Board opens discussion on how to preserve the town's disappearing open space

Bv ALI HIBBS

hibbsa@spotlightnews.com

BETHLEHEM — Supervisor John Clarkson recently revived a mostly dormant discussion when he put this question to board members: "Is it time to actually begin developing a plan to preserve open spaces in Bethlehem?" If so, he asked, "how might the they proceed?"

"I think we just need to get started," Town Board member David VanLuven told Spotlight News.

Outside of funding secured by Clarkson and state Assemblywoman Patricia Fahy (D-109) to pay landowners who commit to leaving their property undeveloped for a specified amount of time, through something called a "conservation easement exemption"which VanLuven called a "wonderful tool"—he observed that very little has been done to address residential concerns in recent years.

"Guiding growth and protecting community character is a high priority for people," said VanLuven, who has spent 25 years involved in environmental conservation efforts and served several years on the town's now-defunct Citizen's Advisory Committee on Conservation. VanLuven made it clear that, while he feels an open space program is overdue, the town needs to be thoughtful in its approach and should strive to remain respectful of, and responsive to, the rights of landowners.

About his experience with the CACC, VanLuven said it was difficult to reach consensus and that goals could become convoluted. He even went so far as to suggest employing an impartial moderator when things arrive at that stage of planning. "It's about dialogue and building trust," he said. "And I think that's what we haven't had. We're weren't able to build it with the CACC and they weren't able to do it in the 90s."

"A number of conversations, including CACC and others, have come and gone," said Clarkson. Most recently, a broadly representative Comprehensive Plan Assessment Committee engaged in some discussion of open space preservation but, as it was clear that they weren't going to reach consensus, they weren't asked to do so, according to the supervisor. "So the Town Board has basically taken on the issue and, in 2014, we passed a resolution. But, we haven't gotten up to the issue of whether we should have an open space plan."

The resolution passed by the board in March 2014 established the Open Space Technical Advisory Working Group, charged with working with Rob Leslie, the town director of Economic Development and Planning, to provide guidance on standards and methods for the conservation of open space lands. It also purportedly adopted a general plan for pursuing the implementation of a coherent open space preservation program-a plan that was never actively pursued.

During this month's discussion on ways to go about forming a plan, essentially all of the intentions put forth in the 2014 resolution were reiterated: to develop a set of objective criteria for evaluating and identifying lands for preservation; to explore and incorporate new conservation tools; establish a designated fund; and agree upon which mechanisms the town will consider to support open space preservation.

Early costs of developing the program itself shouldn't be prohibitive, as overlay maps used to determine the value of a piece of land - such as agriculture, wildlife, recreation and water resources - have already been prepared by

"Guiding growth and protecting community character is a high priority for people. ... It's about dialogue and building trust," he said. "And I think that's what we haven't had. We're weren't able to build it with the CACC and they weren't able to do it in the 90s."

the CACC. According to VanLuven, they will still require a computer informations technologist to make use of them and he is hoping to find a qualified Bethlehem resident willing to donate time and talent.

"We shouldn't need any town funding in the next few months," said VanLuven, who intends to spend that time doing research on his own so he can return to his fellow board members at the next discussion with examples of what has worked and failed elsewhere.

Potential mechanisms range from more easement exemption opportunities or other grant funding to buying properties or funding easement exemptions with the town's general fund or a dedicated conservation fund. While Clarkson seemed to shy away from the idea of dedicating town funds, VanLuven was more confident that town residents would be willing to spend tax dollars to keep open spaces open.

"While I think most people would support some form of public investment for open space protection, it has been a flashpoint in previous open space discussions," said Clarkson. "And I think we'll need to better define how much it might be, where we'll get if from, and how we'll allocate it before we can really get a full public sounding."

"We can't expect landowners to foot the whole cost of keeping up open spaces that the whole town values and enjoys," VanLuven said. "That doesn't make sense, and I think most people understand that. We need to do everything we can as a community, I believe, to allow large landowners to have options for their properties other than selling to developers."

As noted by Clarkson, the conservation easement exemption-which was authorized by the state Legislature and provides a tax reduction of between 50 and 90 percent for landowners who agree to defer development—has just been opted into by the Bethlehem school district. The exemption strengthens the financial incentive for potentially interested landowners, and the town is hopeful the county and districts will opt in as well. The board will formally continue the conversation in early November, but Clarkson said that an Oct. 26 presentation on development trends in the town is likely to involve some discussion on open space preservation as well. They will take up the topic again on Nov. 9, following a public hearing on proposed zoning and subdivision regulation changes to the town code. Some of the changes that have been proposed would give the board discretion to waive conservation requirements for developers.

other neighboring school

At the Town Board meeting on Thursday Oct. 13, members voted to table the amendments until hearing from town residents. (Details on proposed zoning changes can be found on our website, www. spotlightnews.com.)

NEW SCOTLAND -On Oct. 15, Voorheesville's non-profit emergency response unit closed after 64 years due to a lack of volunteers and began paying Albany County to take over services on nights and weekends. The county is expected to remain the primary agency going into next year, but Voorheesville Area Ambulance Service (VAAS) First Lieutenant Tom Smith said that they're currently looking into partnership opportunities to create a hybrid paid/volunteer service in an effort to help save taxpayer money.

The Albany County Sheriff's EMS squad already covered the areacomprising Voorheesville and Northern New Scotland on weekdays from 6 a.m. to 6 p.m.,

to provide quality EMS services to their own communities."

The goal, he said, is to find a way to maintain the volunteerism aspect of the service. "One person volunteering one shift per week, 12 hours a week for a full year," he said, "is a $12,000 cost avoidance to the community annually. Even if we only have a half dozen people supplementing another agency such as the county, then we would be saving the community taxpayer dollars." Those are dollars, he said, that he would rather see going to senior or youth programs.

"We're still trying to figure out how we can restructure," he said. If they're unable to find a solution soon, Smith said that they will have to move ahead with full dissolution of the village volunteer service. A lack of volunteers at Voorheesville, he noted, makes it difficult to "make a significant contribution" to services shared with another municipality.

VAAS has kept the town and city apprised of their increasingly untenable staffing issues in recent years, said LaGrange. "My predecessor, the village counsel and the mayor have all been working with them, trying to figure out what can be done. They even brought in a paid staff for a little while, to see if that would help."

The town has seen volunteerism dwindle generally in recent years, but LaGrange noted that he tends to see more volunteering in rural areas than urban centers. He pointed to the town's other emergency response service, the Onesquethaw Volunteer Fire Compan "the last volunteer combination Fire and EMS service left in Albany County" and said that there had been concerns that they would soon be facing the same fate as VAAS.

"So we've had discussions with them and they've really put on kind of a full-court press to build their volunteers up and they've done an admirable job in the past year," LaGrange said, noting that two volunteers have been re-certified and two new recruits have signed up and several more new recruits are going into new class.

"There are people out there who want to volunteer," said Smith. "There just aren't enough of them." Families, jobs and other life obligations, he said, tend to get in the way. "It's a pretty significant commitment to acquire and maintain your EMS certifications."

The hope for Voorheesville, he said, is to keep the nearer VAAS location operational and maintain enough "There are people out there who want to volunteer. There just aren't enough of them. It's a pretty significant commitment to acquire and maintain your EMS certifications."

volunteers to supplement the county system and keep costs down. Smith and VAAS Captain Kate Odell may take some time off, however, after all the dust has settled. In addition to months spent attempting to save the EMS service, both had been working long weeks to ensure coverage with only ten remaining volunteers.

"The last year or so," said Smith, "has been extremely difficult for both of us."

COPS, COURTS AND EMERGENCY CALLS

BETHLEHEM - On Friday, Oct. 21, at approximately 11:05 a.m., the Bethlehem Police Department responded to a report of a burglar alarm on Paxwood Road in Delmar. Responding officers located a broken window in the rear of the residence

A longtime town highway worker, Mike Vasto, also called police at around the same time to report someone breaking a front window of a home at 500 Delaware Ave.

Police responded immediately and spotted the suspect, 45-year-old Michael Rozell of Delmar, running from the rear door of the residence after having reportedly committed another residential burglary. He was apprehended after a brief foot chase.

Superintendent of Highways Brent Meredith said Vasto was in the area and immediately called police when he spotted Rozell allegedly breaking into the home

"This is how it's supposed to work," Meredith said. "We are out there all the time and we know what is going on so when we see something we report it. We are supposed to work together. We are happy to have helped out the police to make our community a better, safer place."

Bethlehem EMS was called to the scene to treat Rozell for cuts to his hands and face, presumably from breaking a window to get into the Delaware Avenue home and/or the window of another home on nearby Paxwood Road.

Rozell was charged with one felony count of burglary in the second degree, one felony count of attempted burglary in the second degree, two misdemeanor counts of criminal mischief in the fourth degree, two misdemeanor counts of possession of burglary tools, and misdemeanor counts of petit larceny, criminal possession of stolen property in the fifth degree and resisting arrest.

Police had calls for four other burglar alarms going off in the general area of the burglaries prior to the call that led to Rozell's arrest.

Rozell was sent to the Albany County jail on $50,000 bail.

GUILDERLAND-In the early morning of Tuesday, Oct. 18, state troopers stopped Kristen K. Daley for numerous traffic violations on Western Avenue in the Town of Guilderland. During interview, Daley reportedly displayed obvious signs of intoxication and was arrested for DWI after allegedly failing standard field sobriety tests. She was taken to the State Police barracks in Latham where it was determined she had a 0.35 percent Blood Alcohol Content.

Daley was charged with aggravated DWI and was due to appear in the Albany City Court on Halloween day.

Due to her level of intoxication, she was released to EMS personnel.

Man arrested with Wisconsin warrant

BETHLEHEM—On Tuesday, Oct. 18, police arrested a man who had an active extraditable warrant from the state of Wisconsin.

Antonio Padial Jr., 40, of Gloversville, was arrested when he arrived at the Town of Bethlehem Justice court to answer to an unrelated petit larceny charge.

An investigation by Bethlehem police determined that Padial Jr. was wanted for absconding from his release on felony forgery charges out of the state of Wisconsin.

Padial Jr. was wanted by the Wisconsin Department of Corrections in Madison, Wisconsin.

Padial Jr. was arraigned in the Town of Bethlehem Court by Judge Andrew Kirby and remanded to the Albany County jail without bail. The case was transferred to Albany County Court for an

Great Depression ushered in changes

t was 87 years ago this week — Oct. 29, 1929 specifically — that the stock market crashed, ushering in the Great Depression. Every American institution was fighting to stay afloat in an era of change, upheaval and economic misery, including YMCAs across the country that had to adapt to address human hardships and financial challenges. Some of those changes are still part of the Bethlehem YMCA's mission today.

Prior to the crash, unemployment was already on the rise. YMCAs responded by providing spiritual comfort through Bible classes, which had been the foundation of Y services for decades.

Y's also handed out direct relief to out-of-work Americans, such as YMCA meal tickets. In one day, a YMCA in New York City handed out more than 12,000 meal tickets to help feed the hungry.

In many large cities, the Y also offered cheap housing as an alternative to dirty and dangerous skid row hotels. In 1932 alone, more than 89,000 people were referred to YMCAs in upstate New York for shelter.

