Taxpayers balk at levy hike

Supervisor defends numbers as residents question police costs

By JARRETT CARROLL

After a lengthy budget presentation by Supervisor Jack Cunningham, the public got to weigh in on the proposed 6.87 percent tax increase, and the supervisor was chided into making a revelation.

"None of you are up for re-election this year ... and I was wondering if the budget would be up this high if you were up for re-election?" asked Delmar resident William Stewart.

Cunningham responded, "I will tell you I run every two years for this office, I intend to run next year for this office, and if I didn't think this was the reasonable thing to do in the best interest of this community I wouldn't be sitting here doing it. I don't set my budget because I am or not running for office, I am doing it because it's the responsible thing to do."

Bethlehem unveiled its $38.67 million spending plan for next year during the Wednesday, Sept. 24, board meeting.

Next year, Democratic board member Kyle Kotary and Independence board member Sam Messina are up for re-election, along with Cunningham, a Democrat.

The proposed budget constitutes a 2.8 percent spending increase over this year's $37.63 million budget and an overall 6.89 tax rate increase for the town's combined general fund, highway department tax rate, and water and sewer district tax rates.

The proposed tax rate increase would result in a $17.45 increase per $100,000 of assessed value. Cunningham said the average home assessment in Bethlehem is $285,000 and during his presentation, he told residents that not all tax increases are equal.

Forwarded e-mails reveal committee resignations and apparent coup

Town Republicans say they are moving forward after an apparent rift divided some committee members and even divided support for the Republican candidate for the 21st Congressional District.

The rift has led to some committee members leaving the party and new members jumping on board.

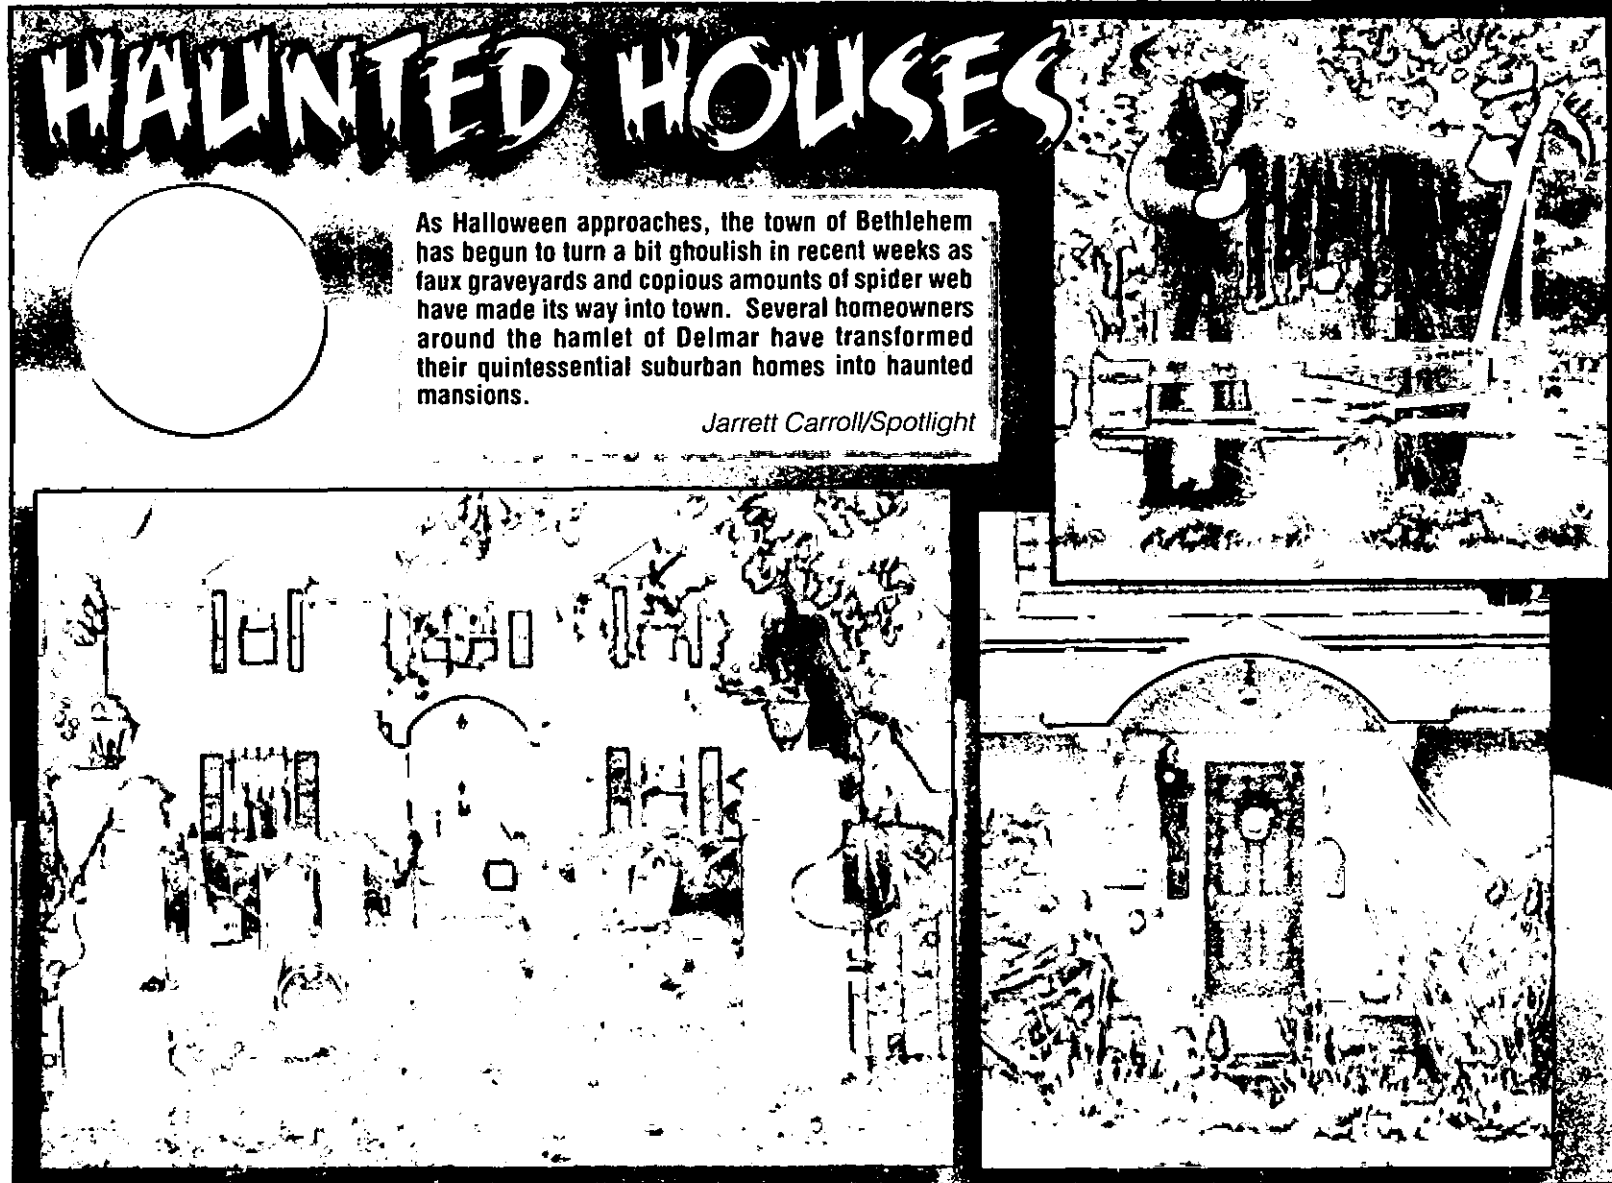

Bethlehem Republican Chairwoman Melody Burns was re-elected to her post in September by the Town of Bethlehem Republican committee after vocal community activist and former county legislature hopeful Jared King challenged her for the seat.

Burns won the party election, and King is now out of the committee.

Police Blotter

Ravena woman charged with DWI, marijuana possession

Bethlehem police arrested a Ravena woman for driving while intoxicated in Selkirk and discovered she was carrying a bag of marijuana when they booked her at the police station.

Sandra L. Wilson, 35, was arrested on Thursday, Oct. 16, for DWI; driving with a blood-alcohol content of 0.08 percent or greater; unlawful possession of marijuana; and driving on the shoulder of the roadway.

Police said an officer on routine patrol saw Wilson driving south on Route 9W and observed her vehicle drive onto the shoulder of the road.

Wilson was stopped by police and officers could smell alcohol on her breath while interviewing her and said they saw her display signs of intoxication, according to the arrest report.

When asked if she had been drinking, Wilson told police she had four drinks before driving home from an Albany bar on Delaware Avenue, according to the arrest report.

Police said Wilson failed three field-sobriety tests and tested positive for alcohol before being taken into custody and transported to the Bethlehem Police Department for processing. There she submitted to a chemical test that revealed a BAC above 0.08 percent, according to the report, and police discovered a clear plastic bag containing marijuana in Wilson's possession while processing her.

Wilson attempted to call her husband from the police station, but was unable to contact him, and her vehicle was towed from the scene, the report states.

She was arraigned before Town Justice Paul Dwyer and scheduled to appear in Bethlehem Town Court on Wednesday, Nov. 5, before being transported to her home by taxi.

Other arrests

• Guilderland police arrested Bridget M. Maher, 46, of 13 Timber Lane, Glenmont, for DWI on Wednesday, Oct. 8, according to police reports.

Maher was arrested near 1704 Western Ave., near the Town Center, and was scheduled to reappear in court on Thursday, Oct. 23, the report states.

• Guilderland police arrested Mark R. Tatko, 27, of 6 Farnsworth Drive, Slingerlands, for DWI on Sunday, Oct. 5, according to police reports.

Tatko was scheduled to reappear in court on Thursday, Oct. 23.

• Guilderland police arrested John S. Nemier, 47, of 30 Koonz Road, Voorheesville, for DWI and other charges on Friday, Oct. 3, according to police reports.

Nemier was also arrested for unlawful possession of marijuana and leaving a scene with property damage, and was scheduled to reappear in court on Thursday, Oct. 16, according to the report.

Correction:

In the Oct. 22 issue of The Spotlight, the story titled "Crashing the Party," contained a graph detailing the number of enrolled members of each political party in Albany, Saratoga and Schenectady counties.

In Saratoga County, the number of Democrats and Republicans were reversed. There are 68,268 Republicans and 37,011 Democrats in the county, according to the state board of elections.

Electing to make a difference at any age

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR
Spotlight Newspapers
news@spotlightnews.com

You hear some seemingly crazy stuff from candidates running for office.

When I ran for student council in high school, one of my slogans was "The canned hamburgers have got to go." I was referring to the hamburgers served in the school's cafeteria.

Why did I think the hamburgers came out of a can? Like many politicians, I must now say, "I do not recall."

Did another student tell me that the burgers came from a can? Was it my idea or did a trusted advisor spark the notion? Did the burgers taste like they had been stored in a can? Was the slogan just a joke?

"I do not recall."

What I do remember is that I really wanted to be student council president. Not because I had a vendetta against canned meat or because I wanted something to put on a college resume, but because I truly wanted to make a difference. Some might also say I was a glutton for punishment, but I prefer to think I had drive. You decide.

It all started in my sophomore year. There was a big assembly in the gym. The school housed both a junior and senior high (grades seven through 12) and possibly the entire student population was present. During the assembly the current student council president gave a speech. What was his speech about? "I do not recall."

What I do remember is that the student council president was a senior named Rick. Rick was someone I'd known since childhood. He lived up the road from me. He was a regular guy. And what I thought at this assembly was, "If Rick can be student council president and rally school spirit, then perhaps I could run for a school office and do the same."

So, in the fall of my junior year I ran for class president. Each candidate gave a speech to the 100 or so kids in our 11th grade class.

What was my speech about? "I do not recall."

What I do remember is that it was nerve racking to address my classmates.

Also, I remember that in my speech I made reference to the various labels given to students. My goal must have been to promote the idea of inclusiveness, as in, "whether you're a jock or a preppy, we all need to work together..."

