Cyclist in critical condition

Bethlehem police and the Delmar Rescue Squad respond to an accident on Delaware Avenue just before the Normanskill bridge on Saturday, March 28. Lt. Thomas Heffernan said that Mark Dalton, 52, of Albany was riding his bicycle along Delaware Avenue when he hit a marked police SUV conducting a roadside motor vehicle stop. "When the officer had the car parked the cyclist hit the rear end of it," he said. "It ejected him off the bicycle. Dalton was transported to Albany Medical Center and was listed as being in critical condition on the day of the incident. Heffernan said the Dalton was wearing his helmet at the time and the cyclist took his eyes off the road for a moment and looked down just before hitting the police vehicle. Albany Medical Center confirmed that Dalton was admitted to the hospital and said on Monday, March 30, he was listed in "fair" condition.

Alleged shoplifter arrested for DWI

Bethlehem police arrested a Delmar man on charges of shoplifting and felony DWI after Albany police found him on Central Avenue with a passenger wanted on other arrest warrants.

David C. Venie, 32, of 335 Delaware Ave., Delmar, was arrested on Tuesday, March 24, on charges of felony DWI; first-degree aggravated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle; a misdemeanor charge of petty larceny; and two infractions: driving an uninspected vehicle and no front license plate.

Police said they received a call from the Price Chopper in Glenmont regarding a suspect who allegedly attempted to steal merchandise.

"Upon being confronted by [a] store employee he had returned the property but pushed his way out of the store," according to the arrest report, which also stated an employee believed Venie was intoxicated because he smelled of alcohol and slurred his words.

Police were given a description of an unshaven white man wearing a Carhardt work coat and work boots. Another call to police stated that Venie was spotted driving a red Ford away from the store.

Bethlehem police said they discovered the vehicle was registered to a Delmar woman at Venie's address, and an investigator was familiar with the address and Venie because of a previous arrest that occurred two weeks prior to the incident.

Albany police were contacted because a Miller Avenue address was listed on the vehicle's registered owner's driver's license, according to the arrest report. The vehicle was eventually located by Albany police with Venie and two male passengers on Central Avenue.

Police said officers could smell alcohol on Venie's breath and that he was displaying signs of intoxication when interviewed. The report states Venie made a verbal admission to "drinking earlier."

After failing a prescreening test for alcohol, Venie was taken into custody by police and transported to the Bethlehem Police Department, the report states. It was revealed that his driver's license was revoked in December 2007 because of a DWI in the City of Albany.

Venie submitted to a chemical test, which revealed a blood-alcohol content higher than the legal limit of 0.08 percent, according to police, and Bethlehem Town Justice Ryan Donovan arraigned him and sent him to the Albany County Correctional Facility in lieu of a $2,500 cash bail.

He is expected to appear in town court on April 21, and one of his passengers was taken into custody by the Albany Police Department as a suspect in unrelated larcenies.

Other arrests

• Iris Singer, 50, of 33 Picotte Drive, Apt. 3, Albany, was arrested on Thursday, March 5, at the Bethlehem Police Department on charges of felony fifth-degree criminal sale of a controlled substance and possession of a substance outside of a prescription, a violation.

According to a statement from the police department, "While in the squad room at the Bethlehem Police Department, [a detective] did observe Iris Singer sell two Xanax pills."

Singer was arrested and allegedly gave a voluntary statement admitting to the incident. The prescription drugs were taken from her purse to be used as evidence, according to the arrest report.

Singer was arraigned by Bethlehem Town Justice Paul Dwyer and sent to the Albany County Correctional Facility in lieu of a $10,000 bail, the report states.

She is scheduled to return to Bethlehem Town Court on Tuesday, April 7.

• Guilderland police arrested Jeffrey Thomas Mason, 20, of 24 West Campbell Road in Schenectady, Tuesday, March 24, on charges of grand larceny in the fourth degree and issuing a bad check on according to police reports.

Mason was arrested on charges dating back to Nov. 28 and was arraigned later that day.

• Guilderland police arrested Jane M. Potts, 54, of 16 Morningside Drive, on charges of aggravated DWI on Tuesday, March 17, according to police reports.

Potts was arrested near the corner of Gay Lane and Western Avenue, and is scheduled to reappear in court on Thursday, April 2, according to police reports.

• Craig W. McMillen, 20, of 15 Tower Lane, Clarksville, was arrested on Friday, March 6, on charges of fifth-degree criminal possession of a controlled substance and two infractions: insufficient turn signal and an obstructed rear license plate.

Bethlehem police said a stationary patrol on River Road saw McMillen enter a driveway on River Road "for less than two minutes," before pulling back onto the roadway and heading north.

A patrol car followed McMillen's vehicle north, and an officer saw him turn onto Corning Hill Road without using a turn signal and then again turn onto Route 9W without using a signal, according to the arrest report.

Police said they could not read McMillen's rear license plate because of "a large towing device" on the rear of the vehicle, the report states, and police stopped him on Route 9W near Frontage Road.

McMillen and his passenger were identified with New York driver's licenses, and police said the two "provided an inconsistent account of where they had been and whom they had seen."

After receiving consent to search the vehicle, officers discovered a prescription pill bottle labeled "oxycodone" belonging to McMillen under the center console, according to the arrest report.

Police discovered "two separate types of pills" inside of the bottle, which were later identified as oxycodone and 30 Vicodin pills.

McMillen allegedly admitted to police he purchased the pills from the River Road home. He was placed under custody and transported to the Bethlehem Police Department, according to police, and his passenger denied knowing of the incident and was released.

After having his vehicle towed, the report states, McMillen was arraigned by Bethlehem Town Justice Paul Dwyer and released to the custody of his father after posting a $2,500 bail.

The pills were confiscated as evidence and McMillen is scheduled to appear in town court on Tuesday, April 7.

• Guilderland police arrested Monica J. Collen, 26, of 12 Pinehurst Road, in Albany, on charges of aggravated DWI, on Saturday, March 14, according to police reports.

Collen was arrested near the corner of Norwood Street and Western Avenue. A chemical test revealed a blood-alcohol content of 0.18 percent. She is scheduled to reappear in court on Thursday, March 26.

• William J. Earley, 20, of 5 Rod and Gun Club Road, Valatie, was arrested Wednesday, March 18, on Delaware Avenue for third-degree criminal possession of a controlled substance, a felony.

Bethlehem police said Earley was picked up on a warrant in Hudson and returned to the Bethlehem Police Department and processed.

He was arraigned by Bethlehem Town Justice Ryan Donovan and sent to the Albany County Correctional Facility without bail, according to the arrest report.

He is scheduled to return to Town Court on Tuesday, April 7.

DEC orders landfill closed

Town officials say they were prepared, weigh future options

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

As anticipated, the state's Department of Environmental Conservation has ordered the Town of Bethlehem to close and cap its construction landfill.

Bethlehem Supervisor Jack Cunningham said the town knew the DEC was going to close the site but had sent an "order on consent" just prior to its Wednesday, March 25, Town Board meeting.

The draft order states that Bethlehem's C & D Landfill on Rupert Road must be closed by November and capped by May of 2010.

The supervisor said that since the town couldn't meet the new DEC permit requirements because of the age of the landfill, it will be closed.

"The landfill has been operating without a permit since 1991," Cunningham said. "It is just for construction debris, and the town has a policy that you can't import debris."

Spokesman Rick Georgeson said the DEC couldn't comment on the investigation because it is technically still ongoing.

"Because there is an ongoing investigation, we generally can't release details of the matter until it is resolved," he said.

Private contractors do general garbage removal if residents choose to pay for it because Bethlehem does not have municipal pickup services. Residents can also transport their own trash to the waste transfer station on Rupert Road, where the landfill is located.

The town is part of a multi-municipal consortium that sends garbage to the Rapp Road Landfill in Albany. Guilderland and New Scotland are also a part of the consortium.

Bethlehem currently collects $60 a ton for construction debris, which Director of Administrative Services Howard Hyer said translated into $106,000 in 2008 and $111,000 in 2007.

Cunningham said even though the revenue stream from the landfill was small, he was unsure if a new landfill would be in the works.

"The board hasn't made any decisions about a future site after

Getting the lead out of books

Federal act could force libraries to get rid of children's reading materials printed before 1986

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

A federal statute designed to regulate hazardous toys could cause several thousand books to be removed from the shelves of the Guilderland Public Library.

An amendment, though, could give the library a break from having to comply with the "unintended consequences" of the act.

The Consumer Product Safety Improvement Act was passed August 2008 in response to the discovery of a number of lead-tainted toys shipped from China. Provisions of the act, which went into effect Feb. 10, include a requirement to have newly manufactured children's jewelry, cribs, pacifiers and paints tested for lead, an element that has been linked to developmental delays in children.

Some entities, such as libraries, have been given a one-year stay on the provision, but could eventually be responsible for testing and removing thousands of books with potentially lead-laden ink.

"I understand where it [the act] is coming from. It's got the best of intentions," said Guilderland Public Library Director Barbara Nichols Randall. "The American Library Association is trying to clarify what the Consumer Product Safety Commission meant."

She said there could be as many as 10,000 books on library shelves that were produced before 1986, the year lead was banned in ink.

"We're trying to develop a report so we can see what children's books we have on our shelves that were purchased before 1986," Randall said.

Mark Curiale, the library's public information specialist, said to test one book would cost $300, and it would be more cost-efficient to replace the books than test them.

He said the library already seeks out and removes hazardous materials regularly, as many as 1,200 items each year.

"It's a health issue for everybody, especially children," Curiale said. "If we do err, we will err on the side of caution."

Nichols Randall said that although books have rarely been responsible for hazardous conditions, the library will be in position to comply with the regulation if mandated to do so.

U.S. Sen. Jim DeMint, R-North Carolina, proposed a bill Feb. 5 to amend some of the provisions, namely one that would prevent retroactive enforcement.

Wesley Denton, communications director for DeMint, said the "retroactive" provision would apply to libraries.

"The way this [original] law was hastily written opens the door to lawsuits against families that hold yard sales with children's toys or charities that provide a vital service to low-income Americans. We simply cannot allow this law to go unreformed. We must take action quickly to protect American families, charities and small businesses from these misdirected regulations," DeMint said in a written statement.

Interchange plan raises questions

Engineer says Clapper Road project financially feasible, residents say it's unnecessary

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

The results are in on the Clapper Road feasibility study about the possibility of a new Thruway interchange in Selkirk, but many questions are still out.

The Town Board listened to a presentation by Mark Sargent from Creighton Manning Engineering about the financial feasibility of creating a new alignment in the Clapper Road area and the state's Thruway.

"We were not asked to do an interchange justification study," he told the board and concluded that a new interchange would be "revenue neutral or better" in terms of being financially feasible.

Sargent said the Clapper Road bridge over the Thruway has been deemed usable in a possible new interchange and discussed two possibilities of an E-Zpass-only interchange on the bridge or a "full access" interchange located 1,500 feet north of the bridge.