As the YMCAs

struggled to provide services to so many needy Americans, the Y itself struggled to stay solvent. During the depression, YMCA income dropped as much as 50 percent, and enrollment in Y Bible classes decreased more than 60 percent between 1929 and 1933.

When President Franklin Roosevelt's New Deal programs got underway, the federal government took over providing direct relief. That allowed the YMCA to focus on reevaluating its offerings. YMCAs learned they could survive if they expanded their services to more people. Changes included admitting women on an equal basis as men, dropping a requirement for church affiliation and encouraging people of all faiths to join.

Among other lasting changes, the Y entered into new partnerships with welfare agencies, became more involved in community projects, and stressed character-building and organized classes and lectures.

A description of a Y program from the era says that the purpose of the effort is "to unite unemployed young men who desire to maintain their physical and mental vigor and wish to train themselves for greater usefulness and service to themselves and the community." Participation in YMCA exercise classes increased, as did enrollment in Y educational programs. And as economic conditions improved even a little, many people who participated in YMCA education and training programs went back to work. Those who were left behind were offered vocational training.

The outgrowth of the changes made in the 1930s can be seen at the Bethlehem YMCA today. The Y strengthens our community by delivering innovative programs and services to address social needs. You can see it in our Togetherhood outreach program. You can see it in our educational programs such as Black and Latino Achievers, ICan, and Youth in Government. You can see it in our wellness programs, in our child care and summer camp and in Circle of Champs. And you can see it our Annual Campaign that receives donations from so many YMCA members, staff, volunteers and others in the community.

Just as in the bleak years that followed "Black Tuesday," the YMCA is uniquely positioned to take on new challenges, advocate for an important cause, work with other organizations that share our common vision and bring about meaningful, lasting change in our community. — Mark Hansen

Guilderland defeats Bethlehem in low-scoring playoff game

GUILDERLAND — Joe Park's second touchdown of the night helped Guilderland edge Bethlehem 12-7 in a Section 2 Class AA football quarterfinal game Friday, Oct. 21.

The Eagles (4-4) pulled off one goalline stand in the first quarter to keep the game scoreless, but the Dutchmen (8-0) capitalized late in the second quarter when Park punched the ball into the end zone from two yards out. The extra point was no good, leaving Guilderland with a 6-0 halftime lead.

Bethlehem grabbed a 7-6 advantage on Riley Pelow's 13-yard touchdown run and Cameron Scoons' extra point, but Park's second 2-yard scoring run late in the third quarter put Guilderland ahead for good.

Quarterback George Marinopoulos threw for 248 yards to help propel Guilderland into a semifinal showdown with Shaker (7-1) Friday, Oct. 28 in Guilderland.

COMMUNITY

'Politics & Patriots' concert

elebrate the approaching close of the tumultuous presidential election season by coming to GPL for a free "Politics & Patriots" concert by the ever-popular Lost Radio Rounders, on Saturday, Oct. 29, at 2 p.m.

This perfectly fun and calming concert features campaign songs and stories from America's founding to World War II, from George Washington to Franklin Delano Roosevelt. Enjoy the humor and history of these hummable melodies from across the aisle and through the years. One thing you'll take away from this concert is that talking trash about your opponent is as old as our country.

Working with The Band

Music producer John Simon, perhaps best known for helping create some of The Band's most memorable music, will speak at GPL on Saturday, Nov. 5, at 3:30 p.m.

Simon is a composer writer, and performing artist who has also worked with Janis Joplin, Simon & Garfunkel, Leonard Cohen and Blood, Sweat & Tears. During the late 60s and 70s, Simon produced dozens of recordings, including The Band's iconic albums, "Music from Big Pink," "The Band," and "The Last Waltz."

with live piano performance, Simon will discuss and demonstrate how he became involved with The Band, the legendary rock group composed of Rick Danko, Levon Helm, Garth Hudson, Richard Manuel and Robbie Robertson, who lived and recorded their music in the Woodstock/ Saugerties area. Simon will offer insight into how the compositions, arrangements and instrumentation came together to create the group's monumental recordings. After his presentation, Simon welcomes questions from the audience.

Simon's appearance is made possible through an arrangement with the Empire State Plaza Performing Arts Center's "New York Living Legacy" project.

Munch on Monsters

We're just a click awav

At "Night of the Living Bread: Munch on Monsters" on Friday, Oct. 28, at 4 p.m., tweens and teens can play Frankenstein chefs as they assemble a set of weird and wacky medium-pita faces for party snacks. For youth in grades 5 through 8. Please call 456-2400, ext. 4 to register.

Agent Orange health risks

If you served in Vietnam in the military, as a contractor or humanitarian worker — or are a family member of one who served — then you should attend "Agent Orange: Health Risks for Vietnam Veterans" at GPL on Wednesday, Nov. 2, at 7 p.m.

Agent Orange, a chemical herbicide and defoliant, was used extensively during the Vietnam War from 1961 through 1971. People who were exposed to this toxic chemical have suffered long-term health effects. During this session, medical specialist William Rockenstire provides information on health concerns encountered by veterans themselves, as well as issues that their families should be aware of. Rockenstire has spent years researching the long-term effects of Agent Orange and other chemicals in use by the military. Get the facts you need from this informative presentation.

Baby & Me Storytime

Baby and Me: Drop-In Early Literacy Storytime - to be held on Monday, Oct. 31, at 10:30 a.m. and every Monday morning through the fall — offers parents and caregivers the opportunity to share time together at the library with Baby. If you have a baby, newborn to 12 months, and want to make new friends, you are welcome to join us as we sing, clap, bounce, listen to nursery rhymes and short stories, and develop early literacy skills.

No registration is required; drop in any Monday that baby's schedule allows. Storytime will be approximately 30 minutes, followed by an open playtime.

Look in the mirror

ussian novelist Fyodor Dostoyevsky had said, "the degree of civilization in a society is revealed by entering its prisons." He had said this after his imprisonment for being a government conspirator. His more than four years in prison left an impression upon him many of us will not experience. Dostoyevsky's literary work includes time as a journalist, publisher, and philosopher during a tumultuous 19th century Russia, which only further broadens the gap between his world and that of ours today in 21st century America.

Now, the degree of civilization in our own society can still be measured by how we treat the incarcerated. That's another argument for another time. But, if one is curious enough to observe how our community is as a society, one only needs to sit quietly, watch and listen while standing in a store.

Civilization is defined by Dictionary. com as "an advanced state of human society, in which a high level of culture, science, industry, and government has been reached." But, we can also derive from this that such a community, one that has achieved these standards, has developed a means to coexist. To live with one another peacefully, we assume some sense of decorum has been established. Social mores so ingrained that something like courtesy is less an obligation and more a way of life. How often did our parents train us to say "please" and "thank you" as we were children?

Yet, common courtesy is no longer so common these days.

Dostoyevsky's barometer for civilization has evolved from the penal system to something else. One could say his comments were directed more towards government and less about community. In a nation that embraces commercialism, the litmus paper is best applied to the world of customer service.

Take a trip to the mall and your observation exercise begins in the parking lot. Note those parking illegally in handicapped spots, or the spots immediately adjacent to that are designed to make room for wheel chairs. At face value, you have someone breaking the law. A brief moment to reflect reveals the fact that there is the potential someone will be unable to go home; waiting for someone else to move.

Visit your local grocer and observe the interaction between customer and clerk. The world of customer service is a level of hell not covered by Dante's "Inferno," but hell it is. Displays of common courtesy, otherwise known as manners, have been replaced with rudeness bordering on the ostentatious. Often times the customer remains curt despite pleasantries shared by the clerk. No manners. No "please"s. No "thank you"s. This goes beyond someone reserved in demeanor or preoccupied in thought. There is a collective attitude that those in customer service are indentured servants to the one wielding the credit card.

As the holiday season approaches, it's time people take responsibility for their own behaviors while out in public. There are people who walk among us who define themselves by the title they carry within the walls of their vocation; director, manager, vice president. But, perhaps you don't understand that those titles are checked at the door once you leave the office. When out in public, you're John Doe. And, when you continue to look down your nose at a college kid or single mother working hard to make ends meet, the public sees you more as an ass.

We live in a material world. No one is indebted to you just because you're a material girl.

BETHLEHEM—

With the new year looming, municipalities all over the Capital District are working towards final drafts of their respective budgets. On Oct. 10, 2001, the Town of Bethlehem was working towards wrapping up its formal budget review and preparing to pass a $25.5 town budget.

According to a 2001 Spotlight News article, the town's 2002 spending plan reflected spending changes in nearly every town department.

In 2002, then supervisor Sheila Fuller only allowed full budget presentations from large departments, including the highway department, the police department, the parks and recreation department, and he department of public works.

The Town Board at the time didn't make any changes to any of the budgets the large departments proposed, according to the article. Included in the parks and recreation budget was a long term plan for improvements and repairs to the town pool and other facilities.

Also in those budgets was funding for new vehicles, and a playground at Henry Hudson Park. It also allowed for the hiring of three new full time employees in the department of public works, and a three percent raise for all full-time town

OPINION Replace Common Core with common sense tis time to admit on the tests linked to the on the tests linked to the

T is time to admit Common Core is more about politics and money than it is about improving education.

While it is not being imposed by Washington, the Obama administration has dangled a lot of money, over $ 4.3 billion, in front of states to implement the new standards, and 45 states, including New York (with a share of over $700 million) as well as the District of Columbia opted to do so. In the past, states had a varying set of expectations about what students should learn. According to the president, the goal of the Common Core expansion was to set the bar at the same level for all of them and to better prepare the nation's students for college and career.

While I have no problem with raising the bar for our students, it flies in the face of sanity to pit students against a standard they have no reasonable chance of attaining. I coached track for a long time, and raising the bar for a six-foot high jumper would entail moving it to say six feet one inch.

The Common Core bar raising done in New York was tantamount to setting the bar at seven feet for all high school high jumpers then scratching our heads in surprise when most of them failed. As a matter of fact, roughly 6 out of 10 students across New York state failed to attain proficiency on the tests linked to the Common Core which were administered last spring. Common sense would indicate that something is amiss here.

How did this happen? The answer is simple Common Core won out over common sense. The Common Core standards were adopted without any field test. They were imposed on students all around the nation with no concept of how they would affect students, teachers or schools. The tests which were administered to the students were not linked to the curriculum they were taught. Thus, any expectation of success if sheer folly.

Once the disastrous results were released, state Education Department officials attempted to defend the testing as "setting a new standard or new benchmarks." If that was the goal, the tests should have administered as field tests or pre-tests only with no individual results being released for any student. In that manner, the benchmark could be set, the tests could be aligned to the curriculum and the students could take a fair test of their ability next spring after studying the curriculum during the school year.

President Obama and Secretary of Education John King (the former commissioner of education in New York state) often say that the Common Core standards were developed by the states and voluntarily adopted by them. This is not true. They were developed by an organization called Achieve and the National Governors Association, both of which were generously funded by the Gates Foundation. There was minimal public engagement in the development of the Common Core.

