Zoned for bees-ness

Ursula Bauer's fascination with bees began about two years ago after reading Sarah George's novel "The Beekeeper's Daughter." In 2006, she became one of more than 60,000 beekeepers in New York after installing two hives in her backyard at 200 Winne Road in Delmar.

Playing it safe in summer

Having the right equipment and know-how can prevent injuries

By ANN MARIE FRENCH
news@spotlightnews.com

The summer months bring warm temperatures and bright sunshine. Most people take for granted that summer will be a time of fun and relaxation, forgetting that dangers can be associated with many summer-time activities. Local first responders use these early summer months to try to educate the public about the best means to prevent injuries or disasters typically associated with this season.

Water ready

"This time of the year we try to promote water safety," said Rick Borden, director of community preparedness for the American Red Cross. "Learn how to swim. You would be amazed at the number of people who don't know how to swim. Whether you are 3 or 30, we can offer programs."

Cross said in addition to learning the basic skills of swimming, a major component of their swim programs is safety guidelines. Students in the programs are taught to not swim alone and how to use a throw rope to assist a swimmer in trouble.

Borden said whether people know how to swim or not, they should have the right rescue equipment available. A throw rope about 20 feet long or a safety tube should be available to toss out to swimmers in trouble. Borden said use of the throw rope and safety tubes keeps the rescuer safe and allows the rescuer to save more people.

"It doesn't matter if you are a good swimmer," he said. "The instinct of a person who is in trouble is to grab on."

Board also decides to return kindergartners to their home schools

By JIM CUOZZO

The Bethlehem Central School District Board of Education approved a full-day kindergarten program and a measure to bring those students back to their home elementary schools at the Tuesday, June 20, meeting of the school board.

Full-day kindergarten was approved by a vote of 6-to-1 after a monthlong discussion among the board, staff and parents in the community.

"I want to compliment the people who came forward to assist the board in making this decision," said school board president Stuart Lyman, who voted in favor of the move.

Only board member Richard Svenson voted against the change from half-day to full-day. Svenson served on the school board more than nine years ago when a decision was made to stay with a half-day program and an Early Learning Center at Slingerlands.

Gas line ruptures at school

Leak puts Hamagrael Elementary on alert

BY JIM CUOZZO

Parents of students attending Hamagrael Elementary School received some surprising news on Wednesday, June 27, when they were alerted through the district's e-mail notification system that a contractor working outside the school ruptured a gas line.

The incident occurred around 11 a.m., according to Gregg Nolte, director of facilities for the district. A subcontractor working on construction at the school accidentally hit and ruptured the 2-inch gas line near the school exit.

"Contractors took all the necessary precautions before digging," said Nolte. According to Nolte, the contractor was using National Grid maps that showed the gas line was abandoned. The actual abandoned gas line, however, was a few feet away.

"This was serious," said Nolte.  Ruptures Page 10

Delmar man killed in Iraq

BY JIM CUOZZO

Shawn Martin, a former Elsmere volunteer fireman and eight-year veteran of the U.S. Marine Corps, was killed Wednesday, June 27, in Iraq by a roadside bomb.

The Delmar native, who most recently was living in San Clemente, Calif., with his wife had been in Iraq just five weeks when he was killed. The 1995 Bethlehem high school graduate was one of 12 U.S. troops killed in Iraq in a 48-hour period.

Martin was a sergeant in the Marines and a Marine explosive ordinance specialist for the 13th Marine Expeditionary unit. His job was to defuse improvised explosive devices or roadside bombs.

According to family spokesman Terry Hannigan, Martin was in the process of defusing a roadside bomb when a second bomb exploded, killing him.

Hannigan said Martin had

Four Corners accident shuts down Kenwood

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

A portion of Kenwood Avenue at the Four Corners in Delmar was shut down for several hours on Monday, June 18, when the van that Lucia Colwell, 85, was driving went off the road and struck a parked vehicle, which in turn rammed a power pole.

Colwell, 85, of Herber Avenue, Delmar, was traveling east on Kenwood Avenue when the accident occurred around 2:30 p.m.

Bethlehem police said Colwell told them after the accident she did not know what happened. No tickets were issued.

She was taken to the hospital with pains in her leg.

Kenwood Avenue was shut down for at least five hours so crews could remove both vehicles. National Grid was called to the scene to replace the power pole that was struck.

"The pole was sheared off, but there was no power outages," said Lt. Thomas Heffernan of the Bethlehem Police Department.

Area emergency rescue squads assisted at the scene.

Youth arrested after chase

A 16-year-old Slingerlands youth was arrested Tuesday, June 19, after a three-hour search involving police dogs and a helicopter.

Bethlehem High School officials called police at 2 p.m. to inform them that the youth was at the school. He was wanted on a bench warrant for failure to appear in Town Court on felony criminal possession of stolen property charges the week before.

The youth fled when officers approached him, said Bethlehem police Lt. Thomas Heffernan.

Responding officers gave chase and called in Albany County sheriff's deputies and state police to assist in the search. A helicopter and K-9 units assisted in the search, said police.

The youth was located walking down Delaware Avenue.

Police said he admitted to possessing a controlled substance and scale for distribution.

He was arrested on a felony charge of criminal possession of a controlled substance with intent to sell. He was arraigned in Town Court and sent to Albany County jail in lieu of $20,000 bail.

He is scheduled to appear in Town Court on Tuesday, July 10.

State Museum hosts weekly music jams

Every Thursday from noon to 2 p.m., the New York State Museum has a music jam in the 4th Floor Terrace Gallery.

Everyone is welcome to play or to listen to live acoustic music. Much of what is played is inspired by the Celtic tradition of jigs, reels, waltzes, hornpipes, and marches, but occasionally tossed into the mix are folk or popular songs, jazz standards, and early music, and anything else participating musicians choose. It is organized in a "round robin" style, where each person playing music, and sometimes the audience, takes a turn selecting tunes and setting the pace.

All levels of skill on any acoustic instruments are welcome. Some people read the music while others play by ear. It is courteous to bring several copies of the sheet music for those who do not play by ear, or for the tunes that are not commonly known.

Roundabout runaround comes to a stop

Town to make final decision on traffic structure's location

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem Planning Board moved swiftly to approve the new location of a roundabout at the proposed Vista Technology Park.

The planning board's decision regarding the placement of a roundabout at the entrance of Vista Park at LaGrange Road comes less than one week after a local developer, Constantine Kontogiannis of KKS Properties, alleged town officials showed favoritism to Vista over KKS in a dispute over where the roundabout should go.

The roundabout location is a modification to BBL Development's original master plan for Vista, which forced the town board to hold a public hearing Wednesday, June 13, to discuss the changes. A final decision by the town is expected at a public hearing Wednesday, June 27.

The town board is lead agent for Vista development, which is expected to bring in thousands of new jobs for Bethlehem and New Scotland residents.

"The roundabout location has continued to shift," said attorney Theresa Backner representing Vista developers.

One of the first proposed locations had a gas line running underneath it, leading developers to propose shifting the roundabout to KKS property.

"It became clear that we would not be able to reach any agreement with that property owner," Backner said. BBL then decided to move the roundabout back to one of its earlier proposed locations on LaGrange Road.

The new roundabout location, according to Backner, has no impact on the nearby Dominion gas pipeline nor does it impact adjoining property owned by KKS.

"The most important thing is that we will be able to move quickly to complete construction once the Slingerlands Bypass is built," Backner said.

The state Department of Transportation is working on the bypass project, which is expected to be complete in July 2008.

That is also the date when Vista Park is expected to accept its first tenants into the park.

The planning board unanimously agreed the modification to the roundabout site does not significantly impact the overall project and approved the change.

"This is just a nominal change for a physical location of a roundabout from north of the site to south of the site," said planning board chairman Parker Mathusa.

Assistant economic development director for the town, Mike Morelli, said Vista would be back before the planning board on many occasions for future site plan approval.

Marketing campaign could pay dividends

Vista Park, 9W big selling points to potential businesses

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

A new economic development marketing campaign for Bethlehem could see its first results as early as this fall.

Members of the Bethlehem Industrial Development Agency have been meeting with representatives from the Center for Economic Growth to begin the process of hiring a consultant who will oversee the town's revamped business marketing.

"The town had a long reputation of not being business friendly," said George Leveille, IDA executive director and director of economic planning and development in Bethlehem.

One of the first goals to address that will be to set a meeting up in October with several major local and national developers to present a first-hand look at the progress at Vista Technology Park.

"We want CEG, RPI, Albany County, Albany Nanotech and others to put our site at the top of the list," said Thomas Connolly, IDA counsel who is a member of the IDA marketing team.

"They should have a familiarization by touring Vista, and we need to get leaders of these groups to the site once the road is built," Connolly added.

Town leaders are hoping Vista Technology Park, when complete, will bring in thousands of high-tech jobs to the 450-acre future

"We want CEG, RPI, Albany County, Albany Nanotech and others to put our site at the top of the list."

Thomas Connolly

development in Bethlehem and New Scotland off Route 85.

Leveille said the town would try to market the site to residents and the outside business community.

"The internal marketing piece for residents will explain the need for new business to expand the tax base," Leveille said.