It was the '80s, so there were jocks and preppies. In my school, there was also a group known as the be-bops. I don't know if they existed elsewhere. And I don't recall whether the be-bops called themselves by that name or if outsiders applied the label. I think the be-bops might have been a subset of the preppies. Or vice versa.

In any case, I remember using the term "be-bops" in my speech. Oh, and I also remember that I lost the election. The winning team consisted of two girls who ran together as co-presidents. Moreover, one of girls on that co-president ticket had been class president since at least as far back as the fifth grade. So basically I was running against a team that included a long-term, well-liked, competent incumbent.

I knew from the get-go that I was a long-shot candidate. And although I only received about one-third of the votes, I considered that an admirable accomplishment since my opponent was actually two people. Still, losing the election was a disappointment. On the plus side, I didn't have to worry about organizing the junior class carnival, a massive undertaking that involved lots of students and parents and was a major fundraiser to which the whole community was invited in the spring.

Instead, just months after my junior class election defeat, I put my hat in the ring again. This time it was for the position of high school student council president. And this time I was not a solo candidate, but a member of a team, including a vice president, a treasurer and a secretary. Between the four of us we represented honor students, athletes, cheerleaders, musicians, thespians, dancers, and more.

What were my campaign issues other than the line about the canned hamburgers? "I do not recall."

What I do remember is that my team won the election, and so during my senior year in high school I served as student council president for grades nine through 12.

There were no canned hamburgers in the lunchroom during my tenure. Of course, there were no canned hamburgers before I got elected either. So I guess I can't take credit for getting rid of them. I never even learned how the hamburgers were actually packaged or prepared.

What I did learn is that if you want to make a difference you can. I also learned that it takes a long time to make changes, and sometimes you can only set the wheels in motion for changes that will come to fruition after you have moved on.

I worked on improvements to the school lunch program. I surveyed the students and discovered that what many of them wanted was a salad bar. And then I sought guidance from the school administration, including the assistant principal, Mr. B., who was the advisor to student council.

Looking back I see that I learned about preparing business meeting agendas, conducting meetings, presenting proposals, researching requirements and considering fiscal implications. I learned that offering a salad bar wasn't as simple as purchasing a large table with sneeze guards and spaces for canisters of lettuce, cucumbers and tomatoes. The components of the salad bar had to meet certain school lunch criteria, the likes of which "I do not recall."

Eventually students were able to select a salad bar option when buying lunch at school. I had hoped the salad bar would be in place before I graduated, but it wasn't implemented until after I'd gone off to college. The bulk of the credit goes to the school administrators who made my idea a reality. Without their know-how and support and actions, change would not have been possible.

When I campaigned for student council I knew I couldn't shorten the school day or eliminate homework, so I focused instead on areas where I could make a difference.

This year on Nov. 4, all eligible adults can and should exercise their right to make a difference. Don't get discouraged about all the seemingly crazy stuff you hear from candidates. Focus on the positive goals and maintain your hope for the future. Take an interest in local elections and the individuals who may affect changes in your own community. Find out the plans of the candidates running for office in your town and county so that you can make an informed choice. And if you have the opportunity, bring your children into the voting booth and teach them to cherish freedom and democracy. That will be an experience they will recall for years to come.

Open to ideas on open space

Residents discuss issues regarding recreation and agriculture

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Bethlehem opened up the discussion on its proposed open space plan Thursday, Oct. 23.

Holding their third public hearing on the possible townwide comprehensive land use plan, town officials focused the meeting on three specific topics: recreation and pathways; natural systems and agriculture; and farming as it pertains to the proposal.

The meeting began at 7 p.m. at Town Hall, with attendance lighter than the May meeting but with a similar format. Residents were broken into smaller groups to brainstorm and discuss the topics.

Town Planner Jeffrey Lipnicky gave the initial presentation to residents, followed by information from Senior Planner Robert Leslie.

Lipnicky said safe routes and connectivity to nearby parks and recreation, farming and agriculture, and environmental protection were some of things residents identified as important in previous meetings. He said trespassing concerns have come up a number of times concerning the proposed open space plan.

"Some of the types of issues that came out [of the discussions] that we continuously hear were trespassing on private property; the issues of encroachment, liability concerns regarding trespass and things of that nature," Lipnicky said. "And these are issues that we will obviously need to address as we move on."

One focus of the meeting was asking residents to identify goals for the town that could be included in the open space plan, and Leslie discussed what types of land are in town.

"We have about 426 acres of public recreation land, and that represents roughly 1 percent of our town land area and this is made up of our town parks like Elm Avenue Park, the Henry Hudson Park and the smaller neighborhood parks like the North Bethlehem and South Bethlehem parks," Leslie said. "Colonial Acres is one of our latest recreational areas."

The town maintains Colonial Acres Golf Course, which is leased from the Open Space Institute for $1 a year. According to town figures, the golf course has turned a profit in its first year of operation for the town.

Leslie also said that schools provide recreational areas throughout Bethlehem, and that the town recently opened up public fishing areas along the Onesquethaw Creek. He added that there are 788 acres of conservation land in Bethlehem that represents about 2 percent of the town's land area.

"We've come to think of pathways as those areas where you travel by foot or on bicycle," Leslie said. "Pathways can be sidewalks or multi-use paths."

Albany County has recently approved a measure to purchase an old railway bed in town and has plans to convert it to the Helderberg-Hudson Rail Trail, which would run from Voorheesville to Albany.

Leslie said this pathway would be a part of the town's network of trail systems.

Behan Planning Associates is working as a consultant for the town to help shape the new land-use policy. The town hired the firm strictly in an advisory capacity — not to draw up an open space plan, according to Supervisor Jack Cunningham.

"It's obviously a very individualist decision (land-use options)," John Behan told residents at the May workshop. "What's important to you is important to us."

Department of Economic Development Director George Leveille said the town is looking for feedback on what is to go into the plan and where residents rank their comprehensive land-use priorities.

The Citizen Advisory Committee on Conservation meets the second Monday of every month. More public hearings are expected as the town works to define its open space policy.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

Say no to expensive programs

Dare we say it: The Colonie Police Department needs to reconsider its decision to keep its D.A.R.E. program afloat.

The program will continue this year despite a lack of state funding, because the department believes it is a valuable tool in teaching students to remain drug free, according to Colonie Police Chief Steven Heider.

Earlier this year, Gov. David Paterson cut funding for various programs throughout the state, leaving it up to the Colonie town budget and taxpayers to fund the $400,000 D.A.R.E., Drug Abuse Resistance Education, program.

Does a town with a $19 million deficit need this added expense? We say no.

And just what does the $400,000 cost go toward? A workbook? T-shirts? Officer vehicles?

The true teachers of D.A.R.E., which was implemented in New York state schools in 1989, should be the parents of students, at home, starting at an early age. With the abundance of information about drugs and alcohol on the Internet, in periodicals and on television, parents should feel well equipped to teach their children about the dangers of substance abuse.

As reinforcement to parental teachings, many students also learn to stay away from drugs in middle-school health classes, and this is already being done in the North Colonie Central School District.

According to the North Colonie School District Web site, its health course includes the study of self-esteem, decision-making, drugs, alcohol, tobacco, first aid, HIV/AIDS and family life. The goal of the course is to provide students with the knowledge and skills needed to live a healthy life.

We're all for keeping kids away from drugs and alcohol and building bridges to help students succeed, but with other options available to teach students about the dangers of drugs, and a $400,000 price tag heading to taxpayers, we're feeling hung over about the whole situation.

Tuesday, Nov. 4, is Election Day. Be sure to have your opinion heard and exercise your right to vote. This year is shaping up to have many close races on all political levels, so before you head to work, on your lunch break or after the five o'clock bell rings, be sure to head to the polls and vote.

If you could be like anyone, who would it be

By KATHERINE MCCARTHY
news@spotlightnews.com

The writer is the senior regional director of communications for the American Heart Association, a Town of Bethlehem Planning Board member, and former editor in chief of Spotlight Newspapers.

There's so much to think about this time of year. When will we have time to put the storm windows up? Do we rake now, or wait till all the leaves come down and do it all at once? Who's coming for Thanksgiving? When will the first snow fall?

Add to this year's list the need to choose a new president, in the midst of turbulent economic times.

It's enough to make you want to settle in for a long winter's nap, and not get up till spring.

Fortunately, that's not the mindset of most residents of the Capital District, and a few in particular go out of their way to make the place they live better.

Public service has become so important that many high school students can't graduate till they spend a little time doing good. In today's busy world, it seems hard to find the time to do that little bit of good, and yet, people do.

This fall, if you looked at any calendar on a Friday, you saw a listing of fundraising events. Newspapers and TV stations throughout the weekends were chock-a-block full of people walking, running and biking for any number of causes. Thousands turned out to raise money to fight heart disease, breast cancer, autism; to protect animals; to support their local churches at harvest dinners.

It is always moving to see so many people gathered to work together for a single cause. At each event, there were countless volunteers helping the paid staff make the events memorable: disc jockeys and local media talent keeping the mood lively; people setting up and serving food; people cleaning up; people dancing and singing and cheering the participants on; local business people who helped a charity of their choosing do a little bit more than it could have alone. Here's to everyone who laced up their sneakers, picked up a phone, or cheered on a fundraiser this fall — way to go!

On a local level, there are people who work every day to improve their communities. Last week in Bethlehem, we paid tribute to Parker Mathusa, the planning board chairman who's also made sure that our town is part of the quadricentennial celebration of Henry Hudson's big trip up the river that now bears his name.

I've served with Parker on the planning board for six years, and have known him longer; he is patient when he needs to be, inquisitive when it calls for it, and blunt once in a great while. Parker grew up in Bethlehem, and I love to hear him talk about days square dancing in old barns that still stand or recall his paper route when a new development is proposed where he used to drop off newspapers. Parker reminds us all of the way our town used to be, and of the things we love and want to keep even as we seek to let it grow in ways that will benefit all of us.

He also conducts himself the way we all think people routinely used to, unfailingly polite and warm. He always has a big smile and a hello. He also takes the time to listen, and to pay attention, so that he always remembers a salient detail about something happening in your life. He's always been good at connecting the dots; at putting people and things together in ways that help us all.

And at the end of each planning board meeting, he thanks us for our leadership. It's always an honor to hear that, and reminds us of why we were all appointed to that particular board.

Who do you know who leads by example, and in a way that you might want to follow? Think for a minute about the kind of people you like to be around; the kind of people you seek out.

In our snarky, sarcastic society, we often seem to admire the people who are capable of being hard. Why is this? Whenever I'm around blunt, rude or self-centered people, I want to slink away from them.

I wish I were a saint, but far too often, I also give in to flippant or sarcastic comments. But whenever I am mean or sarcastic to someone in a hurtful way, I feel just terrible. Few things are as bad as watching the hurt in someone's eyes when I've been mean to them — even if it is an unhelpful or rude clerk who piques my ire.

Surely we are not all put together for such a brief time on this earth to be hideous to each other. Sure, sometimes life feels very hard and very busy. But still, don't we owe it to each other to take just a small step back and realize that everyone has their own burden to carry? Does it hurt to say hello, please or thank you?

I think sometimes we seek to lighten our burdens when really we should pick up something that helps us on this path of life.

If we stop and ask when we felt best about ourselves or when we were happiest, the answer will likely have something to do with having been kind to somebody, or done something we didn't think we really wanted to, but did anyway. Or, it may be when we worked together on a project that required many hands. We're rarely at our best in a bubble. Here's betting that the happy moment you recall involved somebody else.

Life is a long and sometimes arduous journey. But if we all take a close look at the people we'd like to be like, and strive to emulate their best attributes, we'll all get there together. And who knows, we might do a little good along the way.

Thanks, Parker, for your leadership. You're the guy I'm emulating.

Town board just going through the motions

Editor, The Spotlight:

In the article titled "Town bans banners" on the front page of the Oct. 15 issue of The Spotlight, Supervisor Jack Cunningham and Councilman Mark Hennessey said they had not received written or verbal comments on these zoning changes. What were they doing during the public hearing on the zoning code?

On record in the minutes of this Town Board meeting of Sept. 24, I commented on a number of zoning issues. I specifically spoke against a ban on banning banners. It is a disservice to the small businesses in the community and the consumer. The small business, which the town often talks about wanting to encourage and keep, needs to have the flexibility to advertise. A banner could easily get the attention of a customer in an affordable way. As a consumer, I like to see advertisements that can save me money or note a useful product. I might be interested in patronizing shops that I otherwise would not consider at the time. I think both parties could benefit from the use of banners and other on-site advertisements.

