A tearful farewell to accident victims

Families remember teens at funerals held on consecutive days

By JIM CUOZZO

Family, friends and the entire Bethlehem school community are bearing the heavy burden of losing two bright young teens on Friday, Nov. 23, when Alexander Gould, 17, and Jackie McHugh, 16, were killed in a one-car auto accident on Meads Lane.

Two funerals on two successive days for both victims were held last week at St. Thomas the Apostle Church in Delmar, with hundreds of community members in attendance.

"The measure of life is not the number of years but the quality of the relationships," said the Rev. David Berberian of St. Thomas Church, presiding over the McHugh's service, on Tuesday, Nov. 27.

McHugh was driving a 1992 Acura along Meads Lane in Glenmont shortly after 9 p.m. on Nov. 23 when her vehicle struck a tree after leaving the road. Both McHugh and Gould were in the

The next superintendent of Bethlehem schools should be someone who exhibits a great deal of integrity, is accessible and can inspire and motivate faculty, students and staff.

Those are the preliminary results of a survey of 600 parents, staff, students and other members of the community who took the time to fill out a questionnaire identifying the qualities and traits of the superintendent who will replace Leslie Loomis when he retires from the district in June after 21 years of service.

The superintendent search, now in its fifth week, will take place over the next four months, beginning with advertising for the position and interviewing candidates, and ending with the recommendation of a final choice.

"This is in fact even more important than the redistricting process," said James Lytle, Bethlehem school board president to a group of 30 people who came out on a cold night Thursday, Nov. 29, at Bethlehem High School to share their thoughts with Wil-

Panel makes final boundary recommendations

Approximately 400 students would change schools under both scenarios

BY JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Two recommended redistricting scenarios are now under review by the Bethlehem school board to accommodate the move of 400 students to Eagle Elementary next fall.

Every member of the school board was present at the final redistricting committee meeting, Tuesday, Nov. 27, that revealed scenarios 1A and 5 as the endorsed boundary proposals.

"We are in the final lap of this process," school board president James Lytle said.

Lytle thanked the 24-member committee, which is made up of principals and parents from each of the district's elementary schools, along with the work of the consultant, Doug Hamlin of VersaTrans, for their professionalism.

"I am very happy we chose to make this as public and as open a process as possible," Lytle said.

Nearly 45 parents from several different neighborhoods attended the meeting, with many pressing for adjustments before a final map is approved.

Don Segal urged the board to consider a change along New Scotland Road that would allow families to take their children to Slingerlands School instead of Clarksville.

"My neighborhood is in the Slingerlands school system," said Segal.

Janet Joseph made a final pitch for Caldwell Road to be switched back to Slingerlands School.

"Clarksville is 7 miles away and not our neighborhood school," said Joseph.

Superintendent Les Loomis told the board that scenarios 1A and 5 should not be altered if they reduce Clarksville's enrollment any further.

"It would not be my recommendation to the board to move any more students away from Clarksville," said Loomis.

Loomis said that average classroom population at Clarksville is 20.9 students this year and is expected to be 20.3 students per class next year if either of the two boundary maps is approved.

The committee also said there is a possibility of allowing next year's fifth-grade class to stay in their current home school for their final elementary year. Loomis said it would be a costly transportation move for the district if approved by the board.

"Grandfathering all fifth graders would cost the district another $174,000," said Loomis. "I recommend we not do any grandfathering."

The total number of students changing schools in scenario 1A is 433, and in scenario 5 that number is 395 students.

Hamlin said only two neighborhood units change between the two final scenarios. Loomis said a principal for the new Eagle School will be hired by the end of January and all staff for Eagle needs to be in place by the spring. A formal grand opening is scheduled for the school, and a PTA also needs to be formed. Spring welcoming events at all schools will be held.

Hamlin of VersaTrans reminded the public that every e-mail and every suggestion is still under consideration before a final decision is made on Dec. 19.

"It does not mean the process is over by any means," Hamlin said.

VersaTrans presented the school board with a two-page summary of recommendations regarding scenarios 1A and 5. Four question areas are still up for debate, including two neighborhood planning units assigned to Slingerlands and one assigned to Hamagrael.

The school board will begin final deliberations on redistricting at the Wednesday, Dec. 5, meeting to be held at the Adams Street headquarters at 7 p.m.

The maps are available on the district Web site at www.bsdc.k12.ny.us.

Supermarket has reason to celebrate

Price Chopper turns 75 with a major expansion on horizon

By JIM CUOZZO
cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

Seventy-five is a good milestone to celebrate, especially when you're a locally owned company with sales topping $3 billion and more than 24,000 employees.

Price Chopper's 75th anniversary events ran from September through November, with a Founder's Day celebration held Saturday, Nov. 17, at the Slingerlands store where the new Ben and Bill's New York Deli is featured. At the event, members of the Golub family shared memories as customers sampled sandwiches and listened to the music of Skip Parson's Clarinet Marmalade band.

Price Chopper was founded by Russian immigrant Lewis Golub under the Golub Wholesale name before becoming the Public Service Market in Green Island in 1932 with Ben and Bill Golub at the helm. The Golub brothers opened several more stores, eventually moving the headquarters to Schenectady and changing the name to Central Market, followed by another name change - Price Chopper - in 1973.

"It's one of the very few American-managed family food supermarkets in the industry," said Mona Golub, vice-president of public relations and consumer service.

Neil and Lewis Golub now oversee the family-owned grocery chain, which has 116 stores in six states, with Jerry, David, Jane, and Mona Golub all working under the family management structure.

"We are still hands on and very passionate about the business," Mona Golub said.

"I support the company and am proud to be a part of it," said Angelo Graziane, a 41-year employee who worked his way up the ranks from a night clerk at the old Curry Road, Schenectady, store to regional vice-president, before retiring last year.

"My brother got me involved in Price Chopper, and he has been with them 51 years," Graziane said.

Graziane is referred to as Mr. Price Chopper in his neighborhood and said he believes it's a company where "hard-working people get promoted."

"Every associate in that store is part of the company, and they contribute," Graziane said.

Price Chopper has donated to more than 10,000 charities and philanthropic organizations over the years, from First Night to Red Cross disaster relief.

The company is also looking toward the future with a major expansion planned that will include several new stores and the construction of a six-story, 240,000-square-foot corporate office in downtown Schenectady.

"The future is bright for this company," said Golub. "We are healthy, and we are growing."

Two cell towers continue skyward

New Scotland ZBA OKs extensions

By GREG HITCHCOCK
hitchcockg@spotlightnews.com

The New Scotland Zoning Board of Appeals decided to grant two applications regarding cell towers in the town Tuesday, Nov. 27.

The first request came from Michael Cusack on behalf of Celco Partnership, or Verizon Wireless, for an appeal of the building inspector's decision regarding a tower special-use permit application.

The ZBA voted 4-to-1 in favor of Cusack, which will allow an existing 95-foot tower to be extended 15 feet to a total height of 110 feet. The tower is situated on a parcel owned by the village of Voorheesville on Woods Hill Road.

The other application was decided 3-to-2 in favor of the New Scotland Cemetery Association to erect a 150-foot tower located on New Scotland South Road.

ZBA Chairman William Hennessy Jr. said that cell towers will be an issue in all towns due to the nature of their construction and aesthetics. "They have a visual impact," he said. "Different citizens have concerns with them where they live and visit."

Zoning Board Member Robert Parmenter said he understands that certain town residents are concerned about heights on structures such as cell towers.

"(New Scotland) is a beautiful town, and people are often concerned about any proposed changes," Parmenter said.

Hennessy said each cell tower application considered faces concerns about being in 'lay down' zones, which means if a tower fell, it would cross personal property lines.

Hennessy said tower height issues are something the town is expected to keep an eye on as New Scotland looks into using wind turbines to produce energy.

"They do not fit into our zoning laws, but we are looking into such things," he said.

Musical Hanukkah will knock your socks off

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR
news@spotlightnews.com

This holiday season, gather the family round and find out where everyone stands on socks.

Here's my position: Socks are wonderful. Socks keep your feet warm. Some socks keep your legs warm right up to your knees. Others' socks stop at the ankle.

Socks come in a variety of fabrics, sizes and colors. Some socks are so thick and fuzzy they can be worn as slippers. Other socks are so thin they can be worn with delicate dress shoes.

Everyone needs socks and you can never have enough. The heels wear thin, the toe section develops holes, and occasionally the dryer eats half a pair. That's right; socks don't last forever.

Luckily, it's easy to find socks. Socks are sold at department stores, shoe stores, and even the supermarket. I saw socks for sale at a bookstore recently. I wouldn't be surprised if you could find socks at a gas station.

Socks are not only practical, but they can also be fun. In short, socks make great gifts. At least they do in my house.

A few years ago I discovered that some people don't think as highly of socks as I do.