The outside piece to developers will market the Vista site as a potential location.

"Developers are very sophisticated, and they are here already looking," Leveille said.

IDA board member Joseph Richardson said high-level officials from microchip fabricators Advanced Micro Devices had been looking at the area weeks before deciding to locate SEMATECH in the Capital District.

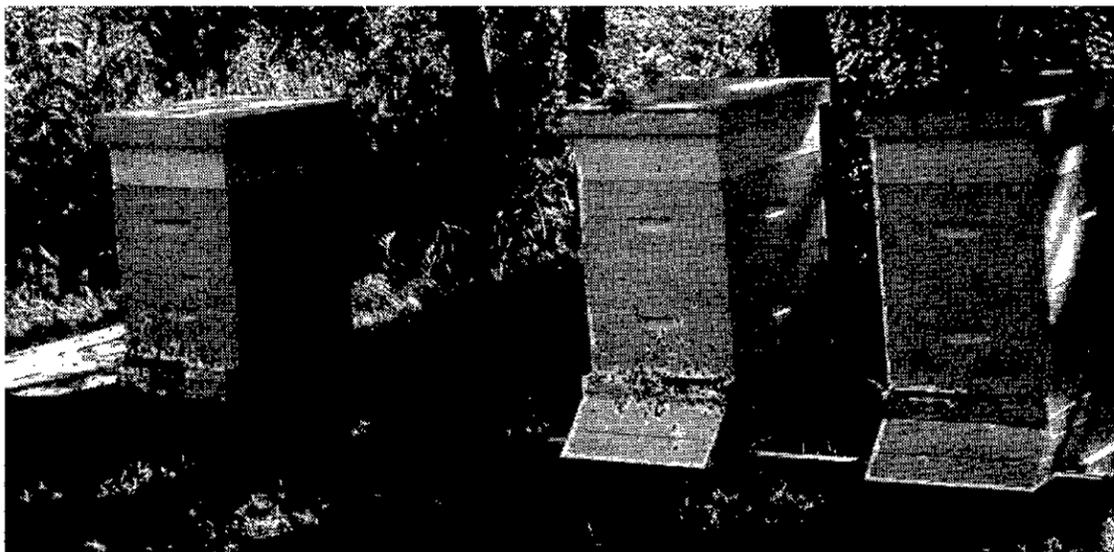

"The senior vice president was here for weeks and weeks doing his own due diligence," Richardson said.

"It came down to quality of life and why they chose here over Germany. There is a global understanding of what is happening here," Richardson said.

There is still a growing fear from local businesses that more "big-box" retailers will develop not only in Vista, but also along the Route 9W corridor.

Bethlehem Supervisor Jack Cunningham met with Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce president Marty DeLaney to discuss concerns from the small business sector of the town.

"As we are moving forward with Vista, we have to realize we need to always look to keep the mom and pop stores here," Cunningham said.

A few of the many thousands of Ursula Bauer's bees return to their hives in the late afternoon. Bauer is waiting for the town planning board to decide if she can keep the bees at her property at 200 Winnie Road in Delmar.

Neighbors abuzz over bees

Planning board to decide whether to allow keeper's hives

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Ursula Bauer's fascination with bees began about two years ago after reading Sarah George's novel "The Beekeeper's Daughter." In 2006, she became one of more than 60,000 beekeepers in New York after installing two hives in her backyard at 200 Winnie Road in Delmar.

"I have two daughters, 10 and 14, and they enjoy the bees," said Bauer, who had to replace the bees she lost last season because they did not survive the winter.

She has since moved her bees to fellow beekeeper Linda Jasinski's Bender Road property while she awaits a decision by the Bethlehem Planning Board regarding whether she can keep them in her yard.

The move was prompted by the town's new comprehensive plan, which states that beekeeping is an agricultural use that requires planning board approval.

The planning board said neighbors' safety is its primary concern in deciding if Bauer's hives should be allowed in her backyard. The board will make a decision regarding the beehives at a future meeting.

In its review of the proposal, the planning board scheduled a public hearing Tuesday, June 19, where several people spoke for and against the suburban beehives.

Some of Bauer's neighbors are fighting the return of the hives, which house up to 60,000 bees.

"I would like you to decline this proposal and think about the safety of my immediate neighbors," said Westchester Drive resident Judy Steiner, who said she is concerned about the hives' potentially close proximity to her backyard, where her daughter and friends play.

"I think people in the neighborhood imagine that all the bees come rushing out," said Bauer. "They go out at 9 or 10 a.m. when the sun is warm and one-third of the hive forages for nectar and pollen until they come back around 5 p.m."

Some nights, Bauer said, she and her daughters take a seat in the yard where the hives are located and just watch the bees work and be productive.

"I have a ton of fun, I really enjoy it," Bauer said.

Many local beekeepers attended the public hearing in support of Bauer's proposal, including Roberta Glatz of Feura Bush, past president of the Empire State Honey Producers.

"Bees are good neighbors," said Glatz. "They go about their business unnoticed, and they share your yard."

The bee season usually begins in April or May and lasts until the fall when they begin to make honey. Last year, Bauer's bees produced 75 jars of honey.

"I like having the honey around, and I gave most of it away," Bauer said. "I have been cooking a lot with it."

Bauer named four different beekeepers living in Bethlehem, one on Winne Road, who also produce honey in their backyards. Because those residents had beehives prior to the town's new comprehensive plan, they are allowed to keep the hives on their property because they're grandfathered in.

The application that sits with the town planning board calls for three beehives on Bauer's property, with each hive having a queen bee. Currently Gwendolyn, Caroline, and Jane, Bauer's three queen bees, are resting comfortably inside each of the three hives off Bender Road. Visitors to the hives can observe the drones outside looking for a virgin queen bee while the workers look for food and those inside the hive work to maintain the hive for the queen.

Disease is a constant concern for beekeepers, who keep enough food and sugar water around the hives so the bees will stay warm. Colony collapse or fall dwindle disease, which have received recent media attention, are threatening the bee population. In late 2006, many bee colonies died off to the point where only half of those colonies exist today. No one is quite yet sure of the reason.

"Some people feel it is pesticides disorienting bees, others think it is general stress from different infections the bees get," Bauer said.

Destinations around Northeast offer family fun

By BILL GIERING
news@spotlightnews.com

Question: As a divorced dad of two years, I only get to see my kids — a 10-year-old daughter and an 8-year-old son — every other weekend. So I have been making every minute count on my weekends, taking them to some exciting places around the Capital District. This August, my ex-wife is taking a week vacation with some friends so I will be able to have them for a whole week. I was thinking about enrolling them in some super sports or adventure camps, since they are both very athletic. Any ideas?

Answer: If your son and daughter are good athletes, I'll bet you are too.

Why not teach them some lifelong lesson that only a few great jocks ever learn? It's great that you appreciate how important it is to teach them how healthy it is to live an active lifestyle. And I'm sure you have pointed out how what we learn in sports can carry over into our everyday lives and careers.

Did you ever wonder why some wonderful players in every sport seem to fold under pressure, while the great ones rise to the occasion and excel when the pressure mounts over an important putt or the last pitch in the ninth inning?

Michael Jordan, maybe the greatest clutch basketball player to ever play, said, "Hey, it's just another shot."

Tiger Woods said when the pressure mounts, "I always go back to the basics."

Neither quote from their recent books seems to offer much advice to the rest of us.

Or do they?

As dads, we always think we should be offering wisdom and giving lessons that will make this confusing world turn crystal clear to our sons and daughters. For divorced dads, it's even harder because you are always trying to turn your limited time with your kids into expensive, spectacular and memorable moments, never knowing if you will get the chance again. Dads put such pressure on themselves to over-perform because these memorable moments are so important. Many divorced dads put too much pressure on trips with their kids, just like good athletes start to grip the baseball bat too tight in the last inning, or squeeze the putter to death over a match-winning putt. You end up stressing and freezing your bodies and brains so you can't perform or react like you want to. Let's relax and "go back to basics" with Tiger.

The most important gift you want to give to your kids is your time. Forget about putting them in some sports camp and force-feeding them tennis or basketball. Just relax and spend some time with them. Show them, don't tell them, that you want to be with them.

Too many parents have turned into bus drivers, rushing their kids from one practice field to the next. The real job is to introduce them to the world, not force it.

"When the student is ready, the teacher will appear."

You may not always be the teacher, but you'll always be the dad.

Here is a list of Northeast family destinations where you can relax, and the kids can learn about some new fun things, including their dad.

The Berkshires

The Cranwell Resort Spa and Golf Club in Lenox, Mass., is relaxing during the day and the nights in the Berkshire just come alive with music, dance and theater. The Cranwell has a "culture in the country" package the family will enjoy.

Nearby Pittsfield is hosting a free outdoor music series: Concerts at Springfield Park on Tuesdays. Jacob's Pillow is celebrating its 75th anniversary with dance troupes from all over the world. The Barrington

At the ZooQuarium in Cape Cod, kids have a chance to touch a wide variety of sea animals.