It is also interesting to note that these zoning changes were only solicited from the town departments that are involved in the implementation and enforcement of the zoning code. Only after the government decided what was best, did they hold a mandatory public hearing. Even then, they did not have the documents easily accessible for review. Did they even notify the Chamber of Commerce in a timely manner that this was taking place, so they could notify their members ahead of this hearing?

Unfortunately, I have seen many times when the public speaks; the town board gets that glassy eyed, bored look, where they look like they aren't even listening. Questions by the public are even ignored. I have often thought they are just going through the motions of letting the public vent, since they have made up their minds already. Their comments in this article show that they can't even remember that someone spoke at all, never mind what was said.

Eat less meat, fried foods, snacks for a healthier heart

Editor, The Spotlight:

A study of 16,000 people in 52 countries in the current issue of Circulation found that eating meat, fried foods and salty snacks raised the risk of a heart attack by 35 percent. Conversely, a diet rich in fruits and vegetables reduced the risk of a heart attack by 30 percent.

Again, a 24-year study of 88,517 female nurses in the April 14th issue of Archives of Internal Medicine found that those who ate lots of fruits, vegetables, whole grains and plant-based protein were 24 percent less likely to have a heart attack and 18 percent less likely to have a stroke than those addicted to a more typical American diet.

With the cost of medical care becoming a national crisis, it's high time for each of us to assume more responsibility for our own and our family's health by becoming more selective with our food dollars.

Lunchroom efforts not on a trial basis

Editor, The Spotlight:

As the principal of Eagle Elementary School, it's important to address the suggestion in a letter last week that our school is engaged in some type of trial effort to use completely disposable lunchroom gear. This is not true.

Eagle opened as a brand new school this fall, and, as one might imagine, getting every single supply, material and piece of equipment into place is a massive effort. Plastic, reusable trays were on back-order at that time, so the children did unfortunately have to use Styrofoam trays when school opened. I'm happy to report that the reusable trays arrived in early October, and we made a seamless transition to them. Children put their food right on the tray — no disposable plates are used.

Napkins made from recycled paper and disposable plastic utensils are used. Washing reusable silverware takes manpower, and would further cost taxpayers in the utensils that were lost regularly when the district did have such a system. In my conversations with our Food Service Department, I learned that napkins and utensils challenge school districts across the country trying to be both cost effective and environmentally friendly, and that we continue to investigate ways to be both.

I could not agree with the letter writer more that adults should be setting an example for children by conserving energy and protecting the environment. Here at Eagle Elementary, among initiatives such as recycling, we are also investigating the possibility of establishing some nature trails throughout "our backyard" in the future that will give students valuable, real-world learning experiences in the natural environment. Principals recently learned that last winter, less energy was used for heating across the district. This is thanks to the community's investment in more modern and efficient heating systems as part of the capital construction project and efforts to maintain temperatures at pre-established set points. Schools are looking at avenues to most effectively promote recycling efforts.

If anyone has questions — or ideas — about energy usage or environmental practices, I encourage them to contact their school principal or the superintendent's office. At Eagle, and across the district, we approach the energy and environment from a simple premise: The planet belongs to our students. What we teach them today will determine their stewardship of it in the future.

District mourns local school official

Steven O'Shea loses battle with cancer, community loses leader

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Steven O'Shea, a man known throughout the Capital District for making the business of area schools his business, died Thursday, Oct. 23, at his Gunderland home surrounded by his family. He was 52.

Steven O'Shea

Born in Canton, he was the son of Elmer O'Shea and the late Harriet O'Shea. He graduated with his master's degree from the University at Albany and worked tirelessly as an assistant superintendent of business for the Corinth, Scotia-Glenville and Bethlehem school districts.

"It is with great sadness that the district announces the death of Assistant Superintendent for Business Steven O'Shea after a lengthy battle with cancer," the district said in a statement.

O'Shea had worked for the Bethlehem Central School District for the past 11 years and handled the financial reins of the suburban school district during a time of considerable growth and transformation.

Superintendent Michael Tebbano said O'Shea's presence will be missed.

"Anyone who knows Steve knows that the district is not the same without him," Tebbano said. "Steve was an excellent financial steward for Bethlehem Central and its taxpayers. He was also a great friend. I know I speak for many in the district who worked closely with Steve when I say that it's hard to imagine BC without Steve's sense of humor, his calm presence and his leadership and knowledge of school finance."

O'Shea joined the district in 1997 after serving as a school business administrator for the Scotia-Glenville Central School District, where he helped implement several substantial technology improvements and capital construction projects.

He used his experience at Scotia-Glenville to help serve the Bethlehem district as well.

"He will be remembered as a smiling, steady presence who did great work for Bethlehem Central for more than a decade, according to the statement released by the district. "Mr. O'Shea's leadership and expertise were invaluable, particularly with the historic 2003 capital project that has done so much to improve the district's technological and physical infrastructure for students."

The New York State Association of School Business Officials awarded a $1,000 scholarship in O'Shea's name at last year's Bethlehem Central High School awards evening. The scholarship went to a graduating senior who planned to pursue a degree in business, finance or education.

According to the award description, O'Shea's peers across the state did this to recognize him as a member of their organization "who exemplifies honor, commitment and dedication," in their profession.

District officials said the Bethlehem Board of Education will decide on who will take over the helm of the district's business office in the coming weeks. In the meantime, its operations will remain under new school business administrator and former town comptroller Judi Kehoe and with the assistance of a retired school business official.

"He will be dearly and wholeheartedly missed" by the survivors he leaves behind, his family wrote in a tribute. "We would also like to thank more than words can say for the care and support given Steve and us by the staff at Ellis ICU 1 and from Albany County Hospice."

Survivors include his wife, Paula O'Shea; a son, Shawn (Heather French) O'Shea, a daughter, Tamara (Matthew) Hanzalik; three grandchildren, Connor O'Shea, Aiden and Liam Hanzalik; eight brothers, Charles (Claudia), Robert (Sue), Bruce (Betty), Gerald (Kelly), Clarence (Adair), Marvin (Janet), Brian (Maria) and Robin (Shelly); two sisters, Dorothy (Robert) Powers and Linda (Tyge) Clyde; and several nieces and nephews.

Mr. O'Shea's daughter, Shelly Ann O'Shea, died before him.

Arrangements were by the Catricala Funeral Home Inc., in Clifton Park, and a funeral Mass was held Monday, Oct. 27, at the St. Andrew's Episcopal Church in Scotia. Burial was in St. Anthony's Cemetery in Glenville.

Contributions in O'Shea's name may be made to the American Cancer Society, 260 Osborne Road, Albany 12211, or the Community Hospice of Albany County, 445 New Karner Road, Albany 12205.

Commissioner of the New York City Department of Records and Information Services Brian Andersson holds a United States flag found in the rubble of the World Trade Center towers with the eighth-graders from St. Thomas the Apostle School in Delmar.

NYC records official visits school

The eighth-grade students at St. Thomas the Apostle School in Delmar got the history lesson of their lives on Monday, Oct. 20, when the commissioner of the New York City Department of Records and Information Services (DORIS) visited.

Commissioner Brian Andersson, a member of Mayor Michael Bloomberg's staff and a well-known genealogist, was invited to come to St. Thomas to speak to the school's upperclassman, who are preparing for a trip to Washington, D.C., in May.

The commissioner talked about ancestry, shared photos of old New York and gave a slide presentation that included the original marriage certificate of Eleanor and Franklin Roosevelt as well as the birth certificates of a number of distinguished New Yorkers. Empowered by charter mandate with managing New York City's records, the Department of Records, through its unique library, is the provider of information concerning the government of the city.

Among its collection of data and information, the department also houses vital records including birth, death and marriage certificates.

The students had the unique opportunity to view old tax photos, as well as photographs of original immigration manifests, and had the honor of viewing and touching the only U.S. flag to survive the 9/11 attacks on the World Trade Center towers.

Found amongst the rubble, a torn and fragile flag was delivered to the New York fire commissioner, who handed it over to Andersson and his staff. The flag was hermetically sealed and accompanied the astronauts on the Endeavour space shuttle, which traveled over 14 million miles before returning to Earth.

Brought out on every Sept. 11 anniversary by the commissioner, the flag is flown at Ground Zero in Manhattan.

Spotlight Newspapers to launch series on AMD

Whether it's at Town Hall meetings, candidate forums for the upcoming election or the opinion page, the same three-letter subject seems to be on the lips of residents across the Capital District: AMD.

That's especially true for those who call Saratoga County home. Since the announcement just over three weeks ago that the California-based microchip maker has committed to building a $4.5 billion factory at the Luther Forest Technology Campus in Malta, the proposed project has drawn more scrutiny and questions than ever before.

Business pundits the world over are analyzing AMD's deal with two Abu Dhabi investment companies, one of which will be splitting the responsibility of building and running the Malta facility – named Fab 4x – under the banner of the Foundry Company.

Closer to home, residents of the towns of Malta and Stillwater are wondering what a $5 million grant from AMD will mean. That story was covered in the Thursday, Oct. 16, Spotlight in our Saratoga County editions.

But dollars and cents are only one measure of what is a pivotal moment in the area's history. According to AMD's figures, Fab 4x will bring 6,500 new jobs to the area, if you count all the ancillary industries that will be fueled by its arrival. It's fair to say that many of those workers don't already live in Malta or the surrounding area.

In the spirit of investigating the arrival of the Foundry Company to its fullest, Spotlight Newspapers will be publishing a weekly feature focusing on the different aspects of our communities that will feel the impact as the area changes.

Next week, look for coverage of how the area's schools are adjusting to the idea of the Capital District becoming New York's "nanotech valley," from the college level on down.

Local school districts are adding to their curricula and offering students options for hands-on nanotech learning. At the same time, some school boards are considering the possibility of hundreds of incoming students and are turning their attentions to building expansions and budgeting for growth. And local colleges are preparing to build out their nanotech programs to train researchers and technicians for a future in the field.

So be sure to pick up a copy of the Nov. 5 Spotlight, or go to www.spotlightnews.com to read about the challenges and benefits ahead for the county and region.

Library to look at online networking

Do you have friends you meet with routinely, who help you get things done or give you a connection for a new job? Have you attended a camp reunion, a college reunion, or a family reunion?

If so, then you are a social networker! But, how does social networking happen online and why do many people go online to do it?

Join us Sunday, Nov. 9, at 2 p.m. as David Adkins introduces us to the art of online networking and how to use it. He will be accompanied by some of his students, who will acquaint you with their own special techniques of networking for young people, and Voorheesville senior Jessica Brown, who will share her online networking experience.

Adkins is the director of information technology for New York State United Teachers.

Rosenbaum to sign book, talk politics

Richard Rosenbaum will be at the Book House of Stuyvesant Plaza to sign his new book, "No Room for Democracy: The Triumph of Ego Over Common Sense" and discuss the 2008 presidential race Thursday, Oct. 30, at 7 p.m.

Beginning with a foreword by Henry A. Kissinger, "No Room For Democracy" walks readers through Rosenbaum's life. Born in 1931, he was a Jewish boy growing up in a predominately gentile community in Oswego County and suffered from alopecia, which results in a premature loss of hair. He became a college boxing star and later Nelson Rockefeller's right hand man.

"No Room For Democracy" details events that Rosenbaum both witnessed and affected:

• The campaign he successfully orchestrated on behalf of Rockefeller to be named Gerald Ford's vice president after Spiro Agnew's resignation preceded Richard Nixon's from the presidency. When Ford replaced Nixon as president and had to appoint a new VP, George H.W. Bush was actively pursuing the job. Many insiders were surprised when he did not get it – and credited Rosenbaum for the coup.

• The story behind the $35,000 mink lined bed, designed by artist Max Ernst, which Rockefeller had installed in the vice president's residence.

• His campaign to deny Ronald Reagan the Republican presidential nomination in 1976 and gain the nomination for Ford.

Town honors Mathusa □ Rift

Longtime local figure presented with dedicated Henry Hudson Park bench

By JARRETT CARROLL
Spotlight Newspapers
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

The community presented Parker Mathusa with a heartfelt thank you and a bench dedicated for his years of dedicated service to the town of Bethlehem.