"I'm so glad you are giving Rachel real gifts this year and not just socks like last year," an acquaintance once said to me. It was near the December holiday season and I was with a group of moms waiting to pick up children from an extracurricular activity. The parents were discussing what was on their kids' wish lists and what they were buying them. I don't remember what gift items I had been talking about that night, but this other mom had apparently remembered a conversation we'd had from the year before.

I'm not saying that getting new socks is the greatest gift ever. I'm not saying that my daughter sheds tears of joy when she unwraps a package of socks. Getting new socks is not the same as, say, getting a pony, a laptop or a cell phone, but it can still be fun.

Commentary:

From

The holiday is not all about gifts, I told the other mom. She said, "Yeah, but the gifts are the fun part for the kids."

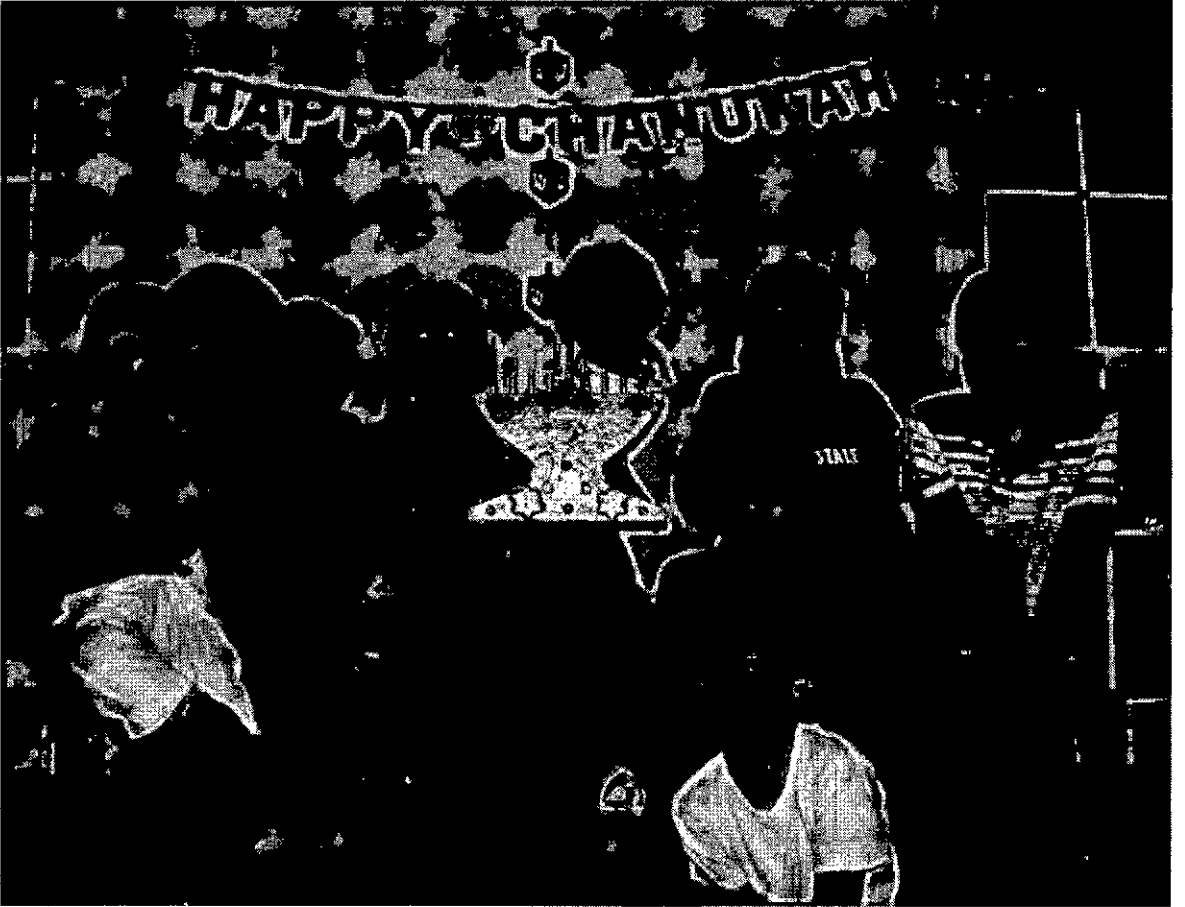

I dropped the subject even though I greatly resented her comment about socks as a gift. As if somehow I was spoiling this woman's holiday by not buying my child gifts of a certain standard.

In our house, we celebrate Hanukkah. And while my daughter, now 11, certainly enjoys getting presents, she also looks forward to other parts of the holiday.

A fairly new tradition in our family has been to invite friends over for a musical Hanukkah celebration. Any guest who plays a musical instrument is encouraged to bring it along. We've had people arrive with violas, violins, cellos and guitars. Piano players can "borrow" the one we are lucky enough to have.

Each musician gets the opportunity to play at least one song. It doesn't have to be a Hanukkah song. It can be any tune the person is comfortable playing. At our first musical celebration several beginner cellists performed "Ode to Joy," after which an adult treated us to a lovely rendition of Hatikvah on the viola.

The sound of live music is joyous. Even missed notes and wrong notes sound wonderful, because it's the effort that counts. The children become more skilled each year, and they take pride in their accomplishments. Last year even a toddler improvised a melody on the piano.

I love the music, but my favorite part of the evening is when we light the Hanukkah candles. Each family brings at least one menorah (candelabra); some bring one for each child in the family. Then, as a group we sing the prayers, and the children (with a parent's help, if required) light the candles.

While we listen to the music, we watch the flickering Hanukkah candles burn down. The glow from the "menorah table" is beautiful and adds warmth to the room. I feel blessed that I am able to celebrate the holiday surrounded by good friends.

Hanukkah, which began Tuesday, Dec. 4; evening, commemorates the Jews' victorious fight for religious freedom. More than 2,100 years ago, Antiochus Epiphanes, the Greek king of Syria, declared that all people must worship Greek gods. Jewish rituals were outlawed and the Jews' holy temple was seized and defiled.

The Jews eventually won the long battle against the Syrian army. While preparing to rededicate their reclaimed temple, the Jews found one flask of holy oil, enough to light the lamps for just one day. A miracle occurred and the oil burned for eight days, enough time to obtain a new supply of oil.

In addition to lighting candles, other Hanukkah rituals include playing dreidel, eating chocolate gelt, and frying potato latkes. The holiday lasts for eight nights, providing the opportunity to have multiple celebrations with various friends and family.

We don't exchange presents with our guests. But we do give one another the gifts of friendship, community, and music.

And, of course, our celebration includes dinner. We share a meal, to which we've all contributed a dish. The adults gather in the living room for food and conversation. The kids eat at the kitchen table and then head to the basement to play. We all come together to light candles and hear the music.

It's really so simple: friends, food, candles and music.

During this holiday season, focus on what brings you joy, count your blessings, and help those less fortunate. If you feel the urge to be stressed and grumpy, stuff a sock in it.

Students stage Shakespeare's classic comedy

By JILL U. ADAMS
news@spotlightnews.com

In the almost empty auditorium of Bethlehem Central High School, Eric Mortenson killed himself five times, five different ways, in rapid succession.

Mortensen stepped off the edge of the stage and a couple of fellow actors laughed from above. He pantomimed impalement to guffaws from a few cohorts sitting in the first row of seats.

From farther back, director Jim Yeara shouted, "Cool! Cool, cool, cool, cool, cool."

It was rehearsal for Theater Without a Net's upcoming production of "A Midsummer Night's Dream," and Mortensen was playing Bottom. The story pokes fun at the troubles of romance with a comic lovers' square. Magical mishaps, fairies and dreams round out a play of fancy from the Bard.

In learning about Shakespeare and England of that time, Molly Gordon, who plays Hermia, came to appreciate that audiences were less savvy than they are today. Successful playwrights like Shakespeare had to appeal to the lowest common denominator.

That's a far cry from the revered status Shakespeare's works now hold in the English-speaking world, worthy of scholarly study and performed time and time again.

Shakespeare used explicit and descriptive language, said Gordon, because in his time, people would "go to hear a play."

Indeed, Shakespeare is all about language, which is one reason it's a school subject. Acting out Shakespeare's plays makes it an even richer experience, said Yeara, a drama teacher at BCHS.

"They have to wrestle with the words — and make the words their own," Yeara said. "They know when they connect with the audience. That's golden."

Acting is more than words, of course, especially in modern times when people "go to see a play." And yet, the student actors said the first step is to own the words.

Freshman Laura Smith said she typed her lines out and underlined key words with their definitions to prepare.

Becky White, performing in her third Shakespeare production, said it gets a little easier each time.

"Once you understand what the words mean," said Mortensen, "it's easier to put your heart in it."

In the process, students gain tangible results. Yeara said he often hears students use quotes in casual conversation. On the academic side, he said, "Every year students will use plays they were in to write their Regents essays or their college applications."

Yeara directs students to bring their own truth to the characters. During rehearsal, he asked Smith what she does when someone makes fun of her, as happens to her character, Starveling.

