Crossgates car fire

On Saturday, Feb. 27, the Westmere Fire Department, Guilderland Police Department, and the Western Turnpike Rescue Squad responded to a car fire at Crossgates Mall. "There was a vehicle fire in the JCPenny's parking lot of Crossgates Mall," said Sean McGuire, spokesperson for the Westmere Fire Department. "It was an engine compartment fire, the Westmere Fire Department was able to contain the fire and no damage was sustained to other vehicles in the area." McGuire said that the department did not determine the exact cause of the fire, however, since "it doesn't seem suspicious," no further investigation was necessary.

Each was charged with one count of Prohibited Sale of Alcohol (An Unclassified Misdemeanor), one count of Unlawfully Dealing with a Child (Class A Misdemeanor) and issued appearance tickets.

Glenmont man charged with DWAI drugs, alcohol

The Bethlehem Police Department arrested Emir M. Cecunjanin, 20, of 385

State Route 9W, Glenmont, and charged him with DWAI-combined alcohol and drugs following an early-morning traffic stop Sunday, Feb. 28.

Police allegedly observed Cecunjanin's vehicle speeding southbound on Route 21, and pulled it over at the Stewart's station at the corner of Feura Bush Road. Police detected an odor of alcohol and marijuana coming from the vehicle, according to arrest reports.

Cecunjanin allegedly stated he had consumed several cans of Coor's Light and smoked a gram of marijuana. He failed sobriety tests and was taken into custody, according to police. A breath test at the police station showed his BAC to be 0.03 percent and a blood sample was taken at Albany Medical Center, according to police.

Cecunjanin was released to his sister and mother and scheduled to appear in court Tuesday, March 16.

Guilderland man arrested for DWI

Guilderland Police arrested Mark Himmelright, 20, of 3030 Evelyn Drive, Schenectady, and charged him with DWI.

Himmelright was pulled over while heading westbound on Route 20. Police sensed a strong odor of alcohol emanating from Himmelright, and also stated that he had glassy eyes and impaired motor coordination.

According to police, Himmelright failed subsequent sobriety tests, and was arrested for DWI.

A chemical test at the police station revealed Himmelright had a BAC of 0.17.

Himmelright will be arraigned at Guilderland Town Court on Thursday, March 11.

Thacher fans keep up rally

Announcement of park's possible closure has inspired public outcry

By RYAN MUNKS
munksr@spotlightnews.com

The outcry over the potential closing of Thacher Park has continued into a third week and is showing no signs of slowing down.

After media reports of the park's closing, Gov. David Paterson and the Office of Parks, Recreation, and Historical Preservation announced Friday, Feb. 19, that 41 of its 178 parks, including Thacher, and 14 of its 38 historic sites will be closed as a result of cuts in the executive budget.

The announcement has caused an outpouring of support for the park from local and state officials, as well as area parkgoers.

Most recently, at its Tuesday, March 2, meeting, the Guilderland Town Board unanimously passed a resolution "calling upon the governor and State Legislature to continue to fund staff and operations at John Boyd Thacher State Park."

"Thacher Park is an important resource to the residents of the Town of Guilderland," said Supervisor Ken Runion, who introduced the resolution.

He said the park offers invaluable recreational opportunities to the residents of Guilderland, and if it is closed,

"I think Thacher Park is a whole lot more important than people realize."

— Mary Boyce, Voorheesville

the town will suffer an economic impact.

"Businesses, particularly in Altamont, derive revenue and business through tourists going through Thacher Park," he said.

He also reiterated a line he said he has read many times.

"If you want to build a good community, build a park," he said.

Councilman Warren Redlich said the state government should look at other places to make budget cuts before parks.

Councilman Mark Grimm echoed those sentiments.

"It's hard to believe that in a $134 billion budget, we can't afford to keep Thacher Park open," said Grimm.

Councilwoman Patricia Slavick said considering high gas prices, Thacher Park is an accessible getaway for locals, and is often the destination for many school trips.

Councilman Paul Pastore said that Thacher Park is a tremendous asset to the community. "Hopefully, they [the state] will heed our concerns, and the concerns raised by other municipalities," said Pastore.

The following day, dozens of protesters

Dozens of protesters were at the Capitol Wednesday, March 3, to protest of the planned closing of 41 state parks and 14 historical sites.

gathered outside the Capitol building to protest the closing of the 41 state parks. Protesters chanted such rallying calls as "Hey, hey, ho, ho, these cuts to parks have got to go," "Whose parks? Our parks" and "Parks are the people's."

Anni Murray, one of the grassroots organizers of the protest, said, "These parks belong to us, they are not government parks, they are our parks ... parks are spectacularly beautiful, and parks don't have political power."

Mary Boyce, of Voorheesville, was one of the protesters on hand to call for the legislature to keep the park open.

"Thacher Park is beautiful, people come up there all year. ... I think Thacher Park is a whole lot more important than people realize."

Assemblyman Steve Englebright D-Setauket,

Assemblyman Steve Englebright D-Setauket, said he's heard that parks around the state are already implementing the proposed cuts.

chairman of the New York State Assembly's Committee on Tourism, Arts and Sports Development, was on hand to support the protesters.

Englebright said that some state parks are already implementing parts of the cuts, turning away people who would like to use the parks as camp grounds.

"It's outrageous," he said. "We are not going to be pushed around, and we are not going to let our state parks close," he said.

According to Englebright, the state has never closed down a park, not even in the Great Depression.

He also called on the supporters to keep up their efforts.

"Keep up the pressure. Keep those cards and letters coming," he said.

Breslin to face a primary challenger

Timothy Carney readies Senate campaign

By RYAN MUNKS
munksr@spotlightnews.com

State Senator Neil Breslin D-Delmar, will face a primary challenger for his seat as the senator for the 46 Senate District, which includes all of Albany County.

Timothy L. Carney, a real estate agent and former candidate for president of the Albany Common Council, has begun the process to enter the race to challenge Breslin, but has not yet made an official announcement.

"I put together a campaign, and my committee, but haven't made an official announcement," said Carney.

Earlier in the year, Carney was considering a run against Assemblyman John McEneny D-Albany, but eventually decided to run against Breslin. "I was inquiring in regards to both Jack and Neil's seats," he said. "I received an overwhelming amount of support encouraging me to run for the Senate seat."

"I can safely say I've seen no reason for me not to run," he said.

Carney said he is running because of the "dysfunction in state government as it is right

Glenmont Elementary a finalist for $25,000 grant

Community can vote through March

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

Glenmont Elementary School has been declared a finalist in the Pepsi Refresh Project grant program and is on its way to receiving $25,000 to continue its Building Community Through Dance program.

The program came in seventh in votes received out of 1,000 ideas in the grant category for the month of February. The top 10 ideas receive funding but must first be vetted by Pepsi to ensure the money will be spent properly. The official winners are expected to be announced March 22.

Glenmont Elementary Principal Laura Heffernan declined to comment before the official announcement is made.

A spokesperson for

Pepsi also declined to go on the record before the winners are named.

Building Community Through Dance, which will be entering its fourth year, is aimed at using swing dance as a means to build connections between students and the community. Elementary students attend the program with their parents, siblings, college students and seniors from the community.

The grant will cover two one-week dance residencies with Evita Arce and Michael Jagger from Vanaver Caravan and teaching session with Alan Thomson's Little Big Band and Peter Davis and Lindy Hop Heave to play during the sessions. A community dance is planned for June.

The Refresh Everything program will be doling out $20 million over the course of 2010 to worthy causes, as determined by a nationwide Internet vote. $1.3 million will be distributed every month through grants of various sizes, plus spot grants that will be handed out by local bottlers.

Pepsi elected to launch the grant program rather than buy advertising during the Super Bowl this year.

February was the first round of voting. Other BC programs are already getting involved for March's contest, however.

At the Middle School, teacher Jennifer Steil has applied for a $25,000 grant to reinstate the "Step Up to BCMS" summer program for incoming sixth graders, which was discontinued three years ago.

The Step Up program brings 20 to 25 incoming sixth graders into the building for two weeks in August to help acclimate them to the middle school experience, said Steil.

"They're varying fifth graders that have anxiety issues that make it difficult to transition to the middle school," she said. "It's the kids who just struggle with making friends, with self confidence, with becoming comfortable in a new setting."

Middle School Vice Principal Mark Warford has submitted a district wide $250,000 grant application to upgrade the district's dishwashers to more energy efficient models.

Only two $250,000 grants will be given every month, though, so competition will likely be fierce in this category.

Steil said she's been trying to get a grant for the Step Up program for the past three years without any success. The open-ended nature of the Refresh Everything grant makes her hopeful, though.

"Because we're not labeled a school in need, it's very hard to find grants," she said.

Now that the application is submitted, what Steil needs most are votes. Those 13 and older can vote once per day at www.refresheverything.com.

Overheard conversation inspires kitchen creativity

By CAROLINE BARRETT
news@spotlightnews.com

The author is the food writer for The Spotlight and the mother of three children, Lucy, age 9, Zoe, age 8, and Elliot, age 5.

It happens in our house sometimes that people eavesdrop on conversations. Lucy is the biggest offender. When voices dip low, whisper or murmur, anything that indicates a secret floating about, her radar turns on. She has an uncanny ability to know when we are about to announce that we'll be going out for ice cream.

The last time she listened in on a conversation, it worked out all right for me. Lucy overheard me talking to a friend, saying I heard that a neighbor asks her teenagers to plan and cook one meal each week. She begged for the chance to try it.

Clearly, my kids aren't old enough to independently plan and cook an entire meal. But, offering it up occasionally takes the pressure off me. It could be fun and teach them something about being responsible - making a plan and then following through with it.

Since she had "overheard" the conversation, and thought it sounded cool, I told her it was her responsibility to plan and cook dinner on a Monday night. From start to finish.

From a Caterer's Kitchen

Caroline Barrett

She enthusiastically agreed to make something that would be agreeable to all and pass the healthy test. I would even settle for kinda healthy on this one. I promised that I wouldn't be terribly picky. No grilled peanut butter, bacon and fluff sandwiches. A responsible adult probably shouldn't allow that for dinner on an average Monday night. She promised to consider all the food groups, make a list and even help with the dishes, which made me laugh. The kids all tend to disappear just as Paul or I pour soap on the dish sponge. This offer showed just how dedicated she was. Lucy then went to the cookbook shelf, slowly looked over all, and finally pulled out a big book of fancy desserts.

"What?!"

She addressed me calmly, as if talking to a child. "I'm planning a dessert to go along with my dinner, and I'm going to choose that part first. Then I'll pick out the healthy things."

So I shut up and put a little faith in my daughter and let her do her thing.

She squirreled away in our big reading chair with an armload of cookbooks and a blanket. It wasn't long after that she closed the books and handed me a list. It was complete with an entree, vegetable and the dessert she so carefully considered. This is what she came up with: outside-in cheeseburgers, asparagus, and make your own pies. Her list was so complete, it even had ketchup and mustard on it for the burgers. The recipes didn't come from the cookbooks, just from her creative and food-loving brain. The pictures and recipes were enough to get her juices flowing.

Her idea for cheeseburgers was simple but genius. Season the meat with garlic and onion, give it a little flavor. Then slip sharp cheddar cheese in the center of two patties and grill it up. We don't eat cheeseburgers all the time, so it's a different and fun thing to put on the table in the middle of winter. The asparagus idea she had was to melt a little Parmesan cheese over the stalks, in broiler. She was after a brown crisp cover. This one she needed a little help on, so we decided together to saute the asparagus in a little oil, arrange them on a cookie sheet, squeeze lemon juice over all, and then grate the cheese on top. Lucy also cracked black pepper on top. Everyone loved the crisp spears with plenty of lemon and covering of sharp cheese.

Her dessert was the best of all. It's something we'll do many

Lucy's Inside-Out Cheeseburgers

- about 1-1/2 pounds ground sirloin
- 1 teaspoon sea salt
- 1 teaspoon garlic powder
- 1 teaspoon onion powder
- Small pieces sharp cheddar cheese
- Whole wheat buns
- 1 small onion, sliced thin
- olive oil

For each burger, form two thin circles of beef. Place 3-4 pieces of cheese in the center of one, and place the other on top. Pinch the edges and tuck in the cheese so that it is completely closed. In a small bowl, combine the salt with the garlic and onion. Sprinkle a bit on each side and press it in with your fingers. Grill burgers over medium heat, about 4-5 minutes per side, depending on preference for doneness. While the burgers cook, heat the oil in a small frying pan and cook the onions over low heat, until very soft and brown. Pile a small scoop on each burger. (That was Paul's touch, Lucy doesn't like onions on her burger.)

