Controlled outages leaving officials, residents short-fused

The lights are out, the house is void of that steady background hum of electronics and the air is getting stagnant because the fans and air conditioners have stopped abruptly.

Bet you never thought your power company would do this to you on purpose. In early July, storms battered areas of Washington, Rensselaer, Hamilton and Saratoga counties and caused more than 100,000 National Grid customers to lose power over the course of two days. While no one can fault an act of nature, some area public officials have taken the power company to task over their lack of communication when using controlled outages to contain damage and make repairs on the power grid.

Grid Spokesman Patrick Stella said. "As a result, we ordered approximately 50 megawatts to be manually disconnected until some of the lines and generators could be restored. This decision had to be made immediately to prevent the likelihood of extensive, longer-term damage."

The process for selecting which lines go out and which lines stay on is "purely technical and mechanical," said National Grid spokesman Alberto Bianchetti. "We have to determine how much load has to be taken off of the system, and once we determine how much load we have to reduce, we power down the amount of lines necessary."

Bianchetti said National Grid does not consider geography

Projects snarl area roads

State, county and town construction leads to detours

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Motorists traveling to and from Bethlehem have their hands full driving around a maze of county and state road projects slowing down major thoroughfares. Add to that the latest news that a four-mile stretch of Blessing Road will be closed for eight weeks due to construction of a roundabout.

The most visible road work is the Route 85 Slingerlands Bypass project, where three roundabouts are under construction by the state Department of Transportation with a fourth roundabout being built at the entrance of the new Vista Technology Park.

Roundabout construction is under way at the intersections of routes 85 and 140, Route 85 and Maher Road and Route 85 and Blessing Road.

Blessing Road is closing for two reasons, according to Peter Van Keuren, DOT spokesman.

"It is both the start of the roundabout work on Blessing Road and work on the bridge adjacent to Blessing Road, where the bridge will go to four lanes," said Van Keuren.

A signed detour route is now in place to help motorists follow

Hearing covers Vista infrastructure

Town discusses water, sewer and road upkeep responsibilities

By JIM CUOZZO

Three public hearings all pertaining to infrastructure improvements to the Vista Technology Park area were addressed at the Wednesday, July 25, meeting of the Bethlehem Town Board. The hearings, held simultaneously at town hall, pertained to water, sewer and road improvements and extensions and who will pay for the cost of the improvements near Route 85.

A special assessment district is expected to be formed and approved by the town, allowing the developers of Vista Tech Park to pay for a new roundabout to be constructed at the entrance of Vista Park at a cost not to exceed $4.15 million.

Accident injures two

A two-car, head-on collision Thursday afternoon, July 26, on state Route 9W in Glenside sent two people to the hospital with serious injuries.

Bethlehem police report that 59-year-old Charles A. Bressette of Albany was driving south on Route 9W near Plank Road shortly after noon when his 1994 Chevrolet crossed over into the northbound lane of 9W, striking a second car driven by 45-year-old William A. Gillette of Central Bridge.

Gillette was driving a 1999 Dodge Durango when Bressette's vehicle struck the Dodge head on.

Both operators were the sole occupants in the vehicles and each were transported to Albany Medical Center with serious injuries.

A portion of Route 9W was closed for several hours following the crash.

No tickets have been issued at this time, but the cause of the accident is under investigation.

Both Bethlehem police and state police responded to the scene undergoing an accident reconstruction.

Police Blotter

Albany man charged with DWI

An Albany man has been charged with DWI by Bethlehem police after being stopped in Slingerlands on Saturday, July 21.

William Dubritz, 26, of 40 Woodlake Road, Albany, was charged with DWI, driving while ability impaired and failure to keep right. Dubritz was stopped on Schoolhouse Road after police observed his vehicle crossing the double yellow line and centerline near Blessing Road.

Dubritz told police he had four beers before getting behind the wheel. Police said Dubritz failed several field sobriety tests administered at the scene.

He was processed and will appear in Bethlehem Town Court August 7.

• Joal Espinal, 17, of 7 Nathaniel Road, Delmar was charged with felony criminal mischief by Bethlehem police. Espinal was arrested on July 23 based on an active arrest warrant.

He was arraigned and released to Albany County's Probation Department. He has a return court date in Bethlehem Town Court for Aug. 7.

Resident questions advisory group role

Town reiterates conservation panel will work only with 'willing landowners'

BY JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

A Delmar resident asked members of the Bethlehem Town Board on Wednesday, July 25, to restate the role of the Citizens Advisory Committee on Conservation, or CACC, about 18 months after the committee's formation.

Nancy Neff and her family are eighth-generation farmers. She told members of the board it is her family who should decide what will happen to the 300 acres of farmland they own in the town and not a "vocal group of open space preservationists."

"The open space plan allows those who do not own the property nor make their living from it to craft regulations that can devalue it," Neff said.

Because 4,500 acres of town land is in an agricultural district and much of the newly developed town land allows for more green space and recreational areas, Neff said an open space plan is unnecessary. She also questioned the ability

"Again, I assure you we have committed not to trample on the rights of landowners."

to obtain state or federal grants because the town has a specific open space plan.

"By reviewing the document on funding prepared by the CACC that was presented in January, I did not notice any of the funding sources necessitating an open space plan," said Neff.

It is not the first time a town resident has presented concerns to the board regarding the role of CACC.

CACC held several meetings last year, with some members urging the town board to ensure only "willing landowners" would participate in future open space plan opportunities.

Minutes of the CACC Advisory Committee in October stated that committee member Valerie Newell questioned the need for an open space plan.

The town board reassured Neff at the July 25 meeting that taking private land from a property owner who has no interest in selling or giving the land away is not the group's purpose.

"It is not my intent to involve any farm or piece of private land owned by someone who does not want to participate," said town Supervisor Jack Cunningham.

Town board member Sam Messina said the committee still has work to do before conclusions can be reached regarding committee and town goals.

"Again, I assure you we have committed not to trample on the rights of landowners," said Messina.

Board member Dan Plummer said he will not advocate for any plan that takes land away from unwilling landowners but as a member of the town board, he did tell Neff future preservation of town land is important.

"If there is an opportunity to preserve land, we ought to do it," said Plummer.

Kyle Kotary, also a member of the town board, said CACC is designed to receive community input.

"The open space plan will allow us to better manage growth in the future and to set a plan or working order to get there," said Kotary.

Kotary agreed with his colleagues that it is not the board's intent to "infringe on anyone's rights or restrict what they can do with their land."

Fire department depends on Ollie

Desire to serve still burns in Elsmere volunteer

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

When Oliver Palmer first joined the Elsmere Fire Department in 1953, Dwight Eisenhower was president of the United States, and the Yankees defeated the Brooklyn Dodgers in the World Series.

As Palmer celebrates his 83rd birthday this month, he looks back on 54 years as a member of Elsmere's Fire Department with much pride and plenty of memories.

"This is the best bunch of guys I've ever seen," said Palmer, who has seen the department grow from 22 members to 80, with more joining. "I love them all."

Palmer was the main driver and pump operator for 35 years when the first Elsmere fire truck rolled out of the old two-story brick firehouse and responded to the now defunct neighborhood box alarms. The alarms would send a punch-code message back to the firehouse on a Teletype machine that would indicate where the fire was burning.

"There were no Scott air packs with all the equipment back then," said Palmer. "You just kept down low and got the fire out the best you could."

Palmer rescued a 10-year old girl from a burning structure in 1999 on Delaware Avenue when the girl became trapped on a second story porch.

"I pulled her out with the ladder and got her right off the roof," Palmer said.

Fire engines and equipment in a firehouse has changed over the years, but the heart and soul of a firefighter has not. Elsmere Fire Chief Jim Reagan said "Ollie," as he is fondly known, is an inspiration to his department.

"Ollie is the strength of the community and his firehouse," said Reagan.

Palmer was there for his department in September 2001 when the firehouse was asked to transport members to the World Trade Center in New York City to help with the cleanup after the terrorist attacks. He quickly obtained a bus and, in just minutes, several firemen from Elsmere were driving down the Thruway to Manhattan.

"All the young guys gather tips through the knowledge he shares with them," said Reagan.

Local Delmar resident and artist Terry Rooney was looking for a fireman with several years of service when he came across Palmer, who became a model for one of Rooney's sculptures. The bust of Palmer designed last year was on view for several months at the Cooperstown Art Museum before being transferred to the Elsmere firehouse where it now rests.

With more than a half century of service under his belt, Palmer still attends weekly drill sessions and monthly meetings.

"He gives us something to talk about all the time," said Reagan. "The department depends on Ollie."

Bethlehem Food Pantry distributing school supplies

Group is asking for donations to program that helps needy students

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem Food Pantry is in need of school supplies. That's right, school supplies.

In addition to collecting and distributing food items, the 25-year-old, town-supported food pantry also runs an annual school supply drive. Bethlehem Senior Projects, Inc., oversees both the food pantry and the school supply drive collection for children in the Bethlehem Central School District and Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk school district.

"Many people don't realize there are kids in town who could benefit from our school supply drive," said outreach worker Jane Sanders.

Those interested in helping are asked to stop by town hall with donations of school supplies such as notebooks, markers, compasses, watercolors, blue and black pens, folders and more.

"The big items are the binders, composition notebooks, highlighter pens and school locks," Sanders said.

Distribution of collected school supplies by the town will be held in late August.

"We send a letter out to those who use our food pantry to tell them what we have on the list," said Sanders.

The school supply drive is one part of a three-pronged approach in stocking the pantry. Another summer project is the "Garden Bounty" program. Farmers and residents with home or community gardens drop excess produce like zucchini, tomatoes and peppers at town hall on Thursday mornings. Food pantry clients and community seniors have their pick of the produce throughout the day.

"This is really a community food pantry," said outreach worker William A. Vail, who works with Sanders and others in the office keeping the six large cabinets of food and supplies full throughout the year.

Boy Scouts and Girl Scout troops hold annual food collection drives that help keep the supply plentiful. The Bethlehem Public Library also supports the food pantry on a regular basis with collection boxes. Delmar letter carriers hold a major food drive during the holiday season with the products going to support the pantry.

"This is a lean time for our pantry with school starting up," said Joyce Becker, assistant director of Bethlehem Senior Services.

One reason for the pantry's school-supply drive is because the need is out there.

"It cost a lot of money to get kids started in school," Becker said.

Students from many of the local schools assist the department in sorting and stocking the shelves.

"Students from RC, St. Thomas, and Bethlehem P.I.G. (participation in government) students all volunteer and work here," said Vail.

Non-perishable food items such as cans of soup, pasta, peanut butter, cereal and crackers are a portion of what is collected.

"We served a total of 676 individuals last year and over 600 families in the town have used the food pantry since its inception," said Sanders.

To make a donation to the Bethlehem Food Pantry or the annual school supply drive, items can be dropped off at the Town Hall Senior Services Department, 445 Delaware Ave. between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. The names of people who use the pantry are kept confidential.

For information, contact Bethlehem Senior Services, Outreach Department at 439-4955, ext 1173 or 1174.

Extra flowers are just icing on the cake

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR
news@spotlightnews.com

I know you are not supposed to sweat the small stuff, but when the power went out a few weeks ago on a hot, humid evening there was nothing to do but sweat.

Sweat, and worry about the food in the refrigerator and go to the bathroom by candlelight and absentmindedly flip light switches to no avail.

We've lost power before, but usually just for a short time in the middle of the night when we were asleep or during the day when we're not home. The only inconvenience has been the need to re-set clocks.

But this time we had no electricity for just short of 24 hours.

My 10-year-old didn't want to go to bed because "it was too dark." Well, it was too dark to read, I reasoned, and that's something both she and I are used to doing before drifting off to sleep. But "too dark to sleep" didn't pass for a good excuse to stay up longer.

Now, if she had said it was too hot to sleep, then that would have made sense.

Even after the thunder and lightning storms ended, the humidity hung in the air. We couldn't cool the house by opening the windows, the oscillating fans on our dressers were unusable, and of course the air conditioner was silent.

