As autumn comes, people will flock to the region to see the leaves change color. Soon, brilliant oranges will contrast with the green that's been on the trees all summer. But a chance to revel in those same greens and oranges – the traditional colors of Ireland – comes just a bit earlier this year at the Irish 2000 Music and Arts Festival.

Outdoor screens are a nostalgia-driven trend

Drive-in movie theaters are often thought of as a thing of the past. It is not uncommon for those with out-of-state license plates to be seen pulled off to the side of the road taking photos of the large screens that dot the Capital District. It is no wonder, since the state of New Jersey can claim just one operating drive-in. Vermont lists four while Massachusetts boasts six. That is in sharp contrast to the seven drive-ins located within a 60-mile radius of Albany.

A return to routine

Elementary students head back to school amid hugs and hellos

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Parents kissing their children goodbye, kids walking their dogs to school, teachers hugging students – all scenes from a first day of the new school year at Elsmere Elementary School in Delmar.

"We're excited to have students and their families back, and we're looking forward to a terrific year," said Elsmere Principal Kate Kloss.

All five Bethlehem elementary schools began the school year on Thursday, Sept. 6. Brothers Jacquez and Joshua Nails, fourth and second graders at Elsmere, said they are ready to get back to work.

"First day is the same as every day, but you get to meet everybody," said Jacquez, whose favorite subject is math. His brother's favorite class is reading.

"My best friend is Alex," said Jacquez. "We have been in the same classroom for four years."

Second graders Anna Perry and Emma Kranice quickly rekindled their friendship on the first day, running up to each other to say hello with a hug. Fifth grader Owen Talmage said the faculty is what makes Elsmere fun.

"I like the teachers," Owen said. "They are really nice."

This is Kloss's fifth year as principal at Elsmere, and she said all five years have been "terrific."

"Each child is special and brings gifts that we enjoy," said Kloss. "It's a neighborhood school in the truest sense."

Talmage said one of the best things about the first day of school is the lack of assignments.

"We don't have to do a ton of work, and we usually don't get homework," Talmage said.

This could be the last year

Superintendent
announces his retirement at welcoming address

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Everybody has a first day and a last day of school, even superintendents. Les Loomis gave his 20th and final address to the incoming faculty and staff of the Bethlehem Central School District on Tuesday, Sept. 4, at the newly remodeled Bethlehem Central High School.

"This will be my last year at Bethlehem Central School District," said Loomis as many staff in the crowd heard the news for the first time that Loomis will be leaving the district at the end of the school year next June.

"Bethlehem is a true community, and everyone here values educating our students," Loomis said. "I wouldn't trade this work for anything."

Knowledge, character and value, the three hallmarks of the district, were once again key areas Loomis addressed with the staff. He also warned the educators of a growing trend in the community within the last few years to vote no on the school budget, adding the issue is more than general taxpayer fatigue or battles with reassessment.

"There needs to be a relentless focus on continuing to increase the education quality and connecting with the community," Loomis said. "Community outreach needs to be more deeply embedded."

Loomis received a standing ovation from his colleagues, and new board president James Lytle joked, "I just want to thank you for giving us one more challenge this year."

Along with the search for a new superintendent, the district will draw new boundaries with redistricting, begin implementation of a full-day kindergarten program, build a new elemen-

District gets mass e-mail threat

Bethlehem police report that on Wednesday evening, Sept. 5, Bethlehem school board President James Lytle checked his e-mail and discovered that he received eight e-mails addressed to each of the school board members indicating that a bomb was in the school district and that there would be an explosion soon.

According to police reports, the letter indicated "demands must be met before an exact location is given."

The e-mails were sent to the Bethlehem school board members at the address boe@bcsd.neric.org.

The Bethlehem police and school district officials worked together to implement the comprehensive school safety plan.

After a sweep of all school property late Wednesday evening, it was determined by police that school was safe to open on Thursday, Sept. 6.

The state police computer crimes unit is assisting with the investigation.

The state information center was advised, and the incident may be related to similar bomb threats to colleges and schools across the state and country.

The investigation continues.

Contaminated casks spike costs

Cleanup fees at district transportation site bring added charges

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Abandoned fuel tanks at the entrance of the Bethlehem School District's transportation fuel facility on Van Dyke Avenue are the reason for a $240,000 cost overrun in summer construction.

Rudley Lewis of SanoRubin Construction said the tanks, which date back to the late 1950s, were never identified until they were unearthed during ongoing bond issue construction and found to be contaminating the nearby soil.

"The state Department of Environmental Conservation, as required, had to be notified within 36 hours," said Lewis.

A special monitor was then hired by the district to clean up the site.

"We did find clay materials saturated with fuel oil," said Lewis.

The fuel tanks are now removed, and the added cost will most likely come out of the district's bond issue contingency fund.

Some at the Wednesday, Sept. 5, school board meeting questioned whether there were alternatives for paying for the overruns.

"Do we have any insurance that covers the cost of this?" asked board member James Dering.

Business Superintendent Steve O'Shea said unforeseen circumstances like this one at the transportation fuel facility are usually excluded from insurance coverage.

Electrical problems and asbestos inside some pipes at the middle school caused delays to renovations in several sixth and eighth-grade science classrooms. Lewis said a "tremendous amount of work" occurred this summer at the high school and all renovations throughout the building, including the new entrance, are complete.

"There is still some minor heating system work, but the overall project is substantially completed," said Lewis.

A final punch list of issues at the high school will be reviewed this fall, and the project is expected to be complete by the end of the year. Changes at the high school include an expanded cafeteria, a new band room, larger chorus room and new student parking lot. Renovated classrooms and locker rooms along with a new orchestra room are the major changes this summer at the middle school. In Clarksville, students will be able to work in a larger media center and have their lunches in a new cafeteria. The projects are all part of the $93 million dollar district bond issue. Work on the new Eagle Elementary School is also under way with an expected start date of September 2008.

"The interior of the building will be worked on throughout the winter," said Lewis.

Assistant Superintendent Michael Tebbano said the first week of school brings a lot of excitement, especially with all the new construction.

"Teachers are ready to go," said Tebbano. "It makes the summer worthwhile."

Spitzer signs off on Jonathan's law

Legislation gives caregivers better access to records

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

On Tuesday, Sept. 4, a day when many parents were getting their children prepared for the first day of school, Michael and Lisa Carey were taking a drive to New York City to watch Gov. Eliot Spitzer formally sign Jonathan's Law into legislation.

The law, named after the Careys' son Jonathan, who died at the age of 13 after being restrained while being transported by workers from O.D. Heck school, allows parents and guardians of disabled children and adults greater access to records related to their care while in residential private or state-run mental health facilities. The law also gives families until Dec. 31 of this year to retrieve records all the way back to Jan. 1, 2003.

"Up to this point everything was confidential," said Michael Carey. "Now they have to notify parents with 24 hours of any incident if their child has been harmed."

The Careys contend their son Jonathan was physically and emotionally abused when he was under the care of the Anderson School, a nonprofit center for autistic patients in Staatsburg, Dutchess County, back in 2004. Now Michael Carey said he is armed with the records that prove his son had food withheld and was endangered while in the care of school workers.

"Child abuse is a crime, endangering the welfare of a child is a crime and many of these people stay in their jobs when these incidents go unreported," Carey said.

Jonathan's Law became two bills that allow access to records related to incidents and allegations involving individuals residing in mental health facilities and, in certain circumstances, records relating to incidents that occurred prior to the laws being passed.

"Jonathan's Law will now provide better and more certain access to information for families like the Careys for ensuring that their loved ones receive appropriate care, and these families owe Michael and Lisa Carey a debt of gratitude for their tireless advocacy," said Spitzer at the signing ceremony.

The Careys met with the governor prior to the bill signing last week and urged more efforts to stop abuse, including the protocol when someone calls the state child abuse hot line.

"When calls to the hot line are received, they should go to a local police agency and not a state agency, and we are going to push for this very hard," Carey said.

Commissioner of the state Office of Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities Diana Jones Ritter said the OMRDD will establish a toll-free statewide information line at (866) 946-9733 to "help people get answers to questions about programs and services for individuals with developmental disabilities."

Meanwhile, the Careys have formed the Jonathan Carey Foundation to educate and advocate for the most vulnerable children. The first Jonathan Carey Foundation Walkathon is slated for Saturday, Sept. 29, in the Elm Avenue Bethlehem town park at 10 a.m.

For information about the event, call 475-9100.

Having fun at camp is good medicine

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR
news@spotlightnews.com

Summer vacation sure went fast:

We got a postcard from our daughter while she was away for a week at Camp Hardtspell. She wrote that she had taken an archery class and a soccer class and they were fun. She said she swam the required 440 yards and passed the swim test. And just before she closed her note with "I love you both," she wrote, "I can't believe I'm going to be here until Friday."

I was elated to receive the postcard. It arrived on Wednesday, three days after we dropped her off at camp. Since the campers were not allowed to make or receive phone calls, her postcard at least let us know how she was doing after one full day away.

Then I started to analyze what she meant by, "I can't believe I'm going to be here until Friday." Was she feeling lucky that she had several more days of camp fun, or was she feeling stuck there until the end of the week?

"She's having fun," my husband said, pointing out that Rachel had used the word "fun" in her note.

Of course she was having fun; the whole camp reeked of fun.

The reason for my anxiety was that drop-off had not gone well. The daughter was fine, but the mommy fell apart.

It all started when I realized that we would not get to camp by 1 p.m., the beginning of the registration period. This happened because I miscalculated the amount of time it would take us to drive to Camp Hardtspell and also get lunch along the way.

So, when we exited the highway at 12:35 p.m. and entered a traffic jam on a road with a shopping outlet but no fast-food restaurants, the panic set in.

Why hadn't I packed sandwiches? Why didn't we eat

Commentary:
From
Robin's Nest

an early lunch before we left the house?

Mommy guilt. Mommy guilt.

On top of my failure to plan, I'd also read a book during the ride. Had my face not been buried in "The Sparrow," I would have had my eye on the clock and would have suggested stopping off at one of the 15 or more earlier exits that had easy access to fast food.

Selfish mommy reads a book. More mommy guilt.

At 12:50 we were waiting for pizza at a non fast-food restaurant. I was beside myself. I made the entire family tense.

I tried to convince myself that everything was fine. Registration was until 2:30, and the brochure said there would be two parent orientations—one at 2:30 and another at 3:30. But I really wanted to be at the camp at 1!

"We can eat in the car," Jeff suggested. I pictured the danger of consuming a burning hot slice of pizza dripping with cheese while in motion. We ate at the restaurant.

We arrived at the camp at 1:40 and found out that there would only be one parent orientation at 2 p.m. So much for my studying the brochure!

At 1:43 we were standing in the registration line. This is when my husband said, "Do you have her medicine?"

He went back to the car, but could not find the baggie with the allergy medicines.

"Did you check the bag with the blueberry muffins?" I asked. He said he had just carried the muffin package out to the car in his hand.

I desperately wanted to blame him for forgetting the medicine. The best I could do was blame him for rushing me out of the house.

"Remember how I called myself a bag lady? I was going to get a grocery bag to put the muffins in and I was going to put the medicine baggie in that bag so I'd have fewer loose items to carry to the car."

The medicine baggie was on top of Portia's towel, Jeff told me. Portia is a friend who was attending Camp Hardtspell with Rachel. Earlier in the summer she had left a towel at our house.

"So you're telling me we remembered a towel that nobody even needs or knows is missing but we don't have the medicine?"

Intense mommy guilt.

Never mind that Rachel had only sporadically remembered to use the allergy medicines over the past few weeks. Never mind her recent lack of allergy symptoms. She would be spending lots of time outdoors and sleeping in a cabin. Who knows what kinds of allergens lurk at Camp Hardtspell.

By then I was so mad at myself I could spit nails. Jeff said, "You need to hold it together."

"OK, Daddy," I said to him sarcastically, then between my teeth I hissed, "Which one of these camp forms did YOU fill out?" In my hand I clutched a copy of the medical form, plus the sheet with the list of medicines.

At the medical table check-in I burst into tears. "I...I...forgot her aller...aller...allergy medicine," I sputtered.

The medical director smiled. She looked over her sheet and saw that the medicines included some over-the-counter products. "Oh, we've got these here. And I can also give her saline nasal spray."

Then she added kindly, "You're a good mom. Everything will be fine."

"I don't even really like the kid," I joked, trying to cover my humiliation.

"Yeah, I can tell," she replied.

To my husband she said, "Your daughter will be fine, but you need to take your wife out to dinner."

