Proposed roadway pits residents, developers against town officials

By ALI HIBBS

hibbsa@spotlightnews.com

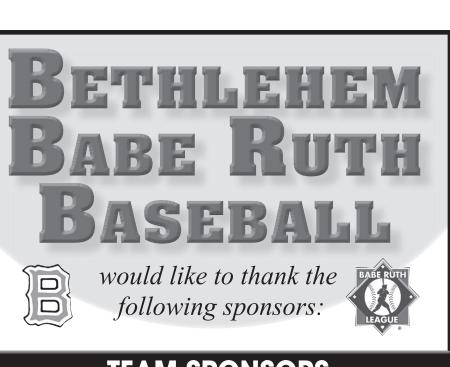

BETHLEHEM — At the town planning board's bi-monthly meeting on Tuesday, July 19, the majority of the three-hour meeting was devoted to discussing a roadway which would connect Fieldstone Drive with Elm Avenue through a proposed subdivision at Elm and Shanks Place. In an unusual twist, the developer sided with residents, requesting that the board approve a pedestrian walkway to connect Fieldstone with the new, neighboring subdivision—an apparent compromise that came out of a series of meetings with residents concerned about increased traffic in their neighborhood.

Town of Bethlehem officials, however, seemed intent on adhering strictly to its Town Comprehensive Plan, which, they said, calls for an eventual vehicular road connection at that end of Fieldstone Drive. Ken Kovalchik, a senior planner with the town's department of economic development and planning (EDP), said that, at the time that the Fieldstone Creek area was

Albany woman arrested for DWI

GUILDERLAND — On Friday, July 15, at approximately 10:43 p.m., state police arrested Verdell R. Holloway, 32, of Albany, after pulling her vehicle over on I-90 for a traffic violation. Troopers reportedly found her to be intoxicated while traveling with her 7-yearold child. Holloway was taken into custody, transported, and processed at the Albany State Police station, where her blood alcohol content was reportedly determined to be 0.13 percent. She was subsequently charged with driving while intoxicated with a child in the vehicle, a class E felony; endangering the welfare of a child, a class A misdemeanor; and "numerous" vehicle and traffic violations.

Holloway was released on appearance tickets and turned over to a sober third party, while her child was reportedly turned over to a responsible party. Holloway is scheduled to appear in Town of Guilderland Court on Wednesday, July 28, at 5:30 p.m.

Traffic stop leads to DWI arrest

GUILDERLAND — State troopers initially stopped Hector Colon-Rodriguez during the early morning hours of Saturday, July 16, for a traffic infraction on Western Avenue in the Town of Guilderland. While being interviewed, Colon-Rodriguez allegedly displayed signs of After troopers administered standardized field sobriety tests, he was arrested for DWI and taken to New Scotland station for arrest processing, where he was reportedly determined to have a .10 percent blood alcohol concentration.

Colon-Rodriguez was charged with misdemeanor DWI and released on tickets. He is due to appear in the Town of Guilderland Court on July 28.

Albany man charged with drug possession

BETHLEHEM — On Sunday, July 17, at approximately 5:25 p.m., state police stopped Richard Negron, 52, of Albany, on I-87 for multiple traffic violations. Negron was found to be in possession of both heroin and marijuana. He was taken into custody, transported, and processed at the Albany State Police station, where he was subsequently charged with second-degree criminal possession of a controlled substance, a class A felony; third-degree criminal possession of a controlled substance with intent to sell, a class B felony; unlawful possession of marijuana;

Bethlehem, Guilderland police announce National Night Out events

This year's annual National Night Out, a nationwide event aimed at improving relationships between police officers and the communities they serve will take place on August 2. Neighbors will participate across thousands of communities from all 50 states, United States territories, Canadian cities, and military bases worldwide. In 2015, 38.3 million people participated in NNO events.

"There were incidents during the year leading up to NNO that did not portray local law enforcement very favorably," Matt Peskin, NNO's national project coordinator, said last year. "We could sense that communities were using National Night Out as a way to highlight the job local law enforcement is doing and how powerful their partnership is with local police."

Throughout the nation, along with the traditional 'lights on' and front porch vigils, there will be tens of thousands of block parties, cookouts, parades, potlucks, ice cream socials, neighborhood visits by local police, flashlight walks, safety fairs, poster contests, festivals and other events and activities for communities to enjoy alongside their local law enforcement officers. Community members will have a chance to meet and socialize and ask questions of those who "serve and protect" their neighborhoods.

Bethlehem Police Department will host its NNO event at Elm Avenue Park in Bethlehem, while the Guilderland Police Department will host theirs at Tawasentha Park in Altamont. Details are as follows:

Learning to coexist

Multi-faith coalition of local religious leaders to provide guidance to the county's political leaders

By ALI HIBBS

hibbsa@spotlightnews.com

ALBANY — On the morning of Thursday, July 21, Albany County Executive Dan McCoy announced the formation of an interfaith coalition "to help deepen understanding of diversity in race, culture and religion in the region as well as its relationship with community policy and police enforcement.'

"Recently, many tragedies have occurred across our nation," said McCoy, standing in First Lutheran Church in Albany, backed by leaders from a variety of faiths who have agreed to serve on the coalition. "And, while Albany County is an extremely diverse county, we still struggle with some of these issues." Mentioning the incident last month in which someone set fire to the pride flag hanging in front of the adjacent Damien Center, a haven for individuals who have been diagnosed with HIV and AIDS, he said, "Our community reacted and we came together and it was great to see everyone come together and stand in solidarity with everyone. But, we shouldn't have to react to situations like that; we're a better community than that."

McCoy named Deb Riitano, executive director of the Capital Area Council of Churches, to chair the coalition. Other members and their affiliations are listed above. More are expected to be added.

"The United States military recognizes over 5,000 religious beliefs," said McCoy. "Over 5,000. We're a nation that tolerates different beliefs, different colors, different races-we all come together. We are a county of immigrants; people seem to forget that, especially during this debate for president coming up. People are arguing about immigration and refugees-but, have they forgotten what this country was based on?"

"5,000 religions," exclaimed Riitano, after she was introduced by McCoy. "We're going to need a bigger church!" After extolling the work the county executive has done to help many of the most underprivileged and marginalized segments of the county's population, she invoked the Orlando shootings and called the ensuing weeks "a month that would become a kaleidoscope of grief."

"The scars of hate and bigotry can be found throughout our country," she said. "And in our community, as well.... We have a very large and very vibrant faithbased county. As we continue to see the spread of racism and islamophobia, the County of Albany will now have an official interfaith response team to ensure that the misinformation that is rooted in fear will be addressed. This new coalition will be part of the solution."

"The Muslim community is involved in interfaith because we care about each other," said Imam Sebkhaoui, of Al-Hidaya Center. "Because we have common values that we have to cherish and protect. The Quran says, 'Help you one another in virtue, righteousness and piety but do not help one another in sin and transgression.'We are involved in faith because we need to know one another. Ignorance is not bliss."

"In the Capital Region, the Hindu community has an ongoing history of cooperation, respect and being part of interfaith discussions and educational panels," said Balasubramanian, known internationally as Bala. "Such dialogue is more important now than ever."

"In these troubled times, an interfaith group that works with our elected leaders to facilitate communication across Albany's diverse communities is a welcome body," said Rabbi Magidson. "We hope that our presence strengthens understanding and trust at the highest levels.

The coalition's first task will be a community forum, planned for Monday, August 15, moderated by Rex Smith, editor at the Times Union, and will feature community leaders discussing the recent violent events and the tension they have caused within our community. Panelists will include: Dr. Alice Green, executive director of the Center for Law and Justice; Aaron Mair, national president, Sierra Club; Deb Riitano; former Colonie Police Chief Steve Heider; Perry Junjulas, executive eirector of the Albany Damien Center; and Roman Catholic Diocese of Albany Bishop Emeritus Howard Hubbard.

conversation about these underlying issues. This forum won't just be two hours of discussion. We will work on solutions and develop a road map that we can use to effect change,' said McCoy, who invited any organization who would like to be a part of the discussion to reach out to his office or to Riitano. "We need to recognize what we are doing right, what we may need to do differently, and what we can do in the future to improve."

"Shockingly," he said to laughter, "I'll be in the audience listening. Because, as leaders, that's what we need to do. We need to take a step back and hear from the people we represent."