"I defend myself," answered Smith.

"Meekly or strongly?" asked Yeara.

Bethlehem Central High School's Theatre Without a Net presents "A Midsummer Night's Dream" Dec. 7 to 9 and 14 to 16 at the high school. Above, Zach McCarthy as Quince, David Ernst as Thisby, Eric Mortensen as Pyramus, Michelle Kennedy as Lion, Laura Smith as Moonshine and Becky White as Wall.

"Strongly," said Smith, and she played the scene again.

Theater involves a wide spectrum of students, said Yeara, from special education to National Merit scholars.

"It cuts across cliques," he said

The students concur, emphasizing that theater is not exclusive in any way. Not only do the actors disdain the stereotype of "drama geeks wearing black berets," they talked about how freeing it was to act on stage — free from social expectations and the usual status quo.

The play is funny, said the teenage actors, who want to do all they can to enhance the experience for their audience. Shakespeare wrote very few stage directions, which gives actors a lot of freedom to choose action and movement.

Yeara helped with exhortations:

"Let the emotion come out."

"Enjoy the alliteration."

"Make each thing physical."

With that, Mortensen died a final death.

Bethlehem Central High School's Theatre Without a Net presents "A Midsummer Night's Dream" Friday to Sunday, Dec. 7 to 9, and Friday to Sunday, Dec. 14 to 16, with performances Friday and Saturday evenings at 7 p.m., and Saturday and Sunday afternoons at 2 p.m. in the high school auditorium. Tickets are $10, $6 for students, and are available at the door. Reserve tickets at www.theatrewithoutanet.org.

Does New York HAVA clue?

There's a date New Yorkers should be paying attention to, and it's not Hanukkah, Christmas or New Year. It's Dec. 20, the day that federal courts will decide whether to grant the Empire State its third waiver on complying with a law dated 2002, or whether to make sure we join every other state in the union in complying with the Help America Vote Act.

Our noncompliance speaks volumes to the outside world about the state of our state. It wasn't until 2005 that the state Legislature passed a law enabling the changes mandated by 2002 HAVA. Those of us used to Albany's ways weren't too surprised by this, but what is the rest of the country to make of the sclerotic nature of our government? Worse, what are any of us to think when, two years after that and nearly a year after the January 2006 deadline for compliance, all we can say is "we're still working on it"? Apparently our state set such high standards, compliance is impossible.

Not that there's anything wrong with high standards. But come on, there has to be something acceptable in at least one of the other 49 states that we could use.

How does this affect efforts to improve the Upstate economy? We're still waiting for AMD — and other nanotech businesses — to decide whether to come to a highly taxed, chilly climate. Are they now wondering whether New York takes the hallmark of the democratic process — voting — seriously?

If you think HAVA is boring, remember the hanging chads and butterfly ballots of the 2000 presidential election, and the recent error in Colton's voting machines that wouldn't let voters stray from the party line.

We were reminded of Soviet-era party line voting this past weekend, when Russians allowed Putin to tighten his grip on his nation. In Venezuela, voters defeated Hugo Chavez's efforts to create even more of a socialist state.

On Feb. 5, New Yorkers will be casting their first votes for the next president, as primaries are scheduled in the state. What will a federal court have to say on Dec. 20? Will we still be able to hold that election? Will our results be challenged as the presidential race continues? If we must comply with HAVA by then, what will the cost to taxpayers be?

Is this really how we want the state of Empire to be?

Hanukkah's themes universal

By DAN ORNSTEIN

The author is a rabbi at Congregation Ohav Shalom in Albany and a writer.

I am often asked many questions about what members of the Jewish faith do during the winter holidays. This is only natural, since the celebration of Christmas is of such great importance in our predominantly non-Jewish culture. Generally, the two things which I am asked about the most are why Jews do not celebrate Christmas and what the meaning of Hanukkah is.

In this article, I will focus on the latter question. What is Hanukkah and what is its meaning? The Talmud — the great Jewish literary work of religious law, custom, and belief, which was created more than 1,500 years ago — asks precisely this question in one of its tractates. It answers this question with the famous tale of the miraculous way in which a small cruse of pure olive oil burned for eight days on the menorah (the candelabrum) in the ancient Temple of the Jewish people in the city of Jerusalem. The cruse had only enough oil for one day; however, through God's intervention, it kept burning long enough for the Temple priests to produce more olive oil for long-term use in the Temple sanctuary. For complex political and religious reasons, the Talmud fails to mention the chain of events leading up to that great miracle.

After the death of Alexander the Great in 323 B.C., his empire was divided among his generals roughly into two kingdoms: the Ptolemaic Dynasty, which ruled from Egypt, and the Seleucid Dynasty, which ruled from Syria. The two dynasties were often at war with each other over control of what is now Israel, which is where one of the most significant Jewish communities lived at that time. It was in the land of Israel that the Jewish people had enjoyed — with some tragic interruptions — nearly 900 years of settlement, many of those years as an autonomous or sovereign community. Jews fared rather well under both kingdoms, though they were constantly under the pressure of assimilation into the Hellenistic (Greek) culture, which had been brought into the different countries conquered by Alexander. Historians generally agree that the upper classes and the wealthier priestly families within Jewish society were great supporters of assimilation, whereas the lower classes, many of whom lived in rural areas, clung tenaciously to Jewish tradition, faith and practice. (The polemics of both sides of this conflict from that time notwithstanding, there is no reason to assume that there were not Jews who tried to balance commitment to Judaism with participation in Hellenistic culture in their own lives.)

Some years after the Seleucids took control of the land of Israel in 200 B.C., the Seleucid king Antiochus IV rose to power. Legend has it that he referred to himself as "Epiphanes," or "God Manifest," believing himself to be a god. The locals, however, referred to him as "Epimanes," the madman. Due to political and military insecurity, Antiochus decided that the religious non-conformity of the Jews presented a threat to his stability in the region. He feared that their refusal to worship and practice in the same manner as the surrounding pagan cultures would breed disloyalty, and ultimately, open rebellion. He embarked upon a campaign of persecution against the Jewish community, demanding that Jews cease practicing their faith or be killed. All practices, including Jewish study, worship, observance of the Sabbath, circumcision, the dietary laws and the Jewish holidays, were forbidden on pain of death. More often than not, Antiochus was assisted in his efforts by the assimilationists mentioned above.

It took the bravery and religious faith of a local priest, Mattathias, and his five sons to rally the Jews of Jerusalem and its environs in a battle for freedom against the decrees of Antiochus. Between 167 and 165 B.C., Mattathias' son, Judah, led his people in guerilla warfare against the Seleucid armies. However, it should be noted that their battle was as much a civil war against their fellow Jews who were assimilationists as it was a war against the occupying Syrian-Greek forces. Given their poor training, poverty, and lack of resources, the Maccabees (as they were known then), stood almost no chance of defeating the vastly powerful army of Antiochus. However, they ran his army out of Jerusalem and the holy Temple and restored religious freedom to the Jewish community. It was in the process of the purification and rededication of the holy Temple that the miracle of the oil occurred. As Dr. Ron Wolfson in his book on Hanukkah puts it, "Oil's well that ends well!"

That is the story of Hanukkah — both its legends and its historical facts — in a nutshell, but what about its meaning for us today? Hanukkah is a great holiday because it is so particularly Jewish, yet its themes can speak to all people. We Jews believe that the Maccabees were triumphant not merely through any accident of history but because of their faith in God, which gave them the strength to fight their oppressors. It is this faith that has strengthened the Jewish people for thousands of years despite adversity and persecution.

The universal message of this holiday is that we can find the faith, hope and perseverance to deal with any trial or tribulation in our lives. This is especially so when the source of our faith is God. Hanukkah also serves as a model to all people for our struggle against oppression, especially religious oppression and racism. Jews have used this model for many years to find strength when we have been persecuted for being Jews. It is certainly a model that fits well with the American emphasis on political freedoms and inalienable civil rights for all people. As certain political and religious forces in America seek to erode those freedoms and rights for the rest of us out of narrow and bigoted self interest, we would do well to recognize that Antiochus rears his ugly head in many subtle and nefarious forms in every generation.

Finally, Hanukkah teaches us an important lesson about identity: It is imperative that we be ourselves, and learn to celebrate our uniqueness. One of the hazards of life in an open, secular society is the way in which members of our many cultures give up their specific identities in order to integrate more easily into the larger American culture. Fitting in is certainly a good thing, but it should never come at the expense of the unique religious and cultural heritages which we inherit. (This is especially the case during the winter holidays, when our materialistic "Hallmark Card" society unthinkingly attempts to identify Hanukkah and Christmas as merely two nice, interchangeable celebrations. This is unfair to Judaism and to Christianity, two great and distinctive religions.) These heritages are what give our lives value and meaning, and they enrich American society immeasurably. To lose them would be a tragedy.

My best wishes to all of our readers for a happy holiday season.