Stage Company has a full slate of Summer Theater. Or just hang out at The Cranwell after a day of swimming, golf, hiking; maybe the kid's first spa treatment? Your gang can enjoy The Capital Steps, nationally acclaimed political comedy ensemble, which will be performing right at The Cranwell from July 3 to Labor Day. And Dad, if you fall asleep at the concert after a long day, it's OK the kids will wake you ... that's what family vacations are for. Visit www.cranwell.com

The Balsams Resort

It's a long drive but I don't think there is a better family resort in the country than The Balsams Grand Resort in Dixville Notch, N.H. It's an interesting mix of history and traditional values; men have to wear jackets to dinner, but kids are treated with the highest status in the pecking order of guest society. On a recent visit, the dining room was full of laughter from multi-generational tables.

There's also water sports, a great pool, a clear safe lake, walking trails, tennis, two wonderful golf courses, one of which is a shorter executive course that is perfect for kids. Visit www.thebalsams.com

The Cape

Whale watching, four-wheeling in the dunes, ocean walks, ferry rides, great golf, bike tours on historical islands ... yep, the Cape. But mostly, Cape Cod is a place to relax and listen to your kids as you experience new adventures together. For an educational and interactive day, try the ZooQuarium.

Often, it's the faces and the charm of the local people who make a destination special and memorable, and the Cape is just full of those wonderful, family-friendly characters.

Dan Keefe and Scott Allen have a great spot called Clancy Restaurant and also run the Terrace Room at Hyannis Golf Club. For Graham Silliman, it is all about the food at his baby, the Sienna Restaurant in Mashpee Commons, big tables, great service, upscale. Graham is a great host.

Most of the hotels on the Cape are family owned with inside and out swimming pools. Jack Hynes owns the Gull Wing Suites in South Yarmouth, a fun easy place to get to. You can have a ball at the Bayside Resort in West Yarmouth; they have a great staff. For a stay and play with your family, check out Blue Rock Resort and golf course. It's a challenging and scenic par 3 course, owned by the Red Jacket Resort Group. The likeable pro at Blue Rock is Pat Fannon, who runs a great pro shop, solid teacher and great with families. The Captains Golf Course is a must-play any time on the Cape and Jim Armentraut the pro at the Bass River Golf Course is a gentleman who understands families and having fun. For additional family specials and information on any of these family friendly spots call one of the Capes great ambassadors, Patti Lloyd, at 888 33-Cape Cod or www.capecodchamber.org

I'm not sure if any of the above resorts can equal the value of time just spent relaxing and listening to your children.

My last suggestion for your week with the kids might be the best. While your ex-wife is away, why not ask if you could move in for the week? Spend it cutting the lawn, cooking with the kids, do some laundry and just hang out ... showing them that you are just their dad.

Legislators tend to a growing need

Law's intent is to help small farmers thrive

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parker@spotlightnews.com

County legislators have strengthened state protections for farmers by passing a right-to-farm law of their own.

The Legislature passed the law Monday, June 11, closing out more than three years of research into small farm operations throughout the county. The legislation aims to protect small farms from frivolous lawsuits and create better relationships between farmers and their residential neighbors.

There are a number of benefits and reasons behind the new law, said Legislator, farmer and sponsor of the bill, Alexander "Sandy" Gordon, D-Berne.

"Part of the focus are things that have developed recently with people questioning the quality of the food on their shelves," said Gordon.

With the advent of the 100-mile diet, which calls for eating foods produced within 100 miles of a person's home, people are beginning to eat more locally grown produce, he said. The need for thriving local farms tucked away in various suburban towns throughout the county is growing.

"This is really an economic development to strengthen the hand of the home farmer. Helping farmers to stay in business is good business all around. It keeps taxes down and maintains open space," Gordon said.

The new law is a tool for smart growth, Gordon said.

Currently Albany County farms, like all state farms, are protected under state legislation through the Department of Agriculture and Markets. However, the law only provides protections for farmers who sell an average of $10,000 in meat and/or produce and operate a farm at least 7 acres in size. These farms are protected under the state agricultural district law. Of those protected, three farms, totaling 70,000 acres, are in Albany County, mostly in Albany's hill towns.

For those farms that fall below and between existing state and county requirements, their is little protection, said Laura DeGaetano senior natural resources planner for the county department of Economic Development, Conservation and Planning.

DeGaetano worked alongside legislators in the three years of research leading up to the passing of the law.

"We looked at the types of farms in the county and found that there were a lot of smaller farms that were active but weren't meeting the sales and acreage required of the state agriculture and markets law," said DeGaetano.

Under the county plan, farmers with $2,000 or more in sales a year are eligible for protections.

Under the new law, the county Agricultural and Farmland Protection Board will work with farmers and their neighbors to resolve any ongoing dispute over farming operations.

There haven't been lawsuits per se, said DeGaetano. But many disputes can occur when subdivision homeowners unknowingly move next to an operating farm. Upset with the sights, sounds and smell of farming, those neighbors seek to close down the farms or inhibit their ability to effectively cultivate or raise livestock. The county board will review those cases and work to bring both parties to the table to reach an amicable agreement, she said.

The law will also require real estate agents to notify potential home buyers of all active farming in the immediate areas.

In order to go into effect the law must be approved by County Executive Michael Breslin, D-Delmar, who has been a proponent of right-to-farm legislation in the county.

Have fun, carefully

Summer officially began last week, when the longest day of the year urged us out onto our decks, porches, backyards and gardens.

School's out, and neighborhoods are alive with the sounds of children running, skateboarding, splashing in pools and enjoying a kind of unencumbered freedom that adults envy.

Soon, laden cars will hit the road and head for fun in the sun, on the Cape, in the Carolinas, in Ocean City, the Adirondacks, anywhere that takes families away from the daily grind.

It's the time of year that memories are made. What's better than stretching out in a beach chair to watch the sun set? We remember for years to come the fishing trip on a warm summer day; the long bike ride past green fields buzzing with insects.

Before relaxing into the moment, run through a safety checklist to guarantee summer fun, not summer disaster. Our page 1 stories this week offer advice on how to avoid summer problems like sunburn, sun stroke and bicycle accidents.

We'd like to particularly stress caution with alcohol at the time of year when summer pleasures can be enhanced by a cold beer or a glass of chilled white wine.

We urge our readers to drink responsibly at all times of the year, and especially in the summer months when more people are out and about, and relaxing is a higher priority than during the rest of the year. Alcohol may be liquid, but it can lead to faster dehydration in the summer months.

The legal ramifications to excessive drinking are good reasons to imbibe moderately. Boating while drunk is against the law, as is drunken driving. The consequences of DWI can be severe: time in court, a fine, your name printed in this newspaper, or loss of a license. When reaching for the one that could be one too many, think instead about the value of your own life, of loved ones' lives and of the other motorists out on the road that day or evening.

We are not calling for a resurrection of temperance leagues or a return to Prohibition, just caution. When this summer goes into the memory bank, let's make sure we're remembering only happy times.

Operating on overload a challenge

By SUSAN S. CHEUNG
news@spotlightnews.com

The writer is a transplant from London, England, via a short spell in Florida. She lives in Guilderland with her family and is currently on a career break to raise two young children.

Multitasking is very much part of our vocabulary. Our lives are filled with constant activity and 24-hour communication. It's normal to see people typing on their laptops and talking on their cell phones as they grab a quick bite to eat.

Some people don't believe there are only 24 hours in a day and may go to ridiculous lengths to get more done. I read an article recently, where a reporter tried to find out whether she could do her normal exercise on different fitness machines while typing on her laptop.

Every day I juggle my responsibilities for my children and the household. As if I didn't have enough to do, I volunteer on the Parent-Teacher Council of my son's school. Plus, if I want a social life, I assume the role of social secretary and party planner extraordinaire. With all this going on, it becomes part of my psyche that I have to multitask as a way of life.

My husband is in awe that I can have a conversation on the phone, give him directions about the children and cook dinner at the same time. I bet if you polled your friends, the general consensus would be women are far superior to men at multitasking. However, results from multitasking human studies show no significant differences between the sexes.

Why is there a widespread belief that women are better at multitasking? Some researchers propose the differences may be cultural rather than biological. There is a societal expectation that women can do it all. I have always taken it for granted that I can do it all, but this can be my downfall. I sometimes can't live up to my high expectations and have to admit I can't do it all. Studies suggest people reach an optimal point in multitasking and beyond that, they become less efficient.

Recently, I mislaid my wedding ring. I took it off to make some pastry and did not leave it in the usual place. I thought I was going out of my mind as I searched high and low. I knew I was tired, I had gone to bed too late the night before. Every night, after the children go to sleep, I feel I have enough time and energy to deal with the mountain of chores - from ironing to paying the bills.

Tiredness is my constant companion, and it turns my mind into a sieve. Consequently, I am forever making lists. Then, I am constantly running to stay on top of everything on my lists. I feel my mantra should be: "I'm late, I'm late for a very important date" like the White Rabbit in Walt Disney's "Alice in Wonderland."

Recently, I saw an advertisement on television that said, on average, Americans run 11 minutes late. Why are we in a hurry all the time? Why do we feel so stretched? Perhaps, lateness is a sign of us trying to do too much.

