," said Bethlehem manager Anthony Felitte. "South Colonie was the favorite coming into it, not us."

Bethlehem had late leads in both games before South Colonie posted its comebacks. In the first game, Ron Notar's three-run home run in the bottom of the fifth inning gave South Colonie a 5-3 lead, and the District 4 champions tacked on eight runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to invoke the 10-run mercy rule.

Bethlehem again put itself in position to win the state title in the second game. Bethlehem scored four runs in the bottom of the second inning to grab a 5-1 lead and extended the advantage to 6-1 with a run in the fourth inning.

South Colonie chipped away at Bethlehem's lead, though. Notar cranked a two-run homer in the top of the fifth to pull South Colonie within three runs. Then in the sixth inning, Liam Keegan singled home pitcher Paul Nylin to make the score 6-4.

Bethlehem starting pitcher Matt Nash worked his way out of trouble in the sixth by getting Mike Vetrone to line into an inning-ending double play, but ran into more trouble in the seventh. Drew Rivera and Andy Carucci hit consecutive singles to lead off the inning for South Colonie. After Notar struck out, Derek Zielinski singled in Rivera and Nylin laid down a sacrifice bunt to drive in Carucci with the tying run.

"Obviously, Matt (Nash) ran out of steam at that point," said Felitte. "We pitched him on only two days' rest. I may have pushed him a bit, but when you have a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity like that, you sometimes take that risk."

South Colonie took command in the eighth inning against Bethlehem's relief corps. Matt Weinman worked a leadoff walk, stole second base and scored on Steve Crouse's single to give South Colonie its first lead. Crouse then stole second, moved to third base on Vetrone's bunt single and scored on Rivera's sacrifice bunt. Carucci followed with a two-run homer to seal the victory.

"We obviously ran out of steam, and Colonie got the clutch hits," Felitte said.

Much of Bethlehem's offense during the championship series came courtesy of the long ball.

If it's pro football, fans will show up

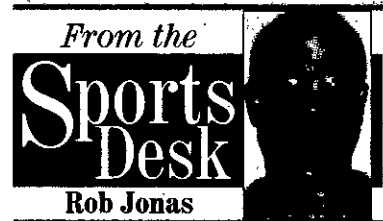

By ROB JONAS

I still marvel at the number of people willing to visit NFL training camps.

Whether it's the New York Giants at the University at Albany or the Dallas Cowboys in the Napa Valley of California, thousands of people travel daily to see pro football players run drills.

Let me repeat that last statement: Thousands of people nationwide travel daily to watch NFL players practice. It's a phenomenon that is matched only by the number of people who travel to Arizona and Florida every winter to watch Major League Baseball teams in spring training games.

Still, the people going to spring training get to watch actual games, even if the starters play three innings. The people traveling to NFL training camps are generally watching players learn where to run and how to block.

Sounds thrilling, doesn't it? I know I'm riveted by watching the second offensive unit practicing the two-minute drill against the first defensive unit.

Of course, the reason why fans flock to NFL training camps is to get an up-close view of their favorite teams and some autographs — two things most fans don't get to do when they attend an actual game. If you have to endure two hours of yawn-inducing drills for the opportunity to see Eli Manning stand 10 yards away from you, so be it. At least, you get a better glimpse of him at the University at Albany than at Giants Stadium.

The other nice thing is that there is no charge to watch NFL teams practice. Sure, you may have to plunk down a $5 bill to park at UAlbany, but it beats being charged more than twice that amount just to park at the Meadowlands Sports Complex. (That being said, I must add that the walk from the parking lot to the practice field is almost as long as the walk from the Meadowlands lot to Giants Stadium.)

Still, there isn't a lot to be said for actually attending a practice session. You might get to see someone make a spectacular catch, but usually you see dropped passes because the wide receivers are still learning their routes. You might see two teammates get into a squabble, but those fights are as rare as a 70-degree day in July. Generally, practices are an endless stream of drills and repeated plays. Not exactly highlight film material.

At least, the Giants give fans a nice payoff at the end of each session. As the players walk from the practice fields to the locker room set up inside the Recreation and Convocation Center, they stop to sign footballs, T-shirts and other assorted merchandise in what has become known as "Autograph Alley." The fans love it because they get to meet players like Tiki Barber, Michael Strahan and LaVar Arrington, and the players love it because they appreciate the support they get from the fans.

(There's no "Autograph Alley"