Federal law prohibits the U.S. Department of Education from prescribing any curriculum, but in this case the department figured out a clever way to evade the letter of the law. The states and the District of Columbia signed on, not because the Common Core standards were better than their own, but because they wanted a share of the federal cash.

New York and Kentucky were the first two states to connect their standardized tests to Common Core. It is becoming more evident every day that we should have passed on being first in this race.

complex in New York because the teacher evaluation system that was literally imposed by Gov. Andrew Cuomo directly links teacher evaluation to the standardized tests which are obviously flawed.

How do we straighten out this mess? Pure and simple, it is time to take a step back and to admit that a mistake has been made. If the new commissioner and state Education Department want to use the test results to establish a standard or in this case, floor for student performance so be it. Beyond that the tests should be officially declared null and void.

Finally, teacher evaluation should not be linked to the test results until a fair test is administered. By the passion shown by parents opting out of state tests the last two years the battle against Common Core is not going to blow over any time soon. Perhaps a little common sense will prevail.

Wheelchair-bound 10-year-old a member of Menands' cross-country team

By KASSIE PARISI parisik@spotlightnews.com

MENANDS — Kira Wall, 10, eyes focused front, has positioned her wheelchair at the end of a line of fellow Menands School fifth graders preparing for the signal that will start their cross-country race. Once the race begins, Kira will roll her wheelchair as fast she possibly can down and back up a concrete path to the race finish line while her teammates loop around the field behind Menands School and back through the woods.

Kira makes fast work of the first part of her course, which is down hill. She slows a little coming back up the path, pushing and fighting to get up the hill on the hot October day. But she doesn't stop. She powers her way down the course to the finish line with a look of such fierce focus and determination on her face that one would feel foolish for even suggesting that she could be tired at all.

Kira Wall makes her way back up her cross-country course to the finish line during a meet held earlier this month.

Kassie Parisi/Spotlight

Kira then hugs her father, brandishing her first place ribbon, as her teammates begin to cross the finish line as well. Kira was born a conjoined twin with her sister, and during the separation process suffered from an event akin to a spinal stroke in which the blood flow to that part of her body stopped, resulting in the loss of the use of her legs. That didn't stop her from showing up to the crosscountry informational meeting in June, without a single doubt in her mind. Upon hearing about Kira's interest in the sport, the school, and the Friendship League (the cross-country league made up of smaller kindergarten through eighth grade schools) accommodated her by providing a paved, half-mile course for her to race on.

"I think she went into this thing, guns blazing, that she was just going to do this," Kira's father, Peter Wall said.

Charlie Blanchet, third grade teacher at Menands School and the cross-country coach, said that Kira is not in the habit of letting anyone stop her from doing anything, and he knew that joining the cross-country team was something she could handle.

"I knew this was going to work because she's a tough kid," Blanchet said. "She'll put her heart into it."

True to form, Kira is a force to be reckoned with.

"I ran over a sharp stick once, and it broke the stick," she said. Continuously, she insisted that she was not nervous for her race. She knows her course well.

However, before her event, Kira didn't seem too thrilled about racing in the uncharacteristic October heat. In fact, she even mused about retiring from the sport early.

"It's my fault," she said as she practiced her course before her race. "I'd rather just sit in the shade."

But her coach and father saw right through that, and both were certain that with Kira's competitive attitude, independence, and athleticism, she would definitely be back for the next season.

"If you're ever looking for a reality check about your situation, just go talk to Kira for a little while. She'll straighten "When she makes up her mind to do something, it's done."

Peter Wall Kira's father

you right out," Wall said. "When she makes her mind up to do something, it's done."

Kira is constantly surrounded by teammates, who clearly adore her. She cheered them on while they raced, and they cheered her on, and to them, the wheelchair doesn't seem to even exist. She is a runner, a teammate, and their friend.

Wall said that Kira is aware of how her situation is different from that of other kids, but it's not something that's going to bum her out.

"She will overcome," Wall said. "She's never proven that wrong. That's really been the way she's lived."

INTERVIEW

"You have so many people with so much technology, they can make great product from in their living room. So, the playing field is so even, it's not just on face value of talent. It's so over saturated, people's attention span and the availability of time is just not there anymore. . . . If you were to start out in a career now, I think it is obviously tougher. And, I don't know if it's orientated towards careers in music as much as just being around for a couple of years and moving on."

f you ask guitar legend Eric Johnson, times are different.

Not in so much that music fans can "play" his Grammy-winning track "Cliff of Dover" through a video game. And, he's not quite speaking of his immediate impact on aspiring guitar fans who can watch instructional videos on YouTube.

When Johnson speaks about how times are different, it's in reference to the challenges younger artists face who are heading out into a music career. His own career path was laden with obstacles, playing gigs in his native Austin, Tex. 40 years ago. His bands failed, despite people taking notice of his extraordinary talent. It would be years before a rumored observation from another guitar legend handed EJ his biggest break.

The Dirty Dozen Brass Band

Two-day Bridge Jazz Fest kicks off Feb. 24

TROY — The two-day Bridge Jazz Festival will feature the Dirty Dozen Brass Band and Eldar Djangriov on Friday, Feb. 24 and The Chronicles, Cyrille Aimee and Maceo Parker on Saturday, Feb. 25.

The shows will kick off at the Troy Savings Bank Music Hall at 7:30 p.m. on Friday, and 7 p.m. on Saturday at the Massry Center for the Arts at the College of Saint Rose.

The seven-member Dirty Dozen Brass Band got its start in 1977 at the Dirty Dozen Social and Pleasure Club in New Orleans. Social and pleasure clubs date back more than a century, and were a way for black southerners who didn't have money for a funeral to celebrate the death of a loved one.

Brass bands, the early predecessors of jazz as we know it today, would follow the funeral procession from the clubs to the cemetery playing music. Then, when the family was out of earshot, it would burst into dance tunes for the onlookers in the street.

The Dirty Dozen Brass Band revitalized the tradition and has brought its mix of genre-bending romps and high-octane performances across the U.S. and more than 30 other countries on five continents.

The band has played with David Bowie, Elvis Costello, the Dave Mathews Band and the Black Crowes. Grammy-nominated pianist Eldar Djangriov is a "blend of musical intelligence, organizational savvy, enthusiasm and prowess that was all the more impressive for seeming so casual ... an ebullient impressionist," according to the New York Times. "Maybe he made a pact with Lucifer to be the greatest pianist ever."

Djangriov, who hails from Kansas City, has performed with Michael Brecker, Marian McPartland, Dave Brubeck, Wynton Marsalis among many other jazz greats.

On Saturday the sixpiece, high-energy band The Chronicles will bring its mix of jazz, funk, soul and hip-hop to the Massry Center. <image>

The Dirty Dozen Brass Band

Also on Saturday, Cyrille Aimee will bring her love of gypsy music to the stage.

The world-renowned vocalist was raised in France by a French father and Dominican mother and would sneak out of her bedroom window to nearby gypsy encampments. Years later, she would sing on street corners with friends while traveling across Europe.

On one such trip, she found herself at the Montreux Jazz Festival, where she won first prize in a vocal competition, which included the financing of her first album.

Also on stage Saturday is Maceo Parker, who's name is synonymous with Photo submitted

"funky music." Tickets for Friday's show are $28, $36 or $42. Saturday's show is $40. Festival passes are $60.

Music Hall members can purchase tickets now by phone or in person at the Box Office. Single tickets sales began on Monday, Oct. 24.

ON THE HORIZON

Umphrey's McGee The Palace — Saturday, Jan. 28

ALBANY — After 17plus years of performing more than 100 concerts annually, releasing eight studio albums and selling more than 3.5 million tracks online, Umphrey's McGee might be forgiven if it chose to rest on their laurels.

But then that wouldn't be consistent with the work ethic demonstrated by the band, which consistently attempts to raise the bar, setting and achieving new goals since forming on the Notre Dame campus in South Bend, Ind., in 1997.

After releasing their eighth studio album, "Similar Skin," the first for its own indie label, "Nothing Too Fancy (N2F) Music" (distributed by RED), the group continue; to push the envelope and test the limits.

Its brand-new studio album, "The London Session," was a dream come true for its members having been recorded in the legendary Studio Two at historic Abbey Road. The stealth recording session yielded 10 tracks in a single day, proving once again, the prolific UM waits for no one.

Despite attempts at categorizing UM, the band has devoted its craft to making its devoted followers feel as if they are part of something larger, through such technologyfueled innovations as fan-curated sets is the immersive high-end audio offering, "Headphones & Snowcones," where the pristine sound of the live soundboard mix is piped wirelessly through highend personal monitor systems and headphones.

Tickets for Umphrey's McGee at The Palace are $25, $27.50 and $29.50.

Mike Gordon The Heart Theater at The Egg — Saturday, Nov. 26

Unlike previous projects, the goal was to put together a band that would be in it for the long haul. Guitarist and longtime collaborator Scott Murawski and Gordon searched the nooks and crannies of this land for players to complete the outfit. Scott can rip guitar to no end, and he belts out with the kind of voice that at once sounds like your best friend and like the deep backwoods soul and grit of a true American hobo hero, too cool to talk in normal small-talk.

The band also includes organ and synth-master Robert Walter (from The Greyboy Allstars,) sharpshooter John Kimock on drums and percussion/ n'goni/programmer Craig Myers. Gordon jumps up and down a lot with this band. Maybe too much, but a lot. There is a lot of smiling. And frowning, but more the latter. The band's new repertoire will be augmented by secret synesthetic mad scientist gadgetry on and around the stage.

Gordon cofounded the improvisational band Phish in 1983 and released his fourth solo album, "Overstep" in 2014. On the album, he shared song writing duties with Murawski.

Gordon draws inspiration from a variety of sources from the natural world to the emotional world to his "often persistent visions."

The show is part of The Egg's Guest Music Presentations Series. It starts at 8 p.m. and tickets are $31.50.

PICK OF THE WEEK Dawn breaks upon Let Go Daylight

New line-up, new sound, plus a new CD on the horizon

By MICHAEL HALLISEY halliseym@spotlightnews.com

TROY— Let Go Daylight's Ralph Renna feels reenergized about music these days.

The four-piece rock band out of the Collar City was overhauled with a new lineup earlier this year. A shake-up Renna said, that happened because "life" gets in the way of keeping a band together:

Gets in the way of practicing.

Stands in the way of writing.

But, that all started to change in March. Dan Scleicher, Zach Leffler and Michael James paired up with Renna to form the next iteration of Let Go Daylight, and life no longer stands in the way.

"This is the newest and probably the best incarnation of the band," said Renna. "Every time we step into a jam, or to play a show, it just seems to come natural. We start playing, even unrehearsed stuff comes naturally."

Let Go Daylight is now clicking on all four cylinders. Practicing. Writing. To the point the band will hit the studios next month to record its first album in two years. Renna said a subsequent release will follow within a year.

"We haven't put out any news music since 2014, so it's time," said Renna. But, to whet the appetite of fans there is a tentative plan to soon release a 13-minute track (with a possible bonus track) called "The Low Down and Dirty."

Renna said the name of the unreleased track pays homage to the band's sound, which he described as "gritty, bluesy, and more heart-felt."