We are clearly spoiled by having air conditioning. Many people live without air conditioning all the time. Not having it for a night was inconvenient and uncomfortable, but not the end of the world. Overall, for our family, the storm was no big deal.

I try to teach my daughter the importance of having a positive attitude. Sometimes it's a "do as I say, not as I do" type of lesson, but I mostly try to model what I preach.

Prior to her recent birthday celebration, I gave a pre-party pep talk. I said it was going to be a great party, and that she should concentrate on having a good time and not expect everything to go a specific way. However it goes, it goes, we need to be flexible, I said. I was talking to myself as much as I was talking to her.

Then I went to pick up the cake and had my first lesson in remaining flexible.

The birthday cake was not decorated as I had requested. I had asked for at least eight flowers on the cake and the flowers were to be spaced out around the perimeter of the sheet cake. This was to avoid disappointment during cake distribution time when every child yells, "I want a flower."

A saner option would be to just make sure the birthday girl gets a flower and tell the other guests to just deal with it. That's been the historical strategy. Another option would have been to request no flowers. This was my daughter's original suggestion since she didn't want any of her friends upset.

I told her not to worry. I had a plan. I drew up instructions, I spoke to a bakery worker and explained what I needed and why. Every guest who wanted a flower would get one.

Then I went to pick up the cake.

There were only six flowers, in groups of three, at two corners of the cake.

This is not what I requested, I told the woman behind the counter. She came over and we peered at the cake through the plastic top of the box.

"There's supposed to be at least eight flowers," I said.

"We're only allowed to put six flowers on the cake," the baker explained, "because of the time it takes."

"I also wanted the flowers spaced apart, that is, on different parts of the cake," I persisted.

The birthday cake was not decorated as I had requested. I had asked for at least eight flowers on the cake and the flowers were to be spaced out around the perimeter of the sheet cake. This was to avoid disappointment during cake distribution time when every child yells, "I want a flower."

She stared at me blankly.

"Why didn't anyone call and let me know about the six-flower limit? What is the point of putting down special instructions on the order form if they are not followed? I would have paid for additional flowers."

"It costs $1 per flower for extra flowers," said the bakery woman.

In the time it took to discuss the matter, I'm pretty sure the woman could've iced an entire garden on this cake. If the six existing flowers had been spread around I would've paid extra for two more, but at this point adding on to those corner bouquets was not going to fix the problem. I would still not be able to cut individual flower-topped slices.

If I'd had more time I would've spoken to the manager and asked for the store to provide the extra flowers at no cost since they did not follow the instructions, nor did they call to give me other options.

But time was ticking and there were 250 water balloons waiting to be filled.

I drove home thinking about how to break the news to Rachel.

"The store didn't do what I asked," I blurted to my daughter after I'd stashed the cake out of sight. I explained that the person who took the order didn't know there was a six-flower limit, but not to worry, every child who wanted a flower would get at least part of a flower.

"Oh, OK," she said.

With the cake crisis over, I focused on the water balloons.

This was our first time filling water balloons and I had fully intended to do a trial run before the day of the party. That would've been a good idea.

Another good idea would have been to heed the warning on the package that said, "Do not overfill."

This means don't try to make mango-sized water balloons when you've purchased the peach size. The balloons will stretch and fill, but then they become highly susceptible to breakage.

We found this out the hard way. Some of the balloons just spontaneously burst when we were nowhere near the container. I tried gently rearranging the balloons so that larger ones were on the bottom, but this was like moving through a minefield.

Tiny water-filled balloons are hard to tie, especially when your fingers are wet. Rachel was letting a bit of water out before tying hers. In retrospect, she had the right idea. She was doing it to make them easier to tie, but it was also a good idea because we were initially overfilling them (at my insistence!). One of the balloons got a tiny, tiny hole and became an itty-bitty fountain with its gentle spray. Another balloon fell under my lawn chair before it was tied. It danced around crazily as it deflated, and the water shot up through the chair's webbing and gave me a wet bottom.

Instead of getting upset, we just laughed. We also decided that we did not need to fill all 250 balloons in the package and that whatever quantity we had completed would have to do because guests would be arriving shortly and we still had to cut up the fruit.

That's when we discovered the bad melon. Let's just say it's a good thing we had back-up cantaloupe, because the one my husband sliced open minutes before the party started had an offensive odor and an unpleasant taste.

Despite the glitches, we still had chocolate cake, two buckets of water balloons, a large fruit salad, four pizza pies, sunny weather and functioning electricity.

Things don't always go exactly as planned, but if you find a way to keep your cool for minor problems, you can save your sweat for the beach.

Outdoor theater festival a scene setter

Helderbergs the backdrop for 'Othello' and 'Peter Pan'

By ARCANGELA C. MELE
melea@spotlightnews.com

If you enjoy local theater and the great outdoors, you may want to catch the Helderberg Theater Festival, the second half of which takes place at Indian Ladder Farms this weekend, with double-feature performances on Friday, through Sunday, Aug. 3, 4 and 5.

The festival is put on by Classic Theater Guild Inc. and features a little something for everyone with two well-known plays: William Shakespeare's "Othello" for a more mature crowd, and J. M. Barrie's "Peter Pan" for children.

Classic Theater Guild Inc., which is in its fourth year of production, typically puts on shows at the Hilton Center in Albany, including the production of "One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest" in March, which started at The Hilton Center and finished up at WAMC in Albany for its last weekend. Previous shows at the Hilton include "Auntie Mame" directed by Glenn Read in March 2006, "The Brady Bunch" directed by Debbie Conti last summer at Voorheesville Elementary School, and the Shakespeare production "As You Like It," which was directed by Ed Bablin and took place outdoors in Voorheesville.

The Helderberg Theater Festival performances are not the first outdoor productions put on by Classic Theater Guild, according to Amanda Stankavich, a former director at the Guild and currently an artistic director. She said company president Ed Bablin had Indian Ladder Farms in mind for a more unique and scenic venue for the summer.

"Ed loves the country landscape, and he always had gusto for conjunction with them for a free, outdoor event," she said.

The event is the first of its kind at Indian Ladder Farms. Though Indian Ladder puts on several festivals of its own throughout the year, this is the first theater-related event they've had on their grounds.

However, the setting offers an interesting variety for viewers: "Peter Pan" takes place on a semi-erected stage on a large lawn area outside an apple orchard, and "Othello" takes place in a round arena inside an herb garden.

Stankavich said another idea for the festival was to have two very different shows that would appeal to a variety of audiences.

"We wanted to hit both points, something lighthearted and more traditional for the family, and something more dramatic," she said.

The first show of the night, the children's classic "Peter Pan," directed by Jane Nielson, fits into the lighthearted category and has a children's cast. According to Nielson, who wanted "Peter Pan" to be as fun as possible, the show is full of different characters and actions, and a fair amount of dialogue.

Nielson, who is a first-time director for the Classic Theater Guild, has directed children's theater in the past and said she thinks the children's involvement with "Peter Pan" was a healthy experience for them.

"These kids have been using their imagination. They're not on the computer or playing a video game, or using a lot of technology," she said.

"Othello," Shakespeare's

tragedy about a warrior thrust into the battlefield of his own mind when a man masquerading as his best friend turns his life into a web of lies, is geared toward a more mature audience. "Othello" is a suspenseful story about race relations, war and jealousy.

Performances of the Helderberg Theater Festival at Indian Ladder Farms, which began last week, are free.

"Peter Pan" will take place at 6 p.m. Friday to Sunday, Aug. 3 to 5; "Othello" will be held at 8 p.m. Friday to Sunday, Aug. 3-5, with a special performance on Thursday, Aug. 2.

State business takes back seat

It's been a great week and a half for anyone who follows politics as a spectator sport, as it looks like Gov. Eliot Spitzer may have gone too far in his investigations of state Senate Majority Leader Joe Bruno, R-Brunswick, and his use of state-funded transportation.

While Spitzer and Bruno attack and parry, we wonder if this is how we want our elected leaders spending their time.

Spitzer's unprecedented mandate of nearly 70 percent of the vote came largely because the electorate hoped he would put his reputation as a clean-up guy to work in Albany. Since being sworn in, he has spent far too much time as the self-proclaimed steamroller, traveling to his opponents' electoral districts to trash-talk them. His self-serving shot at campaign finance reform would have locked the potential coffers of donors to Assembly and Senate representatives while coming up with creative ways for his own donors to keep funding him.

While he may have gone too far in the Bruno investigation, let's not forget that Bruno took advantage of a far-too-loose law to continue to increase his coffers. Now there are press conferences, meetings with editorial boards, plans of investigations and staff fired or reassigned to give the illusion of proper action.

And while this happens, what work of the people doesn't get done? Has a franchise been chosen to keep New York's racetracks running? We love Saratoga in the summer; could political dallying put that in jeopardy?

What's the status of Luther Forest and nanotechnology these days? Is AMD meeting with leaders from more functional states and reconsidering its move to the Capital District?

In Schenectady County, environmental groups wait for the passage of revisions to New York State Public Health Law to increase the penalties for those found to have violated regulations pertaining to the protection and contamination of public water supplies.

Spitzer and Bruno say they are committed to continuing the work of the state. Let's hope so; there's too much at stake to waste time trying to bring the other guy down.

Remember, voters, you have the final say, even if it's a way off. We elected 'em, we can let 'em go.

Waiting for the man

How the cable guy is the most powerful person in the world

By WILLIAM R. DEVOE
devoew@spotlightnews.com

You may wait a few minutes at the doctor's office, a half-hour for a pizza to be delivered, or the better part of an hour waiting at the Department of Motor Vehicles, but only the cable guy can make you put a hold on your day for four hours at a time.

Recently my family and I moved 10 feet closer to the earth by taking the first-floor apartment in our building that is directly below our former apartment. When it came time to switch our cable/Internet/phone from upstairs to downstairs, I was told that the "installation technician" would be at our house one day later that week, anywhere from noon to 4 p.m.

"That's a pretty big window," I said. "Can you tell me if he'll be here closer to noon or closer to four?"

"It's hard to say," the disinterested female voice on the other end said. "It depends on how many people he does before you and how long they take."

"But..."

And I try to wrap my head around quantum physics, relativity and basic addition. "If you give everyone a four-hour window, and this guy starts at 8 in the morning, doesn't that mean that there should only be one person in front of me?"

The woman responded by asking me if I wanted to renew my subscription to HBO. I re-enacted my own version of the "Sopranos" finale and hung up on her abruptly.

The day finally comes, and I take my cable box, Internet router and phone into the new apartment at noon just like the nice woman from the cable company told me to. During the first hour I'm excited. Moving, even when it's only down a flight of stairs, is a stimulating process, and getting ourselves wired into this new apartment will give it more of a sense of home. I put on some music and start unpacking things, vowing that I won't keep checking the clock.

Point of View

At 1 o'clock my wife calls me on my cell phone. I have the farthest thing you can get from an iPhone that's technologically possible. It's carved out of wood, has only eight digits on the keypad and runs on quarters.

Actually, it's one of those pre-paid jobs, so I like to keep our conversations as short as possible because I am very cheap and can think of better things to spend money on than cell phone minutes.

"Did the guy come yet?" my wife asks.

"No."

My wife takes a long pause and I can feel my minutes escaping my phone, conversation-free. "Wow. It's been over an hour. He should have been there by now."

"Yes. Yes, he should have," I say quickly, as though to get some of those minutes back.

Another pregnant pause. I don't hear any breathing, any background noise, and as soon as I decide to hang up, thinking that my wife and I must have gotten disconnected.

"Do you think he'll be there soon?"

"OH MY GOD. I DON'T KNOW. HE HAS UNTIL 4 O'CLOCK. MY MINUTES, WOMAN, THINK ABOUT MY MINUTES!"

My wife takes a deep breath. "Calm down, Bill. If he doesn't show up soon you should use some of your precious minutes to call the cable company."