Now you see it, now you don't

Editor, The Spotlight:

In the spirit of Christmas, I would like to get our sign back that I put up at the Four Corners announcing the Bethlehem Lions Christmas Tree Sale.

If it offended anyone or violated an ordinance, I would expect the courtesy of a call to take it down. These signs are not inexpensive.

If it was taken down to put up the Christmas tree, I would have relocated it.

But the sign is gone and I am upset to say the least. I complain as a private citizen, not a member of the Lions Club.

Residents hear road improvement plans Cookbook has all the right ingredients

County to update Normanskill and Johnston roads with pedestrian-friendly additions

By GREG HITCHCOCK
hitchcockg@spotlightnews.com

The Westmere Elementary School gymnasium was packed Thursday, Nov. 29, with residents of New Scotland and Guilderland as Jeff Pangburn of Creighton Manning Engineering explained Albany County's proposed rehabilitation project on Normanskill and Johnston roads.

The project will rehabilitate 7.68 miles of Johnston Road in the towns of Guilderland and New Scotland from state Route 155 to U.S. Route 20.

The project includes reconstructing the pavement, installing new curbs and sidewalks, and improving drainage and bicycle and pedestrian facilities.

Construction is tentatively scheduled to begin in spring and be completed by the end of 2008. The estimated total cost of the project is $10.3 million, which will be financed through a county bond issue, according to Albany County's Department of Public Works Web site.

Pangburn said the project will not be touching homes, and there will be minimal wetland approaches.

"We switched the sidewalk design to the east side so the majority of the way will have the least impact to properties and wetlands," Pangburn said.

He said trees might have to be taken down along the Oxford Heights Apartments area, but the area will be replanted with smaller trees and there will be a three-way intersection on Veeder Road to slow down traffic.

Since the first public meeting on the topic last summer, the county has analyzed the feedback and comments and made certain changes to the project, including relocating the sidewalk between Garnett Lane and Western Avenue to the east side, flattened the horizontal curve at Glen Hollow Road to meet minimum standards, designed a new vertical alignment to provide adequate stopping sight distance, identified potential right-of-way impacts and reached out to the property owners and addressed existing drainage issues.

Barbara Scher of Normanskill Road asked the county to allow a water main to be installed in conjunction with the project in order to provide water to families residing on Normanskill and Wormer roads in the town of New Scotland.

Pangburn said the county is working with the towns of Guilderland and New Scotland, but it was difficult as engineers to influence the decision.

"This is more relevant to the towns' regulatory and political conditions. Should the towns want to incorporate it in, it must be driven by the town supervisors," he said.

Claire Nolan of McKownville said she is an avid bicycle rider and welcomes the fact the county is constructing pedestrian paths and bicycle shoulders.

"People will start listening to their hearts and ride bikes more," she said.

Joe Satalino of Johnston Road said he has no confidence that the engineers will do a good job at reconstructing the road, and when something goes wrong the county will not act. "We just want to be left alone," Satalino said.

New Scotland Supervisor-elect Thomas Dolin lauded the highway improvement project.

"New Scotland in general is a popular biking center with nearby Thacher Park and Route 85," Dolin said. "This is a nice improvement for the community and for those outside the community who love to go biking."

Dolin said he wants to have discussions with Albany County to allow the project to be split into two parts so the town can have time to form a water district to provide a water main to New Scotland residents. He said the process could take as long as six months.

Local Girl Scout compiles recipes to earn her Silver Award

By JACKIE SHER
news@spotlightnews.com

Girl Scout Amberly Vincent, 14, of Bethlehem, earned her Silver Award by assembling 72 cookbooks, which were distributed at the First Church Food Pantry in Albany on Thanksgiving Day.

To come up with the 30 simple and nutritious recipes, Vincent browsed numerous Web sites and cookbooks, some of which she found on her own and others that were given to her by the leader of the food pantry.

"A few of them I made ... but not all," said Vincent of the recipes she compiled.

The Girl Scout Silver Award is given to girls, usually in grades six to nine, who demonstrate a commitment to improving their lives and the lives of others. A Girl Scout is required to complete a certain number of hours on the project to earn the award.

"We needed 40 hours minimum for our project," said Vincent. "I put in about 42 all together."

Vincent said she learned of the Albany Food Pantry through Delmar Presbyterian Church, which she attends. The church regularly sends volunteers to the food pantry.

The idea for the cookbooks was developed by Barbara Morgan, who is the leader of the First Church Food Pantry. Morgan had always thought about making a recipe book to hand out at the pantry.

Vincent visited the food pantry a couple of times to collaborate with Morgan on what types of recipes and ingredients to include.

Recipes in Vincent's cookbook include a number for Thanksgiving dishes, as well as everyday meals and snacks. The book also includes ideas for reusing leftovers.

"[She] did a tremendous amount of work, and she did most of it completely on her own," said Morgan. "The cookbooks were received well."

Vincent has been a Girl Scout for nine years. Before applying for the Silver Award, Girl Scouts must fulfill requirements in leadership-building, living skills, career exploration and a commitment to self-improvement.

In addition to her work compiling recipes, Vincent has been busy with other extracurricular activities, including working on her school's yearbook and as a member of the track team.

"I give the girls a lot of credit for sticking with the Girl Scouts. This is huge, between sports and academics ... to stay committed to Girl Scouts, that's admirable," said Laurie Nickford, troupe leader.

County questions cost of HAVA

As compliance deadline nears again, election officials say plan lacks common sense

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parker@spotlightnews.com

As a December compliance deadline nears, Albany County election officials have come up with their own version of what the HAVA — Help America Vote Act — acronym stands for, but they aren't sharing what it is.

Lately, and especially after each election, officials from the county down to municipal officers are using the phrases "joke, poorly thought out and waste of money," when they speak of the 2002 federal legislation, which was meant to streamline the election process and prevent the confusion that surrounded the ballots in some states during the 2000 presidential election.

Other than federal and state mandates, the only thing county election officials have seen as a result of the legislation is one new machine and thousands in extra costs each election.

Federal courts are expected on Thursday, Dec. 20, to either extend the state its third waiver on compliance deadlines or crack the whip, said Albany County Board of Elections Democratic Commissioner Mathew Clyne.

If the latter happens, the county will have to move quickly to supply additional handicap-accessible voting machines, come up with the money and space to store replacement electronic voting machines and work out all the kinks since taking over elections in all county municipalities last year.

"Albany is kind of like in a Twilight Zone. As far as Upstate counties, we are one of the largest. These timelines (to come into compliance by 2008) are completely unreal," said Clyne.

For towns, it has only over-complicated a process that, for the most part, has run smoothly in New York. It also has resulted in hundreds of thousands of dollars looming in municipal budgets in county charge backs soon to take affect. However, the county has eased the burden on its municipalities with a plan to move away from per capita and assessed value charge-back formulas to a simpler cost-of-doing-elections formula, which could result in huge savings for some towns. Colonie will see a $140,000 reduction in expenses paid to the county as Albany looks to recoup the costs for running the 2006 elections.

"We are finalizing the numbers that will be sent to the municipalities in the next few days. The numbers we are finalizing are based on actual costs. This is a bill for the 2006 elections," said John Rodat, commissioner of management and budget for Albany County.

November's general election has exposed some cracks in the current infrastructure. Colonie's official election results are tied up in the courts pending a challenge by GOP candidates due to wrongly formatted lever machines. The machines only allowed voters to vote along party lines, closing out any possibility of voting outside party affiliation on a combination of the three Republican and Democrat contenders for town board.

Numbers were also skewed between Colonie and unofficial county numbers. In the uncontested Colonie Town Justice race, Colonie's numbers showed Peter G. Crummey received 12,889; the county transposed the votes at 21,188.

Commissioners fixed the problem Thursday, Nov. 30.

As the county waits for the state to approve the voting machines that will be used throughout New York, the election commissioners and Colonie Town Clerk Elizabeth Del Torto are asking why the old machines should even be replaced.

The biggest problem with voting has always been human error, said John Graziano, county Republican commissioner. And no electronic machine mandated by HAVA will remove that.

"It ran fine all those years," Del Torto said.

This year's blunder in Colonie was an oversight, and by the time it had been noticed the morning of Election Day, polls had already been open four hours, she said. It was human error.

"I think the old machines work just fine. This election was not the fault of the machine. It did what it was told to do," said Del Torto.

She admitted that the prospects of a digitized machine that could cut in half the typical 15-hour work day that is Election Day sounded nice. But at what cost?

The old machines don't need specialists, both technical and electrical, not to mention climate control storage. If the old machines break, they are fixed instantly, she said. That won't be the case with the new electronic machine, working on a Windows platform that will need technical support with every glitch.

So why the change? Accessibility for handicapped voters, an area that needed to be addressed, said the commissioners, but that is an area that has been addressed through years with a simpler and cheaper solution: absentee ballots.