Lucy's Lemon Asparagus with Parmesan

- 1 bunch asparagus, trimmed
- Olive oil
- Juice of 1 lemon
- Freshly grated Parmesan cheese
- Fresh ground black pepper

In a large saute pan, heat the oil over medium heat. Add the asparagus and cook for about 5 minutes, until bright green and still crisp. Arrange asparagus on a cookie sheet, so they are lined up and touching. Grate Parmesan over all, using a generous amount. Place under the broiler on low heat. Watch carefully, checking every minute or so. Season with black pepper and serve.

times over. Before we even started dinner, she and I made a quick batch of pie crust, with plenty of butter and a touch of sugar. It chilled in the fridge while we prepared everything else. Then, before Paul headed out to cook the burgers, we all stood at the kitchen counter, assembling our pies. Elliot is a purist, apple only. Zoe loves berries, all berries. So she loaded her little dish with strawberries and blueberries and raspberries. The rest of us put in a combination of all the fruits. We each carefully measured out our spoonful of sugar, spread the disk of dough over top, and used a little knife to make a pattern on top. Each had to have its own look. I was feeling very possessive of my own pie, and didn't want to end up eating Zoe's berry pie when I had laid each apple and berry exactly the way I wanted it. And I'm sure she felt the same. So my pie had a little snowflake on the top, Lucy's had an 'L', and each had its own mark.

On that Monday, Lucy had her day in the kitchen. I had the chance to kick back, let someone else do some of the work and at the same time, see my beautiful daughter being independent and creative. And, I gave her some good, motherly advice: Beware of the conversations you listen in on because I hear the neighbor's kids are now cleaning the house, as well as cooking dinner.

Annual dinner scheduled for March 25 at Normanside

By CHARLES WIFF
wiff@spotlightnews.com

Whether it's for a lifelong devotion to the area, innovative business practices or dedicated community service, local businesspeople will be honored at the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce's upcoming awards dinner.

The 25th annual Silver Awards Dinner will be held Thursday, March 25, at Normanside Country Club. Delmar Florist owner Barbara Ostroff and Glenmont Car Wash owner Dennis O'Shaughnessy, Sr. will be honored as Business Persons of the Year; Keith Bennett, owner of Security Supply Corp., will receive the Lifetime Achievement Award; and Lois Vadney will be recognized with the Citizen of the Year Award.

"At our annual dinner, we proudly recognize the people in our community who go above and beyond what is expected," Chamber President Marty DeLaney, who is celebrating her 25th year in her post, said in a statement. "They are people who don't want or expect recognition. They know that donating time and expertise is part of being a good neighbor, friend and business person."

Additional awards will be given during the event. The Chamber recognizes commitment and service to the business community and community as a whole.

O'Shaughnessy, who

"It took me a few years to realize that you've got to give back, and giving back to your community is very important."

Glenmont Car Wash owner Dennis O'Shaughnessy, Sr

has owned and operated Glenmont Car Wash for the past 36 years, said he makes giving something back to his customers a top priority.

"It took me a few years to realize that you've got to give back, and giving back to your community is very important," he said.

His business is known amongst the local sports community for participation in fundraising efforts. He gives car wash passes to local teams, who keep half the cost for themselves when they're sold. Those who buy the passes get their money's worth with a normal priced car wash.

Helping out sports teams is valuable to O'Shaughnessy because he will likely see some of the athletes again as employees.

"I'm just helping to develop future employees," he said. "My employees are very important to me and always will be treated fairly, because without an employee, I would be nothing."

The facilities at Glenmont Car Wash are undergoing an upgrade to accept credit, debit and gift cards, and O'Shaughnessy plans to roll out an unlimited wash plan soon.

Delmar Florist is in its third year of business and employs five young workers. Ostroff said being a small business owner along with her husband, Jeff, has been challenging, but rewarding.

"It's not easy, but at the end of each day, we are grateful to have the business," she said. "So to be recognized is very special."

Delmar Florist has already carved out its own tradition with "Good Neighbor Day." On the second Wednesday in September, the business gives away roses by the dozen on the condition you keep one for yourself and give away the other 11 to spread goodwill and cheer. Donations are collected for a local group. Last year, over $2,000 was collected for Bethlehem Senior Services.

Ostroff said she's looking forward to building her business in the coming year with the installation of grow lights for tropical plants.

Bennett was recently honored with the Bethlehem YMCA's President Award. Security Supply Corp., a wholesale plumbing and heating distributor with locations throughout the Hudson Valley, is celebrating its 76th year in business. Despite a decline in business in 2009, the company upgraded its Albany showroom and added a new location in Middletown, said Bennett.

"We're continuing to grow and put things in place to make it happen," he said.

Bennett, a lifelong area resident, has served as chairman of the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce and on the Bethlehem 20/20 Committee and Route 9W Corridor Study Committee. He's also the first vice president of the Albany County Historical Association.

Vadney has also been involved in town government over the years. She is a longtime volunteer for Bethlehem Senior Services and a former Town Hall employee. She also volunteers at the First United Methodist Church Harvest Fair and for the Tri-Village Directory.

The awards dinner is open to the public, though reservations are required. Tickets are $55. For more information or to make a reservation, contact the Chamber at www.bethlehemchamber.com or 439-0512.

The Albany Figure Skating Club's Spring Ice Show was held on Sunday, March 7, at the Bethlehem Area YMCA. Approximately 50 young skaters aged 6 to 18 from around the Capital District showcased their skills. The Albany Figure Skating Club, based in Delmar, is a United States Figure Skating club with 111 members of all ages and all skating abilities.

Matters of Opinion in the Spotlight

Band-Aids won't help

School boards and superintendents have the unenviable job of telling parents what their children can and can't have while also telling them what they must pay for.

Guilderland Central School District Superintendent John McGuire was on the money, so to speak, when at a budget advisory meeting he characterized the shortfall of school aid as "historic."

In order to avoid a near-17 percent tax increase, he's proposing a budget that cuts some $4 million in school staff and programs. Not a very popular proposition either way.

Editorial

Over in Bethlehem, Superintendent Michael Tebbano is faced with the prospect of closing what is perceived to be an underused pool at the middle school in order to save $30,000. It seems like a no-brainer, until you take into account the number of people who come out to say they would gladly pay extra fees in order to keep it in service.

The point here is that reductions in services are inevitable in this financial climate and the likelihood that any tax-paying constituent will be happy about them is as close to nil as you can get.

Now, the rallying cry for the majority of people who want to maintain services is that teachers and administrators should start shaking off pay and benefits like so much unneeded cargo.

There are a couple of things wrong with this. First and foremost, these benefits are contractually mandated. Some school districts — Bethlehem being one — have been successful in renegotiating teacher and administrator contracts, but you can only go to that well so often before you devalue the people responsible for providing a safe educational environment for your children.

Media outlets like to sensationalize the exorbitant salaries superintendents, principals and even some teachers earn. But think of it this way: The superintendents in our coverage areas are CEOs of companies that command budgets of up to $100 million, employ up to 1,000 people in some cases, and are responsible for the well being of tens of thousands of children. Are those the people you want to start handing pay cuts out to?

Do we at The Spotlight feel school districts could do more with less? Of course we do, the same way we feel local governments should and our state government must.

But we can't fool ourselves into thinking that a district's financial woes magically go away by eliminating waste and oversight, or saying that district employees are overpaid. That's no more a panacea than raising school taxes to the uncomfortable levels needed to maintain the status quo.

Gardening a leap of faith

By DENISE HACKERT-STONER

The writer is a recent retiree, a resident of North Colonie and a self-described nature enthusiast.

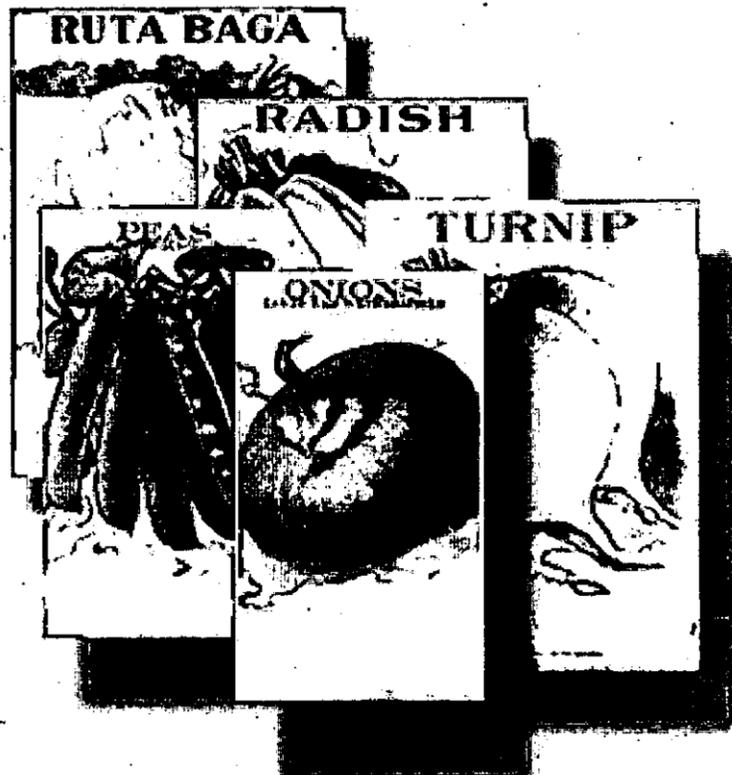

Our seeds came today!

On a windy, snowy day in late February, in a small, brown, inconspicuous box, summer arrived on our doorstep along with the rest of the day's mail.

Snow brushed off, the box carefully slit open, the packets fairly sprung out onto the table. Labeled with names like "Tropicana," "Bright Lights," "Sugar Sprint" and "Sugarsnax," the packets and their contents were like banners promising the fun and excitement of a summer festival on this cold day.

But along with these bright expectations, the seed packets, now arranged in a pretty basket atop our dining room table, also cause us some anxiety. My husband and I are fairly new to gardening. Last year's garden was our first. It was a tiny garden, but we made the most of the small space and managed a fine crop of beans, way too much lettuce for two people ever to eat, some peas, carrots, and a few rather sad radishes.

At the end of that first season my husband spent many hours of back-wrenching work expanding the garden. His work tripled its size. So when the seed catalogue came a few weeks ago we fell under the spell of the full-color pictures of perfect vegetables, threw caution to the wind, and ordered all of our successful varieties from last year along with many new additions for our expanded garden space. But will we be able to make it all fit? How much space will the cantaloupe really take? How exactly do we know when "the soil can be worked"? How do we know that it won't freeze up again? Is our soil sweet enough for the melons? Will the new radish seeds work better in our garden than the depressingly puny ones we had last year?

It's only February, and we have many great resources available to us between now and whenever "the soil can be worked." But really, as I look at the pretty basket of promises on my table I realize that gardening is above everything a great big leap of faith.

We learn what we can, try to choose the right seeds for our area, work hard to provide the best soil conditions, provide lots of compost, carefully follow the instructions for planting, nurture the young plants, weed and harvest at the proper times.

But there is so much beyond our control! What about diseases? Parasites? Pests? What important information might we be missing?

But despite our anxiety we believe that even though we may not be sure of all the right things to do, these seeds of ours do know. There is an age-old knowledge, and we have faith in that knowledge. And we have faith in the knowledge held by soil, rain and water, and we want to learn from them.

We want to become part of this mystery of growing food. So we will take this leap of faith and plant our garden.

We'll do this as soon as "the soil can be worked."

Your Opinion in The Spotlight

Kudos to Breslin for veto

Editor, The Spotlight:

Kudos to County Executive Mike Breslin for vetoing a budget increase to the Albany County Coroner's budget that was passed by the Albany County Legislature by a vote of 28-9.

During the 2010 budget review, the coroner requested $330,000 for lab fees and autopsies, but that total was cut by $30,000. One month into fiscal year 2010, the coroner came before the Legislature to ask for that $30,000 to be reinstated. The Coroner's justification for the increase was an autopsy fee hike of about 7 percent.

I voted against the increase in the Audit and Finance Committee because I felt it was just too early in the year to start increasing departmental budgets. I then compared the budgeted amount to last year and found that the coroner had only spent $260,000 for these expense and the 2010 budget amount already had a 15 percent increase built in. The extra $30,000 would have brought the year over year increase to 27 percent.

I led the fight on the Legislature floor against this increase. The Republican members voted solidly against the resolution as did several members of the majority, including my Bethlehem colleague, Charlie Dawson. However, the resolution was passed by the remaining members of the Democrat majority.

The Democrat's position was that if the coroner does not spend the additional monies, it would just go back to the General Fund at the end of the year. True enough. But I have two issues with that concept. First, where is the motivation to save if you have already been given permission to spend? Second, if those funds are tied up in the coroner's budget just in case they are needed, those funds are not available for other, more deserving and essential projects.