Then Jeff said, "It's five minutes to two" and tried to steer us over to the parent orientation.

"NO, we're going to the bunk now!" I declared.

This confused him, because just minutes earlier I was upset about missing the orientation. What he didn't understand was that there was a hierarchy of activities and we could no longer follow the original plan of "registration, bunk drop off, then parent orientation." I had to sacrifice the orientation to get her settled in her bunk sooner rather than later.

We found the cabin, helped Rachel set up her bed, and then went outside to hug and goodbye. Her friend arrived and they ran inside together.

Jeff asked, "Do you want to go back in the cabin?"

I did want one more hug, but the brochure said, "make drop-off quick."

"No, no, we're supposed to leave," I said, but I did step just inside the door, wave, and yell, "Goodbye, and have fun." Then we drove off.

In the car I cried some more. I was upset because I messed up drop-off by not "holding it together" like Jeff had wisely suggested. I know you're not supposed to cry until after you drive away.

Then, late Thursday afternoon I got a call at work. "This is Carol from Camp Hardtspell. Do you have a daughter named Rachel?"

My entire bodied tensed, expecting bad news.

But no, Carol was calling from the gift shop. Rachel had exhausted the funds in her "trading store" account and wanted to make an additional purchase. She wasn't missing me, just my credit card.

We were the first parents to arrive at the cabin on Friday afternoon. I braced myself for the possibility that she'd be disappointed to see us "so soon," but her smile was wide and she gave both her dad and me a tight welcome hug.

Always remember

Tuesday was the sixth anniversary of 9/11. Flags flew, candles were lit, and we remembered the people killed by an unanticipated enemy while going about their daily routine, just as we all do every day, without a second thought.

We remember the firefighters who died trying to rescue those trapped in collapsing buildings. We remember the passengers on the planes that terrorists turned into weapons, especially those who turned "Let's roll" into two heroic words.

We remember the anxious days and weeks that followed the attacks, when planes didn't fly and tears flowed freely.

Emotion gave way to action, as volunteers headed to downtown Manhattan, cards went to the families of the bereaved, politicians sang patriotic songs on the U.S. Capitol steps, and we stood in line to give blood.

There is great debate in the nation now about how to fight terrorism. Sometimes, it feels we've become a more polarized nation, as partisan passion manifests itself in heated accusations and defense.

But that's one of our nation's greatest strengths – freedom of speech. You and your neighbor may disagree vehemently, but you both can speak your piece.

The ability to speak up in the most significant way is upon us as election season arrives. Elections offer all of us the greatest opportunity to fight terrorism and honor all who have died fighting for our freedom.

Next Tuesday, Sept. 18, is Primary Day. If you are a registered member of a party holding a primary, go vote.

Between now and Nov. 6, Election Day for everyone, pay attention to the issues and the candidates. While it might be referred to as "only" a local election year, these are perhaps the most important elections.

In the upcoming elections, voters have a chance to effect change at the level that matters the most, the local one. The development of our neighborhoods, the look of businesses coming into town, future tax rates and the kind of sentencing given for small offenses, are all affected by who we elect at the local level.

Terrorists often come from totalitarian regimes, where choice, diversity and equality for all aren't options. We Americans are awash in choices every day, especially when it comes time to vote.

There's no better way to honor those who died on Sept. 11 than by not taking for granted the great privileges we have in the United States of America.

Music brings world of experience

ELIZABETH SULLIVAN

Most little girls liked to play with dolls and have tea parties, but not me. I had a completely different interest that most people would not expect in a young child, my interest being traditional Irish music. I started playing the fiddle when I was 6 years old, and ever since I knew what music was, I was drawn to the melodies of my heritage, the melodies of Ireland.

I was first exposed to traditional Irish music in the home of my great-grandfather, Jeremiah O'Sullivan, who immigrated to the United States from Ireland in April 1930. He missed his homeland and always had Irish music playing on the radio in his house as a peaceful reminder of home. Our family lived only a short car ride from his house in Boston so we visited him almost every weekend.

Whenever I stepped over the threshold into his home, traditional Irish music not only filled my ears, but my entire body. The sounds spread like wildfire from my head all the way down to my fingertips. There was just something about the beat that struck a chord in my heart. I knew that traditional Irish music was a part of me.

My parents bought a few traditional Irish music CDs for me, and I listened to them constantly. While the CDs were playing I ran around our home with a Coca-Cola bottle and a chopstick saying, "Look Mommy and Daddy, I'm playing the fiddle!"

I was only about 2 years old when I started asking for a real fiddle, but I was too young. However, I was persistent in begging for one every day until I was old enough.

Point of View

One day in August, I hit a stroke of bad luck that ended up changing my life forever. I broke my leg before school started and that meant that I was not able to Irish dance anymore until it was healed. Even though I could not dance, I still loved attending dance class so I could listen to the Irish music that played during class. My dance teacher, Rita O'Shea, noticed how much I liked the music. She was from County Galway in Ireland and had a friend that she put us in contact with. His name was Seamus Connolly.

We contacted Seamus only to find out that he was a world champion fiddle player. He won the All-Ireland Fiddle Championship 10 times when he was a child and now he was the head of the Irish studies program and ran a music festival at Boston College. Seamus invited my mother and me to attend a festival called Gaelic Roots to see if I enjoyed playing traditional Irish music as much as I loved listening to it. Since my first class, my repertoire has continued to grow.

I took weekly lessons until I was 12 years old and as my knowledge of traditional Irish music grew, I started to love the music of County Clare. Each county has its own style of traditional Irish music that is very unique. The County Clare style of Irish music has a wonderful beat while being very smooth and melodic. It is a style of music that incorporates the individual's expression and the tradition. Through years of practice I have achieved that style of playing and that beautiful sound in my music.

I have worked so hard on my Irish music and all of the practice has really paid off. I have accomplished goals that I only could have dreamed of when I was younger.

There is an extremely large traditional Irish music competition known as the Fleadh Cheoil. It is a competition that includes all of the United States and Canada. I have always thought about competing, but I was always too cautious. I was kind of afraid of playing in front of judges because that would mean that people could criticize what I had been working on for such a long time and find fault in my music. Finally, last year I built up the courage to compete for the first time.

To my surprise, it turned out extremely well. I knew that I had played my best but I was not sure if my style of playing was what the judge would be looking for. I remember my heart beating so hard when he called out the results and to my surprise said, "First place goes to Elizabeth Sullivan!" I felt a sense of achievement and accomplishment to be the North American Champion for the age category of 12 to 15 years. I was able to attend a festival called the All-Ireland Fleadh Cheoil in Letterkenny, County Donegal. It was an amazing experience to be considered one of the top 14 best fiddle players in the world.

This year I again competed in the Fleadh Cheoil but I moved up to the 15 to 18 years of age category. I was not expecting any great results, being one of the youngest in my competition, but yet again, my hard work paid off. For the second time in a row, the judge announced that I had won first place at the competition. This year I again got to compete in the All-Ireland Fleadh Cheoil in Tullamore, County Offaly. I always wanted the standard of my playing to be as high as it is today, but I still can not believe that my dreams are becoming a reality.

My music has taken me to many wonderful places, my favorite being Ireland. Since I started playing traditional Irish music, I have been there seven times. Pictures really do not do the land justice. The rolling green hills and pastures are unbelievable. The culture is amazing too. The people there are salt-of-the-earth, really friendly and helpful. Where else do you see a tractor driving down a road, a truck driving down an unpaved path, or a small child driving a horse drawn carriage down a highway? During my trips, I have met many wonderful people and made life long friends that play music. Traditional Irish music is extremely powerful in its tradition and really connects all the people that play it together. I get such a rush when I play music in the pubs of Ireland with all of my friends and many other wonderful musicians. The sound of many different instruments together is so warm and exciting! The experience is always so much fun and it is so nice to know that there are so many kids that have the same interests as I do.

I love Irish music so much because it is a way for me to let out my emotions and express myself. Traditional Irish music is really a huge part of me as well as my life. Every time I fly across the Atlantic Ocean to the land of my heritage, I realize that this is where I belong and what I was meant to do. I hope that my music not only makes me happy, but that it makes others happy to because it's something that I will be doing for the rest of my life.

IMPORTANT ELECTION NOTICE

Voters of Albany County's 36th Legislative District

Primary Day - Tuesday September 18, 2007 Noon to 9:00 PM

TO DEMOCRATS and INDEPENDENCE PARTY Voters

You are aware that incumbent Howard A. SHAFER has represented you well by voting for tax decreases and AGAINST the 28.6% county tax hike in 2005. He assisted in the successful effort to reduce the tax burden of New York State's unfunded mandates. He has nearly perfect attendance at his Public Works and Public Safety Committee meetings as all his other county assignments and because of his continuous involvement in our community's affairs deserves to be reelected.

Howard A. Shafer's opponent:

- 1) was a Bethlehem police officer, BUT his own union, the Bethlehem Police Officers Union, is NOT endorsing his campaign!
- 2) was an enrolled Republican for 38 years from 1961 to 1999
- 3) was an enrolled Conservative for 5 years from 1999 to 2004
- 4) was enrolled in the Independence Party for 2 years from 2004 to 2006
- 5) has been an enrolled Democrat for only 11 months since October 9, 2006.

As an opportunist, Howard's opponent changes addresses and party affiliation so he can either be a Commissioner of Delmar's Fire Department or run for the Albany County Legislature... and he has and continues to live at 39 Peel Street where he is not a resident of your legislative district.

DEMOCRATS flip that top lever 2A for Howard A. SHAFER.

INDEPENDENCE Party voters, slide open the write-in slot above column 2 and write in Howard A. SHAFER.

TO CONSERVATIVE PARTY Voters

Unlike all of Howard A. SHAFER's opponents who have little to no participation in local community service, Howard who has spent his entire life in Albany County, the last 11 years in Selkirk, is extremely involved in local affairs:

- Howard has served two terms on his school board and voted AGAINST the boondoggle lease contract for school buses (his opponents rarely vote on their school budgets).
- A decorated Vietnam Marine, Shafer volunteers with the Selkirk Fire Police, assists in emergencies to secure accident and fire scenes and serves at the company's fund raising events.
- Howard fought to keep Waste Management out of Selkirk. He is a vocal participant in the public forums such as a truck by-pass for Selkirk.

More than 50 elected officials, impressed by Howard's ability to achieve results through his conservative independent style, are endorsing his re-election. Howard has voted to lower taxes and voted AGAINST the large 2005 county property tax raise. 100% of the Republican legislators voted for that tax hike and so did 94% of the county's Conservative Party-endorsed legislators. You do not need another tax and spend Conservative.

Scheuermann good choice for board

Editor, The Spotlight:

I write to urge the residents of the town of Bethlehem to support Art Scheuermann for town board in this fall's town election. I have gotten to know Art quite well over the last nine years, since my family and I moved into Bethlehem. It was hard not to get to know Art, since he has been so active in this community since the moment he arrived in Bethlehem. Whether as president of the Bethlehem Soccer Club, or his involvement in other community organizations or events, Art's philosophy has always been if you want to make a difference, you have to be involved and diligent.

The same has been true in Art's professional career. As a fellow attorney, I have gotten to know Art as a professional as well. Formerly, Art spent many years as a criminal prosecutor. As a prosecutor, Art vigorously prosecuted criminals who preyed upon our children and senior citizens. Additionally, Art prosecuted numerous crimes committed by companies that harmed our environment and natural resources. Further, Art prosecuted several corrupt public officials involved with abusing taxpayer dollars. I know that Art will take the experiences he learned and causes he championed as a prosecutor to the town board.

Following his tenure as a criminal prosecutor, Art worked in a private law practice in Albany where he developed an expertise in education and labor law. Art now serves as general counsel to the School Administrators Association of New York State, a professional association that represents college and school employees on employment-related matters. Therefore, Art understands the needs of school districts balanced against the importance of monitoring school district finances to control the growth of spending and taxes.

Art also maintains his own private law practice with his wife, Barbara, representing small businesses, among other clients. They understand that small businesses are the backbone of a community like Bethlehem and provide jobs and the needed tax base that a town like Bethlehem needs.

In sum, I have rarely met a person who has the energy, dedication and diligence that Art does. He will be a true asset to the town, and will be an important part in bringing back balanced government to Bethlehem.

I urge all residents to vote for Art for Bethlehem Town Board on Tuesday, Nov. 6.