The initial intent of HAVA was to get every state on the same page when it comes to the logistics of voting. Recently the focus has switched to handicap accessibility, said Graziano. That brought up more questions of whether or not to buy a specialized machine for polling stations or buy voting machines with the capacity to serve the general public at large, including the handicapped.

For the 2006 primaries, Albany County paid $5,000 for a handicap-accessible machine that uses a ballot marking device to cast votes. The one machine was set up for September primaries and November's general elections at the county Board of Election's North Russell Road offices. Ballots and expenses to operate the machine ran about $21,000, said Graziano. No one used the machine in September; one or two voted on it in November, he said.

"There is no consideration for money here. Common sense has not seemed to prevail in this process," Graziano said.

Even if the original intent was to solely provide better access for disabled voters, current steps have not served that intent. For one, traditionally, disabled voters prefer to vote from home, Graziano said. Also, the new accessible machines aren't the end-all cure the machine manufacturers and lobbyists would have people believe, he said.

"The bigger problem for me is the charge back the county is placing on the town. I have budgeted $80,000 a year for 10 years, and have never spent that," said Del Torto.

Home Depot joins with Jewish group to hold menorah-making workshop

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parkerg@spotlightnews.com

Chabad of Colonie is giving Jewish youth this Hanukkah a hands-on learning experience into the history and symbolism of the menorah.

The organization partnered with Home Depot on Washington Avenue Extension in Albany to host a Sunday, Dec. 2, workshop.

"It's a great idea and a beautiful concept. Kids love creating things. This is hands-on education," said Rabbi Yaakov Weiss, Chabad of Colonie director.

Home Depot staff guided children in making a wooden menorah to use this holiday, which began this year at sundown Tuesday, Dec. 4, and lasts until Wednesday, Dec 12.

Home Depot craftsmen and Ron Glasser, owner of Creation, a custom craft company in south Troy, designed the menorah.

Glasser was on hand to help children assemble the menorahs. The heavy lifting, use of tools and cutting was done in house by Home Depot craftsmen. Children were left to nail and glue the pieces together, said Glasser.

The menorah being built at the workshop was a classical design with a center post and vertical struts with wooden cups on top to hold the candles. There were enough supplies for 50 children to build menorahs. The assembly didn't take more than two hours, Glasser said.

In the end, the children were left with fully functional pine menorahs, said Weiss.

The idea was to give children a look back into the craftsmanship of the menorah and share with them the history and significance of the piece, said Weiss.

"It's the triumph of light over evil and darkness," he said.

Both Home Depot and Chabad of Albany have workshops that allow children to work with wood or other materials, Weiss said.

As part of the Hanukkah celebration, Weiss shows children how to make olive oil, the traditional fuel used in Jewish temples. Weiss, with help from the children, uses an olive press to extract the fruits' oils. Historically, it took eight days to press, formulate and consecrate the oil.

The eight candles of the menorah symbolize the eight days that one day's worth of oil burned while the Jews prepared more holy oil to rededicate their temple following their defeat of the Syrian army more than 2,100 years ago. Hanukkah commemorates that fight for religious freedom.

Locals court specialty grocer for Capital District

Despite enthusiastic campaign, Trader Joe's says it has no imminent plans for area

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parkerg@spotlightnews.com

Trader Joe's, a specialty grocer based in California, has made it a company policy to not succumb to public cries urging it to open shop nearby.

Why? Because it happens frequently. The letter-writing campaigns and e-mails asking the store to open shop, have gone as far as a Hawaiian-shirt-themed town council meeting in North Sacramento several years ago. It was all part of a communitywide plot to bring the store to newly developed retail centers.

It happens nationwide and the Capital District is no different.

Don't hold your breath for Albany Mayor Jerry Jennings to sport a Hawaiian shirt anytime soon, or the newly elected Democratic majority in Colonie to do the same this coming January. But a similar movement started months ago and has done nothing but gather steam and Trader Joe enthusiasts.

"From what I understand, they are interested in this area. It's a progressive company and we are a progressive community," said Bruce Roter of Albany.

The College of Saint Rose associate professor of music and Trader Joe's booster started a "We Want Trader Joe's in the Capital Region" campaign in late summer.

Since leaving Portland, Ore., a decade ago, Roter has had a 10-year itch for the company's goods — an itch that is only occasionally scratched when visiting relatives and friends bring Trader Joe's products to his downtown Albany home. The nearest store is in Hartsdale, a 139-mile, two-hour-and-22 minute drive from Roter's home due south. The Hartsdale store is one of a dozen downstate Trader Joe's that straddle Long Island Sound.

Roter wants one bad, and so do the 1,400 other members that have signed on to his campaign to bring the store to the Capital District. Where, it doesn't matter — Albany, Colonie, Clifton Park or Saratoga Springs. Roter said he, his wife and their three girls would gladly drive more than a half-hour to shop at Trader Joe's.

He has started several letter-writing campaigns and went so far as to donate $1,500 in food and money to the Regional Food Bank of Northeastern New York. For each donation made, the group asked that the food bank send acknowledgement to the president of Trader Joe's East Coast corporate headquarters.

"Unfortunately, wooing doesn't go into our decision-making as far as a new location," said Alison Mochizuki, director of national publicity for the southern California company.

She said the company does not divulge its real estate matters and what's behind location decisions.

"We don't have a location for the next two years planned up there in upstate New York," said Mochizuki, adding only that "up there" was "not Brooklyn."

Roter said he is almost certain the store is nosing around the area. Especially as new residential and development that falls in line with the company's demographic continues to spring up, he said.

Members of "We Want Trader Joe's in the Capital Region" are from all walks and trades, he said. Some are in real estate; others are just eager to see one move into the area. All of them have their own ideas as to where such a store should go. Roter said he's heard rumors that one site in particular has recently pinged on the radar: the now vacant Barnes & Noble building on Wolf Road in Colonie.

The bookstore moved into the newly renovated Colonie Center Mall, next to recent additions P.F. Chang's China Bistro and Cheesecake Factory, another California-based company, and the L.L. Bean outlet.

To learn more about "We Want Trader Joe's in the Capital Region" and the grocer, visit www.wwtj.org.

Discussions feature books by Tyler, Fitzgerald

IN BRIEF

"Digging to America" by Ann Tyler is the topic for Bethlehem Public Library's AfterDinner Books meeting next Wednesday, Dec. 12, at 7 p.m. This novel revolves around two families who adopt Korean daughters: the Donaldsons, typical American suburbanites; and the Yazdani, Iranian immigrants who are part of a lively ethnic community. Library Journal described the book as "a touching, well-crafted tale of friendship, families, and what it means to be an American."

"Gate of Angels" by Penelope Fitzgerald will be discussed at the library's DayBooks meeting on Monday, Dec. 17, at 1:30 p.m. It's 1912 in England. A Cambridge University scientist and a hospital nurse wind up in the same hospital room after a bicycle accident. The hospital assumes they are married; they are not. What follows is a delightful, insightful tale by an author who began her writing career at the age of 60. Copies of the books are available at the information desk. New members are welcome at both groups. Books under discussion are sometimes available in large-print or recorded format; call 439-9314 for information.

'Big Read' sneak peak

Last spring we joined libraries, museums, schools and other institutions in Albany and Rensselaer counties for The Big Read — a National Endowment for the Arts initiative designed to promote shared literary reading among residents, community groups and civic organizations. The month-long event was cosponsored by The New York State Writers Institute and the Upper Hudson Library System. Special events, book discussions, concerts and art exhibits featured "Their Eyes Were Watching God" by Zora Neale Hurston. We're pleased to inform you that UHLS has received a second grant from the NEA to host another Big Read this spring. This year's selection is Edith Wharton's "Age of Innocence." Stay tuned for more information.

Public skeptical of housing project

Residents cite traffic woes as top concerns

By JIM CUOZZO

cuozzoj@spotlightnews.com

A proposed senior housing project on Van Dyke Road just past Bethlehem High School and Eagle Elementary School, which is under construction, received sharp criticism from residents in the surrounding neighborhoods at a public hearing held Wednesday, Nov. 28, with Bethlehem Town Board members in attendance.

Mark Dempf, representing developers for Van Dyke Spinney, said the proposal calls for 229 "cottage style" rental apartments for people 55 and older, ranging from 800 to 1,200 square feet in size, with rents from $1.15 to $1.25 per square foot.

"We have been working on this for six years to identify a project for the needs of seniors," said Dempf.

The project rests on 92 acres of land formerly known as the Leonard Farm, with 32 of those acres to be used for development. The site, located near Vadney Road, will also need water and sewer line extensions to accommodate the use of 60,000 gallons of water daily and 34,000 gallons of sewer use each day. The "Spinney," as it's being called, will also offer an 8,000-square-foot clubhouse with a swimming pool for residents, and garages or carports would be available on all units.

Developers are requesting a change in the current town zoning on the land to make the site a planned development district.

Bruce Davis, a Van Dyke Road resident, cited a list of concerns surrounding the project, including a dangerous road with a blind curve, inadequate clear zones for lack of right of way, limited sight distance, and active farmland that surrounds the land.