The County's 2010 Budget required dipping into reserves to balance the $10 million deficit in the budget. The County Executive has predicted, without a significant improvement in the Economy, that deficit may balloon to $30 to 40 million for 2011. We must take action now to cut costs so we can be prepared to meet next year's fiscal challenge.

It is a challenge we must all participate in — legislators, department heads and the taxpayers of the Albany County. The county must only spend when necessary and insure that we are getting the best value for expenditures. Department heads must redouble their efforts to stay within established budgets and make cuts where possible, and practical.

Mr. Breslin has taken a bold step to hold the line and I applaud him for his action.

Community gives feedback at RCS budget forum

More than 100 community members attended Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Central School District's "Budget Night" meeting on Monday, March 1, to learn about the district's fiscal situation and provide input on key budget considerations that will inform the development of the district's 2010-11 budget proposal.

Superintendent Daniel A. Teplesky and Business Administrator Lyn Derway presented an overview of the budget planning process and outlined RCS' financial standing and ongoing cost-savings efforts, in light of the $1.1 million cut in operating proposed by Governor Paterson in his state budget proposal. Attendees then split into 10 groups to discuss issues including funding for athletics and extracurricular activities, community use of facilities, transportation, instructional programs and technology, and the driving question of the evening—"What do you value in the educational setting at RCS?"

RCS is starting its budget planning with a 2010-11 budget of $44,017,588, which is the amount needed to carry all current programs and staffing forward one year. This amount is 3.66 percent higher than the current budget of $42,464,808 and would require a tax levy increase of about 12.5 percent, should the State Legislature approve the governor's $1.1 million proposal to cut RCS's state aid.

After sharing this information with those in attendance, Derway offered some other budget scenarios—and the program cuts required to

Board members should follow the wishes of their neighbors

Editor, The Spotlight:

I received an email from the NS4SED committee a few days ago.

I was under the impression that with the election on November 4 the issue of our town's zoning restrictions had been settled. The voters had spoken!

According to the numbers I saw in The Spotlight the Town Board candidates supporting the non big box zoning had beat the big boxers by a large margin of 68 percent to 32 percent.

Like most people I though majority rules.

But now I find out if the property owners file a protest (which they obviously have a right to do) it will take a so called super majority of the board to win. Mr. Dolan

Mr. LaGrange and Mr. Mackay all ran against the Big Box zoning. Historically Mr. Reilly has been for the big box. This leaves the fifth member of the board Debbie Baron to decide if she will follow the wishes of her neighbors and the majority of the town's voters.

Proposed Five Rivers work would endanger CCC buildings

Local groups protesting expansion on historic grounds

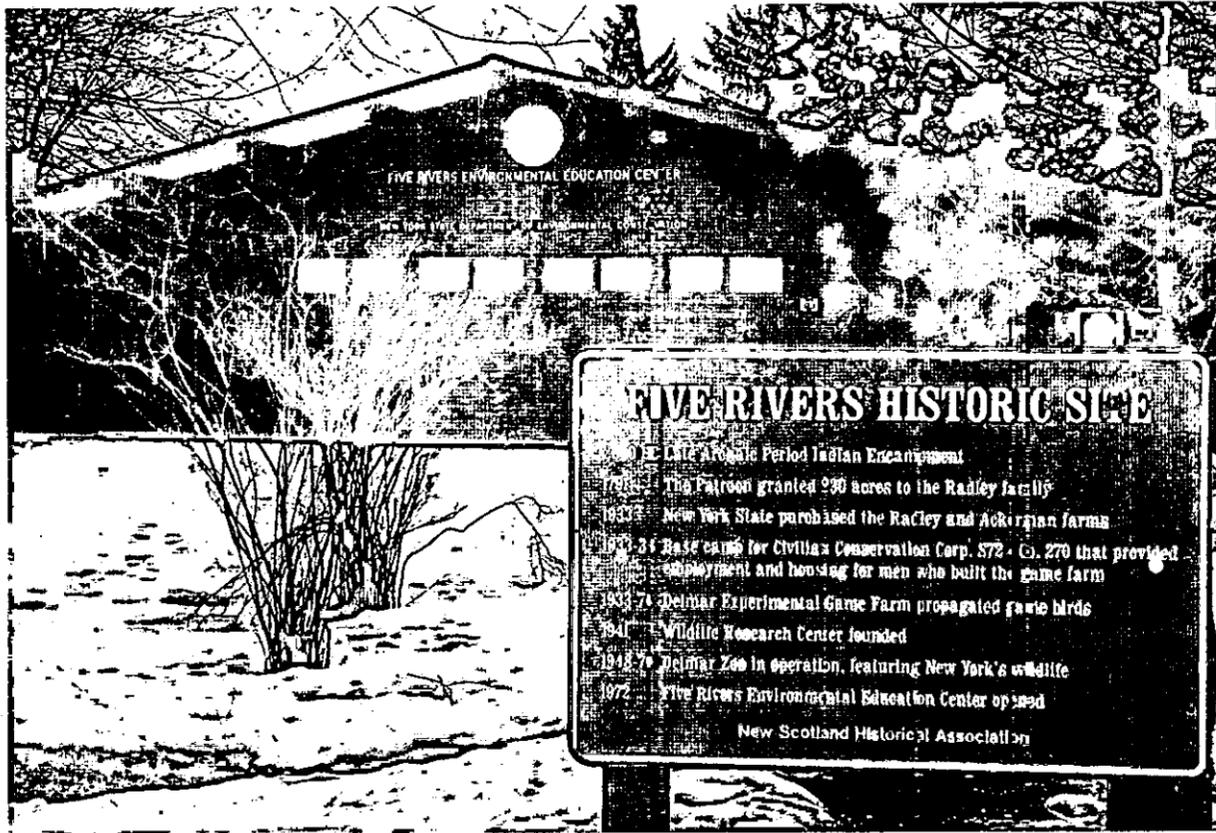

By CHARLES WIFF
wiff@spotlightnews.com

The Five Rivers Environmental Education Center in the Town of New Scotland was founded on the work of the Civilian Conservation Corps, but a proposal to better the facilities there would also erase the remaining physical traces of the Corps Camp.

The Town Boards of New Scotland and Bethlehem, along with the New Scotland Historical Association, are formally calling for other plans that would not impact the two remaining structures of CCC Camp S-72.

"There used to be a whole complex of buildings over there ... but most of them have now been removed," said New Scotland Town Historian Bob Parmenter, a member of the New Scotland Historical Association. "There is quite a bit of local history involved with that."

Using a private grant, the Department of Environmental Conservation is aiming to replace the building used

The visitor's center at Five Rivers Environmental Education Center. A proposal to build a new modernized building to house the Guided School Program and lay the foundation for a new visitor's center there would involve the demolition of two Civilian Conservation Corps structures, and historical preservation groups are protesting the plan.

Charles Wiff/Spotlight

for the Guided School Program with a new, modern structure.

"We anticipate construction will start this spring on the Five Rivers project, and that construction would end this fall," said

Maureen Wren, a DEC spokeswoman.

She added the historical significance of the CCC buildings in being taken into consideration, and a final decision has not yet been reached on how those buildings will play into the final design.

The state Conservation Department (the precursor to the DEC) purchased the roughly 400-acre preserve from struggling farmers in 1933, and for three years CCC workers lived and worked there to prepare the area for game farming. The remaining buildings were once used as a maintenance shop and barracks.

In addition to local governments and groups, Rep. Paul Tanko, D-Amsterdam, and Assemblyman John McEneny, D-Albany, are in favor of preserving the buildings, said Pam Dorgan, president of the NSHA, who made it clear her organization is not against the expansion.

"We're very much in favor of a new education center," she said. "With a slight movement, I don't see why we can't have both."

Bethlehem Supervisor Sam Messina said a copy of the Town Board's resolution has been forwarded to DEC Commissioner Pete Grannis, and he similarly expressed his hope a win-win situation can be achieved at Five Rivers.

"They were CCC buildings, and they're important to members of this community," he said. "[The expansion] can go forward and not be impacted on history or the presence of these buildings."

The Guided School Program is run by a volunteer staff of teachers, who provide lessons to about 5,000 kids per year, said Friends of Five Rivers President Richard Bader.

"In the past 20 years, we've probably had contact with 200,000 students," he said.

The program is run by FFR, an independent citizen organization, out of the Goose Lodge, and the program has long since outgrown those facilities, said Bader.

"We think the partnership that we're working on with DEC to provide a 21st century building for providing lessons to children is an important thing," he said.

The upgrade would be covered by a $500,000 donation from the Repass family of Massachusetts, directed through FFR. Wendy Repass Suozzo was a longtime educator at Five Rivers.

The need to replace the visitor's center and school program building was broached in a 2007 Office of General Services study that found the Goose Lodge and visitor's center should be replaced with LEED-certified structures, said Craig Thompson, director of Five Rivers.

"They were not intended for the uses to which we're putting them right now," he said. "Basically, they're just plain old, and energy inefficient, as well."

He added officials from the DEC and state parks department are studying the CCC structures and will be making a judgment on their historical significance.

The new Guided School building would include many "green" features, including solar panels and a green roof. Recycled materials would be used to the greatest extent possible, and visiting classes could learn about these building techniques through interpretive signage, according to the DEC.

From sludge to soil

Town explores a new way to deal with water waste

By RYAN MUNKS
munksr@spotlightnews.com

At its Tuesday, March 2, meeting, the Guilderland Town Board authorized a $7,900 payment to the engineering firm Barton & Loguidice, P.C. to prepare an application to the Department of Environmental Conservation to allow the town to remove sludge from the town's water supply and reuse it as soil in construction projects.

If approved by the DEC, the engineering firm would be authorized to remove 100 tons of alum sludge from the town's water treatment plant at a cheaper price, and in a more environmentally friendly method than the town currently employs.

Alum sludge is formed when the town's Department of Water and Wastewater Management adds a chemical called alum to the town's water supply to filter dirt out of the water. The alum acts as a coagulant that binds with the dirt and causes it to sink to the bottom, forming the sludge.

Currently, the town intends to dispose of the sludge by collecting it and transporting it to the landfill in Colonie at a cost of $41.50 per ton.

Richard Straut, of Barton & Loguidice, said his firm would like to remove the sludge, combine it with other soil, and make an application to the state Department of Environmental Conservation to reuse it as a "beneficial reuse."

"It will probably be used as part of a Department of Transportation project, or other highway project," said Straut. "There will still be a cost to the town, but it will be significantly less. We expect this will be will $10 a ton or less."

According to a memo written by William West, superintendent of the town's Department of Water & Wastewater Management, "This cost can probably be reduced by as much as $31.50 per ton, or an overall 70 percent savings per ton."

Supervisor Ken Runion said the town used to pay $62 per ton before the town switched from using the Rapp Road Landfill in Albany to the Colonie landfill. Although the town saved $20.50 from switching landfills, he said savings were not the primary reason for the move.

G'land library gets much-needed boost

Grant will help fund adult literacy programs

By RYAN MUNKS
munksr@spotlightnews.com

This week, the Guilderland Public Library received word that it will receive $27,889 from the state to support adult literacy, and that it will be the beneficiary of fundraising efforts by the Guilderland Chamber of Commerce Woman's Business Council.

The timing for the funding couldn't have been better for the library and Board of Trustees, which will hold a budget vote Thursday, March 11.

On Monday, March 1, the Chamber's Women's Business Council announced that the library will be the beneficiary of its 2010 silent auction, to take place on Wednesday, May 5.

"This year it was a tough decision. We usually have a couple of groups apply to be beneficiaries," said Joanne Hook, chairwoman of the Women's Business Council.

She said this year four groups applied, as opposed to the usual average of two groups, making the decision tougher.

Ultimately the council chose the library as the beneficiary.

"The library really fits into what we are looking to do in the community," said Hook. She specifically cited the work the library does with women and children in the community, and the fact that the library services a total of 29,786 members of the community.

This year will be the fourth annual silent auction held by the council, and will take place at the Colonie Golf and Country Club. According to information from the council, some of the items auctioned off will be restaurant gift certificates, jewelry, art, themed baskets and a Cape Cod vacation.

On Tuesday, March 2, the library announced that it will be one of 11 libraries statewide to receive a grant from the New York State Library to support adult literacy. According to information from the library, the $27,889 grant will be distributed over the course of two years, and is one of the largest grants ever received by the library.

"The Guilderland Public Library and its project partner, Literacy New York Greater Capital Region, are thrilled with this grant," said Maria Buhl, Adult Services Librarian at the Library, in a release. "Given the financial constraints we're all working under, this funding couldn't come at a better time."

According to the library, the funding received from the state will go directly to the libraries "Team Up for Literacy" campaign, a campaign "that will ultimately train volunteers to teach language and life skills to adult learners."

"We're very happy we were chosen in both instances," said Barbara Nichols Randall, director of the Guilderland Public Library. "It allows us to offer programs that we would be unable to offer with our budget this year."