Concerning the Clapper Road bridge, Sargent said, "We've concluded that it could be used as part of the interchange."

The E-ZPass option would cost around $21.1 million while the full tollbooth option would be $37.1 million, he said.

During the public comment period, two residents who have been vocally opposed to any type of Clapper Road interchange spoke to board members and asked to end all future planning and studies on the matter.

"I request that this matter be done away with and immediately," resident Al Penk said. "Why is this a priority? ... End this attack on the residents of the Clapper Road area."

Penk said he requested information from the Thruway and said it was the town that was pushing for the interchange and not the Thruway Authority.

The Clapper Road bridge has become a central part of discussion concerning the possibility of building a new interchange onto the Thruway from Clapper Road. The town recently completed a feasibility study and is now working with the Thruway Authority and the Federal Highway Authority. Local residents are saying "no" to the proposal and that a new interchange would affect quality of life and depreciate home values.

Jarrett Carroll/Spotlight

Carol Penk reiterated her husband's comments about the Thruway Authority, stating Clapper Road doesn't meet "desirable standards" for an interchange.

She said the "thunder of the traffic" would destroy the "tranquility" of area homes and churches.

Carol Penk also said she took issue with quotes made by Bethlehem Planning Board Chairman George Leveille in a Feb. 25 Spotlight article about people not being disturbed by what goes on in the town's industrial zone. She also stated Leveille's previous position as director of economic development and other dealings with the town constituted "a conflict of interest" with his role as planning board chairman.

The Penks cited petitions signed by hundreds of residents opposed to a Clapper Road realignment or interchange for truck traffic from the Bethlehem industrial zone.

During the actual presentation,

Penk asked several questions that led to some back and forth between Sargent, the board and Penk. Supervisor Jack Cunningham interjected at a couple points stating, "This is not a debate," and "Mr. Penk, can we continue the presentation, please?"

Sargent said that some of the concerns about traffic flow and traffic alleviation that Al Penk asked about were also concerns expressed by the Thruway Authority.

"The Thruway [Authority] has the same exact question," he said. "They did not reject the interchange idea outright, but would like to see more information."

Traffic on Route 9W was of particular concern, with questions about where people would be accessing the Thruway and how much of the already-congested thoroughfare would be helped by a new interchange.

The Thruway, Clapper Road and Route 9W would need to be "reconstructed" to make the project work and would most likely have to include a roundabout on Route 9W.

Councilman Sam Messina called the site a "multiple need area" and said that there were certain buildings and churches of interest on Clapper Road.

"I would like a re-look of what the economic development goals are," he said.

Councilman Kyle Kotary noted that none of the current board members were in office when the possibility of a new truck route came about in 1989, stating it was "good to get a historical perspective."

Cunningham said that nothing is in proposal form, and the feasibility study is a very preliminary process to see if it is even a possibility for Bethlehem at this time.

"The Thruway is basically saying, 'We're OK with the study, but we're not sure about some of your conclusions,'" he said. "We have to look at this a lot more, and we have talk with the Federal Highway Authority to see if there is anything to prevent this."

The supervisor described the project as being in "incremental studies," and that problems must be mitigated before moving to the next step. Cunningham stressed that nothing is finalized at this point and all plans are preliminary.

Passing along Passover recipes and rituals

By ROBIN SHRAGER SUITOR
news@spotlightnews.com

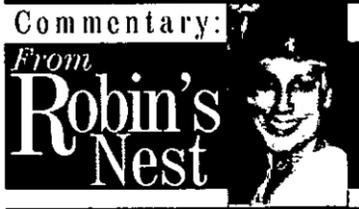

I've hosted Passover seders for nearly a decade, but I have yet to master the art of preparing homemade matzo balls. My daughter and I whipped up a batch last year, but we both felt them to be inferior to the ones from the box mix.

I don't know the source of the problem. I used the same ingredients that my Aunt Selma uses. Her matzo balls, like all the food she prepares, are delicious. Mine, not so much.

Truth be told, I haven't eaten any of my aunt's matzo balls in years. That's because I haven't been to Queens for Passover since my daughter was a toddler. She's 12 now.

Before Rachel was born, Jeff and I would often travel downstate to participate in a seder at the garden apartment where my Aunt Selma and Uncle Marty live. As I did when I was a child, I'd help my aunt make the haroset (pronounced with a throaty h sound), consisting of chopped apples, walnuts, cinnamon and a few splashes of wine. She has this wonderful, well-worn wooden bowl that keeps all the ingredients contained during the chopping.

Other than the haroset, I didn't help my aunt with any of the other cooking. She'd already been cooking for days. She'd made dozens of matzo balls, roasted a turkey, prepared the meatballs that her grandchildren like, and peeled countless potatoes. By the time we arrived, the soup would be simmering on the stove. Still, it would be a while before the seder, so Aunt Selma would feed us a late lunch, offering perhaps the chicken she used to make the soup broth. Jeff and I would have a bite to eat, then I'd make the haroset and we'd help set the table.

My favorite part of Passover is the seder, a lively hands-on religious ceremony celebrating the exodus from Egypt. During the seder, Jews read from a special book called a haggadah. The word haggadah means "the telling," referring to the obligation to tell the story of Passover to our children each year so the story will be remembered and relayed from generation to generation.

I enjoy gathering with family and friends and going through the seder rituals. The word "seder" means "order" and refers to the order of the parts of the ceremony, which includes a festive meal. I love the tradition and the rituals. I love that although there are many haggadah books to choose from, and each family may put a slightly different twist on the proceedings, any seder you go to will have the same core parts.

When I host, I try to make my seder interesting for the children. I use assorted props and music, a homemade felt-board story, and a clue-based search for the afikomen (a special piece of matzo that is hidden, but needed to complete the seder.) I want my daughter to look forward to the holiday and find meaning in the seder. I want to create memories for her that will motivate her to carry on the tradition.

Though when I think about it, I realize that no one ever bothered to make the seder interesting for me. I was the youngest child lost in a sea of older siblings and cousins. Much of the meaning and conversation slipped over my head: We used a haggadah that used "thee" and "thou" and also added "est" or "eth" to the end of normal words! For example, the parting of the Red Sea might be explained as "And the sea flected." Maybe "flected" was supposed to sound more miraculous than just regular "fled." Anyhow this type of language made the text both comical to read and difficult to understand.

And yet, "despite these childhood issues I describeth," my desire to carry on the tradition of the Passover seder has always been strong.

It's been 20 years since all the Shragers and all the Mendelsohns have celebrated Passover together. My mother was the host of that seder at my childhood home in Voorheesville. My future husband, Jeff, was there. So was my cousin Jenna, just 2 months old. I also recall that the weather was lovely and that my sister announced that she was pregnant with her second child.

And then time passed. My dad retired and my parents were usually in Florida during Passover. And so, a number of times Jeff and I, and later Rachel too, went down to Queens to join my aunt, my unclé, my cousins and my cousins' children.

And then more time passed. And Rachel grew. And though we stopped making the effort to travel to Queens, we started hosting our own seders, inviting not only our siblings, but also our friends. I bought a new family-oriented haggadah. I painted a ceramic seder plate. I also created the felt-board story, and it travels with me on the years my sister hosts.

As a child one doesn't normally think about the possibility that the composition of the people at your holiday dinner will one day change. Adults soon figure out that changes do happen for a variety of reasons, including grown children starting their own families, geographic distance between family members, and death. I take comfort in knowing that even when the faces around the table change, the basic rituals of the Passover seder stay the same.

This year, Passover begins the evening of April 8. My family will be participating in seders on the first two nights of this eight-day holiday. I look forward to the gatherings, the singing, the wine and the food. I'm not hosting this year, so I can experiment with recipes without having to please a large crowd.

I haven't eaten one of Aunt Selma's matzo balls in many years, but I have no reason to expect that they have declined in quality. Maybe I'll call her up and have her guide me through the process. Somehow the sound of her voice enhances my culinary abilities.

I'll ask Rachel to help too. We'll mix and stir, roll and boil. And then we'll taste. And I hope that the delight of biting into a yummy matzo ball will instill in my daughter a love of family traditions that she will pass on to future generations.

Bethlehem police charge G'land man in taxi theft

Suspect allegedly drove Capitaland-owned van home from bar

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Bethlehem police have charged Thomas J. Frankovic, 24, of 125 Beacon Road in Glenmont, with misdemeanor DWI and three infractions: failure to keep right, failure to comply with officers and driving on the shoulder of a roadway. Police said they may also charge him with felony fourth-degree criminal possession of stolen property.

The charges stem from a Saturday, March 21, incident in which Frankovic allegedly drove a Capitaland Taxi home from a Guilderland bar. Bethlehem police had received a call from the Guilderland Police Department to be on the lookout for Frankovic and a Capitaland van after they both turned up missing at a bar on Western Avenue in Guilderland, across from the University at Albany campus.

The cab driver was inside the bar when Frankovic allegedly climbed behind the driver's seat and drove through Albany toward Bethlehem, according to the arrest report, which stated, "Frankovic took the vehicle and drove off intending to drive it home to Beacon Road."

Cpt. Curtis Cox of the Guilderland Police Department said the cab's original driver found the cab missing when he returned to where it was parked.

Police called Capitaland Taxi and were told by a dispatcher the vehicle's GPS unit in the van showed it was being driven to Southern Boulevard, and it was spotted by Bethlehem police on Route 9W in Glenmont.

Police activated their emergency lights and attempted to stop Frankovic, but "he failed to comply" and continued to Feura Bush Road, where he stopped the vehicle near Patterson Drive, according to the report.

Frankovic was taken into custody by police and identified with a information found inside of his wallet, and he was transported to the Bethlehem Police Department.

While at the station, Frankovic allegedly refused to take a chemical test. Guilderland police were contacted about the arrest, and they transported the cab driver to the Glenmont location, where he took possession of the van.

Frankovic was eventually released to the custody of his father.

Reporter Dan Sabbatino contributed to this report.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

When the levy breaks ...

Around this time of the year, the media — we at The Spotlight included — is busy trying to make the tedious stories about village, town, city, school and state budgets somehow sound new, fresh, and as interesting as they are important.

No doubt, an array of headlines — some in The Spotlight, we're ashamed to admit — has referenced the rising or falling of a certain taxing entity's tax rate.

That's unfortunate, because taxpayers and taxing entities need to understand that the tax rate is insignificant. It's the tax levy that's important.

Editorial

A tax rate is a very emotionally charged and easily manipulated figure, and it is because of this that it is often the figure most touted at the local level. A tax rate that increases more than 4 percent is ghastly, a tax rate that drops (it has been known to happen) is lauded. Unfortunately, neither one of those numbers, by themselves, tell you anything about how much you will pay in taxes, let alone if the amount will be higher or lower than what was paid the year before.