Davis called the development a "gated community."

"We need to look at a development that integrates itself and not segregates it," said Davis.

Bill Greer, another nearby landowner, said Van Dyke Road is the scene of numerous accidents because the road is narrow and many trucks use it when they miss the Route 32 Delmar Bypass.

"You cannot put a development this size and not put a road in," said Greer.

Meads Lane resident Stuart

Lyman questioned the amount of stormwater runoff related to construction, including nine standing water ponds that will be 4 to 6 feet deep on site.

"They are a potential safety and health hazard for insect-borne illness," Lyman said.

Richard Hart of Elsmere called the development a good project but "not affordable."

Glenmont resident John Keenan was more blunt with his assessment of the project's rent prices, which could cost $920 to $1,400 a month.

"Seniors might as well stay in their homes," said Keenan.

Dempf said the first units are tentatively scheduled to be available for showing in 2008.

The town board held off on making any decisions on the request to amend the code for the project. Instead, written comments will continue to be accepted by the town until the public hearing resumes on Dec. 12.

People wait outside the Applebee Funeral Home in Delmar on Tuesday, Nov. 27 to attend the wake for Alexander Gould, 17, of Delmar, who was killed in a one-car accident Friday, Nov. 23, on Meads Lane in Glenmont.

Search

liam Silky and Lucy Martin, the district's search consultants, regarding the qualities and attributes the next superintendent should have.

Those in attendance agreed it would be difficult to fill the position Loomis has held since 1986.

"A superintendent that has spent 21 years in a school district is very rare to find now," said Silky, who outlined the goals of the school board from December through April of next year.

Silky believes anywhere from 25 to 35 candidates will apply for the superintendent's post once advertisements go out. The application process will close on Jan. 18, and the interviews will begin shortly after.

"On Jan. 30, we will meet with constituent groups to help them organize for the interview process," Silky said.

Up to 10 applicants will be presented to the school board, with Feb. 11 through Feb. 13 as tentative interview dates.

"The first round of interviews are just with the school board," said Silky, who expects the number of candidates to be whittled down to three or four by the time the second round of interviews begin in March. Silky said the essence of the search and interview process is about finding the right match.

"(It's about) getting the right person for what your community needs at this time," said Silky.

The position will be offered to the final candidate March 18, with April 1 the target date for completed negotiations.

"That gives three months time left over before they come on board July 1," said Silky.

Keeping the applicants out of the media is considered important, according to the consultants.

Someone who has a strong commitment to academic excellence and can help develop student character are a few of the requests made by community members who spoke at the public forum. Associate pastor of Delmar Reformed Church, Dirk Gieser, said the new superintendent should be someone who can "help foster and encourage a student's spiritual aspect."

Other preliminary results of the superintendent search survey revealed the community would like someone who comes in with strong recommendations and who will make a lasting, long-term impact in the district.

The characteristic considered least important in the superintendent search survey was selecting a candidate from within the district. Holding a doctorate degree was also not considered as important, according to survey respondents. Lytle said one of the surveys e-mailed back to the district did have a very important consideration for the next superintendent.

"One teacher said it is important for the superintendent to know when it's a snow day," he said.

Farewell

front seat and both were wearing seat belts when the accident occurred. A third passenger, Brian Woods, who was in the back seat, survived the crash and is still listed in serious condition at Albany Medical Center.

"She was really beautiful inside and out," said Anne Cole, one of McHugh's close friends who spoke at her service. "Jackie was truly an amazing person. She has always been there for me when I needed to talk to her no matter how late at night."

"She was not only my best friend; she was my hero," Cole said.

McHugh's effervescence and warm personality is what family members recalled most.

Jackie's father, Bernard McHugh, said everyone enjoyed having Jackie around, not just her friends but all family members as well. She especially liked her job working with seniors at Delmar Place. Jackie would go in on her days off just to be with the staff and residents. She could often be seen playing checkers with one of the 98-year-old residents.

Gould's three sisters and brother all spoke eloquently through tears about their brother at the Wednesday, Nov. 28, service, presided over by the Rev. James Daley, former pastor of St. Thomas the Apostle Church. Both McHugh and Gould were baptized at St. Thomas.

"I will miss seeing you in the living room doorway with a smile on your face," said Aimee Gould. "You were such an amazing person. I wish I had the time to tell you that again and again."

Twin sisters Katie and Alicia Gould said Alex would sometimes stay up all night talking to them.

"There was nothing we couldn't tell each other," said Katie.

Alex Gould was creative, with a talent for art. His brother Jacob called him his "best friend."

"You would do most anything for anybody," said Jacob.

The four siblings said they would forever share a connection to their brother.

"We are five as one, and we'll be seeing you in our dreams," proclaimed Aimee.

McHugh and Gould were very close and "inseparable," according to many of their friends.

Several questions linger regarding the accident. Bethlehem police initially stated that speed might have been a contributing factor in why McHugh's car went off the road on Meads Lane. Autopsies were performed and toxicology results are not yet available. Other questions have arisen as to why McHugh was driving after 9 p.m. with a restricted junior driver's license. On the night of the accident, McHugh had left Delmar Place, where she worked part-time in the dining area, at about 7 p.m. She and her friends were heading back to Gould's house after purchasing a headlight at the time of the accident.

Bethlehem High School principal Chuck Abba said grief counseling for students was made available all last week.

"We're doing the best we can to try to get through these days," said Abba, who said the entire student body and faculty staff has been "hit hard" by the death of McHugh and Gould.

"They were so very young," said Abba. "You feel so bad for their family and friends."

That feeling was echoed in Jacob Becker's final thoughts to his brother at the Gould service on Wednesday.

"Take good care of Jackie and try and stay out of trouble," said Jacob.

Vaccination station gets test

Drive-through flu shots given in emergency response exercise

By GRAHAM S. PARKER
parker@spotlightnews.com

First it was food, then prescriptions, now there are drive-through influenza vaccinations.

More than 200 Colonie employees signed up to take part in the exercise, which mimicked emergency response to a biological attack or viral outbreak. The idea: Have people drive through firehouses or car washes where nurses are at the ready with vaccines to inoculate the masses.

"Basically, the primary thing we are doing is vaccinating people for influenza. Secondly, we are testing a drive-through method for administering vaccinations or medications," said Maribeth Miller, assistant commissioner for public health at Albany County Department of Health.

The drill, which took place Wednesday, Nov. 28, was funded through a Department of Homeland Security's Cities Readiness Initiative grant.

"When I first heard it — drive-through flu shots — it sounded a little weird. It's the first time the town has done something like this."

Mary Brizzell

One by one, Colonie employees and their families made their way through the Midway Fire Department's garage with their arms hanging out car windows. County nurses administered shots, and immediately the next car pulled up. There were 700 shots to be administered. By 2:30 p.m., a half hour after the drive-through opened, 80 shots had already been given.

"When I first heard it — drive-through flu shots — it sounded a little weird. It's the first time the town has done something like this," said Colonie Supervisor Mary Brizzell.

Albany County Department of Health partnered with the town's emergency medical response team to host the first drive-through clinic.

The drill is to test how effective partnership between county, municipal agencies and emergency services are at dealing with outbreaks or attacks. Millions of dollars have been funneled to fire fighters and emergency medical services to combat biological or natural outbreaks if or when they happen, said Miller.

In recent years, health departments have been charged by federal agencies to begin developing methods to reach as much of the population as possible in times of biological attacks or pandemic outbreaks within 48 hours of initial exposure. The drive-through method was the county's answer, said Miller.

In the plan, a number of locations and buildings can be used for the system. Fairgrounds, car washes and firehouses can be instantly transformed into triage and stations for administering vaccines and anti-viral agents.

Business

"What you need is to sign up for the service for $2.95. After a seven-day trial, you can continue the service or cancel."

After the seven-day period, a client account would be created and, "for a one-time fee of $39.95," anyone could gain access to hundreds of online surveys waiting to be filled out, she said.

Empty promises

The golden rule to avoid scams has always been, if it sounds too good to be true, then it is.

Online solicitations to work from home pop up with increased fervor as many people look to supplement incomes, spend more time at home or avoid the costs of doing business, such as gasoline.

Many have been identified as scams, or at least have poor clientele relations cited by the Better Business Bureau. Others actively try to debunk competitors and offer lower rates or minimal investment to get to work. They are no longer banished to the nether regions of late-night-to-early morning television. They hammer e-mail inboxes at least dozens of times a day. That is, if you failed to catch the ones stapled to telephone poles on your way to work or the occasional ad in your local newspaper.

"In my experience I've yet to see any legitimate work-from-home business that advertised. One percent may be legitimate, but I can't think of any that are," said Les Henderson, who wrote "Crimes of Persuasion: Schemes, Scams, Frauds."

The 50-year-old Canadian started investigating scams eight years ago. He retired from training salesmen, but not before an epiphany: Scammers are nothing more than salesmen with no conscience.

