Board discusses zoning law changes

Board members seek to define town's 'community character'

By ALI HIBBS

hibbsa@spotlightnews.com

BETHLEHEM—

Another lengthy Town Board meeting, held on Tuesday, Nov. 22, was primarily devoted to discussion of proposed changes to town zoning law, as the town's Director of Economic Planning and Development Robert Leslie returned to present an updated proposal based on questions, concerns and suggestions posed by town residents and members of the board.

No vote took place that evening, but a number of concerns were addressed. In fact, Leslie and Town Planner Jeff Lipnicky returned with responses to each and every one of the issues raised by residents during a public hearing on the matter. (The full responses, along

OPEN:

Mon. thru Sat. 10am-8pm Sun. 10am-6pm with comments by board members, can be found on our website.) As members were wrapping up discussion of various aspects of the proposed amendments, however, Board Member David VanLuven brought up the issue of "community character."

"The standard that we're using," he said, "is the number of housing units, in terms of density. And, we're using that as a proxy for remaining within community character to a certain extent, it seems to me." In talking with community residents, he said he found they're often less concerned with numbers of units than with the overall physical size or appearance of the project. VanLuven cited a proposed project at 224 Delaware Ave., where the developer is seeking to build a 16-unit apartment complex in the middle of a neighborhood of single-family homes.

"When we really started talking," he said, "it became clear that it didn't matter if it was 16 small units or six large units. It's not the number of units, it's the size of the building relative to the rest of the neighborhood." Keeping in mind that economic development is desirable, VanLuven asked what "approaches" the town could take to help ensure preservation of community character—and how to even define it.

"I think we have the tools in our zoning law now," responded Leslie. "Specifically in the site plan design criteria, that gives the Planning Board the ability to listen to residents." Holding public hearings is always a discretionary option the board has, he said, as well as the power to require additional setbacks, landscaping and other buffering to screen buildings. The board can even weigh in on the architectural character of proposed buildings. "We certainly have all those tools at our disposal any time a project comes before the Planning Board. So I'm not necessarily confident that there's a new approach that we need to take, I just think it's the continued practice of the Planning Board listening to the public, understanding their concerns and coming up with ways to minimize those impacts."

"Do you typically get a lot of public comments at Planning Board meetings," asked Board Member Julie Sasso. She wondered if, perhaps, residents weren't made aware of projects early enough to feel that their reactions were of any consequence. "I feel like people think that things are happening behind their back," she explained, "because they're not aware of it and it seems like we're trying to sneak things past people." Short of going door-to-door, Sasso asked if there was any way to ensure that those who want to be engaged were able to be reached in a timely manner.

"First we have to find who wants to be engaged," said Leslie, before noting that some other municipalities require signs to be posted on properties under development, alerting neighbors to proposed projects and public hearings regarding the site.

Currently, he said, attendance at public meetings is primarily a result of social media efforts and conversations between neighbors.

"I know the town is on Facebook," said Sasso. After learning the Planning Board does not post notifications of proposed projects or meeting agendas on the town's Facebook page, she said, "That might be something simple. I'm just trying to think of other, creative ways of trying to get them involved without it being an onerous task."

Agreeing with Sasso, VanLuven said, "People feel powerless, because usually when they find out a project is going on, it's really late in the process and usually too late for their input to be considered in a meaningful

"I hear it a lot," he said a moment later. "People are really feeling powerless right now."

"Any social media announcement, someone would have to actively sign up to be on Facebook," said Leslie. "I'm just saying if there are opportunities for us to easily increase our dissemination of information, maybe this is something we can do to help alleviate this feeling that people have that they're not able to participate.

"I understand that it's structured so that people can participate; we have a very clear method for participation," she added. 'And I'm not saying that we change the method of participation. I'm just suggesting that maybe we

Vote to appoint new county elections commissioner on hold

Restraining order forces party committee to hear formal arguments

By JIM FRANCO

francoj@spotlightnews.com

ALBANY — A

judge issued a temporary restraining order Monday, Nov. 28, barring the Democratic Party Committee from voting on a new elections commissioner.