Persing is qualified to be town judge

Editor, The Spotlight:

I strongly support Dan Persing for town justice. I have had the pleasure of meeting him and his wife, Joan. Dan has lived in Bethlehem for 22 years and has been in private practice for 15 years. His diverse background includes teaching trial law at Albany Law School, serving on Committee of Professional Standards and the Office of Professional Medical Conduct. The first of those two important groups assures voters of Dan's impartiality and integrity and the second addresses issues that are literally life-saving.

I am a lifelong Democrat who has supported many Democratic candidates over the years. Today, in Bethlehem, we have an overwhelming monopoly of Democrats running our town. This imbalance is not necessarily in our best interest. An excellent example, where there was nonpartisan support, was the acquisition and preservation of the unique and award-winning 33-acre Colonial Acres Golf Course, which is now forever available to the public. As an active volunteer who loves this town, I urge you to support Dan Persing and elect him as our next town justice on Tuesday, Nov. 6. He is the candidate you can count on when it comes to treating our Bethlehem residents equally, showing unbiased behavior, and demonstrating unflinching fairness and integrity. Dan will be an asset to our town, both strong and compassionate. Give him your vote and you will get a great deal back.

Florist is good neighbor

Editor, The Spotlight:

I went into Delmar Florist last week to buy some flowers for my wife, and Barbara Ostroff, the owner of Delmar Florist, told me about "Good Neighbor Day," which FTD sponsors. Barbara had customers drop off nonperishable food, and they received a dozen roses, with the understanding that they give most of them away.

I was so happy to take part; it was a great way to help out a good cause. As a bonus, it brought a smile to the faces of the 12 people who got roses. It was also a chance to promote a great new Delmar business.

Delmar Florist, located at 257 Delaware Ave., is a new addition to Delaware Avenue's thriving commercial area. This is the 13th annual FTD Good Neighbor Day. Good Neighbor Day helps local florists spread friendship and kindness to their neighbors through the distribution of free floral bouquets. FTD florists, like Delmar Florist, have celebrated FTD Good Neighbor Day since 1994, encouraging all neighbors to help create a friendlier, more caring and compassionate world through the gift of flowers. Customers are encouraged to keep one flower for themselves and give the others away — brightening the day of many other people.

Delmar Florist's participation in this great event proves that Delmar Florist is a good neighbor. I am proud to have them in our town and thankful for the chance to have participated.

Bethlehem Cares steps up to fight diabetes

Editor, The Spotlight:

For the ninth consecutive year, our community will be coming together to participate in the Walk to Cure Diabetes, sponsored by the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation. During the past eight years, the community has rallied around this important cause — finding a cure for diabetes — by participating in the event as a team called "Bethlehem Cares."

Thus far, our team has raised approximately $175,000, all of which has gone directly to research to find a cure for diabetes and its complications. On Saturday, Sept. 16, Bethlehem Cares will participate in this year's Walk to Cure Diabetes at Corporate Woods in Albany. You can join us as a walker by calling us at 439-6894, by pre-registering at www.jdrf.org, or by using one of the walk brochures found in many area businesses. Remember to sign up as a member of the Bethlehem Cares community/family team.

If you are one of the first 150 people to turn in at least $25 for diabetes research, you will receive a free team T-shirt. We would like to thank our business friends for sponsoring our T-shirt this year, especially our presenting sponsor, DeGraff, Foy, Kunz and Devine. Our team also has two gold sponsors: the Kiwanis Club of Delmar and Meadowbrook Farms.

We would also like to thank all of our silver sponsors: Allen and Taub Plumbing and Heating; Bethlehem Family Practice; Capital Cities Imported Cars; Capital District Oral and Maxillofacial Surgeons; Choices Hair Studio and Day Spa; Crossroads Ford Mercury; Drs. Decker, Sbuttoni, Boghosian, DiCerro and Lawless; and Robert M. Deitz, DDS.

Also, Delmar Pediatrics; Farm Family Insurance Companies; First Care of Delmar; Klersy Building Corporation; Michael F. Lyons, DMD; Nigro Companies; Northeastern Dental Lab; and

Re/Max Premier. The next time that you visit one of these businesses, please thank them for supporting their community and for supporting diabetes research.

If you can't join us for the walk but would like to make a donation, you can mail your check (made payable to the Juvenile Diabetes Research Foundation) to Bethlehem Cares at 65 Boylston Drive, Delmar 12054. Thank you for helping us show that Bethlehem really is a caring community!

Cancer survivor reminds public of walk

Editor, The Spotlight:

When my sister died in 1993 of stage 4 ovarian cancer, less than two years after diagnosis, and when I was diagnosed in 1997 at stage 3, ovarian cancer was called The Silent Killer. I knew only two people who'd had ovarian cancer: my sister and Gilda Radner. Both died. I did not think my chances were very good of seeing my granddaughter graduate high school. She is now in her third year of high school, so I am hopeful.

Ovarian cancer is the deadliest gynecological cancer and the fourth-leading cancer killer of women in the U.S. More than 23,000 women will be diagnosed this year and more than 15,000 will die. Since there is no early detection test, 70 percent of cases are not diagnosed till stage 3 or 4, where survival rate is only 20 percent for five-year survival.

There have been a few high profile survivors such as Carol Channing, Patti Benson of the PGA and Congresswoman Rosa DeLauro. There are more famous women who have died of ovarian cancer — mothers of Angelina Jolie and Barack Obama, Coretta Scott King — whose photographs put other scientists onto the correct search for the DNA double helix.

When I retired from school library work in 2001, I hoped to make a difference, somehow making more people aware of this disease. I participate in a support group, write letters, talk to groups, and do interviews. I participate in Survivors Teaching Medical Students, sponsored by the Ovarian Cancer National Alliance. Groups of survivors tell their stories. Response to this form of education has been amazing.

The support group Caring Together has been so important in my survival. I have met many wonderful women, many of whom are no longer with us. We share information, we laugh and sometimes cry. No one else quite knows what the cancer experience is like, but a survivor does.

I am online a lot, finding information and participating in support groups. I do not know why I have survived and others have not. I have had ovarian surgery twice, chemotherapy three times and a diagnosis of stage 3 breast cancer with surgery, chemotherapy and radiation treatments. I continue to fight both battles. I have now survived almost 10 years. My anniversary of diagnosis is New Year's Eve. I celebrate doubly each year!

Early symptoms exist. They are bloating, pelvic or abdominal pain, difficulty eating or feeling full quickly and feeling a frequent or urgent need to urinate. These symptoms sound vague and may also apply to other non-threatening conditions. The key is that if any of these symptoms persist for two weeks or more, seek medical care. If you are ignored, seek another opinion.

If ovarian cancer is suspected, a gynecologic oncologist should perform the surgery.

September is ovarian cancer awareness month.

On Sunday, Sept. 16, at 9 a.m. at the Washington Park Lake House, Albany, the sixth Annual Teal Ribbon 5 K Run and 1 Mile Walk will be held. Sponsored by Caring Together Inc., proceeds will help provide ovarian cancer support, education and research funding. There will be ovarian cancer displays, activities for children and refreshments and raffles.

Day of race registration will be $20 and ages 10 and under will be $5. Race day registration will take place from 7:30-8:30 a.m.

Voorheesville students get late bell for school year

Construction wrap-up meant delayed start for district

BY ARCANGELA C. MELE
melea@Spotlightnews.com

While most elementary, middle and high school students were heading off to school last week, students in the Voorheesville school district got to sneak in a few more summer days and a weekend before returning to school on Monday, Sept. 10.

School district officials said they had planned for a slightly extended summer to make sure everything connected with the $4,714,000 capital reconstruction project was running smoothly before classes reconvened.

Though it was initially rumored that school was starting late because of safety concerns due to the removal of asbestos tile at the elementary school and in the middle school tennis courts, Superintendent Linda Langevin confirmed that the asbestos tile had been removed and replaced at the start of the summer and that there were absolutely no safety concerns causing a delay.

"The reason that we had planned to extend the summer was in order to ensure that the unit ventilators were delivered on time and installed properly for heating and plumbing," she said, referring to the large heating and air conditioning vents that typically line classroom floors. A major part of the capital renovation was the installation of a brand new heating and ventilation system at the elementary school, which Langevin said was completed successfully.

Sarita Winchell, business manager for the Voorheesville district, has been supervising the capital project, which will now continue after school hours and during next summer until its completion at the end of the summer of 2008. Winchell said in April, the Voorheesville school board made a conscious decision to start school late when it assessed the school calendar.

"We wanted to make sure we were going to be in the best shape we could be, since we knew the project was going to take extensive work," she said, adding that several of the floors at the elementary and middle school were ripped out, leaving more cleaning duties for the custodial staff.

"It gave us two more days for construction and a weekend for the safety committee to do a walk-through," she said.

The late start meant schedule rearranging for parents.

Laura Blow, a substitute teacher at the elementary school, has three children in the Voorheesville schools. Blow, whose husband, Tim, is on the school board, said that although she's glad the summer construction was completed safely, a lot of people throughout the community have not been happy, and bosses have been less than understanding about some parents not being able to return to work.

"Everyone else is back in school. It's been a long summer, and I'm looking forward to getting them back," Blow said, adding there were some projects she wasn't able to finish since her kids were still at home.

Blow's daughter, Rachel, a fourth grader, seemed much less anxious to return to school. Rachel said the extra vacation allowed her more time to do her favorite summer things, like "playing with my dogs and making things for them, going on the computer, and if I'm really bored, hanging around my mom a lot."

Despite the inconvenience the late start may have caused some parents, school officials said that residents were properly informed and given enough time to make the appropriate arrangements for their jobs and children. Both Langevin and Winchell said the new school dates were posted on the school's Web site and outside the school on the public information board, and informational packets were sent out to all parents in August.

Jim Coffin, vice president of the Voorheesville school board, said the board had several public meetings and extensive discussions about the capital project and a late school start. "This goes back to the spring and should have been no surprise," he said. "People bent over backwards to make sure the residents were informed, and the days were built into the schedule." Langevin said she is not sure why some parents may not have been prepared, and that communication is a top priority for the school district.

"One of our biggest goals is to improve parent communication. It just depends upon how busy people are in their lives," she said. "We thought we covered every angle possible, and we didn't have one child come to school early, so that tells me that the parents were properly informed."

Delmar Key Bank plans expansion

Four Corners location makes renovation a prime issue with planning board

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

The Delmar Key Bank at the Four Corners will undergo a renovation and expansion at its 370 Delaware Ave. site.

The Bethlehem planning board made a negative declaration regarding the state environmental quality review, which means it found no adverse environmental impact from the expansion, at the Tuesday, Sept. 4 meeting. The project now moves forward for review by the Albany County planning board.

Jonathan Woher, a planner with the Cincinnati-based firm McBride, Dake and Clarion, gave a presentation to the planning board on what the new bank will look like.

"What we are doing is adding 208 square feet of building space," said Woher.

The existing red metal roof will be replaced with a new shingle roof and a sign will be illuminated on the exterior of the building. Members of the planning board wanted to see improvements to the outside of the bank grounds because of its location in the center of Delmar.

"The project is very important to us because of its location and visibility along the Four Corners," said planning board chairman Parker Mathusa.

At the request of the planning board, Key Bank will also upgrade the landscaping outside of the building by planting several new trees and shrubs, along with replacing the old benches outside with new mahogany colored benches.

Key Bank is the third major business along Delaware Avenue that is either in the process of a redesign or has already completed renovation plans. CVS recently moved into a new building on Delaware Avenue, and the McDonald's in Delmar will undergo renovations within the next several months.

The board received an update on work being completed by the nine-member comprehensive plan oversight committee. Assistant Economic Development Director Michael Morelli reminded the board that the committee had been formed as part of the new town comprehensive plan, which was approved in 2005. The committee has been meeting since April to evaluate the progress of several recommendations that were a part of the town comprehensive plan.

"All nine tier-one recommendations are under various review and a number of tier-two recommendations have been moving along," said Morelli.

The 450-acre Vista Technology Park, the Slingerlands hamlet design concept along with the local waterfront revitalization plan and the Route 9W corridor study are all tier-one recommendations currently under way in Bethlehem.

"Much of the progress made has involved this board," said Morelli to the planning board members.

The comprehensive plan oversight committee report will be submitted to the town board later this month. The next meeting of the planning board is scheduled for Tuesday, Sept. 18.

tary school and continue major construction districtwide, along with trying to pass a budget.

"Getting schools ready for opening day this year proved to be a special challenge," said Lytle, referring to the many changes at the high school, including a new entrance, changes in the auditorium, and a new cafeteria. Work continued outside as the faculty walked inside the doors of the high school.