Since taking on the multi-billion dollar scam businesses, which was estimated at $45 billion in the United States alone in 1996, he has been dragged into court by international, Canadian and U.S. agencies looking to defend their schemes against his investigations. He said the industry's profits are probably close to $60 billion annually in the U.S. by now. It has grown unchecked for the most part.

"The scammers are winning, and they are winning big," he said.

Only a few countries, including South Africa, have gone after work-from-home scams and attempted to stop them, he said. "Attempted," he emphasized.

Surveys from home may not be a scam in the conventional sense, said Henderson. Sure, you will be given access to hundreds of surveys to fill out, but for how much? How many hours would you have to work, or surveys would you have to fill out, before breaking even and recouping your $42 investment?

Henderson's book explains how con artists steal your savings and inheritance through telemarketing fraud, investment schemes and consumer scams. But just getting the information out does little to stop the problem.

The fact is the scammers, if caught, are dragged into civil court. They pay their fines and go about their business either under a new name or often under the same they had before. They just promise to be good, he said.

When newspapers, news agencies or Henderson seek to expose the scams, they are met with lawsuits ranging from defamation, conspiracy, invasion of privacy and trade secret theft.

The ball is in the consumers' court is how Canadian and U.S. lawmakers look at it, he said. Follow the "if it looks too good to be true" rule, he said.

Research the bottom line

"You want to get all the information up front and get references. Don't send money; don't do it for the start-up kits," said Deborah Sturm Rausch, with the state Consumer Protection Board. "In general, we suggest caution with a lot of these types of things."

The federal Better Business Bureau is littered with reports of work-from-home business scams.

Some of the classic schemes, such as in-home production or stuffing of mailers, have been put under, according to the bureau's Web site. Sturm Rausch reported the same successes at the state level. However, other work-from-home companies listed on the federal site include several complaints that have been dealt with and others that remain outstanding, according to the site.

Home Survey Workers, listed as Unparalleled Marketing LLC on the BBB Web site, has an unsatisfactory record for failure to respond to such consumer complaints.

The company is an online site that registers people for a one-time fee. The site boasts that as much as $423 per day can be earned from home taking surveys. Survey payouts range from $5 to $75. Clients would have to fill out 84 surveys per day at $5 a piece to hit the $423 per day mark, or five surveys at industry may not be considered a scam. But it is misleading, he said.

Sturm Rausch recommends reading the fine print.

"All these companies' first line of business is to prove to you that they work," said Henderson. The BBB does state that Unparalleled Marketing LLC has resolved most of the complaints against it, but the file on the company was opened in September 2007.

A request to speak with management at Home Survey Workers was not returned. Unparalleled Marketing LLC was listed under the same number.

In the fine print, the company cites its rights under the securities litigation reform act of 1995 to give "forward looking statements," to portray company expectations or forecast as part of its sales pitch.

In doing so, its disclaimer reads, "there is no guarantee that you will earn any money using these techniques and ideas in these materials."

"Results may vary," Henderson chuckled.

Henderson has attempted to drag many Internet companies' practices into the light, he said. He has been met with lawsuits and threats from home and abroad.

Like Sturm Rausch's warning to read the fine print, Henderson also recommends to follow the money to the company's origins.

For one, many companies he

Les Henderson

$75. The company does not give an average client take but does offer a 100 percent money back guarantee if by following the instructions 100 percent you don't see a return. The refund is also good if you aren't satisfied.

On Unparalleled Marketing's Web site, the No. 1 frequently asked question is, "Is this a scam?" The answer—"absolutely not"—is followed by an explanation that the company would be unable to do what it does if it were in the business of scamming people.

Henderson said that there are "legitimate" businesses online and that the survey business has run into are out of Florida, he said. It's a questionable company mecca.

Home Survey Workers has a post office box address in Winnebago, Ill. But the LLC Unparalleled Marketing was formed 2006 in Miami, according to Manta.com, an online business search engine. Unparalleled Marketing LLC is listed as having two employees and has estimated annual sales of $150,000. Its manager is listed as Jeremiah Patton, proprietor of another work-from-home site, www.2ndincome4u.com.

According to that company site, it has appeared in major news publications, such as the New York Times, USA Today and Forbes. At the bottom of the home page, the site also features the emblems of the BBB, Better Internet Bureau and Internet corporate watchdog, iCop.

The BBB icon is for its Reliability Program and has no link to the Better Business Bureau. The BBB did not show either Unparalleled Marketing LLC, Home Survey Workers or 2ndincome4u.com as registered in the program.

iCop, Internet Council of Online Professionals, issued an October 2007 Internet Marketing Trade Journal accusing Patton of illegally using the council's seal. Patton and his company are not iCop members, the journal alleged.

In the journal, nine other sites were listed as illegally using the council's seal, much like an accreditation. All of them were work-from-home Web sites.

College representatives will be available to answer questions about Empire State College's two master of arts degrees in policy studies as well as its master of arts in liberal studies, master of arts in teaching and master of business administration (M.B.A) degree.

Students enrolled in the master of arts programs for policy (labor and policy studies, social policy) and liberal studies attend several weekend residencies. Between residencies, they maintain contact with faculty and other students through online courses and e-mail.

Students accepted in the competency-based M.B.A. program attend several executive-style residencies, while participating in online courses. The program offers managers with at least three years of experience the opportunity to earn credit for graduate-level learning acquired on the job.

Students enrolled in the master of arts in teaching program take a combination of online courses and scheduled face-to-face meetings. The M.A.T. is designed for adults who seek a career teaching middle or high school in a high-need urban school district. The program offers students a "fast track to the classroom," while allowing teacher-candidates to retain their current employment for a year. After the first year, students are eligible for provisional certification as entry-level teachers, while completing their studies part time.

Schools can apply for Safe Routes funds

The state Department of Transportation Commissioner Astrid C. Glynn recently announced that applications for funding for the $31.6 million Safe Routes to School (SRTS) program are available. The new initiative provides federal funding to support transportation infrastructure improvements and public education campaigns across the state that promote walking and bicycling to school.

"Providing safe, healthy transportation alternatives for our children not only protects them from short-term harm, but makes a long-term investment in promoting active lifestyles and decreasing air pollution from congestion," Glynn said.

Informational brochures for the Safe Routes to School program were sent to more than 5,600 schools in more than 700 districts explaining the initiative and advising schools where to obtain applications.

Schools have until April 1 to submit applications, with funding allocations announced in the summer of 2008.

Eligible projects must be located within 2 miles of a primary or middle school, be located on municipal right-of-way, benefit the public interest and address at least one of the five SRTS categories. Categories are engineering (infrastructure) efforts, as well as education, enforcement, encouragement and evaluation of program impact (non-infrastructure) efforts.

Pedaling for peace

Somayeh "Nasim" Yousefi, left, and Jafar Edrisi of Iran are bicycling across the world to spread their message of world peace and environmentalism. Yousefi said if people have knowledge of different cultures they can find the facts and achieve world peace. ## The Greening Of America's Homes.

Going "green" is no longer the sole propriety of a minority of environmentally conscious groups and individuals. Proponents of "green" or "sustainable buildings" now include a new generation of builders, architects, and developers. Each has embraced the notion that green construction increases a building's efficiency, conserves water and building materials, and reduces the building's impact on health and the environment.

Going green may cost more initially but its benefits outweigh the higher initial costs over the course of a lifetime. Green buildings are gaining increased recognition, as builders and consumers alike are coming to embrace responsible building techniques and design. Remember, As your experienced real estate professional, I can help buyers go "green" and help sellers emphasize the energy-saving aspects of their homes to prospective buyers.

Entertainment in the Spotlight

By MIKE CLEMENTE
news@spotlightnews.com

It's the holiday season and with the celebration comes cold weather, family get-togethers, presents and now, nights out to take in a show. Two theaters in the Capital District are preparing for opening night with their family-friendly holiday show.

Cohoes Music Hall is putting on a production of "White Christmas." This play, based on the classic movie, is a first for this area.

"This was newly released and it's a Capital Region premiere. It's never been done here before," said Jim Charles, artistic director at Cohoes Music Hall.

The show opened on Nov. 30 and runs until Sunday, Dec. 16, with shows on Thursday, Friday and Saturday at 8 p.m. and Sunday matinees at 3 p.m. A special matinee showing is set for Saturday, Dec. 15, also at 3 p.m.

The show begins long before opening night though. Actors must be chosen, dates set and rehearsals begun. The process for this show began back in the summer months.

"Most of the people in this production were cast at the end of August, beginning of September. We started rehearsing the week before Thanksgiving," Charles said.

The hard work of the cast makes the two-and-a-half week rehearsal time

The cast of 'White Christmas' kicks up some holiday spirit at Cohoes Music Hall.

'Tis the Season to Break a Leg Two Local Theaters Prepare for Holiday Shows

work for the productions of the theater.