OK, losing a ring is upsetting but, it is not fatal. However, there are many situations where multiple tasks present a serious danger. Driver distraction is cited, frequently, as a contributing factor in studies on crashes; anything from cell phone use to adjusting the music increases the likelihood of accidents. I see people do risky things in their cars every day, such as reading, putting on makeup and eating, while going more than 40 mph. Despite the obvious dangers, multitasking in cars continues to occur in our quest to squeeze more into 24 hours.

I present my top six "Oh Dear!" moments in the last six months. These are my cautionary tales about the dangers of multitasking (or mistakes we make under the influence of overload).

1. I forgot I was heating some oil in the wok as I responded to the screams of my bickering children. I screamed myself when I saw the flames billowing from the wok. I am truly thankful for smoke alarms.

2. After answering a phone call, I left the phone in the bathroom while I was running a bath for my children. I turned my back for a second and heard a splash. My daughter handed the phone to me dripping wet, completely short-circuited, with a smile on her face as she said: "Here you are, Mommy."

3. In my haste to start dinner and put away the groceries, I put the frozen Chinese fish cakes in the cupboard instead of the freezer. I discovered them a week later when I traced the source of the foul odor.

4. I was doing the laundry and making lunch for the kids at the same time. After I drained the pasta, I reached quickly for what I thought was the olive oil bottle and, without checking it, I sprinkled the pasta liberally with the liquid. To my consternation, I had reached for the rice wine and had literally made the dish drunken pasta!

5. I was running late in dropping off my son at school and went straight on to the grocery store with my daughter. I stood red-faced at the checkout. I had forgotten my purse. I mumbled an apology, left the groceries and tried to stop my daughter making a scene as I pried the box of animal crackers from her hands.

6. On autopilot at the end of a busy day, I squeezed toothpaste onto a cleansing pad and cleaned my face. I jumped back in shock at the scent of mint and the ghostly reflection looking back at me. It was truly a candid camera moment.

Of course, everyone has an off day and is guilty of wearing their top back to front or wearing an odd sock. However, if you are finding that you are making too many mistakes, you need to be honest with yourself. Are you doing too much? Do you need to slow down?

Going forward, I will apply the Four Ds to my daily responsibilities, as I used to do at work with my paperwork. You handle a piece of paper once and assign one of four actions: DO; DELAY; DELEGATE; OR DUMP. This is standard time management practice.

How does this work for your day-to-day tasks? For each of your tasks, you have one of four choices. DO: You prioritize and decide it's essential to do the job now. DELAY: The job is neither a crisis nor a priority, so you can do it later but you must decide on a completion date. DELEGATE: You hand it over to someone else to carry out, e.g., your partner, family member or friend. DUMP: Without blame or guilt, you ditch the project because you don't have the time, money, energy or motivation. Practice the Four Ds regularly and you won't be so overwhelmed.

Everyone needs to be aware of overreaching his or her optimum workload. For your own sanity and for your loved ones' well-being, your gift to yourself and to them is to admit that you are not superwoman or superman.

Park should be returned to state

Editor, The Spotlight:

At the June 13 town board meeting, I recommended that the Henry Hudson Park be returned to the state, the original owner of the land. The recommendation was made considering safety of children, the high cost of construction to replace decaying dikes, the liability that town has assumed in tracing the public to the park and the fact that 90 percent of the park users are not town residents.

The reinforced concrete ice bumper constructed on top of the decaying wood sheet piled dike, that makes up most of the shoreline in the park, has fallen into the river. Children and adults are fishing off the rock rubble. The 6-foot high tide, the high velocity of an outgoing tide, the further collapse of portions of the dike, breaking an ankle caught between rocks, all represent dangerous situations.

Children are attracted to water.

I have observed children fishing off the rock rubble and have observed children swimming in the river at the boat-launching site. Two children drowned near Kingston when swept into an outgoing tide in the Hudson River.

In 1985, the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers abandoned the maintenance of 22 miles of dike in Henry Hudson Park. The town of Bethlehem posted signs warning people not to go beyond the fence.

Today, a portion of the fence has been removed, there are no warning signs, the dike is falling into the river and the town wants to make the river shoreline "more accessible to the public."

It will cost at least $10 million to construct a safe shoreline. Further, if the dikes are not replaced, Henry Hudson Park will eventually erode into the river as was predicted by the Corps of Engineers in 1985.

An 1820 map shows that all of the land area, now known as Henry Hudson Park, was underneath the river; hence, it was owned by the state. In the 1830s, the U.S. Supreme Court ruled that the US had jurisdiction over all navigable waters in the country. As a result, the state decided all land underneath the river and on the shoreline where dikes were built to create shipping channels, to the U.S. government. New land was created when material dredged from the river was placed behind dikes that divided the river. The US eventually sold this new land to private individuals at a profit. The land, such as Henry Hudson Park, that was not profitable, was given to towns.

If the town continues to promote a safe Henry Hudson park for the use of 90 percent non-town residents, the town will pass at least $10 million in expenditures on to future generations. This money can be far better spent on safe nature trails and parks in other areas of the town.

The town should ask the state to take ownership of the park and reclaim the land that was taken away from all state residents in 1836. In addition to maintaining the boat launching site, nature trails and picnic areas, the state could create historical exhibits at the park that would explain how native Americans, Henry Hudson, Dutch settlers, the Erie Canal and the Hudson River dikes helped to make New York the Empire State.

Bethlehem explains roundabout relocation

Editor, The Spotlight:

In last week's edition of The Spotlight, developer Constantine Kontogiannis complained about a meeting held at town hall to discuss a proposed roundabout to be constructed on the new Slingerlands Bypass Extension ("Vista hearing turns sour," p. 1).

In 2005, a development team led by BBL Development Group proposed to build the Vista Technology Campus on land adjoining the route 85 Bypass Extension. This is a substantial economic development project that was a Tier 1 recommendation of the town's comprehensive plan adopted in August 2005. The project will add significantly to the tax base of the town.

BBL originally proposed to construct a roundabout on its property, at its expense, to reduce traffic congestion from cars entering and exiting its property. At the town's request, BBL redesigned the roundabout and relocated it to the edge of its property, so that it could accommodate future development of the adjoining land owned by Mr. Kontogiannis' company, KKS Properties. BBL agreed to relocate the roundabout and asked in return that KKS donate the land on its parcel that would be needed to create the shared roundabout, and to pay its fair share of the cost of the improvements.

All parties to this discussion were fully aware that construction of the bypass extension was well under way, and construction plans for the roundabout needed to be finalized immediately. The town agreed to meet with BBL and Mr. Kontogiannis on June 8 in an effort to work out a fair method for allocating the cost of the roundabout and related public improvements between the two developers.

Mr. Kontogiannis sent an e-mail to the town with a list of demands.

The town felt several of those demands would place unreasonable financial and development demands on the town and its taxpayers. Some of the demands would also have violated the requirements of the state environmental quality review act, and would have left the town abdicating its responsibility to the traveling public in Bethlehem.

As a result of Mr. Kontogiannis' 11th-hour demands, BBL was unwilling to change its original plans and locate the roundabout on the land adjoining the KKS property. BBL proposed to locate the roundabout in the area where it was originally designed, on property that it owns and controls. BBL will be paying the full cost of the roundabout and associate public improvements needed to support its development project.

Throughout this process, the town has acted responsibly and in the best interest of the taxpayers of Bethlehem.

Thanks to fire department

Editor, The Spotlight:
This letter is long overdue. I would like to make a public appeal to the fine people of the town of Bethlehem, to please support your local fire department. For those of you who are healthy and active, I wish you a long, healthy life, enjoying the many activities the town offers you and your family.

However, the reality is that some day you are going to have to dial 911. That is when you hope you still have a great volunteer fire department and paramedic/ambulance squad. I help provide care for my 82-year-old mother. We have lived in Delmar for close to 40 years. In recent years we have had to call on the services of the Delmar Fire Department at least twice a year to respond to my mother's breathing and heart issues. Thank goodness we have such a well-staffed fire department. When I made my most recent call just this past April, I was amazed that the rescue squad was at my home in less than five minutes. Apparently they were responding to a flooded basement call just around the corner. Does anyone know how many basements were pumped out by your local fire department this spring alone? This is just one example of one of the services your local fire department provides, often times very unnoticed.

Please support your local fire department in any way you can. Most importantly, The Delmar Fire Department is in great need of a new firehouse. Support your community by supporting your fire department when they ask for contributions and especially when they look for public support to build a new fire station, which we desperately need to continue to provide our growing community with then excellent service we currently have, but may not have unless they have your support.

In conclusion, I would like to extend my most sincere appreciation to The Delmar Fire Department for your compassion and professional service to my family.

been interested in the military since childhood. He was skilled at Tae Kwon Do and grew up around the Elsmere Fire Department where his father and grandfather were both volunteers. Martin served as a volunteer with the department from 1995-2000.

"He was the poster child for the Marines. He would do things the hard way," Hannigan said. "Not saying that the other branches are lesser, but it's understood that the Marine Corps is the toughest branch and that was the attraction to Shawn."

Martin was characterized as someone who was destined to serve others and a natural leader.

"Some people want to go to Wall Street and make money; other people, fortunately, like Shawn have a great calling to serve us in a vocation for the greater good," Hannigan said.