A tax rate depends on two other elements: a property's value, relative to the rest of the property in the community; and the total tax levy required by the taxing entity (your town, city, state or school district).

Property values can, and will, change, particularly in a housing market as volatile as the one we are in now. Because property values change, applying a tax rate to those values without knowing what the overall tax levy is, isn't really a good gauge of whether or not an entity is increasing or decreasing spending. A 4 percent tax rate applied to a home worth $200,000 this year, for example, would yield twice the amount of actual dollars as the same 4 percent rate applied to that same home assessed at $100,000 last year. The opposite would hold true if the assessed value of a property were to decrease.

The tax levy, on the other hand, is not as easily manipulated. If a taxing entity says it needs to raise $1 million through taxes, the tax levy is $1 million. There isn't much of a way to manipulate that number, and its increase or decrease over last year's levy will give you the best indication as to whether you're comfortable with the level of spending by that particular taxing entity.

Over the next few weeks, there will be talk of decreasing tax rates through the application of federal stimulus money to an entity's tax levy. Don't be fooled. That money will have to be paid back, and even though it made your town/city/school/state tax rate a little easier to swallow, all it did was to shift your tax burden to a different rate for another time.

Let's close with the words of journalism and political pundit Kevin Fischer, a veteran of print, broadcast and online media:

"If there's nothing else you remember about your property taxes, remember this: It's the tax levy, friend, the tax levy."

Law changes guard against fraud

By SUSAN A. FITZPATRICK
news@spotlightnews.com

The author is an associate attorney with Burke & Casserly, P.C., which specializes in elder law and estate planning law.

Drastic changes in the law and forms regarding the New York State Power of Attorney were signed into law by Gov. David Paterson on Jan. 30. The prior statutory form was a simple, two-page document. Anyone could confidently copy or download a form, sign on the bottom line, having their signature acknowledged before a notary public and be done. That simple two page document was all that was required for the principal (person signing the power of attorney) to appoint an agent (the person who could now act on their behalf), and designate tremendous powers that the agent could use to act on the principal's behalf.

As a practicing local attorney I have prepared countless power of attorneys for clients. Yes, these documents were simple, but they did not provide safeguards against fraud and abuse.

Change was necessary. On any given day you could open the newspaper to find the sad stories of bank accounts that had been liquidated or the family house that was sold out from underneath unsuspecting, aging parents, or assets that had been mysteriously re-titled. The ever-growing aging population is susceptible to people taking advantage of them. The old form of power of attorney was too easily used to treat someone else's assets like it was a personal piggy bank.

"What can we do?" is a question that is often asked once the abuse is discovered. There are few, easy answers to that question. There was little in the way of procedure to set aside or unwind these transactions. When someone acted under a valid power of attorney, it was difficult and expensive to undo the transaction and even harder to re-coup the "stolen" assets. It only became harder when an elderly person no longer had the capacity to dispute the actions taken.

I have taken quite a bit of time to familiarize myself with the new law, its requirements and the two new forms that replace the standard simple form. I share with you my insight and opinion on the new forms, what powers and protections they provide and what some key focal points members of our community should focus on.

A major focus of the new form is awareness for all. The forms provide clear instructions to the principal about what they are signing and clear instructions to the agent about the responsibility they are accepting, including the legal consequences of their actions. A second focus is on the tremendous powers and consequences that these documents hold. So much so that the old form is now split into two forms. The first form addresses the powers you give to someone to act on your behalf and the second form provides powers you give to someone to gift or transfer your assets, (this is the statutory major gifts rider, or SMGR).

My favorite addition is the requirement that the agent has to sign the power of attorney form. The old form only required the principal to sign. Sometimes parents did not let their children know for years that they had executed these documents. Now, however, the agent must sign the form, agreeing to act in the best interest of the principal and agreeing to accept responsibility and accountability. The new document, which carries weight, and lawmakers have provided comprehensive forms to address the fraud and abuses suffered via power of attorneys.

Another positive security measure meant to protect the principal has been added. The principal can choose to appoint a monitor, someone who has no authority to act on behalf of the principal, but who can review the actions and records of the agent. The drafters went one step further and included a procedure to review the actions and records of the agent, including the ability to bring on a special proceeding to question the actions and records of the agent.

The SMGR form is a separate, optional document that addresses the wishes of the principal for gifting and transfer purposes. The SMGR provides what ability the agent has to gift the property or money of the principal. Without the SMGR form, the agent cannot gift the real or personal property of the principal. The principal uses this SMGR form to limit who gifts can be made to, in what dollar amounts gifts can be made and what other limits you want to include for your gifts and transfers. The SMGR form must be signed at the same time as the power of attorney and be witnessed by two disinterested persons. The agent does not sign the SMGR form, but that person should carefully review and abide by its instructions.

I suspect that as Sept. 1 approaches, there will be a flurry of activity and seminars geared toward informing the public about the new law and forms. It is not mandatory that you sign a new power of attorney. Your old one will still be valid. I do caution that there are many more protections that the new form offers that the old form did not. At the very least, I suggest you dig up your planning documents and review what they contain. You might be surprised that you do want someone or something different. Your situation may have changed.

The new law is not simple and it does create several new requirements. I advise that you seek the guidance and counsel of an attorney before executing them. I cannot stress enough that you re-visit your plans and your long-range goals and consider who best to handle your affairs when you can no longer handle them yourself.

It was only recently that the New York headlines plastered the severe allegations Brooke Astor's grandson brought against his own father, Anthony Astor. Anthony Astor was quick to point out that he was the appointed agent under Brooke's power of attorney. Her grandson was only able to capture the attention of the public and protect his grandmother by pleading her case to the court and publicizing it to the general public on the front pages of the newspaper. I am tremendously optimistic that under the new law, the general public will not have to go to this length to seek reasonable and timely resolutions to their issues with abuses under a power of attorney.

I caution the public to be patient with lawyers as we review the new law and the protections these new forms provide and the new execution procedures. The purpose of the amended law and separate forms is noble and a true attempt to protect the public. I know there will be a transition period as new forms start to surface and the older, more recognizable forms start to fade away in the distance. People like what they know and we are a very visual society. There are always wrinkles to smooth when something new is introduced. However, this adjustment period will come and pass, and the public will be better served for it.

Bethlehem GOP needs improvement Spotlight editorial short-sighted

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am creating an exploratory committee to discover whether there is sufficient support in the Town of Bethlehem for political candidates who believe in the kind of Republicanism that many of my fellow town Republicans and I crave, and ask whether any of you share my desire and are willing to join us.

The Republican Party's situation is dire, not because it has lost elected positions at the national, state, county and town levels, but because it no longer stands for integrity of character, nobility of purpose or kindness towards others. Does anyone in the party's leadership care about the common man? Right is right, wrong is wrong, and Bethlehem voters, particularly Republican voters, know the difference.

Calling for higher standards, though, is not enough. As party committeemen we have to walk the walk all the time, not just when it is convenient. We need to act like leaders, whether as committeemen or as members of our community. We can start with less talking and more listening, less complaining and more doing, and less selfishness and more selflessness.

The Bethlehem Republican Party is in the minority. Its candidates and leadership need to address that reality and act accordingly. Along with finding values, it must improve its performance so as to provide a relevant alternative for town voters.

If there is to be real debate on how to govern the town, there need to be candidates willing to present an alternative vision. If no one is willing to support these candidates in ways that a traditional political committee does, they will not be viable alternatives. If there are at least 50 Bethlehem residents of any party affiliation who are concerned about how the town is being governed, my associates and I will provide you the training and the assistance to help you run candidates of your choosing for town elected office. I encourage you to, in the words of Mahandas Gandhi, "Be the change you want to see in the world." Contact me at jared@jaredking.org, if interested.

Editor, The Spotlight:

I would like to respond to the editorial "Four legs good, two legs bad" in the March 25 issues of The Spotlight.

The author has failed to realize the correlation between people who abuse animals and those who go on to abuse people. Countless studies show that animal abusers commonly graduate from violence against animals to violence against humans.

Mass-murderer Jeffrey Dahmer killed neighbors' pets and impaled a dog's head on a stick. Patrick Sherril, who murdered 14 co-workers and then killed himself, stole pets, then tied them up and allowed his own dog to mutilate them. David Berkowitz, the "Son of Sam," shot his neighbor's Labrador retriever.

Albert DeSalvo, the "Boston Strangler," shot arrows into boxes of trapped cats and dogs. Brenda Spencer, who fired 40 shots into a crowd of children, murdering two people and wounding nine, had a history of setting the tails of neighborhood cats and dogs on fire. Edmund Emil Kemper III, who murdered his mother and seven other women, used to abuse cats and dogs.

Carol Edmund Cole, who murdered 35 people, admitted that his first violent act was strangling a puppy. Richard Allen Davis, kidnapper and murderer, doused cats with gasoline and set them on fire.

It may be difficult to swallow that we would make the noble gesture of collecting money to find the perpetrators responsible for beating and discarding the beagle puppies along the side of the road when so many of our youngsters are in need, it is also regrettably short sighted given the well documented facts of their escalating crimes.

Albany County ammo law needless legislation

Editor, The Spotlight:

The proposed Albany County Local Law "A" would require identification and recording of gun information and identification of the purchaser for all ammunition purchased within the County.

This law is yet another attempt by County Legislators to reduce the gun violence. As well intentioned as Local Law "A" might be, the law indirectly expands gun registration beyond the current laws by requiring recording information on all firearms, not just handguns, that will use the ammunition purchased. This includes firearms which are not covered by current gun registration laws. In addition, it will increase the administrative red tape that Albany County businesses are already required to maintain.

And unfortunately, Local Law "A" will do nothing to reduce gun violence since ammunition would be available, without registration, in nearby counties. We already have a law on the books covering handguns. New York State Penal Law 270.00(5) states that "it shall be unlawful for any dealer in firearms to sell any ammunition designed exclusively for use in a pistol or revolver to any person, not authorized to possess a pistol or revolver."

If the law is not being enforced, then we should stress enforcement. Adding yet another law does not guarantee compliance or enforcement. Enactment of laws which restrict personal freedoms are sometimes the price we are willing to pay to solve societal issues. However, if a law does not provide a significant solution, then a reduction in our rights under a free and democratic government cannot be condoned. Correspondingly, in good conscience, I cannot support Local Law "A" when it comes up for a vote in the Albany County Legislature.

Voorheesville hires new superintendent

Teresa Thayer Snyder will become the new superintendent of schools for the Voorheesville Central School District, effective July 2009. After conducting a search and narrowing the field with significant involvement of teachers, administrators, and community members, the Board of Education selected Snyder.

Snyder is currently deputy superintendent at Shenendehowa Central School District, where she is responsible for the curriculum. Her experience includes teaching at elementary, middle and high school levels; serving as elementary school principal; director of Emma Willard; and superintendent of the Brunswick School District. In addition to her doctorate in education theory and practice, Snyder has been an adjunct instructor at The College of Saint Rose, Sage Colleges and Siena College, teaching and mentoring aspiring education leaders.