Around 2 o'clock I decide to get some work done. I pull out my laptop and try to pirate some stray WiFi signal.

Nothing.

No Internet. No e-mail. No contact with the working world. YES!

Or not. A few minutes later, craving some sort of contact with the outside world, but still unwilling to use my cell phone, I look out the window. There's not a single person on the street. No cars, no bikes, no staggering winos, just a wind-blown Chinese take-out carton. This is unnatural, I think. There should be someone outside.

Then my mind wanders to an amalgam of Twilight Zone and Outer Limits episodes, where the protagonist is the only person left on earth, or aliens have replaced everyone else.

A quick look again — no one. This is odd. No cable guy, no cars, no people.

Oh no, I think, I'm like Bruce Willis in "The Sixth Sense," only there's no weird-looking, androgynous, little kid telling me he can see dead people.

Am I dead? Is the cable guy dead? Are there aliens outside?

The phone rings. I pick up.

"Bill?" my wife asks.

"Can't... talk... aliens... MINUTES!" I begin hyperventilating and my wife hangs up.

Shortly after my nervous breakdown, I decide to call the cable company. In a coincidence that makes me think I am the only human left on Earth, I get the same disinterested female voice as I did a couple days ago.

"Is the cable guy coming or not? It's after 3 o'clock."

I hear her tap on a keyboard for a moment. "Sir, our installation technician has already been to your house — you weren't home."

I knew it. I am dead.

"No, no. I've been here all day. He hasn't been here."

"I'm afraid he was, sir. It says here that he also tried to call you, but there was no answer."

I say the following slowly, deliberately, the way I would explain something to my 4-year-old son: "There was no answer because he is coming to install the phone you told me to disconnect three hours ago."

The disinterested female voice taps another few keys. "Why didn't you give us your cell phone number?"

I then picture my wife giving her a high-five on the other end of the phone.

"Because I didn't want you people wasting my minutes," I mutter.

Town of Bethlehem takes care of seniors

Editor, The Spotlight:

During the recent severe storms, we lost power. On the morning of the second day, after being without electricity for 14 hours, we were visited by Officer James Rexford of the Bethlehem Police Department. Much to my surprise, Officer Rexford was checking on my 85-year-old father, who lives with my wife, Nancy, and me and is confined to a wheelchair.

My dad had been put on an emergency watch list through the Bethlehem Seniors Office as a notification to police and fire departments of his special needs, in the event of an evacuation. Even though there wasn't an evacuation, the Bethlehem Police Department took it one step further to ensure that citizens with special needs had the assistance they needed, if it was necessary.

We thanked Officer Rexford for his concern and told him we were coping well with the power outage and we were not in need of any special services, so he went on his way to the next disabled person on his list. As he was leaving, I thought to myself how lucky we were to live in such a great town. The police department is concerned and caring about its citizens and provides a superior level of protection few communities can boast about.

The services provided by Bethlehem's Seniors office make the caring of my dad much easier and provide a quality of life he might not otherwise enjoy. On behalf of my family, a big thank you to Officer Rexford, the Bethlehem Police Department and the Bethlehem Seniors Office for making this town such a great place to live.

Flowers are a welcome sight

Editor, The Spotlight:

On behalf of those of us who walk and drive around Delmar, I want to express how much we enjoy the beautiful hanging baskets along Delaware Avenue and at the Four Corners.

Early every morning the men go along and water all the plants so they continue to look fresh and welcoming for all to admire.

I also would like to call attention to the small flower gardens at some of the intersections around town. After a long winter, these flowerbeds are a cheerful reminder that warmer weather has arrived.

We thank all those responsible for providing and caring for these lovely additions to our town.

Board candidates thank neighbors

Editor, The Spotlight:

As candidates for town board, we accepted the task of meeting as many of our neighbors as possible to discuss the issues that are important to them.

During the past nine weeks, we have had the pleasure of speaking with approximately 1,800 of those neighbors. We would like to extend our sincere thanks to each of them for taking the time to explain their concerns to us.

Not surprisingly, the major issue is high taxes, followed by continued overdevelopment and the problems plaguing our infrastructure.

With a senior population of about 35 percent, and a large number of young families, the tax problem challenges their ability to continue to live in Bethlehem. We need to keep town spending in check, maintaining the excellent services we already have, and capping property tax increases at or below the inflationary rate.

We will continue to meet our neighbors across the town and are very interested in hearing all of their concerns. Relying on our professional experience, we look forward to working on ways to solve the problems and restore balance to our government.

Your Opinion in the Spotlight

Helping senior citizens helps us all

Editor, The Spotlight:

There is much talk about partnerships between government and other organizations these days, but not enough action. Why? Sometimes we don't see the true value of partnership, or how we can help, even when it is right in front of us.

Take the wonderful Bethlehem Senior Transportation Service vans and cars, a common sight all around Bethlehem. Half of them are purchased by our Bethlehem town government and half are purchased by another organization, the all-Bethlehem Senior Projects, Inc. This partnership brings out the best of government and volunteers focused on serving our seniors while helping the taxpayers, too.

As a board member of both Bethlehem Senior Projects, Inc., and the town of Bethlehem, I can tell you that for the past 19 years, Bethlehem Seniors Projects, Inc., has become important to our community in numerous ways. And to continue its fine work, Bethlehem Senior Projects, Inc., needs our financial support.

Formed in 1988 with an all-volunteer board, Bethlehem Senior Projects, Inc. funds a significant portion of the cars and vans providing transportation to town seniors.

Currently, four vans and four cars are out on the road five days a week, many evenings as well as weekends serving seniors.

Since its beginning, this all-volunteer nonprofit organization, with no paid staff, - let me repeat that, an all-volunteer nonprofit organization with no paid staff - has raised more than $300,000 from donations to purchase seven vans and two cars.

These funds, not tax payments, have enabled more than 60 volunteer drivers and assistants to devote 17,806 hours in 2006 alone to transport our seniors.

Thanks to independent fundraising, this same nonprofit organization teams up with support from the town of Bethlehem and dedicated volunteers, to provide more than 18,000 trips for seniors needing health care and other important appointments during the past year alone.

Want more? Bethlehem Senior Projects, Inc. truly gives much more than this:

- It underwrites the Bethlehem Food Pantry.

- It applies for grants and additional funding for town-wide senior programs offered throughout the year.

- It sponsors health fairs, health screening, panel discussions and workshops, wellness classes, and many other activities.

Without the work of this nonprofit, all-volunteer organization, Bethlehem Senior Projects, Inc., and the town of Bethlehem would face significantly increased costs, which would have a definite impact on taxpayers.

The work that Bethlehem Senior Projects, Inc. does is important not only for our seniors, but for our entire community. All of Bethlehem becomes enriched when we care enough to support and deliver programs to help our cherished senior residents live in and interact with their community. Bethlehem becomes a stronger community when senior citizens can maintain their self-respect, independence, and ability to remain vitally important members of our "Bethlehem Family."

So, how can we as community help? How can you help? Send a check of any amount to support the numerous projects and activities of Bethlehem

Senior Projects, Inc.: senior transportation, the food pantry, wellness classes, and health screenings ... the list is long. Another way to help is to consider becoming a volunteer.

Please remember that donations to Bethlehem Senior Projects, Inc., can also be part of your estate planning, and a wonderful way to continue good works and honor a loved one. To make a tax-deductible donation, please contact Bethlehem Senior Projects, Inc. at 439-4955, ext. 1168, or in writing at 445 Delaware Ave., Delmar 12054.

Thank you so much for your consideration.

What does your family look up to?

How do you keep spirit alive? Faith lifts us up and gives us hope. It anchors us in the world. Social action, youth group activities, the food pantry are just a few ways our members impact the community.

Our faith teaches us never to look down at the world, rather always look up.

See how our faith touches everything we do.

Bethlehem Cares seeks walkers

"Bethlehem Cares," a townwide team that will participate in the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation's Walk to Cure Diabetes, is looking for individual and school, church, fraternal, youth and scout groups to join it. All proceeds from the walk, Sunday, Sept. 16, at Corporate Woods, Albany, will benefit diabetes research.

The first 150 people who register as members of "Bethlehem Cares" and turn in at least $25 for diabetes research will receive free team T-shirts.

Free food and entertainment will be provided for all participants on the day of the walk.

If you wish to join the team, call 439-6894 or pre-register at www.jdrf.org or by using walk brochures found in many Bethlehem area businesses. If you are unable to participate but would like to make a donation, mail your check, made payable to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation, to "Bethlehem Cares" at 65 Boylston Drive, Delmar 12054.

Readers collect their rewards at the RCS Library

We happily announce the winners in the first two weeks of our reading program.

Week 1's winner is Margaret Scarlatta.

Week 2's winners are Anna Marie Bonafide and Jodi Civill.

You too can win. Fill in a coupon every time you finish three books, and drop it in the Rewarding Readers box at the library's circulation desk. We will draw two names for prizes each week. It's that simple.

Take a Museum Trip

Through our new Summer Destinations Program, we offer family passes to area museums. Each day pass admits two adults and two children. Adult cardholders can sign a pass out for one week. Participating museums are Historic Cherry Hill, Clark Art Institute, Fort Ticonderoga, Iroquois Indian Museum, Schenectady Museum and the Tang Museum at Skidmore College.

Children's summer programs continue

Summer activities continue until Thursday, Aug. 16.

Children who would like to read for trading beads and small prizes can sign up as independent readers. Silent reading, listening to read-aloud, and listening to audio books all count. We offer summer reading activities for families at the library on Wednesdays at 6:30 p.m.

Regular programs

No pre-registration is required for these scheduled programs:

- Romp & Read meets three times weekly:

At Selkirk Fire House in Selkirk hamlet on Tuesdays at 10 a.m.;

At the library on Thursday evenings at 6:30; and at the library on Friday mornings at 10.

This is a good group activity for the young and restless, because it is full of action rhymes and lively activities. The children's ages range from 6 months to 6 years old this summer. Each story time ends with free playtime and visiting among parents and caregivers.

- Positively Preschool, which features crafts, provides easy hands-on projects that fit the weekly story themes. It is on Thursdays at 11 a.m.

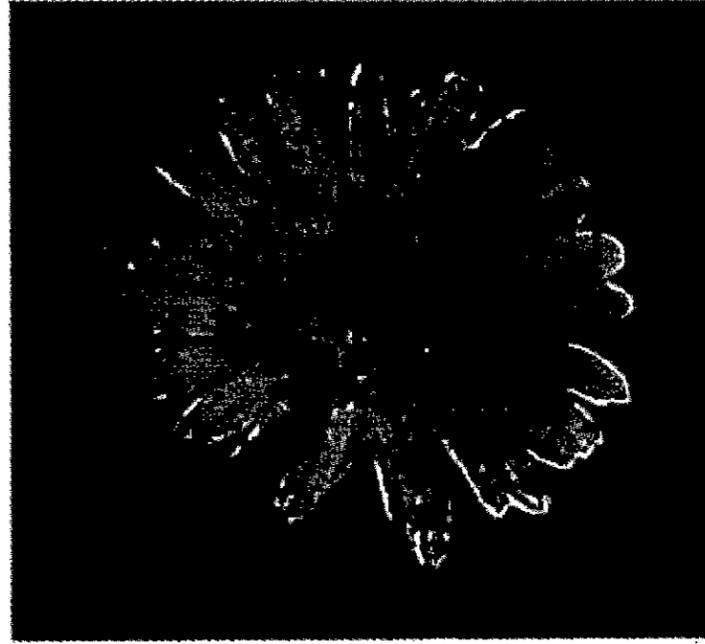

- The Chess Club for school-age kids meets on Wednesday afternoons at 4 p.m. This summer, the group includes beginners and intermediate players age 5 through age 14.