"When, literally, the dust settles from this project, you will conclude it was well worth the effort," said Lytle.

The student population at Bethlehem in 1987, Loomis' first year as superintendent, totaled 3,750. This year it is 5,200.

"The Bethlehem community has always expected top-quality education for a reasonable expenditure, and we deliver," Loomis said.

Loomis said the district has given his children a "great education."

"I have seen you accomplish extraordinary things with our students... inspiring their thinking, strengthening their character, touching their hearts," he said. "Because of you, BC is in good hands."

some of these same students are at the same school together. Bethlehem is in the process of redistricting, and several hundred students will be placed at the new Eagle Elementary School by the fall of 2008. The first meeting of the newly formed Bethlehem redistricting committee is scheduled for Monday, Sept. 17 and the school board is encouraging participation from parents.

"It is expected and encouraged for people to participate whether they are members of the committee or not," said school board president James Lytle.

Each elementary school's PTA will choose four representatives to serve on the redistricting committee. Principals and administration will also serve but not have a vote in the decision-making process. The committee's task is to define new boundaries and neighborhood districts to balance the school enrollment and to move the least number of district students from one school to another.

One parent at a recent school board meeting urged the board to mandate children attend their neighborhood elementary school that is less than one mile away.

"Redistricting criteria shouldn't bias any decisions in a particular direction," said Superintendent Les Loomis.

Clarksville Elementary School could be the most affected by redistricting because two-thirds of the student population that attends Clarksville has a Delmar address, according to Loomis.

State agriculture tour stops at Indian Ladder

By ARCANGELA C. MELE
melea@spotlightnews.com

When it comes to what's cool and happening in New York right now, you can forget clothes, hairstyles and celebrities, because local, farm-fresh foods are part of a trend that has a lot of people talking.

"Agriculture is very trendy right now, and we're happy about that," said Julie Suarez, director of relations at the New York Farm Bureau, a nongovernmental, volunteer organization financed and controlled by families who are looking to address economic and public policy issues in the agricultural industry.

Suarez and several other agriculture and environmental advocates, including several members from the state Department of Agriculture, attended the Farm Aid press event and tour at Indian Ladder Farms on Thursday, Sept. 6.

Farm Aid, a nonprofit organization that supports the maintenance and sustainability of farmland throughout the country, aims to raise awareness about the loss of family farms and the decline of agriculture. Started by recording artists John Mellencamp, Willie Nelson and Neil Young in 1985, the organization is known for putting on the country's longest-running benefit concert, accumulating high-profile followers like Dave Matthews, who joined the board of directors in 2001 and performs at the concert.

On Thursday, Sept. 6, before making its way to New York City's Randall's Island for the 2007 Homegrown Festival concert on Sunday, Farm Aid's Upstate-Downstate Food and Farm Caravan made a stop at Indian Ladder Farms as part of its state farm tour, which also included stops at farms in Ithaca, Rochester and the Hudson Valley area. The group picked up fresh food from Indian Ladder and the other farms along the way to feed the hundreds of artists and crew at this year's festival. Farm Aid campaign director Mark Smith said the caravan visited about 14 farms statewide, including poultry farms, hog farms and dairy and beef farms.

"We wanted to make sure those workers get to experience the wonders and pleasures of eating fresh foods," he said.

Indian Ladder Farms President Peter Ten Eyck, third from right, holds an apple Thursday, Sept. 6, as others bite into one at Indian Ladder Farms. Arcangela Mele/Spotlight

Key speakers at the Indian Ladder Farms press event included state Agricultural Commissioner Patrick Hooker, City Harvest Director of Program Development and Policy Kate Mackenzi, and Indian Ladder Farms President Peter Ten Eyck.

The press event was followed by a tour of Indian Ladder Farms, where the commissioner got to pick the season's most-anticipated apple, the Honey Crisp, and sample a lunch buffet featuring several dishes made with all locally grown ingredients donated from farms in the area.

Also at the event, Hooker announced that, for the first time, towns and cities in the state will be able to apply for farmland protection planning grants. Previously, only counties were eligible, but with the new legislation, interested municipalities that are located within a county that has an agricultural and farmland protection board can apply for grants up to $25,000, or 75 percent of the cost of developing a local protection plan.

According to a press release sent out by the state Department of Agriculture, the purpose of the grant program is to provide an economic incentive to municipalities to develop local agricultural and farmland protection plans that will maintain the economic viability of the state's agricultural industry and its supporting land base, and to protect the environmental and landscape preservation values associated with agriculture.

"One of the most important duties granted by the legislature to a municipal government is the authority to undertake comprehensive planning and to regulate land use," Hooker said. "Local government can play a vital role in farmland protection by creating a supportive business environment for agriculture by ensuring that comprehensive plans and land-use regulations contain clear language and explicit policies that are supportive of the local agriculture industry."

Hooker, who has been commissioner for six months, has kept strong ties with Indian Ladder Farms, supporting its mission to educate the public about the economic and nutritional benefits of purchasing organic, locally grown produce. Ten Eyck, like many local food advocates, said he believes that Americans are relying too much on food products that are shipped from thousands of miles away before making it into grocery stores.

"The agenda is now pretty much that Americans feed themselves by waving money in the air, and somebody comes from four corners of the world and gives them something to eat," he said, referring to imported foods. At the event, advocates said that during times of a national food crisis, such as the E. coli spinach scare of last year, people should have their own food sources to fall back on. A good way to keep local agriculture thriving is if more people shop at farmers markets and organic food stores, and continue to grow their own food. Hooker said the Municipal Farmland Protection planning grant program should be a big help when it comes to keeping local farms in business.

"What we see out there is communities wanting to do the right thing for agriculture, but they don't have the staff of 50 people behind them. Our department is a resource for them when they make that decision," he said. For information on local farmers markets go to www.nyfarmersmarket.com. The Regional Farm and Food Bank Web site also lists area farms and more at www.farmandfood.org.

Beginning, Wednesday, Sept. 12, you can click on a survey button on the VPL Web site at www.voorheesvillelibrary.org that will lead you through a series of questions about your use (or non-use) of the library and your feelings about it. It won't take long to complete the survey, and it will be extremely helpful as we consider what's in the library's future.

There will be a place on the survey for you to comment and/or express your interest in attending a focus group meeting to discuss options and make suggestions. Dates for the focus meetings will be announced shortly.

Now, before you protest that you do not have Internet access at home or can't use a computer, you may, of course, come to VPL to use a computer and find someone to assist you. Hard copies of the survey will be available on request at the library circulation desk. All responses can be anonymous if you choose. We hope every single one of you will participate. We need your thoughts in order to guide the library in the direction that the community wants it to go.

One of the ways that VPL responds to the community is by scheduling requested programs such as this one.

Author Elizabeth Brundage is coming to VPL to lead a workshop for aspiring writers. Ever since her appearance here in June, many of you have been asking for a workshop and we are happy to say it is happening on Saturday, Oct. 6.

Participants are invited to arrive at noon with a bag lunch for a short get-to-know-you session before the writing starts. Brundage will discuss the writing process and lead some writing exercises. Bring writing materials and be prepared to get some good writing done. The program ends at 3 p.m. The library will provide beverages. The class size is limited, so sign up immediately! You can call the library or email voorefq@uhls.lib.ny.us. There may be a waiting list, so please cancel if you are registered and something prevents you from attending.

If you are a writer, or hope to be one, VPL has a prose writing support group which will have its first fall session on Thursday, Sept. 20 at 6:30 p.m. in the director's office. Bring a short sample of your writing to share with the group and talk about plans for the upcoming meetings. The group, called Lifelines, meets on the third Thursday of the month and welcomes new participants.

Business in the Spotlight

It's September, fall back into the work mode

It's hard to believe that another summer is almost in the books.

Fall is a time of change, whether it means back to school or back to business, or back to the business of business. During the last great days of summer, we all tend to rest on our laurels, enjoy those last hot relaxing days to laze around and usually gripe about how fast the season has gone.

The horses at Saratoga left the starting gate for another year, the tourists have returned home, the kids are back at school and we turn our thoughts to things of a more serious nature. Local elections are on the horizon, and businesses are gearing up for the all-important fourth quarter when profits will be made or lost. It is time to, as we were told in school, "buckle down, put the shoulder to the grindstone and get to work."

Now is the time to revisit those clients who said no when you called on them throughout the year. For retailers, this is the time for them to be planning for year-end. Clients who work on a calendar cycle will begin planning for 2008 soon ... you need to be in front of them with your product and the reasons why it is important for them to include you in their plans. Laying the groundwork for the future is what you should have been doing all along. Now is the time to cash in!

Here's what's happening in the Capital District business community.

Sunmark Member Investment Services has named Robert Mahoney financial consultant to develop and perform personal consumer and commercial investment and insurance services ... well-known media guru Ned Spain will be tickling the ivories at Proctor's Theatre in Schenectady on Tuesday, Sept. 18, at a free noontime concert played on "Goldie," the mighty Wurlitzer organ, as part of the MVP Gold Organ Concert Series ... Weichert Realtors adds Ilva

Rojas to its roster of residential sales specialists in its Clifton Park office ... Java Jazz Café and Gallery at Main Square, Delaware Avenue in Delmar, will display the photographic works of area professional photographer Sue Gersten through the end of the month ... Cohoes Music Hall offers a double exposure of fun with the season opening of "Chicago" and a wonderful exhibit of black-and-white and color photography by Reid Elem ... around The Spotlight, we are pleased to welcome Meta Champion, business manager; Arcangela Mele, Guilderland reporter; and Melissa Andros, graphic designer.

And that just about clears my desk for the next few weeks. In the meanwhile, if you have anything you'd like to see in the column, feel free to e-mail me at kellertw@spotlightnews.com or catch my blog on the Spotlight's corner of the Internet, www.spotlightnews.com. We can't guarantee they will all get in, but we'll give it our best shot.

On a personal note, I was more than overwhelmed by the response to my last column in terms of phone calls, e-mails and snail mail... thank you all for caring and sharing.

Best wishes for a happy, sweet and healthy New Year to all of our Jewish friends and customers.

Friends president wins state award

We've just learned that David Cooper, president of our library Friends, has been selected to receive the New York Library Association's 2007 Daniel W. Casey Advocacy Award.

Cooper was nominated by Jeanne Biggins, the library's assistant director and liaison to the Friends. NYLA received nominations from city, town and rural libraries across the state.

Cooper has served nine years on the Friends board and has held the office of president since 2004. He has initiated and steered many innovations during his tenure, among them the Family Fun Festival in 2005 and the annual Friends on the Green family picnic, now in its fifth year. Under his leadership, the Friends have also sponsored the annual Riverway Storytelling Festival and renewed the Friends annual scholarship program for high school seniors.

Other accomplishments include parenting programs, expanded fundraising initiatives and conversation tables for storytime families.

Cooper's advocacy for libraries extended beyond Bethlehem to communities ravaged by floods in 2006, when he proposed a generous contribution to the New York Library Association's disaster relief fund.

NYLA president Rachel Baum, who also sits on our board of trustees, expressed her delight: "I am so impressed by David's enthusiasm and commitment to the Friends. He never seems to run out of ideas or the energy to put them into action."

Biggins' nomination cited Cooper's dedication and drive: "He fully understands the advocacy and support role of the Friends, and continually finds ways to focus the attention of the community on the library and its mission. His record of achievement demonstrates what can be accomplished through one individual's vision and positive attitude. David is an ideal model for all library advocates."

In her confirmation letter, Empire Friends Roundtable president Susan Swanton of NYLA wrote: "Mr. Cooper deserves this award for his innovative proposals, personal commitment and family/community oriented activities. His endeavors made the community aware of the library and provided services for parents, children and grandparents."

The award will be presented next month at the 2007 NYLA conference in Buffalo. Cooper's name will be added to a winners' plaque, which will be on display at our library for a year. Congratulations, David!

Varied tools help officers keep tabs on sex offenders

Police use maps and online resources to check who is in compliance with law

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parker@spotlightnews.com

In a recent screen of the hundreds of convicted sex offenders living in Albany County, eight were cited for not complying with a law that they can't live within 1,000 feet of areas frequented by children.

As many as 400 convicted sex offenders are believed to live in Albany County, according to authorities. After the Albany County Legislature last year passed the 1,000-foot buffer requirement, sex offenders in violation of the law were told to move.

A report released Wednesday, Sept. 5 by the county district attorney showed that, of the 30 who were told to relocate, only eight offenders, six living in the city of Albany and two in Cohoes and Watervliet, failed to comply.