Town planning board members, past and present, as well as other town officials flank Parker Mathusa during his park bench presentation ceremony at Town Hall on Wednesday, Oct. 22. Mathusa was honored for his work on the Quadricentennial Committee and for his lifetime committee to the town of Bethlehem. From the left, former Supervisor Teresa Egan, Mathusa, and Supervisor Jack Cunningham sit on the bench that will be placed in the Henry Hudson Park.

Jarrett Carroll/Spotlight

During a special presentation at Town Hall Wednesday, Oct. 22, residents and town staff filled the auditorium shortly before the town board's bi-monthly meeting.

Before the board got down to the business of the town, Supervisor Jack Cunningham took a few moments to get down to the business of honoring Mathusa, the town's planning board chairman and go-to guy on everything Bethlehem.

There wasn't an open seat or a dry eye in the room as Mathusa was given a proclamation and had a bench with a placard dedicated to him.

"I'd like take a moment to talk about an item that's not on the agenda ... his name is Parker Mathusa," Cunningham said. "About four years, under Parker's leadership, our Quadricentennial Committee asked to join in the commemoration of the navigation of the Hudson River by Henry Hudson."

"Tonight I just want to take a moment to thank Parker for his leadership, both on the Quadricentennial Committee and throughout the town and for all he's done for us," Cunningham said.

Cunningham added that he's learned about Mathusa over the years.

"I learned that Parker went to school in a one-room schoolhouse; Parker's a lifelong resident of this town; Parker has a passion and a love of this town that I think is not matched by any one else in the community," he said.

Cunningham read a proclamation from the town before he, along with Mathusa's family, unveiled the bench with the placard. The bench will be placed at the town's Henry Hudson Park in honor of Mathusa's work on the Quadricentennial Committee.

Next year is the 400-year anniversary of explorer Henry Hudson's navigation of the river that bears his name.

"Now Parker, I know you're going to want to put this on your front lawn," Cunningham joked, "but it is town property so we're going to put in the Henry Hudson Park."

Mathusa's second daughter of four spoke next.

"Thanks to Jack Cunningham and Kim Ryan, we've been planning this surprise," said Heather Tangora. "So my father had no idea, and we intentionally did not tell my mother so she didn't ruin the surprise. So this was a big feat to pull off."

Tangora thanked everyone, which included state Sen. Neil Breslin, D-Delmar, and former Supervisor Teresa Egan, for coming to Town Hall to share the experience with their family.

"This is now officially pop's bench," she said.

Two of Mathusa's granddaughters read prepared speeches afterwards.

"Pop, you've been everything to me, I wish I could stay in your arms forever and hear your heart beat against my ear," Brittney Tangora said. "You have proven to me that even the smallest things in life matter the most."

committee members from former Town of Bethlehem supervisor candidate Victor Rodriguez, who has begun his own political action committee called RodPAC.

The e-mails detail an apparent coup led by King to remove Burns from the helm of the town party and also revealed some of the workings of the committee concerning membership and political activities.

The intra-party fighting seems to have led to a few resignations as well as several threats of resignation, and centers around King's assertions that the party's leadership was playing "town politics" and only looking out for its own political future and not the party's.

After the party's first election, Burns said King had suggested scheduling a new election using a weighted vote after he spoke with Tom Marcelle, the Albany County GOP attorney.

"Jared ran against me. ... He pretty much had it all arranged," Burns said. When asked if King was still in the committee, Burns said, "Nobody really knows, he was involved in the elections in January when I was elected and nobody saw him again ... until May or June."

Burns did say King "is a good worker" and that "Jared is a political animal; he loves this stuff. He lives and breathes politics."

King wrote an e-mail to fellow party members laying out his vision for the party.

"I've got a plan for Bethlehem that builds Republican community, introduces candidates, provides value to people, recruits volunteers, attracts NOP and Democrats, and makes your job as a committeeman much less labor intensive," King wrote. "Are you willing to help? In the words of Martin Luther King, 'I am more concerned by the apathy of the good people than the hate of the bad people.'"

King also wrote in one e-mail that he only asked Marcelle for confirmation that a weighted vote should have been used and not for an actual re-vote. He wrote that Albany County Republican Chairman John Graziano told him he could ask for another vote if he wanted.

"I asked Tom Marcelle to confirm what I thought to be true, namely that because the current leadership conducted an election that violated Rule 7 of the county committee's bylaws, the election was void," King wrote. "County Chairman Graziano also told me at the county organizational meeting that I would not have to sue the county party to force the Bethlehem general committee to comply with the county bylaws, that a new election was yours for the asking, whenever you want."

When reaching out to other members for support, King received an e-mail response from Norman Morand, who told him he had left the committee and suggested to King that if he cannot get along with other party members for the good of the party then he should resign, too.

Rodriguez originally forwarded the e-mails anonymously,

"It seems as if after the last few losses, the party lost its way, and rather than coming together, they are falling apart at the committee level."

Victor Rodriguez

ously, but when asked to go on the record by Spotlight Newspapers, he responded.

"I cannot stand behind the cloak of anonymity while sending salvos against those I oppose. It seems as if after the last few losses, the party lost its way, and rather than coming together, they are falling apart at the committee level," Rodriguez wrote. "It seems as if they put more importance in their committee position, than on winning elections. I hope that this is a wakeup call to the committee and the registered Republicans in town that something needs to be done to revive the party."

He said that King tried to get him on his side.

"Jared attempted to recruit me for the committee and I did consider returning to the party that I started my political career in," said Rodriguez. "However, I don't feel that putting all my efforts into a dysfunctional committee is the right thing for me. This is the sort of thing that drove me away from the party. The principals of federalism and conservatism are being tossed aside by partisanship."

Autumn essentials

Latest fall fashion trends might already be sitting in your closet

Within the last weeks, perhaps you noticed a change in what you were wearing. Maybe you broke out your scarf collection and replaced your sandals for boots or some other type of footwear that provides a little more coverage.

It's official: Fall weather has blown into town.

Naturally, one might feel a little down now that the warm, euphoric days of summer are gone, and people have to wear more than a skirt and a T-shirt to feel comfortable. Don't totally give in to despair, though, with the thought of colder days to come, because with cooler weather comes an excuse to break out your favorite fall essentials.

If for some reason you're lacking any of these items, then you have an excellent excuse to go shopping: It's time to switch fashion gears and start getting cozy for frigid weather. With so many options for fall-wear this season, you're going to be excited to pick out your tomorrow's outfit. Think about comfort and rich fabrics and colors, too. The best part is that you probably have most of these items in your closet already (so you can stop thinking about our economic recession for a little while) — they just might need a little re-working.

"You can always use a wonderful cashmere sweater," says Sharon Fenno, owner of Circles in Albany.

"We're selling right now a lot of the longer sweaters, almost like a sweater coat, and I think it's a great transition piece because you can wear it now outside and as it gets [even] colder out, and you can wear it inside throughout the winter," says Fenno.

A popular style within the long-sweater-category is the "grandfather sweater."

"It's a long button down sweater with pockets. It looks great over a dress— even a dressy dress," says Fenno.

Depending on the length of the grandfather sweater and the material, it can be worn in a variety of ways from day to night, from the office to a formal event. You can wear it as a dress (if it's not too short) with leggings or tights, you can wear it over a dress, or belted with a pair of skinny jeans, or even paired with wide-leg work trousers. The grandfather-cardigan presents you with an abundance of options for creative dressing and will keep you warm not only through the fall season, but winter, too.

In terms of color, blacks and grays continue to be popular, as well as classic hues. Neon colors add a refreshing twist to the mix.

"Jewel tones are really in right now — so you have your purples and your emerald greens, and your traditional black and grays. ... You're [also] seeing the bright, bold, neon colors — in the shows we went to we saw a lot of the bold colors, like the cobalt blues," says Beth Jameson, owner of Frivolous Boutique in Saratoga Springs.

For coats, anything goes in terms of length and color, but some sought-after materials include boiled wool and tweed. In terms of a pattern, plaid isn't only for hunters anymore.

"I think that you're seeing a mid-length coat between the knee and the waist, and if a woman's wearing a skirt you're seeing the definition there that you can wear skirts or pants with a mid-length coat," says Jameson.

Three-quarter coats continue to be popular when worn with long gloves for warmth, as well as capelets (hooded or unhooded). Blazers remain sought after in all sorts of materials and colors, ranging from velvet to wool to tweed.

"They can really dress up a jean outfit. We're selling jackets that you can put with jeans or with a nice pant so that you can stretch your wardrobe," says Fenno.

You can also stretch what you've already been wearing by layering and adding scarves. Instead of wearing one T-shirt, wear two, and you can always throw a sweater or blazer over whatever you're wearing, not only to add a little warmth, but a little pizzazz, too.

"It's not as much about getting out your super heavy pieces as it is about layering. It's all about taking some of the pieces you've been wearing for the past month but putting a sweater over it or doubling a T-shirt or putting a scarf on," says Fenno.

"I think scarves are a nice transition piece that you can wear inside, [and] some of them are big enough that you can also use them as a wrap," says Fenno.

When it comes time to leave the house and you have to choose your footwear, go for boots. Riding boots continue to be not only a practical, but fashion-forward option (wear them over jeans, or with a skirt or a dress), as well as fringed boots of all lengths.

[People are] really focusing on the ankle boot, and matching your tights to the ankle length boot if you're going to wear it with a skirt," says Jameson.

For purses, it seems that most anything goes. Ladies are carrying everything from demure clutches to carryall bags. Can't decide on what you want? Get both.

"A lot of people are buying a bigger bag and putting a small bag in it to transition from day to evening," says Jameson.

There you go. Instead of hopping in the car and heading to the mall, browse through your closet and see what you already have — add an extra T-shirt to the one you're already wearing and throw on a scarf, and you'll be fall friendly.

The grandfather sweater can be worn in a variety of ways from day to night, from the office to a formal event.

New York State Theater Institute founder Patricia Snyder had a question for John Romeo.

After more than 25 years with the theater, were there any roles Romeo still yearned to play?

Actually, he said, there was. He had always wanted to be Lennie in "Of Mice and Men."

"It's one of the best roles in contemporary theater," he said.

Romeo gets his wish Friday, Oct. 31, when the curtain rises on NYSTI's production of "Of Mice and Men," John Steinbeck's Pulitzer Prize-winning story of friendship set in Depression-era California. Romeo's character is a simple-minded gentle giant; David Bunce plays George, a fellow ranch hand who acts as Lennie's de facto caretaker.

There are plenty of laughs in the beginning, director Ed Lange said. But at its core, he said, "Of Mice and Men" is a tragedy: Lenny accidentally kills a woman while trying to stroke her hair, and George, wanting to spare Lenny from a vengeful lynch mob, shoots him in the back of the head.

In most roles, actors get to show how smart they are, Romeo said. In this one, though, his job is to give an understated performance, without reducing Lennie to a "caricature."

"It works so against your natural actor instincts," he said.

That challenge was one of the reasons he'd always wanted to tackle the role of Lennie. Another was his respect for Steinbeck's story.

"The ideas are complex," Romeo said. "It's very deep and very complex. It says so much about society, men, and life in the '20s and '30s."

For Bunce, what sticks out most about the story is the relationship between George and Lennie.

"It's such an incredible story of friendship," he said. It might seem that Lennie is a burden; but "I think George gets as much out

Friends on and off the stage

Lead actors, director in NYSTI's 'Of Mice and Men' have had a bond for decades

of it as Lennie does. I think it's a very symbiotic relationship."

Bunce actually played the role of George once before, but only briefly. In college, he and a classmate acted out the first and final scenes of "Of Mice and Men" for another student's directing project.

He loved the part, and getting to reprise it alongside Romeo holds special significance for Bunce because the two are longtime friends themselves.

"We've been doing plays together for 25 years," Bunce said. "It's very comfortable working together. With just a nod, we can translate what we need to do."

Lange, the director, shares that sense of familiarity. Lange retired as NYSTI's associate artistic director in 2006; before that, he had called Bunce and Romeo co-workers for more than two decades.

"There's really something special about working with people you know so well," he said. "We have a way of communicating with each other. We just understand."

The ease with which the trio works together has helped them overcome the unusual production schedule for "Of Mice and Men." The cast had its first rehearsals in August, then had to break for more than six weeks while NYSTI staged "Twelve Angry Jurors."