The bluesmaster is back for a summer concert

Our favorite grand master of the blues, Ernie Williams, will be performing at the library on Wednesday, Aug. 8, with his crew. There is no one else who can entertain with the charm of this talented musician. Ernie has been playing guitar since he was a boy on a Virginia plantation in the 1930s. His showmanship has grown in proportion to his long and colorful life. He has made his mark in blues venues all over the U.S. and has been an acclaimed fixture of Capital District music life. He received national attention on a television spot for Canon Blues copiers and was featured in 2003 on an NPR television series. The years just seem to roll off him and his annual birthday bash is a highlight of the downtown music scene.

Don't miss this; bring friends. Bring your chair or blanket for the 7 p.m. concert. Some lawn chairs are available for those who cannot transport their own. Call the reference desk to reserve one. There is extra handicapped parking on the side of the building. The Library Friends will be selling iced tea and snacks. The concert will end when the mosquitoes start biting. In case of rain, we will be in the community room.

Summer programs

• Monday, Aug. 6 at 2 p.m., for kindergarten to second grade students. Detective stories performed by the Readers Theatre Players.

• Tuesday, Aug. 7 10:15 a.m. : Preschool Storytime;

1 p.m. - Junior Nimbefingers (grade three and older) meet with the ladies group to learn sewing basics.

• Wednesday, Aug. 8 at 2 p.m.

For third and fourth grade students, the Albany Police K-9 and Mounted Horse Division will be visiting.

• Thursday, Aug. 9 at 2 p.m.

For fifth grade and older, bring your journals to illustrate your writings with stamps.

This is the final week for 2007 Summer Reading Program regular meetings and summer storytimes. The SRP grand finale will be a joint evening program on Wednesday, Aug. 29.

Regular groups

Lapsit for Babies will be held on Thursday, Aug. 2 at 10:15 a.m.

The Every Other Thursday Night Poets continue through the summer. Next meeting is Thursday, Aug. 9. Read our blog.

Business in the Spotlight

Never promise more than you can deliver

OK, so I lied. Well, it wasn't exactly a lie, more of a distortion of the truth. In my last column, on July 25, I said I would be on vacation and not returning to the pages of the paper until August 15. Well, in my haste to get the column out the door, I read the calendar incorrectly. As you can plainly see, the printed word does not lie! Here I am.

Vacation, alas, does not begin for another week. That leads me to the primrose path that follows in all facets of life. Never promise more than you can deliver. If you over-promise, and are unable to make good on the promises, you lose credibility very quickly. Your own credibility is all that you have in life, specifically in business. People come to rely on you as a person and that reliability generates trust, and in turn, business. While it is often said, in sales you are only as good as your last sale, I think you are always only as good as your word.

I am much happier saying this column was not going to appear and then surprising the readers with an article that have you wait with bated breathe (well, ok, perhaps bated breathe overstates the case, but you get the idea) for a column that never appears.

That leads to another stream of consciousness thought this morning as I put this unexpected column to bed. Be passionate about what you do. Face your job as a challenge to be met and conquered, not an obligation to be dealt with. Attend to the days in the office with enthusiasm and not only will the days pass quickly, the rewards will be much greater.

An e-mail I received the other day resonated with me. The word enthusiasm: "en" means inside or within, "iasm" makes a word into a noun and "thus" from the Greek word "theos" meaning God which also gave us monotheism and theocracy. Ergo, one way to interpret "enthusiasm" is "the spirit of God within." So, when we show enthusiasm, we are showing the proper appreciation for the wonderful world we live in. Well, just some more food for thought.

Around the market, in the midst of the dog days of summer, things are relatively quiet. People are off vacationing, taking advantage of the beautiful weather and staying fairly calm on the work front. Weichert

And that just about clears my desk for the next few weeks. This time I will be getting up for that obviously much-needed vacation. In the meanwhile, if you have anything you'd like to see in the column, feel free to e-mail me at kellerw@spotlightnews.com. We can't guarantee they will all get in, but we'll give it our best shot.

Housing park offers a new senior alternative

Editor's Note: The following story should have appeared in Spotlight Newspapers' Summer Update.

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY
mccarthyk@spotlightnews.com

If you're feeling like you no longer need the big house you raised your family in, Pine Ridge Estates has an answer.

Located on Route 9W in southern Albany County between Selkirk and Ravena, the longtime housing park became a seniors-only community about a year ago.

"The units are single-wides of about 1,000 square feet and double-wides that are 2,000 square feet," said Bonnie Cerasaro, the manager of Pine Ridge Estates, which is owned by Lois Realty. "They're on lots that are a minimum of 5,000 square feet." Each home is custom-made, which determines the price. So far, the highest-priced unit is $150,000.

Cerasaro said the decision to go seniors-only — age 55 and older — has been a great one.

"The place is immaculate," she said. The company does maintenance of the common areas. There's space for 93 units; currently, seven lots are available.

A recently opened clubhouse provides a gathering place for residents to use on their own, or to join in on the planned events.

"There's a pool table, poker table, chairs and a library," Cerasaro said.

Some of the monthly functions have been pot-luck dinners, '50s-'60s rock 'n' roll nights, a hay ride and holiday meals.

Cerasaro said some of the women have used the clubhouse for scrapbooking and some of the men play cards there regularly.

"People can reserve the clubhouse, and they're welcome to bring guests," she said.

Cerasaro said Pine Ridge Estates provides a great way of life for its residents.

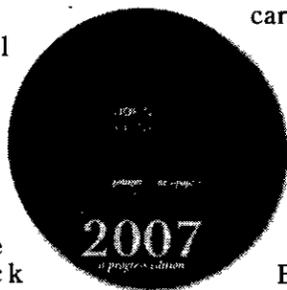

"It's an easy, carefree lifestyle," she said. "It's a safe community, and neighbors become friends. You're allowed to keep a small pet. If you're a snowbird, you can go back and forth and your home is safe."

Pine Ridge Estates can also be a smart financial decision," Cerasaro said.

The roundabout construction includes 400 linear feet of a four-lane boulevard road, 2,900 feet of a two-lane boulevard road and 5,500 linear feet of sidewalk. New water mains, valves, hydrants and their connections to existing town water mains in Vista Park are expected to cost around $1.1 million. A water and sewer district will also be formed.

"This is a large-scale public improvement and the borrower is responsible for everything," said George Leveille, town economic development director.

Vista developers will pay for public improvements to the tech park, and the town will take over the maintenance and upkeep of all improvements once they are made.

"The town is a conduit to help with public improvements," said Leveille. "These improvements have to be made."

The Vista Technology Campus LLC investment group is overseeing development. Attorney Bill Dixon, representing Whiteman, Osterman, and Hannah, offered the public a few details about the need for the creation of the special assessment district.

"The charges would go against any of the properties which benefit," said Dixon.

A bond anticipation note is expected to be approved at some point by either the town board or the town Industrial Development Agency, with payment of the capital improvements the burden of Vista Developers.

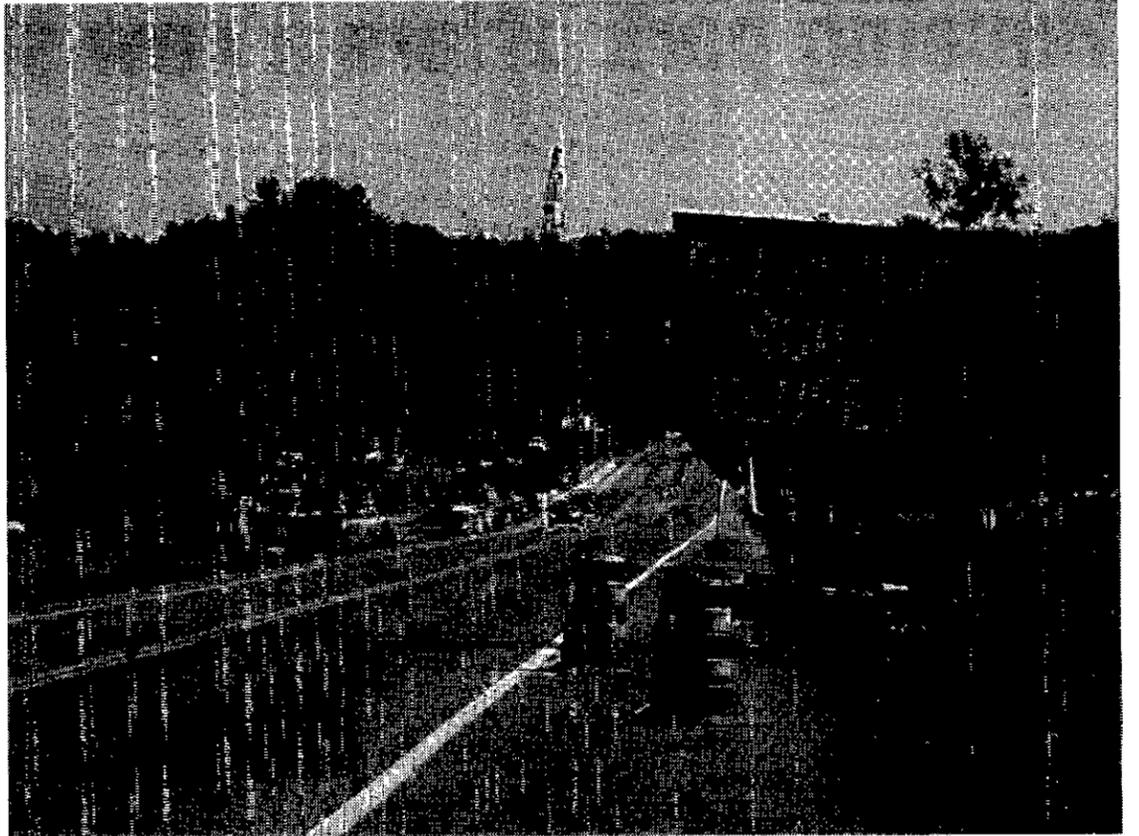

"The town will have no risk of any bonds," said Dixon.

Leveille said a potential funding mechanism will be created, bonds will be issued for improvements to the Vista site and the payment of the improvements will be made through a special assessment tax.

"At no point during any borrowing would town taxpayers face any risk," Dixon said.

Special assessment districts are a common form of financing public improvement projects within a municipality.

The assessment district includes property that will receive a direct benefit from the construction of new public improvements or from the maintenance of existing public improvements. The local agency that forms the assessment district may sell bonds to raise the money to build or acquire the public improvement. The agency could then levy a special assessment against each parcel of land within the district, in proportion to its share of benefit from the improvement. The owners of the assessed land would most likely repay the bonds over a period of several years through annual assessments.

Blessing Road in Slingerlands will be closed for eight weeks due to the construction of a roundabout by the state Department of Transportation. A total of five roundabouts are currently under construction from the Albany city line to Slingerlands as part of several ongoing summer and fall construction projects in the area.

Roads

A signed detour route is now in place to help motorists follow Krumkill Road to access Western Avenue.

"We are trying to improve traffic flow and to make it safer for travelers now waiting 35 to 40 seconds for the traffic light," said Van Keuren.

Once the Blessing Road roundabout is complete, the traffic light will be taken away. The only Route 85 traffic light that will exist when all roundabout projects are complete in Bethlehem will be the light at the T-intersection of Route 85 and New Scotland Road in Slingerlands just before the Slingerlands Price Chopper.

The town of Bethlehem, DOT and Albany County are coordinating their summer and fall roadwork projects to make driving easier for motorists.

The total cost of the Slingerlands Bypass project, including reconstruction of 1.5 miles of 85 extension of Cherry Avenue and Blessing Road, is $15.2 million.

The Albany County Department of Public Works has two major road projects of its own in Bethlehem this summer, including the $5.7 million County Route 204 project, which will affect motorists traveling along Schoolhouse, Krumkill and Russell roads in the towns of Guilderland and Bethlehem from the state Thruway to the Albany city line.

"The project includes full-depth reconstruction on most of Schoolhouse Road and a roundabout at the intersection of Schoolhouse and Krumkill roads," said Michael Franchini, Albany County Department of Public Works commissioner.

Sidewalks will also be installed along one side of the 2.2-mile stretch of road. The now 10-week old project will be complete in November, allowing time for the state

DOT to continue its Route 85 Slingerlands Bypass work next year.