Since the band formed four year's ago, Let Go Daylight's sound has been steeped into the influences of Nirvana, Black Sabbath, Metallica and the Misfits; defined best by Renna screaming out vocals. However, he said, he's now extending himself beyond his comfort level and harmonizing the lyrics.

Music fans will catch a glimpse of this new line-up Friday, Oct. 28 at the Dinosaur Bar-B-Que in Troy, when Let Go Daylight shares the bill with Phillips Head for a free show.

WHAT'S HAPPENING

The LateShip Dutch Apple Cruise ship — Saturday, Oct. 29

ALBANY — What better way to celebrate the release of a new album and Halloween with one big cruise?

Capital District-based band The LateShift is having a CD release party for its new EP, "Forks & Knives," aboard the Dutch Apple Saturday, Oct. 29, at 6:30 p.m., and electronic duo Titanics is along for the ride. And because Halloween is around the corner, fans are asked to come in costume and enjoy a full bar along with the cruise. Prizes will be awarded for the best costumes, and everyone aboard "The LateShip" will receive a copy of "Forks & Knives."

Women's self defense workshop

ALBANY — Full Circle Fitness-NY is hosting a one-day, women's self defense workshop at 251 New Karner Road, on Saturday, Nov. 12 beginning at 10 a.m.

It's difficult to think about, but almost every day we hear news of someone being attacked on either the news or social media. These attacks occur wihtout warning and when individuals least expect it.

The hour-and-a-half workshop will focus on several aspects to help enhance one's situational awareness and personal confidence. You will learn the basics of self-defense, followed by other exercises that include how to escape a choke hold, how to avoid becoming a target and how to increase your chances of walking away from potential danger.

In this workshop you learn the basics of self defense and how to avoid becoming a victim.

Admission is $20. Space is limited so registration is recommended. For information, call 955-6924. To register for the program, visit http://bit. ly/2dqtQIH.

The need for self defense

By DAN ROMAND news@spotlightnews.com

ic ws@spoingninews.cc

he other day I was talking with a friend of mine (Let's call her Leslie).

We were talking about how quickly it seemed to be getting darker each day and how she was nervous about leaving work and walking to her car because it was so dark out.

Leslie relayed to me how the other day she was walking to her car and noticed a man just sitting in his car.

She had never seen the car before and it caught her attention. As she said to me: "He probably was waiting to pick someone up from work but I just didn't know"

The sad truth is she was right to be nervous.

On average more than 600 women are assaulted in the US each and every day. Think about it for a moment. It seems like every day either in social media or on the news we hear about a woman being assaulted.

The good news is that Leslie had taken a self defense seminar from me previously how to handle the situation. In this case she chose to walk across the street to avoid walking by the car and also had taken some other measures that I had taught her. As we continued to talk she relayed and because of it she had a better idea of

to me how thankful she was that she had taken the seminar and that she was surprised how much of what we had gone over came back to her. As she said:

"That hour I invested in the seminar may have just saved my life"

Sadly, however, many women don't think they need to take a self defense course.

They feel as if it will never happen to them or that someone (husband, father, brother) will be there to protect them in the event it did happen.

However, that isn't usually the case. So I thought I would share my top 5 reasons why every woman should take a self defense seminar or workshop.

1. It helps build confidence: Many people lack self confidence in their ability to protect themselves when they are faced

Grilled Steak with Chili Molasses Marinade

By ANN LINDA CIOTOLI news@spotlightnews.com

CULINARY ARTS

Ingredients — severs several

- 1/4 cup brown sugar
- 1/4 cup molasses 3 Tbs. soy sauce (good quality)
- 2 Tbs. rice vinegar
- 5 cloves garlic minced
- 1 Tbs. fresh ginger peeled and chopped or sliced fine
- 1 Tbs. chili powder

1/4 tsp. fresh ground black pepper 2 lbs. tri-tip, flank, sirloin, skirt, or any other tougher cut of steak that is best for marinating

Preparation

In a bowl whisk brown sugar, molasses, soy sauce, rice vinegar, chili powder, garlic, ginger, and black pepper, until dissolved. Place steak in a glass dish, and pour marinade over the steak for one hour. Turn steak at least once. Bring a grill pan to medium-high heat. Remove steak from the marinade, and reserve. Grill steak 5 to 7 minutes on each side. Let the steak rest for 10 to 12 minutes. Pour the marinade, and juices from steak, in a small sauce pan. Bring to a low-boil, and cook for 10 minutes. Pour the sauce over the steak, slice and serve.

Angelo's Tavolo 'date worthy'

By ELIZABETH SCHAEFER news@spotlightnews.com

SCOTIA — Sometimes you just need comfort food, but in an atmosphere that makes you feel special. We had been meaning to try Angelo's Tavolo for a while, (we have visited a number of the other Mazzone family's establishments), but never quite made it Tavolo. It is located within Glen Sanders Mansion, so if you don't know it is there, it isn't necessarily a place that you just drive by and decide to go to. We made reservations (as usual) and bundled up, as the temps last weekend had dropped quite a bit and headed out.

I had taken a look at its menu online (I almost always do this) and had a few choices in mind before we even arrived. We were seated immediately, and our water glasses were filled before we even had a chance to open our menus. The hostess who seated us explained that it had a breast cancer awareness fundraiser going on. The drink (pink) was a fruit flavored martini and if you purchase one at each of their locations during the month, you receive a gift card. It sounded like a great deal for an important cause.

Our server arrived quickly, and the promotional drink sounded delicious, so I decided to give it a try. The boyfriend chose one of its specialty bourbon drinks, after the advice of the server. I also placed an order for its lobster bisque, which I knew we would in all likelihood share.

The atmosphere was so relaxing, that it didn't matter to either of us how long anything took to arrive. Our drinks did come fairly quickly however, but mine came first and our server explained there had been a mix up with the boyfriends, apologized profusely, and promised he would return with it momentarily. He went out of the way to apologize and make sure we were taken care of, when in reality, neither of us would have even noticed. My drink was delicious; it tasted like a refreshing summer juice drink!

Just after his drink arrived, so did the lobster bisque. It was poured at the table, the bowl having a lovely layer of lobster at the bottom, with the server pouring the bisque into the bowl. There aren't many words to properly describe the soup, as it was just perfect. The broth was thick, but not overly thick like chowder, and extremely flavorful. It had just the right amount of spice, and the fresh lobster in the bottom of the bowl brought all the flavors together. We did end up splitting it,

TROY— The Sage Colleges will host Stephen Gottlieb, LL.B., the Jay and Ruth Caplan Distinguished Professor at Albany Law School, on Thursday, Oct. 27, at 7:30 p.m. in Bush Memorial Center on its Russell Sage campus in Troy.

Gottlieb will deliver the 2016 Sherman David Spector Lecture, "Unfit for Democracy: The Roberts Court and the Breakdown of American Politics." Gottlieb argues that constitutional law without a focus on the future of democratic government is incoherent and dangerous. Approaching the decisions of the Roberts Court from political science, historical, comparative and legal perspectives, Gottlieb will discuss the clash between the decisions of the Roberts Court and the evidence about what leads democracies to fail.

The lecture is free and open to the public.

Schenectady Civic Players present Dog Sees God

SCHENECTADY — "Dog Sees God: Confessions of a Teenage Blockhead," written by Bert V. Royal and directed by Mike Silvia, will be presented as a free staged reading Sunday, Oct. 30, at 2:30 p.m. at the Schenectady Civic Playhouse, 12 South Church Street, in Schenectady's historic Stockade district.

"Dog Sees God," a parody of the Peanuts comic strip and TV specials, explores the dark, complex teenage years of the Peanuts Gang. It sees the eclectic gang of rascals trudging through its high school years, embodying a tone and language that audiences are entirely unaccustomed to seeing them in.

Civic Players and Capital District actors featured in this "Dog Sees God" production are David DiPaola, Destiny Coons, Evan Jones, Brian McBride Land, Jennifer Lefsyk, Sierra Lynch, John Mac Schnurr and Cait Webber.

The play contains adult language and mature themes, and is not suggested for young audiences. Admission is free, and there are no advance reservations.

NorthEast Theatre Ensemble presents an ancient Greek play

ALBANY — The NorthEast Theatre Ensemble continues its production of the ancient Greek play, "Lysistrata," Fridays through Sundays at Steamer No. 10 Theatre, 500 Western Ave., Albany.

Written by Aristophanes, the bawdy comedy is set in Greece during the Peloponnesian War. When the women of Athens grow tired of their husbands' endless war with the Spartans, Lysistrata brings women from both citystates together and offers a solution: withhold sex from the men until they agree to stop fighting. Putting the plan into action, however, proved more difficult and more hilarious than anyone imagined.

Showtimes are 8 p.m. Fridays and Saturdays, and 3 p.m. Sundays through Nov. 6. Tickets are $20 for adults and $10 for students and seniors.

MALTA — A couple times a year the kind folks at Nanola and WEQX spoil all of us with a show of such caliber in a great, intimate setting — for free. It's usually a late breaking event and another reason to keep Nanola in your rotation for live music. So in my latest installment of all that is great with being a music fan in the Capital District,

I bring you Vancouver raised, Brooklyn-based, electronic production duo Bob Moses from Nanola. Folks, this is a luxury for any NIGHT SPECIAL music fan that I don't take for granted and you shouldn't either. Preaching complete! Bob Moses resides between organic band and electronic production

project and it seems comfortable and natural living there. Their hybrid of Deep House Rhythms, great guitar hooks and singer songwriter vocals gives us a fresh sound from this duo comprised of Tom Howie and Jimmy Vallance. On this night the duo had added a drummer that helped them convince the crowd that Bob Moses wasn't just a house DJ, but a full fledge band.

The crowd at Nanola was all in during most of Bob Moses 70 minute set and Jimmy Vallance continued to work the room with a call and response like any good DJ at a dance club. It was a different spin (no pun intended) to see a band basically fronted by a DJ as opposed to the lead singer.

At about the hour mark it seemed that they had lost the crowd a little but I blame that on a Tuesday night. As soon as Bob Moses served up its current single "Tearing Me Up" the crowd was back in a hurry to sing along to the eight-minute version of this great song! No encore was delivered but I was okay with that since the band probably gave us an extra 20 minutes compared to its normal set. After

Sloan celebrates a landmark at Daryl's House

By MIKE KOHLI nysmusic.com

PAWLING - Sloan has been at it for 25 years, but could easily have been a footnote in Canadian music history if not for their fortitude. Formed at the Nova Scotia College of Art and Design in Halifax in 1991, the alt-rock quartet has made a name for itself in its homeland, winning several East Coast Music Awards and a Juno Award for Best Alternative Album -1996's One Chord to Another. This album, however, almost never happened at all.

Sloan was signed to Geffen Records early on, as label executives rushed to find the next Nirvana. As part of a burgeoning Halifax music scene that included Eric's Trip and Thrush Hermit, that saw a gold rush to the maritime province from the labels, Sloan was the band that survived.