Romeo said that he could concentrate on only one show at a time, so he had to put "Of Mice and Men" on the back burner while he worked on "Twelve Angry Jurors." That proved frustrating, because when the "Of Mice and Men" cast reconvened on Monday, Oct. 20, things weren't quite clicking the way they had in August.

"We were in a groove," Romeo said. "We've had to do a lot of catching up."

In fact, on the first day rehearsals resumed, Lange panicked.

"I thought, oh my gosh. We're never going to be able to get this thing back on track," he said.

But by mid-week, the cast was right back where it needed to be.

"It kind of all came together," Bunce said.

Lange, who credits the actors' professionalism for the quick turnaround, comes back to NYSTI once a year to serve as guest director and is thrilled to be at the helm of "Of Mice and Men." When Snyder gave him a list of titles to choose from and he saw "Of Mice and Men" on the list, "I jumped at it," he said.

Like Romeo, he cited the depth of the story as one of its main attractions.

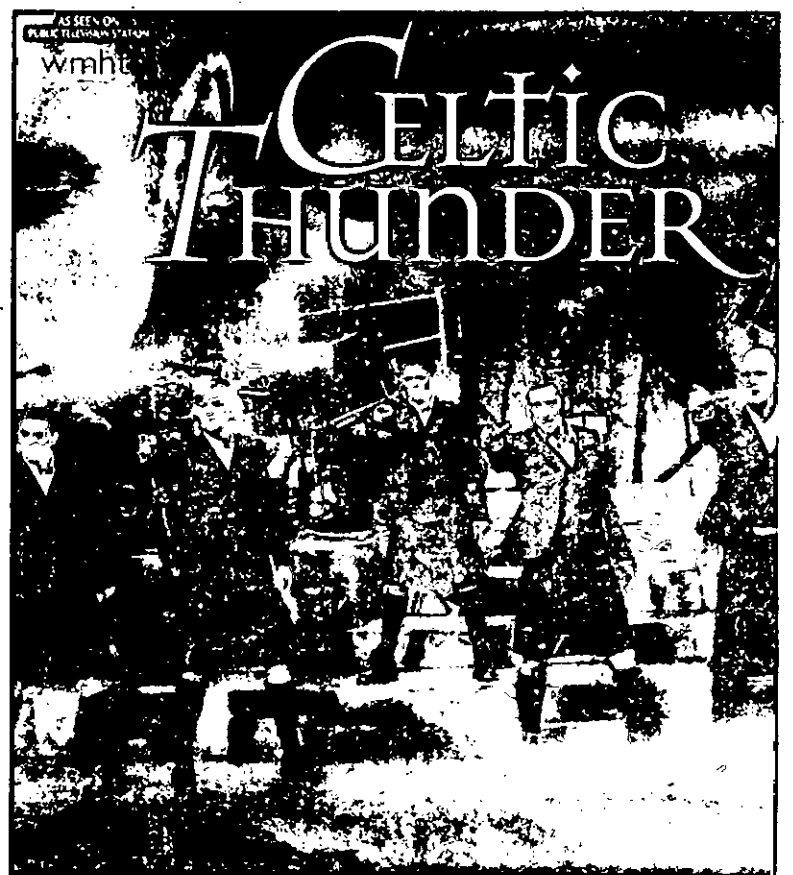

"The characters are extremely simple. They're trying to make the best out of their lives," Lange said. "And what comes out is this enormous complexity about human nature. You get this wonderful rainbow of people and experiences."

"Of Mice and Men" runs from Friday, Oct. 31, to Sunday, Nov. 9, in the Schacht Fine Arts Center at Russell Sage College, 5 Division St., Troy. Tickets are $20 for adults, $16 for senior citizens and students and $10 for children 12 and younger. They can be purchased by calling the NYSTI box office at 274-3256 or visiting its Web site, www.nysti.org.

on the environment and that a Draft Environmental Impact Statement (DEIS) must be prepared. Written comments may be submitted on the draft scoping outline and will be accepted by the Department until COB on November 10, 2008. A Public Scoping session is scheduled for Wednesday, October 29, 2008 at the Rev. Coeymans-Selkirk High School auditorium from 7 to 9 PM, which will provide the public an opportunity to comment on the Draft Scope. The proposed action involves modernizing the existing Lafarge cement facility, replacing the existing wet manufacturing process with a dry manufacturing process. The proposed modernization includes the construction of a new tower of 525 feet, and increased carbon monoxide emissions. Other emissions and operations such as water use, effluent discharge, and generation of solid waste will decrease or remain relatively unchanged. The facility is located in the town of Coeymans, Albany County, east of Route 9W approximately 2.25 miles north of the intersection of Route 143 and Route 9W. Copies of the Environmental Assessment Form, the Positive Declaration, and the draft Scoping Outline are available for review at the website www.bathlehem-cha-ber.com/modernization or at: quarterfinal in Troy.

Bethlehem (4-4) tied the game at 14 late in the second quarter when Sean Murphy capped a series with a five-yard touchdown run and Randy Bowers threw a two-point conversion pass to Sam Gallup. But LaSalle (6-2) quickly drove down the field and scored when Mike Murphy connected with Lou DiNovo on a four-yard touchdown pass. The Cadets misfired on the extra-point attempt, but they entered the locker room with a 20-14 lead.

Things went from bad to worse for Bethlehem in the third quarter. LaSalle tailback Marquis Terrell took off on a long run on the first play from scrimmage and scored a short time later on a five-yard run to make the score 26-14. Then following a Bethlehem punt, Terrell put LaSalle in scoring position with another long run deep into Eagle territory. Terrell capped the series with a 15-yard touchdown run to give the Cadets a 33-14 advantage.

After another Bethlehem punt, LaSalle came up with one more quick-strike touchdown. Murphy connected with Vinnie Planz on a 36-yard touchdown pass, and Josh Terry added the extra point to put the Cadets ahead 40-14.

Bethlehem's offense never got going in the second half. Bowers had a tough time hitting his receivers, and LaSalle's defense bottled up Murphy and Eagle tailback Casiem Maxwell. When it was over, Bethlehem managed 190 yards of total offense – less than Terrell's individual effort (237 yards).

Bowers did throw an eight-yard touchdown pass to Kyle Niehaus on Bethlehem's first offensive series of the game, which gave the Eagles a 6-0 lead. The senior quarterback completed five passes for 83 yards, while Murphy rushed for 96 yards on 16 carries.

LaSalle meets Saratoga Springs in the Class AA semifinals Friday, while Bethlehem faces Columbia in a crossover game.

Indians get another home game

Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk won't have to hit the road for this weekend's Class B semifinals, thanks to Hudson.

While the Indians (6-2) disposed of Cobleskill-Richmondville 48-0 in one quarterfinal last Friday, Hudson (3-5) surprised Schalmont 13-12 in another quarterfinal to set up a rematch between the two Reinhardt Division teams Friday in Ravena.

R-C-S is peaking as it heads into the semifinals. The Indians dominated both sides of the ball against Cobleskill, racking up 435 total yards of offense while limiting the Bulldogs to 118 yards.

"Defensively, we came off the ball really well, played our gaps and handled our responsibilities well," said R-C-S coach Gary VanDerzee.

Tailbacks C.J. Murray and Mike Garza each rushed for more than 100 yards and two touchdowns to lead the Indians. Quarterback Keith Hoyt threw for 117 yards and a pair of first-quarter touchdowns including a 60-yard scoring strike to Jameel Caldwell, and Nick LaMountain added a touchdown run.

VanDerzee said the offensive line helped R-C-S pile up the yards against Cobleskill.

"The offensive line is a fairly new group, and it's only the second or third game (this year) where they've played together," said VanDerzee. "So, they're still getting better."

A victory over Hudson Friday would propel the Indians into their fourth Class B Super Bowl in the last five years.

"Any time you're one of the four teams left playing, you feel pretty good (about your chances)," said VanDerzee. "We just have to keep on improving."

• A New York Mets relief pitcher – guaranteed to turn a spark into a raging inferno

• The person responsible for that State Farm commercial with football players and fans singing "Feelin' Kind of Sunday" badly – MAKE IT STOP PLEASE.

• Phillie Phanatic – I don't know where that creature came from, but we have to send him back now

• Seth Appert – RPI hockey coach's enthusiasm is contagious, which makes him a pandemic threat

• Ticket to new Yankee Stadium or new Giants Stadium – guaranteed to give sticker shock (you'll need another mortgage to afford the personal seat license)

• Travis Henry – people will keep a tight hold on their possessions when they see you

And finally ...

• O.J. Simpson – the standard bearer for scary sports figures.

Happy Halloween, everyone. Now, on to this weekend's high school football playoff predictions, which can be scary in their own right:

Class AA

LaSalle at Saratoga – LaSalle tailback Marquis Terrell can rack up a lot of yards with a few spins and some great acceleration, but Saratoga's running backs – Leejay Pollacchi, Tony DeLoatch, Ford Plowman and Ben Cook – can rack up a lot of yards by bulldozing their way through opposing defenses. Give the edge to Saratoga.

Niskayuna at Schenectady – The last time these two Liberty Division teams met, an Arena Football game broke out with Schenectady winning 64-42. I don't think the score will be quite as high this time around, but expect fireworks ... and another Patriots win.

Class A

Troy at Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake – The Flying Horses may be the only Section II team with the size and strength to slow down the Spartans, but I have to believe BH-BL will wear down Troy's defense eventually. The Spartans win and move on to the Super Bowl again.

Amsterdam at Bishop Maginn – The Rugged Rams have improved since opening the season with a loss at Maginn, but I don't think they've improved enough to beat the Golden Griffins. Maginn's speed and athleticism propels them past Amsterdam.

Class B

Hudson at Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk – Truthfully, I was hoping to be in Rotterdam for a semifinal game between R-C-S and Schalmont, but Hudson spoiled it by edging Schalmont 13-12 last week. I don't think the Blue Hawks will be able to pull off two consecutive upsets, though. The Indians move on.

Hudson Falls at Cohoes – This should be a ground war between Hudson Falls' Joe McMurry and Cohoes' Steve Weaver. Ultimately, I think the Tigers will win ... more specifically, it will be the Hudson Falls Tigers.

The Bethlehem junior varsity boys volleyball team completed an undefeated season by winning last week's Suburban Council Tournament at Colonie Central High School. The Eagles defeated Shenendehowa in the finals to finish with a 28-0 record, including an 18-0 league mark in the regular season. Bethlehem's roster included nine sophomores, six freshmen and an eighth grader. The players are Ben Porter, Sam Vincent, Mike Carrk, Jasper Marynczak, Jake Abbuhl, John McCarty, Brendan Taillon, Matt Richards, Scott Clas, Justin Angermeier, Nate Kane, Michael Marshman, Kyle Landrigan, Stephen Drew and Stewart Allendorph, and the team is coached by Jim O'Keefe.

from the Indians and controlled the action in the second half – eventually getting the only goal of the game on Ryan Dimmitt's tally.

"Although it took a half because we hadn't seen that (physical play) out of Schoharie, I think playing in the Colonial Council helped us adjust to it because we've been involved in some physical games this year," said Sanchez.

Voorheesville's goal was created with a crisp pass. Haden Wood redirected the ball forward to Dimmitt, who launched a hard shot inside the Schoharie penalty box past goaltender Jake Baumann.

Dimmitt's goal came after several Voorheesville shots went wide or were stopped by Baumann.

"We started to settle down a little bit (in the second half) and possess (the ball) more," said

Sanchez. "The first half was pretty physical on both sides."

Baumann made nine saves for Schoharie, while goaltender Lee Fenner stopped six shots for Voorheesville, which advanced to Tuesday's Class CC semifinal against undefeated Lake George in Glens Falls.

"It'll be a tough game," said Sanchez. "(Lake George is) the favorite being unbeaten and the No. 1 seed, but playing in the Colonial Council will help us in that game because we've faced some tough teams before."

The Bethlehem boys soccer team was looking to advance to the Class AA semifinals Tuesday when it hosted Colonie in a quarterfinal game.

The Eagles (12-4-3) made it out of the first round with a 4-0 victory over Troy last Thursday. Four players scored goals for Bethlehem, led by Harrison Lane's one-goal, one-assist performance. Tom Klim, Steve Russo and Chris Wilsey had the other goals for the Eagles, and goalie Dan Maddock made three saves.