"Our goal is to get our section done and be out of their way when the state works on their realignment next year," said Franchini.

A second county project affecting Bethlehem motorists this summer will be the County Route 102 project along Old Quarry Road and Star Road in the towns of Bethlehem and Coeymans.

"It's a very long road that runs along state Route 32 all the way to state Route 143," said Franchini.

Residents of Bethlehem and surrounding communities are welcome to attend a public meeting Thursday, Aug. 2, at 7 p.m. in town hall regarding the Route 85 Slingerlands Bypass construction project. DOT staff will be available to provide the community an opportunity to hear about what is to be constructed and what changes will affect travel patterns during the balance of the construction period.

One town powered up when power went down

By J. JUDE HAZARD
hazardj@spotlightnews.com

When the mercury rises and the lights go off, Bethlehem town hall springs into action.

Much of Bethlehem lost power due to severe storms on Monday, July 9, at about 6 p.m., and many residents didn't regain power until late Tuesday evening.

Consequently, town hall was designated a cooling station on Tuesday morning. Residents were invited to come and bring lunch, watch television, take a nap on the cots in the auditorium, or just take a break from the extreme heat. Some utilized the power to charge their cell phones.

Bethlehem Supervisor Jack Cunningham said that town hall runs on a diesel-powered generator that can last as long as the town continues to fuel it, and that the permanent generator is checked every Tuesday.

"I think that the residents of the town look to the town government to be available and proactive," he said. "In Bethlehem, we're really fortunate to have built an infrastructure that can respond effectively."

Karen Pelletier, the director of senior citizens services in town, said that the town has various lists of seniors it calls during power outages and heat waves to make sure the residents are safe.

or population when making this decision. What it boils down to, he said, is that National Grid proactively performs an outage so that greater damage doesn't occur and leave more people without power for a longer period of time.

However, area officials are saying that it's not the practice of controlled outages that has them upset, but the lack of communication regarding them.

The city of Troy, which was hit hardest by controlled outages, has filed complaints with the state Public Service Commission, asking for an investigation into the July 10 power outage.

Troy Mayor Harry Tutunjian said the outage came without warning and that there was no communication about the situation for nearly five hours.

"We would have liked to have known something was happening, so we could do some planning," Tutunjian said.

Rensselaer County lawmakers voted to request a state investigation that same week and said the PSC should force the power company to notify officials about controlled outages before they occur.

Bianchetti said there isn't time to make these notifications.

"It is done, really, on a moment's notice," he said. "The system sees stress right away, and the longer we delay in making the decision to do a controlled outage in an area, the greater the potential is for

A National Grid crew surveys the damage in front of Reigning Cats and Dogs on Route 9W in Glenmont following a severe thunderstorm Monday, Aug. 9.

Due to the extreme heat, Pelletier said between 200 and 300 seniors were called on Monday even before the power went out. After the outage, more calls were made to at-risk seniors.

"We can't tell residents what to do, but we try to provide them with some helpful options in a situation like this," she said.

Additionally, about 75 Bethlehem residents are on a list maintained by the Albany County Sheriff. These residents, who can voluntarily be placed on the list, are called any time there is a power outage. If police don't get an answer, they drive to the damage to our own infrastructure and customer damage."

PSC Spokeswoman Ann Dalton said an investigation was forthcoming, regardless of the Rensselaer County Legislature's action. "The basis for it was the number of customers," she said. "Any time the service is interrupted we investigate. We track every outage in the state."

The PSC will examine National Grid's restoration procedures and priorities, the sequence of restoration, and how and when the company announced an outage was pending, she said. National Grid said it was not possible to say if it would reimburse municipal losses associated with the outage, including $15,000 the city of Troy reportedly spent on police overtime during the blackout.

Residential users will not receive credits, Stella said, but National Grid has sent a letter out to 21,000 customers with their current bill apologizing for the outage and explaining the reason for the controlled outage. In the letter, the vice president of business services says the utility was trying to make repairs from a severe storm on July 9 and the extra demand caused by hot temperatures could have caused even more outages. Stella said National Grid's policy calls for reimbursement only in cases where an outage is due to accident and not a controlled outage. He could not say, however, if customers would be reimbursed for the outage, saying claims are considered on a case-by-case basis.

"We do not reimburse for damages to household equipment or personal property caused by storms or other acts of nature," Stella said, but the company has a process in place to review claims.

Hours after the power was out in Saratoga County, National Grid told Saratoga Springs police at 8:30 p.m. that they hadn't even identified the cause of the outage. Saratoga Springs Public Safety Commissioner Ron Kim said he thinks communication between the utility and municipalities will get better.

"We hope and believe that the communication with National Grid will continue to improve. We've made our concerns known to them that there are important steps that we need to take if, in fact, there is a controlled outage," he said.

Kim cuts the utility a little slack.

"I know that they're a convenient whipping boy for a lot of people if something does happen, but I've always felt that they have a desire to do the right thing, and I believe that going forward, that will happen," he said.

There were a number of emergency services calls in the area due to the outage.

In Greenfield, an elderly woman had to call for an ambulance after the respirator on which she depends to breathe failed because of the power outage. A similar occurrence happened to a 90-year-old man living on Ballston Avenue in Saratoga Springs.

Bianchetti said he realizes that explaining the process for controlled outages is small consolation to those who are affected by them; but added, "There is nothing to say that those people wouldn't have been without power had we not done the controlled outage."

watched television. Afterward, the pair went to dinner and returned home once their power had been restored.

"They came over, they were thrilled to have some lemonade and water and some cookies and just be where it wasn't stifling hot," said Jane Sanders, a social worker with the town's senior citizens service.

One person was transported to the hospital after being overcome by the heat. Another man, who was using a payphone in town hall to make some business calls, was allowed to come into town offices and use the phones there to finish his work.

"It's our role to look out for the welfare of the people that live in town. The system works," Sanders said. "Often times, people depend on their neighbors, but if their neighbors are in the same situation, who else would they look to?"

Cunningham said he drove around town on Monday night to make sure none of the many downed trees in town, including some on Delaware Avenue near town hall, had severely damaged any homes.

"As large as Bethlehem gets, we still operate in many aspects as a small community," Cunningham said. "I think that's advantageous to the people here, and I think it's one of the reasons that it's the best place to live."

residents' homes to make sure everyone there is safe.

One older couple who live in a mobile home told Pelletier that they were "baking" in the stifling heat without power, so they came to town hall to cool off. The husband was able to take a nap while the wife

Summer season continues with workshops, parties

The library's August offerings for kids include a couple of ongoing craft workshops. Beginning this Friday, young people in grade 4 and up can help "Pass On the Memories." You'll create a family keepsake in a four-part workshop that meets on Fridays from 10 to 11:30 a.m., from Aug. 3 to 24. Bring two or three photos of yourself to the first session. You may have to trim the photos to fit your project's design, so keep that in mind when you choose the pictures. Attendance at all four sessions is required; call 439-9314 to register. Kids 9 years old and up can participate in "Creative Stitches" next Monday to Thursday, Aug. 6 to 9 from 9:30 a.m. to noon. Members of the local chapter of the Embroiderers Guild of America will work one-on-one with you on a basic stitchery project. Attendance at all sessions is required; call 439-9314 to register.

Parties wrap up summer reading

Our summer reading program, "Get a Clue @ Your Library," has been a great success. To celebrate, participants in grade kindergarten to eight are invited to our "Case Closed" party on Thursday, Aug. 9 at 7 p.m. The High Peaks Juggling Show will provide interactive comedy juggling and vaudeville theatrics. This year, preschoolers also participated in summer reading activities. They'll celebrate on Wednesday, Aug. 15, at 10:30 a.m. at a character costume party for ages 3 to 5 with adult called "Who Am I?" Come in costume as your favorite storybook character or superhero. A costume parade, crafts, music, movies and snacks close out your story-filled summer. As a special thank you to our wonderful teen volunteers, we're holding a party on Friday, Aug. 10 at 1 p.m., complete with Dance Dance Revolution, Guitar Hero, karaoke, prizes, food ... and a Wii bit more. Registration is required for all these parties; call 439-9314.

Summer bus trip to NYC

Last call for reservations for the Friends of the Library bus trip to New York City on Saturday, Aug. 18. Reservation deadline is Friday, Aug. 10. The cost is $35 for members and $40 for nonmembers. Advanced care plan is important

The United States population is rapidly aging. According to the Centers for Disease Control (CDC), by 2030, the number of Americans aged 65 and older will more than double to 71 million older Americans, comprising roughly 20 percent of the U.S. population.

Many chronic diseases unfortunately can eventually exhaust all reasonable medical approaches and the patient and family must then navigate this final but important stage of life. Heart failure is one of those chronic diseases, which can lead to the need for end-of-life discussions including an advance care plan. The Heart Failure Society of America (HFSA) has put together information on advance care planning to provide not only grace and dignity for the patient, but to help ease the burden of the family.

A good place to start is with an understanding of what such a plan entails. It is basically a written document that helps you ensure that your health care is customized to reflect your personal preferences and health needs, as well as meet your social, cultural and religious requirements. Important things to consider include:

- Whether you want to be resuscitated if your heart stops beating;
- If you want to be placed on a ventilator if you can't breathe on your own; and
- How you want pain relieved if it develops.

"Discussing end-of-life issues is not exactly something any of us wants to bring up, but telling people what you want before you become incapacitated ensures that your wishes will be carried out, and protects your family from having to deal with the burden of second guessing whether or not you'd agree with their decisions," says Barry H. Greenberg, MD, president, Heart Failure Society of America (HFSA), a nonprofit organization of health care professionals and researchers who are dedicated to enhancing the quality and duration of life for patients with heart failure and preventing the condition for those at risk.

The HFSA has put together a booklet (Advance Care Planning) focusing on end-of-life issues. This information, which targets heart failure patients, can also be applied to other chronic medical conditions. The booklet explains, in easy-to-read-and-understand detail, the various components of an advance care plan, and how to put one together.

An advance care plan is basically a written document that helps you ensure that your health care is customized to reflect your personal preferences and health needs.

These include:

- An advance care directive – This document will provide clear evidence of your wishes regarding treatment and can include a living will, a durable health care power of attorney and a statement about organ donation.

- A do-not-resuscitate order – This directive made by you or your family in consultation with the doctor, tells doctors, nurses and other rescue personnel what they should or should not do when a person stops breathing or when their heart beats so irregularly as to threaten life or stops beating entirely. A do-not-resuscitate order can include instructions on whether to use different types of methods to revive a person.

- A living will – This legal document lets people unable to participate in decisions about their medical care to express their wishes about life-sustaining treatment. A living will is usually used during a terminal illness when a person is unable to communicate; it lets you set limits on what is done to you regarding the use of medical treatments such as CPR, blood transfusions, mechanical breathing, surgery, antibiotics, kidney dialysis and invasive measures to provide nutrition and fluids.

- A health care power of attorney – This allows someone you designate to make all health care decisions for you, including the decision to refuse life-sustaining treatment if you are unable to make the decision for yourself. You can give someone a general power of attorney or you can limit their decision-making to certain issues by including instructions about your care. For example, you can specify preferences regarding particular treatments such as tube feeding, intravenous fluids and organ donation if you have not covered those subjects in a living will.

- A financial plan – You and your family may have concerns about paying for medicines, doctor and hospital bills and other types of health care. A financial plan can help you deal with these issues and also provide for your family.

Once you've pulled these materials together, you may wish to consult a lawyer to help you ensure that the plan meets your individual wishes and state legal requirements. And be sure that your family knows and understands your wishes for care.

Discussing these issues now will make implementing them easier when that becomes necessary. To order a copy of the brochure, or access any of the other educational materials put together by the Heart Failure Society of America, log on to AboutHF.org.