Due to the nature of Martin's job with the Marines, he was scheduled for a short tour in Iraq and was supposed to return home in August. Hannigan said he had already reenlisted and was planning to return to combat.

"This isn't a guy that was looking for himself; he actually found himself," Hannigan said. "He was a Marine and he was good at what he did."

lehem Town Hall were flown at half-staff in honor of Martin.

"From the town's standpoint, this is another tragic loss of an American life in Iraq," said Supervisor Jack Cunningham.

In a written statement, the Martin family expressed the devastation of the loss and thanked their community for supporting them during their difficult time.

"It is impossible to describe the depth of our pain or the full measure of our loss. However, the outpouring of love and kind gestures we have received has been overwhelming. We have never before experienced the magnitude of the bond that makes this community so special," they wrote.

Martin is the third Bethlehem native who has been killed in Iraq. Timothy Moshier, 25, was killed in April 2006 when he was shot down piloting an Apache Helicopter in southwest Baghdad. Sgt. Thomas Robbins, a 1994 Bethlehem High School graduate, was killed in Iraq in 2004 near Mosul when a mortar exploded.

More than 3,500 soldiers have been killed in Iraq since the war began, and up to 70 died in June alone. Martin is survived by his wife, Marianne Thomes, his parents, Paul and Dawn Martin, and a sister, Nicole, who reside in Delmar.

Calling hours are scheduled for Wednesday, June 27, from 4 to 7 p.m. at St. Thomas the Apostle Church in Delmar. The funeral is scheduled for Thursday, June 28, at 10 a.m. at St. Thomas the Apostle. Arrangements are from the Keenan Funeral Home in Albany.

an elevated body temperature," says Dr. Roger Blankfein, MHRHS Medical Director.

In order to ensure a safe and enjoyable summer, Dr. Blankfein recommends some simple tips for you and your family: When outdoors, pets should always have access to shade and fresh water; avoid strenuous exercise during the hottest part of the day. If you run with your pet, do so in the early morning or late evening, when temperatures and humidity are generally lower; hot surfaces like asphalt and concrete can cause significant damage to paws and reflect additional heat back on to your pet. Minimize exposure to these surfaces and ensure that animals have access to cooler areas, such as dirt and grass; always carry water for your pet when traveling; Never leave a pet in a car during the summer. The temperature inside can quickly rise to more than 20 degrees higher than the outdoor temperature; be aware that older pets and pets who are overweight are even more susceptible to the heat; if you plan to shave your pet for the summer, always leave at least an inch of hair to protect their skin from the direct sun. Yes, dogs get sunburns too!

"Heat stroke is a very serious and often fatal condition. Animals in this condition should immediately be taken to a cool and shady place, sprayed with water and have ice packs applied to their belly and chest while they are transported to a veterinarian," recommends Dr. Blankfein.

Ruptures

The Delmar Fire Department was called to the school to help contain the situation.

"We did have to get the kids all on one side of the school, away from the gas line on the far side," said Lars Allanson, captain of the Delmar Fire Police.

Allanson said his crew could smell the gas coming out of the line when they arrived.

"You could hear it rushing out of the line," he said.

It took National Grid about 45 minutes to arrive and shut off the line. The district's school news alert indicated that at no time were students in danger and that there was no gas leak inside the school. Students were dismissed about 20 minutes later at 12:05 p.m. instead of 11:45 a.m., away from the location of the gas line.

"Emergency responders quarantined things off and students were dismissed," said Nolte.

Allanson said his department was there to ensure nobody wandered close to the scene and hoses were kept ready.

"The parents and the school were very cooperative," Allanson said.

dressed the needs of children," Svenson said.

The cost of the move to a full-day kindergarten program along with a potential state mandate for a pre-kindergarten program were among Svenson's concerns.

Board member James Lytle said the full-day kindergarten offers "twice as much time with that teacher."

Added Lyman, "It is inconceivable to me that teachers and students would not be better off."

Students who begin the full-day kindergarten program in Bethlehem will stay in school six hours and 10 minutes, in contrast to the current two-hour and 30 minute half-day program.

A second vote to return kindergarten students to their home schools instead of housing all of the students in Slingerlands and in the new Eagle Elementary School was approved by a 5-to-2 vote of the board. The move means the decade-old early learning facility at Slingerlands will be disbanded.

Outgoing board members Lyman and Svenson, who served their last meeting on June 20, voted against the move.

"I am surprised after 10 years it is not self-evident to keep the Early Learning Center the way it is," Lyman said.

Parents at the meeting spoke both in favor of full-day kindergarten and returning children back to the six elementary schools.

"If you can't have the program in one central location, I would bring kids back to all six schools," said parent Matt Downey.

The size of classrooms for kindergarten students and whether or not each classroom would have a bathroom and sink were concerns raised by parents at the meeting. Superintendent Les Loomis said he has met with architect Richard Peckham of Collins and Scoville to address the classroom size issue.

"A full review with each elementary principal is planned," Loomis said.

Board member Warren Stoker said the actual size of a classroom is not as important as returning students to their home school.

"I am very much in favor of going back to home schools," said Stoker. "It's a good move."

A public referendum vote is scheduled this fall to allow for $3.6 million dollars of state EX-CEL aid to be used to offset the cost of implementing full-day kindergarten. Additional classrooms could then be built without bringing additional costs to taxpayers. The district estimates 15 new staffers will be hired when the move to a full day is complete in the beginning of the 2009-2010 school year.

"There would be a transition year in 2008-2009," said Loomis.

The kindergarten class size decisions will be made through a redistricting process that will occur next year.

Proponents of full-day kindergarten believe students will learn in a more relaxed pace and be able to explore subjects more in depth in preparation for grade one. District officials estimate that about 75 e-mails on the full-day kindergarten subject were received and reviewed prior to the decision.

Humane society issues warm weather reminder

The arrival of the month of June is a sure sign that spring is here and warm weather is here to stay. For many of us, this is a great time to have fun outside with our pets. The Mohawk & Hudson River Humane Society wants pet owners to enjoy outdoor activities, while being mindful of the dangers that hot weather can pose for our furry friends.

Dogs and cats have very limited ability to sweat and decrease their body temperature by panting. In extreme heat, it can be difficult for pets to regulate their body temperature naturally. "Immediately stop strenuous exercise if pets start panting excessively, drooling, appear to be weak or have

Group closes first $500,000 Al Tech Loan

The Albany County Business Development Corp. recently closed its first $500,000 Al Tech Loan.

The loan was made to AWESCO, a local independent distributor of industrial, medical and specialty gases, gas equipment and welding supplies, on June 8. The funds will be used to create a new specialty gas lab, upgrade and expand the medical gases division, and increase the fleet of delivery vehicles.

The Al Tech Loan Fund was established as an economic development tool to aid businesses within Albany County. Last year, the direct administration of the Al Tech Loan Fund was transferred from the New York State Job Development Authority in New York City to the Albany County Business Development Corporation. The maximum loan companies can apply for was increased from $300,000 to $500,000 with the move.

The Al Tech Loan Fund's mission is to promote economic growth in Albany County by offering financing to small and medium-sized businesses that demonstrate strong possibilities for growth, real property improvement, increased employment, and retention of employees in the community.

Bethlehem library moves forward and glances back

Like the schools, the library's year ends in June. As we prepare to move forward, here's a brief look back, adapted from our latest annual report to the Upper Hudson Library System.

Last year saw travel to many lands; cooking at home; concerts cool and classical; summer reading for all ages; expanded services; and the generosity of our Friends and volunteers.

Armchair travel

Our Russell memorial travel series took us to Japan and China, the Yukon and Alaska, Nicaragua, Vietnam and Madagascar. Evenings on the Green concerts in July 2006 featured blues and bluegrass, rock and Dixie. Our winter Sunday music series offered a musical smorgasbord with a classical flavor.

Cookin' and Friends

Our participation in the federally funded Kids Cookin' By the Book grant brought a tasty variety of activities to elementary school children throughout the year, including a TV spot on Channel 9. In the spring of 2006 and 2007, we were delighted to host the final event of the Riverway Storytelling Festival, underwritten by Friends of the Library. Friends' generosity also extended to upstate libraries ravaged by the summer floods of 2006, through a donation to a New York State Library Association emergency fund.

Reading for all

In addition to our full roster of summer reading activities for grades K-8 last year, we initiated Basking in Books for adults and high school students. Readers logged and shared their comments and entered drawings for weekly prizes offered by Bethlehem businesses.

This spring's Big Read was a program highlight for us. Funded by a National Endowment for the Arts grant, the Big Read involved the entire community in a shared reading experience. "Their Eyes Were Watching God" inspired a month of book discussions, lectures, jazz concerts and art.

Growing service

Services have continued to grow. By the end of 2006,

Computer Partners had reached more than 100 adult learners in more than 400 one-on-one tutoring sessions. Access to the NYS Talking Books library was facilitated by BookBeat, our outreach service to Delmar's Good Samaritan residents. We also visited the Bethlehem schools, the Delmar area YMCA, the Bethlehem Senior Center, and the Empire State Plaza. In-house, we introduced a customized research-coaching program called Book a Librarian, replaced our rental books with free 7-Day Express, and introduced PlayAways, audiobooks that come with their own playing device.