She said the money raised from the Woman's Business Council will go to programs that "focus on women and families."

She specifically mentioned mammograms, and career enhancement workshops.

The money from the state will help the library meet the needs of people, both within the community and the University at Albany, for whom English is a second language.

"We see an increasing Asian population, both immigrant and students, that need these services," she said.

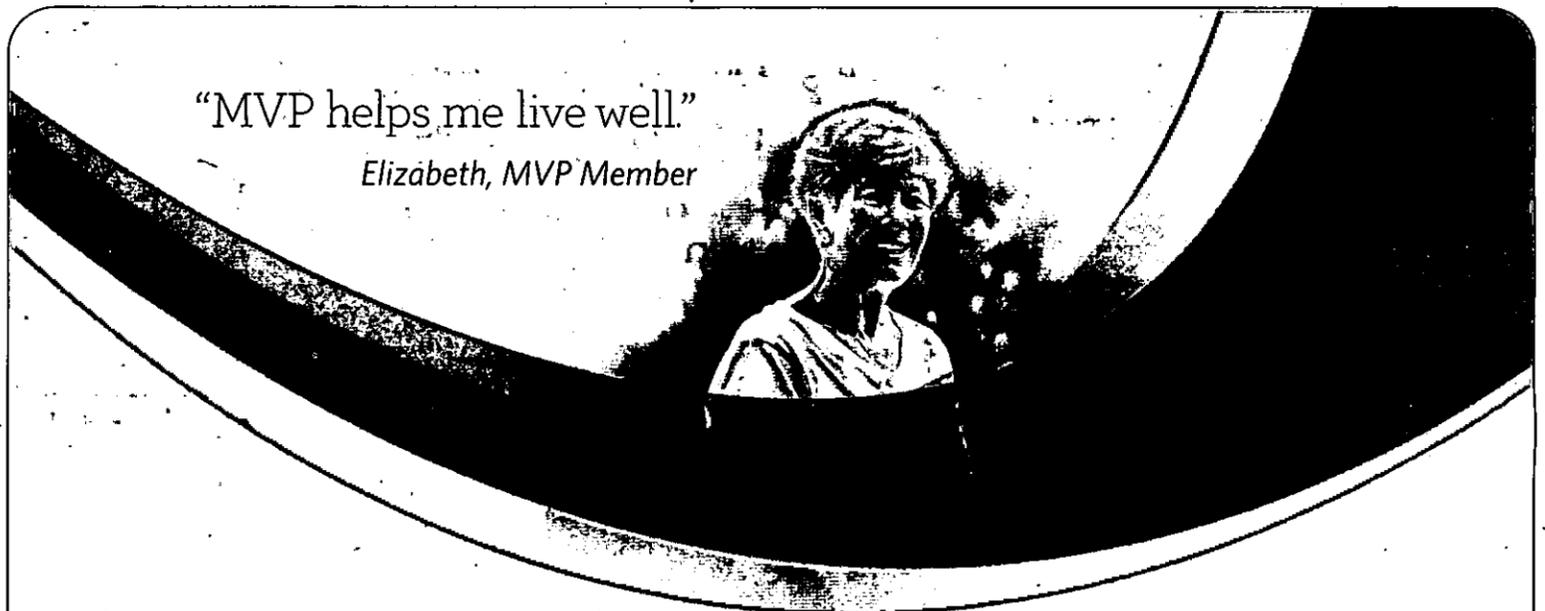

She encouraged anyone who is interested in becoming a tutor to contact Literacy New York of the Great Capital Region at 452-3382.

"It's a very nice way of giving back to the community, and also to learn about a new culture," she said.

She also encouraged people to attend the silent auction in May as well.

"We encourage everyone to come, it will also be a Cinco de Mayo celebration," she said.

Randall, who also lobbied the state legislature on behalf of the library, said that the funding was a ray of sunshine on an otherwise grim advocacy day.

Planning Board OKs Phillipin Kill rezone

Several other projects updated at recent meeting

By CHARLES WIFF
wiffc@spotlightnews.com

After about seven years of planning, a proposal to rezone an area off of Fischer Boulevard in Slingerlands into a planned development has been forwarded to the Bethlehem Town Board with the Planning Board's blessing.

If rezoning were approved, the 83-building residential development, Phillipin Kill Manor, would reappear before the Planning Board for a more detailed site plan review.

The Planning Board forwarded along a positive recommendation to rezone with a 5-to-1 vote. Board member Nicholas Behuniak dissented.

"I'm not necessarily opposed to rezoning this to a Planned Development District, but I'm not really comfortable with the number of townhouses that are proposed here,"

An artist's rendering from the corner of Krumkill and Russell roads in North Bethlehem, should a proposed condominium development be built. The Blessings Corner project dropped a Stewart's store from its proposal in favor of these two one-story buildings following public objection.

he said. "I think there's a sufficient mix of diversity in very close proximity here."

He also cited concerns about the impact on the area's character and traffic patterns.

The proposal calls for 30 twin homes or townhouses, 47 single-family homes and six larger "estate" style lots.

Richard Tice of Brewer Engineering Associates said the developer had been directed by the town's Development Planning Committee early in the design process to include a mix of housing types to more closely conform to the town's Comprehensive Plan.

The developer is also proposing the donation of 35 acres of land along the Phillipin Kill to the Five Rivers Environmental Education Center, accessible via an easement of land running from Fischer Boulevard. The land is undevelopable due to the presence of federal wetlands.

The Planning Board addressed several other projects at its Tuesday, March 2, meeting.

Blessings Corner

A developer seeking to build a condominium development in North Bethlehem came to the Planning Board with a new proposal that drops a Stewart's gas station from the project in favor of additional condo units.

Project engineer Daniel Hershberg of Hershberg & Hershberg said the plans for Blessings Corner were redrawn after several public forums and a public hearing before the Planning Board saw a turnout of nearby residents who were against the project.

"We heard primarily comments that were geared towards Stewarts," Hershberg said. "We think this is a positive change."

The rest of the proposal remains as originally presented. Forty-four condo units would be located in a development of six buildings on Russell Road. Two more buildings with four units each would be built at the corner of Krumkill and Russell roads, the site of the formerly proposed store. The two areas would be separated by federal wetlands.

The condos would be targeted at working professionals and run around $300,000 per unit, depending on size and other factors.

Not having to relocate fill to the Stewart's location to raise the height of the land means the developer would be able to build berms between the condos and homes on Beverly Drive higher, Hershberg said.

He went on to say traffic impacts would be much less under the new proposal. Peak morning and afternoon trips for the project with the Stewart's were projected at 86 and 107 per hour, respectively, and without at 30 and 34 trips.

Hershberg said the Town of Bethlehem stands to realize $35,000 in tax revenue from the condominiums as configured.

Without a commercial aspect to the project, Hershberg said the developer wouldn't pursue plans to install a sidewalk down Krumkill Road to grant pedestrian access to the area.

The Planning Board was scheduled to issue a recommendation to the Town Board — which makes decisions on Planned Development Districts like Blessings Corner — by March 7, but the board granted the developer an extension in light of the revisions to the proposal.

Van Dyke Spinney

A developer seeking to build senior housing on Van Dyke Road in Delmar hopes to bring in the near future the first of six phases of development to the Planning Board for approval.

The Van Dyke Spinney project, which has been in planning stages for 10 years, would consist of 218 units of housing over 40 acres, housing occupants aged 55 and older. Project Manager Alex Ruthiman told the Planning Board in a project update there has been considerable interest in the project.

"There is a demographic shift, with people living longer, healthier lives and needing a housing option that is not yet available," he said.

Since the development last came before the Planning Board, the stormwater management plan has been tweaked, buildings fronting Van Dyke Road have been moved back and development has been moved from an area of archeological significance.

The Town Board approved rezoning the area to a Planned Development District in May of 2008. The developer is now proposing breaking site plan approval into six phases running from north to south to make the process more manageable.

The town code allows for construction on one phase to be underway while others are still under review.

Project engineer Mark Dempf said the developer is willing to design a realignment of the intersection of Van Dyke Road with Meads Lane so the two roads meet at a right angle and visibility is increased. Doing the work would be up to the town, and Dempf estimated the cost could be anywhere from $200,000 to $400,000.

Econolodge The Planning

Board unanimously approved amendments to an expansion of the Econolodge on Frontage Road in Glenmont. The expansion had been approved in 2007 but the difficultly encountered obtaining financing for the work and several variances expired.

The three-story expansion would add 23 rooms and a swimming pool to the hotel, bringing the total-room count to 48.

achieve them—that would require tax levy increases of zero percent, 2 percent, 4 percent and 5.4 percent (contingency budget).

If the district were forced to adopt a contingency budget, next year's budget would have to be the same $42,464,808 budget as the current year. Under a contingency budget, more than $1.5 million in cuts would be necessary and the tax levy increase would be an estimated 5.4 percent.

Derway also addressed the issue of fund balances, or lack of in RCS's case.

Currently, the district has an unreserved fund balance of $194,000.

The district is currently compiling the feedback from Monday's forum and online survey and will post information on the Web site soon.

DON'T BE FOOLED BY THE ACT. KEEP SUNY PUBLIC!

The so-called "Public Higher Education Empowerment and Innovation Act" is not good for SUNY and students. Don't let the name deceive you.

Here are the facts:

FACT:

The Act would not produce additional revenue for SUNY. The state would pay less; students and parents would pay a lot more.

FACT:

The legislation would eliminate state appropriations for tuition and other revenues, so there is no guarantee that student tuition and fees would be used to benefit students or the academic mission of the campus. Quality would suffer.

FACT:

SUNY could place a surcharge on tuition (differential tuition) that would vary by campus and program without limitation. Student access would be denied.

FACT:

There is no evidence that public/private partnerships—especially those created without government oversight—raise revenue. In fact, SUNY's previous joint ventures have cost taxpayers millions.

"If this Act is passed, my son and other students couldn't afford SUNY. Don't deny their opportunity."

parent Dwight Cheu said the Dolphins club, which has more than 100 swimmers, often has to travel to Albany Academies for practice, where fees are $50 per hour, more than what BC charges.

Superintendent Michael Tebbano said administrators could investigate the idea of raising fees and come back with information at next week's budget workshop.

"We also have to be considerate of the groups that cannot pay that," he said.

One of the biggest community users of the pool is the town's Parks and Recreation Department. Director Nan Lanahan volunteered to be involved in the discussions and said she would ideally like to see the pool kept open. The closing of the pool would not just impact community use: Every middle school student completes a swimming class, and the pool is used by the modified swim team, which would have to move practices and meets to the high school, further limiting the community time at that facility.

Modified Swimming Coach and PE teacher Sandi Banas said swimming plays a significant part in the middle school physical education curriculum as one of six "stations" for PE classes.

"Where would I put those 200 students if that pool wasn't there?" she said.

The Board of Education tabled a tentative vote on the pool until further information is available, but members voted unanimously in favor of tentatively approving the rest of the cuts to the O&M budget. The votes are nonbinding.

Those cuts include the elimination of two custodial positions, which officials hope can be made through attrition.

The Board of Education will review the decisions before adopting a final budget, which is tentatively scheduled for March 24. The budget is expected to include significant cuts across all parts of the program.

District CFO Judith Kehoe said to continue the same program as offered this year, a 7 percent tax levy increase would be necessary to make up the gap created by rising costs and a likely $2.5 million shortfall in state aid.

"We don't like [cuts], and we know the community doesn't like them, but we've got to make them to get our expenses and revenues to match," she said. Tebbano did not mince words in advising the board to adopt a long-term outlook.

"We have a major crisis on our hands," he said. "We're in this for the next five years, whether you believe it or not... If we're looking for ways to trim things back, we can't nickel and dime every issue."

Lunch

The Board of Education will be examining the price of school lunches as part of the 2010-11 budget process.

Although the district is not required to set prices until July 1, the price of lunch and breakfast will have an impact on the general budget, as the food service program rarely operates in the black. This year, for example, it's estimated it will have to be balanced by a $156,000 subsidy from the general fund.

Though a lunch program is ideally self-sustaining, increasing the quality — and thus the cost — of lunches has made it even more difficult to reach a break-even point, explained Kehoe. In addition, the district only receives a 36-cent subsidy per meal for the mandated-free lunch program for students with a qualified need.

The district raised the price of lunch this year to $2.00 at the elementary schools and $2.25 at the middle and high schools. Breakfast is $1.00 across the board.

Leaving prices there would likely see the $1.3 million program falling $250,000 short of breaking even next year, according to administrators. They proposed raising the price of lunch by 25 or 50 cents for the coming year, which would still leave a gap.

Board of Education President Jim Dering said the district should consider raising the price to a break-even level.