Get hip to bone health

It's that time of year again ... time to warm up with the weather and make good on promises to take better care of ourselves. Yet, we often end up asking ourselves the same age-old question: where to begin? One of the easiest first steps to improving and preserving wellness starts with the very skeleton of our being, our bones.

Building bone mass is just as important as maintaining bone mass and density, especially since the threat of osteoporosis is no longer limited to age. Osteoporosis is almost always a completely preventable disease; however, few of us know enough

Telehealth helps patients recover at home

Every day at 8 a.m., the Rev. Robert Graves sits down in his kitchen and a pleasant female voice greets him with, "Good morning. It is time to take your vital signs." However, his nurse is several miles away.

The 70-year-old Baptist pastor, who had triple heart bypass surgery in March, is one of 24 St. Peter's Home Care patients using the telehealth monitoring system.

The telehealth monitoring system expands and improves the care offered at home, thanks to a $150,000 grant from the state Department of Health.

After the prompt, the Rev. Graves steps on a scale for his weight. He slips on a blood pressure cuff over his right bicep and waits for the machine to inflate it. Then he puts a small cup similar to a thimble on his middle finger to read blood oxygen saturation. He records the readings in a log that he keeps. Then he pushes a button on the monitor, and his readings are sent to the offices of St. Peter's Home Care.

Lora Webster, RN, who manages the project, checks her computer screen at the Home Care offices on Wolf Road in Colonie. The readings from the patients are compiled in a list. If any patients have exceeded their pre-set limits for the conditions, they are flagged in red on the screen. By clicking on any name, Webster gets more information about that patient and can alert the patient's nurse to follow up promptly.

"It gives us valuable information on a daily basis, instead of once a week," Webster said. "For the patient, it's a self-management tool for people to learn how to take care of themselves."

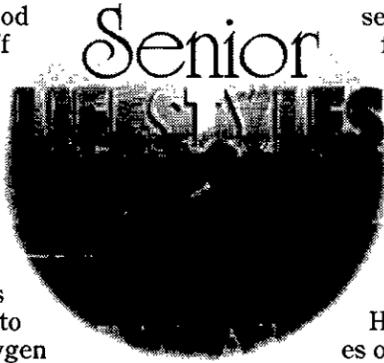

All patients receive regular weekly visits from a Home Care nurse. Additional visits can be made if medically necessary.

St. Peter's began the telehealth project in 2006. A particular focus is to see how the program helps patients with congestive heart failure (CHF) and chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD).

The system uses Honeywell HomMed monitors. The project aims to improve patient care and lower overall health costs by reducing the need to take Home Care patients to the hospital for emergencies.

For information, contact St. Peter's Home Care at 525-6037.

Summer travel tips for seniors

If you were to venture a guess, what would you say is the No. 1 pastime of today's retirees? It's not golf, gardening or completing crossword puzzles, but doing something they didn't have the time to do when they were working: travel.

The idea of visiting new places and seeing things they've never seen before - on their own schedule - is a huge draw for the 60 plus crowd. Whether you're planning a trip across the country, to one of our national parks, or on some other adventure anytime soon, here are some tips that will help ensure you have a great time:

- Consider booking your trip through a travel agent who can offer deals that lump airfare, hotel and sightseeing adventures into a low-cost package.

- Pay for all travel expenses with a major credit card whenever possible. That way, if you encounter any kind of problem during your trip or need to dispute a charge that shows up on your bill, you'll have the card company to back you.

- If you plan to use public transportation when you get to your destination, always be aware of your surroundings. Pavement may be slippery or uneven when you enter or leave a vehicle. The last thing you want to do is slip and fall. If you'll be taking a bus, have your fare ready to avoid losing your balance while looking for correct change. If traveling by subway, stand slightly to one side to let people exiting the car get off first you so won't get knocked down by the crowd.

- Now that summer is here, the sun is shining strongly. Be sure to wear sunscreen if you'll be spending a lot of time outside to protect yourself from cancer-causing UV rays, and stay hydrated. This is easy to do if you always carry a water bottle around with you wherever you go.

- If you'll be booking the hotel on your own, be sure to ask the concierges if they can accommodate any special needs you may have, like an elevator, refrigerator in your room for medication, etc. You'll also want to make sure the room is a place where you're guaranteed to get a good night's sleep. Some hotels make this a priority.

For example, the AmericInn hotel chain features AmericInn SoundGuard construction, a unique system that reduces sound so guests enjoy a quiet night's rest and are refreshed and recharged for the next day's adventures. Log on to www.americinn.com/ara to make a reservation.

Eating to healthy improvement

Almost 100 percent of baby boomers think about healthy eating habits, but only 20 percent feel they are very informed about what is healthy for them, according to the results of a survey from BoomerTowne.com. With so much information and research available about what is healthy today, it is hard to keep track of the latest health trends and ways to eat healthy.

Culinary expert, Sara Moulton has partnered with BoomerTowne.com, an informational Web site for baby boomers, to advise boomers about straightforward ways they can eat healthy.

Moulton suggests sticking to "super foods" to keep things simple. Super foods are simply foods that provide more nutritional value than others, and can vary based on a person's dietary needs. When shopping for groceries, keeping a few simple tips in mind will lead to healthier purchases.

"The most basic health fact one can remember about any food is, the darker or richer the color, the better it is for you," states Moulton. "In addition, less processed foods are always better than those that are highly processed."

Below is a list of some foods Moulton has on her "super foods" list.

Walnuts

Despite what has been said in the past, fat can be good! Omega-3 fatty acids, prevalent in walnuts, reduce the risk of heart disease and reduce hypertension. All nuts provide benefits to the body and can be used in place of walnuts if desired. A simple way to incorporate nuts into your diet is to toast them at 350 degrees for ten minutes and enjoy them alone or add them to baked goods or yogurt.

Blueberries

Besides their wonderful taste, blueberries provide excellent benefits for the brain. One cup a day, fresh or frozen, can lessen the effects of both Alzheimer's disease and damage from a stroke. This fruit, rich in antioxidants, is easy to eat as a snack or as part of a healthy breakfast.

Tomatoes

Although fresh tomatoes supply many benefits, it is actually cooked tomatoes that provide our bodies with the most of the cancer-fighting antioxidant, lycopene. Canned tomatoes, ketchup, tomato paste and tomato sauce are all good sources of lycopene.

Wild salmon

A delicious source of omega-3 fatty acids, wild salmon helps reduce blood pressure, lower cholesterol and prevent heart disease. Canned salmon is almost always wild and is a good alternative when fresh wild salmon is not in season. Salmon salads and cakes can be easily made from canned salmon and still provide all the benefits.

Cabbage

Cabbage is full of sulphoraphane glucosinolate, an antioxidant that helps prevent cancer, more specifically breast cancer. Cabbage can be bought already shredded at the grocery store and easily used to create a healthy coleslaw or Asian sauté.

Beans

Beans, both canned and dried, are an excellent low-fat source of protein, antioxidants and fiber. Adding beans to your diet can reduce cholesterol and can slow the sugar level in diabetics, preventing the level from spiking too quickly after meals.

Yogurt

Yogurt is a better source of protein and calcium than milk. Make sure that the yogurt contains live and active cultures, including probiotics that help boost the immune system in defending against disease and illness. An easy way to include yogurt in your diet is to use it as a base for dip with dill and garlic or in a smoothie with your favorite fruit.

Whole grains

Carbohydrates are very important to our diet, especially whole grains. They provide phytonutrients that help reduce the risk of heart disease, stroke and type 2 diabetes.

Dark chocolate

Rich in antioxidants, dark chocolate lowers bad cholesterol, raises good cholesterol and is thought to have a positive mood altering effect. Remember, a little goes a long way with dark chocolate so eat this sweet treat in moderation.

Heavy wheelchairs, walkers hinder caregivers

As baby boomers continue to gray and medical science extends life, many 50- and 60-somethings are caring for their parents at a time when the boomers themselves are slowing down from age-related ailments. Mobility issues become even more challenging when caregivers find it difficult to meet the physical demands of their roles.

The heft of many modern assistive devices is a good example of the kind of obstacles facing both seniors and their caregivers, experts say.

"The average wheelchair weighs around 38 pounds," notes Richard Derks of Medline, a leading manufacturer of wheelchairs and other assistive devices for seniors. "Putting most wheelchairs in a car trunk means you have to lift that 38 pounds from the ground and up about 3 feet an average of four times per trip."

Walkers can create a similar problem for seniors who are ambulatory with the aid of the assistive device. Most walkers weigh 16 pounds or more. "That may seem light, but for seniors with mobility issues lifting that much weight into a car can be a real challenge," Derks says.

Caregivers looking after an aging parent at home may be reluctant to take seniors out on non-essential trips because of this weight issue. Yet, that type of trip - to a restaurant, salon, visiting friends, - greatly enhances the quality of life for an otherwise home-bound senior.

"The sheer difficulty of man-

Manufacturers are creating lighter weight walkers and wheelchairs that are easier for seniors and their caregivers to manage.

aging a wheelchair often means caregivers run all the errands alone and don't take their loved ones out as much as they might like to," Derks says. "There is a physical and cognitive impact for the elderly."

Physically, mobility issues slow rehabilitation after a health setback. The more homebound seniors are, the less exercise they get. Cognitively, the senior may begin to feel increasingly dependent, falling into a more dependent role than they might want.

The good news is manufacturers of assistive devices are addressing this problem by producing lighter weight wheelchairs and other accessories. Aluminum transport chairs cut the weight down to about 23 pounds. And Medline's Freedom Transport chair weighs less than 15 pounds, a full 25 percent lighter than other transport chairs and 60 percent lighter than a standard wheelchair. Its convenient features - cup holder and seatbelt for the user, bottle holder for the caregiver, and key ring, cell phone pocket and identification holder - all speak to the designers' efforts to create a wheelchair that is practical and functional for both the caregiver and patient.

about the risk factors to begin protecting ourselves and our loved ones.

The widespread lack of knowledge about bone health is evident from a survey conducted by Opinion Research Corporation in 2006, for GTC Nutrition. This survey found that most Americans underestimate the percentage of young women who are not getting enough calcium during the peak bone-building years. Studies show 90 percent of girls ages 12 to 19 are not getting enough calcium, and more than two-thirds of all respondents to the survey weren't aware of the extent of this shortfall, including 66 percent of the respondents with children in their households.

Additionally, more than half (55 percent) of the 1,031 survey respondents were unaware that the body absorbs only about 30 percent of the calcium consumed through diet. With osteoporosis on the rise and more than 40 million Americans estimated to suffer from low bone mass by 2010, according to the National Osteoporosis Foundation, now is the time for the whole family to get hip to bone health.

Although these survey findings are concerning, they underscore the opportunity we have to increase our overall health and well-being by learning more about bone health and the factors that influence it, including calcium absorption. Building strong and healthy bones requires not only consuming a diet rich in calcium but also taking steps to ensure that sufficient calcium is absorbed.

In recent years, food companies have responded by offering "better for you" calcium-enriched food, beverage and supplement alternatives, which may also be enhanced with the novel, all-natural ingredient NutraFlora prebiotic fiber. As a prebiotic, NutraFlora is rapidly gaining awareness for its abilities to significantly improve calcium absorption.

Taking action to improve your bones through dietary habits is an important first step on the path to building and maintaining strong bones.

Just as crucial to taking in and absorbing adequate amounts of calcium is the need to exercise regularly. There is no better time of year than the present to get outdoors and build your bones. Whether you decide to increase your bone health by pounding the pavement or lifting weights, your body will thank you for years to come. To learn more about the risks associated with osteoporosis or the benefits of prebiotic fiber, visit www.nutraflora.com.

Thinking ahead can ease the burden for loved ones

It's a difficult subject to bring up. No one likes to think about the time when they'll no longer be here. But truth be told, everyone will need a funeral some day. Without planning ahead, they can be stressful, expensive and filled with disagreements. Or you can create an occasion where loved ones come together to reflect on a life well lived, without the pressure of quick decisions and worries about expense.