Growing gardens

Our new gardens have continued to grow as well. Volunteers have tended our gardens diligently in every season-something we strive to achieve in our daily service to the community.

IN BRIEF

Red Cross urgently seeks blood donors as summer begins

With most people planning summer vacations and activities, the American Red Cross Blood Services, New York-Penn Region is urging current eligible and new blood donors to make and keep appointments to help avert a summer blood shortage.

The Red Cross reports entering the summer with less than two days supply of blood, short of the needed five-to-seven day supply. Currently, blood type O negative, the universal blood type, and A negative are on medical approval.

Medical approval requires that a Red Cross physician review and approve each request from a hospital for units of a specific blood type to ensure that supplies remain available for the most urgent needs.

Summer donations are made even more difficult due to the lack of school blood drives, which, coupled with hectic schedules, create a dramatic decline in blood donations of 10 to 15 percent.

To motivate donors to give blood this summer, the Red Cross is offering the following light-hearted promotions to all presenting donors:

- All donors who donate blood or platelets between June 11 and July 7 will be eligible to win a pair of tickets to see the musical group The Police in concert at Fenway Park in Boston on July 28.

For complete rules on how to enter, donors are asked to visit www.pointsforpints.org.

- Summer holiday T-shirts will be given to all presenting donors as a thank you from June 23 to July 8.

All current eligible and new donors are strongly urged to call 1-800-GIVE LIFE (1-800-448-3543) or visit www.DonateBloodNow.org to schedule an appointment.

Port of Waterford to host steamboat meet

On Saturday, June 30 from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., the Port of Waterford will host a steamboat meet. Antique steamboats, U.S. Coast Guard vessels, rides on the M/V Sadie, and other entertainment for kids, refreshments, and vendors will be present. Fireworks will go off at 9 p.m. For more information, call 233-9123 or visit www.town.waterford.ny.us.

Mansion to hold July 4 celebration

On Wednesday, July 4, Schuyler Mansion State Historic Site, 32 Catherine St., Albany, invites the public to attend an old-fashioned July 4 celebration on the mansion grounds, from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. This event is free.

A variety of 18th century activities may be sampled throughout the afternoon. Also, a "Hands-On History" tent will be available and stilts, sack races and other contests will be held.

Schuyler Mansion will be available for self-guided tours at a reduced admission price of $2.

Take cover from the sun

By JENNIFER FARNSWORTH
news@spotlightnews.com

We hear so much this time of year about protecting ourselves from the sun's harmful rays that we sometimes simply tune it out. After months of gray skies and chilly nights, it feels good to close your eyes and let the sun hit your face.

Forgetting that those rays are doing damage is a harmful mistake and one that experts say we will pay for one way or another.

If those ultraviolet rays do not cause skin cancer, they may cause premature aging, and while it is hip to tan when you are a young adult, many older adults will tell you that they would trade in wrinkles for a "pastier" complexion.

From protecting ourselves to protecting our children, it pays to take a little time to understand what is behind those three little letters: SPF.

"The first thing people need to understand is what an SPF actually means, and, more importantly, how it works and works properly," said Dr. Judy Mysliborski of Capital District Dermatology.

SPF stands for sun protection factor. Mysliborski said consumers are often too preoccupied with numbers as opposed to proper application, which is what makes a product most effective.

"We encourage our patients to apply an SPF 30 sunscreen 30 minutes before sun exposure. Of course I always say it's better to apply it late than never," said Mysliborski.

When asked about the myth that only fair-skinned, blond-haired and blue-eyed people can burn, Mysliborski said that while it is true that fairer skinned people need to take more caution, anyone of any skin color or race is vulnerable to UV rays. She said anyone can get a sunburn.

The most obvious concern to dermatologists is skin cancer, or melanoma. According to the American Academy of Dermatology, melanoma is the second most common cancer among 20- to 29-year-old women. The academy also reports that the incidence of melanoma has increased 690 percent from 1950-2001. Mysliborski said it is best to find a product that protects against both UVA and UVB.

rays and more potent than UVA in producing sunburn. They are considered the main cause of most sun-related skin cancers.

Another important factor to consider is different protection for different stages of life. Teens may need a non-greasy formula or one without any added moisturizers. Younger children often need a product that will last through playing and swimming. A lot of products on the market for children often contain bug repellent as well as sunscreen.

Dr. Theodore Talma of Latham Pediatrics said to look for a product that is sensitive for children in case it gets it into their eyes during application.

"Look for a product especially made for children because they are usually tear-free and water-resistant," said Talma.

Pediatricians also suggest using sprays for the body and creams for the faces on children. Another tip is to keep a small bottle in older kids' backpacks, which makes it accessible to them if parents should forget.

Older adults also need to take certain measures to care for their skin while being exposed to the sun for a long time. The American Geriatrics Society's Foundation for Health says that seniors should stay out of excessively high temperatures and should limit their exposure to the sun. They suggest seniors wear lightweight clothing in the summer, as well as sun hats. Another tip is to stay hydrated and to read precautions on medicine labels. Since seniors tend to take medications for conditions like heart disease and diabetes, it is suggested they read the labels for information about drugs and sun exposure.

Alan Camardo, a native of Guilderland, has worked for Copper-tone in California for the past few years and has seen the demands in sun care change.

He said although there is still a solid market for suntan lotions, many people are more concerned with protecting their skin.

"People are starting to care more about the aging effects of the sun as opposed to the look of a suntan," said Camardo.

There are products on the market now that go beyond sunscreens. Mysliborski said consumers could find products that will even protect their clothing. "Sun Guard" is a new product that is sold on the Internet. You can add a solution to your washer that will add sun protection to your sportswear. Another new item is the UV Hawk. The "hawk" is an actual sun calculator that tells you the UV index, your skin type and the temperature.

Mysliborski also recommends skincare with an SPF and sunless tanning lotions. While these products are useful, it is most important to remember the average person can protect themselves by more than 90 percent by simply applying sunscreen correctly.

"Keep in mind that often you sweat it off and you swim it off. Apply sunscreen generously, apply it at the proper intervals, and you should be well-protected," said Mysliborski.

Alan Camardo

According to the Skin Cancer Foundation's Photobiology Committee, UVA rays are long-wave solar rays. Because they penetrate the skin more deeply, they are less likely than UVB to cause sunburn. UVA rays, however, are responsible for wrinkling and other aging effects. When combined with UVB rays, they increase the cancer-causing aspects of excessive sun exposure.

UVB are short-wave solar hydration. Patients should be asking if this is a side effect of the medications they are on. If that is the case, patients simply need to be more diligent about getting the appropriate amount of fluids in their body.

"Thanks to some of the physical changes that happen as we age, older adults can't cool down as well as younger ones. Just as important, older people may not feel hot when the temperature is dangerously high," said the American Geriatrics Society's Foundation for Health in Aging. "They are also less likely to feel thirsty, even when they are almost dehydrated, which means that their bodies have lost dangerous amounts of water."

Be prepared

Thunderstorms might provide a nice break from the scorching heat this summer, but they present their own list of dangers. Storms often result in power outages that can last hours or days. Everyone should have an emergency kit made up and available to them in case of a power outage.

Calling the kit a "grab and go," Borden said it should include enough bottled water for three days. That means 1 gallon of water per person per day. Additionally, you should have a battery-operated radio (complete with batteries that actually work), a blanket, medication, cash (because ATMs are unlikely to work), and a flashlight.

Borden said people should also be trained in first aid and CPR. Knowing these skills can help you save the life of someone in an emergency. While most of the people who come through the Red Cross training are there because it is mandated for their employment, Borden said the truth of the matter is that it is something everyone should know.

"When people use their first aid and CPR knowledge, it's usually on someone they know," said Borden.

Take the sting out

June noted that bee stings become a problem for many during the summer months and for the people who have severe reactions it can be life threatening. Typically, if victims are going to have a severe reaction, June said it will occur within the first 20 minutes. June said it is not unusual to see severe reactions in older, middle-age adults or senior citizens who have never had a bad reaction before. People who know they are severely allergic to bee stings should be carrying an Epi-Pen.

"It is important that people check the expiration date on the pens they are carrying," said June. "They should be kept someplace where the victim or someone else can get to it and administer it within a few minutes."

Keep your cool

Both June and Borden said high temperatures and high humidity can become a problem for people, particularly the very young and the very old. Borden suggests staying away from alcohol during the heat and drinking plenty of fluids to maintain hydration.

"If you have to be out, protect your skin with long sleeves and a hat. Make sure to eat. We need to maintain energy," said Borden. He also suggested staying as cool as possible. That might mean mowing the lawn early in the morning or later in the afternoon, or stopping whatever you are doing and going into a cool place for a period of time.

"Heat exhaustion can occur within an hour of being in the sun," said Borden, noting that many things factor into how your body responds to heat. June adds that it is necessary for people to "gauge the temperature and their activity level. Be aware of your limitations. People can be dehydrated in temperatures of 75 degrees."