Tyler Witazek demonstrates skills at MLB's Pitch, Hit & Run finals

By ROB JONAS

jonasr@spotlightnews.com

SLINGERLANDS — Tyler Witazek got to live a dream so many others before him never had: to play on a Major League Baseball field. Twice.

Witazek, an 8-year-old who plays for Guilderland Little League, participated in the national finals of MLB's Pitch, Hit & Run Competition during last week's All-Star Break festivities at San Diego's Petco Park. That came on the heels of winning a regional competition at Yankee Stadium last month.

"It was very exciting," said Tyler, who will be entering third grade this fall. "When I got on the field, I thought I was going to throw up."

It was also exciting for his family, who made the cross-country trip to see Tyler play on the same field as Major League all-stars such as David Ortiz, Kris Bryant and Jose Fernandez.

"It was very exciting and kind of nerve wracking," said Tyler's father, Joe Witazek. "In many ways, it was hard to believe just being there. He didn't seem very nervous, but we were."

Competing against two other young ballplayers, Tyler had the longest distance in the hitting competition and had one of the fastest times running the bases. The lone setback was in pitching, where he finished third in his age group – which is where he finished overall, as well.

"I did great on the hitting," said Tyler. "I hit the ball maybe 150 feet."

Joe said Tyler was disappointed by his performance, but he helped put things in perspective for his son.

"I told him to look at his surroundings. There were 42,000 people in the stands, and I told him that he was better than most of the kids there," said Joe. "That revived him a bit."

Tyler's Major League adventures didn't end with the Pitch, Hit and Run Competition. He and his family watched the Home Run Derby and the All-Star Game, he tried the different activities at Fan Fest and he received an autographed baseball from Hall of Fame reliever Rollie Fingers.

To cap off the trip, the Witazeks also went to the San Diego Zoo and Sea World, where Tyler got an up-close view of the orca whales during their show.

Now that Tyler has returned from the West Coast, he is focused on the next round of games for Guilderland Little League's 8-and-under travel team, as well as basketball camp.

"Believe it or not, his favorite sport is basketball," said Joe. "His favorite player is Steph Curry (of the Golden State Warriors)."

However, Tyler said baseball has caught up to basketball on his list, thanks to his experience in San Diego.

Tyler Witazek, 8, has played on a Major League Baseball field twice, but says he enjoys playing basketball just as much, despite his already impressive baseball career.

Submitted photo

"I keep thinking I like basketball a little more, but I actually like them both the same," said Tyler.

And, Tyler wants another crack at the Pitch, Hit and Run Competition, which is for ballplayers ages 7-14. "Next year is Miami, so I'm hoping to get there," said Tyler.

CAPITAL DISTRICT BUSINESS Landmark makes house calls

By ALLISON FRY frya@spotlightnews.com

LATHAM -Landmark Health is teaming up with BlueShield of Northeastern NY and CDPHP to bring housecalls back to patients in the Capital District through their office in Latham. Providing home-based medical care to those with multiple chronic conditions that can make it difficult to leave the house, their ever-growing staff seeks to provide comprehensive, 24/7 care to meet all of their patients' needs.

Dr. Michael Le, cofounder and chief medical officer for the company, spoke with Spotlight News about the inspiration for bringing home visits back, and how they will benefit their patients.

Having been exposed to the healthcare system from a young age, "I actually watched my dad do housecalls in a small town in Massachusetts," said Le, who then noticed a shift when he became a doctor and saw how office-based the practice had become. "You would see these patients in the hospital, they looked very good in the office but for some reason they kept coming in and out. I went to these patients' homes and it was really eye-opening, because the same patient that looked good in the office, at home there was no place to hide [their symptoms]. You see how they're really living and the lack of social support and everything around them. You started to see the root cause of why they couldn't stay out of the hospital."

Le noted that not all of their patients are strictly home-bound, but many are frail and it isn't easy for them to travel all the way to their doctor's office for a quick 15-minute visit. With these house visits they're able to bring doctors, physician's assistants, pharmacists, technicians, social workers, and more to the patient's home in order to ensure they have access to every aspect of care they need.

Landmark's services aren't exclusively based around physical health, as Le stressed the importance of having a strong social network in order to maintain physical health. "Social and behavioral challenges are often under-diagnosed and underrated. We have our own social workers because patients might not have the resources for food or medications or rent," said Le, "We can arrange for Meals on Wheels or assistance with payments on medication."

With these home visits, there's a large focus on proactive care. According to Le, they have specialists who can come and screen for several conditions, do x-rays and ultrasounds, as well as those that can do minor procedures, "A lot of stuff that can be done in an emergency room or urgent care, we can bring to the home."

With longer visits that start at an hour and a half, these house visits aren't looking to replace a primary care physician, but rather add to the the greater picture. "We're additive to the existing system," says Le, "Our expertise is going into the home and seeing all this valuable information that most don't see and communicating that back with the primary care or the specialist.

"So now, we have the most comprehensive picture."

Since implementing this system in other markets across the country, they've noticed great successes in their patients' well being. "We've done over 45,000 home visits and we are seeing impacts in terms of lower hospitalization rates," says Le, "when we look at our populations, we see about a 20 percent reduction in mortality rates."

With better quality of life being the goal for their patients, Landmark Health seeks to revolutionize the healthcare system. For more information, and to see if you qualify for their program, visit LandmarkHealth.org or call their Latham office at 348-3176.

More Flipster to flip through

Our patrons are loving the library's new digital magazine service Flipster, and now there's even more to love. We have nearly tripled the collection to include dozens of additional titles, such as Bon Appetit, Dwell, Popular Mechanics, Vanity Fair and many more. See the complete list by clicking through the Flipster icon on our website.

Since its launch earlier this summer, Flipster has seen robust use, and many people have remarked on its user-friendly interface that allows readers the option of downloading a title or just flipping through it in a browser. Another bonus is the ability to track down back issues and easily print pages – a big plus for fans of McCall's Quilting, Popular Woodworking and other magazines for hobbyists that include patterns and project plans. Also a plus, the number of simultaneous users for any given title means potential readers aren't likely to get turned away.

You can easily browse and view magazines through the Flipster link on our website, or select the "Open in App" option to download magazines to a free, easy-to-install app, where they can be read and managed offline. You will need a Bethlehem library card to download titles or view them in an off-site browser. If you're in the library, you won't need to sign in at all.

And just so our digitalmagazine-loving patrons have plenty of options, Bethlehem cardholders still have access to the UHLS shared digital magazine catalog through Overdrive.

Write an essay, win a yoga studio

Instructor is holding a contest inspired by the concept of paying it forward

By MICHAEL HALLISEY halliseym@spotlightnews

COLONIE — In the world of science, energy can not be created, nor can it be destroyed.

As a yogi, Shannon Keyes Ciucevic is aware of the ubiquitous nature of energy; how it flows, its influence upon people around it. Many are prone to calling serendipitous acts as luck, like when Ciucevic met her best friend.

Ciucevic's professional career started as an accountant for Deloitte and Tush in Columbus, OH. A visit from the company's auditor out of New York City was the tossed stone that rippled throughout Ciucevic's life.

"She came in...she's very New York," Ciucevic recalled. "The nails matched the lipstick. The belt matched the shoes. I mean, she was dressed to the nines. And, she goes, I have an expense account, and I want to eat at a restaurant that has linen napkins." No one responded, except for Ciucevic. She didn't have an answer, but she found one, and the two went to dinner at a winery. "She shows up with her hair all wild and crazy, an over-sized tee-shirt, stretch pants and red cowgirl boots. I'm like, 'I like this gal."

The chain of acts that followed Ciucevic since that day led her following Joy to New York City, and later to upstate New York, where she opened her yoga and wellness center, Key 2 Joy, six years ago. Now, she plans to sell her 1300-square-foot studio in an unorthodox way. She's taking a financial auditor's approach to ensuring the positive energy remains with the next owner of the Vly Road yoga studio.

What would owning and operating a wellness center mean to you?

That's the question Ciucevic has posed to her would-be successor through the means of an essay contest. Contestants are asked to answer in as little as 300 words, and a maximum of 1000, to elaborate. The person selected out of the field essentially earns a fully equipped wellness center and a pre-paid six-month lease.