"I don't know where you could go to get lunch for $2.75," he said. "My solution wouldn't be to cut the quality, but keep the quality and charge people for what they're getting."

The board will revisit lunch prices in a future meeting.

Transportation

A tentative vote Wednesday has BC removing the remainder of its district funding for field trips in the 2010-11 budget.

The $60,000 reduction is part of $178,000 in cuts to the transportation department that also includes the elimination of the Monday late bus for the middle and high schools and the elimination of the Friday late bus at the high school (the middle school does not run a Friday late bus).

Shedding the Friday late bus was brought up last year, but a group of students petitioned the district to keep the program, said Tebbano, but usage is still low.

"High School students haven't taken advantage of the Friday late bus, so it's wasted money," he said.

With the removal of the remainder of field trip funding, it will be up to parents or parent-teacher organizations to fund all field trips.

Fringe benefits

Despite administrators proposing cuts to nearly every facet of the budget, the one area that will expand is fringe benefits.

A sizable chunk of the budget, officials predict spending on employee insurance and retirement benefit spending will balloon from $17.3 million this year to nearly $20 million next year.

A poor year for the stock market means the district will have to chip in more money to make up the gap in retirement funds, a mandated expense.

"This is an 'incredible impact to the budget,'" Kehoe said. "Most of these are mandated or contractually obligated costs... It's just part of the environment we're in."

The next budget workshop is scheduled for Wednesday, March 10, when the board will discuss and make tentative votes on the budgets for special education, technology, facilities usage and BOGES.

Budget

with a continued commitment to our excellent programs, so that we can look one another in the eye when all is said and done and say we can still be proud and confident in the Guilderland educational system."

McGuire said that if the school district were to simply roll over the previous year's budget into this year, it would come at a cost of $93.4 million, which would bring a 16.8 percent increase in the school tax — something the district knew was unacceptable.

"No one, for a moment, thought we would consider passing on that kind of tax levy to the taxpayers," said McGuire. "Our local taxpayers cannot shoulder the tax burden New York state has chosen not to shoulder."

Instead, the district plans to make cuts to all levels of education in the district.

"We did not look to wipe out any particular program," said McGuire. "Our commitment was to try to make up for unprecedented reductions in a way that doesn't balance the budget on any one group of students, and in a way that we emerge with quality programs."

In total, the budget calls for the elimination of 22.35 teaching positions, including 10.7 elementary, 4.65 middle school, and 7 high school teaching positions. It also budgeted for three unassigned teaching positions that will be used in the case of expanded enrollment.

It also eliminates 5.1 administrator positions and 38 stipends for teacher leaders and adds an elementary administrator to help bridge the gap caused by the loss of those positions.

The budget eliminates 55.1 support positions, 36.3 of which are special education teaching assistants.

Some programs that have been removed from this year's budget are block scheduling for the high school, expansion of the co-teaching model, adaptive classes and the summer school program at the middle school, and the foreign language early start program (FLES).

Board Member Barbara Fraterrigo would later point out that although McGuire said that he did not wipe out any particular program, the FLES program for elementary schools was eliminated. She also said that the district retained a number of administrator positions that it was able to function without in the past, and she asked whether the district has spoke with teachers about renegotiating their benefits.

"[The district] has spoken to every bargaining unit in the district to begin discussions on whether or not staff, once they saw what was going on, could come back with proposals that would in some way impact the job loss," said Board President Richard Weisz. "I think that dialogue is just beginning because the information is out."

He said regardless of where the district saves money, the maximum tax impact the community would be willing to tolerate is 4 percent.

"A 4 percent increase is a third rail in Guilderland, the budget will not go above 4 percent," he said. "The goal for this budget is to make everyone equally unhappy because I don't think we are going to make anyone happy."

While the numbers in the school budget reflect funding received from the governor's proposed budget, ultimately the amount of funding the district receives is contingent on the enacted version of the budget, slated to be passed by the legislature on Wednesday, March 31.

GHS doesn't dodge responsibility

School holds dodgeball tournament to benefit food pantry

By RYAN MUNKS
munksr@spotlightnews.com

It's all high school students' dream: to get back at their teachers for all the homework, tests, and lectures endured throughout the years, and to do it at their own game - dodgeball.

On Friday, March 5, Guilderland High School hosted the school's second dodgeball tournament, with proceeds going to the Altamont Food Pantry.

The event was started last year by the district's physical education teachers as a way to have the students participate in an event that benefits the community.

"Last year, we gave the donation to the Altamont and Guilderland food pantries. ... This year it will just be going to Altamont," said Allison Relyea, a physical education teacher who helped organize the event.

She said representatives of the Guilderland Food Pantry encouraged organizers to give all of the proceeds this year to the Altamont Food Pantry because there was such a great need.

The double elimination dodgeball tournament featured 32 teams, each with five male students and five female students, as well as two faculty members. Relyea said that the students' response to the event was overwhelming.

"We started signing teams up in January, and we filled up in less than a month," she said. "It's just a positive, positive event."

Sarah Hubbard, a business teacher at Guilderland High School, was a member of "The Fiends" team. She said a group of students from her accounting class approached her about being one of the two teachers on the team.

"There was so much energy in the school today. It's exciting to have this much energy for a good cause," she said.

Cody Futia, a senior at the high school, said his team, "The 12-Man Wolfpack," whose name was inspired by the movie "The Hangover," was playing for redemption. Last year, the players made it to the semi-finals before being eliminated. This year, he said, the team was revamped and was hoping to go all the way.

"We have a lot of good team chemistry," he said.

Achieving redemption will take at least one more year for the 12-Man Wolfpack, as the SWAT Team was crowned champions at this year's event.

The night wasn't a complete loss for Futia and his teammates. At the very least, the 12-Man Wolfpack team help raise money for a good cause.

"We are happy everyone came out, because it all goes to benefit the Altamont Food Pantry," said Futia.

The 500-plus ticket sales yielded $3,500 for the pantry, $300 more than was raised at last year's event.

While the food pantry received the proceeds from ticket sales, parents from the Lacrosse Booster Club manned the concession stand to raise money for the school's lacrosse team.

Brian Summers, president of the booster club for the section two champions, said raising money at the event helps cover the travel costs for the team.

"It gives us a chance to play top quality teams," he said.

Summers said he hopes money raised at the event will help the team to be able to travel to Seattle, Wash., for a tournament next year.

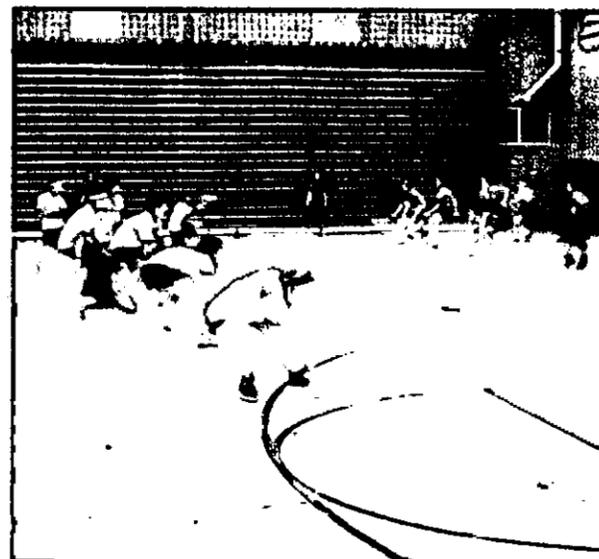

"We are here to support the kids, and give them a better opportunity to succeed," said Summers.

Relyea said the idea to raise money by hosting a dodgeball tournament has spread to other school districts as well.

The Voorheesville School District will be hosting an upcoming tournament, and, Relyea said, the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Central School District has contacted her about forming a dodgeball tournament as well.

"Word gets out there, and people are looking to do something positive for the community," said Relyea.

Teams take part in the Guilderland High School dodgeball tournament on Friday, March 5. Organizer Allison Relyea said the tournament quickly filled up.

Afghan woman aims to help others in her native country

By ALYSSA JUNG
jung@spotlightnews.com

Fahima Vorgetts grew up in Afghanistan and was educated in Kabul before fleeing to the U.S. during the Soviet invasion in 1979. She married an American and raised a family in Maryland but maintained close ties to her native land by making it her life's work to bring change to the country. She travels back several times a year with a team of volunteers and is raising money to dig a well for clean drinking water and irrigation.

devastation and misery that the war has brought to this country."

On International Women's Day Monday, March 8, the local organization, Women Against War, which is working with Vorgetts, gathered a group to stand on the bridge on Henry Johnson Boulevard in Albany to demonstrate for peace, an action that women all over the world took part in.

Vorgetts said since many Afghan women haven't had the opportunity to be educated or learn skills, they turn to other options to put food on the table, from selling all their belongings and the clothes off their backs, to hard physical labor and prostitution.

Traveling to Afghanistan several times a year, Vorgetts has opened hundreds of literacy classes for women to learn to read and write. She has also opened vocational training facilities to teach career skills like sewing, embroidery, carpet weaving, jewelry and candle making, silk weaving, raising silk worms, and she has formed women co-ops where they can sell their products in a market. She builds health clinics and provides medical supplies, constructs school buildings, donates pounds of school supplies, finds people to sponsor orphans and most recently is raising money to dig wells for clean water. She has established family guidance centers, women's shelters for the abused or endangered and developed a legal system to help women who are abused or in jail.

"I want to help women be self-sufficient and empowered. I want to help young girls be educated. Many aren't allowed to go to school if there's no building because of the threat of abduction or rape. I have girls writing to me and begging me to help them," said Vorgetts.

Despite the United States' attempt to bring democracy to Afghanistan, Vorgetts said the American presence has done more harm than good, and women are worse off than they were before 9/11. That's why she believes strongly in bringing about change without military or violence.

"The whole world was talking about Afghanistan and saying, 'We're going to liberate it and help the people and they'll have democracy and freedom and a better place to live and we'll get rid of the Taliban and those hijacking Islam,' but democracy was not brought there. Instead, the same people who committed crimes against humanity — thieves and thugs — those corrupt people are back in power," said Vorgetts. "You can't bring peace with weapons. If we're in the hearts and minds of the people over there and start respecting humanity, that will bring us together."

Vorgetts managed to receive an education in Kabul before fleeing to the United States, where she married an American and raised a family in Maryland. She has spoken before the United Nations, written two books and won numerous humanitarian awards for her work.

She said she hopes a change will come in her lifetime, and she'll keep fighting for the people of Afghanistan until it does.

"As long as there is devastation and poverty and pain and ache there, I will be doing this work for the rest of my life. But I hope I won't have to," said Vorgetts.

Vorgetts said she is urging people to listen to what she has to say and write letters to Congress to ask for help. She is trying to raise $10,000 for her well project and welcomes any donations, which are tax deductible.

Ceremony remembers loved ones lost to suicide

Organizers say event is 'therapeutic'

By DAN SABBATINO
sabbatinod@spotlightnews.com

For Nathalie Evans, the healing began when she heard someone tell her it wasn't her fault.

Evans lost a daughter and sister-in-law to suicide five years ago and now is helping organize a Remembrance Ceremony run through the Samaritans, an organization dedicated to suicide prevention and coping.

"It is to honor people who have lost their lives to suicide," Evan said. "To bring together people who lost a loved one."

She said people avoid talking about suicide because of the stigma, and many times people are reluctant to admit lost loved ones took their own lives.

Evans daughter, Wendy Ann, completed suicide, as Evans said she does not like to use the term "committed," in 2005 after a tumultuous battle with a heroin addiction and a past marred with sexual abuse. She said her daughter overdosed on medication to get up the courage to go through with the act. Evans lost her sister-in-law, Linda Lee Carkner, that same year.

The day after her daughter died, Evans said she heard a radio advertisement for the Samaritans ceremony. By participating, she said she was able to work on "healing and comfort." She so enjoyed the experience that she was asked to be on the next year's planning committee.

"It is so inspirational," Evans said.

One of the hardest parts about surviving a loved one's suicide is the blame. But, she said, after hearing others' stories, especially after hearing one speaker who attempted suicide and said there was simply nothing anyone could have done to stop her, things changed for Evans.

"Everybody is given a chance to speak. You don't have to, but they can say something in memory of their loved one. You always feel compassion and understanding," she said.

Evans said the woman who attempted suicide did so many times, and said that even those closest to her could not have changed her mind.

"Then I knew it wasn't my fault anymore," she said. "Whenever I start to feel guilty for not noticing the signs, her words come back to me."

Evans said the Remembrance Ceremony has many benefits, including pictures of the suicide victims while they were alive and well.

A slideshow with pictures along with a program that has their pictures and some remarks is given to each family in the ceremony. Martha McCormick, of Delmar, puts the slideshow together.

"There's just no way to describe how wonderful it feels to see your dearly departed's smiling face exhibited in this curative manner," she said.