Board President David Gibson praised Snyder's selection.

"Besides her demonstrated management ability and energy, we are excited about Dr. Snyder's vision of assisting each child to achieve his or her full potential," he said. "Especially relevant for Voorheesville is her enthusiasm for using all types of information and professional development to support teachers in a culture of continuous improvement, while being fiscally responsible. Those we interviewed described her as a collaborative leader who brings a high level of integrity, caring, energy, and intelligence to the tasks at hand."

Snyder said she was "delighted" to be selected for the position. "Voorheesville is a dynamic educational setting filled with promise," she said. "To begin a new adventure in the company of such positive practitioners is a very exciting opportunity."

The community is invited to meet Snyder at an introductory reception Monday, April 20, at 7 p.m., before the start of the Board of Education meeting.

Officers seek second suspect in East Greenbush bank robbery

Altamont resident in custody in connection with crime

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Altamont resident Johnathan P. Lawrence, 32, turned himself in to East Greenbush police Friday, March 20, in connection with the robbery of an East Greenbush Key Bank, according to police reports.

Lawrence is charged with assaulting a teller in the course of a robbery Wednesday, March 18.

He was scheduled to appear in court Monday, March 30, and was being held in Rensselaer County jail.

East Greenbush Chief of Police Christopher Lavin said the investigation has led police to believe Lawrence did not act alone.

"We're in search of suspect

No. 2 — the driver of the getaway pick-up truck," Lavin said Friday, March 27. "That person is still at large."

Lavin said police have reason to believe that Lawrence was allegedly dropped off in the truck before riding a bicycle to the bank, at which point he allegedly robbed the bank and rode the bike back to the truck.

East Greenbush police said they have the license plate number of the alleged getaway vehicle. Assisting the investigation are the Rensselaer County District Attorney's Office, New York State Police, Cohoes police, the Albany County Sheriff's Department and Rensselaer County law enforcement agencies.

Lawrence, who lives at 63 White Road in Altamont, allegedly admitted to his participation while in the custody of the Cohoes Police Department in an unrelated matter.

During the robbery, a 30-year-old teller suffered several injuries, including a broken femur.

"When the teller said that he could not open the bank vault, the robber went into a rage by pushing him down and stomping his leg broken in three places," according to a written statement with the East Greenbush Police Department.

Lawrence is accused of entering the bank fully disguised with a mask, assaulting the tellers and robbing the cash.

He faces charges of robbery in the first degree, assault in the first degree and grand larceny in the third degree.

Altamont Police Commissioner Anthony Salerno said that although Lawrence does not have a criminal record in Altamont, he is familiar with him and has seen him driving through the town.

Anyone with information can contact the East Greenbush Police Department at 479-2525.

Local churches fare well at CROP walk

The Albany CROP Hunger Walk Committee recognized the top groups from last spring's CROP Walk at a Rally on Sunday, March 22, and for the third year in a row, the First United Methodist Church of Delmar captured the Gold Sneaker Award.

The church's 27 walkers raised just over $13,000, which was matched by an anonymous donor for a grand total of $26,375. This congregation leads the way not only in the Albany CROP Hunger Walk, but also nationwide, where it's among the top three congregations in the country in terms of the amount of money raised.

Thanks to some matching funds from their Deacons' Fund, the Bethany Reformed Church of Albany took home the Silver Sneaker, and Westminster Presbyterian Church retained the Bronze Sneaker. The Hindu Temple Society fielded the most walkers with 51.

More than 600 walkers from 50 different groups participated in last year's Albany CROP Hunger Walk, which raised $98,262. This year's Albany CROP Hunger Walk is scheduled for Sunday afternoon, May 3. For information about how to be involved, call the office of the Capital Area Council of Churches at 462-5450.

Bethlehem to upgrade its Internet security

Town board decides to increase credit card security; one councilman asks for better coverage

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

A discussion about upgrading the town's Web site security led to a 4-to-1 vote by the Bethlehem Town Board to purchase network security and privacy insurance.

The board listened to a presentation by Jeffrey Bryant of Slingerlands based Bryant Assest Protection on a $15,398 contract to purchase a "rider," or addition to the town's insurance policy. Bryant said the additional insurance would defer liability from the town in the case of credit card theft or tampering on the Town of Bethlehem Web site.

Only the Department of Parks and Recreation accepts credit card purchases on behalf of the town in order to process park passes and other fee-based services.

Supervisor Jack Cunningham said the town is increasing its security as it attempts to provide more credit card payment options through its Web site. He added because current premiums this year were lower than what had been budgeted for, that no additional town funds are being used to purchase the new insurance.

"We weren't sufficiently covered, in our opinion," he said of the additional insurance. "We revisit our insurance policies every year ... and hopefully people will be able to pay for more things with credit cards on the Web site."

Councilman Mark Hennessey voted against the proposal, saying that he felt the town should have even better coverage to protect itself from credit card liabilities. He questioned why this insurance coverage was chosen over another bidder.

"One difference between the two policies — one includes regulatory civil fines and penalties in ... defense, the other of which does not," Hennessey said, and asked, "The one that we selected does not, why is that?" Bryant said the coverage from the other bidder "wasn't as complete in other areas" as the CNA Insurance coverage that Bethlehem was purchasing. He added that if a breach of confidential information occurred, CNA would be notified by the state and would modify the individual's credit for a full year if their information was found to be breached.

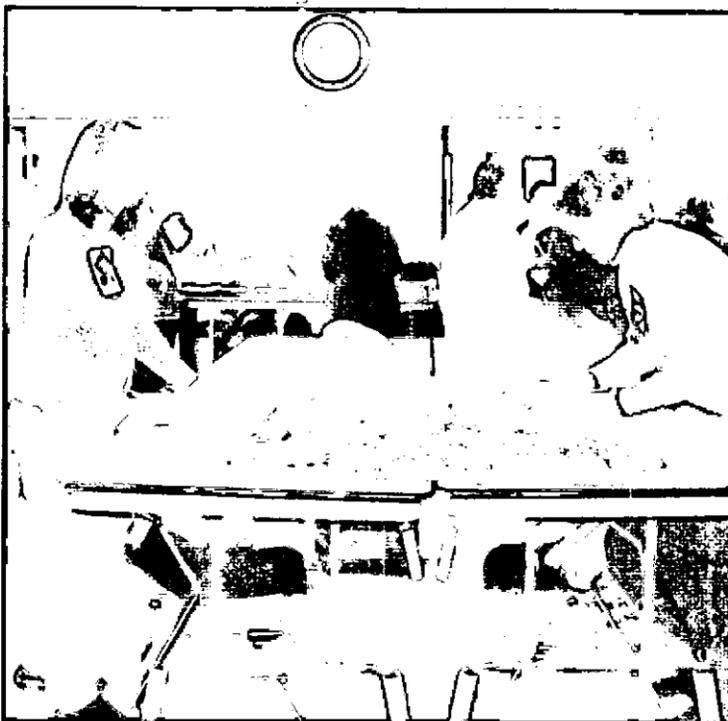

But if the town were found to be at fault for the breach, Hennessey questioned, the liability would still fall on the town.

"I still don't think I got an answer to the question," Hennessey said. "The requirement to make that notification is ours if we were the ones have misplaced, had the information stolen, whatever ... so we would be liable not CNA."

Bryant responded that, "Well, you would be liable, yes, if you didn't make that notification to your carrier, that is correct. I guess, ultimately yes, from a legal standpoint you are liable, but once that notification is made to your carrier you carrier is liable on your behalf of that ... it passes from you to the carrier."

Bryant said if there was a breach and the town tried to take care of it "in house" or became embarrassed and didn't notify the insurance carrier, then Bethlehem would be liable for any damages resulting in a credit breach.

Director of Management of Information Services Jeffrey Dammeyer told the board that credit card information is not stored by the town, but is merely processed by the town to process residents Parks and Recreation needs.

The Town of New Scotland could contribute as much as $12,000 to close the Youmans Road railroad crossing, according to Town Supervisor Tom Dolin.

The Department of Transportation Chief Administrative Judge Peter Loomis heard the case for the closing and will pass on a recommendation to Commissioner Astrid C. Glynn regarding the matter, Dolin said.

Dolin said he is in support of closing the crossing, the site of a near fatal collision for resident Peter Salerno and his two children on Nov. 22, and is hoping to get a speedy decision to move on it.

The town is hoping to put in a 1,700-foot road connecting Youmans Road to Great View Terrace.

"We're hoping the order will be out in a couple of weeks," Dolin said.

In late November Salerno's Range Rover was struck by two trains heading in opposite directions. He eventually spun off onto tracks after pulling his two daughters to the front of the car and likely saving their lives.

Closing the crossing could cost as much as $600,000, according to DOT estimates. The railroad company has pledged $132,000, New Scotland has pledged $12,000, and the rest of the money would come from the Federal Highway Administration.

The FHA pools money to close dangerous railroad crossings, but Dolin said those funds are scarce.

"There's more demand than there is sufficient funds," Dolin said.

Area businesses pull together for a cause

Benefit being held for local children and the Leukemia & Lymphoma Society

By JARRETT CARROLL
carrollj@spotlightnews.com

Stories of leukemia and lymphoma diagnoses don't always have a storybook ending, but two area children that were affected by cancer have gotten just that.

Eight-year-old Meredith Charleson of Saratoga Springs and 7-year-old Jake Franchi of Averill Park are this year's Leukemia and Lymphoma Society's boy and girl of 2009. Key Bank is teaming up with other area businesses to raise money for one of the area's most important not-for-profit organizations.

Heather Ford, a KeyBank vice president of business banking, said this year's fundraising event is a very important one and that donations can be made to any area KeyBank.

"It's a fundraiser ... first and foremost," Ford said. "Leukemia and Lymphoma has a current campaign called Man and Woman of the year and I am a candidate for that campaign, so as a candidate you put together a team and raise money."

Although both Charleson and Franchi are being honored, all proceeds will go the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society of the Capital District of Upstate New York.

"They are both surviving leukemia at this point," Ford said. "It's just about raising funds

Heather Ford, center, of Key Bank, poses with the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society's 2009 boy and girl of the year, Jake Franchi and Meredith Charleson.

and the opportunity to educate children on ways to become involved in their communities ... and educate children about other children living with blood-related cancers."

In October of 2001, Meredith Charleson, the youngest of Dan and Sarah Charleson's three children, was diagnosed with acute lymphoblastic leukemia (ALL).

Doctors gave Meredith a 75 percent survival rate. Doctors said that because of the advances in research, the survival rates had come a long way, and 28 months later, Meredith took her last dose of chemotherapy.

Even though getting to this wonderful day of celebration had its ups and downs, they were so grateful that The Leukemia & Lymphoma Society concentrates on finding a cure.

Charleson became cancer and chemotherapy free on Jan. 24, 2009.