"When I started this place, I had several friends who just gave me money," said Ciucevic. "Here, build a website. Here, just cover your costs. And, I said I don't know if I can pay you back. "Just pay it forward,"

Ciucevic recalled. When the lease changes hands Oct. 1, Ciucevic's successor will be the benefactor of $10,000 worth of yoga equipment (blankets, mats, bolsters, back jacks, tables, chairs, etc.) and furniture, six months of paid rent in the current location valued at over $9,900, and a mailing list with more than 2,200 subscribers.

The contest will help generate the mailing list, another effort to help Ciucevic "pay it forward." A $250 entry fee will aid Ciucevic in helping her ailing mother in Ohio — her next path.

Ciucevic is a ball of positive energy, and a habitual hugger to the people who cross her path. She is both a student and practitioner of the healing powers of yoga and hypnosis - which she credits for staving off the effects of the muscular sclerosis she was diagnosed with several years ago. It had already taken part of her sight, and threatened to place her in a wheelchair. Now, her sight is back and she walks fine.

Key 2 Joy has been a home for Ciucevic and more than 3,500 of her clients, but she has to leave. She's going back to her hometown in Ohio to take care of her 76-year-old mother, Bonnie Keyes. Ciucevic's mother was diagnosed with stage three colon cancer last year. After surgery and eight cycles of chemotherapy, the cancer returned. Her prognosis now involves a timetable, instead of a cure.

A hint of Ciucevic's midwestern accent peeks out when she speaks of home. She grew up on a farm "with mostly corn," but with an eclectic array of animals that included donkeys, goats and geese. Her mother remains in the Civil War-era home that has stayed in the family for four generations. When most her age enjoy the leisure of retirement, her mother continues to work as a dental assistant — something she's done for 50 years.

Ciucevic calls her mother "tough." She's a veteran of the Women's Army Corps. Ciucevic said she has never known her mother to cry. She was married for 47 years, 12 of which spent taking care of her husband after a debilitating stroke. He died in 2012. But, in recent years, as the family has suffered the loss of loved ones by the hand of cancer, those tears have appeared.

The winner of the essay contest will be determined at the end of September. Ownership of the wellness center changes hands on Oct. 1, as will the name. The Key 2 Joy name will stay with Ciucevic, as she and her husband go back to the family farm. The contest's entry fee will go towards retrofitting the farmhouse to be handicapped accessible.

Details of the contest were posted on Key2Joy. net/contest/ early last week. The culmination of careful planning manifesting itself in one click of a website's "publish" button. Already, there have been several inquiries posted to the contest's email address, an indication to Ciucevic on Key 2 Joy's positive impact on people's lives. Before the contest all comes to an end, she said she hopes to have a gathering full of extended family, friends and chanting.

No accountability

I t's difficult to wrap one's head around the idea that anyone can get away with anything with today's technology, especially if that one is in politics and is writing what he or she should not on e-mail. In fact, it takes a special kind of stupid to do just that, if not a brazenly inflated sense of self-worth that would make one believe to be untouchable.

As the Democratic National Committee meets in Philadelphia this week, details of the party's back office antics have come to light. The release of email documents from Wikileaks revealed all what many had already expected. If nothing else, the committee was playing favorites with its party nominations. And, committee chairman Debbie Wasserman Schultz was foolish enough to document it. Since then, she's announced her resignation, which is to take place after the close of the convention. It's a few days too long, as she's already done enough damage to the credibility of her party. What ever merits she brought to the table are now overshadowed by this latest scandal. Which makes for a jagged pill to swallow for those affiliated with the party, and mores for those who thought they were before being turned down at this year's primaries.

News has it she won't be unemployed for long.

The brazen attitude is not limited to Wasserman. In this Internet-laden world, it is unfathomable to understand how one can think they can get away with flip-flopping on issues. Now, changing one's mind is not a crime. It can reveal someone with an open mind. A potential leader should possess enough courage to stand and admit a change in thought. Shows growth. A backbone. Unless other nefarious factors have come into play. But, to say one thing, and then the other, all while denying your initial opinion is comical. Public figures usually understand that when a microphone is in front of them, it's assumed it is recording. It should also be assumed that recording will not go away. Sound clips, television archives, YouTube and Facebook are the tools we see used, within hours, to confirm when officials discredit themselves.

But, what should scare people is that today's leaders do not seem to care. We've gone from carefully crafted images, to employing spin doctors to mitigate scandals, to flat out lying in the face of facts that scream "liar." And, so on to the next podium. What may be more unsettling is how support seldom waivers. You can lie, plagiarize or allegedly tamper with the very system that guides our citizens with choosing our representative, and the general public remains apathetic.

It can't be a generational flaw. We all share a penchant for going against the norm. Millennials have established a reputation for seeking out information, pushing against the grain of the status quo and fighting for what they feel they are entitled to receive. Generation X raged against the machine, broke the corporate mold and grew into a horde of entrepreneurs. Baby boomers — Woodstock. Chicago. The word "protest" was practically invented in the 1960s.

Yet, today's political climate leaves us scratching our heads. The issues debated between the two parties, those that polarize the two groups the most, hasn't changed in years. No, it's the attitude. The term public servant is seldom used, and when it is, rings hollow. Is it because we as voters have grown more intelligent, or more jaded? And, do we even care anymore?

We should. But, the finger is always pointed at the politician wearing the wrong tie. Doesn't seem we hold everyone accountable these days, just the opponent. And, that's foolish. If that's how you see the world, you're why we continue to use the electoral college.

And, the next politician that stands before a podium preaching the need for good ol' fashion moral values, deserves a tossed tomato.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR Black History Matters, too

Dear Editor, Spotlight Albany Common Councilman Mike O'Brien proposed an ordinance to rezone Sandidge Way (formerly Loughlin Street) to allow the building of six four and five story apartments in what is currently a quiet residential neighborhood. Columbia Development secretly bought all the homes on the street by engaging in what some have called block busting. Columbia is currently being investigated. Columbia very recently sold the properties to Tri-City Rentals owned by Massry Realty Partners. Dawn Homes plans to demolish the existing houses in order to build the apartments. Clear cutting is apparently part of the plan.

I spoke at two Albany Common Council public hearings on the proposed rezoning. At the hearings, many people from the surrounding neighborhood spoke eloquently in opposition to the rezoning for many excellent reasons including traffic on Fuller Road and water, drainage and sewer problems. For these reasons alone, the street should not be rezoned. However, I believe that there is an overriding moral issue that is more important.

Letters to the Editor

The Spotlight welcomes letters of local and regional interest. Letters are subject to editing and are limited to 500 words.

All letters must include the writer's name, address and phone number. The Spotlight reserves the right to limit the number of letters published from a single author.

Submissions can be emailed to news@spotlight news.com. The deadline for all letters is noon Friday prior to publication.

Our full letter policy can be viewed online at www.spotlightnews.com.

Loughlin Street is officially being renamed Sandidge Way allegedly to honor Teresa and Jesse Sandidge who, in the early 1960s, were pioneers of the long lasting integrated community on that street. Actually, the Sandidges will be dishonored because the houses on that street are "slated for demolition."

Black history matters! Black history is usually eradicated. This time, concrete evidence of it will be bulldozed.

At the second hearing, I quoted one word from John Lennon: "Imagine." Imagine a country, and in this case a city, in which we were surrounded by positive examples of black history. This would clearly convey the message that black lives do matter.

conceived, Fieldstone Drive was left as a "stub street," with the specific intention that it would someday be extended.

In both a memorandum sent to the town board on July 13 and in statements he made at the board meeting six days later, Kovalchik cited seven sections of the town's comprehensive plan in support of a connecting street, including the plan's vision statement, its goals (Goals 3.3) and its recommendations (Recommendations for Residential Areas, Tier 2); as well as sections of town law. Other documentation provided with the meeting agenda contained a letter from the town's Superintendent of Highways, Brent Meredith, affirming a previously taken position that Fieldstone Drive should be connected to the new Elm Avenue subdivision, claiming that it would lead to safer, more efficient operations such as brush and leaf collection and snow removal. The need to turn around at what he characterized as a "dead end," he said, was riskier and more time-consuming for town employees.

Another ${\rm communication}-{\rm from}$ the Albany County of Department Public Works (which declined to act as the lead agency regarding the environmental impacts of the proposed development), not only summarized the primary issue raised by residents at the board meeting, but was also quoted by Fieldstone Drive resident Arthur Seigel. This document specifically recommended in June 2015 that the town "should consider connections between subdivisions against whether or not the through connection to Fieldstone Drive from this subdivision will encourage cut through traffic from Murray Ave to CR 52/ Elm Ave. and Old Elm Ave. In addition, the connection to Fieldstone Drive forces wetland mitigation."