V'ville sweeps Troy Invitational

The Voorheesville boys and girls cross country teams prepared for this weekend's Section II Championships by sweeping the team titles at last Saturday's Troy Invitational.

Voorheesville had three girls in the top four of the Varsity I division race to run away with the team title, while the boys team placed three runners in the top 10 of its division to pull away from the competition.

Michelyn Little earned an individual title by winning the girls Varsity I division race with a time of 19:39.21, while teammate Casey Morrison finished second in a time of 20:55.44. Sawyer Cresap was fourth in a time of 21:02.15, and Zoe Edmunds placed sixth in a time of 21:18.70.

Kate Reynolds (13th place, 22:18.36) rounded out the top five for Voorheesville, which won the team title with 23 points. Bishop Gibbons was the Blackbirds' nearest competitor, finishing second with 72 points.

On the boys' side, Conor Cashin, Ian Powell and Taylor Treadgold all finished in the top 10 to lead Voorheesville to the Varsity I division team title with 43 points. Cashin led the Blackbirds with a third-place finish in a time of 16:16.18, while Powell placed seventh in a time of 17:32.15. Treadgold was ninth in a time of 17:38.13.

Bethlehem participated in last Saturday's Suburban Council Championships at Saratoga Spa State Park in Saratoga Springs. The girls team placed seventh out of 12 schools, while the boys team finished ninth in its race.

Amy Luke led the Bethlehem girls team with a 29th-place finish in a time of 19:27.49. Molly Hassett (37th, 19:39.83) also finished in the top 50 for the Lady Eagles in a race dominated by runners from Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake, Shenendehowa, Saratoga and Guilderland.

BH-BL took the girls team title with 37 points, four points ahead of Saratoga. Bethlehem finished with 192 points.

Yousef Said was the top Bethlehem runner in the boys race. Said placed 12th in a time of 15:49.05, less than six seconds out of a top-10 finish.

Chris Collier (43rd, 17:01.67) and Spencer Gyory (44th, 17:03.34) also finished in the top 50 for Bethlehem, which had 230 points. Shen pulled away to the boys team title with 31 points, nine points ahead of BH-BL.

Dimmitt's goal lifts Voorheesville past Schoharie

By ROB JONAS

There is an advantage to playing in a traditionally strong boys soccer league.

Voorheesville was able to weather Schoharie's physical play to pull out a 1-0 victory in the Section II, Class CC quarterfinals last Thursday.

"Schoharie is a physical and athletic team, and they put a lot of pressure on you," said Voorheesville coach Willie Sanchez. "That's tough to play against."

Fortunately for Voorheesville (14-4-1), it knew how to handle a tough opponent like Schoharie from playing in the Colonial Council against such top programs as Schalmont and Albany Academy. The Blackbirds weathered some early pressure

Scare your friends with these costumes

What's the scariest thing about Halloween being on a Friday this year? The possibility that normally-sane adults will dress up as the following scary sports figures:

- A Philadelphia Phantom or a Hershey Bear – sure to give River Rats fans nightmares
- An Albany Patroon – no matter how hard you try, you can't kill it
- Al Davis – he could live to be 100, which would be scary for Oakland Raiders fans and the NFL coaching fraternity
- Alex Rodriguez – can't hit

- with runners in scoring position AND he breaks up marriages
- A Cincinnati Bengal or a Detroit Lion – no one will take you seriously unless you're on a police blotter
- Barry Bonds – inflated head matches inflated ego
- Bill Belichick – no one will be able to tell if you're happy or angry

- Brett Favre – he won't leave until you admit he's the best quarterback ever
- Damien, the UAlbany Great Dane – demonic smile concerns me
- The Fox Football Robot – it would be more useful if it could throw a pass (especially for the San Francisco 49ers)
- Hank Steinbrenner – no one will be safe from his wrath until the Yankees win the World Series
- Kid Quest – even though he's gone to the Albany mascot scrap heap, those crazy eyes will still spook the bravest of souls (you never noticed? I'm surprised)

- Kimbo Slice – only scary until you get him inside an MMA octagon against a guy with a pink mohawk
- Manny Ramirez – you can do anything you want and get away with it by saying, "I'm just being Manny"
- Mike Tyson – even though he's been out of the ring for years, he's still the scariest boxer in modern history

Skimping on car care could be costly

AAA Hudson Valley offers vehicle maintenance to-do list

By ROMANA CIOLKO-APKARIAN

The author is manager of marketing and public relations at AAA Hudson Valley.

Last year, vehicle inspection events held during AAA Car Care Month uncovered various maintenance issues that were well on their way to becoming real problems. Following your car's recommended maintenance schedule ensures your vehicle operates safely, uses fuel more efficiently, lasts longer and retains its value for resale.

Tire pressure

Over-inflated tires ride roughly and wear prematurely at the center of their tread. Under-inflated tires decrease fuel economy, cause imprecise handling, wear prematurely at the edges of their tread, and can overheat and fail at highway speeds. Tires lose about one pound of pressure per month through normal seepage. As seasons change, tires lose or gain another pound of inflation pressure with every 10-degree change in temperature.

Check tire pressure (including the spare) at least once a month when the tires are cold. Always follow the inflation pressure recommendations in your owner's manual, or those on the tire information label in the the engine and operate other systems.

Inspect battery cables, clamps, and connections at every oil change. If there are signs of corrosion, slow engine cranking or dimming headlights at idle, have your repair shop test the charging and starting system, and clean and tighten the battery connections.

Windshield washer fluid

Rain, insects, grime and other debris on your windshield compromise your vision. A supply of washer fluid will help your wipers remove them.

Check your washer fluid reservoir often. During winter, use a solution with antifreeze protection. Test the washer spray nozzles for proper operation and aim.

Engine air filter

Your vehicle's air filter prevents dust and dirt from entering the engine. A dirty or clogged air filter restricts airflow and will reduce engine performance and fuel economy while increasing exhaust emissions.

Check the air filter every six months or 7,500 miles. Typically, your repair shop will inspect the filter at each oil change. You can check it by holding it up to a 60-watt light bulb. If you can see light through much of the filter, it is still clean enough to work effectively. If the light is blocked, replace it.

Battery cables/clamps/terminals

Power from the battery flows to the rest of your vehicle's electrical system through cables, clamps, and terminals. If these become corroded or loose, your car won't have the power to start

Engine oil

Oil is the lifeblood of your engine. Without adequate clean oil, your engine will wear more rapidly, and could seize and be destroyed. Oil doesn't freeze, but its viscosity (thickness) increases as the mercury drops. Lighter grade oils reduce the load on your car's battery and starter, allowing more rapid cranking and starting. They also reach critical engine lubrication areas quickly, greatly reducing wear.

Change your engine's oil and oil filter at specified intervals. Always use the weight of oil recommended by the manufacturer for existing temperature conditions.

Preventative car care is the best way to protect your safety and your investment. To locate a quality service facility, visit AAA.com and use the shop locator to find a AAA-approved auto repair facility.

Your vehicle will operate safely and remain dependable while traveling this winter season if you follow its recommended maintenance schedule.

glove box, on a door jamb, or on the underside of the trunk lid. Don't use the inflation pressure molded into the tire sidewall; it may or may not be the correct pressure for your particular car.

Be prepared for driving emergencies

Taking care of your car is important, but taking care of yourself should an emergency arise is even more vital. To be a prepared driver, always carry your AAA membership card, and equip your vehicle with an emergency kit that contains some or all the following items, depending on where you live and how far you travel off the beaten path:

- Jumper cables
- Tire chains
- Windshield washer fluid
- Coolant (50/50 mix)
- Wiper blades
- Light bulbs
- Hoses
- Belts
- Basic tools
- Tire pressure gauge
- De-icer for door locks
- Flares or reflectors
- Flashlight (with good batteries)
- Blankets
- Radio receiver
- Cellular phone
- CB radio
- Folding shovel
- Traction sand
- Ice scraper
- Food that won't freeze
- First-aid kit
- Medication you need regularly

Get your vehicle ready for the change of season

It seems like the kids just started school, but soon you'll be packing up and hitting the road on your next family vacation. And contrary to popular belief, the weeks leading up to the trip are not the time to start getting your vehicle ready.

A better trigger for that tune-up is the change of season. As soon as the temperatures cool and you start to notice leaves falling from the trees, it's time to start getting your vehicle ready. Here are three easy steps to follow:

1. Schedule an appointment with your mechanic.

When you bring your vehicle in for its fall or winter checkup, your mechanic may recommend a number of services to prepare your vehicle for the season, such as brakes, battery condition, oil and filters, hoses and belts. Two of the most critical items to check are antifreeze and tires. Your technician can recommend the minimum temperature threshold for your area, and add antifreeze as needed. Tire condition is even more important during the winter months. Remember the "Penny Rule": Insert a penny upside down in your tread groove; if you can see all of Mr. Lincoln's head, it's time to change your tires!

2. Put together an emergency kit.

If you don't have one already, put together a winter emergency kit. It should contain tools you can use to get out of a bind—such as adjustable wrenches that will allow you to make low-level repairs, jumper cables, a jack, air pump and flashlight. You'll also need a first aid kit to treat any injuries that may occur in an accident. And in case you get stranded, carry canned or non-perishable food items and a can opener, a few gallons of clean water and enough warm blankets to cover up the entire family.

3. Take steps to protect your vehicle's interior.

Fall/winter will bring with it mud, slush, dirt, salt and grime, all things that are hard to get out of the carpet. Protect your investment by upgrading your floor mats.

"Taking care of carpeting is probably one of the most overlooked aspects of vehicle maintenance," says Frank Turner of Lund International, makers of automotive accessories. "It's not there just for looks. It insulates the interior of the car, helps reduce road noise and protects the metal flooring beneath it."

The experts at Lund International offer the following tips for protecting your vehicle's interior from the wear and tear of the winter months:

- Whenever possible, shake excess dirt, mud and snow off your shoes before getting into the vehicle. This minimizes cleanup and helps protect the carpeting.

- Vacuum and shampoo regularly. Frequent vacuuming helps remove loose dirt before it becomes ingrained in the nap of the carpet. Shampooing or steam cleaning will help remove any built-up dirt and stains.

- Upgrade your standard issue floor mats with a more heavy-duty option.

Lund International's Nifty brand offers The Catch All product line, which provides protection for trucks, SUVs and even car interiors. Styles vary from plush OE nylon carpeting to the Nifty Extreme Catch-All which is made of Xynet, a custom molded thermoplastic material. Both styles resist water, snow, mud, grease and chemicals, are easy to install, and offer easy, take-out/hose-off convenience. The mats fit over factory-installed carpeting and come with a lifetime guarantee against cracking, splitting or breaking.

Shaking excess dirt, mud and snow off your shoes before getting into the vehicle and vacuuming and shampooing the carpets regularly will protect the interior from the wear and tear of the winter months.

- Enhance and protect your vehicle's trunk or rear storage area.

Whenever possible, place items inside a sturdy box or bag before placing them inside your vehicle to prevent spillage. It would also be a good idea to put a Lund Cargo Logic Cargo Area Protector over the carpet to keep salt, dirt and wetness from spoiling your interior. The included Cargo Loks, which Velcro right to the mat, can be used to help keep items from tipping and rolling around.

Are we there yet? Rules for happy carpools

Carpooling - It's been done for ages, most notably with the "soccer mom" set. But mothers and soccer players aren't the only ones carpooling these days. With gas prices near record highs and traffic congestion making commutes longer, driving alone now costs more than ever, the answer may be carpooling.

Carpooling is two or more people sharing a ride, often taking turns driving their own vehicles, according to the Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Authority (MTA).

California has about 32 million cars, but, says Roger Snoble of the Los Angeles County Metropolitan Transportation Author-

Who drives, and when

If you're driving, make sure you have a vehicle that's up to the challenge. For example, new vehicles like Ford's seven-passenger Flex crossover can make the commuting journey more comfortable, thanks to unique features, like second- and third-row leg room to make any passengers comfortable, SIRIUS Travel Link - a navigation system that can provide real-time traffic information, valuable for any carpool - and a refrigerator in the second row.

How often you'll carpool

It's not necessary to carpool every day if some days are more hectic for you than others, due to appointments, kids' practices and errands. Even setting up a once- or twice-a-week carpool is better than driving solo all the time.