Franchi is this year's boy of the year and he, too, was diagnosed with acute lymphoblastic leukemia on Sept. 11, 2004. He is the youngest child of Paula and Christopher Franchi's two children and was 3 years old at the time.

The news came as a complete shock to his family and his parents quickly learned that the road ahead of them would not be an easy one. Enduring three plus years of daily chemotherapy, Franchi officially completed treatment on Nov. 30, 2007.

Although this relieved his parents, the fear of relapse still lingers as Franchi is in remission but will not be considered cured until Nov. 30, 2012.

His cure date will be exactly 5 years from the day of his last treatment.

"My grandfather died of leukemia in 1966, so it has directly affected my family," Ford said. "But [donating] also provides an opportunity to get children to get involved in the community at a young age."

Kim Ryan, a Bethlehem town employee, is partnering with Ford to help raise awareness for the cause.

"Heather's a friend of mine ... and I've done a lot of fundraising in the past," Ryan said. "This particular organization is important to me on two levels, obviously the children's level because I have four kids myself."

The other reason, Ryan said, was a personal loss.

"I've had a very close friend die from leukemia," she said. "When something like that happens you don't forget, and it's just a way to give back."

Donations to the Leukemia and Lymphoma Society will be accepted at any Key Bank.

Q: I have cataracts and I plan on having surgery. After cataract surgery, will I still need to wear eyeglasses?

A: "Cataracts are one of the leading causes of preventable blindness worldwide. Cataracts often cause blurry vision and glare at night while driving. A cataract is the stiffening and clouding of the natural lens, and the result is that the lens cannot focus light as well as it did before. Cataracts are common in most patients over fifty. There usually comes a time when a change in one's eyeglass prescription will not do much to improve vision, and surgery should be considered."

"Up until about ten years ago, all patients were very dependent on glasses after cataract surgery. Today, with the availability of premium (multifocal & accommodative) implant lenses, patients can enjoy reduced dependency on eyeglasses. These lenses act like a healthy natural lens, focusing light from all distances, from reading to far distance. You might expect to spend most of your day out of glasses with these implant lenses. You might just need reading glasses to fine-tune small print. There are several brands and styles available such as Crystalens®, ReStor®, and ReZoom®. A patient's lifestyle and health history help me make the decision regarding which lens would be the best fit for a patient."

Western Turnpike golf course opens

Summer camps and activities list available online

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

Warm weather and sunshine are right around the corner, and area golfers can break out their clubs and hit the links now that the Western Turnpike Golf Course is open.

The course officially opened on Friday, March 27, to both Guilderland residents and others.

"It's an early start to the season," said Dennis Moore, director of parks and recreation. "It's open to the public, and anyone can come on and play."

Residents can play 18 holes on the weekends for $22 and non-residents for $32. A round of nine holes runs $12 for residents and $18 for non-residents.

Moore said the course looks relatively good considering that it is only April.

"It looks good; it looks like it came through the winter well," Moore said.

He said the grass is not "lush" yet, but he expects it will improve as the weather gets nicer.

The course has a driving range, which costs $6 per bucket and a free putting green.

Guilderland Supervisor Ken Runion said the course finished last year with a small surplus and is one of the town services that "pays for itself." He said the town has paid $1 million into the $6 million bond for the course, but once that bond is retired in 15 or so years, he expects the course to generate a "substantial" amount of revenue for the town.

Runion commended the course's crew for getting it ready and keeping it working.

"We've got a great crew that keeps things moving," Runion said. "The nicer the weather, the drier it will be."

Herb Moreland, Guilderland's golf pro, said the greens are "rolling nice." He added that the course usually opens on a Friday to get the kinks out for the heavier weekend traffic.

Moore added that the town will be mailing its 2009 summer recreation brochure, with lists and schedules of the more than 100 summer camps available in the town.

Registration begins Wednesday, April 1, by mail, in person or online.

The Parks and Recreation Office is located at 181 Route 146, and is open weekdays from 9 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. To register online, registrants can go to www.guilderlandrec.com.

The Tawasentha Summer Adventure Day Camp begins Monday, June 29, and runs for three, two-week sessions until Aug. 7. Hours are 8 to 11:45 a.m.

Moore said the town offers golf programs, rocketry and swimming.

Handicap parking sweep results in $7,000 in fines

Albany County law agencies issued more than $7,000 in fines during a handicap parking enforcement sweep on Friday, March 20, according to Albany County Officials.

The one-day effort was part of Project Access, and the program has levied $211,505 in fines since its inception in 1994.

On March 20, 42 summons were issued, with the Albany Police Department handing out 24, followed by nine from the Colonie Police Department, five from the Guilderland Police Department, two from the Cohoes Police Department, and one each from the Menands Police Department and Stuyvesant Plaza Security.

"The goal of the one-day effort is to increase the awareness and compliance of handicapped parking issues and to re-educate the public regarding the difficulties encountered by persons with disabilities," according to information from Albany County Traffic Safety Board.

Historian to talk about Cherry Hill

Noted historian Tamara Plakins Thornton will inaugurate Historic Cherry Hill's Hudson 400 celebration series with a talk at Bethlehem Public Library on Sunday, April 19, at 2 p.m.

"Where the Past Beats the Present: the Cherry Hill family's view of their Hudson River heritage" places history against family nostalgia. Cherry Hill Mansion, which was actually located in the Town of Bethlehem until 1870, was the Van Rensselaer family home from 1787 to 1963. Thornton will explore why the later Van Rensselaers recreated and romanticized their past—which in actuality included the less savory realities of the rum trade, slave labor and advantageous marriages bent on creating fortunes. The Cherry Hill lecture series is cosponsored by the New York Council for the Humanities and the Town of Bethlehem.

Chamber members vote on influential events

List revealed as region celebrates quadricentennial

In celebration of the Capital Region's Quadricentennial, the Albany-Colonie Regional Chamber of Commerce recently revealed its members' selections of the most influential events of the past 400 years.

The results were announced during the Chamber's 109th Annual Dinner on March 12 at the Empire State Plaza Convention Center. More than 1,000 members of the region's business community attended the event, which had "A History of Discovery, A Future of Innovation" as its theme.

The Chamber compiled a list of the most influential events of the past 400 years in six different time periods since Henry Hudson sailed the river that now bears his name. Chamber members were asked to vote in an online survey last February for their top event from each time period.

The winners are:

- 1609-1800: The state capital of New York is moved permanently to Albany. (1797)
- 1801-1850: The Erie Canal is completed, forming a continuous water route from the Great Lakes to New York City. (1825)
- 1851-1900: Thomas Edison's plant becomes the headquarters for General Electric, beginning GE's presence in the region. (1892)
- 1901-1950: In Schenectady, television is demonstrated publicly for the first time. (1928)

• 1951-2000: Interstate 87 from Albany to the U.S.-Canadian border, known as the Northway, is built and, in the same year, named America's Most Scenic Highway by Parade Magazine. (1967)

• 2001-present: The College of Nanoscale Science and Engineering (CNSE) at the University at Albany is established at the state-of-the-art Albany NanoTech complex. CNSE opens in 2004 and, two years later, it is recognized as the world's number one college in microtechnology and nanotechnology. (2001)

During the annual dinner, the Golub family, owners of Price Chopper, received the Envoy Salute, which recognizes an individual or group whose leadership, vision and contributions have made a positive and significant impact on the quality of life for residents in the region.

John Murray, chairman and CEO of Rose & Kiernan, Inc., was given the Arthur R. Kapner Spirit of the Chamber Award, which is presented to an individual whose dedicated service and efforts have brought credit to the Chamber and enhanced its standing in the community. The Spirit of the Chamber Award is named in honor of Arthur R. Kapner, who died in June 2004 after five decades of volunteer service to the Chamber, including a stint as president of its board of directors.

'Law and Order: SVU' visit made rigorous cancer treatments seem a distant memory

By ARIANA COHN
cohn@spotlightnews.com

Less than three years ago, she was diagnosed with an aggressive form of cancer. This year, she shined brightly on televisions across the country during an episode of "Law and Order: Special Victims Unit."

But Jayna Schenk, 17, of Delmar, is not a national celebrity. She is a local teen who is battling cancer, which is now in remission, and got to see one of her dreams come true.

According to her mother, Diane Schenk, she and Jayna's father, Doug, first learned of Jayna's Acute Myeloid Leukemia when she was visiting her uncle in Florida.

Jayna came down with a painful migraine, her mother said, and was brought to the hospital, where her blood was tested and the disease was discovered. She was officially diagnosed in August 2007.

Schenk said the symptoms of Jayna's disease were present, although the disease itself was not immediately recognizable.

"She had been sick for a few months, but we couldn't pinpoint it," she said.

According to Schenk, Jayna's disease was attacking her white blood cells rapidly, with the cells mutating and causing many complications, including severe headaches.

Once doctors discovered Jayna had AML, her mother said, they knew she would have to endure rigorous treatment in hope to cure the aggressive disease.

Jayna was recommended for five cycles of chemotherapy, Schenk said, although her body responded to the treatment and went into remission almost immediately after her first treatment.

"She was advanced, but not as advanced as other children," said Schenk. "[Her body] just took to the chemo."

In addition, Schenk said Jayna became part of an experimental study for chemotherapy medications that she thinks also helped Jayna stay in remission, along with the four other rounds of treatment that doctors said were necessary to completely fight off Jayna's disease.

Schenk said that while some chemotherapy treatments allow patients to return home after the treatments, Jayna was required to stay in the hospital for several weeks, averaging about 60 days per treatment round.

It was during those days that Jayna developed a true passion for "Law and Order: SVU," a television program that features police detectives solving a new criminal case each episode.

Schenk said the doctors at Jayna's hospital recommended her to the Make-A-Wish Foundation, an organization that helps grant the wishes of children suffering from diseases.

According to Marketing and Public Relations Coordinator for the Make-A-Wish Foundation of Northeast New York Stephen Schaeffer, the organization functions through that referral process.

"An ill child can be referred to the chapter through a number of different avenues," he said. "It can be from themselves, a parent or guardian, teacher, social worker or medical professional."

Once a child is referred, Schaeffer said, they are then assigned to a wish granter, who helps carry out the wish.

Jayna's wish granter was Suzanne Oliver, a seasoned wish granter, according to Schaeffer, and assistant wish granter Mary-Jane Rooney.

Rooney and Oliver served as liaisons between the chapter and the family, said Schaeffer.

Schenk said the two women were very helpful in making sure Jayna got the exact wish she desired and constantly kept in contact with Schenk to check on Jayna's progress.

The women also reminded Schenk to talk to Jayna about what wish she would like to have granted.

"A lot of times, she was even too sick to think about it," said Schenk, "And other times she would write things down that she wanted."

Schenk said that Jayna was advised by the women to come up with a list of four wishes she would like to have granted, in order of importance to her. According to Schenk, fourth on the list was to go on a cruise to anywhere; third was a shopping spree in New York City; second was to be able to shadow Comedy Central's "The Colbert Report" host Stephen Colbert; and first was to be able to meet the cast of "Law and Order: SVU."