The Samaritans are trying to encourage people to register early so they can have a picture included in the slideshow and in the program.

"The most important thing is to try to get people to come," Evans said.

Jill Wolski-Ordenez, director of the United Way 211 and CONTACT lifeline, said the ceremony is "beautifully orchestrated" to give everyone an opportunity to be heard for as much or as little time as needed.

She said everyone has different comfort levels when it comes to dealing with suicide, but the goal of the ceremony is to help alleviate the stigma and discomfort and allow people to start healing.

"We try very hard to make it meaningful," she said. "It's always therapeutic to come together."

The ceremony will be held Sunday, May 16, at noon at St. Joseph's Provincial House, 385 Watervliet Shaker Road in Latham. Call 462-6531 if you wish to participate.

Evans also said the Samaritans are working with Verizon to obtain grant money and would welcome anyone willing to support their efforts.

An Enduring Love

NYSTI presents 'Romeo and Juliet' with a modern twist

By JACQUELINE M. DOMIN
dominj@spotlightnews.com

Brian Nemiroff was excited when he heard the New York State Theater Institute was to perform "Romeo and Juliet."

"What young boy doesn't want to take a crack at Romeo?" asked Nemiroff, whose resume includes numerous theater productions, as well as several appearances on ABC's "One Life to Live."

Nemiroff will get his chance to play perhaps Shakespeare's most famous leading man when "Romeo and Juliet" debuts at NYSTI on Saturday, March 13, at 8 p.m. But this version of the story has a distinctly modern flair; director Ron Holgate set it in present-day Iraq.

"It's just to kind of make it contemporary," Nemiroff said. "It is still very much Shakespeare's script. It really still centers on the story."

That story is a classic tale of forbidden love. Romeo Montague and Juliet Capulet fall in love despite being from feuding families. Juliet's parents, however, have promised her in marriage to someone else. She decides to stage her death so she can be with Romeo, but he does not know she is really still alive and winds up taking his own life. Distracted, Juliet then takes her life, too.

Nemiroff said Romeo's actions in the play are "very childish, almost." And while Nemiroff thinks he'd probably approach the situation differently himself, he strives to portray Romeo with the right blend of youth and immaturity.

"The emotional investment is the most challenging," Nemiroff said. "He's very sensitive, very emotional. A lot of actors can be uncomfortable being so vulnerable on stage. While it's challenging, it's rewarding."

Starring opposite Nemiroff as Juliet is Kate Hettesheimer. A former NYSTI intern from Albany High School, Hettesheimer studied Shakespeare in college while attending school in London, and like Nemiroff, she was thrilled for the chance to perform "Romeo and Juliet" with NYSTI.

"It's a dream role," she said. "It's a role all girls dream of, let alone actresses."

To land that role, Hettesheimer spent several months rehearsing, not only immersing herself in Juliet's emotions but in the lyrical way Shakespeare wrote. "I was learning the meter, the logistical side," she said.

Holgate's script preserves Shakespeare's language; other than editing and exchanging some "wouldsts" and "thous" for more modern words, he kept the words the same.

"It's definitely the same story at its heart," Hettesheimer said, calling the Iraq setting "really kind of a backdrop."

"I would say it makes it a little more accessible," she said.

That was welcome news for guest artist Anthony CeFala, who plays Julia's cousin Tybalt. CeFala admitted he was never a huge fan of Shakespeare's works.

"I don't think it's exciting enough," he said. "I think ours hopefully won't be lame like that."

In fact, CeFala was surprised at just how active his role was. Describing Tybalt as a "troublemaker," CeFala said he gets in three fights before dying at the end of the first act.

"It's really kind of physical," he said. "I'm glad, because I'm a dancer."

He'd put his dancing skills to use as a cast member with the national tour of "Mamma Mia" for the last eight years. CeFala decided to leave the show in February to return to his home in New York City.

"It was time to sleep in my own bed," he said.

But there's something funny about living in the city, he said. "It's great in theory," he said, but he found himself looking for a break from the hustle and bustle.

That break came from NYSTI, where CeFala, like Hettesheimer, served as an intern while attending Mohonasen High School.

"I owe it all to NYSTI," he said. "It's the reason where I am today."

He added that he hates to think of the theater losing its funding, as has been proposed in state budget negotiations. Hettesheimer echoed that sentiment.

"NYSTI gave me the means to explore all aspects of theater," she said. "They're a theater I love

Juliet's nurse (Arny DeGange) warns Juliet (Kate Hettesheimer) about the dangers of her love for Romeo in the New York State Theatre Institute's production of "Romeo and Juliet."

Tybalt (Anthony CeFala) offers Juliet Capulet (Kate Hettesheimer) a way to reunite with her forbidden love interest, Romeo Montague, in the New York State Theatre Institute's production of "Romeo and Juliet."

working for."

While Nemiroff doesn't have quite the history with NYSTI that Hettesheimer and CeFala do, he has high praise for the work being done on "Romeo and Juliet."

"I'd run this play for months on end," he said. "It's never enough for me."

Audiences, Nemiroff expects, will enjoy the show, too.

"This story is one of the greatest stories ever written," he said. "It's that simple. It's a sad story, but it's not like a terrible downer. It's vibrant. It's so passionate and energetic. Even if you've seen it before, you'll leave there feeling something."

"Romeo and Juliet" will be performed at the Schacht Fine Arts Center at Russell Sage College in Troy on the following dates:

Saturday, March 13, 8 p.m.

Here's How it Works:

Sudoku puzzles are formatted as a 9x9 grid, broken down into nine 3x3 boxes. To solve a sudoku, the numbers 1 through 9 must fill each row, column and box. Each number can appear only once in each row, column and box. You can figure out the order in which the numbers will appear by using the numeric clues already provided in the boxes. The more numbers you name, the easier it gets to solve the puzzle!

Coulon, Walmsley exchange vows

Keith W. Houghtaling

CASTLETON - Keith W. Houghtaling, Sr. "Wally", 54, of Castleton, passed away on Sunday, February 21, 2010.

Born in Albany on April 26, 1955 to Harold and Catherine (Risner)

Houghtaling, Sr., he lived most of his life in Selkirk. Keith worked for the Albany County DPW for 39 years.

He loved his grandchildren and thoroughly enjoyed the time he shared with them. He will also be remembered for his love of animals.

Survivors include his former wife, Kim Marie Dooley; sons, Keith, Jr. "Snapper" and his wife, Marilyn; and Scott and his wife, Katie, all of Castleton; grandchildren, Keith III, Alysa, Alexander, Micayla, Grace, Kellen and Patrick; brothers, John, Stevie and Jimmy; sisters, Alice, Helen, Beverly, Florence, Pat, Maggie, Gloria, and Sherry and many nieces and nephews. Keith was predeceased by his parents and brothers, Harold, Jr. and Alfred.

Calling hours were held at the Applebee Funeral Home, 403 Kenwood Ave., Delmar. A funeral service followed by interment in Mt. Pleasant Cemetery, So. Bethlehem will be held in the spring. Donations in Keith's memory for the benefit of his grandchildren may be forwarded to the Applebee Funeral Home.

Jane Baldwin Holbriiter

DELMAR - Jane Baldwin Holbriiter passed peacefully into eternal rest on February 22, 2010 at St. Peter's Nursing and Rehabilitation Center. She was born on April 5, 1921, the daughter of the late Eleanor Bowne Newton and Dale Sparhawk Baldwin. She grew up on Chestnut Street in Albany and was a 1939 graduate of The Albany Academy for Girls. During her high school years, she and her parents moved to the family farm at Cedar Hill on the Hudson in Selkirk, a place she loved all her life. She graduated from William Smith College in 1943. It was at collage that she met her future husband, J. Albert Holbriiter. They were married in Georgia on Valentine's day in 1945 and shared a lifetime commitment until Al's death in 2002. During World War II she worked for the General Electric Company in Schenectady. She was a stay at home mother who enjoyed volunteering her time with the Junior League and The Albany Academy for Girls. Jane was a lifetime member of the Academy Alumnae Association, having been a past president of the Alumnae Council. She was a member of the Daughter's of the American Revolution and the Bethlehem Historical Society. An avid horsewoman in her youth, she greatly enjoyed watching her daughter Maggie and granddaughter, Alexandra, compete in horse shows.

Jane is survived by her daughters, Eleanor Holbriiter Nasner and Margaret F. Holbriiter and five granddaughters, Melissa, Amanda and Kelly Nasner, and Alexandra and Katharine Moser.

Her family would like to thank the Doctors, Nurses, and staff at St. Peter's for all their loving care and support. At Jane's request there was no formal service. A reception was held in her memory at the Fort Orange Club in Albany, NY, on Friday, March 5th. Jane was an avid reader and historian. In lieu of flowers, contributions in her memory may be sent to the Albany Academies Library Fund, 135 Academy Road, Albany, NY, 12208.

Kathryn and John Walmsley

Kathryn Elizabeth Coulon and John Henry Walmsley celebrated the Sacrament of Marriage on October 17, 2009. The wedding took place at St. Thomas the Apostle Church, Delmar, New York. The Rev. James J. Walsh was celebrant. A reception followed at The Canfield Casino, Saratoga Springs, New York.

The Bride is the daughter of Virginia Coulon of Glenmont, New York and the late John Coulon. The Groom is the son of David and Jane Walmsley of Denver, Pennsylvania.

The Maid of Honor was Christine Coulon (sister of bride). The Bride's attendants were Susan Coulon (sister of bride), Kate Guissi (cousin of bride), Rebecca Mihalick (cousin of bride), Danielle Blanch (friend of bride) and Kelly Keane (friend of bride).

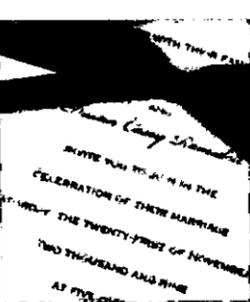

The best man was Davis Walmsley (brother of groom). Groomsmen were Sean Noonan, Charlie Stephens, Brian Leshner, Henry Lambert and Eric Ackerman (all friends of groom).

Kathryn is a 2000 graduate of Bethlehem Central High School. She earned a Bachelor of Science in Marketing from Villanova University in 2004. She is Web Content Administrator for the Vanguard Group in Malvern, Pennsylvania.

John graduated from Cocalico High School in Denver Pennsylvania in 1998. He received a Bachelor of Science in Accounting from Lehigh University in 2002, and CPA in 2007. He is Compliance Manager for Bank of America in Wilmington, Delaware.

The couple honeymooned in Aruba and presently reside in Philadelphia, Pa.

Soil

"We switched in connection with issues residents have had with the Albany landfill - its expansion into the Pine Bush, and the smells that go along with it," said Runion. "It's [the sludge to soil proposal] beneficial for the environment as well because it's 100 tons that won't be land filled."

Councilwoman Patricia Slavick said at the meeting that the new method would be environmental friendly, but she also said how the initiative would save money.

According to Runion, the idea for saving further on the cost of disposing of the alum sludge was presented to him by West at around the same time the town was considering switching landfills.

West said he came up with the idea to switch to the reuse method after speaking about it with a colleague from the City of Troy, which uses the method.

"Wherever you can trim costs and save, you pursue that," said West.

According to West, the town, and Barton & Loguidice, will have to wait for word from the DEC on the approval of the application before they can start removing and reusing the sludge.

"It depends on the tone of the state. The DEC is very strict in its determination," said West.

He said he is optimistic about the applications approval considering the process has been approved in the City of Troy and the Town of Mechanicville.

Culvert

In a letter to Jerry, DEC Stream Protection Biologist Steven Swenson said his assessment of the location indicated the size culvert should be increased to prevent further erosion.

"The banks at the culvert outlet are so undercut that it is my belief that Krumkill Road is at risk of eventual collapse if nothing is done to prevent this," the letter reads in part.

Joseph Slezak, field manager for the Albany County Soil and Water Conservation District, has also examined the location, and said the culvert is too small.

"We went out to the site immediately, and we met with [Jerry] and DEC, and basically just assessed the situation," he said. "It appeared that the culvert was undersized."

Officials in the Town of Bethlehem disagreed, however. Supervisor Sam Messina said he has examined the location along with town staff.

"They don't see an engineering issue with water throughput that would affect that road," he said. "At the present time, it is not clear, precisely, what action should be taken."

Messina went on to say the culvert and road is located in the City of Albany. As such, the town has not done a cost estimate on replacing the culvert.

"At the present time, it does not appear to me that it's a Town of Bethlehem issue," Messina said.

Slezak said he would be contacting the Town of Bethlehem to discuss the issue, but could not say which municipality is responsible for the culvert (here, the Krumkill serves as the border between Bethlehem and Albany). He said the county Soil and Water Department might act as a facilitator between the municipalities to sort the issue out, if necessary.