"They looked at every sex offender in the county. Thirty were living within 1,000 feet of school zones or childcare facilities," said Heather Orth, spokeswoman for the District Attorney's office.

Authorities conducted the screenings of the offenders two months ago, she said. They were given 60 days to relocate.

The screen was part of a multi-agency push to bring the offenders into compliance.

In some cases, the unfunded mandate has required some police agencies, already stretched thin financially, to assign investigators and employ new methods to enforce the law.

"We have maps that basically show where these boundaries are. We Google Earth it and physically go out and check to make sure that they are not in violation of the law," said Colonie Police Chief Steven Heider.

The maps, which were made through the Albany County Sheriff's Department, break down each town, city and village in the county. Each registered childcare facility and school is identified, and a 1,000-foot red circle, drawn to scale, surrounds them. The city of Albany has the highest density of sex offenders, as well as schools and childcare facilities, said Orth.

A Colonie investigator has been assigned to make use of the free online tool and cross-reference it with the county map, said Heider. The program allows investigators to look up addresses of registered offenders. They use a click-and-drag tool that measures in feet the distance between two areas.

If the offenders falls within that circle, they're out, said Heider.

Although new technology and manpower is being used to keep track of registered offenders, that doesn't mean the practice was non-existent before, Heider said.

In fact, Colonie has been diligent in keeping tabs on its it offenders, especially with sensitive areas like the Central Avenue corridor, where a handful of motels contract with County Social Services to house post-release offenders.

Colonie has always had a multifaceted approach to informing the public of 30 to 40 sex offenders living in town at a given time. The police compile their own lists and update the information regularly to send out to schools and residents. The same information is available on the department's Web site as well.

But knowing where the offenders are is just one tool to keep people safe from predators, said Heider.

Heider noted that many registered offenders were charged for attacks on adults, not children. He also pointed to recent arrests in the town over the past five years that include people in positions of authority, such as teachers and coaches.

Colonie recently arrested Alexander A. Oouch, 24, a cheerleading coach at X-Factor's All Stars Cheer and Dance Gym in Colonie. Images on his cell phone led to his arrest for allegedly engaging in sex with a 14-year-old student he had privately instructed.

Sex offenders aren't always hiding in the shadows.

"It is not the do-all-to-end-all to make you safe among sex offenders. It's one tool," Heider said.

People still need to take a personal interest in their safety and their families' safety, he said. Know your surroundings, and educate your children and know where they are and what they are doing, Heider said.

MVP Gold Living Well programs resume next month for seniors

The popular MVP Gold Living Well programs, presented by SSA and MVP Gold, are scheduled to resume in October.

These free classes are open to anyone and offer the best in fitness geared especially to older adults. These classes are designed to help seniors increase strength, flexibility and mobility in a safe and senior-friendly environment. The fall session begins Tuesday, Oct. 9, and runs until Tuesday, Dec. 18. Register for a class now by calling 455-3325.

Instructor Kristine Lindahl will teach two classes this fall at the Louise Corning Center, 25 Delaware Ave., Albany:

• MVP Gold Moves, Tuesdays, 11 a.m. to noon: A low-impact aerobic workout followed by strength training using stretchy tubes, balls for dexterity and stretching exercises.

• MVP Gold Moves on the Ball, Thursdays, noon to 1 p.m.: A movement-oriented class using large stability balls in a low impact aerobic workout followed by balance, strength and stretching exercises.

Lindahl will also teach one class each week at Westview Senior Center, 680 Central Ave., Albany:

• MVP Gold Chair Moves, Tuesdays, 9:30 to 10:15 a.m.: A chair-based movement class to help you stay mobile and strong. You'll do exercises for upper and lower limbs to a variety of musical moods and rhythms.

From left, Riley, 3, who was turned in because of his high energy level, was just adopted; Molly, 12, was turned into rescue at age 5 because her owners no longer had time for her; and Ben, 3, was turned into a kill shelter at 11 months old because the owner could not pay the vet bills.

Dog walk to help raise money for canines in need

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parker@spotlightnews.com

Rain or shine, canine enthusiasts have planned a stroll at the Crossings of Colonie the first day of autumn, Sunday, Sept. 23.

The Golden Retriever Rescue Operated with Love Statewide (GRROWLS) and Dogs in Need Everywhere (DINE) have planned the dog walk to support abandoned, mistreated and lost dogs of the Capital District.

GRROWLS, a statewide organization that operates out of Rochester, Syracuse, Buffalo and Albany, has chosen the Albany-Shaker Road park as the site of its first fundraiser walk. The hope is to kick off an annual walk to benefit a variety of animal welfare organizations, say event planners.

"Once we get our feet wet, we are hoping we can do it all over the state," said Terryann "T.A." Lasinski, Delmar resident and the fundraiser coordinator for the Albany chapter of GRROWLS. "We are trying to raise money to pay all the vet bills."

The group has teamed up with DINE for the fall walk as part of a continuing effort to get all rescue groups on the same page. Shelters are crowded and animal advocates are overworked and lack the funding to tackle many of the problems facing animal populations.

GRROWLS set out years ago to find golden retrievers good homes, Lasinski said. But the waiting lists are long and there are a number of dogs, either sick or too old, that some homes won't take in. Many volunteers, like Lasinski, are exhausting what little resources they have to keep up the fight, and in some cases, they are dipping into their own pockets.

That's where DINE comes in.

Kathleen Collar of Glenville didn't know how she wanted to help animals in need. More so, she didn't know how far her countless contributions to local shelters and animal groups went to care for animals. She decided to help those who help animals and founded DINE.

"It's a support system for shelters. This is a way I can assist the dogs directly," she said.

Last year DINE answered GRROWLS call for chew toys for the dogs currently waiting a new home. They have since delivered dog beds to Saratoga County Shelter and Montgomery County SPCA.

All of it has been made possible through can drives and small donations, said Collar.

GRROWLS included DINE in its first fundraiser to help the organization.

The Go 4 the GOLDens Dog Walk for Rescue will begin at 11:15 a.m., Sunday, Sept. 23. Lunch and prizes will be available. All breeds of dogs are welcome.

To register visit go4golddogwalk@nycap.rr.com or call (877) 477-6957 and leave a message. Registrants should leave their names, dog's name, phone number and shirt size.

IN BRIEF

Academic talent search seeks kids

Now through Dec. 1, families can enroll their gifted children in the annual nationwide academic talent search offered by the Johns Hopkins University Center for Talented Youth.

Students who sign up take "above grade-level" tests that show their mathematical and verbal abilities. Students in seventh and eighth grade take the SAT or ACT, the same tests taken by college-bound juniors and seniors. Students in second to sixth grades take the SCAT, which is similar to the SAT and ACT but scaled for younger students. Students take the test in or near their hometowns.

Test results show a student's performance both individually and compared to tens of thousands of other bright young people nationwide. Results can qualify students for CTY's summer and online courses for highly gifted children.

The enrollment fee is $35. Financial aid is available. Students may contact their school guidance counselors for an application or register online at www.cty.jhu.edu.

For information, call 410-735-6278, or e-mail ctyinfo@jhu.edu.

Town justice part of new law firm

Local attorneys and town and village judges Gregory G. Harris, Michael C. Conway and Ryan T. Donovan have formed the law firm Harris, Conway & Donovan, PLLC, focusing on personal injury, commercial litigation, labor and employment, matrimonial and real estate law.

Formerly Harris & Conway, PLLC, attorneys Harris and Conway sought out Donovan, a litigator, to expand their offered services and grow an already successful legal practice. Each of the partners is a town or village judge. Conway serves in Nassau; Harris is acting village justice in Nassau; and Donovan is town justice in Bethlehem.

"We've been doing very well but wanted to find the right partner to help grow our business, and we found that person in Ryan Donovan," said Harris, "Michael and I are very excited about the diverse experience and excellent reputation that Ryan brings to the firm."

"We weren't looking for another judge; it just worked out that way," said Conway. "We were looking for someone with the right mix of experience, interests and skills, as well as someone with passion and energy. Ryan is the type of attorney clients appreciate because he always goes above and beyond."

Harris and Conway have also been appointed to sit as acting city court judges in Albany, Rensselaer and Troy. Harris has also been a Chapter 7 Bankruptcy Trustee for the U.S. Bankruptcy Court of the Northern District of New York for 19 years.

"I'm so pleased to be teaming up with Greg and Mike to form what we feel will be a different kind of law firm," said Donovan. "We not only have over 45 years of combined legal experience — both in front of and behind the bench — but we also share a common philosophy that personal attention and expanded services are what best serves our clients with their legal representation."

In addition to serving as a town judge, Donovan was previously worked with two other firms. He has argued cases in front federal and state courts. He is a graduate of Albany Law and serves on the Albany Law School Alumni Association Executive Board.

Forum at Siena to examine gifted education

Advocates say state doesn't do enough to challenge some students

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parker@spotlightnews.com

Local chapters of Advocacy for Gifted and Talented Education (AGATE) in New York are holding an open panel at Siena College on Thursday, Sept. 27.

Parents and students, home-schooled and from area private and public schools, are taking the opportunity to push for education that is tailored to gifted students. They are reaching out to Siena students enrolled in teaching programs, in the hope that gifted students are no longer pushed aside in order to keep to the curriculum norm.

"It is often an underserved population in public schools. This (forum) will help our students learn how to work with gifted students," said Kenneth Paulli, chairman of Siena's Education Department.

Paulli instructed all students enrolled in the program that they must attend the panel, he said. The goal of the education program has been to train college students to plan for and teach a range of students, including the gifted student population. Providing these students with a fulfilling education can be difficult in public and private schools, he said.

AGATE and its local chapters, Shenendehowa Advocates for Gifted Education (SAGE) and Scotia Parents Advocating for Challenging Education (SPACE), have been pushing for gifted education practices for more than 30 years. In the past, local, state and federal organizations met in hotels around the state and discussed the challenges in educating America's brightest.

However, in recent years the push has been toward employing open forums, like that planned for Siena, to actively engage future educators about what can be done to provide intellectually for the growing population, said SAGE President, Mary-Ellen Seitelman.

"Unfortunately it's not a good situation for gifted kids. There is an increase in home schooling. The education system has not addressed their needs," said Seitelman. "There is no mandate for gifted education in New York. We are advocating for appropriate education for gifted children."

More than 30 states in the country currently have programs to help provide an adequate learning environment for gifted students, Seitelman said. In New York, and elsewhere, advocacy for the gifted is seen as educational elitism, she said.

The gifted are assimilated into the "lock-step" educational regimen and their needs are not met. The students are often inappropriately labeled or medicated because they become bored and lash out when underserved, she said. There are even some school districts that prohibit the acceleration of the gifted, she added.

"Is it ADD (attention deficit disorder) or is it they are so bright they are bored out of their minds? Why give them Ritalin when you can change their environment?" Seitelman said.

The panel discussion will examine how some gifted children may be out-of-stage intellectually and socially and out-of-sync psychologically from their classmates. Area middle and high school students will speak about how current educational models do or don't meet their educational needs. An educational therapist will also be on hand to discuss how teachers, parents and counselors can better understand and serve the gifted, said Seitelman.

Siena staff is hoping that the panel, that has been held at Long Island and Buffalo colleges in the past, will help generate some local interest in the education of gifted students.

The program is free of charge and will begin at 7 p.m. in Room 202 in the Roger Bacon Building on campus.

Local cinemas offer ambience at low cost

Small theaters offer an old-fashioned movie-going experience

By JENNIFER FARNSWORTH
news@spotlightnews.com

The first time Amy Goyette, who grew up in Clifton Park, saw a movie at Scotia Cinemas was when she joined her then-fiancé, Jon, for the movie "The Notebook." Before that, Goyette had not even known this village gem existed in downtown Scotia. She had always watched films at local malls on screens owned by national chains. Seeing her first movie at the quaint, privately owned village theater was an experience that Goyette said felt like a "night at the movies."

"There was something about walking into the theater from the downtown atmosphere as opposed to coming in from a crowded mall. The red velvet decor and the feel of an old-time theater was such a fun experience that is has kept me coming back for more," said Goyette.

Scotia Cinemas, like other locally owned private theaters, offers a "clean and cozy" environment that owner Richard Adams has worked hard to preserve since he bought the theater in December 1987. Adams said the theater has undergone extensive renovations but has still maintained its sense of charm and, most important, its affordable prices.

"We bring an intimate, old-fashioned ambience coupled with modern amenities such as an awesome Dolby Digital sound system. The theater offers a sense of comfort to people because it's old and familiar," said Adams.