In mid-December, Jayna's No. 1 wish was granted when she and her mother were picked up at their home by limousine and brought to a hotel across from Giants Stadium to stay for the weekend in which they would meet the characters from the hit television program Jayna admired most.

On the day her wish was carried out, Jayna and Schenk were picked up at the hotel and brought to the set in Fort Lee, N.J., where Jayna not only got to meet her favorite characters, but got to sit in the director's chair and call the shots for part of the day, share several meals with the characters, and at the end of the day, have her hair and makeup done so that she could serve as an extra during one of the scenes in the episode "Snatched" that premiered on national television on Tuesday, Feb. 3.

Schenk said Jayna is still in remission and that the experience Make-A-Wish gave her daughter made up for the times Jayna was feeling so sick.

"She just glowed the whole day," Schenk said. "Her smile was from ear to ear."

The Purina Incredible Dog Team has performed across the country at sporting events, festivals and on television shows.

Judith Burgess believes the companionship of a pet can be more than comforting — it can be lifesaving.

Burgess, who works with the Mental Health Foundation, said these tough economic times can create particularly difficult situations for people with mental illnesses and other mental health problems. Often, it's their pets that prevent them from doing something drastic.

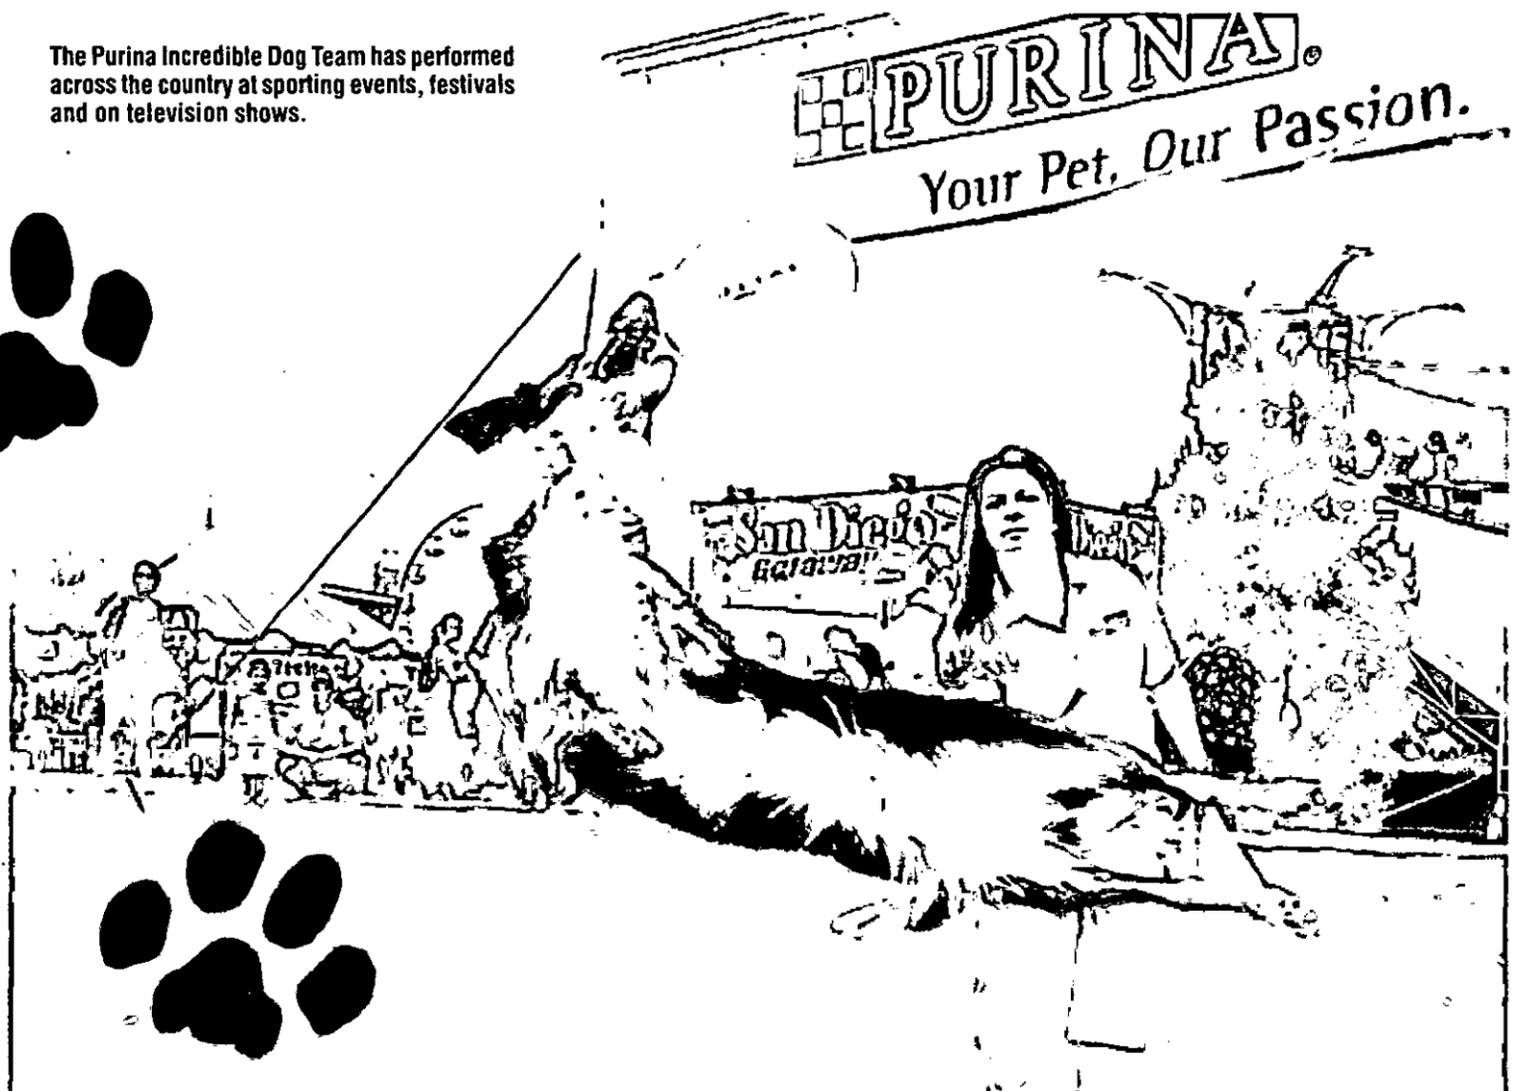

"You will always see these stories — the pet just kind of saved them," Burgess said. "They know that the pet depends on them. It provides them with a purpose for living."

Through her work with the Mental Health Foundation, Burgess oversees the Paws for a Cause at the Plaza event, which highlights the bond between people and their pets. Now in its third year, Paws for a Cause will be held Friday and Saturday, April 3 and 4, on the South Concourse of Empire State Plaza.

While the event's message is a serious one, there will be plenty of family fun, including shows by the Purina Incredible Dog Team. Paws for a Cause will also feature vendors, presentations, information on adopting animals and a wall where people can write a paragraph or two about what their pets mean to them. This is the inaugural year for the wall.

"We're always looking for stories," Burgess said. "I think we'll get a lot of interesting feedback."

While the wall may be new,

When the fur flies

Purina Incredible Dog Team to perform at Mental Health Foundation event the Incredible Dog Team is making a return trip to the area, having proved a hit at previous Paws for a Cause events. The dogs on the team can do flips, catch Frisbees and do an assortment of other tricks.

"People love them," Burgess said. "They are really incredible."

The dog team will put on three shows, and it attracts so many people that by the third show, "you can't walk," Burgess said.

There are nine trainers who take the dogs around the country to perform, and they are big believers in the Paws for a Cause message that pets play an important role in people's lives.

"The trainers own the dogs," said Aaron Methvin, a production manager with Kicking Cow, the company that manages the Incredible Dog Team. "The trainers don't go anywhere without these dogs."

That kinship lets the dogs "do things you never thought a dog could do," Methvin said. One, for instance, can do a handstand, he said.

Methvin, who's watched the Incredible Dog Team perform numerous times, called it "crazy" and said it's sure to keep people of all ages entertained.

"You see kids with big smiles and adults with their jaws dropped," he said. "It's just fun."

The Purina Incredible Dog Team will put on three shows at the Paws for a Cause at the Plaza Saturday, April 4.

Burgess hopes people will share some of those good feelings with animals around the area who are in need. In addition to looking to hook people up with rescue groups at the show, organizers are holding a pet food drive at Paws for a Cause.

Visitors are encouraged to bring a container of new, unopened, pet food on both days. The food will be distributed to the rescue groups that are participating in the event.

The Mental Health Foundation, meanwhile, doesn't stand to collect much from the event. It's not really a fundraiser — admission is free. Burgess said Paws for a Cause is really intended just to celebrate the role animals play in people's lives.

Paws for a Cause at the Plaza will run from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Friday, and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Saturday. The Incredible Dog Team will perform Saturday at 10:30 a.m., noon and 1:30 p.m.

Budget

Resident Joan Smith said the board did the right thing by keeping modified and freshmen sports.

"We'd like to thank the board for moving the modified cut to tier three," said Smith, after two middle school students handed in a petition with 500 signatures to keep modified.

Bethlehem is facing a $2.2 million cut in state aid and had to try to close the budget gap on an almost $90 million budget by reducing expenditures and increasing revenues.

Superintendent Michael Tebbano said many decisions facing the school are riding on the passage of a state budget that would restore some school funding.

"It all matters if the legislature can pass the budget... They're doing their thing, and we just have to be patient," he said of the state budget passing by Wednesday, April 1.

Tebbano said he received a letter from the governor's office stating that once the budget passes, money will be flowing to area school districts.

To make the budget's passage even more pressing, Tebbano said, the promised federal stimulus money can not come to Bethlehem until New York has passed its own budget.

Tebbano, who requested the board not increase his salary for the next two years, said the restoration of state aid through state budget restoration and federal stimulus money was "probable."

Many of the suburban council schools, including Bethlehem and Gunderland, are not privy to "title one" funding from the government, because Tebbano said, they considered "affluent districts."

Before the meeting began, the board had cut $1.4 million from its budget, which had increased nearly $5 million over last year's through contractual raises, cost-of-living increases, supply increases and other annual expenditure hikes. District officials have described the budget as a "rollover budget" from last year's.

By the meeting's end, the board's tentative budget reductions did not total more than $1.8 million.

In a rare 5-to-2 split vote, the board voted to eliminate paying the fee associated with hockey, golf and bowling. Board members Diane Glacone Stever and Matt Downey voted against the cuts. District spokesman Matt Leon said the district would still supply everything else, such as uniforms, coaches and referees.