"They rehearse from Tuesday to Sunday every week for about eight hours a day. They start at 2 in the afternoon and won't leave here until 10 or so at night," Charles said. The Cohoes Music Hall is putting on a show that already is a classic; the movie that it is based from is a holiday favorite of many. But what about the shows that are less well-known, but still have that holiday magic?

Capital Repertory Theater has that covered with "Plaid Tidings." This production is a holiday sequel to "Forever Plaid," which took the stage at Cap Rep in 1999. The director of "Plaid Tidings," Dale Sandish explained the story.

"Forever Plaid" is a show that appeared off-Broadway of four guys that form a harmony group in high school, on their way to their first big gig when they are killed in a car crash. God gives them their wish to come back and do their show," Sandish said. "Plaid Tidings" picks up where that left off, with another mission for the boys in plaid, though they don't know what it is."

He offered tidbits about the story.

"We're connected to a famous female crooner," he said, but wouldn't say who. Not only does Sandish direct, he's also one of those "boys in plaid" that star in the show.

"I play 'Sparky' in the show. He's kind of the cut-up or class clown type of the group," he said.

Though he did admit it is not an easy task.

"It's a bit precarious sometimes," he said. "I try to astral project myself into the audience to see what we're doing on stage."

Originally scheduled to run from Wednesday, Dec. 5 to Sunday, Dec. 23, large amounts of ticket sales have led the theater to extend the show to Dec.

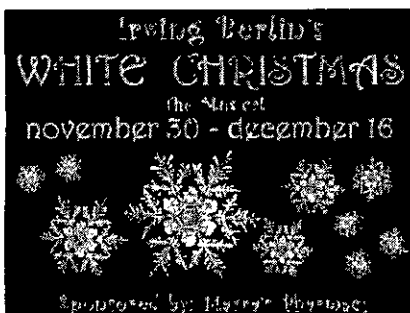

30, with no fear that the holiday being over will slow the spirit.

"The extension is already in place and it is selling quite well," said Alison McLean, director of marketing and communications for the Capital Repertory Theater.

"People are looking for things to do with their children after the holiday is over, between Christmas and New Year, and taking them to a show is a great way to spend time together."

BC gives Irons tourney win

The Bethlehem boys basketball team gave new head coach A.G. Irons his first tournament championship, as the Eagles downed Niskayuna 60-47 in Saturday's Niskayuna Invitational final.

The Eagles (2-0) jumped out to a 21-9 lead in the first quarter and made 16 of their 24 foul shots to fend off the Silver Warriors (1-1).

Joe Kane scored 17 points, Dan Lanchanin contributed 11 points and Kevin Wendth added 10 points for Bethlehem. Alex Olbrych's 17 points paced Niskayuna.

The Eagles advanced to the Niskayuna Invitational finals with a 77-39 victory over Amsterdam last Friday. Kane led three Bethlehem players in double figures with 22 points. Wendth and John Drazan each added 16 points.

Bethlehem began its Suburban Council season Tuesday at Columbia.

Siena

Conference game against St. Peter's - not one of Siena's big rivals.

Let's say that Siena concedes home court to UAlbany every other year to keep the rivalry going. The game still has to be played at the TU Center because it's the only place that can accommodate the massive crowds that have become expected when the two teams play (more than 13,000 showed up Saturday). So even if UAlbany is listed as the home team on the scoreboard and Siena's name is covered on the court, the court will still bear Siena's colors. It can't be helped.

Let's also say that UAlbany gets to sell the majority of the TU Center's seats. That may help the Great Danes draw more supporters to the arena, but it won't help sell out the place. Siena fans still outnumber UAlbany fans in this region, and you can bet those Siena fans will find a way to buy up any leftover UAlbany tickets. End result: there will still be more Siena fans than UAlbany fans in the building. So much for home court advantage.

What UAlbany needs to do is get over the fact that it's still playing second fiddle to Siena in the hearts of Capital District sports fans and just play the game. People want to see the rivalry continue because the games are getting more interesting. In the last three years, there have been two overtime games and one that was decided by four points. While Siena won in all three cases, UAlbany has proven that it's capable of competing with the Saints. With a little more time and some shrewd recruiting, the Great Danes might even start beating the Saints more frequently than once every four years.

But we won't know unless Brown and the Great Danes continue this rivalry. Hopefully, they'll get past needing a home court advantage to do so.

they switched to zone, and we were very patient in looking for shots," said Nealon.

"At times our press worked, and at times it didn't. At times our zone worked, and at times it didn't," said Fiore, who made her varsity coaching debut. "We have to become more consistent defensively."

As the gap continued to widen, Colonie's offense took more chances. The Lady Raiders took the first open shot they had at the basket, but most of those fell short, which led to plenty of defensive rebounds for Bethlehem.

"They ran some nice (offensive) sets, and they got some open looks. They just didn't fall for them," said Nealon.

"We're not going to make all of our shots, and we have to do a better job of crashing the boards," said Fiore.

McCullough finished with 24 points, while Kristina Maksuti and Paula Gadomski combined for 19 points off the bench for Bethlehem. Kay Deso scored 10 points to lead Colonie.

Bethlehem capped its tournament with a 51-50 overtime victory over Big 10 power Catholic Central Saturday. The Lady Eagles rallied from a 24-18 halftime deficit to tie the game at 45 at the end of regulation before pulling out the win.

Meg Olsen led Bethlehem with 17 points, while Kiersten Swete contributed 12 points and Meksuti added 10 points off the bench. Allison McGrath's 19 points paced Catholic Central (1-1).

The Lady Eagles opened their Suburban Council schedule Tuesday when they faced Columbia in Delmar. They host Niskayuna Friday.

Lady Eagles impressive in debut

A role reversal took place when the Bethlehem and Colonie girls basketball teams met at the Bethlehem Tip-off Tournament last Friday.

Instead of Bethlehem chasing Colonie, it was Colonie chasing Bethlehem down the court.

The Lady Eagles used an aggressive full-court press and pushed the tempo on offense on their way to a 75-45 victory over the Garnet Raiders.

"We kind of changed our philosophy and decided to push the ball up the court this year," said Bethlehem coach Mark Nealon.

For years, Colonie had been the team that forced turnovers and made it difficult for opponents to catch their breath. But on this night, the Lady Raiders found themselves turning the ball over and struggling to stay with Bethlehem.

"We were nervous," said Colonie coach Heather Fiore, who started three players with limited varsity experience and two newcomers. "It took us a while to get going. Fortunately, we get to play Bethlehem at least once more if not two more times."

Bethlehem (2-0) got things going late in the first quarter. Forward Sarah Thompson converted a pair of Colonie turnovers into layups at the other end to spark a late run that gave the Lady Eagles a 17-12 lead.

Bethlehem broke the game open in the second quarter at the free throw line. The Lady Eagles made 12 of their 19 foul shots, and center Alex McCullough added three baskets to make the score 41-23 at halftime.

Colonie (0-1) tried to close the gap in the third quarter. Abandoning their full-court press, the Garnet Raiders attempted to slow Bethlehem down with a zone defense. It worked for a little while, but the Lady Eagles ended the quarter with a 12-2 run to increase their lead to 55-31.

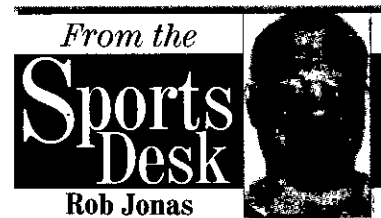

"When we broke their press,

Siena will always have home court in rivalry

University at Albany men's basketball coach Will Brown said in the week leading up to his team's annual game against Siena that if the crosstown rivalry is to be renewed next year, then something has to be done to give his Great Danes a home court advantage.

Bad news, coach Brown. Your Danes aren't going to have a home court advantage unless SEFCU Arena is expanded to seat 10,000 people so you can play the Saints on your campus. And anyway, you need to keep the rivalry going. It's one of the few times a year you're guaranteed to get major attention from the local media.

The truth is that as much as UAlbany has done to increase its visibility and viability as a premier men's college basketball program in the Capital District since 2001, it is still considered to be No. 2 behind Siena. That's not based on what happens on the court, where UAlbany has a better record than Siena the past four years to go along with consecutive NCAA Tournament appearances. It's based on the number of people who follow each program.

For all of their success, the Great Danes still have trouble filling their own 4,500-seat on-campus arena. Other than the last two "Big Purple Growls" and the 2006 America East Tournament championship game (all sell-outs), they have often played in front of half-full stands. It's still better than the small crowds that showed up while they were struggling in the first half of this decade, but it's nowhere near what it should be for a program as successful as UAlbany.

Meanwhile, Siena has needed to play all of its home games at the Times Union Center because its following has grown too large to use its Alumni Recreation Center. While it's true that the end zone seats have to be blocked off to create a more intimate setting, it's not for a lack of interest. As long as the Saints are winning, more than 5,000 people will show up on average, even if it's a mid-season Metro Atlantic Athletic