Like many small theaters, the movies at Scotia Cinemas run about two to three months behind their opening date. This is the reason it is able to offer prices around $3 and $4. At the concession stand, the prices also tend to be lower than those in a major chain.

"You can come down here during almost any matinee and see children and parents lined up. It's a great way for parents to be able to take out their families and to be able to afford it," said

Adams.

Like Scotia Cinemas, the Spectrum 8 on Delaware Avenue in Albany offers that "night out at the movies" feel.

The owners of Spectrum 8 also have worked hard to preserve that authentic feel, and the prices are a bargain compared to many chain theaters charging more than $10 a film. The main difference between the Spectrum and a place like Scotia Cinemas is that the films at the Spectrum are new releases. While the movie prices are slightly higher than those in Scotia, The Spectrum provides an alternative for those who want to see movies that do not typically get big-cinema play.

"We are committed to showing films that are provocative, entertaining and thought-provoking. By showing the best first-run independent films, foreign and Hollywood films, our theater has differentiated itself from the mall movie experience," said co-owner Annette Nanes.

Nanes said one way that the Spectrum is unique to the Capital District is that viewers feel like they are watching a film in a theater that could double as an art museum. The Art Deco embellishments makes the theater an important part of Albany's fine arts scene. There is an art gallery and slide shows from local artists play before the movies. The theater also hosts special events that support the works of independent filmmakers.

The theater has four owners, Nanes, her husband, Scott Meyer, and Keith and Sugi Picard.

Nanes said the two couples purchased the then-rundown theater in 1980 and turned it into an eight-screen building that can seat 900 people.

Keith Picard said that despite their growth, they have remained true to keeping that neighborhood-friendly, community-minded theater that the two couples originally set out to create.

"We believe in independent theaters. We have not lost that personal touch," said Picard.

Another place to capture that authentic Hollywood-type movie experience is at Proctor's The-Coming on the entertainment scene in the late '40s, drive-in theaters reached their peak in the mid- to late-1950s before indoor multiplexes and VCRs became commonplace.

With about 4,000 in existence across the United States, the drive-in became associated with cheap family entertainment. It was not unusual for playgrounds to be constructed on site with children playing before and throughout the movies. Most theaters offered a concession stand with reasonably priced snacks and drinks. Moviegoers paid a minimal admission price, often a per-car price, and pulled up next to a pole with a speaker.

Owners of today's drive-ins and their patrons would say that most of those things haven't changed in the past 50 years. A zero has dropped off the total number of theaters, though, with only about 400 still operating across the country today.

In addition to lifestyle and technology changes that caused a drop in patrons, it turned out that many theater owners found themselves sitting on valuable land that developers would fight over and pay top dollar for.

"There are a lot of Wal-Marts sitting on top of old drive-ins," said Ed Caro, a co-owner of the Malta Drive-In.

Opened in 1949, the Malta Drive-In is one of the oldest around.

"There is still a place for drive-in theaters," said Caro.

Caro and his brother, Tom, can host up to 500 cars and will be building a second screen for next season.

Families and friends enjoy the outdoors while waiting for a double feature at the Jericho Drive-In in Glenmont.

In 2003, Darci and Bill Wemple, already owners of the El Rancho Drive-In in Palatine Bridge, built from the ground up a new double-screen drive-in, Ozone 29, in Broadalbin.

Caro said the movie is just half the experience of a drive-in. The bulk of the business tends to be family movies, he said.

Parents find numerous advantages to taking in a movie at the drive-in theater. Children often have trouble sitting still and can get a little noisy. Many drive-in theaters have playgrounds, an abundance of space to run, and allow people to sit on the hood of their cars or in lawn chairs nearby. Other parents place their kids in pajamas and tuck them into the backseat with their blankets and bears. The kids fall asleep and their parents enjoy "date night" without the additional cost of paying for a babysitter.

The Jericho Drive-In in Selkirk recently added an ice cream stand to attract patrons.

The atmosphere also serves groups of people well. In traditional, indoor theaters, talking is prohibited and a nuisance to others. At the drive-in, groups of neighbors or friends can meet and catch up with one another while enjoying the movie. For people who would prefer to have Rover join them for the movie, pets are generally welcomed.

"It's a cross between going to the theater and having a family picnic," said Caro. "People want leisure-time experiences."

Change in lifestyle may have contributed to the decline in drive-ins, but it may also be the reason the drive-ins are enjoying a resurgence in popularity. People are longing for the good old days when life was a little simpler. Technology continues to advance and most drive-ins have kept up with it. Most have done away with the old speaker boxes and now use a low-powered FM signal. Other improvements include no gaps in the movie due to new equipment, which does not require changing reels. Still to come, and with a hefty price tag, is the biggest technological leap drive-ins have seen - going digital.

"Right now, the estimate is about $100,000 per screen to convert the system to digital," said Caro.

Owners of drive-in movie theaters have banded together and formed a membership organization known as The United Drive In Theatre Owners Association, which is dedicated to promoting drive-ins, keeping them viable and educating the public about them. For more information about the history of drive-ins and links to local drive-in Web sites check out www.driveintheater.com and www.driveinmovie.com.

Memorial service honors 'noble gesture'

Albany Medical College lays to rest remains of bodies donated to science

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parker@spotlightnews.com

Husbands, wives, fathers, mothers, friends and family gathered under the shade of massive hemlock trees Friday, Sept. 7 at Albany Rural Cemetery to remember their loved ones who donated their bodies to science.

Albany Medical College faculty and staff held the memorial in Menands to remember the 247 people that donated their remains to the college. Faculty of the college's Anatomical Gift Program and the medical students that learned through the selfless acts personally thanked loved ones who came from as far away as Connecticut.

Their remains were buried in a single casket in the cemetery's east end. Others were buried in Catholic ceremonies at neighboring St. Agnes Cemetery.

"Those who gave this gift will most assuredly extend the lives of people they were never able to meet," said the Rev. Rick Behan, senior resident of pastoral care at Albany Medical Center. And although the donors were all individuals who probably never knew one another and had little in common, "they were very different people who came together in one act."

The college's class of 2010 spoke to the merits of the donors' ultimate gift to the college and science. They spoke of them fondly and read off each name as family, friends and loved ones place white carnations upon their final resting place.

"They have not only given themselves for our benefit but to the benefit of all our future patients," said medical student Aaron Provisor. "I cannot think of a more noble gesture than the gift of one's self."

Anatomy cannot be taught in two dimensions, he said during the service. The donors' gifts allowed for comprehensive study of the field and the ability to discover the workings of a human's intricate design.

Anna Etherton, of Gloversville, donated the body of her husband, Alexander, after he died of prostate cancer earlier this year at the age of 85.

"He wanted to do this, and one of my sons and I are planning to do the same," said Etherton. "We have six children, and they weren't all happy about this decision, but something good should come of a death. I'm comforted that students can learn this way; maybe it will help other people with the disease."

Albany Medical College is among a short list of medical colleges that holds graveside services for those who make anatomical gifts, according to the college.

Last week's ceremony was a thank you to the families that enabled medical students, residents, physicians assistants, physical therapists and students of related fields to understand the structure of the human body through dissection.

Cari Scribner contributed to this report.

Jennifer Camorosi, 33, of Waterford, a first-year physician's assistant student at Albany Medical College, walks to place a flower on the casket containing the remains of more than 200 people who donated their bodies to the college for anatomical studies. Camorosi placed a flower in memory of donor Rose LaPlante.

Fresh Air offers taste of life in the slow lane

Upstate families invite city kids to take it easy over the summer

By JACKIE SHER
news@spotlightnews.com

During the summer months, New York City is a hot and smoggy spot. For kids living in some of the city's toughest neighborhoods, there's a nonprofit organization called the Fresh Air Fund, which provides free summer vacations for kids in rural and suburban communities and at their five Upstate New York summer camps.

"I always look forward to it — I go, 'Oh! I can't wait until I go Upstate,'" says Enrique Cruz, a 10th grader from the Bronx, who is one of millions of kids who have participated in the Fresh Air fund.

He's been spending time in Niskayuna with the Citriniti family (Jacqueline, her husband, Tom, and their son, Luke) for the past five summers.

Host families and Fresh Air Fund children sometimes lead widely divergent lifestyles, and their shared process of adjustment isn't always easy.

"We were told that the kids aren't used to going to bed really early. They go to bed late and get up late," said Jacqueline Citriniti, Cruz's host mother. She was informed during a lengthy interview process by the Fresh Air Fund (they go to the prospective family's home to make sure they'll be a good match) that there would be differences between her family's habits and Enrique's, and that it would take a little while for them to get used to each other.

"Physical activity is a big issue. Their sleep cycles are different, what they [Luke and Enrique] eat is different. It was tough and is still tough," Citriniti said.

Each summer, the Citrinitis try to expose Enrique to things he wouldn't be exposed to at home in the Bronx.

"They showed me a lot of great things that I hadn't learned," said Cruz.

Luke Citriniti, a senior in high school, emphasized the importance of going to college and getting a good education.

"I was very fortunate to have a really great family take me in ... they were absolutely wonderful. They opened their home and gave me an opportunity to experience things that I would otherwise not have had the opportunity to do."

Francisco Calderon

"I want to go to college and my friends, Jackie and the family, are helping me," says Cruz.

The Citrinitis are happy to encourage Cruz.

"He said, 'I want to live up here where there are no sidewalks and nice houses,' and I said, 'Well, you have to go to school first,'" said Citriniti.

This summer Cruz and the Citrinitis also visited Schenectady County District Attorney Francisco Calderon, a former Fresh Air Fund participant.

Enrique had expressed interest in becoming a lawyer.

"I talked to him about all the different opportunities that are available to him," said Calderon. He also spoke of his own experiences with the Fresh Air program.

"I was very fortunate to have a really great family take me in ... they were absolutely wonderful," said Calderon. "They opened their home and gave me an opportunity to experience things that I would otherwise not have had the opportunity to do."

Calderon fondly remembered his upstate experience.

"They took me camping, I went swimming, I went to the lake, I participated in local baseball leagues. They had a lot of property, so it gave me opportunity to run around. I had my summer brother — I had someone there who was my age. We were able to play all day," said Calderon.

It also gives kids the opportunity to have a few days or a few weeks without all of the pressures of home.

In Enrique's home in the Bronx, he lives with his grandmother, his older siblings, and two younger siblings. This past summer he had to take on more responsibility than most average 15-year-olds. For example, he had to get up at 5 a.m. every day to bring his sister to a train to go to a school for gifted children.

"This time he said, 'I'm really tired of everybody relying on me,'" said Citriniti.

When Cruz and the thousands of other children who participate in the Fresh Air Fund visit their host families or go to one of the five summer camps during the warmer months, they're able to truly take in everything that summer has to offer, from swimming and hiking to site-seeing — they get a real opportunity to see what lies outside of New York City. Kids are able to relax and enjoy themselves, ranging from periods of one week to an entire summer.

For information on The Fresh Air Fund, to make a donation, volunteer or become a host, visit the Web site at www.freshair.org, or call (800) 367-0003.

Food and family go hand-in-hand

Web site offers tips on bringing everyone to the table

As Halloween decorations hit the stores, calendars fill up with school activities and class parties. In between running to the store to buy ingredients for the class treats and finding the perfect costumes, it can be tough to spend time with the whole family.

Gathering at the dinner table can benefit more than kids' stomachs. A 2006 study by The National Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse at Columbia University found that children who eat dinner with their families five or more times a week are more likely, across the board, to have higher grades in school. The trend transcends differences in gender, family structure and socioeconomic level.

What makes family dinners so important to success, in school and elsewhere?

"The communication that occurs during family dinners is critical in building a relationship with your children and to understanding the world in which they live," says Joseph A. Califano Jr., chairman and president of The National Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse at Columbia University and a former U.S. Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare. "Making the commitment to have dinner as a family on a regular basis can influence your kids' lives more than anything else you do."

The benefits of eating dinner as a family are clear – but what about making time for a family meal among sports and school schedules, after-school plays and your own busy job? One company – KFC – is setting the table for success with www.bringbackdinner.com, a comprehensive online resource designed by moms, for moms, to help families connect more around the dinner table. The site features fun and accessible advice on a variety of dinner-related issues, from mealtime manners and etiquette to tips on budgeting at the grocery store.

Julienne Smith, founder and author of "Food For Talk" and a member of KFC's Moms Matter! advisory board, is a contributor to the site.