Seigel, a 15-year resident of Fieldstone Drive, represented a group called the Fieldstone Drive Coalition to Preserve the Safety and Character of our Street and came bearing a petition opposing a connecting vehicular roadway that he said outlined, "the compelling reasons why a throughstreet will only accomplish harm."

"Besides disturbing and destroying stateand federally-protected wetlands," he continued, "a through-street will create nothing more than a dangerous shortcut to the town park. When you combine a road with curves, blind spots and numerous small children accustomed to only local traffic; with high speed cut-through traffic to the town park, there is only one result: the unnecessary creation of daily lifethreatening conditions."

Siegel went on to say that his coalition supported the "very reasonable" proposal by builders Barbera Homes, Inc. to connect

Fieldstone Drive with the new development via a pedestrian walkway and was scornful of the notion that a vehicular roadway would benefit town services. He called the highway department's request both "conveniencedriven" and "selfish," adding that it would only "marginally simplify routine operations that the department has been performing for over 20 years."

Kovalchik pointed out that, when the project was originally presented to the board in May 2015, the plans included a vehicular roadway connection, but that the plans had since been revised to show a pedestrian walkway. Rob Osterhoudt, a project manager from Bohler Engineering who spoke on behalf of the project, explained that the original plan included no connection to Fieldstone Drive at all, but that it was added after the highway department reviewed the plans and requested a road connection. After receiving feedback from concerned residents, he said, the current pedestrian plan was conceived. "We feel that that's a suitable alternative here, given all the conflicting concerns and constraints that we're trying to deal with. Obviously, there is a provision in the town code for road connectivity and we recognize that; Rob [Leslie, EDP Director] and Ken [Kovalchik] have been very forthright and steadfast in expressing that section of the code and their concerns that we're not meeting it if we don't provide the road connection." The pedestrian path, he said, represents a compromise that he hoped would assuage the town's concerns about connectivity, while also satisfying residents that Fieldstone would not become a throughway for non-residential traffic. It also, he added, could reduce the impact to the Army Corps federal jurisdictional wetlands in the area by potentially as much as half.

Osterhoudt later noted that, since the time of the Fieldstone Creek development, which took place more than 20 years ago, wetland regulations have changed and said that, while the development may have originally been planned for extension via Fieldstone Drive, the stricter regulatory environment is a consideration. Leslie countered that every development has some degree of wetland impact, citing several other current projects.

John Smolinksy, chairman of the planning board, expressed support for the vision put forth in the comprehensive plan and of the importance of connections between areas of town. "I don't see anything here in this project that makes this project the exception to the guidance that we have and to our consistent approach to connections," he said.

In response to concerns about throughtraffic, Kovalchick did a comparison of several routes from different points around the proposed development and reportedly found that, of four potential routes, taking Fieldstone would only be the fastest in one direction—concluding that non-residential drivers are likely to take alternate routes. He said he took into account factors such as the slower speed limits and numerous turns that would slow travelers down on the Fieldstone route.

Planning Board member Scott Lewendon said, "I agree with your conclusions. Not necessarily the driving time, but the convenience of the route. Because he believes that the amount of turns are likely to deter drivers, he said he could not agree with the assertion that it would become a major cut-through and added that he thought it would provide greater access to Elm Avenue Park for those who live on the other side of the proposed development and Fieldstone Creek. "I don't see any reason to deviate from the comprehensive plan or the subdivision regulations and I would like to see the connection made."

"I'm sure I could be persuaded to hear an argument against making the connection," said board member Kate Powers, who added that she could see the potential for cut-through traffic before deferring to the comprehensive plan and other board members and saying, "I won't hold it up."

"I kind of concur with Kate a little bit," said board member Tom Coffey. "I'm not convinced that we need to make that connectivity at this point in time." He asked Kovalchik and Leslie what decisions needed to be made that night.

Osterhoudt got back up and pointed out that the project had already been at the early stages for more than a year. "We've tried to be diligent," he said, noting that all the roadway changes had been made at the behest of the town or its residents. "What we're trying to do is balance the needs of everybody and so that's why we came back in with the pedestrian connection. We figured that's a good alternative to try to meet in the middle here.

"We feel it's a very balanced approach, a very just approach," he concluded, "and we would respectfully request that the board consider the pedestrian connection over the roadway connection."

Smolinsky eventually made a motion for the board to accept the plans containing a vehicular roadway connection, and challenging the developer to devise a traffic-calming roadway that will discourage through-traffic. "You guys are the experts," he said. "You guys take a look at it and come back to us with a proposal."

Before the motion was voted on, Frank Barbera of Barbera Homes addressed the board. "One of the things that we've tried to do is work very closely with the neighborhood associations," he said after acknowledging the consistency of the town's position on connectivity. "And they've also been very consistent in how they feel about this issue, which is why we proposed, as you know, the option of putting a multi-use path in, so that we can create that diversity that you're looking for in the town with pedestrian traffic or connectivity." Designing a road, he said, would be easy, but he pointed to the relationship that his company had developed with neighboring residents and said that's something that he would like to see continue.

"Is there any other room," he asked, "to discuss this pedestrian connection?"

"I don't think so," was Smolinsky's reply. As Smolinsky was asking Barbera if he would prefer to hold the vote until a later date, and thus hold up the progress of the project further, Seigel once again approached the microphone, apologizing briefly for talking out of turn before launching into a litany of legal reasons that the board couldn't possibly vote on the measure to approve the road connection plan--including the need for a preliminary public hearing. "Thanks for the Roberts Rules lesson, I guess," responded Smolinsky, before re-wording his previous motion, "to give the applicant guidance to prepare a plan that has the road connection."

After 20 more minutes of discussion, Smolinsky reiterated his challenge to the developer and said that he wasn't interested in seeing any alternate pedestrian path options before the board finally voted unanimously, albeit not all enthusiastically, to approve the measure and compel Barbera to return with another roadway connection plan.

Before that plan can be approved, a public hearing will be scheduled for residents to voice their concerns and ask questions.

The world of Howard Plum

Local television, Internet personality weighs in on "Smallbany"

By MICHAEL HALLISEY halliseym@spotlightnews.com

oward Plum may just be the No. 1 authority on everything the local scene has to offer. For more than 15 years, Plum has thrust his face, and microphone, into scores of festivals, restaurants and live music venues as the titular, on-screen personality of The Howard Plum Show and Access Hollywood.org. The cable access television show highlights the hijinx and party atmosphere that draws people out to all our favorite jaunts.

Referring to himself by his stage name, Plum is star of the campy, cable television access show. Plum's on-screen persona is purposely over the top. Paired with his bespectacled face and curly dark hair, to say he resembles Weird Al Yankovic would be a stretch. Maybe if Yankovic expressed more interest in women than the squeezebox. "People get a bit timid because they don't like the in-your-face personality," he said, "I have toned it a bit over the years. ... But, I've been told not to come back to certain restaurants. And, it's not from me being outrageously loud and drunk or anything. I would create [an environment] where people want to stay." Nevertheless, the lucid concoction of man on the street interviews with random, attractive (and sometimes intoxicated) people, enjoying what "Smallbany" has to offer, presents a PG-13 version of your local Chamber of Commerce.

COMING UP IN ALBANY

Alive at Five Concert Series Tricentennial Park— Thursday, July 28

ALBANY — LoCash with Skeeter Creek amp up downtown as the scheduled act for Albany's weekly Alive at Five concert series, Thursday, July 28 at 5 p.m.

Both bands promise to bring a taste of country to the urban jungle of downtown Albany. LoCash, hailing from Nashville, Tenn. is currently on tour in support of its latest record "The Fighters," which dropped last month.

Hometown favorite, Skeeter Creek, riled up a Rockin' on the River crowd last month in Troy. The band previously earned best country and cover band accolades from Metroland from 2011 to 2015.

The Alive at Five concert series is located downtown at Tricentennial Park this year. Performances are free to the public and music starts at 5 p.m. Admission is free. For more information, go to albanyevents.org.

EDUCATION

All Shook Up

Summer Broadway camp students to stage full musical

By ALI HIBBS hibbsa@spotlightnews.com

SCHENECTADY For the first time since Proctors began offering its series of educational performance camps for youth, the theater is producing a full-length stage musical featuring more than 30 teenagers and young adults between the ages of 14 and 20under the direction of Broadway-accredited talent-following a fourweek intensive course in which the students were responsible for all aspects of the production.