The band's first two albums Smeared and Twice Removed were released on Geffen in 1992 and 1994 respectively. After a dispute with the label over lack of promotion for Twice Removed, the band took some time off, leading some to believe they had broken up. Sloan selfproduced and self-released the follow-up to Twice Removed, One Chord to Another. Sunday night, the band rolled into Daryl's House Club in Pawling for an intimate rendering of that landmark album on its 20th anniversary of release.

Sloan has made its bones sharing writing duties, vocals and instruments among the band's four original members: Chris Murphy, Jay Ferguson, Patrick Pentland and Andrew Scott. Power chords, hand claps and Beatle-esque harmonies are hallmarks of the Sloan sound. All these elements were firmly in place for the intimate audience of hard core Sloan fans this night.

Make no mistake, this is not a simple pop band. To survive 25 years in the business requires more than just catchy songs. The lyrics from each of the members reveal a depth that belies the catchiness of the music.

Throughout the history

IN BRIEF

Gov't Mule to hit The Palace

ALBANY — Gov't Mule, in the midst of touring in support of its archival album "The Tel-Star Sessions," hits The Palace Theatre stage Saturday, Oct. 29.

"The Tel-Star Sessions" is comprised of never before released demo sessions made in June 1994. Remastered and newly mixed, the album features the recordings of the band's original line-up: Warren Haynes, Allen Woody and Matt Abts.

Gov't Mule initially started in 1994 as a side project for both Haynes and Woody, from their work with the Allman Brothers Band. Abts was brought into the fold after playing with Woody in the Dickey Betts Band.

Tickets are on sale at the Palace Theatre Box Office, and through Ticketmaster. Visit ticketmaster.com.

of pop music, many of the most poignant songs have carried a sense of darkness. The Beatles exhibited this to the extreme in "Run For Your Life" from the Rubber Soul album. And while Sloan has never intro'ed a song as bluntly as John Lennon did with,"I'd rather see you dead little girl than to be with another man," a quick glance at Sloan's song titles bears this out:

"Everything You've Done Wrong," Nothing Left to Make Me Wanna Stay." Sloan has the songwriting chops to turn a subject such as unrequited love into dark poetry with a pop melody.

Daryl's House Club is an offshoot of Philly Soul legend and half of the Rock and Roll Hall of Fame duo Hall and Oates, Daryl Hall's popular internet, now MTV Live show, Live From Daryl's House. Hall opened the club in Pawling in 2014 as a venue to feature intimate gigs similar to those seen on his show. Tickets are sold as reserved seating or standing tickets and all reserved seats are at tables, allowing patrons to enjoy a meal and some drinks prior to and during a performance. The main performance space has room for a couple of hundred patrons. Wait staff meander in and out of the seated areas, taking orders and delivering dishes. It makes for a a dinner theater type atmosphere that doesn't much allow for audience participation during a show, especially one for a band with such uptempo music.

This tour is a celebration of the band's watershed moment. They're playing the One Chordalbum in its entirety during the first set of each show. However, the music they were celebrating almost seemed like an afterthought as patrons ate their dinner during the performance. Murphy commented on this fact a couple of times during the set, "Finish chewing your food and sing along with us on this one," he said, introducing "G Turns to D."

Despite the limitations on audience participation, though with many in the crowd being in their late 30s/early 40s, there may not have been a whole lot of physical participation anyway. The band rallied through the album in its entirety. The participation in the chugging "G Turns to D" included many hand claps and singing along from those in attendance. A smooth transition into the Beatles, by way of Pet Sounds-era Beach Boys, "A Side Wins" had fans swaying in their seats.

The set concluded with "400 Metres," a song that wouldn't be out of place on a Pavement album with its speak-talk lyrics. The hypnotizing keyboard presence mixed with Pentland's guitar ended the set with a chill vibe reminiscent a late night '70s FM radio show.

"Coax Me," opened the second set, encouraging the devoted to sing along. This opened the doors to a rousing second set featuring many of Sloan's greatest hits, including what is probably its best known song, "Money City Maniacs" as well as "Losing California," a song requested all night long by some of the more boisterous fans in attendance.

The band seamlessly traded instruments and vocals throughout the night. Murphy stepped behind Scott's sparse drum kit while Scott grabbed a guitar and sang and Ferguson took up the bass several times. The formula of equals behind this band is what has kept it going for 25 years. All four members contribute to the whole. And while there's a formula to the sound, Sloan is far from formulaic. Their songs echo past eras, yet remain uniquely their own.

Those in attendance on this night were the Sloan faithful in downstate New York. Some traveling great distances to see their cult heroes in the intimacy of Daryl's House. They were treated to a special show from one of music's hardest working bands.

In a more fair world, Sloan would be playing a sold out show at Madison Square Garden rather than a small downstate club in front of noshing patrons on a Sunday night in October. Somehow, you can't help but wonder if Sloan prefers it this way though.

Sloan's One Chord to Another 20th Anniversary Tour continues throughout the U.S. in November, finishing with a show in Buffalo on Nov. 19.

Important Information for Breastfeeding Mothers

Lawrence Kotlow DDS

As a parent you have great expectations for motherhood. Unfortunately for many mothers, breastfeeding becomes a toe-curling, painful experience because of poor or missed diagnoses of tethered oral tissues such as tongueties and lip-ties. Dr. Kotlow's new book, SOS 4 TOTS, demystifies why. Dr. Kotlow has been treating infants for breastfeeding difficulties due to tongue and upper lipties since 1974. In recent years, with the increased number of mothers desiring to breastfeed their infants, he has revised countless abnormal frenum attachments of what are now referred to as "tethered oral tissues" (TOTs). Don't let anyone tell you it is a "Placebo" effect when these tissues are revised. Thousands of infants and mothers have been able to successfully resolve these issues and have a pleasurable, successful breastfeeding experience. No need for your baby to undergo needless general anesthesia or spend time in the hospital, using the state of the art in laser oral surgery, infants and older children can safely and quickly have these tissues corrected. No need to have most infants take adult acid reflux drugs when most infants having reflux do so due to swallowing air. Air induced reflux, not adult acid reflux! Rekindle that bond you wanted with your infant.

If you are a mother who has been suffering needlessly; there may be times when you will cry as you read this book because you will realize the problems are not your fault; the professionals on whom you were depending for help had a basic lack of understanding. SOS 4 TOTS seeks to expose the myths about breastfeeding and heal the heartbreak to make breastfeeding a joy.

ALBUM REVIEW

Green Day serves fresh dish, no 'Dookie'

'Revolution Radio' goes back to band's original angst and attitude of the early '90s

By NEIL BENJAMIN JR. nysmusic.com

remember it vividly: On a long bus ride for an elementary school field trip, one of my oldest friends handed me a cassette that would be the very first turning point on the musical journey that my life has become. The year was 1993, and I was very much into rap at the tender age of 8. Caleb, who had a serious disdain for my musical choices at the time, took my Walkman and inserted a recently released tape of "Kerplunk," Green Day's second album. I'd never heard of the band, and was not sure what to expect. The snarling growl that accompanied Billie Joe Armstrong's guitar slapped my eardrums around on the opening track, "2,000 Light Years Away," and I didn't know what to do. It was odd, at first, but as I made my way through the tracks, I became quickly hooked on the pop-punk that would soon propel Green Day into superstardom.

And, this was only the beginning of what became my first, and biggest, band obsession. I made my parents get me their debut album, "1,039 Smoothed Out Slappy Hours," which was a compilation of all their earliest material. I loved Green Day before anyone knew who they were.

Later that year, a friend and I devised a plan to get our parents to take us to see them at Union College in Schenectady. To make a very long and boring story short, the two of us ended up by ourselves at the concert, swinging and swaying in a rowdy group of maybe 1,000 people, and I will never forget the awe I felt seeing a trio of early 20s kids playing the fastest and catchiest rock and roll on the planet. It started a live music obsession that, to this day, comes first in my life after my family and work.

I can talk about how "Dookie" is my all-time favorite album ever released by anyone, or about how Insomniac spoke to my pre-pubescent self better than anyone, or how "Nimrod," while not universally liked, showed how Green Day can shake things up. "What about Warning," which featured a bevy of instruments which helped the band veer away from three-chord poppunk? Or how "American Idiot" vaulted the band back to super popularity and brought music and politics together again? I don't think we need to talk much about "21st Century Breakdown," or their quickly released trio of albums, "Uno," "Dos" and "Tres," which were not Green Day's best efforts.

Now, 23 years later, Green Day just dropped its 12th studio album, "Revolution Radio," and I have to say that for a band I idolized growing up, then grew to despise a bit in the mid-2000s, they have reeled me right back in. Gone are the days of songs about masturbation, moving out of mom's house and staying up all night snorting meth.

And, while it has some political undertones, "Revolution Radio" really is a 12song collection of angst, anger, mortality and youthful remembrance by Armstrong, Mike Dirnt and Tre Cool. And it's fast, loud and mean. It's chock full of emotion and that contempt that made me fall head over heels 23 years ago.

"Somewhere Now" starts the album with a Clash kind of feel. Its catchy chorus and clever wording simply give way to the meat of this album. "Bang Bang," the first single released, shoots out at you like a bullet from a stolen gun. "Daddy's little psycho and mommy's little soldier" is a line that hits close to home, as this was me as a child. Great choice for a single, and it's mean as hell with that charm that only Green Day can insert into a morbid song.

"Revolution Radio" is the catchiest song on the album, and is as close to classic Green Day as it gets. Think the anger and destruction captured throughout Insomniac and this is what you're getting in the title track. "Say Goodbye" opens with a vibe of The Wall-era Pink Floyd, then quickly transforms into a preachy ditty that touches on, presumably, the recent spate of violence in this country involving police.

"Outlaws" is a love song that misses its mark. It is the only song that seems out of place here. "Bouncing Off The Wall" is another throwback to Armstrong's wilder days, before he went to rehab a few years ago.

"Still Breathing," "Youngblood" and "Too Dumb To Die" are a trilogy of songs that I have listened to over and over in the last 72 hours. "Youngblood" is a punk rock love song that ends with the subject saying "but f--k you I'm from Oakland" and is a great way to close it out.

"Too Dumb To Die" is about reckless behavior from the band's past, and became my favorite song from the band in many, many years. It's the most punk rock thing on the entire album, and maybe of the band's career. "Troubled Times," "Forever Now" and "Ordinary World" touch back on the societal and political unrest in the country, without slamming it down our throats like "American Idiot" did.

Overall, this is the best Green Day album, in my opinion, since "Nimrod." Green Day returned to what made the world fall in love with them and made it angrier, faster, louder and catchier.

I am certainly back into this band like it's 1997.

A special pink ribbon Italy trip in May

Win two seats on global travel leader Trafalgar's exclusive 11-day Rome to Venice exploration benefiting Susan G. Komen aising much-needed funds for breast cancer research and community health programs and bringing focus to the cause in anticipation of National Breast Cancer Awareness Month this October, global guided vacations leader Trafalgar (trafalgar.com) has partnered with Susan G. Komen® to launch a special hand-crafted itinerary, the Pink Ribbon Italy Trip, taking place May 19-29, 2017. For each seat filled on this limited, special-edition trip sold now through May 19, 2017 in the United States, Trafalgar will donate $1,000 to Susan G. Komen.