Rick Georgeson, a DEC spokesman, said the agency does not have any jurisdictional power to require the culvert to be replaced.

"It's [the town's] call whether they want to replace that," he said. "We're going to continue to talk things over with the landowner, and be available to the town."

Georgeson said other approaches to minimizing the erosion might be effective, such as reducing the "center bar" of gravel in the river that is pushing water outwards to the banks.

While county and state officials declined to say if development upstream is affecting this stretch of the Krumkill, all said it is a possibility.

"It's pretty much understood that when you increase development there's more impervious surface," Slezak said.

On Feb. 17, The Spotlight reported a number of McKownville-based groups, along with Assemblyman John McEneny, D-Albany, are blaming development for displacing stormwater and increasing instances of flooding in that area.

Jerry is also protesting a proposed condominium development in North Bethlehem, which he believes would further exacerbate the problems with the Krumkill by adding runoff to the river. He spoke out against the project at a recent Planning Board meeting and recommended the town of Bethlehem and Guiderland halt development until further notice.

"Any further development in the Krumkill watershed should be put on a moratorium until DEC has an opportunity to study these questions," he said in a later interview.

Daniel Hershberg, project engineer for the proposed Blessings Corner project, said the development would feature a stormwater management system that will regulate the flow of runoff and clean it of sediment, and would actually be better for those downstream.

"The system we've proposed at the 572 Rusell Road PDD site, was actually going to clean the stormwater," he said. "Quality and quantity will both be controlled."

Hershberg also argued increasing the size of the culvert under Krumkill Road would simply transfer the erosion problem downstream.

"That will violate the current intent of DEC's own regulations, because it will increase the flow downstream," he said. "Somebody's got to study the downstream impacts."

Georgeson said the DEC does not have enough detailed information to comment on possible downstream impacts associated with resizing the culvert.

Church plans quiet day

St. Paul's Church in Albany will host a Lenten quiet day on Saturday, March 20, from 9 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The Rev. Paul F. Blanch, rector of St. George's Church, Schenectady, will lead the event.

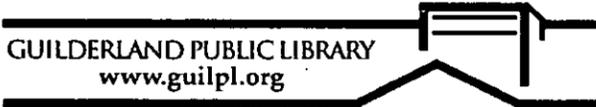

The day begins at 9 a.m. with a light breakfast, followed by a short message on the use of silence in spirituality from Blanch. A silent Eucharist will be celebrated at noon, a light lunch will be served, and the day ends at 3:30.

Guilderland library slates Sunday afternoon concert

Mezzo soprano Elisabeth Shoup and pianist Michael Clement will offer a Sunday afternoon concert of classics at the Guilderland Public Library on Sunday, March 14, at 2 p.m. From favorites by Mozart and Brahms, to selections by Berlioz and Bernstein, this program will bring a bit of warmth to a late winter afternoon.

Shoup is a rising mezzo-soprano from Schodack. Most recently she made her Carnegie Hall debut with the New York Lyric Opera, singing the role of Margot in Massenet's "Manon." In 2008, she made her professional debut as a studio artist with Opera New Jersey, performing Margot in The Merry Widow and in the chorus of La Traviata. Since then, she has also performed with Hubbard Hall's Outreach, Lake George Opera and Opera a la Carte.

Clement is a frequent performer in chamber music on concert series throughout the Northeast. He received his education from the Eastman School of Music, the Chautauqua Institute, the University of Arizona, and the University of Southern California. As a student in Tucson, he was engaged as the pianist for the Tucson Symphony and the Arizona Opera. After relocating to southern California, his musical activities centered around the world of opera and vocal accompanying, filling positions at the Long Beach Opera, Orange County Opera and as the director of the Opera Workshop at California State University at Long Beach.

The art of shade gardening

Kerry Mendez, owner of the gardening consulting business Perennially Yours, returns to the Library on Wednesday, March 17, at noon, to present another of her very popular programs, The Art of Shade Gardening. She will introduce you to some perennials, flowering shrubs, and annuals that steal the show in less-than-sunny areas.

Discussion includes design tips and as well how to care for low-maintenance gardens. Kerry's colorful photo PowerPoint presentation is just the prescription for these late winter months. You must register for this program; please call 456-2400, ext. 7.

Books at bargain prices

The Friends of the Guilderland Library are holding their regularly scheduled Better Books Sale on Saturday, March 13, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. The Friends hold these sales the second Saturday of every month, and they always provide a great read at bargain prices.

Proceeds from these sales support everything from the upcoming Summer Reading Club to the purchase of special furnishings for the Youth Services area.

If you have questions about this sale, or about becoming a member of the Friends, email them at friends@guilpl.org.

Mark Curiale

All library programs are free, unless otherwise noted. The Guilderland Public Library is at 2228 Western Avenue, Guilderland. For more information on these programs, or any matter pertaining to the Library, contact the Library's Public Information Office at 456-2400 extension 12, or email pio@guilpl.org.

Third annual Teen Film Fest to be held in Bethlehem

We're rolling out the red carpet on Saturday, March 20, at 2 p.m. for the library's third annual Teen Film Fest. Original films by teens in grades six to 12 will be screened; winners will be announced in four categories: action, comedy, documentary, and technical/experimental/animation. The judges will also choose "Best of the Fest" and the audience will vote for the People's Choice award.

Lights, popcorn, and movies created by teens you know — can't beat that on a Saturday afternoon! Save the date. Last year's winners can be viewed online; go to www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org/more/teens.

Saratoga battlefield talk set

Just 29 miles north of the Albany Airport, Saratoga National Historical Park preserves the lands on which the Battles of Saratoga were fought in September and October 1777 — regarded by many as the turning point of the American Revolution.

In a slideshow called "Saratoga: the Battle and the Park" at our library on Sunday, March 21, at 2 p.m., Ray Misiewicz will highlight the battles and explain what happened to the people and the land after the war. He will also present a visual tour of the current park sites in Stillwater and Schuylerville.

A retired nuclear engineer, Misiewicz is a local history buff and a volunteer at the Saratoga National Historical Park. His talk grows out of a desire to reacquire us with this great national treasure in our midst.

Book Buddies

One night the Monroes

go to see "Dracula" and almost squash a white rabbit abandoned in the movie theater. What else can they do but bring him home and name him Bunnacula? But when vegetables in the fridge are drained of their color, Harold the dog and Chester the cat think there may be more to Bunnacula than meets the eye!

Read "Bunnacula" by Deborah and James Howe with your family. Then join the discussion on Monday, March 22, at 7 p.m.

Recycled art

Thursday, March 25, 1 p.m.

Bethlehem Central School District art supervisor Melanie Painter will show you how to turn found objects into art. Grade K-5. Call 439-9314 to sign up.

Reading at home

Thursday, March 25, 7 p.m.

Library youth services head Chris McGinty will talk about early literacy and provide information on storytime techniques. Parents and preschool children. Call 439-9314 to sign up.

Time out for tales

Saturday, March 27, 11 a.m.

Stories, songs and dancing for kids age 3-6 and families

Spring flowers

Monday, March 29, 11 a.m.

A bouquet of activities that includes stories and a craft. Pre-K with parent-or caregiver.

Daisycutters to deliver concert Real Life to look at senior housing

Make plans for a Saturday night of world-caliber music in your own backyard.

Join Daisycutter, featuring Sara Milonovich, Greg Anderson, and Brian Melick, for a contemporary, eclectic performance on Saturday, March 27, at 7:30pm at the First Reformed Church of Bethlehem. Sara is a noted fiddle player, with roots in Celtic, bluegrass and Appalachian music. A former member of the McKrells, she has a large following in the Capital District. Greg plays many different instruments, and is the founder of Whirligig, a Celtic-fusion band. Daisycutter's fresh interpretations of music from many genres will provide a fun tapping evening for all.

Tickets for the three-concert series are $15 for adults and $9 for those age 65 and up and age 12 and under. Single-event tickets are $8 for adults and $5 for senior citizens and children. Come in to the library or call to reserve tickets at 756-2053. They also will be sold at the door.

Nominating petitions
At the May 18

referendum, three seats on the Library Board of Trustees will be open. Two seats are five-year terms and one seat is a two-year term. Interested? You can get a petition at the front desk, or we can email a petition to you.

Nominating petitions, which require signatures of 25 residents who are registered voters, are available now. Completed and notarized petitions must be returned to the library by Wednesday, April 17.

What do library trustees do? The seven-member Board develops policy, oversees financial affairs, and sets the course for library development. The Board meets on the second Monday evening of each month.

winner Neil Gaiman that was made into an exciting, eerie movie. At a special Time 4 Teens program on March 26, we'll discuss the book, eat lunch, and watch the movie. It's an afternoon for middle-schoolers, from noon to 2:30, on Superintendent's Day. Interested kids should contact the Library to request the book and to receive a TICKET to this event. Ask your middle-schooler about it.

Computer classes

Novice computer users are invited to develop their computing skills during two daytime courses at the Library.

• ONLINE SEARCH SKILLS Monday, March 8 and 15, 10:30-12:30

Get familiar with the web and find the results you are looking for. This course will offer participants an introduction to searching the web for valid results in a variety of topics including medical questions and consumer information.

• PERSONAL FILE MANAGEMENT Monday, March 22 & 29, 10:30-12:30

Learn the basics of organizing, using and securing files in everyday situations. Participants will learn to create, save, search and delete files in numerous computer programs. In addition, email file basics and fundamental file security will be explored.

Registration is on-going, and class size is limited, so call the library (756-2053) to register today.

• All library programming is free (unless otherwise noted) and open to the public. RCS Community Library is located at 15 Mountain Road, Ravena. For information, call 756-2053.

On Wednesday, March 24, at 7 p.m. Laurie Milward of Senior Services of Albany will present Housing Options for Seniors.

Learn about the pros and cons of aging in place, scaling down, assisted living programs and nursing homes, evaluating expenses, and other available assistance. This is a great resource for those who are thinking of making a change in their living situation or for those who are caring for an elderly relative.

Please register for Real Life seminars by calling 765-2791 or stopping by the reference desk.

Reception

You are invited to come to the FOL Volunteer Appreciation Reception and Annual Meeting on Sunday, March 14th at 2 p.m. The Friends of the Library want to thank all volunteers for the work they've done this year and meet any newcomers who are interested.

Family Evening Storytime

Family Evening Storytime meets on March 16 for Dr. Seuss Fun Time at 6:30 p.m. Who will be there? Sam, I am, The Cat in the Hat, or Thing 1 and Thing 2? Signup is requested.

Series extended

The PARENT/CHILD

WORKSHOP SERIES has been extended through March 31 to make up for a snow closing. The workshops are for children up to 3 years old and a parent or caregiver. We request that you attend three of the five sessions. Register at the reference desk.

Senate

now." He specifically cited the current scandal with Gov. Paterson, a number of state legislators convicted on criminal charges and the failure of ethics reform.

Carney also said he plans to run because of "the failure of the Senate and all of state government to get through Race To

The Top." He said the state will miss out on $700 million in federal funding that could have helped to relieve the burden charter schools have on taxpayers.

"Somebody has to step up and do something," said Carney

Carney said he expects to make a formal announcement in the coming weeks. For now, he is going through the procedural steps that go along with running for office. He also said he has received the support of "some of the political heavyweights," but declined to say who those heavyweights were until he makes a formal announcement.

"Neil has never really given back to the community and participated in Democratic [Party] events over the years," said Carney.

Breslin said that there was no credence to Carney's claim. "Through my entire life I have been a very loyal Democrat," said Breslin. He also said he has been a very effective legislator for his district since he began serving the district and continues to be effective through his chairmanship of the senate's Committee on Insurance.

Albany County Democratic Committee

Chairman Dan McCoy said the county Democrats have not yet endorsed a candidate for the seat.

"We have a process. In three or so weeks we'll get together and interview candidates," said McCoy.

McCoy said at that time, the committee will make a recommendation to himself and the executive committee who to consider for endorsement.