How can you accomplish this? Through preplanning, which allows you not only the opportunity to create the type of memorial and burial that fits your beliefs and preferences, but to also put your family first by taking away the anxiety caused by guessing what you might have wanted. Planning a life celebration is a priceless gift of security, compassion and care for those we love.

Under a cloud of sorrow and time constraints, family members are often overwhelmed and uncertain of the decisions that need to be made: Did Dad want a traditional funeral or did he want to be cremated and have his ashes scattered at the lake? What music would Mom want played? Who will preside at the service? Making the dozens of decisions that arise when someone passes away can be nerve-racking.

Another point to consider is that family members often have differing ideas and opinions that can escalate during such an emotional and exhausting time. And in today's world of blended families, preplanning can save children, step-children and extended family from disagreements about which cemetery, who will read a eulogy and who pays for what.

Many funeral directors agree, that while no one likes to contemplate death, making final arrangements in advance is like a gift to loved ones. It's also one of the best ways to ensure that things are taken care of in the manner that you wish.

Many funeral directors agree that making final arrangements in advance is like a gift to loved ones.

In an effort to "make the right choice," loved ones often spend far more for products and services than they normally would. When the wishes of a loved one are known, family and friends may be prevented from emotional over-spending in their rush to "pick something nice." Planning ahead enables comparison shopping without time constraints, facilitates the family discussion of important final arrangement decisions and removes some of the burden from loved ones.

One of the best ways to preplan is to sit down and put your thoughts in writing. Take time to record detailed instructions regarding funeral and cemetery preferences as well as documenting vital statistics, estate planning information and military service.

For information about preplanning, visit www.shareyourwishes.org, or call (800)-DIGNITY.

Seven Things Everyone Should Know About Planning a Funeral

1. Be informed about the choices available

Arranging a funeral or cremation service can seem complicated, but there's always someone who can help you. Funeral directors are trained professionals who can be a vital and supportive resource for you. They can explain all the options available and help you make informed decisions and guide you through the process.

2. Plan ahead

At a time of loss, there are many practical decisions that need to be made. Unfortunately, this is often the time when we're least able to approach the subject rationally. It makes sense to find a funeral director you can trust, before it becomes necessary. For more information, visit www.shareyourwishes.org, or call (800)-DIGNITY.

3. Decide the final disposition

Selecting burial, mausoleum entombment or cremation is a very personal decision. Discussion of your choice with family and documentation is essential. Whatever you choose, government forms, fees and the organization of a memorial service will fall to your loved ones without preplanning. For ease and peace of mind, choose a funeral home, such as a Dignity Memorial network provider, that will walk you through all the necessary arrangements.

4. Find out what government benefits are available

To find out your exact Social Security benefits, call (800) 772-1213 or go to www.ssa.gov. Veterans may be eligible for a burial allowance from the Department of Veterans Affairs. You can contact them at (800) 827-1000 or online at http://www.cem.va.gov/cem/bbene_burial.asp

5. Don't be afraid to ask about prices

The cost of arranging a funeral can vary greatly between companies. Be careful to choose a funeral home that presents its prices - the cost of the casket or urn, transportation fees, preparation charges, as well as other professional services - clearly and simply.

6. Funeral or cremation service arrangements need to be documented

Many people think everything is taken care of by having a will and a living trust, but those documents only cover medical treatment and financial affairs. You should make sure that your wishes are shared in writing with several people you trust: family members, friends and your funeral director.

7. Consider prepaying

If you decide to prepay for funeral or cremation service arrangements, be sure to let your family know. Also, keep your prearrangement documents in a safe place. Check with your bank before placing copies in a safe deposit box to ensure the box will not be sealed at the time of death.

Boomers looking at living to 90+

Boomers can take heart in some surprising news released in recent weeks by Eons.com about the longevity of 50-plus Americans. Their research, which examined the projected lifespan of Americans who have already celebrated their 50th birthday, showed that the roughly 450,000 people who completed the Eons Longevity Calculator will live to age 90 or more.

That's good news for those who've bought into other statistics that place the average life expectancy in the 70s. What makes the results of Eons Longevity Calculator different is that only Americans who have already passed the 50-year mark were studied, meaning they've survived the childhood accidents and diseases and the early onset forms of cancer, heart disease and other ailments that can shorten lives.

Developed by Dr. Tom Perls, a longevity expert for Eons and founder and director of Boston University's New England Centenarian Study, the Eons Longevity Calculator comprises 40 short questions about health, history, attitudes and behaviors. Visitors over the age of 50 can take the Longevity Calculator and, in about 10 minutes, discover their projected age.

While sifting through the results of the 450,000 completed questionnaires, Perls uncovered some interesting trends by state. For instance, Hawaiians 50-plus will, on average, live longer than residents of any other state, 92 years. Residents of Colorado and New Mexico were close behind. On the other end of the calculated longevity spectrum, 50-plus West Virginians are statistically likely to live the shortest lives, about 89 years.

The Longevity Calculator is one of the most popular features on Eons.com, the 50-plus Web destination that is the brainchild of Jeff Taylor. Taylor, who previously founded the online career site Monster.com, says, "Baby boomers are going to live, on average, 20 years longer than their grandparents did. But living well – not just living long – is crucial. Our 50-plus Longevity Calculator is a catalyst for this, providing users with some very simple steps that can make a real difference in the ultimate length and quality of their lives."

No matter what a person's calculated longevity is, Perls suggests a number of ways people can add real years to their lives.

- Change your attitude: Maintaining a stress-free, optimistic outlook on life can have more longevity benefits than you think. By staying positive and not dwelling on negative aspects of your life, you can add five years to your life.

- Exercise: Everyone understands the benefits of exercise, but its relationship to longevity is largely overlooked. By maintaining a modest but steady exercise regimen of at least 30 minutes a day, four days a week, people can add 10 years to their lives and enjoy a fit physique.

- Eat healthier: Similar to exercise, a well-balanced, healthy diet can have a dramatic impact on longevity. By incorporating plenty of fruits, vegetables, whole grains, fish and lean meat, while limiting trans fats and simple carbohydrates, the average American can add seven years to his life.

- Put out that cigarette: Even if illnesses related to smoking – lung cancer, mouth cancer and emphysema – don't send you to an early grave, a life of smoking can still shorten your life span by up to 15 years.

- Train your brain: New studies have shown that the strength and vitality of your brain have a direct correlation to the strength and longevity of your body. By engaging in sustained and challenging brain activity, people can add five years to their lives. This can be achieved by simply playing games like Sudoku or crossword puzzles for 20 minutes a day.

Take care of aging skin

Caring for aging skin involves far more than fighting wrinkles and age spots. Skin health, from protection against UV rays to proper wound care, plays a vital role in overall health for senior Americans.

Skin is the body's first line of protection against harm. It shields us from infection, impact and the environment.

"Age brings a number of changes that can compromise the skin's ability to protect us," says Cynthia Fleck, a registered nurse and vice president of clinical marketing for Advanced Skin and Wound Care at Medline, which manufactures skin care products and educational resources for seniors.

Fleck offers the following advice on how to care for aging skin:

- "Drying is the single largest skin problem among the aged," says Fleck. She recommends avoiding a daily shower or bath, which can contribute to dry skin. Instead, opt for gentle cleansing with soap and surfactant-free (detergent-free) cleansers of the kind that do not need to be rinsed. These cleansers do the job of removing dirt and natural oils, but do not impact the natural acid balance of mature skin.

- Moisturizing on a daily basis is essential since older skin cannot retain moisture as well as young skin.

"There are new, advanced skin care products that actually nourish the skin from the outside in, delivering amino acids (proteins), vitamins, antioxidants and ingredients that are gentle and soothing, making the skin more resilient and strengthening it," says Fleck.

- Take care to avoid bumps that can tear the skin, or caustic substances that can disrupt the skin's ability to protect. Immobile seniors who must use adult diapers should have special care taken to keep them clean and free of irritants.

"Barrier products that contain protectants like dimethicone and other silicones, as well as zinc oxide, can help protect the skin from these issues," Fleck says.

- Continue to protect your skin from the sun. Melanocytes, the skin cells that protect us from the sun, do not work as well as we age. As a result, older skin burns easily. Stay out of the sun as much as possible, and when out wear protective clothing, wide-brimmed hats and sun screen.

Tour directing a dream job for seniors

Baby boomers are reaching the age of retirement, and it's a great time for them to do the things they've always wanted to do. For many, this means traveling and experiencing different places and cultures. What if that passion for travel and people could be changed into a second career? Being a tour director can do just that, providing the opportunity to see the world with the flexibility to work whenever you want.

Tour directors are the special people who take care of all the day-to-day details that make for a successful vacation. They oversee airport, motor coach and hotel check-ins, handle customs and airline problem solving, schedule sightseeing arrangements and act as a congenial host generating enthusiasm and melding a group together into a happy "traveling family."

"Tour directing is a great job for those who have retired. You don't need to be away for months on end, you choose your schedule, where you want to go and when you want to work," says Ted Bravos, who 30 years ago founded International Tour Management Institute (ITMI), the first state-certified school for training professional tour directors and guides in America. "I feel older people with their extensive life experience can really make a difference in this industry. They get to share their wisdom while guiding others. They also get the added benefit to stay mentally and physically active while creating unforgettable memories."

Lee Burch did just that. After retiring from a 40-year career, he decided he was ready for a new adventure.

"Tour directing has allowed me to travel to places I probably wouldn't have been able to travel otherwise, and I'm able to help people," says Burch. "It combines both the travel, which I have a passion for, with being able to make a difference in people's lives. It has made a difference in my own life as well."

Sound too good to be true? ITMI's 30-year track record speaks for itself. With the right tools, determination and personality, it can be a reality. The school prepares students for a tour directing career in a 15-day intensive training program. Students learn about the tour and travel industry through practical "hands-on" experience in the field, including 5 days training aboard a deluxe motor coach and an overnight fieldtrip where they actually perform the role of a tour director. After graduation, ITMI has a more than 85 percent placement record.

Tour directors range in age from 20 to 70, with almost half older than 50 who have either raised families or had other careers. After becoming certified, tour directors can work as much or as little as they choose. Leading tours can also be financially rewarding. Besides getting a free trip, tour directors receive approximately $200 per day, plus all expenses, meals and their own private accommodations.

For more information about a travel career and becoming a tour director, visit www.ITMIto-urtraining.com or call (800) 442-4864.

Tour directing provides seniors with a chance to visit places and attractions they might not otherwise see.

Good skin care helps stop thinning hair

For some men and women, hair loss and thinning begins in early adulthood. More than just a cosmetic issue, hereditary hair loss is a medical condition that affects 80 million Americans, according to the American Academy of Dermatology.

Hereditary hair loss occurs as the hair follicles get smaller, causing a shortening of the hair's growth cycle. As the growth cycle shortens, the hair becomes thinner and shorter. For some, this might eventually lead to no growth at all. Because hereditary hair loss is gradual, the sooner treatment is started, the better the chances of success. There are many different treatment options for those with hereditary hair loss. Here are some examples:

- Finasteride, a pill, claims to stimulate hair growth by blocking the formation of the active male hormone, dihydrotestosterone (DHT).

- Hair transplantation involves removing healthy hair follicles from one area of the scalp and transplanting them to the bald areas.

- Cortisone injections in the scalp where the hair loss occurred.

- Special light treatments.
- Keracyste Scalp Conditioner, a topical application applied to the scalp that stimulates hair growth with human elastin.

For many, the idea of ingesting an oral medication with side effects is distasteful and surgery is invasive and can be painful. Topical treatments offer the easiest option but are unreliable.

Barbara Perricone's husband, who is afflicted with thinning hair decided to take the advice of Burt Ensley, Ph.D., a noted Arizona microbiologist and researcher of skin care technology.

After working to develop the successful Dermalastyl brand of anti-wrinkle treatments, Ensley took the same technology and applied it to hair restoration. Basically, for healthy hair, look to the health of the skin and scalp. Hair follicles in the scalp of humans are associated with and responsible for the production of proteins such as elastin and keratin.