Pick-up and drop-off arrangements

Determine your route and schedule. Establish a morning pick-up point and designate a place to meet for the trip home. In vehicles with navigation systems, it will be a cinch to get to your pick-up location. SIRIUS Travel Link may even save money on gas by finding the nearest and cheapest gas station.

Costs

Decide how your group will split costs before you start carpooling. The biggest cost is typically fuel, but there may also be toll, maintenance and parking costs to consider. In some larger groups, drivers are not charged a fee in exchange for taking care of vehicle maintenance and fueling the van.

Backup strategy

Determine a set amount of time the carpool will wait past the designated time for other carpoolers and stick to it. Also have a contingency plan in case the driver is sick, goes on vacation or the car breaks down. You should have at least two drivers in your carpool for backup.

Rules of the game

Establish policies. Food and

With high gas prices, more and more people are carpooling to work. Establishing some simple rules can make for an enjoyable carpool experience for all.

drinks, smoking or nonsmoking, radio stations or silence? Find out who's allergic to perfume and who can't handle even a few stray pet hairs. All of these details, if sorted out beforehand, make carpooling more enjoyable.

Contact sheet

Create a contact sheet that contains contact information for the other members of the carpool in the events of illness, accidents or other unforeseen circumstances causing last-minute changes.

Any other questions or concerns you may have

Also be sure to address any other questions or concerns you may have before carpooling begins, as the last thing you want is tension in the car.

Carpoolers may even consider establishing a carpool trial period of a week or two. This will allow time to give carpooling a try and determine if you're suited to carpool together, what adjustments need to be made, or if you will need to find a different carpool partner.

The Top 10 funniest cars of all time

Gas topping $4 per gallon, losses and layoffs among American automakers, and guilt over the tons of greenhouse gases our beloved automobiles dump into the atmosphere ... oh, yeah, American motorists could use a good laugh.

Fortunately, says Alonzo Bodden, winner of "Last Comic Standing 3," there's no shortage of material for joking about cars. In fact, Bodden plans to fuel his new SPEED Channel series,

"101 Cars You Must Drive," with some high-octane automotive humor. A former jet mechanic, he knows his way around cars and is ready to take viewers on a comedic look at some of the world's most famous - and infamous - machines.

"It's funny how big our cars are and how slowly we drive them," says Bodden. "Compared to Europe or Japan, we love our cars big. Compared to Germany, Italy and other countries, we have better roads with lower speed limits. That's probably a good thing because we're putting on makeup while on the cell phone ... and that's just not good at 140 mph."

So what cars make Bodden's list of funniest autos? Here they are in descending order. And you'll be happy to learn that not all of them are American made.

10. The Fiat 500 - "It's fun to drive a car that looks up to Mini Coopers as if they are limos," Bodden says. "Did I mention it's powered by a 500cc motorcycle engine? Just the thing to get out of the way of rampant SUVs. Of course, if you're under 5 feet tall and want 1,000 mpg, it's perfect."

9. AMC Pacer - Of course anything by AMC could make the list in Bodden's book. But the Pacer stands out as the first wide-body small car. "AMC always liked to answer the questions no one asked," he says. "Like, 'Why do you need a wide, small car?' Then again, if you like riding in a fishbowl, there is really only one choice."

8. AMC Eagle - The Eagle was the first four-wheel drive sedan, which sounds like a good idea. But an ugly body grafted onto a jeep chassis is not. "Maybe they were trying to take the title of trailer trash car from the El Camino," Bodden hypothesizes.

7. El Camino - Business in the front and fun in the back ... or was it fun in front and business in the back? Who knows? "Listen, Jeb," says Bodden, "put the El Camino up on blocks, let it rust and go buy a real pickup truck."

6. Mercedes Unimog - More unbelievable than funny. "Huge, indestructible - it will go anywhere and destroy anything in its path. 'Fun' would be driving one to the next Sierra Club rally."

5. The Edsel - Ford's folly is often cited as the essence of how to do things wrong. "Sure it's ugly, but that's balanced by the fact that it's under powered and handles poorly," Bodden says. "Way to go, Ford!"

4. The Pinto - And, while we're chuckling at Ford's expense, don't forget the Pinto. "What could be more fun than a car that would rust to pieces while you're waiting for someone to hit it so you could see the gas tank explode? Pintos weren't exactly built 'Ford tough,'" Bodity, "At 1.3 people per car, there would be no traffic congestion on our freeways."

Carpooling not only helps reduce the stress of fighting traffic every day, but can save thousands of dollars a year on wear and tear, car maintenance and gasoline. Carpoolers not only bypass the gas pump, they can also cruise past traffic in time-saving carpool lanes where commuters save 36 minutes a day on average (according to the MTA).

Finding people to carpool with is as easy now as it has ever been. Web sites and groups are dedicated to setting up carpools, and there is the old fashioned approach of asking co-workers, friends and neighbors.

Sharing your ride with others is not as easy as just getting in the car and hitting the road. With carpooling becoming more popular each year, a set of "carpool etiquette" guidelines can ensure the experience is beneficial and enjoyable for all involved.

Before starting any carpooling arrangement, it's a good idea to meet and work out the particulars, including:

Bringing a pet along on a road trip involves adapting your routine to the road — all of the things you take into consideration at home should be addressed when traveling with your pet.

Tips for road trips with pets

Bringing the family pet along on a road trip may seem like a good idea - you don't have to ask friends or family to look after your pet and you can avoid the costs and concerns that go with boarding and kennels. But traveling with pets in the car also brings special challenges that, fortunately, can be met with a bit of forethought and careful preparation of both the vehicle and pet.

According to information from the American Veterinary Medical Association (AVMA), which recently teamed with Subaru of America to produce a brochure on pet travel tips, bringing a pet along on a road trip simply involves adapting your routine to the road. All of the things you take into consideration at home - your pet's health, happiness and safety - should be thoughtfully addressed when traveling with your pet.

Here are 10 helpful tips for road-tripping with pets from the AVMA and Subaru:

- If your pet is not accustomed to car travel, take it for a few short rides before your trip so it will feel confident that a car outing does not necessarily mean a trip to the veterinarian or an unpleasant destination.

- Cats should always be confined to a cage or in a cat carrier to allow them to feel secure and prevent them from crawling under your feet while you are driving.

- Dogs riding in a car should not ride in the passenger seat if it is equipped with an airbag, and should never be allowed to sit on the driver's lap.

- See your automotive dealer for pet accessories designed specifically to fit your vehicle, such as compartment dividers that separate pets and cargo from the passenger area. Several automobile manufacturers, including Subaru, offer a dog guard/compartment divider that keeps pets safely in the rear cargo area of station wagons, "crossover" vehicles and SUVs.

- Pets should not be allowed to ride with their heads outside car windows. Particles of dirt or other debris can enter the eyes, ears and nose, causing injury or infection.

- Give small portions of food and water. Plan to stop every two hours for exercise. Remember to include a leash with your pet's traveling supplies.

- If your dog has a problem with carsickness, your veterinarian can prescribe medication that will help the dog feel comfortable during a long car trip.

- Pack a simple pet first-aid kit that includes assorted bandages, antiseptic cream, an anti-diarrheal medication that is safe for pets (ask your veterinarian to suggest a product), gauze squares, phone numbers for your veterinarian, and a 24-hour emergency veterinary hospital at your destination, as well as a national poison control hotline.

- In addition to a standard identification tag (which should be labeled with your name, home address, and phone number), your pet's collar should include a travel tag with information on where you are staying while away from home. Should your pet become lost, this will allow you to be contacted locally.

Air in tires: A political and money issue

Who knew that inflating tires would be such an issue between the presidential candidates? However, when Republican John McCain criticized his Democratic challenger Barack Obama, stating that proper tire inflation wasn't enough for energy independence, it touched off a firestorm of controversy.

Research has shown that a properly inflated tire is a way to help manage fuel consumption. This would save millions of oil barrels per year and would mean more money in people's pockets rather than money at the gas pumps.

For the consumers who are trying to save, properly inflated tires do seem the way to go. With gas prices having a national average of $3.59 a gallon, savvy consumers are seeking to increase fuel economy and the life of their wheels by paying more attention to their tires.

"Tires that are underinflated by just six to seven pounds per square inch can reduce vehicle fuel economy by as much as 2 percent and tire tread wear can also be reduced by as much as 10 percent," says Mark Chung of Yokohama Tire Corporation, which manufactures tires for passenger cars, SUVs, buses, trucks and airplanes. "Correct tire inflation pressure also reduces tire fatigue which maximizes the tire's service life."

The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) reports 66 million vehicles have underinflated tires, which literally means more rubber is hitting the road and, accordingly, miles per gallon is lessened. "With an average of 12,000 miles driven annually on tires that are underinflated by five to eight psi, and a vehicle average of 22 miles per gallon, tire experts speculate that about 726 million gallons of gas are wasted annually by U.S. drivers simply because they're driving on underinflated tires," says Chung.

At today's gas prices of as much as $3.65 per gallon (in California), 726 million gallons of gas translates to a staggering $2.6 billion lost by consumers for having underinflated tires.

"In addition, those 726 million wasted gallons result into 14,520,000,000 pounds of carbon dioxide released into the environment," Chung says. "We can all help prevent this by making sure our tires are properly inflated."

People can find the tire's proper inflation level on the vehicle placard located in the driver-side-door jamb, in the glove box or in the owner's manual. While there are about 3,500 sizes and types of tires on the market, Chung has some simple tips to aid proper tire wear:

and vehicle alignment should be checked once a year. Misalignment can cause the tire tread to slip and abrade, which lowers fuel mileage and causes unnecessary tire wear.

- An overinflated tire changes and increases wear on the center of the tread, whereas an underinflated tire increases shoulder wear. A tire is designed to run with the vehicle's weight spread correctly in the road contact zone.

For information, visit www.yokohamatire.com/csunderstand.asp for additional tire care and safety tips, the Rubber Manufacturers Association's Web site at www.rma.org and AAA Club at www.aaa.com.

"With escalating fuel prices, drivers are going to focus on simple things like proper tire pressure to maximize tire performance, increase fuel economy, help the environment and boost tread wear," says Chung. "Keep your tires properly inflated and you'll prevent your wallet from being deflated."

- Once a month, when the tires are cold - at least 3 to 4 hours after the vehicle has been driven - check tire pressure with a reliable tire gauge. Normal driving causes tires to heat, which raises air pressure. Be sure that the valve stems have a plastic or metal cap to keep out dirt and seal against leakage.

- Tires should be rotated at least every 6,000 to 8,000 miles

Looking for the fuel of the future

Throughout the presidential campaign this year, candidates from both parties have spoken of the urgent need to develop alternative fuels. American interest in alternative fuel technologies stems from concerns about the environment and also from this country's dependence on foreign oil.

With more than 2 billion vehicles expected to be on the roads worldwide by the middle of the century, a little anxiety is understandable. To meet this growing global demand for energy, scientists are developing alternative transport fuels that you may pump into the tank of your car some day.

"Shell has more than 100 years of experience in developing transport fuel technology," says Dan Little, fuels manager for Shell Oil Products US. "We have technology centers around the world that are driving advancements in fuels. While our research with alternative fuels will have tremendous long-term benefits, it's also impacting the fuel technology that's found at Shell retail locations today."

But what exactly are alternative fuels, and how will new technology affect daily commutes in the decades to come? The future fuels that scientists are working on could come from a variety of sources. They may be blended with conventional gasoline, or could be 100 percent pure. Some offer reductions in carbon dioxide emissions.

To better understand the wide range of different "alternative" fuels that are being developed, here's an overview of what may some day fill your gas tank:

1. Gas-to-Liquids (GTL) - Made from natural gas, GTL fuel is a cleaner-burning diesel fuel that's clear, odorless, sulfur-free and compatible with today's diesel engine. GTL can be used on its own or blended with diesel and has been cited by the California Energy Commission as the most cost-effective "alternative fuel" in reducing tail pipe emissions and our dependence on petroleum.

2. Conventional or "First Generation" Biofuels - Currently, available biofuels are made from food crops (e.g. corn, vegetable oil). Today's most common biofuel, ethanol, is usually made from sugar cane, corn or wheat. While these biofuels can be blended into gasoline and diesel at low concentrations, high concentrations of biofuels require fuel tank and injection system modifications.