"He asked me if I liked children," said actor/ producer/director Steven Yuhasz of Proctors CEO Philip Morris. He laughed. "And, I said 'it depends.""

Morris told Yuhasz that Proctors wanted to try something new with its educational programming and was looking for someone to help conceive and execute a full stage production with young students. "I know they interviewed a couple of people," he said, before affectionately admonishing a member of the ensemble for her enthusiastic drumming on a nearby seat as a few of her cast mates rehearsed on the theater's Main Stage.

After traveling between New York City and the Capital District for 20 years, Yuhasz said that he retired last year and had been considering transitioning into teaching theater. "And this opportunity came up," he said. "I said, I think it's a great opportunity, but I don't want to do children's theater. What I want to do, and what I can bring to the table, is to do a professional production." As it turned out, that's exactly what the program was looking for.

After reviewing more than 20 plays, Yuhasz chose "All Shook Up" because he wanted to produce a show with a big cast so that he could offer the experience to a larger number of students. "All Shook Up," he said, has 10 major roles and 20 members in an ensemble cast. The premise of the musical, he explained, is essentially Shakespeare's "Twelfth Night" meets the '80s movie "Footloose," featuring Elvis tunes. "It's a jukebox musical," he said, comparing it to "Jersey Boys" and "Mama Mia."

"It's interesting," said Yuhasz, glancing over his shoulder at the chastened drummer and another member of the ensemble cast. "They're listening to me right now." He smiled and continued, "How can I say this? I've worked with some of the best people in the industry and the process doesn't change."

While his students may not have the history or background of some of his more accomplished colleagues, he said, "they come with the energy and the excitement and the focus. And, it's part of my responsibility to get all of these pieces and bring them together as one." Yuhasz said that he worked closely with his choreographer and musical director to bring the show together in just four short weeks. "What we do," he said, "is we find the best in each of them and make it cohesive. When the audience comes to see the show, they're going to see the best of what each of these kids can do."

Ensemble cast member Louis Blair, 16, said that he has taken other classes through Proctors before, including the Matilda Master Class last December. "But there's really nothing like doing a show at this level," he said. "I tell people that I'm doing a show this summer and they're like, 'Where?' And, I'm like, 'Proctors.' And they're like, "What?""

"Just coming into the theater on the first day," said 17-year-old Anna Fernandez, who plays Miss Sandra, the libidinous caretaker of a fictional Midwestern town museum who mistakes a girl for a boy. "The first song that we did, you kind of suddenly realize, 'Oh, this is happening now!' And it's cool to hear everyone for the first time because you don't really know who you're working with or what it's going to sound like together-and we have a group that's really talented."

"It's a very maledominated field," said 17-year-old Maya Pomazal-Flanders, a renaissance member of the all-female backstage crew. "When I came in and saw an all-girl production crew, that made me really happy."

Pomazal-Flanders, who has been involved with community theatre for three years, said that while she signed up to work on several different technical aspects of the production, she has since developed a preference for lighting design. "It's been an amazing experience getting to work on Proctors Main Stage," she said.

"I love when we're out somewhere and one of us will hear something, and then suddenly we're all just singing along," said Blair. "It's crazy."

"It's a plague," said a grinning Tahya Hurn, a 15-year-old member of the ensemble cast and occasional drummer of chairs. "I love performing. It may be a little work, but I can handle it. So I auditioned with all my might, and I got in."

"It was just the other day that everything clicked," said Yuhasz of his youthful cast and crew. "There's that moment when everything starts to work. Every rehearsal we have, I push them to another level. And they push themselves. These kids really care. I ask them for more, and they give it — and that's what being a professional is."

In addition to working with seasoned professionals including Yuhasz, students

SCIENCE

Can't avoid the talk

Our Allison Fry speaks with local scientist on global warming

t has become a daily occurrence to hear someone mention global warming and the impact it's having on our planet, and there's no avoiding the topic with the temperatures the Capital District has seen so far this summer. Often with these discussions comes the mention of El Niño and La Niña, which refer to the wind and climate patterns of the southern Pacific Ocean.

Dr. Matthias Vuille from the Department of Atmospheric and Environmental Sciences explained are studied, and what makes El Nino, La Nina is a part of everyday conversation these days, and it all has to do with all the warm weather we've been having.

how these patterns them worth mentioning. 'The way we measure that is basically we look at what the temperature is on the surface ocean of the Pacific," said Vuille. "When it [El Niño] ends it reverses into its opposite behaviors. It's then its 'sister' as we call it, which is La Niña," he added, noting that El Niño is defined by warm water in the tropical Pacific, with La Niña conversely referring to colder measures.

The current high temperatures can be explained by the lack of either pattern, as Vuille explains "Right now we are in neutral. We have neither El Niño nor La Niña, so the temperatures are above normal in the Pacific."

Vuille also took a moment to note how this affects our global climate as well. "It has implications for the planet as a whole, and strong implications in different parts of the world. When we have an El Niño event like we did this past year, what that means is that the ocean gives off a lot of heat, and therefore out planet warms up. In fact for the first six months of 2016 every month, if we look at he planet as a whole, we set a new record for the temperature.'

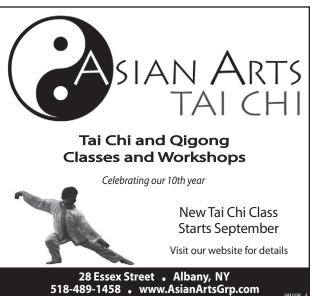

Noting that this January was the hottest on record since 1850, and that every month so far has been recordbreaking, Vuille explained that this is both the result of climate change that we've been seeing over the last several years, as well as the heat released into the ocean and atmosphere from this year's extraordinarily warm El Niño.

Despite it being halfway across the globe, these patterns have effects on our weather here in the Northeast, as Vuille explains "In New York state, El Niños tend to be warm here and tend to lead to warm weather and rather dry conditions. La Niñas on the other hand tend to be rather wet, but La Niña does not tend to have a huge impact on temperature." He noted that the dryer, warmer than usual winter we experienced last year was definitely a result of the El Niño that ended this spring, as it was stronger than usual and peaked in the wintertime.

As for what to expect in the coming months, it's hard to tell given the current neutral state, but Vuille believes the outlook for precipitation in the fall to be fairly normal compared to last year.

"At one time the show was always about Howard Plum, the character," he said. "But, now I'm starting to realize, it's more fun to have it about the people, and bring them in. And, people don't always know how exciting things are out there."

Plum came to be about 20 years ago, when he first started with hundreds of interviews on a personal video camera on VHS tape from college in Pittsburgh. Raised in Niskayuna, he said he felt he came to his own while away at school. "I started interviewing people on the streets with a VHS camera — I still have all the footage, about 200 tapes — and, L didy't really know what I

I didn't really know what I was doing," he said. "But, I was interviewing people every day." The format of the show has changed over the years, but one shared memory from his school days sounds familiar to what his show is now. "They closed down the block and everyone was drinking in this huge radius," he said. "So from daytime to nighttime ... the vampires all came out, and little Howard Plum was interviewing and found himself in a limousine with his camera. It was somebody's birthday party. So, I'm just doing this. I'm not saying anything. I'm just taping and one drunk guy says, 'Well, who the hell are you?' I said, 'I'm just here taping, dude.'They kicked me out of the limo. I start running.

The stuff you find yourself in is hilarious."

What started as a hobby, he said, then developed into a lifestyle. Today, the lifestyle is more passion than vocation. It's a second skin that lies underneath after parting from his vocation doing audio for a local television station. It's the man strangers identify with the most when he arrives with microphone and crew in tow. His calling now has allowed him to coax people out of a crowd and, like Warhol once said, provide them their 15-minutes of fame.

Right. Cable access television has a limited audience, you just said — though, in not so many words. Plum and his production staff, Liz (co-host), Nate the Beard (correspondent) and Nick Inc. Co. (the cameraman), pushes the #TVMovement upon every audience he can reach. His outlet runs extensive with multiple channels that have spread from his first channel in Schenectady in 1999, to Albany, Saratoga, Troy and now New York City. Couple that with a YouTube channel, website and social media presence that audience has grown. But, time has also played a factor in changing attitudes, he said. ""There was a time, when I interviewed in the year 2000 in Saratoga, people were paranoid," said Plum. People would ask, "What are you doing? Is this going to end up on the Internet?" But, now, things have changed. "2016? They're throwing their kids in front of our camera, because the world literally wants to be a part of this media."