"I'm a mom myself, and I know from experience that families are starved for quality time," Smith says. "Meals are a great – and often overlooked – occasion for the entire family to decompress and connect on a more intimate level. Bringbackdinner.com literally puts it all out there, with great tips that can take the work out of the family dinner and a fun online community that will keep moms coming back for more."

Smith's "Food For Talk" is an actual recipe box of conversation starters specifically designed to promote family bonding and togetherness, based on this "professional mom's" experiences with her own children. A few examples include:

- Would you rather have a lot of acquaintances or one close friend? Why?
- Share one thing you are most grateful for today.
- If you could eat dinner as a family anywhere you wanted, where would it be and why?

For information on "Food For Talk," The National Center on Addiction and Substance Abuse at Columbia University and more tips on successful family dinners, visit www.bringbackdinner.com.

Tips to overcome back-to-school blues

A routine and organization can help kids stay on top of stress

BY LAURA M. CONNELL

Summertime has come and gone again. Only a few short weeks ago, we were carting our children back and forth to summer camp, the pool, fun parks, and other family outings. Hopefully, some parents were even able to relax a little!

It's time to buckle down once more for another school year. Back-to-school time can be very exciting for students (and parents), but can also cause children to feel quite anxious.

Here are some tips to help with the transition from the dog days of summer to a productive, enjoyable school schedule:

- Get into a routine. Usually meal- and bedtimes are more relaxed during the summer. When school starts, make sure that children are going to bed at a reasonable hour and waking up in the morning with enough time to eat breakfast and get ready. Have a set time and place for children to do their homework each day after school to cut down on "forgetting" or staying up too late. Providing a healthy snack beforehand helps children concentrate and focus.

- Organize. Being organized is a huge time saver, especially when everyone is rushed in the morning. For example, morning stress can be minimized if clothes are put out and lunches are packed the night before.

- Stay connected. It is important to communicate with your child's teachers. Know who they are and how you can contact them if you have a question or concern. Also, stay connected with your children. Take a look at their homework assignments and check to make sure they're done, especially for younger children. Even teenagers need their parents to stay connected (although they may try to have us believe otherwise). Take an interest in what they are doing in school.

Some students may still experience anxiety despite their parents' best efforts to prepare them for a positive school experience. If your child expresses upset feelings, is anxious about returning to school, or exhibits any symptoms (i.e. physical complaints that are not otherwise explained, excessive worry or nervousness, refusal to go to school) it is important to find out what is causing the problem so appropriate action can be taken.

Below are just a few common causes of anxiety in children:

- Having parents who are experiencing difficulties in their relationship or are in the process of separation or divorce.
- Being bullied at school (this is now a problem on the Internet as well).
- Struggling academically with no supports.
- Dealing with personal or family illness.
- Moving to a new home/town/school district.
- Starting middle school or high school.

Talk to your child about his or her concerns. It can be beneficial to speak to teachers, the principal or other individuals who may be able to give you some insight and assistance if there is a problem at school.

Seek professional help if your child's anxiety interferes with normal activities, prevents healthy friendships, becomes an excuse to stay home from school, disrupts sleep, leads to compulsive behaviors, or causes physical symptoms.

Your child's pediatrician should be able to determine if the symptoms are a result of an anxiety disorder, another medical condition, or both. According to the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services, approximately 13 percent of children ages 9 to 17 experience an anxiety disorder – making it among the most common emotional problems to occur during childhood and adolescence.

Counseling can be a very effective method in helping individuals deal with anxiety. When looking for a therapist, make sure that he or she has experience working with children/adolescents. It is also important to find a counselor that you and your child feels comfortable with.

We know that good nutrition and adequate rest are necessary for our children to have the most fulfilling educational experience. It is also our responsibility to ensure that they are mentally and emotionally healthy as well.

Help make the Web a safe place to surf

Kids, computers and the Internet – it can be a formula for fun and education or, if not wisely managed, a jungle of pitfalls and potentially dangerous situations for kids in the 21st century. It can take lots of dedication to effectively control your child's access to a home PC and the Internet. But for many busy parents, the prospect of having to buy, install and maintain safety filters and time management programs can be daunting.

"My daughter's happiness and safety is paramount, including when she's using our home PC and the Internet," says

Robin Mason, the parent of a 12-year-old. "My life is very busy, and I don't have time to deal with complicated safety settings on our computer or watch my daughter every minute she's online. I need a technology that will make it easier for me to be a responsible parent."

Here are five tips to help parents such as Mason get a grip on home PC and Internet management:

- Place your family PC in an open, visible location. Kids computing and surfing the Web behind closed doors takes

Dr. Laundry is always ready with stain-fighting advice

Fun adventures may bring smiles to kids' faces, but for parents they can mean laundry marathons. Grass stains, grease slicks, pink lemonade puddles and ketchup smears can mean spending more time in the laundry room, and less time outdoors.

According to a recent survey conducted by The Clorox Company, 35 percent of respondents with children in the household said they are more likely to avoid wearing white for fear of nasty stains.

"Dry Clean Only," "Handwash Only," "Wash Inside Out/With Like Colors/Gentle Cycle/Cold Rinse" – it's not just color that deters some people from wearing whatever they want. Almost 60 percent of women decide not to buy certain clothing items based on the care label because they are afraid of ruining the garment.

So what's a family to do when faced with unique stain challenges? Smart stain-fighters are calling Dr. Laundry at Clorox. Instead of wasting time searching for a solution to get out that mustard smudge, Dr. Laundry's Stain Hotline provides easy solutions to common blunders including cold beverages such as iced tea or coffee, ketchup and mustard. Everyone can enjoy themselves knowing the stain removal secret to saving their kids' khaki shorts is just a phone call away.

Stains don't stand a chance with these stain-fighting tips:

For cold beverage stains like iced tea or coffee and soft drinks:

- Immediately blot off excess.
- Rinse with cold water from the back.
- Do not use bar soap as it may set the stain.

For condiment stains with intense color like barbecue sauce, mustard, ketchup, salsa and relishes:

- Treat these stains while fresh or you risk not getting it totally out.

- Quickly blot or wipe up the excess.

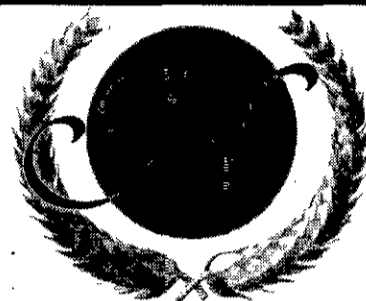

- Rinse with cold water from the back.

Suntan lotion:

- Quickly blot up excess with a paper towel or cloth. Try not to rub hard to avoid pushing the stain further into the fiber

- Pre-treat with a good liquid laundry or dishwashing detergent, rub into stain and wait 5 to 10 minutes

Messes and spills are a part of the fun and Dr. Laundry can help keep your clothes looking bright white and stain-free at the start of every day. So let the kids play in the dirt. Take a big bite of that juicy cheeseburger with all the fixings. Order an extra scoop on your ice cream cone. Call (877) 782-4641 or visit www.drlaundryblog.com for stain removal tips and solutions.

Book-buying tips in a post-Potter world

Folk tales have universal appeal

There is hope on the holiday horizon for parents of brainy youngsters with sophisticated reading tastes, even with a certain bespectacled boy wizard's summer swan song. It's arriving in the form of some classic tales getting an updated — or, in some cases, post-dated — treatment.

"Folk tales are wonderful reading, especially at holiday time," says book expert Marie Bolchazy of Bolchazy-Carducci Publishers, a company that specializes in classical books. "They often have all the elements that have made the Potter series so successful: fantastical stories, relatable heroes, suspenseful plot twists and moral lessons."

For parents looking to fill the void the end of the Potter series may have left on their child's holiday reading list, Bolchazy offers the following suggestions:

"Slovak Tales for Young and Old" collects some of the Slovak tradition's best-loved folk tales, translates them into modern English, and presents them in a single beautifully illustrated, bound edition. The compilation is so popular in the original Slovak that miniature leather-bound copies of the book were presented to President George Bush and Vladimir Putin when they met in Slovakia last year, Bolchazy says.

Pavol Dobsinsky, considered by many to be Slovakia's Homer, first compiled and wrote down these tales from Slovakia's rich oral tradition in the 19th century. Translated into modern English by Fulbright Scholar Lucy Bednar, the tales are beautifully illustrated by Martin Benka. The tales included in the collection fall into three categories: traditional fairy tales complete with magic spells, wicked stepmothers, dragons and journeys; animal tales featuring barnyard or forest creatures with human traits, including the ability to talk; and folk tales in which an ordinary person outwits an enemy, human or otherwise. The volume features the English translations in the front of the book followed by the same tales in the original Slovak.

Children who enjoy experiencing something familiar in a new way might be thrilled to find "Cattus Petasatus," "Quomodo Invidiosulus Nomine Grinchus Christi Natalem Abrogaverit" "Vere, Virginia, Sanctus Nicolaus est" or "Arbor Alma." These are the Latin translations of Dr. Suess classics "The Cat in the Hat" and "How the Grinch Stole Christmas," "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus" and Shel Silverstein's beloved children's book "The Giving Tree."

Complete with original artwork and the characters generations have come to love, each volume lovingly translates the original English prose into the language of the classics, and includes a Latin-English glossary.

"Readers may be surprised to discover just how much Latin they know," says Bolchazy.

The translations of the Dr. Seuss favorites echo the love of word play and the rhythmic narrative of the world's best-selling author. The translation of "Yes, Virginia, there is a Santa Claus" puts into Latin the famous response that New York Sun editor Francis Pharcellus Church gave to a simple question posed by Virginia O'Hanlon in 1897. The keepsake volume features text in Latin and English, and is handsomely scripted and charmingly illustrated. Silverstein's timeless parable about selflessness and devotion of "The Giving Tree" creates a marriage of original artwork and grand Latin prose that captures the spirit of the holiday season.

For those interested in the German language, Hoffmann's "Der Struwwelpeter," Germany's historically most popular children's book, has now been translated into English and Latin and published as "Shock-Headed Peter" in a version that also contains the original German text and illustrations.

"Folk tales, ancient and modern, are great ways to share the spirit of the season," Bolchazy says.

The Celtic Tenors, left, will croon their tunes at Irish 2000 this weekend. Far left, Flogging Molly will also perform.

By NICHOLAS GRAZIADE

As autumn comes to upstate New York, people will flock to the region to see the leaves change color. Soon, brilliant oranges will contrast with the green that's been on the trees all summer. But a chance to revel in those same greens and oranges – the traditional colors of Ireland – comes just a bit earlier this year at the Irish 2000 Music and Arts Festival which will take place on Friday and Saturday, Sept. 14 and 15 at the Altamont Fairgrounds. In its 11th year, the festival brings forward the best in Celtic music and culture.

"We have rides, games, over 30 food vendors, and over 30 different performers," said Matt Nelligan, festival president. Vendors will show off their unique crafts and musicians will perform on four stages. One is for traditional Irish music, one for contemporary, one for local, and one for the family, all ensuring that there will be no shortage of entertainment. Children, teenagers, and adults will all be able to find something to do at the festival.

Time to get your Irish up again

The music has always been a highlight of the Irish 2000 Festival, and this year carries with it a new spin on Celtic music.

"We've had a big development over the past five years in Celtic punk music," said Nelligan. Indeed, Friday and Saturday will feature many Celtic punk bands, including popular acts such as Flogging Molly and the Tossers.

Local bands will also showcase their styles of Irish music.

"Irish 2000 has an emphasis on the music – we've played there every year," said Rick Bedrosian, bass player from local favorite Hair of the Dog. "We have a brand new CD coming out, available for the first time at the festival."

"I've been doing Irish festivals all over the country," said performer Kevin McKrell, of the Hard Road Ceilidh Band, and formerly with The McKrells, "but this was the first one in the Capital District."

McKrell, will also set up booths at the festival to sell his art, T-shirts, and Celtic tours of Ireland and Scotland.

Aside from being able to perform, Irish 2000 gives bands the chance to get together.

"All the festivals, but especially this one, are the only chance we get to hang out with other bands," said Bedrosian.

The festival is entirely a volunteer effort, with the majority of proceeds going to charities.

"There's an awful lot of work that goes into this," said Nelligan. "We start for the next year in October."

But with more than 200 volunteers, the festival proves to be a success every year.

"It's tough to manage," said Nelligan, "but the money we've McKrell said.

Even if you're not Irish, the festival offers something for everyone. "It [Celtic culture] has a large crossover appeal," said Nelligan. "If you love rock music, for example, you're going to love it whether or not it has a fiddle or a bagpipe."