June added that the elderly may be taking medications that make them more prone to deand canoes, life jackets should be worn at all times. George June, chief of the Clifton Park-Halfmoon Emergency Corps, said the balance on a boat can change in an instant. If the canoe or boat turns over, there will be no time to search for and put on a life vest, so life preservers should be put on before entering the watercraft. Borden also reminds people not to use alcohol when swimming or boating.

Use your head

"Another important safety issue is helmets," said June. Whether biking, rollerblading, or riding an all-terrain vehicle, wearing a helmet is extremely important and can prevent serious injury.

"Most people associate injuries with traffic accidents," said June. "Children can suffer serious head injuries just falling off their bike in the driveway."

Although using helmets is important, there are a number of other things cyclists can do to increase their safety on the road.

Josh Poppel, executive director for the New York Bicycling Coalition, said people should remember "bicycles are vehicles in New York state so they follow the same rules." That means bicyclists must ride on the right-hand side of the road with traffic and obey the lights at intersections. If cyclists are out at night, they need to be riding a bike equipped with front and rear lights.

"Using hand signals and communicating are also important. Cyclists need to properly convey their intentions so that others know what they are going to do," said Poppel. Adding that the numbers of cyclists on the road increase during the warm weather months, Poppel encourages both cyclists and motorists to pay better attention to each other and recognize that they are sharing the roadways.

Woman helps refugees make their homes in area

By KARINE ABALYAN
abalyank@spotlightnews.com

Barbara Loucks is preparing to make runs to the Albany International Airport next week, but the Guilderland woman doesn't operate your traditional airport shuttle.

As a refugee mentor for the United States Committee for Refugees and Immigrants, Albany, Loucks is one of 100 volunteers who meets refugees at the airport, and helps them move into new apartments, learn English and grow comfortable with life in the Capital District.

"They're wonderful people to get to know," she said of the families she has met. "And it's very rewarding."

On Tuesday, July 3, Loucks will be part of a team helping Burmese families arriving from refugee camps in Thailand. The nonprofit committee, which works with refugees from all parts of the world, expects several waves of Burmese people during the summer months.

"It's reminded me to be more grateful for what I have and not to feel that I need so much," Loucks said of her work.

The Albany branch of the United States Committee for Refugees and Immigrants is part of a national organization that works with the federal Bureau of Population, Refugees, and Migration to meet the needs of newcomers. The government assigns refugees, most of whom flee political or religious persecution in their home countries, to the Albany location and provides money to support local initiatives.

Last year, the Albany office served more than 350 refugees, helping new arrivals set up a home, obtain a Social Security number, find a job and address other orientation needs during their first six months in the country. The committee also assists people with filing residency and citizenship applications and studying for the citizenship exam.

"All of the people (who come here) need the same help," said Aye Aye Cho, who moved to the country from Burma in 1999 and now works for the nonprofit organization. Refugees need "a good counselor or advisor to rebuild their life," she added.

The Albany office employs six full-time staff members, and relies heavily on volunteers like Loucks to carry out its programs.

"Volunteers working directly with refugees not only learn about the experiences and culture of the people they are working with, they also develop close friendships with amazing, strong, courageous people," said director Molly Short in an e-mail.

Loucks said that the work has changed her life. She still remembers the first time she drove to the airport to meet families from a Liberian refugee camp.

"On the ride from the airport, they were amazed by Central Avenue," she said. "I could see how they reacted to having a separate room for everyone and a bed to sleep on ... and to see the relief on their faces and the happiness that they had gotten there." These experiences, Loucks said, have made her more wary of consumer culture.

"We have so much we don't need," she said. "To see people appreciate the most basic things in life made me reexamine how much I need and what I want to do with my free time."

Volunteering has also challenged Loucks to rethink the opportunities America offers. She is currently tutoring a 15-year-old girl from Afghanistan who is trying to reconcile her traditions with Western culture. A lot of times, Loucks said, that means seeing her student give up freedoms most Americans take for granted, such as attending school socials or spending free time outside the home.

"You want America to be the land of opportunity, and you don't want them to lose their culture either, but I am hoping they will get to take advantage of the opportunities in America," she said.

Loucks became involved with the advocacy group two years ago, when it first opened a branch in Albany. She said she was inspired to work with refugees after she saw "Lost Boys of Sudan," a film documenting two orphans' escape from Sudan and their travel to the United States.

As she has gotten to meet more and more refugees, Loucks said she has been impressed with their courage and perseverance.

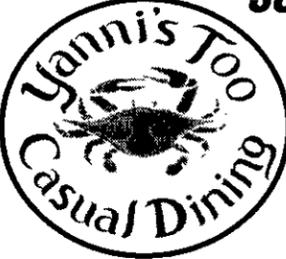

"The bravery to come to a totally new country," she said, "...that must take a huge leap of faith."

In addition to providing resettlement assistance and teaching English, Loucks has organized donation drives through her church and office and helped the organization with fundraising.

A wildlife biologist, Loucks will travel to northern Tanzania this summer to learn about the area's environment. She hopes the trip also will teach her about local culture and complement her outreach efforts back home.

She admits that her job isn't always easy, but said she always looks forward to meeting new people and learning about their experiences.

"It changed my life and it changed me," she said.

GPAC show promises acrobatics, theatrics galore

By KARINE ABALYAN
abalyank@spotlightnews.com

Visitors at the Guilderland Performing Arts Center next week will not only see a circus, they will be part of one.

The Russian American Kids Circus, a Brooklyn-based group of child actors and athletes, promises an action-packed show full of juggling, ball-throwing, balancing, unicycling and a chance for audience participation at its Thursday, July 5, performance.

"It's so much to see," said Regina Berenchtein, who founded the group with her mother, Olga Partigul, and husband, Alex Berenchtein, a former Moscow circus star. "Everybody will enjoy it."

Rooted in the Russian tradition of theatrical circus acts, the show features colorful costumes, black lights and carefully choreographed acrobatics.

"The circus in Russia was equivalent to gymnastics and sports, and it was equivalent to the Olympic Games," Berenchtein said. "They have a very old tradition, which is one of the best."

A few years after Berenchtein met and married her husband, the family began recruiting and training children who had an interest in the Russian art form. Now in its 12th year, the circus has wowed thousands of adults and children nationwide, with appearances in 25 states and on national television.

Performers train daily with Alex Berenchtein and senior coach Igor Loktev, and it takes three to five years of hard work before they appear on stage.

The group's youngest member is the Berenchteins' 4-year-old son, Richard Bernard.

This is the first time the circus will visit Guilderland. Audience members can expect anywhere from nine to 12 kids to take the stage, but the acts, Berenchtein said, are a surprise.

"Each show is different and individually produced for each venue," she said.

Adults and children will have the opportunity to learn about rolling globes and balancing balls before the grand finale.

The uniqueness of a child circus made the group an attractive choice for the 2007 Performing Arts Center season, said Claudia Gottesman, publicity director and member of the center's board of directors.

"We just thought it would be really exciting and different," Gottesman said.

The free event will begin at 7:30 p.m. on Thursday, July 5, at the Guilderland Performing Arts Center in Tawasentha Park.

Albany County passes vehicle-towing law

Legislation mirrors city ban on 'predatory' practices

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parkerg@spotlightnews.com

A county law banning so-called predatory towing practices passed 32-to-5, Monday, June 11.

The new law mirrors city of Albany legislation that regulates contracts between lot owners and towing companies.

County Legislator Tim Nichols, D-Latham, brought the legislation before county lawmakers in November last year after several residents of Latham apartment complexes complained about clandestine towing practices and costly fines.

"One of the reasons why my proposal was delayed was because we didn't want it to conflict with Albany's," said Nichols, adding that people in the county will now have the same protection the city law provides.

In support of the law, Nichols pointed to practices at the Lake Shore/Beverwick apartments off Troy Schenectady Road. According to Nichols, residents of the apartment complexes were having their cars towed for reasons such as parking on the grass, or they were a "hair" over the white line separating spaces, or they parked in a fire lane. The vehicles were often taken during the night and towed into the city to Joe's Osborne Street Garage. Often no proof of the offenses was provided, Nichols said.

Following the media buzz Nichols stirred up, city residents came out in favor of a law ending the practice, and Colonie and Latham area apartments and businesses that used such towing practices have since stopped, he said.

Under the new law, it is unlawful for tow truck drivers, despite the terms of their contracts with apartment complexes, to act as "judge, jury and executioner" when vehicles have been slated for towing.

The predatory towing law, Local Law F, will also ban any financial kickbacks between towing companies and parking lot owners, and require towing companies to release any vehicles if and when owners arrive before they are towed. The law also requires lot owners to be present when vehicles are to be towed and provide additional notification of parking lot rules in larger lots.

Apartment complex owners have denied that kickback schemes exist, but Nichols contends they have been used in the past.

Several attempts to reach Joseph Garland, general manger of Lake Shore Park, Valley View and Village One apartments were unsuccessful. All three complexes have towing contracts with Joe's Osborne Street Garage.

Last year, when Nichols first attacked the towing practices, Garland said that they were only allegations and the existence of any kick back scheme is a lie.

At the time, Garland said that towing policies were outlined in tenant lease agreements and put into practice to curb an ongoing parking problem at the complexes. It is the violators who have a problem with the practice, he said.