Just don't call home "Smallbany." "When I hear that. Smallbany. I go, 'Oh, you must never attended," said Plum. "Because, to me, it's so diverse. It's so much larger." Plum said he sees the Capital District as consisting of different worlds. There's a different consciousness surrounding the people of Troy, versus the people of Clifton Park. "I actually get very pissed when people say [Smallbany]. ... They don't understand. ... People come up to us and go 'I didn't know this was going on in Albany. I didn't know people still went out. Where do you find these beautiful people?"

With Plum's audience extending down to New York City, he looks to include story content that goes beyond the home. Some of that content, he said, includes news. "We're starting to venture out. Because, I want news stories, and people are so different in other areas." He's looking at random road trips, possibly as far as Ohio. "Because, we've got to expand our horizons.

The biggest thing is, if you're not growing, you're plateauing. With the new people I've included, our ultimate goal is to get on one of the largest channels, and I would happy with it. ... But, in the end, Howard is going to get his dream, and it will always be Internet. But, to me, it would be awesome [to have both]. Because, it's two different worlds."

ALBANY — The curtain closes on Park Playhouse's take on Broadway's classic tale of jazz and vaudeville this Saturday, July 30.

The longest running revival in Broadway history, and the basis for an Academy Award-winning motion picture, Chicago tells the darkly funny and altogether unforgettable story of murderesses Roxy Hart and Velma Kelly, who try to turn crime into fame. With one of Broadway's most memorable scores, and a book that is by turns hysterical and insightful, it's a show that's got it all... and all that jazz. Chicago is presented through special arrangement with Samuel French, Inc.

The musical is best suited for audience members age 13 and older. Performances, which edding season is in full swing! And even if you're not participating in one this summer, you can enjoy this amazing dessert, which I've taken from my grandmother's clippings to imbue its sweetness with some gluten-free and paleo heft. All I can say is, Thank God for almond meal! It's my new best friend, subbing beautifully for white flour by adding fiber, protein, and in essence, not ringing the blood-sugar-spiking bell so hard. The vegan cream cheese may take some getting used to, but give it a try. You may be surprised...

Makes: About 20 (2-by-2-inch servings) / Preparation time: 15 minutes / Total time: 1 hour (plus cooling time)

Cake Ingredients

3 teaspoons baking soda 1 cup coconut flour 1 ¹/₂ cups almond meal ¹/₂ cup ground flax seeds 1 cup coconut palm sugar 1 cup raisins 1/3 cup chopped dates 1 cup bot coffee or espresso 3 eggs ¹/₄ cup coconut oil 1 can (20 ounces) crushed pineapple with juice 3 teaspoons vanilla extract 3 tablespoons coconut oil

Frosting Ingredients

8 ounces vegan cream cheese 1 can of full-fat coconut milk, refrigerated overnight 1 box sugar-free vanilla pudding mix

Instructions

Preheat over to 340°. Lightly grease a 9-by-13-inch baking dish. Place raisins and dates in a shallow baking dish and spread evenly within dish. Pour hot coffee over the dried fruit and set aside. In a large mixing bowl, combine the baking soda, flour and sugar and mix well. Add the eggs, ¼ cup coconut oil, pineapple (with its juice), vanilla and coffee mixture. Mix well. Place the 3 tablespoons of coconut oil in the sprayed baking dish and place dish in oven for five minutes, or until oil is melted. Remove from oven and tilt pan to distribute oil evenly.

Pour the batter into the prepared baking dish and bake on the bottom rack for 50 minutes. Turn oven off and let sit in cooling oven at least 20 minutes.

For the frosting, place cream cheese in a mixing bowl. Open coconut milk and drain water, set aside. Scrape coconut fat into mixing bowl. Add pudding mix and beat with electric mixer until smooth. If frosting is too thick, add some coconut water. Blend until fluffy. Spread the whipped cream cheese mixture over the cooled cake. Cut into desired size squares.

Dental Implants:

Do you have broken teeth, missing teeth or loose dentures?

Eat, feel and live better with dental implants!

– Dr. Lysenko answers some of the most commonly asked questions about implants –

What is an implant?

An implant is a man-made tooth root replacement made of titanium that fuses with the bone of the jaw. An abutment fits over the top of the implant and a crown is placed over the abutment which looks like your natural teeth. Implants can replace one or several missing teeth and can also be used to stabilize dentures. Implant retained teeth look natural, never decay and allow you to chew, smile and laugh with confidence.

Are implants as strong as natural teeth?

Yes, in fact, dental implants are actually considered to be stronger than natural teeth and provide full functionality.

Are dental implants permanent?

With proper care and routine dental check-ups, your dental implants should last a lifetime.

is here to help you reclaim your confidence.

Can implants help to stabilize my loose dentures?

Yes, implants can be an excellent way to stabilize loose dentures and restore confidence, comfort and chewing ability.

Is implant placement uncomfortable?

With the minimally-invasive implant techniques we use, most people report very little post-op discomfort which can be controlled with over-the-counter pain reliever.

How successful are dental implants?

Dental implants boast a 98% success rate, meaning that you can enjoy your new smile, without complication, for a lifetime.

For more information on how to restore your smile, your confidence and your oral health with implants, call Dr. Lysenko at 518-765-4616 to schedule a complimentary consultation.

Baby, it's hot out there!

High temps and humidity can be dangerous to your exercise routine — follow these tips to keep yourself safe

By DAN ROMAND news@spotlightnews.com

e're smack in the middle of summer and with it the heat and humidity that we all have to deal with.

Last week, one of our clients told us how a friend of hers went for a run. Now normally she can run for miles and miles but due to the heat and humidity she ended up throwing up just a couple miles in.

A sure sign she was likely suffering from heat exhaustion or worse heat stroke. NOT GOOD!

And she thought she was doing the right thing by waiting until 7 p.m. to do her run.

The challenges summertime fitness throw at us often come as a surprise. Here in the Northeast, we usually only have a couple of months with temperatures in the 90s and high humidity so we tend to forget that it can adversely affect our bodies when we try to work out outside.

We are so used to the long fall, winter and spring months we forget that our bodies need to re-acclimate to the heat and humidity so that it can react better to the conditions.

It is an adjustment but it can be done. Personally, I am very prone to heat exhaustion and being a red head doesn't help. But I don't let that cause me to lose momentum.

I've learned how to make some adjustments to my approach and keep working hard during the summer months. I thought I'd share some of my tips and tricks with all of you.

1. Do your cool down first

What I mean is lower your body temperature before heading outside. Try taking a cold shower or, if you have one,

THEATER REVIEW

A Night with Janis Joplin

By JAMES YEARA news@spotlightnews.com

oe Cocker growls "You feelin' alright/ Not feelin' too good myself" from the speakers in Capital Repertory's intimate studio theater. A cute brunette nearby says aloud to no one in particular "They should have started with a dance party." Thursday's "Alive at Five" crowd seems to have filled the house, and lively party chatter plays back-up to Cocker's 'You sure took me for one big ride/ And even now I sit and I wonder why." The set by Brian Prather seems to have been lifted whole from a Tinker Street bar in Woodstock right down to the eclectic mix of electric candles downstage acting as footlights, several mandala pattern carpets in different colors scattered on the stage floor, a slightly raised 3 by 4 foot platform down center, the only dive-bar anomaly two story stacks of aluminum struts packed with rotating led lights upstage left and right. The 8-piece band -1969 perfectly long-haired and bearded, fringe vested and denim bell-bottom wearing missing only the artisanal hand-rolled clove or other herbal cigarettes tucked behind an ear — waits upstage, guitars, drum, bass, trumpet, trombone, sax, and keyboard (doubling as the front of the wooden bar itself) at the ready. "It's A HAPPENING!" the cute brunette nearby screams as a blond in the front row stands to dance to Cocker singing "You feelin' alright/Don't you get too lost in all I say."

And "A Night with Janis Joplin" hadn't even started yet.