However, those clubs will be responsible for raising the money for their respective fees to play.

The district pays $21,000 to rent the ice rink from the Capital District YMCA, which the board said is "the biggest check we write" for any single sports expenditure.

Tebbano said the board would be drafting a "district fundraiser policy" to be presented at the next board of education meeting on April 22, which is when the board is expected to officially adopt its 2009-2010 budget proposal for voters to weigh in on in May.

He also said he would be willing to sit in on talks with the YMCA to see if some fundraising changes could be made because they do not allow 50/50 raffles and other types of common fundraising at the facility on Delaware Avenue.

President of the Hockey Boosters, Mike Cooper, said hockey players and their families understood the cuts and that fundraising would continue the program in Bethlehem.

"It's absolutely viable," he said. "We're very committed to this program and would like to see it continue, and we're going to do whatever we can to see that it does."

Cooper said that when the school budget was voted down a couple of years ago, hockey was completely cut from the school, but the boosters club raised $35,000 in about six months to save the program.

In another rare split vote, the board voted 4-to-3 against sending a third student to Tech Valley High School. Board President James Lytle, the longest-serving board member, Lynne Lenhardt and Downey were outvoted.

Bethlehem's two current Tech Valley students will remain in the program.

Lytle and Lenhardt's terms expired this school year. Lytle has announced he will not seek re-election in May, while Lenhardt said she would seek another three-year term.

The public will vote on the board seats during the Tuesday, May 19, budget vote at the Bethlehem High School. The two highest vote getters will win the seats. Interested residents can pick up a petition at the school district office, 90 Adams Place, Delmar.

To appear on the ballot, 78 signatures are needed.

Transportation Department Director Al Karam withdrew a request for a full-time mechanic at the cost of $58,400 and an emergency power generator at the cost of $20,000.

Board member Lisa Allendorf personally thanked Karam after commenting the week before to a large applause that she would rather keep modified sports than hire a new mechanic.

In addition to the proposed Bethlehem Central Budget and two board member seats in May, voters will also have the opportunity to vote on a $1.2 million bus proposition to replace 18 buses.

Officials said they wanted to emphasize to the community that the bus replacement was not an "addition" to the budget, but that it is already factored in and needs to be approved by voters separately in order to allow the district to borrow the funding for the buses.

The Bethlehem Central Teachers Association contract was once again raised when Tebbano announced that teacher sabbaticals would have to be re-entered into the budget because of contractual obligations with the district.

One resident stated to the board, "And the union skates away free with their sabbaticals and pay raises."

Tebbano said there was nothing the district could do.

"The fact is the BCTA rejected our proposal," he responded.

the One-Step-At-A-Time marathon, sponsored by Spotlight Newspapers. The marathon is done in conjunction with the children's race, which has been renamed the Delmar Dash Spotlight on Youth.

The One-Step-At-A-Time marathon can be coupled with the children's quarter-mile or half-mile race but is not mandatory. All of the children participating in the One-Step-At-A-Time program will receive special T-shirts signifying their accomplishments.

Marcia and Tom Adams are the races' co-directors.

"We try to miss the church traffic and be as undistruptive as possible," Marcia Adams said last year about the timing of the race.

All of the money for the race goes back to the children and the runners, for prizes, trophies and T-shirts. The roughly 40-to-50 people who work on the event every year are all volunteers, according to the Adams', with the exception of the timing crew, who sets up the start and finish lines and use computers to help time runners.

Chuck Terry of Albany won the men's race last year, coming in at 25:48 and besting the second-place runner by over a minute. Voorheesville's Dana Peterson won the overall women's race by crossing the finishing line at 31:17. Over 300 children ran in the kid's race last year and over 600 runners crossed the finish line in the 5-mile race.

The Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce will be hosting its fourth annual Chamber Pot race, in which area businesses send teams of runners to compete against each other.

According to Chamber President Marty DeLaney, the team with the best overall averaged time wins the Chamber Pot plaque. The award has changed hands for its first three years in a row with the SABIC Innovative Plastics' team beating Matchless Stove and Chimney's team last year.

The SABIC team was made up of Brian Whitman and Christian Lietzau, who finished the race in 29:36 and was the No. 1 finisher in the men's 40 to 44 age group. Whitman, who ran in the very first Delmar Dash in 1988, ended with a time of 32:58.

Cuts

sending additional students to Tech Valley, as well as giving English teachers a fifth course to teach and cutting the purchase of technology hardware.

Sanders said the district is facing "unknowns at a far greater level than we've ever seen before."

He said projected budget items include decreases in personnel, and contractual salary increases that account for $311,000.

District Superintendent John McGuire said the "uniqueness" in developing the budget and the "unknowns" coming from state and federal government have made the process difficult.

"It's cruel and inhumane what the state of New York is doing," said board member Denise Eisele.

Fellow board member John P. Dornbush echoed her frustration in the face of government delays that have hindered the budget process.

"We're doing the best we can here," said Dornbush. "I just want those out there in the audience to understand what we're up against here. We'll continue to struggle with this and fine tune this."

Eisele said she supports a full-time social worker at Altamont Elementary.

"It's a good program. It's a necessary program," she said.

Other board members said the proposed budget unevenly favors the high school.

"My overall problem with the budget is equality of the levels," said board member Colleen O'Connell.

She said the middle school is taking the brunt of the cuts, though not losing very many students, while the high school is taking too few cuts. O'Connell cited the science enrichment program as an example of a middle school initiative that should be kept intact.

"Something's got to give at the middle school," she said.

She added the high school's technology budget is "too rich," and said she wants to see results of Tech Valley before sending another student.

Joe Laurenzo, chief technology specialist for the district, spoke on behalf of the need to continue to provide top-level hardware for students.

He said opposition has been voiced about increasing spending on technology at the expense of personnel, but he pointed out the importance of keeping the hardware up to date.

"It's not so much equipment [as] it is personnel tools," Laurenzo said.

He said buying new computers will save on repair costs and pay off in the long run.

Dornbush said he supports the technology spending.

"If you're not keeping up, you're falling behind," he said.

He said he also supports sending a third student to Tech Valley. A tuition decrease means sending three students will cost the same as two.

Barbara Fraterrigo warned that building in too many new programs with stimulus money is a bad idea, since that money will dry up in three years, while the programs will still be in place. That would put too much responsibility on the "backs of taxpayers," she said.

She said using money for programs that benefits the entire student body, rather than just the advanced students, is a good idea.

Board President Richard Weisz said it is unfortunate that the debate involves discussing figures that comprise such a small percent of the overall budget.

"It's sad the way the structure is ... so limited," he said. "It's just the nature of the beast."

He commented on the unfortunate state of the economy.

"This is the year the economy stopped. This is the year people cried out to us like never before," he said.

The citizens budget advisory Committee will meet for the final time on Tuesday, March 31, at Guilderland High School to further discuss the budget. That meeting is scheduled for 7:30 p.m.

Check back at www.spotlightnews.com for updates on state and federal aid slated for the school.

Go Globetrotting at the RCS Library

Globetrotting, performing New World music and improvisation, is the RCS Community Library's next Acoustic Doorways performance.

This trio is a co-operative music ensemble featuring Steve Gorn, playing Bansuri (North Indian bamboo flute), clarinet and soprano saxophone; John Davey, playing double-bass; and Brian Melick, playing percussion (congas, udu drum, slit drum, cymbals, bells and whistles, frame drum).

Globetrotting takes audiences on a whirlwind tour of Indian ragas, Latin percussion, African rhythms, and a healthy dose of American jazz. Globetrotting will appear at the First Reformed Church of Bethlehem in Selkirk on Friday, April 24, at 7:30 p.m.

Tickets are $8 for adults and $5 for seniors and children under 12. Refreshments are free, and we encourage everyone to bring a non-perishable item for our local food pantry. Tickets are available at the library prior to the concert or at the door.

Join the board of trustees

There will be two seats open, both one-year terms, on the Library Board of Trustees for the fiscal year beginning July 1. The following year, two full five-year terms will be on the ballot. Candidates must be residents and registered voters of the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Central School/Library District. Contact Judy Felsten, library director, at 756-2053 if you have questions about being a trustee.

Nominating petitions, which require signatures of 26 residents who are registered voters, are available at the library's circulation desk. Completed and notarized petitions must be returned to the library by Wednesday, April 15. Voting is on Tuesday, May 19, the same day and place as school district elections.

Spring vacation activities

April vacation will soon be here, and we are preparing a week of activities for a wide variety of school age kids.

Teen writers are invited to join a one-day writing workshop at RCS Community Library. If you have aged out of the Young Writers Workshop, this could be the next step for you. Workshop leader Linda Miller will guide the group on Monday, April 13, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., as it explores language, form and genre. Call the library at 756-2053 to register.

As the Capital District celebrates its roots during the Henry Hudson Quadricentennial, join librarian Barbara Goetschius to celebrate our Dutch history by making origami tulips. She'll be teaching the process on Thursday, April 16, from 1 p.m. to 3 p.m. All ages are welcome, although a little dexterity is useful.

More programs are in the works. Check here in the coming weeks for more details.

AUTOMOTIVE

Auto Show the perfect place to find a new car

By KIM R. PERRELLA

The writer is the managing director of the Eastern New York Coalition of Automotive Retailers, Inc, and the director of the Albany Auto Show.

If you've been thinking about how much you need (or want!) a new vehicle, there couldn't be a better time or a better place to find it than the Albany Auto Show at the Times Union Center, April 3 to 5.

Timing is everything and — thanks to the best deals, the best selection and a tax break that was just signed into law — your chance is now.

The Albany Auto Show is a non-selling event, which makes it the perfect atmosphere for your shopping pleasure. No haggling, no pressure, just the largest selection of what the Capital Region has to offer in vehicles. You'll be indoors, at one location, and you can compare and contrast models as much as you need to. You can sit in the seats, check out the trunk, find about all the safety features and "bells and whistles," perhaps even see a color that intrigues you. There's no substitute for getting "up close and personal" with all that's out there. Buying a car is a major purchase for a household and picking the right vehicle can bring lasting satisfaction and the Auto Show provides the easiest way to do that.

Even if you aren't ready to buy just now, it still pays to look now. Sometimes we feel forced into car purchases because of unforeseen occurrences, such as an accident or a major repair and that can be very stressful. Having your next purchase narrowed down or even an idea of what type of vehicle fits your needs sure can take a little stress out of a difficult situation.

So, whether you're ready to buy now, just thinking about it, or just want to have some fun looking at cool cars, the Albany Auto Show is just the place to be April 3 through 5. There'll be lots and lots of cars, trucks, minivans, sport utilities, specialty vehicles and even some prototypes and concept vehicles! If you want to see the latest and greatest on the road today, this show is the place to be!

AAA Hudson Valley Leads the Charge on Batteries and Recycling

AAA's 'Great Battery Roundup' to be held on Earth Day, April 22.