"It really changes from year to year," said Nelligan of the environment that people can expect. The only thing for sure is that everyone will have a chance to be just a little bit Irish for the day.

Irish 2000 will take place at the Altamont Fairgrounds from 5 to 11 p.m. on Friday, Sept. 14, and from 10 a.m. to 11 p.m. on Saturday, Sept. 15. Tickets for Friday only are $15 in advance; $20 at the gate; for Saturday only, $15 in advance; $20 at the gate. A two-day pass is $25 in advance only. Children under 10 are free. There is a $1 discount for visitors with a Price Chopper AdvantEdge card.

been able to donate to charities, both Irish and local, makes it worth it."

McKrell noted that one of the highlights of the festival is how many local and regional artists and artisans are represented.

"He [Matt Nelligan] is really loyal to the local musicians,"

Scotties fend off Eagles in BC's home opener

By MIKE CIOFFI
news@spotlightnews.com

The Ballston Spa football team avenged last season's 14-7 loss at Bethlehem with a 27-15 victory over the Eagles Friday in an Empire Division game.

"Every time we come down here, it seems were in a dogfight. We know that (Bethlehem coach) Ron (Smith) is going to have his kids well prepared, and tonight was no different," Ballston Spa coach John Bowen said.

"I think Ballston Spa is a very good football team, and we always seem to match up well against them. But tonight, it was the big plays that hurt us," Smith said.

The Scotties (2-0) escaped with the victory despite committing four turnovers, which Bethlehem was unable to capitalize on.

"I can sit here and point to the turnovers that we had or the lack of timeliness in the penalties that we had. But the bottom line is you make your own breaks, and you make your own luck," Bowen said.

Basketball club offers rec league

The Bethlehem Basketball Club is holding a registration session for its recreational league Sunday, Sept. 16, from 5:30 to 8 p.m. at the town park offices.

The rec league includes co-ed programs for children in grades three through 12.

The third- and fourth-grade program starts in November, as does the fifth- through eighth-grade program. The high school program runs from December through March.

Space is limited. For information, visit www.bethlehembasketballclub.com or call Reid Sperber at 439-6635.

The Eagles (0-2) took an early 7-0 lead on a 12-yard run by Peter Berquist and an extra point by Sam Smith. The Scotties answered back on their next possession after quarterback Mark Seager found Steve Duncan for a 28 yard score. Jordan Kaplan's extra point tied it at seven.

Bethlehem regained the lead in the second quarter after a booming punt from the Eagles' 5-yard pined Ballston Spa at its 10-yard line. The Scotties tried punting from their end zone four plays later, but the snap went over Kaplan's head and out for a safety.

Ballston Spa's offense took over in the second half due in large part to the running of Duncan and senior back Eric Marciano. Duncan and Marciano each had touchdown runs to put the Scotties ahead to stay. Marciano finished with 165 yards on 10 carries, while Duncan had 102 yards on six carries as the Scotties gained 314 yards on the ground.

"We had a couple costly turnovers in that second half, but they (Marciano and Duncan) took the team on their shoulders along with some other senior leaders. They really stepped their game up when we needed it and said 'It's not going to happen tonight,'" Bowen said.

The Scotties started the third quarter with a blocked punt, taking over at Bethlehem's 28. Several plays later, Marciano took a pitch from Seager and barreled into the end zone for a 14-yard touchdown run. Kaplan's extra point gave Ballston Spa a 14-9 advantage.

The Eagles answered with a score of their own just 1:02 later when Sean Murphy broke free and ran up the left sideline for a 64-yard touchdown. The two point conversion attempt failed, which left Bethlehem with a 15-14 lead.

Ballston Spa took the lead for good with 11 seconds left in the third quarter. The Scotties went for it on fourth-down-and-eight at the Bethlehem 30 and turned to Duncan, who took a pitch up the right sideline for his second touchdown. Kaplan's extra point made it 21-15.

Marciano added his second touchdown with 6:20 left in the fourth quarter after he found a hole up the middle and ran 72 yards virtually untouched for the score.

Bethlehem's offense fared better than it did against Queensbury in its season opener. The Eagles had 190 rushing yards rushing on 30 carries, while quarterback Randy Bowers completed 6 of 17 passes for 72 yards.

"We want to strive at getting better from week 1 offensively, and I think we did that tonight. It really hasn't clicked for us yet. We have a new quarterback, and we're still trying to find some receivers. It's only two games, and from where our running game was last week, you have to be way happy," Smith said.

Ballston Spa plays 2-0 Shenendehowa next week, while Bethlehem travels to 2-0 Guilderland.

"Starting off 2-0 puts us in a good position. We're not putting ourselves in the playoffs right now by any stretch. We have a long way to go, and it doesn't get any easier heading into next week (against Shen)," Bowen said.

Team

set up a scoring opportunity for the Blackbirds' defense. Starting from its own 11-yard line, Tamarac was forced backward twice before Dan Flynn sacked David Fox in the end zone for a safety.

The rest of the first half was a defensive battle. Voorheesville drove into Tamarac territory two more times in the second half, only to have those series ended by an interception and a failed fourth down conversion. But the Blackbirds defense forced two more Bengal turnovers to maintain their 16-0 lead into halftime.

Voorheesville's offense got back in gear in the third quarter. Starting from their 23-yard line, the Blackbirds marched through Tamarac's defense with the same blend of runs and passes that led to two scoring drives in the first quarter. Duncan finished the series with an 11-yard touchdown run that put Voorheesville ahead 22-0.

Jones — who had been limited to 59 yards through the first three quarters — broke free in the fourth quarter. He started with an 18-yard touchdown run and finished with a 56-yard scoring run to provide the exclamation point on Voorheesville's victory.

"I don't know if (Tamarac's defense) gave up or not. I know we didn't," said Jones, who finished with 133 yards on 18 carries. "We wanted to be relentless."

Meanwhile, Voorheesville's defense never let Tamarac get its offense going. The Bengals crossed midfield only three times, with each drive ending in a turnover. Tamarac finished with 120 total yards.

"That's how we play defense," said Sapienza. "With Dan Flynn and Sean Fitzmaurice, you're not going to run up the middle against us. Those guys controlled the defensive line of scrimmage."

Duncan contributed 77 rushing yards, while Conde passed for 122 yards and ran for 41 yards to help Voorheesville remain undefeated as it heads into Saturday's home game against Watervliet (2-0), which downed defending class C champion Chatham 26-7 last weekend.

"This is a key game," said Sapienza of Saturday's showdown. "In my estimation, it's two of the better teams in the division."

In other small-school football action Friday, Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk earned its first win of the season by downing Johnstown 41-6 in a class B crossover game.

All of the scoring came in the second half, and all of the Indians' points came following Schuyler Duross' 31-yard interception return for Johnstown. Zach Deering threw a 35-yard touchdown pass to Jeff Metzger to pull R-C-S (1-1) within a point, and Jared Fortier capped the next offensive series with a four-yard scoring run to give the Indians the lead for good.

Fortier rushed for only 47 yards, but he had two touchdowns and made five out of six extra points for the Indians. Deering carried the ball 13 times for 109 yards and caught touchdown passes of 32 and 10 yards from Jordan Carnibucci in the fourth quarter. Tyler Hughes added a 55-yard fumble return for a touchdown.

R-C-S travels to Taconic Hills Friday.

Lloyd wins Fonda-Fultonville invy

Voorheesville's Mackey Lloyd easily outran his competition at Saturday's Fonda-Fultonville Invitational cross country meet.

Lloyd completed the course in a time of 17:13.10 to take the Division I (small school) title. His nearest competitor was Mayfield's Josh Norman, who finished with a time of 18:18.46.

Three more Blackbirds placed in the top 10 at Fonda. Ian Powell placed third with a time of 18:29.32, Conor Cashin finished fifth with a time of 18:37.50 and Taylor Treadgold was seventh with a time of 18:49.84.

Four Voorheesville runners placed in the top 10 in the girls Division I race. Hilary Edmunds led the Blackbirds with a second-place finish in a time of 21:30.69.

Grace Giampaglia (fifth place, 22:26.49), Chantal Little (sixth, 22:56.29) and Casey Morrison (10th, 23:18.35) were the other Voorheesville runners in the top 10.

The Blackbirds will be among the favorites to win the boys and girls team titles at Saturday's Blackbird Invitational at New Scotland Town Park on Swift Road.

At the Ed Springstead Invitational in Colonie, the Bethlehem boys cross country team placed ninth out of 11 schools with 267 points. Queensbury nipped Shenendehowa 46-49 to win the team title.

Senior Nick Devries led the Eagles with a 47th-place finish in a time of 18:59.08.

A total team effort

Duncan, Conde help Blackbirds remain undefeated

By ROB JONAS

jonasr@spotlightnews.com

When the Tamarac football team tried to contain Pat Jones, other Voorheesville Blackbirds took flight.

And when Tamarac tried to contain the rest of Voorheesville's offense, Jones took off for a pair of touchdown runs that sealed the Blackbirds' 35-0 victory in Friday's class C South Division game.

"I'm really pleased," said Voorheesville coach Joe Sapienza. "I said to the kids that I found their play tonight inspiring."

Tamarac (0-2) did a good job of containing Jones in the first half, but that only opened things up for the rest of the offense. Quarterback Jay Conde capped a 77-yard opening drive with an eight-yard touchdown pass to Evan Christner. Then after intercepting a Tamarac pass, Voorheesville (2-0) marched down the field again with a mix of passes and runs. Adam Duncan ended the series with a one-yard touchdown run to make the score 14-0.

"Tamarac came out and said, 'We're going to take Jones away from you,' and other guys stepped up," said Sapienza. "We spread the ball around."

The Bengals denied Voorheesville a touchdown on the Blackbirds' third series, but it

Eagles take off to 2-0 Suburban start

The Bethlehem boys soccer team opened its Suburban Council season last week with 2-1 victories over Shaker and Mohonasen.

Austin Hughes played a major role in both wins. Hughes assisted on both Bethlehem goals in last Wednesday's victory over Shaker, and he scored both of the Eagles' goals in Friday's overtime win against Mohonasen.

Shaker grabbed a 1-0 lead on Sean Murphy's first half goal, but Bethlehem tied the game when Hughes fed Lennart Hesse for his first goal of the season. Hughes then sent a pass to Harrison Lane, who knocked the ball into the goal to give Bethlehem a 2-1 lead.

Dan Maddox stopped five shots to pick up the victory for the Eagles.

Hughes got Bethlehem on the scoreboard against Mohonasen with a penalty kick in the second half. Sean Shields sent the game into overtime with a goal late in the second half for the Mighty Warriors, but Hughes tallied again in the extra period to give the Eagles the victory.

Maddox and Sam Gochetti combined for five saves to help Bethlehem pull out the one-goal victory.

The Eagles (3-0-1 overall) have a light week following Tuesday's game against Colonie. Bethlehem doesn't play again until Monday, when it hosts Shenendehowa. The Eagles then visit Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake next Wednesday.

In other soccer action last week, Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk suffered a 2-0 loss to Ichabod Crane Friday, while Voorheesville shut out Gloversville 3-0 Saturday.

Kevin Knack and Joe Mahar scored Ichabod Crane's goals, and Ken Wengler added an assist. Collin Kruger made two saves for R-C-S in its season opener.

Voorheesville was sharp in its season opener against Gloversville. Ryan Dimmitt, Kevin Klembczyk and Kevin VanDerWende tallied, and Lee Fenner made two saves for the Blackbirds.

Voorheesville and R-C-S meet in a Colonial Council game Saturday in Ravena. Voorheesville started its league season Tuesday against Schalmont, while R-C-S opened at Mechanicville.

Greenburg leads BC past 'Toga

The Bethlehem girls tennis team won five singles matches on its way to a 7.5-1.5 Suburban Council victory over Saratoga Friday.

Ali Greenburg led the Lady Eagles with a 6-1, 6-1 victory over Sara Bjork at No. 1 singles. Jen Frangella needed a tiebreaker to win her first set 7-6 over Kat Sutton at No. 3 singles, but she sealed the match with a 6-1 victory in the second set.

Brittany Lutz, Jamie Rosen and Sarah Rubin also won their singles matches, while Alex Grossman split her two sets with Rebecca Mangona at No. 2 singles.

Lutz defeated Laura Yesper 6-2, 7-5 at No. 4 singles, and Rosen swept Kate Wait 6-1, 6-0 at No. 5 singles. Rubin defeated Julia Ida 6-1, 6-2 at No. 6 singles.

Bethlehem travels to Ballston Spa Friday.