Two and a half hours later, with a karaoke thumping sing-a-long to "Mercedes Benz" (the last song Joplin recorded, a pure and direct a cappella), the Thursday "Alive at Five" crowd not only had a good-time tribute show to Janis Joplin, but found out CapRep is "alive" 6 days a week, twice a day on Wednesdays and Saturdays. A splendid time is guaranteed for all who love to groove to music and be moved by its soul.

And while you may show up to spend the night with the Janis Joplin jukebox promise of the title, your ears and soul will leap to your feet at the performances of Danyel Fulton, Jannie Jones, Nikita Jones, and Kimberly Ann Steele singing the songs of the women whose souls influenced Joplin's. Their performances and the weaving of Joplin's story with the African-American artists who are the foundation of Joplin's music are what make A Night With Janis Joplin a show not to miss.

The 25 songs in the show run atop Joplin's (Kelly McIntyre, who leaves all of her onstage by the end of the night) influences, and fans will stand, dance, and sing along with Joplin's hits; "Piece of My Heart" in particular grabbed part of mine and didn't give it back. "Try (Just a Little Bit Harder)" and the poignant "Stay with Me," done with a backdrop of projected Joplin family photos got people moving and grooving, while the Kris Kristofferson hit "Me and Bobby McGee" was curiously anti-climatic. Performed immediately after the stirring "I Shall Be Released" (performed by Fulton, the Joneses, and Steele as "Blues Singer," Nina Simone, Bessie Smith, and Etta James respectively, i.e., the Soul behind Joplin's soul), which ended with the audience leaping to its collective feet to applaud, "Me and Bobby McGee" kept us on our feet without remembering why we were standing.

That moment underscores the one weakness of "A Night with Janis Joplin": the strength of the play is the singing of Joplin's influences, and the staging of Etta James or Odetta or Bessie Smith singing was simply done, lighted without distraction, done with little accompaniment. When Janis sang the same song in her style, the lights flashed and moved and changed colors and the 8-piece band wailed like there were 25 instruments all about to be re-possessed. While Janis Joplin frequent addresses to the audience were how she would "tell like it is" or "don't b*llsh!t anyone else and don't b*llsh!t myself," the staging pointed out that b*llsh!t is always lit with a lot of moving, changing lights. "When A Night with Janis Joplin" stays true to its roots, it is a happening. When the lights ballyhoo and Janis becomes a contestant on "The Voice" belting every note, the four women singers fade into the background and the second act jukebox tendency of the piece hits big downbeats. It's a fun show, fans of pop Janis Joplin will love it, but a little bit of her heart is torn away by it. It's a shame, because the woman could sing without all the b*llsh!t, as "A Night With Janis Joplin's" first act makes clear.

Eating along The Waters Edge

By ELIZABETH SCHAEFER

nce the summer months hit, my partner, daughter and I try really hard to only go to places where we can sit outside and enjoy the weather. The summer is so limited, that we want to soak up every second we can. Add great food, great drinks and beautiful view and you have our perfect Saturday night.

After some discussion we decided to head to the Lighthouse in Scotia. We called ahead to see if there was a wait for outside tables, and surprisingly there wasn't. (They don't accept reservations for their outside seating). However, had there been a wait, we really would have been fine with it, because the atmosphere is just so "right" and waiting is just actually quite relaxing.

When we arrived, we realized that there was some construction going on behind the restaurant. I think this may have been part of the reason it wasn't packed, but it did not affect our service or meal at all.

We were seated immediately at a table on the second tier of its outside seating. Any table in its outside area has a great view of the Mohawk and the small boats coming in and out, but that night, ours

F YOU GO

had a particularly serene feel. Our server arrived quickly and we immediately placed an order of calamari, as well as a "Hummingbird" for me, a Manhattan for him, and a soda for her. I must tell you about the "Hummingbird". It has become my favorite treat to have when we go to the Lighthouse, in part because they serve it perfectly. A Hummingbird is a mix of Sparkling Brut, St. Germain, and club soda. What they do at the Lighthouse is unique to anywhere else I have seen it on the menu (which is very infrequent). The drink comes in a small glass carafe, made by St. Germain, with a glass on the side with or without ice. I always get ice, because I really prefer all my drinks to be very cold. This time did not disappoint, it was perfect and a wonderful way to start to unwind and enjoy the view.

> When our waiter returned to take our dinner orders, he did let us know that meals were taking a bit of time, which was fine with us, as we were totally relaxed. As he read the specials, I immediately fell in love with the first item he described. It was a pan seared cod, served over a light pesto cream sauce, sautéed spinach and brown rice. He chose their seafood risotto and based on the server's recommendation went with the larger size, because he promised it would heat up wonderfully the next day. The 16-year-old was dying for some sort of steak, so she chose the filet beef tips.

Our calamari arrived shortly after he took our order, and it was good. Not the best I have ever had, but definitely a nice start. After we finished that, it was a bit of a wait for dinner, but we really did not mind it at all. It was gorgeous out, the water calm and quiet and we were able to just sit back and relax. Our server stopped by a few times, checked on us, and even chatted with us for a while.

Once our meals did arrive, we all were immediately thrilled, and that was even before tasting it! First, as I have made it clear before, it is very important to me that a meal be served hot. Lukewarm means it probably has been sitting waiting and that is just not ok with me. To my delight, my meal was probably served directly from the pan. The cod was cooked just right, seared on top, but with enough moisture left inside to make it delicious. The pesto cream sauce was only lightly drizzled on top of the fish, with the rest being under, which I really appreciated, because it allowed me to decide just how much I wanted to have on my cod. The rice and spinach were cooked well, and flavored nicely. There is absolutely nothing negative to say about the meal. I, as usual, was not able to finish, but it did heat up very nicely the next day and he had it for lunch.

He really enjoyed his seafood risotto, and the seafood was plentiful. It is always a fear that the dish will be mostly risotto with a sprinkling of seafood, but this was not the case. The shrimp, scallops and lobster were all cooked just right, and the ratio was spot on. Since what I ordered was a special, I will probably order this dish when we go back. He too wasn't able to finish, but added it to the lunch of my leftover cod the next day, and was thrilled.

I have no idea what the 16-year-olds filet tasted like, I didn't get a chance to ask for a taste but she had nothing left to bring home, so I take that as a very good sign. Plus, she raved about it.

Before tip, the bill came to just over $100, which is what I had expected. We all ordered higher end meals (they do have light fare menu), as well as drinks and an appetizer.

I highly recommend you head over there, especially before the summer months are behind us, because sitting outside and enjoying the seafood, is what summer is all about.

FILM REVIEW

Married couples take on Star Trek's latest

By NICOLE & MATT ROBINSON

news@spotlightnews.com

Nicole: So, full disclosure, I didn't see Star Trek Into Darkness because, if you remember, you went on a man-date to see it and I was not invited. Did it affect anything in Star Trek Beyond?

Matt: First off, weren't you busy when we went on the man-date?

N: No. I was told, "You aren't invited."

M: Lies. And, not it didn't affect the third movie at all. Some of the character relationships are developed throughout each movie, but that's it.

N: Okay, that's good. I didn't really feel like I was missing anything. Does that make it a less cohesive trilogy or is it better that a viewer can watch each as its own entity?

M: I don't even know if I would call it a trilogy at this point. It's more just a series of movies called Star Trek at this point, because there is no major through line.

N: I have to say, I was sad I missed the second one and had pretty high to hopes for this one. For g starters, I loved the first J.J. Abram's installment of to Star Trek. I found myself actually "getting" the easter eggs left for super fans, end which means I watched to way more of the show as and a kid than I ever thought. da Plus, this one was written by Simon Pegg. But, ultimately, I was pretty underwhelmed. M: It wasn't very good.

N: No, right? M: I mean, even the actors seemed to be tired of the series.

N: They definitely seemed to phone it in. It just didn't seem like the same cast I remembered from the first one, and I couldn't tell if it was the actors themselves or poor direction. But newcomer Sofia Boutella, who played Jaylah, was fantastic and pretty much the brightest spot of the film.

M: Agreed. And I think it's telling when the newcomer is better than several veteran actors. Plus losing J.J. Abrams as a director definitely made an impact. It was missing the darkness that the first two had. This was just too goofy and cheesy.

N: The motives of the villain were toolong coming, difficult to comprehend, and had to be explained to the audience through dialogue that was almost incomprehensible due to fighting and heavy accents.

M: The fighting and space battles were pretty cool.

N: I guess if you're going to have an epic summer blockbuster, they better be.

M: Yeah. But the good ones are more than that. And this just wasn't.