Traveling through Rome, Florence, Pisa, San Gimignano, Verona, Venice and more, guests are invited to explore the best cities and picturesque villages of Italy, enjoying Trafalgar's unequalled Insider Experiences along the way. Highlights include savoring delicious Chianti wine over a unique Be My Guest dinner at the home of a local Italian family in the rolling Tuscan Hills; gaining cultural insight into Italian cuisine by shopping at a local market with charismatic Chef Libero for a cooking class back at his restaurant; and joining the tens of thousands participating in the inspiring Susan G. Komen Italia Race for the Cure® 5K walk/run in Rome, now the largest Race for the Cure® event in the world.

Starting at $3,699 per person (land only)*, the 11-day Pink Ribbon Italy Trip offers travelers a stress-free way to experience the best of Italy to support a good cause. The vacation package includes quality hotel accommodations, many meals, luxury coach transportation, the expertise of a local Travel Director and sightseeing with VIP entry to the icons plus unique Insider Experiences, only from Trafalgar. Visit the trip itinerary page www.trafalgar.com/ simplypink for more information.

For National Breast Cancer Awareness Month this October, Trafalgar's #SimplyPink social contest offers participants a chance to win two seats on the trip. To enter, post "Simply..." followed by a one-word adjective for what the fight against breast cancer means to you (e.g. "Simply... inspiring") on Facebook, Twitter and Instagram (accompanying stories and photos welcome), adding #SimplyPink to the post and ensure post privacy is set to public. The favorite grand prize global winner announced in November will be awarded two seats on the trip, plus three runners-up get a $200 travel voucher.^ Full contest details and social posts can be seen online.

"Breast cancer is a disease that touches us all. At Trafalgar, we believe in supporting initiatives that directly benefit the world and communities we live in, and the fight against breast cancer is close to our hearts," said Trafalgar CEO Gavin Tollman. "That's why we've created this special global trip for survivors, advocates and inspired travelers alike to lend their support by joining the world's largest Race for the Cure®while discovering Italy's most amazing destinations."

This exclusively-designed trip is a Join Trafalgar sustainable tourism initiative, part of Trafalgar's commitment to support and give back to the communities it visits, and welcomes travelers—women, men and children ages five and up, from all around the world.

Seats are limited and expected to sell out quickly. For more information, visit www.trafalgar.com/simplypink. To book, call 866-544-4434 or contact your travel agent. Terms and Conditions: *From July 14, 2016 to May 19, 2017, Trafalgar will donate to Susan G. Komen® $1,000 for each charity trip to Italy sold in the United States. The advertised Pink Ribbon Italy Trip requires minimum numbers to depart, should these not be met Trafalgar reserves the right to alter or cancel arrangements. with a confrontation. By taking a seminar and learning ways to avoid the confrontation or how to handle it if you can't avoid it you'll feel more secure in your abilities should you find yourself in that situation. Studies have shown that the more confident you are in your ability to handle it the less likely you are to be in a bad situation or to get seriously harmed if you are.

2. Similarly, you won't feel helpless anymore: Often when women find themselves in a bad situation they panic or freeze. Essentially they become helpless. Knowledge is power and in a quality workshop you'll learn how to cope with the situation and learn techniques that can help you to escape

3. It will help you make the right choices on how to escape: Many women think they know what to do in a dangerous situation.

Ever said to your girlfriend if a man attacked me I'd just kick him in the "you know where"! Well, men learn to defend themselves at a very early age and will know how to protect themselves from that response.

In a self defense workshop you'll learn other methods you can use to get away. Short, tall, muscular or skinny you can defend yourself against anyone if you are prepared for it.

You won't become a black belt in a single workshop but, you don't need to be.

More importantly, you'll learn how to avoid getting into those situations in the first place.

4. It will educate you: All those scenarios you've run through your mind or all those questions you've wanted to ask but never did can be answered during a seminar.

What do I do if someone grabs me from behind? What do I do if I'm being choked? How do I get out of being pushed up against a wall or on the ground? You'll learn ways to handle all those situations and a few more and be able to get answers to those questions you've always wanted to ask but likely haven't

5. It will give you peace of mind: Truthfully, no seminar or workshop can prepare you for every situation you might face but at the very least it will help prepare you and give you some guidance on how to handle a situation or better yet avoid it completely.

Like Leslie most women have thought about this topic at some point or had that moment when their instincts told them they were at risk.

The difference is Leslie took action to prepare herself and when the hair on the back of her neck raised up know how to avoid a possible bad situation.

Interested in taking a self defense workshop? See the news items on page B12 announcing a self defense workshop.

amount of spice, and the fresh lobster in the bottom of the bowl brought all the flavors together. We did end up splitting it, as it was much too large for me to eat by myself (and then also have dinner).

In the meantime, we decided on our meals, and both of us were caught between two different choices. Our server immediately told us which ones to choose, and I always prefer to take the advice of the server (especially if they are as knowledgeable as this one seemed to be).

We were served bread after we finished the soup and while we waited for our meals, to arrive. At this point, I noticed that the boyfriend had finished his drink, which is unlike him, but can only mean that he really enjoyed it. Our server came back to check in on us, and brought him another drink, "on the house" for the original (very minor) inconvenience. It was such a nice touch, we were both actually a bit shocked.

As our dinners arrived, I was glad I had not finished the entire soup. As mentioned, I went with the servers recommendation and chose the spaghetti and meatballs. This was not your typical spaghetti and meatballs, it was perfectly cooked spaghetti in a light vodka cream sauce. It was served with four of their famous chicken meatballs. The server had raved about the meatballs, and I could instantly tell why. The first bite was just perfect, they were moist, full of traditional meatball flavors but the chicken added a special quality that can't compare to anything I have had prior. The pasta and sauce was also wonderful, cooked just passed al dente with enough sauce to add flavor but not drown the meatballs. It was by far one of the best pasta dishes I have ever had.

My boyfriend had chosen the swordfish, which was served with a kale type vegetable. He is often skeptical about ordering fish out, he really despises dry fish, but decided to order it at the servers advice. He was really happy with his decision. He generally eats more quickly than me anyway, but he liked his so much that I had barely even touched mine and he was done!

I took my time eating, and my date enjoyed the remainder of his drink. Our server stopped by occasionally to check on us, and chat a little when he felt he could without intruding. Once I was done, we decided on coffee (for him) and tea (for me) and they brought over (again complimentary) biscotti. The biscotti, too, was delicious. We even ended up taking that home along with my leftovers.

Our night out, which was originally just meant to relax us, turned out to be one the nicest nights we have had in awhile. I highly recommend you make a date to head over to Tavolo, and if you do, please ask for Eric. I rarely mention servers by name, but Eric went above and beyond and it was important (to both of us) that we give him special notice.

Fulfilled Democracy Everywhere, Instantly & Practicably

Because it gives an equal chance of winning to all parties, Ranked Ballot, RB, voters ranking candidates in order of preference, is most just & most free. Because of this great light in the eyes of the world & cause it always picks the one most in the middle, while giving an equal chance of winning to all proposals, on a case by case basis, RB is more top-dead-center counter-extremist than all the many recent retrenchments combined. By its shining example it will cause the whole world to follow us. The "additive" form of RB is counting the first choices, & then, if no one has 50%, adding in the next choices, & so on, till someone finally does. The coming Maine & Benton County Oregon referendums on RB this November could be truly transformative. Potentially the first right-leaning locale to support RB, Maine could be the new shot heard round the world. See RCVMaine.com & betterballotbenton.com.

RB plus "Organized Communications" (OC, randomly assigned discussion groups electing reps) (by RB) to higher & higher levels, 'til one group remains) (to guide in the rest) will install RB, instantly, globally & extra-legally even in states without Initiative. Initiatives and Referendums in the United States on Wikipedia reveals that the hope for the initiative as a wide-spread solution is predictably variegated.

If we're going to be held responsible by our enemies for the actions of our government, we should want the most light-footed democracy possible. RB is a pointed, pertinent, practicable, profound & nonpartisan reform. Even the most cautious would have no reason to fear publicly espousing it. There is no other area of our lives in which we do not automatically see the point of greater competition.

RB is the answer to all things. It will give us All Powers to Their Lowest Appropriate Level, A PERFECT MARRIAGE OF Rich & Poor, Left & Right, FREEDOM & JUSTICE,

Tradition & Modernity, Young & Old, Red, Black & White, Woman & Man & Palestinian & Jew, Justice with an Eye for Freedom & Freedom with an Eye for Justice, A Head for the Headless (tech) Beast & An Ecological Politics, but it will not change the spirit of anyplace, only give them more nuance. Had there been RB, none of the evils of history would have ever happened. For those with fear of outside control of voting machines, the larger the discussion groups, the fewer the levels needed. Perhaps the House should be so chosen. Cause them to take notice.

"I was told that [Prince] helped me get signed to Warner Brothers," said Johnson. "I never met him, and never had any interaction with him. It was all kind of hearsay. It came from reliable sources, so it could have been true. He may have seen or heard something I had done and put in a call just out of kindness. I never met him, so I never substantiated that."

Johnson signed on with Warner Brothers's record label in 1984, nearly 10 years after he set out on his own music career with a Electromagnets, a local band that is now the answer to trivia questions. Johnson would bounce between record labels since then, but the break launched a decorated career, winning accolades and earning respect among peers and press. Rolling Stone magazine has him among the Top 100 guitar players of all time. As astounding it may seem to reflect upon how long Johnson struggled to receive national attention, he sees today's aspiring musicians having to navigate a different world than he did.

"It's a whole different ball game now," said Johnson. "It's a lot harder for someone to just jump into a career simply because they're talented or have something. You don't have the same corridors of making hardware and feeling your wears, out there... You have so many people with so much technology, they can make great product from in their living room. So, the playing field is so even, it's not just on face value of talent. It's so over saturated, people's attention span and the availability of time is just not there anymore. ... If you were to start out in a career now, I think it is obviously tougher. And, I don't know if it's orientated towards careers in music as much as just being around for a couple of years and moving on."

Johnson sees the need to diversify one's talents as a musician. Within himself, he's not only a musician, songwriter or vocalist, in the business aspect of his world he is also a record producer. As for his sound, he's long delved into different genres of music. Ever since he first sat down in front of a piano.

Yeah, the piano is actually his first love. And, he plays it on "EJ," too. Johnson said the piano is the best instrument to compose music. Each of his songs are first composed on piano before he goes to guitar.

"Ever since I was young, I've played piano and acoustic guitar in my private life," said Johnson. Long hailed as one of the world's preeminent electric guitarists, Johnson celebrates his acoustic side with his 12th album, "EJ." Emphasizing his skills as a singer-songwriter, his first completely unplugged album is also his most immediate and intimate." This type of music has always been a part of me, but I never showcased it on any kind of bigger level, like a full acoustic record. With "EJ," I just decided to be more honest with myself and everybody, and show more of my personal side."

Johnson self-produced the album and performed nine of its 13 tracks unaccompanied in his Austin, Texas Saucer Sound studio. The other tracks feature guest musicians such as renowned guitarist Doyle Dykes, violinist Molly Emerman, cellist John Hagen, and longtime Johnson accompanists Tommy Taylor and Wayne Salzmann on drums and Roscoe Beck and Chris Maresh on acoustic bass. It's now 30 years since his breakthrough solo release "Tones," which brought him national recognition. This latest album showcases nine original compositions and four covers in an all-acoustic album. It's something he's always wanted to do, as it provides a more intimate experience between the musician and the audience.