By ROMANA CIOLKO-APKARIAN, AAA Hudson Valley manager of marketing and public relations

AAA and its team of battery service professionals want the public's help in hunting down more than 5 million used, lead-acid, car, truck, boat and motorcycle batteries that haven't made their way back to their natural habitat: the recycling plant.

The car battery, a renewable source of vehicle power, contains lead that is 97 percent recyclable. Yet millions of these batteries never get a new chance at life because they've gotten lost in the shuffle. AAA Hudson Valley is on a mission to educate the public on the potential dangers of keeping old lead acid batteries while also encouraging battery recycling.

Some old batteries are illegally disposed of in dumpsters, or kept in garages, yards or storage sheds. AAA wants to encourage more people to recycle them.

Each year more than 100 million automotive lead-acid batteries are sold in the United States. Currently, the price of lead is on the rise. Recycling can help keep the price of new batteries down since recycled lead costs less than newly-mined lead. The typical new lead acid battery contains 60 to 80 percent recycled lead and plastic, which saves money, energy, and helps protect natural resources.

Leaking acid from old acid batteries can be harmful to children, pets and the environment. Wear gloves and safety glasses when handling batteries. Keep them upright and place batteries in a sturdy box or plastic container while transporting to make sure they won't shift or tip over. Don't smoke near or expose batteries to an open flame. If the battery case is cracked or leaking, be sure to use a leak-proof container.

"While AAA's recycling efforts keep millions of pounds of harmful lead, acid and plastic from landfills and waterways, the AAA Battery Service demonstrates our dedication to providing members the best automotive services available," said Jeff Seay, AAA Emergency Road Services field and program administrator. "Failed batteries account for millions of road service calls each year. Nationwide, AAA has resolved more than two million member vehicle breakdowns through the installation of a new battery with the mobile battery service."

Doing its part to help save and protect the Earth year-round, AAA's program has collectively recycled more than 2 million batteries since 1997.

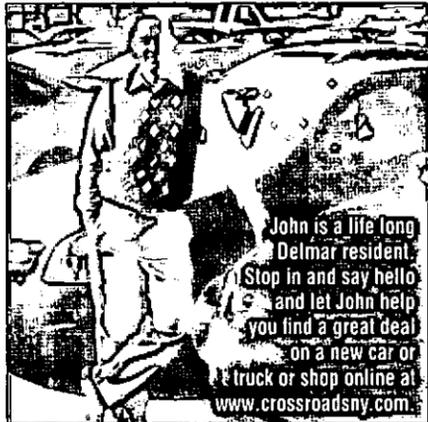

AAA Hudson Valley's "Great Battery Roundup" will be held Wednesday, April 22, from 8:30 a.m. to 6:30 p.m. at 618 Delaware Ave., Albany. For information, call 426-1000, ext. 2617.

Small Tease

by Therese Broderick

The redhead seated with her back to us has teased out

her long, thick hair which hangs, frizzled yet soft,

over the back of a green chair,
green teasing out

the yellow light washing
all over the room, yellow teasing out

the black heels of the shoes
she casually wears:

and so a small painting of a single girl teases out, as though

combed, a small poem
curl by curl
by curl.

Broderick is an award-winning poet from Albany. Her specialty is ekphrastic poetry, poetry written as a response to a piece of art. This poem was written after viewing a painting titled "Girl with Red Hair," painted by Sally Easterly and was published in Therese's chapbook, "Within View."

Therese holds an MFA from Spaulding University. She will be facilitating a poetry workshop at the Bethlehem Library on Saturday, April 18.

immense difficulty of his sport. "There are like a million different motions in the pole vault that you have to learn. If you screw one of them up, the whole jump will fail," said Platel. "If you don't run down the runway correctly, you're not going to jump high; if you don't plant the pole correctly, you're not going to jump high; if you don't do any one of the small little aspects correctly, everything else is going to fail."

It took Platel some time to learn and perfect all of these parts of his vault.

"Everything you do in steps," he explains. "You don't just go out there and do everything 100 percent every single time. You have got to work on the individual little motions within the jump itself, or else it's not going to work out."

Although Platel's sport is one of the most difficult in the realm of track and field, Smith is certainly not lacking in the difficulty department. Besides being one of the best high jumpers in the state, Smith also does the pentathlon, which is made up of five events: 110-meter high hurdles, long jump, shot put, high jump and a 1,500-meter run.

"That's my bag of tricks, I think," said Smith. "I think it's my favorite too, because it's the most fulfilling."

But Smith's most fulfilling moment was one last year when he and Platel each won their events at states.

"We were walking by the awards table and they had these huge trophies, and they had tons of them. And I asked, 'Coach are those for every event?' He said, 'Yeah, they are.' And I said, 'Wow, it would be cool to get one of those big trophies,'" he said. "We were both doing one event each. I did the high jump and everything came together. The second place guy got out at 6 feet, and I was just jumping against myself. I kept going and kept going, and I hit my personal record at that time (6-6) and came home with one of those big trophies. And then I went over and watched Jake clear 14-6, and then he came home with one of those trophies. It was just a great day because you see how your hard work is coming along."

Platel and Smith have one last outdoor track season to go through before they head off to college. Platel will be pole vaulting for Binghamton University, while Smith will compete for the University of Connecticut.

"I can't ever see myself not doing something with the pole vault," said Platel.

"I agree," added Smith.

Spike

Indianapolis days - and realized that I didn't have to throw hard to be successful," said Spike. "I just had to learn to read a defense as soon as I get to the line of scrimmage and call audibles. That way, I could fake out the opposing defense and make a play happen."

The only problem Spike came across was that Manning's strategy didn't translate well on the Arena Football field. With less time on the play clock than in a typical NFL game, Spike soon found himself creating a lot of false starts and delay of game penalties in practice as he tried to read the defense.

"I probably should have read Kurt Warner's book, 'How Faith made Me a Better Quarterback,' because at least Warner's played Arena Football before," said Spike.

As a result, Spike didn't make the opening day roster, but the plucky bird hasn't let that disappointment get the best of him. He's still working on his game as he also works on his routines for the Firebirds' home opener April 10 against the Florida Firecats.

"Not having played football since my college days at North Carolina, once I got the bug to play again, I couldn't stop just because I didn't make the team," said Spike. "I'm still throwing the ball around and trying to stay in shape just in case the team needs me out there. But for now, I'm happy doing my part by entertaining the fans. I haven't had an opportunity like this in years."

Rowdy, for one, thinks that Spike could make a good Arena Football quarterback.

"I gotta say that Spike has a good arm ... er, wing," said Rowdy. "I just wish he'd find someone else to throw the ball to. I've gone through five sets of asbestos-lined gloves to protect my fingers."

In the meantime, look for Spike in the stands during home games helping fans cheer the Firebirds on to victory.

"I'm hoping that these Firebirds can live up to the winning legacy of the past," said Spike. "And if they need any help, I'm willing to take the field at a moment's notice."

Leaping to the challenge

Smith, Platel reach new heights as BC's top track athletes

By ANDY CAHILL

sports@spotlightnews.com

The writer is an intern in the sports department and a senior at Bethlehem Central High School.

Neither Sam Smith nor Jake Platel thought that they were going to be doing track on their first day of freshman year at Bethlehem Central High School.

But through a fortunate series of events, the two seniors are not only on the track team, but they are also the stars of the team.

"My parents made me join the team freshman year" says Platel, the state indoor track champion in the pole vault. "How I got into pole vaulting is that it was the only event where you didn't have to run. So, it was just me being lazy again."

"I did the musical in 10th grade," explained Smith. "I was going to go out for the baseball team, and one of my rehearsals conflicted with the tryouts. So I said, 'Man, I am gonna miss a day of tryouts; this stinks. Maybe I'll just try a different sport.' And I went out for track."

Platel and Smith met at a high jump relay in their sophomore year. It was the first time the two would compete together.

"We needed a third high jumper," Platel remembered. "So, they just found the next, biggest, goofiest looking kid on the team after Mike McManus and Sam, and they just decided they would make me do high jump."

Since then, Smith and Platel have trained together, and they admit there is some on-upmanship going on.

"He (Platel) pushes me to train harder so that I can beat him, eventually - and then, maybe beat some other people," said Smith, who won the Section II high jump title this past indoor season.

According to Smith, there are three things that help accelerate one's ability at track and field: "a good work ethic, a person to train with and a good coach."

Besides pushing each other to be better, each of the two track stars sing the others praises.

"We all knew Sam was going to be a beast because he jumped 6 (feet), 4 (inches) sophomore year," said Platel.

"To see him (Platel) flying 15-1, 15-4 now, it's unreal. I think it's great," states Smith.

That level of effort has brought Platel and Smith to the forefront of state track and field. Both of them have placed in the top 10 of their respective events at state meets the past two years, with Platel grabbing the pole vault title in March.

What makes Platel's first place finish even more impressive is the

If 'Birds need help at QB, Spike is ready

If you're ever lucky enough to be trapped inside the Times Union Center after hours (and really, who wouldn't want to be trapped inside the TU Center), you might see a bright, orange flash of light illuminate the darkened arena.

They're not testing out a fireworks display or a flamethrower, though. That would be Albany Firebirds mascot Spike throwing a football around.

See, Spike wants to be more than an entertainer. He wants to be the starting quarterback for the arena football 2 team.

"Hey, I got a good wing," said Spike. "All I need is a prayer to get me on the field."

Spike flew back into town last year after getting word that the Albany Conquest was changing its name to the Firebirds. When he arrived from Indianapolis (where he'd been living on the streets after being evicted from his nest at Conesco Fieldhouse), he was shocked to see the state of Arena Football in his hometown.

"I had no idea things had gotten so bad on the field," said Spike. "If the old Albany Firebirds had gone through as many consecutive losing seasons as the Conquest had over the last three years, there would have been some serious housecleaning going on."

Indeed, some serious housecleaning had taken place before Spike got back to the Capital District. Most of last year's Conquest players left, leaving a lot of vacancies to be filled.

When Spike realized he had an opportunity to actually make the roster, he took a chance. He hit the weight room to get back in football shape and started throwing the football around with anybody he could find. Most of the time, that turned out to be Albany River Rats' mascot Rowdy.

"At first, Rowdy had a hard time handling my passes," said Spike. "Perhaps it was because I put so much heat behind them."

"All I saw coming at me was a flaming football," said Rowdy. "What else was I supposed to do? Get my hands burned while trying to catch it? I have a hockey career to consider. You do know I'm trying to convince (coach) Jeff Daniels to let me play center, right? How come you're not doing a story about that?"

Eventually, Spike learned to control his passes to the point where he wasn't firing the ball so hard that people couldn't handle them.

"I picked up a book called 'The Zen of Quarterbacking' by Peyton Manning - my favorite quarterback from my

As seen in this picture from his Indianapolis days, Spike knows how to tackle an opponent. Now, this fiery bird wants to prove he can throw a football, too.