3. "Second Generation" Biofuels - Made with non-food plant materials, such as wood chips, straw and algae, these fuels have the potential to be produced in high volumes. Currently they are expensive to research and develop, and it may be difficult to convince people to pay for their key environmental benefit, carbon dioxide reduction. However, they show real promise as an alternative fuel. For example:

- Cellulosic ethanol - Cellulosic ethanol has the same properties as ethanol that is already being blended with gasoline in many regions of the United States, but is made from non-food crops like wheat straw and corn stalks.

- Biomass-to-Liquid (BTL) - This second generation biofuel takes a woody feedstock, gasifies it and converts the gas into a high quality diesel fuel. The product has potential to be a low-carbon transportation fuel and is produced from a renewable source of energy.

4. Hydrogen - Hydrogen is the most plentiful element in the universe. Hydrogen fuel is a new form of transport fuel that can be used in modified combustion engines, but the best results are achieved through the use of "fuel cell vehicles." These engines generate electricity through an electrochemical reaction that produces just water and heat as by-products. Since hydrogen is not commonly found in its pure form, it must be produced from different energy sources, usually fossil fuels. If the full environmental benefits of hydrogen-powered vehicles are to be realized, a critical challenge is to produce, and fuels?

A key advantage of biofuels compared with conventional gasoline and diesel is that they generally produce less carbon dioxide on a life-cycle basis. This is because plants used in biofuels have absorbed carbon dioxide from the air while growing, which is then released when the biofuel is burnt. In theory, this leaves the balance neutral. However, energy is required to grow and harvest the plants, convert them into biofuel and distribute them, and this all produces carbon dioxide. Since the amount and sources of energy used in production vary considerably, the carbon dioxide emissions of different fuels need to be compared on a life-cycle basis.

It will take some time to develop "Second Generation" biofuels in significant commercial quantities. Until that time, companies should work to ensure the raw materials and conversion processes used today result in genuinely beneficial, low-carbon biofuels. That means accelerating the pace of international sustainability and carbon dioxide certification systems for the supply chain for "First Generation" biofuels.

3. The Popemobile - OK, not technically a make and model, but a funny vehicle, nonetheless. "Jesus walked on water and they put the Pope in this," Bodden says. "Are we sure they're talking?"

2. Dodge Viper - An example of the philosophy of do one thing and do it well. "It was 600 horsepower of pure acceleration for no reason at all. It can slam the front of your chest to the back seat and it doesn't have the luggage space to carry a briefcase. Step on the gas and try not to laugh at the excess of it all."

And, the number one funniest vehicle of all time is...

1. The Minivan - Yes, it works and it's a great way to carry the kids and all their stuff. "But what a sad way to castrate Dad," Bodden says. "That's right, Dad. No matter how much you trick it out, you're still driving a minivan. Sorry, man, but the hottie you just drove past isn't looking at you. She wants you to move out of the way so she can smile at the guy in the Porsche."

- Perform a daily "health check" on your pet when away from home. In unfamiliar surroundings, your pet's appetite, energy, and disposition may change. Watch for unusual discharges from the nose and eyes, excessive scratching or biting of any body part, abnormal elimination, or excessive water consumption. Visit a local veterinarian if you are concerned about any physical or behavioral changes.

As you can see, a little planning and a carefully prepared vehicle can make all the difference between a good time had by all and a road trip filled with regret.

Your vehicle's coolant system works hard to keep the engine cool and running smoothly, regardless of the weather.

Ten cool weather coolant tips

Baby, it may be cold outside, but inside your car's engine it's hot as blazes. Even when temperatures dip, your vehicle's coolant system works hard to keep the engine cool and running smoothly. It's important to take care of your cooling system, whatever the weather.

Antifreeze helps keep a car engine running smoothly, despite the temperature outside. When a car engine starts, coolant is pumped around the engine to either warm it up or cool it down. In addition to keeping the car at the ideal temperature, many antifreeze products on the market today also have extra additives to help prevent corrosion and expensive engine breakdowns.

Because it's an important part to keeping your engine running smoothly, it's essential to take care of your antifreeze. It's not too difficult a task and you can even save a few bucks by doing it yourself. Here are 10 easy steps to get you started.

1. Clean the radiator. As you drive, the cooling system of your car sucks in air, bugs, dirt, leaves and other debris along with it. It's important to clean the radiator so air can easily pass through it.

2. Place a drip pan under the car. Antifreeze is not meant for ingestion, either by humans or animals. Using a drip pan will allow for easy disposal and keep the environment safe.

3. Remove the radiator pressure cap. When the engine has cooled, place a rag on the radiator cap and twist off. You'll need to press down firmly with the heel of your hand, and perform two quarter turns to the left - one to unlock it, and another to remove the cap.

4. Inspect the pressure cap and hoses. The radiator cap helps keep the coolant properly pressurized. If the cap is rusting or dried out, replace it with a new one. Also look at the radiator hoses and check for leaks, cracks or soft and mushy conditions. Replace if necessary.

5. Drain the radiator. On the bottom of radiator, release the valve and let the fluid spill into the pre-placed drip pan. Pour the drained antifreeze into a container that meets disposal regulations for your area.

6. Flush the radiator and cooling system. This may be the easiest and most fun step of the process. Simply take out the garden hose and flush out the system. For the first "flush," collect the rinse and dispose of it with the used antifreeze. Continue rinsing until the drained water is clear.

7. Add the coolant and water mixture. The ideal mix is 50 percent antifreeze and 50 percent distilled water. You can either mix them by filling the radiator half way with one and topping it off with the other, or pre-mix the two together in a separate container.

8. Bleed the system. Replacing the coolant often creates air pockets in the fluids that should be removed before going out for a drive. To even out the levels, run the engine for about 15 minutes. At the same time, turn the heat on high to help circulate the coolant. Upon completion, carefully check the coolant levels and top them off if needed.

9 Replace the pressure cap. Line up the tabs on the cap with the cutouts of the fill spout and press down firmly. Twist the cap to the right to secure it.

10. Clean up. Coolant is essentially a toxic chemical, so it is important to clean up appropriately. Use a hose to dilute any spills and dispose of the old antifreeze according to your area's EPA guidelines.

When all is said and done, changing your own antifreeze should take a couple hours and could save you up to $50.

This season's hot tech gift: Navigation

The holidays are fast approaching, and you're probably starting to think about gift ideas for those near and dear to your heart. Whether you're shopping for a teenager, a college student, a friend, spouse or parent, you can't go wrong by giving the gift of technology.

In recent years, the hottest gifts have gone mobile. Digital devices such as iPod's or mp3 players that offer the convenience of on-the-go entertainment. But industry experts are expecting portable navigation devices to be hot sellers this year.

PNDs are the fastest growing electronics category in North America, mainly because millions of consumers have discovered how effective they are at eliminating much of the stress of travel. Getting lost, asking for directions and reading maps are replaced with clear directions from a calm, friendly voice.

As the name implies, the main function of portable navigation is to apply global positioning system technology to help you navigate from where you are to where you want to be. Once a destination is selected, spoken directions accompany visual cues such as an icon that represents your location to turn as you drive your car, ride your bicycle or even if you travel by foot.

PND prices have declined over recent years so a device is an affordable gift for many budget sizes. As prices have dropped, product features have expanded and may include:

- Rich editorial content such as travel guides and restaurant reviews.

Industry experts are expecting portable navigation devices to be hot sellers this year.

- Helpful points of interest such as key landmarks, hotels, ATMs and gas stations.

- The latest road network developments to help you choose the best route to suit your needs.

- Real-time traffic updates.

- Consumer demand for more accurate and intelligent routing is becoming a standard. So much so, in fact, that many navigation devices now utilize traffic services that deliver real-time information about traffic conditions, explains Howard Hayes, vice president of NAVTEQ Traffic, a leading provider of real-time traffic services. "Today, consumers can count on their PNDs to help them avoid construction zones, to find the best way to get around rush hour traffic when they're in a hurry, and even to avoid the backups caused by an accident."

If your friend or loved one already has a PND or a navigation system in their car dashboard, don't think they wouldn't still appreciate some other type of travel gift. One idea would be to purchase some updated map content or software for them. NAVTEQ updates its maps regularly. Log on to www.navigation.com to find the software you need.

And here are other travel gift ideas that can double as stocking stuffers:

- Noise-reducing headphones, which not only eliminate traveling noise, but also play your favorite music group.

- Two-way radios to keep caravans together or individual members of your party together when on an excursion.

Is your car ready for winter?

What's the last thing you want to happen when heading off to school or that mountain getaway you've been looking forward to? If you're driving to your destination, the worst case scenario would be for the flashing "check engine" warning light to come on, leading to your car breaking down.

Prevent that road trip from turning into a nightmare by doing a little preventative maintenance. Whether you take your car to a mechanic, or do the maintenance yourself, here's a checklist to follow before you pack up and head out:

1. Check your engine oil.

Most people get their oil changed every 3,000 miles. Before leaving on a long trip, it's a good idea to do it again, just to make sure levels are adequate and your vehicle is running clean.

2. Check your antifreeze.

Lowering your engine's freezing point with antifreeze is an essential part of your car's winter protection. Make sure the fluid level is full with a mixture as close as possible to 50 percent water, 50 percent antifreeze.

3. Clean your battery posts.

If you want your car to start quickly and easily, don't allow dirt and grime to build up on your battery terminals. Keep them as clean as possible.

4. Inspect your spark plug wires.

Cracked and/or frayed plug wires can impact your vehicle's performance, gas mileage and overall reliability. Make sure yours are in top shape.

5. Inspect your tires.

Tires lose pressure when they get cold, so be sure to check them and add air if necessary. You should also check your tire's tread to make sure they are ready for winter driving. An easy way to check is to take a Lincoln-head penny and insert it head-first into the most worn part of your tire tread. If you can see Abe's head, he may be telling you to get a new set of tires. Don't forget a full-size spare tire and snow chains, especially if your trip involves snowy or icy terrain.

6. Inspect your brakes.

Your safety and well being rest on your car's brakes. Never cut corners. Be sure yours have adequate padding left to get you through the season.

7. Replace your wipers.

A good working set of wipers is critical especially when driving in rain, sleet and snow. With such moisture coming from the air, and salt, dirt and grime being kicked up from the road, it takes wipers that are in tip-top shape to keep your windshield clean and you safe.

8. Check your windshield washer fluid.

You'll be using a lot of fluid as you try to keep your windows clean. Fill the reservoir before leaving on your trip, and bring along an extra bottle just in case.

In addition to such preventative maintenance, put together an emergency kit that includes jumper cables, a flashlight, basic tools - such as a pocket knife, wrench and screwdriver, an ice scraper and brush, a fully charged cell phone, first aid supplies, warm clothing, blankets, hats for everyone, water and non-perishable food. Also include some carpet strips or kitty litter for traction in case your vehicle gets stuck in the snow, and a nifty glovebox mechanic that will help you figure out what to do if the "check engine" light comes on when you're thousands of miles from home.

Think the chances of that happening are slim? It happens more often than you may think - and not just in the winter. According to a recent Harris Interactive survey, an estimated 10 percent of the drivers on the road right now have a vehicle with a "check engine" light on.

If the light has been on for a while, it probably doesn't mean the vehicle is in imminent danger of failure. But it could mean that a sensor has failed, the catalytic converter is going bad, the vehicle has a loose gas cap, which reduces gas mileage, or the vehicle recently underwent service and failed to reset itself. But how do you know for sure? By using CarMD, the only consumer electronics device and software system designed to help drivers monitor their vehicle's health and emissions output.

A little preventative maintenance can prevent that road trip from turning into a nightmare.

Simply plug the easy-to-use handheld device into the vehicle's computer (there's usually a port under the steering wheel) and wait a few seconds for it to beep. A green light indicates nothing is wrong, which is a positive indication before taking a road trip. A yellow light signals a possible problem and a red light means there is a current problem and service is required - particularly before you head out on a long trip.

If you get a yellow or red light, for more in-depth information, simply plug the tool into a personal computer or laptop using the included USB cable. The CarMD device will connect to the company's Web site and provide a comprehensive report on your vehicle's health, including most likely problem, estimated fix and repair costs in your area so you can get your vehicle healthy and back on the road.