What's most telling of Johnson's continued growth as an artist also be the manner in which he produced his latest album. After winning the Grammy Award for Best Rock Instrumental Performance in 1991, it took Johnson nearly five years to follow up his platinum-selling album "Ah Via Musicom." It was reported he had scrapped several completed tracks before ultimately releasing "Venus Isle."

"Almost all of that material [for "EJ"] was cut live," Johnson said. "Some of the songs I actually sang and played at the same time – just live in the studio. Recording this way gave it more of an honest realism and organic emotion. Especially on the acoustic, you just have to get in there and play."

On the original compositions "Wonder," "Fatherly Downs," and "All Things You Are," Johnson frames his voice with his prized 1980 Martin D-45, a gift from his late father. He plays the steel-string on his superlative instrumentals "Once Upon a Time in Texas," "All Things You Are," and "Song for Irene." He conjures the beautiful, pensive tones of "Serinidad," another original instrumental, on a Ramirez nylon-string guitar. A spirited steel-string arrangement of Simon and Garfunkel's "Mrs. Robinson" rounds out the solo guitar tracks.

Johnson recasts another Simon and Garfunkel favorite, "Scarborough Fair," for voice and piano, and plays piano on the originals "Water Under the Bridge," "November," and "Wrapped in a Cloud," an ensemble track with acoustic bass, cello, drums, and percussion. In a move that's sure to surprise his fans, Johnson rearranged Jimi Hendrix' "One Rainy Wish" for guitar and piano, capping the performance with a jazz-inflected piano solo. Rounding out the record is Johnson and guest guitarist Doyle Dykes' superlative cover of Les Paul and Mary Ford's 1951 classic, "The World Is Waiting for the #### Sunshine."

Throughout his career, Johnson has approached music as a healing force, a way to enhance a listener's consciousness and conjure joy and inspiration.

"That's what I've always appreciated most about other artists," said Johnson. "Some artists inspire us to wake up and get back to the clarity of consciousness. With this record, I'm trying to do that too, because I appreciate it so much in other people."

Johnson said he finds his latest inspiration in another band out of Austin, Explosions in the Sky.

"The fact it's electric guitar music, but it's different," said Johnson, of the instrumental rock band that has been featured heavily in the critically acclaimed television series "Friday Night Lights." "It's not your typical guitar. It's refreshing. It's unique sounding in the orchestration of it. It's nice to hear someone doing something a little different with guitar and metal music. It's inspiring to me. Makes me think about what I want to do with the guitar."

taken for granted or missed.

Interesting Factoid: Jimmy Vallance's dad, Jim Vallance, was quite a song writer/musician before he retired. He's credited with writing a bunch of songs. Most notably, he was Bryan Adams writing partner and co-wrote many of the hits including his breakout hit "Cuts Like a Knife" and "Summer of 69." He also wrote "Rag Doll" (Aerosmith) and "Don't Forget Me When I'm Gone" (Glass Tiger). It must be in the genes, folks.

Home Made Theater holds open auditions

SARATOGA SPRINGS — Home Made Theater announces open auditions for its February production of Ken Ludwig's "The Game's Afoot" Sunday, Nov. 6, and Monday, Nov. 7, from 6:30 to 8 p.m. at the Spa Little Theater in Saratoga Spa State Park.

This hilarious play brings murder, mystery, mayhem and madcap adventure to the stage. Broadway superstar William Gillette, famous the world over for his portrayal of Sherlock Holmes, has invited fellow cast members to his opulent home for a dinner party. But when one of the guests winds up dead, Gillette will have to summon every ounce of Sherlock he can to solve the mystery. This play will keep you laughing and trying to figure out whodunit until the final bow.

The cast consists of three men and five women, ranging in age from early 20s to late 70s. Actors should bring a current photo and resume. Photos cannot be returned. Auditions will be from the script.

Production dates are weekends, Feb. 11-26. Rehearsals begin Jan. 3. No appointments are necessary for the audition.

For a detailed flyer or questions about the audition, contact Home Made Theater at 587-4427, or visit their web site at homemadetheater.org.

Presidential Trivia Night at historical society

SCHENECTADY — Think you know Abraham Lincoln? Are you made about James Madison?

ow many of you are willing to admit that television has influenced your life? We often recite anecdotes shared by our grandparents, but we've all learned a little something about how to act, think and treat others from outside our family dynamic.

Dave Marinaccio admits to the life lessons he learned watching the original "Star Trek" television series as it turns 50 years old this year. The original show had a relative short run on television, but ultimately grew into a multi-million dollar franchise. It wasn't the stunning special effects that captured the imagination. There are generations who have grown with a broader sense of social awareness because of show creator Gene Roddenberry.

Estate planning considerations for individuals with dementia or Alzheimer's disease

By Debra A. Verni, Esq.

e often say that everyone over age 18 needs some sort of "Estate Plan", but it is especially true for those showing signs of or are diagnosed with Alzheimer's or other forms of dementia. As Alzheimer's is a progressively debilitating disease that destroys memory and cognitive thinking, it is critical that Estate Planning documents, including Advance Directives, are implemented prior to the loss of capacity. The essential documents necessary to make financial, health and long-term care decisions include a Power of Attorney, Health Care Proxy and Living Will as well as Revocable Living Trusts or Irrevocable Medicaid Trusts. A Last Will & Testament only addresses division of property after death, but is an important component of a comprehensive estate plan.

A Power of Attorney is one of the most important legal documents as it gives an agent the ability to make financial decisions when your loved one is no longer able to. These powers can include managing assets and income, directing investments, paying bills and transferring assets into a trust for planning purposes.

A Health Care Proxy is a document that gives an agent the ability to make health care decisions on behalf of your loved one when he or she is no longer able to. This can include choosing doctors and other health care providers, as well as the types of treatments and care facilities used. A Living Will contains language that expresses specific wishes with regards to types of lifesustaining treatment such as artificial life support and nutrition. This is different than a "Do Not Resuscitate" (DNR) order from a doctor or hospital. Advance Directives help avoid family disagreements and distress by establishing end-of-life plans. The agents named in these documents are responsible for acting according to the person's wishes and in his or her best interest.

If your loved one owns assets or property individually in his or her name, various types of Trusts can be utilized to manage their assets during lifetime and after death to avoid probate and may offer additional asset protection features. For example, an Irrevocable Medicaid Asset Protection Trust may be utilized in order to qualify for Medicaid long-term care benefits at home or in a nursing facility. It is also important to look at Beneficiary Designations as certain assets such as life insurance, IRAs or annuities should not pass not through a Will or Trust.

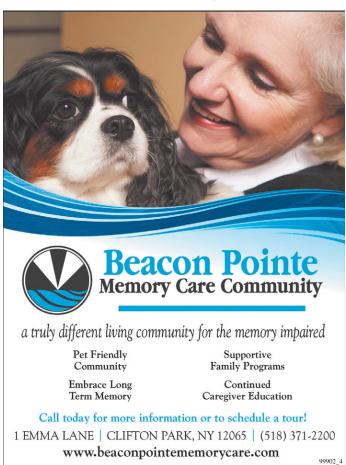

In the absence of valid Advance Directives and Estate Planning documents, or if a person does not have the mental capacity to understand their affairs, you will need to pursue Guardianship in order to make these decisions. This holds true even for a spouse. Often, those in the early or mid-stages of dementia are still able to understand the meaning and importance of a legal document. Greater public awareness and medical advancements have led to earlier diagnoses, when cognitive function may still be intact. Regardless, it is always best to do proactive planning. Guardianship is an extremely invasive and costly court process which can cost upwards of $10,000 (even when not contested).

If you or someone in your family is concerned about the prospect of dementia, or currently caring for someone with Alzheimer's, it is imperative to get the proper legal documents in place as quickly as possible. An experienced Elder Law attorney can help guide you and your family through the process and recommend the proper course of action based on your loved one's needs.

Low cost 'snowbird escapes' to Latin America

or those who have had enough of the current political season in the U.S. — and who aren't looking forward to another cold winter either the news is good: great-value coastal options exist in nearby Latin America.

International Living's new report pinpoints five welcoming, low-cost "snowbird escapes" on Pacific and Caribbean beaches. They're easy to get to and offer warm weather, laid-back communities of friendly locals and expats, and living costs that won't break the bank. Rents run from $500, beer from $2, and monthly living costs for a couple from $1,200.

 $\begin{array}{c} \text{couple from $1,200.} \\ \text{T} \end{array}$

These are excellent destinations to consider for a one-month hiatus, a three-month escape, a sixmonth sabbatical, or even a permanent relocation. All are within easy access of the U.S., and all offer tremendous value for dollar.

Dominical, Costa Rica

With low costs, goodvalue real estate, and a great climate—highs in the mid-80s F to mid-90s F during the day year-round and cooling off at night—Costa Rica is a popular escape option. The coastal town of Dominical is where the Central Coast ends and the South Coast, also known as the Southern Zone, begins. It's a village that has often been described as a gem because of the bluish-green water surrounded by tall palms and lush countryside. Surfers and snowbirds have been coming for years.

Easy going Dominical has remained a haven for those looking to lounge on crowd-free beaches. It's a simple, relaxed place, worlds away from the trendy tourist traps with overpriced restaurants, sprawling resorts, and obnoxious crowds. Friendships form fast among the select few who have stumbled upon this little oasis.

In the mountains outside the beach village of Dominical, a two-bedroom villa rents for $600 per month, fully furnished. For a furnished two-bedroom ocean-view home set on a jungle-covered hill, with private pool and large deck, rent runs $1,200 a month.

Playa del Carmen, Mexico

Mexico is the most popular expat destination for North

Americans in the world. It's convenient and offers many of the First-World conveniences, including good highways, plenty of airports, reliable telephone service, and fast internet connections.

The city of Playa del Carmen is especially attractive for many reasons. The city is safe and clean. An active police force keeps an eye on things and the local government is committed to community improvements. The medical care, at the several doctor's offices, as well as clinics and hospitals, is world-class and affordable. And there are housing options—both to buy and rent—to fit any budget. And there are plenty of gyms, yoga studios, and fitness clubs.

Kim Now owns a multi-level condo in Playa del Carmen that's only a two-minute walk from the beach. For Kim, Playa del Carmen was an easy choice. "Playa is not only beautiful, sitting right on the Caribbean coast, but it's also a very safe place. I can walk anywhere. They have great medical clinics and a hospital, modern infrastructure, more restaurants than I'll ever be able to enjoy, with plenty of shopping options."

Salinas, Ecuador

About 90 miles from Ecuador's largest city, Guayaquil, and situated on the South Pacific coast, Salinas has long been a vacation home destination for Ecuadorians, and is becoming increasingly popular as a retirement location for expats too. Here, glittering high-rise condos line the beach road. Fashionable seafood restaurants and trendy clubs come alive at night.