"Not only is elastin and its precursor, tropoelastin, synthesized by the cells in the hair follicles, but the follicles themselves appear to depend on elastin," comments Dr. Ensley.

The first step is to make sure to protect yourself from the sun's damage. Just as you put on sun block to protect your face, remember to make sure your scalp isn't being damaged either. "Solar damage may be a major contributor to hair thinning and loss," states Dr. Ensley.

In his research, Dr. Ensley found that older hair follicles react to tropoelastin, the precursor to elastin when applied to the scalp. He worked to develop a new product, Keracyste. It not only stimulates the follicles to produce longer, thicker and fuller hair, but many users report that it restores the hair color as well.

This treatment was the right one for Perricone's husband. After using the product for four months, she noticed a definite difference. His formerly mostly white hair is salt and pepper again, and the darker hairs are curly, as they had been when he was younger.

For information about hair loss treatments and other anti-aging products, visit www.keracyste.com.

are boardwalks and viewing platforms so walkers can view the wetland vegetation.

The Yaddo Gardens are another popular picnic spot. Keep in mind that portions of this property are not open to the public. Visitors are encouraged to stick to the existing pathways to see the gardens, fountains and statues that make this site so engaging. The area is open from 8 a.m. until dusk and features both a rock garden as well as a rose garden.

Guided tours are available each weekend for $5 per person and Tuesdays during track season.

State Park

The Saratoga Spa State Park's best feature as far as kids are concerned is the Peerless Pool. Until Sept. 3, the pool stays open until six on weekdays and seven on the weekends. At $3 per adult and $1.50 for children, it's a small price to pay for a dip in cool water during the summer heat. The park admission price of $6 per car is also charged to get into the park.

Take me out

A family event that kicks off in the evening is the Saratoga Phillies baseball games. Held at the Eastside Recreation Field on Lake Avenue, admission is free. The team is made up of collegiate baseball players who hail from Division I colleges across the country. Families, especially those with Little Leaguers, find this a great way to see some quality ball games without spending a lot of money.

After the gallery tour the group takes part in an activity led by museum educators. The programs are different each Saturday and reservations are suggested, as the maximum allowed in the group is about 25. Families also tend to make up a large part of the audience on Friday evenings. The gallery is open late, until 7 p.m., after which everyone gathers together on the museum's roof to hear any one of a variety of musical guests for an evening concert. The "Upbeat on the Roof" musical series is a weekly event each Friday hosting a variety of local acts.

Located on the Skidmore campus, the Skidmore North Woods are close enough to the city to walk to them. The 350 acres encompass swamps, ponds, and fields as well as woods. Miles of trails run through area.

The Bog Meadow Trail on Route 29 is a 2-mile connection between Route 20 and Meadowbrook Road. It follows an old railroad line using signage to educate visitors of that history. There

Saratoga Springs offers plenty for families

Sure, there are the horses. But as long as you're headed that way, check out a few of the other activities the Spa City offers for a family.

Congress Park

The park just off Broadway is a great picnic spot. Families often pack a picnic lunch and bring it to the park to eat. Spread out a blanket and relax while the children race around playing tag or trying to get close to the water fowl. If you head toward Spring Street you'll find an antique carousel. Rides are a mere 50 cents and adults riding with children under 5 ride for free.

Creative Sparks

Just off Broadway on Phila Street is Creative Sparks, a paint-your-own-pottery studio. The pottery options are broad, offering up small pieces for those with short attention spans or larger pieces for children with a greater interest in detail and design. The benefit is that the painted pieces must be left behind to be fired in the kiln, requiring a second visit to the big city to pick up your child's creations.

Tasty Treats

Within eyesight of the carousel and Creative Sparks is Ben & Jerry's. Ice cream is always a kid favorite no matter the activities surrounding it. Cones can be eaten along the sidewalk and on the wooden swing at Ben & Jerry's, or you can engage in the time-honored tradition of trying to eat fast enough to keep the ice cream from running down your arm as you walk to other destinations.

The Children's Museum at Saratoga

The Caroline Street museum is geared for the 2-to-7-year-old set, and offers up a wide range of rooms designed to foster their creative and imaginative juices. From the diner to the post office to the general store and the fire truck complete with a fireman's boots and jackets to wear there is something for every childhood passion. There is a stage and dress up clothes to create their own performances. Kids also have the opportunity to make the largest bubbles they have likely ever seen.

Tang Museum

Skidmore College's Tang Museum offers family Saturdays through Aug. 25. Between 2 and 3:30 p.m., children 5 and up and their adults are able to tour the gallery.

Bethlehem wins Eastern NY title

The Bethlehem Babe Ruth All-Stars won the Eastern New York State 13-year-old division championship. The players are Mike Baldovin, Jack Baynes, Alex Bellizzi, Adrian Bergere, Justin Blalock, Matt Cahill, Cody Crouse, Mike Eglow, Seamus Fitzpatrick, Christian Frese, John Hartunian, Nick Hodom, Jasper Marynczak, Josh Peterson and Ryan Stempsey. The manager is Rick Hartunian, and the coaches are Peter Baynes and Rico Frese.

The Bethlehem Babe Ruth All-Stars defeated Saugerties 6-4 to win the title at last week's Eastern New York State 13-year-old division tournament in Saugerties.

Bethlehem scored four runs in the top of the sixth inning to overcome a 3-2 deficit. Bethlehem loaded the bases on Josh Peterson's single and bunts by Mike Eglow and Jack Baynes. Peterson then scored on Christian Frese's squeeze bunt to tie the game.

That last bunt opened up the floodgates. Bethlehem scored three more runs to take a 6-3 lead.

Saugerties got one run back in the bottom of the seventh, but a bizarre play ended the rally. With two outs, Justin Blalock moved in between first and second base to catch a fly ball and was run over by a Saugerties baserunner. As both players lay on the ground, another Bethlehem player picked up the loose ball and tagged the runner out to end the game.

Bethlehem advances to this week's Mid-Atlantic regionals.

improvement is quarterback Eli Manning. Though he threw more touchdowns (24) than interceptions (18) and guided the Giants to their second consecutive playoff appearance, many feel Manning has a lot to prove this year — including Manning.

"Eli is very honest and very open about himself, and I think he's the type of player who will get better and be the player we all think he can be," said Coughlin. Training camp will allow Manning and his teammates to get on the same page, even if the media scrutiny is the same at UAlbany as it is in New York City. The fact that they are away from home allows for the players to focus strictly on football.

"Even if you don't like it because you're away from your family and kids, it's important to be here," said linebacker Antonio Pierce.

"I'm excited, I really am," said Coughlin.

Rugby

The Adirondack men's team posted a 3-1 record in pool play and then defeated Long Island 17-7 in Sunday's gold medal game. Local players included Dane Barclay and Justin McNeal of Delmar.

The women's team went 3-0-1 in pool play before losing to Western 21-7 in the gold medal game. Selkirk's Willow Eyres played for Adirondack.

Soccer

The scholastic women's team outscored New York City 4-3 in a shootout to pull out a 1-0 victory in Sunday's gold medal game. The win capped a tournament in which Adirondack didn't allow a goal. Local players included Megan Olsen (Glenmont), Taylor Teal (Delmar) and Ashley Wilson (Selkirk).

The scholastic men's team had no trouble winning its gold medal, downing Hudson Valley 5-1 in Sunday's finale.

In the open division, Adirondack avenged an earlier loss to Hudson Valley by beating the host region 2-0 in Sunday's men's gold medal game. Local players included Delmar's Ryan Banagan and Ravena's Brandon Lefevre.

The open division women's team bounced back from an opening round loss to Western to win its next three games, including a 1-0 victory over Hudson Valley in Sunday's bronze medal game. Jackie Levie of Coeymans Hollow played for Adirondack.

Softball

Adirondack won its last three pool play games to advance to Sunday's gold medal game before losing to Long Island 2-0.

Local players included Amber Maisonet (Slingerlands) and Cyrilla Suker (Voorheesville).

Tennis

The Adirondack men's team split its four matches to place fourth. Adirondack defeated Central 3-2 and New York City 3-2 before losing to Hudson Valley and Long Island by 4-1 scores. Local players included Michael Amico of Delmar and Joey Millstein of Slingerlands.

The scholastic women's team lost all four of its matches.

Local players included Selkirk's Christine Cary and Delmar's Allison Greenberg. Bethlehem High School coach Grace Franze guided the Adirondack women.

Volleyball

The open men's division team had the best showing for the region, finishing with a 4-1 pool play record and reaching the semifinals before losing to Long Island 2-1. A 2-0 loss to Western left Adirondack with a bronze medal.

Both the scholastic men's and women's teams had 2-3 pool play records and lost in the first round of the playoffs. Voorheesville's Arielle Smith played for the scholastic women's team.

The open women's division team lost all of its matches.

No getaway for Giants

Team faces questions as UAlbany training camp begins

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

Running back Reuben Droughns had his "welcome to New York" moment when he arrived at New York Giants' training camp last Friday.

As soon as Droughns stepped out of his car at the University at Albany, he was surrounded by the dozens of reporters that had gathered to cover the players as they moved into their dorm rooms.

It was a moment Droughns never experienced at his two previous NFL stops, Denver and Cleveland. But after spending the past two seasons playing for the perennial doormat Cleveland Browns, he welcomed the change of scenery.

"It reminds me of the Denver Broncos' atmosphere. They were expected to win, and the Giants are expected to win," said Droughns.

The high expectations are tempered a bit as the Giants go through their first week of training camp at UAlbany. Tailback Tiki Barber is no longer in the backfield after retiring to a television career, leaving a void that Droughns and Brandon Jacobs must fill.

"Coming over here, I knew the team was trying to bring in the two-back system," said Droughns, who was traded to New York in the offseason. "The two-back system works. They did that in Denver with me, and it worked well."

There may be a hole to fill on the defensive line as well. Veteran defensive end Michael Strahan hadn't reported to training camp as of Monday as he has been holding out for a contract extension. But head coach Tom Coughlin said at last Thursday's media day that he believes Strahan will be back and at full strength.

"I think he can perform at a high level," Coughlin said of Strahan, who is coming off foot surgery. "Michael has a lot of pride, and I know he wasn't happy with his performance last year."

Soccer teams strike gold at Games

Adirondack region soccer teams had a lot of success at this year's Empire State Games in Westchester County.

Both scholastic teams and the open men's squad won gold medals in Sunday's championship round, and the open women's team earned a bronze medal.

Other team medals went to the scholastic women's ice hockey team (gold), the open women's softball team (silver), the masters men's (gold) and women's (silver) rugby teams, the open women's (silver) and scholastic women's (bronze) basketball teams, the scholastic women's field hockey team (bronze) and the open men's volleyball team (bronze).

Here is a recap of what Adirondack teams did at the Empire State Games.

Baseball

Adirondack lost to Central 7-5 in Sunday's bronze medal game to fall one place short of the awards podium. Adirondack won two of its first three games in the round-robin portion of the tournament before losing to Long Island 4-0 and Hudson Valley 15-1 to fall into the bronze medal game.

The team was coached by Glenmont native Jesse Braverman and Bethlehem High School varsity coach Rob Helm.

Basketball

The open women's division team defeated Central 69-58 and Long Island 67-66 to assure itself a spot in Sunday's gold medal game, but lost to Hudson Valley 61-59 in Sunday's championship game. Adirondack also lost to New York City 74-68.

The open men's division team had a tougher time, suffering losses to Long Island (85-71), New York City (69-64) and Hudson Valley (77-59).

In the scholastic divisions, Adirondack's women's team bounced back from an 0-2 start to defeat New York City 79-76 in overtime to advance to Sunday's bronze medal game, where it defeated Central 70-65. Bethlehem's Alex McCullough was part of the team.

The Adirondack scholastic men's team lost all three of its games.

Field hockey

After posting a 1-3 record in tournament play, Adirondack edged Long Island 2-1 to win the bronze medal.

Ice hockey