The first Independence Day event in the area kicks off in Scotia at Jumpin' Jack's Drive In on Friday, June 29. The Coors Light U.S. Ski Team show will start the evening at 7 p.m. on the Mohawk River behind Jumpin' Jack's. The team will debut its "Battle Royale" performance where two teams of skiers will compete for audience approval.

"Each performance is like a Broadway play on water," marketing director Elsa Radliff said.

The Boys of Wexford will take the stage in Freedom Park at 8 p.m. Performers from Wexford, Ireland, will join with their partners from sister-city Hartford, Conn., to present a free night of authentic Irish music.

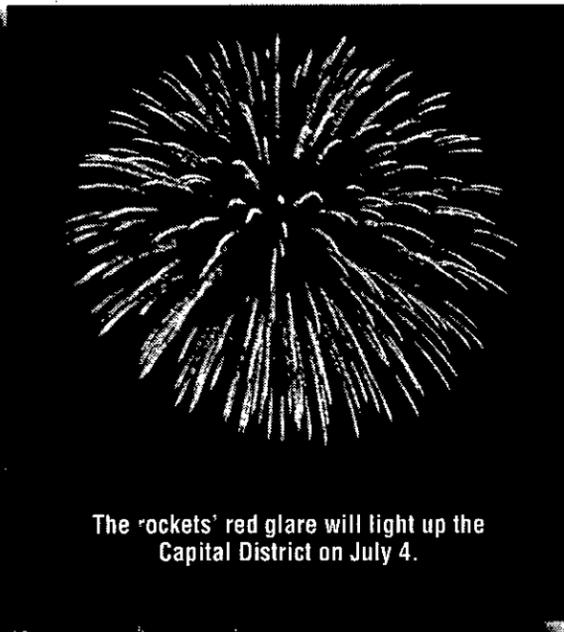

And for the main event, Jumpin' Jack's will sponsor a 25-minute fireworks show starting at 9:15 p.m. Jumpin' Jack's owner, Mark Lansing, said he puts on the $12,000 show every year not just because he loves fireworks, but also to say thanks.

"It's my way of giving back to the public for everything they've done for me," Lansing said.

Saratoga County

The Saratoga Performing Arts Center will host Stewart's Shop Family Night on Wednesday, July 4. The grounds will open at 6 p.m. for a family picnic competition.

The 'rockets' red glare will light up the Capital District on July 4.

"Families can compete in categories such as most patriotic and most original picnic," said Vesna Gjaja, director of development and marketing. Admission for children will be free on the lawn where they can enjoy magicians, balloon artists and free ice cream from Stewart's.

At 8 p.m., the New York City Ballet will take the stage with its patriotic performance called "Essential Balanchine." Fireworks will follow at 10 p.m., sponsored by Stewart's Shop.

"It is a great night for families and children. We hope families will enjoy the complete SPAC experience," said Gjaja.

Albany County

Price Chopper will host its 31st Fabulous Fourth on The Plaza in Albany. The festivities begin at 2 p.m. at both the north and south ends, with food and craft vendors and children's activities like bounce rides and face painting. Grab a piece of the world's largest sausage patty as Hatfield Quality Meats competes for the title by cooking a patty of more than 1 ton of sausage.

Local rock band Ten Year Vamp will take the stage at 3 p.m., followed by Captain Squeeze and the Zydeco Moshers with some fast-paced southern folk music at 4:45 p.m.

A fan of Price Chopper's "House of Barbeque" tune? Jazz guitarist Melvin Sparks will perform before handing the stage over to the headlining band, the Spin Doctors, around 7:15 p.m. The multi-platinum band has made appearances on Saturday Night Live and in Rolling Stone Magazine and is known for singles such as "Two Princes" and "Just Go Ahead Now."

"We are expecting around 50,000 spectators at the fireworks. This event is the single largest event in the Capital District," said Mona Golub, manager of public relations and consumer services for Price Chopper.

She said this has been the hometown to Price Chopper since it was created in 1932.

"It's our way of giving back to the community that has given us so much," Golub said.

Since Price Chopper started the Fabulous Fourth event 31 years ago, it has never considered not holding the celebration.

The musical fireworks spectacular is scheduled to start around 9:15 p.m. Spectators are welcome to bring coolers, but leave the glass bottles at home.

"It's a time to celebrate being a community and to celebrate being American," said Golub.

Jumpin' Jack's in Scotia will celebrate the Fourth with a bang.

the sport.”

To that end, Reinhardt and his Cornell teammates train like any other varsity sport at the Ivy League school. He said the team practices three hours a day five days a week and participates in weekend tournaments.

“There’s drills and plays, and different offensive and defensive sets,” Reinhardt said. “But the difference between a good ultimate player and a great ultimate player is mental. You know how in football a quarterback has to make good decisions for the team? In ultimate, 20 guys have to all make good decisions for the team to succeed.”

Cornell’s A team is among the top three in the Metro East region and ranked 30th out of more than 500 programs in the United States and Canada as chosen by the Ultimate Players Association (UPA), the governing body for ultimate frisbee. The UPA also sanctions national championship tournaments for college and youth levels, which are televised.

All of this has led to a more serious approach to the sport at the collegiate level to the point where some schools are now recruiting high school players.

“A lot of high school kids are using ultimate as a factor in deciding on colleges,” said Reinhardt. “There’s a small group of schools that get the best high school players.”

An ultimate frisbee player’s career doesn’t end in college, either. Many cities have ultimate frisbee clubs, including Albany Ultimate in the Capital District, and numerous tournaments take place in the summer. Albany Ultimate will be hosting its annual Ow My Knee! Tournament July 21 and 22 at Scotia’s Maalwyck Park and Glenville’s Polo Fields, which are behind the Beukendael Fire Department.

“This is definitely something I plan on pursuing after college,” said Reinhardt. “I’m already playing on clubs in Boston this summer, and I know the rest of my teammates at Cornell are looking to keep playing after college.”

Reinhardt said the best part about club ultimate frisbee is that nearly anyone can play.

“It crosses age boundaries,” he said. “I’m playing on this one team during the summer where there’s a person who is closer to my parents’ age than mine. There’s also two people on this team — one who is a teacher, and another who I think is one of his students, and they work together as peers.”

It’s that kind of atmosphere that draws people to ultimate frisbee and keeps them going in the sport.

“I am looking forward to playing this in college,” said McGrath. “This is a sport that can be played by anybody who’s never played before.”

Ultimate game catching on with area athletes

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

The Shenendehowa-Saratoga rivalry was taken to the ultimate level last Wednesday.

The ultimate frisbee level, that is.

The Shen and Saratoga ultimate frisbee clubs met for the first time at Clifton Common in a game that was ... well, days in the making.

"I asked my mom about this team because she works (at Saratoga Springs High School), and she gave me the contact number," said Shen team captain Stephen Ehrlich.

"We heard that they had a team, so we kind of expected a game," said Saratoga team captain Travis McGrath. "I was going to call anyway."

You see, with ultimate frisbee at the high school level, there are no referees to contact, no leagues or school administrators to work with and no coaches to supervise. It's just two teams of teenagers throwing a Frisbee around in a field. It's a sport that does not require a lot of planning — just a large, open space and good weather.

"Pretty much, anyone can play," said Ehrlich. "It's one of those sports that are effort based. Anyone can pass, and anyone can catch."

It was hard for either team to catch the disc on this day, though. A stiff wind made it difficult to control the Frisbee's flight, especially when a team had to throw it into the breeze. Still, the players were leaping and diving for every wayward pass.

"It's just fun," said Shen sophomore Albert Nieh. "We care about who wins, but we really want to have fun in this game."

"We only take it as seriously as everyone wants it to be," added McGrath.

Shen and Saratoga are two of the latest high schools nationwide that have established ultimate frisbee programs, though the game is not quite the same as what is played at the collegiate and adult levels. When they played last Wednesday, they didn't use a regulation 125-yard field that includes two 25-yard end zones. Instead, they used the Common's soccer fields and made the goaltender boxes their end zone lines.

Still, the basic rules applied. Series started with one team throwing the disc to the other team, which was stationed at midfield. Teams advanced by completing passes to each other. Any dropped, trapped or batted-down discs resulted in a turnover. A point was scored for every touchdown, and the game was played till one team reached 15 points.

"The pace of the game is pretty fast, and you have to use some strategy," said Saratoga player Travis Frey.

Frey played soccer at Saratoga in the fall, but he's one of the few exceptions of high school ultimate frisbee players.

"A lot of these people have played football and basketball, but they don't play on (school) teams," said Nieh. "So, we can get together and play on Mondays and Fridays."

"We have people who don't play any other sports competitively that come to play for us," said McGrath.

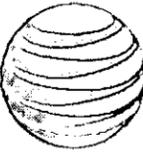

The level of competition is higher beyond high school. Bethlehem Central High School graduate Seth Reinhardt is captain of Cornell University's nationally-ranked A team, and he said the sport is taken more seriously than back in the days when he played for Bethlehem's club, Guild of Disc.

"It's not happy-go-lucky. It gets pretty intense at the highest levels," said Reinhardt. "But at the end of the day, there is that sense of friendship that brings people to