NOTICE OF PUBLIC HEARING:

At a regular meeting of the Town Board of the Town of Bethlehem in the County of Albany, New York at the Town Hall in said Town on February 24, 2010

IN THE MATTER OF THE EXTENSION OF WATER DISTRICT NO. 1, IN THE TOWN OF BETHLEHEM, IN THE COUNTY OF ALBANY, NEW YORK

ORDER CALLING PUBLIC HEARING

WHEREAS, previously hereto a map, plan and report have been prepared by the firm of C. T. Male in such manner and in such detail as has heretofore been determined by the Town Board of Bethlehem, New York, relating to the extension of Water District No. 1, Town of Bethlehem, and

WHEREAS, such map, plan and report have been duly filed in the office of the Town Clerk of Bethlehem, New York where the same are available during regular office hours for examination by any persons interested in the subject matter thereof, including estimate of cost, and

WHEREAS, the boundaries of the proposed extension of said district are set forth in Schedule A, attached hereto and made a part hereof, and

WHEREAS, the Water District No. 1, Town of Bethlehem would be extended to include an additional 548 parcels, and

WHEREAS, the aforesaid Water District extension will not require any financing or taking on of any debt, and

WHEREAS, there is no estimated hook-up fees to the property owners as the owners are currently receiving their water from the Town of Bethlehem, and

WHEREAS, the maximum cost (engineering and legal fees) for the water district extension is estimated to be $25,000.00, and

WHEREAS, said Extension and the establishment thereof has been determined to be an Unlisted Action pursuant to the regulations of the New York State Department of Environmental Conservation promulgated pursuant to the State Environmental Quality Review Act, the implementation of which as proposed, the Town Board has determined will not result in any significant environmental effects, and

WHEREAS, it is now desired to call a public hearing upon the question of establishment of said Extension and the improvements proposed therefore, all pursuant to section 209-d of the Town Law;

NOW THEREFORE IT IS ORDERED by the Town Board of the Town of Bethlehem, Albany County, New York, as follows:

Section 1: A meeting of the Town Board of the Town of Bethlehem, Albany County, New York, shall be held at the Town Hall at 445 Delaware Avenue, Delmar, New York on March 24, 2010 at 6:00 pm, for the purpose of holding a public hearing to consider the establishment of an Extension of Water District No. 1, and to consider the map, plan and report filed in relation thereto, and to hear all persons interested in the subject matter thereof concerning the same, and for such other action on the part of said Town Board as may be required by law or shall be proper in the premises.

Section 2: The Town Clerk is hereby authorized and directed to cause a copy of the order to be published once in the Spotlight, the official newspaper of said Town, the first publication thereof to be not less than ten nor more than twenty days before the day set herein for the hearing as aforesaid and said Town Clerk shall also cause a copy thereof to be posted on the signboard of the Town maintained pursuant to subdivision 6 of section 30 of the Town Law not less than ten nor more than twenty days before the day set for the hearing as aforesaid.

Section 3: This Order shall take effect immediately.

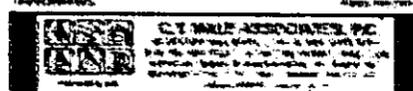

This Resolution was thereupon declared duly adopted.

Copies of this map and legal descriptions of properties included in this Water District Extension are available in the Town Clerk's Office at: 445 Delaware Ave. Delmar, NY or on-line at www.townofbethlehem.org basketball coach Trina Patterson resigned Monday after eight losing seasons at the school. Considering that men's head coach Will Brown has had only three winning seasons in his nine-year tenure at the school, I wonder how much longer he'll be able to hold on to his job there. Two NCAA Tournament appearances can only give you a little extra rope, especially if it's been four years since the last appearance.

• Leave it to George Dudas to guide a sub-500 Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake team to a Section II title. He did it in the past with the boys soccer team, and he did it again Sunday when the boys basketball team upended Lansingburgh 55-49 in the Section II Class A final at the Glens Falls Civic Center.

The key with all of Dudas' championship teams has been taking the lessons they've learned playing in the Suburban Council and applying them at Sectionals. They might lose more league games than they win as a Class A school among Class AA sharks, but once they get to play schools of their size at Sectionals, it's a different ballgame. They outwork and out-think their opponents, and it pays off with titles.

• The Shaker girls basketball team may have lost to Shenendehowa in Saturday's Class AA Sectional final, but it was still a good weekend for the town of Colonie—especially the southern portion.

Colonie came within a whisker of sweeping the boys and girls team titles at Saturday's state bowling tournament in Poughkeepsie, and speedy sophomore Kyle Plante claimed the girls 300-meter dash title at the state indoor track and field championships in Ithaca. The Colonie girls bowling team defeated Middle Country by 47 pins to win states, while the boys team finished second to North Rockland by 101 pins.

All in all, it was a good weekend for Colonie. And if you add in the Siena men's basketball team's performance at the MAAC Tournament, it was an outstanding weekend.

• Finally, I'm not certain what Sandra Bullock did to deserve an Oscar. But, at least, I think it's certain she won't ever have to act in "Miss Congeniality 3" now that she has it to the second team. Derek Barach and Sam Vincent were honorable mentions for all-league honors.

Rodrigue said the task of replacing Cooper, Russo, Jack and the rest of Bethlehem's eight seniors would be difficult.

"You can't replace Cooper, you can't replace a Stephen Russo and you can't replace a Kenny Jack because they're one-of-a-kind players," said Rodrigue. "It's going to take some time, but some guys are going to step up in leadership roles [next year]."

The task of preparing for next season will go beyond just what happens in the weightroom during the off-season, though. Rodrigue said Bethlehem's players will likely be counted upon to help raise money for ice time next season, since it's possible that the program will not be fully funded by the school district.

"I don't necessarily know what the [school district] budget holds for us, but I think we'll be in the same situation as this year, if not a little worse. It's still a difficult economy," said Rodrigue.

One thing is for certain, though. When the Bethlehem hockey team takes the ice next winter, the rest of the CDHSHL will be ready for it. And the Eagles won't be backing down from the challenge.

"Losing that [Sectional final] is going to be an upsetting thing right now, but it will be motivation for us next year," said Rodrigue.

Delmar Dolphins slate new swimmer clinic

The Delmar Dolphins Swim Club is holding a clinic for new swimmers March 29 through April 1 at the Albany Academy Pool, located at the corner of Hackett Boulevard and Academy Road in Albany.

The club is reaching out to Capital District children age 7-11 who want to learn the four competitive strokes (front crawl, backstroke, breaststroke and butterfly), starts, turns and drills. The clinic is run by the Dolphins coaching staff.

Swimmers must be able to swim the front crawl 25 yards to participate, and they should bring their own swimsuits, towels and goggles.

The fee for the weekend clinic is $30 per swimmer. Participants must pre-register with head coach Doug Gross.

For information, call 369-9733 or e-mail doug.gross@nycap.rr.com.

Registration begins for Rabbit Ramble

Registration has begun for the 16th annual Rabbit Ramble 4-mile run and 2-mile walk April 3 at Guilderland High School.

There are awards for the top three male and female finishers in the 4-mile run, as well as the top three runners in each age group: 12 and under, 13-16, 17-19, 20-24, 25-29, 30-34, 35-39, 40-44, 45-49, 50-54, 55-59, 60-64, 65-69, 70-74, 75-79 and 80 and older.

Running gloves will also be given to the first 175 participants to register.

Door prizes and refreshments will be available, as well.

The entry fee is $15 for adults and $13 for participants 70 and older in advance. A $20 registration fee will be accepted the day of the race.

Proceeds benefit area food pantries and charities, and participants are asked to bring an unexpired dry good item.

For information and to register, visit www.active.com or www.allsportcentral.com.

Winter's best

Eagles soar to new heights

Cooper, Russo lead Bethlehem to divisional title and Sectional finals

By ROB JONAS
jonasr@spotlightnews.com

The Bethlehem hockey team may have come up short in its bid to win a Section II title, but it can't diminish what the Eagles accomplished this season:

- A Capital District High School Hockey League divisional title.
- Its first Sectional championship game appearance.
- Six CDHSHL All-Stars.
- Its first CDHSHL scoring leader (Stephen Russo) and leading goaltender (Alex Cooper).
- Its first league player of the year award winner (Cooper).
- A record number of wins (15).

And the Eagles accomplished all of it in Andre Rodrigue's first year as the team's head coach, and in a season in which they had to raise money so they could play.

Rodrigue said the difference was changing the culture surrounding a program that had long struggled to reach the league's upper echelon.

"I'm a very high intensity kind of guy when it comes to hockey," said Rodrigue, who came into the program after coaching several years with Bethlehem Youth Hockey. "I was in their faces, and I constantly reinforced things to them. I constantly reminded them that working hard will result in great things on the ice."

Bethlehem's new attitude was evident from the get-go. The Eagles opened the season Nov. 28 by beating traditional league powerhouse LaSalle 4-2.

"We were underdogs going into that first game, and that was something we had to set aside," said Rodrigue. "I told the guys we couldn't think of ourselves as underdogs."

That attitude served Bethlehem well during the regular season. The Eagles recorded regular season victories over defending Section II Division I champion Shaker/Colony and defending Division II champ Queensbury, and they earned their first-ever point against Shenendehowa by tying the Plainsmen 2-2 Jan. 16.

Bethlehem's 14-3-2 regular season record earned it the Division II regular season title and the top seed in Sectionals. A 7-1 semifinal victory over Burnt Hills/Ballston Spa Feb. 25 propelled the Eagles into their first Goaltender Alex Cooper was one of the reasons why Bethlehem's hockey team reached the Section II Division II finals. The senior had a 13-3-2 record and a goals against average of 1.72 on his way to earning the Capital District High School Hockey League's Player of the Year honors.

Rob Jonas/Spotlight

Sectional final.

Unfortunately for Bethlehem, things fell apart against Queensbury in the championship game two days later. The Spartans scored twice in the first period and maintained a healthy lead the rest of the way for a 4-2 victory and their fourth consecutive Section II title.

"We came out and played like a team that had never been [to the finals] before ... and they played like a team that was a defending champion," said Rodrigue.

Russo scored both of Bethlehem's goals against Queensbury to end the season with 20 tallies to go along with 32 assists, and Cooper stopped 45 of the 49 shots he faced.

Cooper completed his senior season with some impressive statistics to earn Player of the Year honors. Cooper compiled a record of 13-3-2 and a goals against average of 1.72, both tops within the CDHSHL.

Besides Cooper's award, the CDHSHL named Russo to the all-league team. Senior defenseman Kenny Jack was selected a Division II first team all-star, while forwards Kyle Barach and Erik Halek were named

Union is last hope for a big hockey weekend

I have four St. Louis Cardinals, three Boston Red Sox, two New York Yankees and no New York Mets players on my fantasy baseball team. Either I'm a savvy fantasy baseball team owner or a lousy Mets fan. OK, moving on...

• If the Union College hockey team doesn't beat Quinnipiac in this weekend's ECAC quarterfinal series, next weekend's final four tournament at the Times Union Center will be like all the previous ones — full of action, but not full of people in the stands.

This is why it's important for Union to get the job done against Quinnipiac. This region's college sports fans only show up in downtown Albany when a local team is playing. Just ask the MAAC folks what happens when Siena isn't involved in a league tournament game there. It gets really quiet because there aren't a lot of people in there making noise.

That's been the case at the Times Union Center every year the ECAC Tournament has been there. Without Union or RPI to root for, people around here couldn't care less who wins the title. That's why attendance has been so poor every year (a well-known fact among area sports fans, but maybe not so well known among ECAC hierarchy), and that's probably why the tournament is moving to Atlantic City starting next season.

If Union can avoid the upset this weekend, more people will come to next weekend's tournament. It won't do anything to prevent the tournament from leaving Albany, but it would show ECAC officials that we do care about college hockey. Just not college hockey that doesn't involve Union or RPI.

• The MAAC Tournament is also leaving Albany after this year, but I'm not concerned about it. After a few years of lousy attendance in Connecticut and

Springfield, Mass., the MAAC will want to be back in the Times Union Center.

I'm not saying that because I'm bitter about losing the lone money-making tournament we get around here every March. I'm not even bitter about it. I just think that people in Bridgeport and Springfield aren't going to support the tournament. Maybe Siena fans can make up some of the difference when the tournament moves to Springfield since it's only 90 minutes away from Albany, but that's only if Siena stays on top of the league. If the Saints aren't doing so well in two years (it could happen), the fans will likely stay on our side of the New York-Massachusetts border.

Eventually, the MAAC Tournament will find its way back to Albany. It has in the past when the league flirted with Buffalo and Trenton, N.J., and it will after it flirts with Bridgeport and Springfield.

• Still no definitive word on who might replace the Carolina Hurricanes as Albany's NHL affiliate. It could be Buffalo if the Portland Pirates can't reach a new lease agreement with their arena.

If it isn't Buffalo, it could be ... NEW JERSEY??!! AUUUGGGHHHH! NO! NOT THE DEVILS! We've been down that road before, and it was bad. Very, very bad.

Never mind that Albany and Lowell (where the Devils currently are) have virtually the same record right now. If the Devils return to Albany, we'll be right back in the AHL basement. New Jersey will call up all of its promising prospects before the season begins, and Albany will be left with a bunch of has-beens and never-will-bes. Just like the last seven years of the River Rats-Devils affiliation.

Please, someone send the New York Rangers a note reminding them that they don't have to keep their AHL affiliate in Hartford. Albany is not that much farther from New York City than Hartford, and we can send them players on a 2 1/2-hour train ride that will take them directly to Madison Square Garden. That's nothing, folks.