N: I also had trouble connecting with many of the characters. I know there was a bit of a kerfuffle when Simon Pegg and Chris Pine spoke adamantly in support of Sulu's gay backstory, although veteran George Takei didn't believe it made much sense for the character. But, it really wasn't a meaningful or transcendant part of the movie. Thanks for the gay character, I guess. What was hardest and the most emotional for me was watching Anton Yelchin's (Chekov) performance, knowing that his young, talented life was cut short earlier this year.

M: Yeah, Sulu being gay seemed forced. Like even Kirk watching him hug his husband and then smiling and nodding was like reassurance that Kirk is a good guy. And Yelchin's death definitely hung over the film a little bit. But neither of these things were the major problem with the movie. It just wasn't that good. N: So what would you rate it? M: Worst of the three,

C-. N: I think I agree with you! M: Hooray!

N: I think I'd recommend, if you're just a moderate Star Trek fan, that you skip seeing this one in the theater and wait for it to come to Netflix.

M: You gonna rate it there, bud?

N: Doesn't saying I agree with you mean I rated it? M: Rate it!! N: Geez. C-. C-! <image>

TROY — The Parlor opened things up nicely for The Felice Brothers at the weekly Rockin' on the River Wednesday, July 20. While the summer heat continued to play factor on band and fans, it failed to put a damper on what turned out to be a good time.

a quick dip in the pool. If you are prone to heat exhaustion like I am, apply an ice cold cloth to the back of your neck. There are even head bands and bandanas out now that you can toss in the freezer and use to keep you cool. Personally, I get a couple of bandanas at the dollar store, lightly wet them and keep them in the freezer. When its hot, I just grab one and go.

2. Find some shade

Don't work out in the blazing sun if you can avoid it. Move to a different area. If you are a runner or biker, change your route. I like to use the Niskayuna Bike trail as much of it is shaded and the temperatures are often a few degrees cooler than in the sun. Those few degrees can make all the difference in the world.

3. Avoid caffeine

As a confirmed coffee addict, this is often a hard one for me to follow, but follow it I must. Caffeine acts as a diuretic; it forces water out of your system. This is the last thing you want when exercising in the summer heat. Hold off on your caffeine intake for several hours before or after your workout, rather than near the time you will be exercising. Remember it's not just coffee that has caffeine; watch for it in many beverages like tea (even iced tea), sports drinks and sodas.

4. Stay hydrated

Drinking plenty of water before, during and after your workout will reduce the heat stress on your body. General rule of thumb is you should be drinking half your body weight in ounces of water each day. If you weigh 200 pounds, that means you should drink 100 ounces of water.

5. Choose your clothing carefully

Now more than ever it is important to wear clothing that will move sweat away from your body and help it evaporate it quickly. Personally, I prefer a wicking type fabric designed to draw sweat away from the body. Sure, a cotton T-shirt may be fine in the winter, but it could raise your body temperature in the summer as it will retain the heat your body is working so hard to get rid of.

6. Change your workout time

If you are used to exercising during lunch or in the afternoon, you may need to adjust your schedule for the summer months. Early mornings and late evenings are the best times for outdoor exercise. But as mentioned earlier on those sweltering days, even the shade will not bring much relief.

7. Wear white or light colored clothing

The lighter the color, the better. Plain white is the best. It's not time to make a fashion statement it's time to stay cool. Lighter colors reflect the heat better than darker, more intense colors.

8. Take frequent breaks

Even the Olympians getting ready for Rio take frequent breaks. Fact is a person's body can only handle so much extreme heat. As the thermometer climbs, you may find that you need more frequent breaks to keep performing at your best. Be sure to take them and if you aren't sure... take them anyway. Listen to your body and pay close attention to what it is telling you. Caring for your body is not a sign of weakness: it's smart.

9. Monitor your heart

If you have a Fitbit or similar device, monitor your heart rate. If you don't, then learn how to take your pulse and check it regularly like during the aforementioned breaks. Heat places a greater stress on your heart. Keep tabs on your heart rate as you work out in the heat and if you see it is spiking quickly or stays too high... REST.

10. Hit the gym

Yeah, I know, who wants to go to the gym in the summer? Truth is, most gyms are barren wastelands in the summer. While I'll be the first to tell you that I enjoy working out outside in the summer months, I'm in the gym on those 90 degree days. And here's the other thing: you'll be more likely to do your work outs in the summer instead of blowing them off as most do when it gets hot. If you're part of a group like at our studio, you'll have the added benefit of personal attention and group accountability. If you haven't tried it, why not give it a try now? Classes are smaller which makes it a great time to try new things. If you're going on your own, focus on improving your form, increasing the intensity, and trying equipment you've always wanted to try but could never do so because everyone else was using it.

New site offers way to see world

Zipskee connects travelers with locals to build authentic experiences

DENVER — Travelers all over the globe are rapidly embracing the new trend of living like locals, rather than being ordinary tourists who flock to wellpublicized destinations, attractions, and restaurants. This summer, travelers can locate and connect with locals and others seeking authentic experiences through the new travel site, Zipskee. Zipskee gives both travelers and locals the option to build genuine friendships with one another while discovering non-touristy activities, locations, and culture that are only experienced by local residents.

"While traveling in Austria, I wanted a deeper cultural experience. I had one Austrian friend who was gracious enough to show me the real Austria, and I thought, 'How great would it be if everyone had a friend like that in every city they visited?"" said Evan Hung, CEO & Co-Founder of Zipskee. "And so, Zipskee was created to fill this gap. With Zipskee, users can find more meaningful experiences with local guides or other travelers looking to learn about a destination outside of what's in their guidebook all while making unforgettable, lifelong friendships.'

Now with Zipskee, users can explore the hidden gems of a city through its people. Local foodies can share their cuisine, multi-generational residents can teach their city's history, and hometown photographers can show off their favorite scenic spots. With Zipskee, you really can have a friend wherever you go.

Here's how it works: Users can create an account with their email and password (Facebook login will soon be made available). Travelers and guides set up a profile that includes a photo, description, languages spoken, and interests. Based on this information, users will be matched with others who share the same passions. Users can set their status between "traveling" or "guiding" and also update their current city to help other users find them. To make connections, users type in cities and even landmarks into Zipskee's search to find travelers and guides in the area. Once connected, travelers and guides can easily communicate over Zipskee's intuitive chat system, where users can ask for recommendations or even to meet-up email notifications then let users know when they've received a messages. Zipskee values each user's safety, and with ratings and reviews posted to every user's profile, others can feel safe and excited to find connections right for them.

beautiful landscapes, and unique experiences — yet in such a well-connected world, it shouldn't be so difficult for travelers to connect with locals or other travelers to genuinely experience a destination. With Zipskee, it no longer needs to be a challenge," said Hung. Zipskee is currently available via a desktop and mobile-optimized website. Zipskee's Android and iOS app will launch later this summer. Additional features to be added include a city search option for local events and the capability to integrate with GPS to intuitively update users from a traveler to a guide and vice versa as they change cities. For more information about Zipkee, visit www.

zipskee.com. Zipskee was founded in 2015 to connect travelers and locals around the world with the belief that people make the culture, and connecting with culture is the best part of traveling.

Searching for Hometown Heroes

CAPITAL DISTRICT -

Nominations are currently being accepted for TrustCo Bank's 'Hometown Heroes' Hall of Fame. Now in its fourth year, the Hall of Fame was created to honor local individuals who "demonstrate strong community involvement and work hard to make a positive change in the community."

"Ordinary people do extraordinary acts to help their community," said TrustCo President and CEO, Robert J. McCormick. "These individuals work hard every day to make a difference and ask nothing for themselves. We want to honor these Home Town Heroes who might otherwise go unnoticed."

The public may submit nominations by going to Trustco Bank's web site at TrustcoBank.com or by visiting any Trustco branch. Nominations must be submitted by Wednesday, Aug. 31. A committee will review all nominations and announce the winners. Up to five individuals and/or groups will be selected.

Winners will be invited to a special luncheon and receive a plaque to be displayed next to previous award recipients, at Trustco Bank's Corporate Headquarters.

All is fair in Saratoga

SARATOGA COUNTY — Were you spotted at the Saratoga County Fair in Ballston Spa, Wednesday, July 20? The fair featured a rodeo in front of the National Grid Grandstand and all the fair food and rides. The fair closed after Sunday, July 24.