Some call it a "little Miami," but except for the sun, sand, and surf, it's really nothing like Miami. Salinas is a relatively small town with a population of under 50,000. The weather is warm with cloudless blue skies and low humidity year-round here. Situated on a peninsula, it benefits from long hot sunny periods for most of the year, and the ocean is always invitingly warm.

There are supermarkets, a large produce and seafood market, restaurants and cafés, a movie theater, banks, clinics, and hardware stores. Plus, there's regular bus service to Guayaquil, only two hours away, which has an international airport.

For the past four years, International Living's Ecuador Coastal correspondent, Jim Santos, has lived in Salinas with his wife Rita. They report monthly expenses of around $1,500 a month—and that's for a comfortable lifestyle. At the time of writing, a fully furnished three-bedroom, twobathroom 1,100-square-foot condo a block from the beach, with utilities included, rents for $550 per month.

Roatán, Honduras

Roatán has quietly graduated from secret divers' getaway to liveable island haven. Just 50 square miles, this dollop of sand off Honduras' northern coast is long and skinny, fringed by a reef rich with sea life and garnished by white-sand beaches.

Life is laidback, lived in rhythm with the sun and the surf. No big-name resorts. No "spring break" strips. No high-rise developments. This is old-school Caribbean... though fitted out with modern conveniences. English is widely spoken. That, along with an established expat community, makes it a relatively easy place to settle in.

"We love the culture and the people in Roatán," say snowbirds Bill and Ann Addison. "We spend probably about $3,000 per month, between HOA fees, utilities, groceries, and all of our fun activities."

Roatán has enjoyed a surge in popularity over the last decade. The addition of two cruise ship ports, plus the increase in direct flights to the island, has allowed more people to visit easily. Many of those visitors turn into expats themselves after seeing the island's natural beauty and easy lifestyle.

San Juan del Sur, Nicaragua

Located on Nicaragua's Pacific coast, the town of San Juan del Sur has successfully secured its title as Nicaragua's tourism capital.

Laid out over three square blocks, the town center these days is bursting with wooden homes; local and

Helpful tips on how to have a more restful slumber

he National Sleep Foundation notes that adults between the ages of 26 and 64 need an average of seven to nine hours of sleep per night. Such a sleep schedule may be ideal, but many adults juggling work and family find it difficult to get seven hours of sleep per night, much less eight or nine.

While there may not be any way for adults to get more sack time at night, there are ways for men and women to get a better night's rest so they can approach each day with as much energy as possible.

Stick to a schedule

Keeping a sporadic sleeping schedule can make it difficult to get the kind of restorative sleep that can help you maintain adequate energy levels throughout the day. To ensure you get a better night's sleep, go to sleep at the same time each night and wake up at the same time each day. Try to stay true to your sleep schedule on weekends, resisting the temptation to sleep in later or stay up late on Friday and Saturday nights.

• Nap effectively

Men and women who have the time to sneak in a nap may find that napping is a more effective way to make up for inadequate sleep than sleeping in late in the morning.

"The NSF recommends maintaining a relatively cool temperature between 60° and 67°F in your bedroom for sleeping." In addition, eliminate any potential distractions, such as light and noise, that can negatively affect your ability to fall asleep."

Effective napping allows men and women to recharge without affecting their ability to fall asleep at night. Napping in the early afternoon and keeping nap time to between 20 and 30 minutes can provide the energy boost you need and help you make it through the after-dinner hours without feeling drowsy. Such drowsiness can lead to post-dinner periods of dozing that can make it difficult to fall asleep come bedtime.

• Adopt a nighttime ritual

The NSF notes that a relaxing nighttime ritual that is noticeably different from the hustle and bustle of the rest of your day can help your body adjust for sleep, increasing the chance that you will get a more restful night's sleep. Relaxing ways to unwind before climbing into to bed to fall asleep including reading a book, listening to calming music or taking a warm bath. Once you find something that works, stick with it.

• Find time to exercise

Studies have shown that men and women who exercise regularly benefit from more restful nights' sleep. Finding the right time to exercise is essential, as many people find that exercising right before bed elevates their heart and stimulates their body in ways that make it difficult to fall asleep. Exercising in the early morning can provide more energy throughout the day, and come bedtime your body might be more ready to fall asleep. However, if you find yourself exercising at the expense of your sleep, try to find another time to get your workout in.

• Ensure your bedroom is sleep-friendly

The NSF recommends maintaining a relatively cool temperature between 60° and 67°F in your bedroom for sleeping. In addition, eliminate any potential distractions, such as light and noise, that can negatively affect your ability to fall asleep. Humidifiers, eye shades or even machines that generate white noise can effectively counter any distractions that you cannot get rid of on your own.

A good night's sleep is essential to human health. Men and women struggling to get adequate, beneficial sleep can employ a host of strategies to improve their quality of life.

Preserve your eyesight, see a specialist

n this world where patients can easily look up health information online and everyone is a Jack-of-all-Trades, there are still many health situations where seeing a specialist not only makes sense, but could make a huge difference in your outcome. Glaucoma falls into the "must see specialist" category.

Glaucoma is a group of diseases that can damage the eye's optic nerve. It is a leading cause of blindness in the United States. Often, with glaucoma, there are no symptoms at first. Without treatment, people with glaucoma will slowly lose their peripheral, or side, vision. Over time, straight-ahead vision may decrease until no vision remains.

Dr. Asher Weiner, a Glaucoma Specialist at Ophthalmic Consultants of the Capital Region, helps patients preserve their vision every day. As a glaucoma specialist, he is pioneering new treatment protocols, such as the MIGS (minimally invasive glaucoma surgery) Trabectome and iStent. "The MIGS procedures provide patients with options that are, in general, safer and have faster recovery times than traditional surgical options," explained Dr. Weiner.

Not only is Dr. Asher Weiner up on the latest treatment options, but he is connected to a glaucoma specialist community in which the physicians discuss outcomes and issues.

"As part of a national glaucoma specialist network, I have insights that other doctors may not," stated Dr. Weiner. "For example, we recently noticed that patients, who had a procedure called trabeculectomy and use a CPAP mask for sleep apnea, were at risk for a devastating eye infection that could cause the loss of an eye within one day. I immediately contacted patients who had the trabeculectomy and requested that they stop using the CPAP for sleep apnea."

If you have glaucoma, seeing a specialist, such as Dr. Asher Weiner, can make all the difference in your vision. Their ability to be on the forefront of glaucoma treatment, as well as being plugged into a community of other specialists may increase your chances of preserving your eyesight. To make an appointment with Dr. Asher Weiner call 777-2777 or visit myoccr.com.

DeForest Kelley, Leonard Nimoy and William Shatner started in the sci-fi television and movie series "Star Trek."

Bold life lessons

Star Trek's still as relevant after 50 years

By Dave Marinaccio

The 50th anniversary of the launch of "Star Trek" is this September. Fifty years after William Shatner made his first "captain's log," the power of "Star Trek" is felt across generations. Just this summer, the thirteenth "Star Trek" movie was released and has grossed over 231 million dollars to date. It's pretty clear: "Star Trek" is here to stay.

So what is it about "Star Trek" that captures the hearts of millions of people, decade after decade?

As an advertising executive, my work environment is a stressfilled one. I imagine many of you will be able to relate to this. About the only thing taken for granted is that today's problems will be completely different from yesterday's. At it's best, it can be said that the job offers variety. Unfortunately it's the same old variety day after day.

In situations of change, it is natural for human beings to look for touchstones. As a human being, I had always sought a center to my life, an example to follow. What I hadn't realized was that I was already following a path into the future. It was pointed out to me at a business meeting.

I was comparing a current problem to something I had watched on television the previous night. I can't recall the particular problem, but I do recall saying, "well, we could be diplomatic, but as Scotty said on "Star Trek" last night, "The best diplomat I know is a fully charged phaser bank."

"You turn everything into "Star Trek"," a coworker responded. She was right. For years I've related everything in life to "Star Trek". But why not? Captain James Tiberius Kirk is the most successful person I've ever observed. He's a great leader, a good manager of people, dedicated, moral, adaptable, at the top of his profession, gets the girls, is well known and respected. There are worse role models.

"Star Trek" appeals to both the young and old. As a kid it was my favorite TV show. As an adult, virtually every night after work I would walk in the door, collapse on the couch and hit the remote control. "Star Trek" was the only show I could always watch start to finish. Anyway, that comment at work helped me discover something I already knew. I realized then that I already know what's necessary to live a meaningful life – that it isn't that complicated.

All I really need to know about how to live and what to do and how to be, I learned from watching "Star Trek". These are the things I learned:

• Each person or each species, no matter how alien, has the right to live their lives as they wish. (As long as they're not trying to take over the galaxy or eat you or something.)

• Everyone has a role in life. Sulu is the navigator. Uhura is the communications specialist. Do your own job and the ship will function more smoothly.

• Whatever you are doing, answer a distress call. The most important time to help someone is when they need it.

If you mess something up, it's your responsibility to make things right again. (Say you disrupt history and cause the Nazis to win World War II. To correct matters, you have to let Joan Collins walk in front of a car even though you're in love with her.)

• The more complex the mind, the greater the need for the simplicity of play.

► If you can keep your head in a crisis, you've got a fighting chance.

• The unknown is not to be feared. It is to be examined, understood and accepted.

• Close friends become family and family is the true center of the universe.

• End every episode with a smile.

► And lastly, with time and patience, you can even learn something from The Next Generation.

These lessons are no less valuable, no less urgent now, in 2016, then they were when the first ever "Star Trek" episode aired in 1966. This is why millions of people spend their weekend watching the latest "Star Trek" movie in theaters.

Everything you need to know is in there somewhere. It may be dressed in some real lame costume, but it's there. Every situation you will face in life has already been faced by the crew of the Starship Enterprise NCC 1701 – how to respond to challenge, how to treat your friends, how to pick up girls, how to get ahead on the job, how to run a business.

And remember, as Captain Kirk once so wisely said, "sometimes a feeling is all we humans have to go on."

Dave Marinaccio is an international bestselling author and successful marketing business entrepreneur. His bestselling book, All I Really Need To Know I Learned From Watching "Star Trek", is drawn from his long career in the advertising business. He is co-founder and SVP, CCO of Laughlin Marinaccio & Owens in Arlington, VA, international restaurants; little shops stocking tropics-wear, beach gear, and artisan jewelry; banks with ATMs; internet cafés; spas, fitness and yoga studios; real estate shops; tour operators; locally run convenience stores; a central market; Spanish schools; coffee shops; hotels; bars; and much more.

Today, San Juan del Sur is a booming town whose activity is fueled by a mass of eclectic, fun-loving tourists, snowbirds and expats. The many surrounding beach communities offer a true sense of retreat and reconnection with nature. And with 22 beaches surrounding the town (most of them not mentioned in the guidebooks), San Juan del Sur also offers deep-sea fishing, diving, boating, and has world-class surf beaches that host international competitions.

Even though it's a popular tourist town, the cost of living remains low here. Many couples live comfortably on $1,200 a month. Rent of a one-bedroom apartment will cost about $500 a month.

The International Living report contains more information on cost of living and other details about the five value beach destinations for escaping the coming winter and political storms.