Last month the committee voted to recommend Matt Clyne to another two-year term, but last week party Chairman Jack Flynn said the process was flawed because Clyne's recommendation never went through the Candidate Review Committee.

Flynn re-opened the process on Monday, Nov. 21, and accepted resumes through Friday Nov. 25. The following Saturday, the review committee interviewed candidates and settled on longtime attorney Josh Ehrlich as Clyne's replacement.

Clyne did not interview. Instead, he filed a lawsuit looking for the courts to uphold last month's vote that recommended he serve another term and to stop the committee from voting on Nov. 28.

Albany County Supreme Court Judge Richard Platkin issued the temporary restraining order Monday morning.

The order doesn't guarantee Clyne another term, but does prevent the committee from acting until formal arguments can taking it as a threat to his be heard. The parties are slated to be back in court by Dec. 6.

Clyne represented himself. It's unclear who Flynn and the Democratic Party proper had as an attorney.

As of noon, Flynn was notifying ward leaders that Monday's meeting was cancelled. He could not be reached for comment at press time.

Last month, the committee ousted Chair Carolyn McLaughlin and replaced her with Flynn, an Eighth Ward councilman and relative by marriage to County Executive Dan McCoy. One of the first orders of business was to table a motion to re-appoint Clyne, which failed and Clyne was recommended to another two-year term.

Clyne, correctly

$90,000-plus a year job, fired Flynn from his job at the BOE. Just days later, Flynn was hired by Sheriff Craig Apple in a newly created position paying nearly what he was making at the BOE, $48,500.

Whoever the committee recommends for BOE commissioner goes to the county Legislature for a formal appointment. The legislature can deny the party's recommendation, but it does not have the power to appoint whoever it wants. Rather, it would go back to the Legislature for it to resubmit the same name or a new name. The legislature is supposed to approve a new commissioner by Dec. 1.

Now that the party wants to take nullify last month's vote and it is tangled up in the courts it's unclear how firm that deadline actually is.

What an honor!

Leland Case, a longtime Ravena resident who now lives at Atria Delmar Place, recently received a Senior Lifetime Achievement Award for his years of community service. Town of Bethlehem Supervisor John Clarkson presented Case with the award on Wednesday, Nov. 16. Erica Sitterly of Atria Delmar Place nominated him for the recognition. Case has performed a variety of services to benefit the community, including participating in the Peter B. Caymans Elementary School "Grandparents Program," in which seniors assist second and third grade students with their reading skills and volunteering at his church. He also drove and helped maintain vehicles for Ravena Senior Services. This World War II U.S. Navy veteran is still an active member of the Ravena Lions Club and calls Bingo games at his new home. According to Sitterly, "Leland is such a kind-hearted, selfless person. He is a treasure to the community and the many friends he has made throughout his life."

COPS, COURTS AND EMERGENCY CALLS

Man shot on Thanksgiving Day hunt

GLENMONT—At approximately 10 a.m. on Thanksgiving Day, the Bethlehem Police Department received a 911 call reporting that a man had been shot in the shoulder on Smultz Road in Glenmont.

Officers responded to the scene and determined that multiple members of a hunting party had just exited the woods and were in the process of unloading their rifles. A 24-year-old man from Voorheesville was attempting to unload his .308 rifle when a single round was discharged. The round struck two parked vehicles before hitting a 25 year-old-man from Rensselaer in the shoulder. The victim and the subject who fired the rifle are brothers.

The victim was transported to Albany Medical Center Hospital by Delmar-Bethlehem EMS and Albany County paramedics. He is in stable condition.

At this time the joint investigation into this incident is continuing by the Bethlehem Police Department and state Department of Environmental Conservation Police.

Bethlehem police are not releasing the names of the individuals involved, as the investigation is ongoing and no charges have been filed

Regular deer hunting season will remain open until Dec. 20.

Tragedy averted

Highway traffic, much of which is presumed to have been motorists getting a jump on this week's holiday travel, was backed up for miles before the accident scene was cleared.

An eyewitness said the box truck started to sway before losing control. According to Weather Underground, last night's wind gusts registered as high as 40 mph at the Albany International Airport in Latham.

"There were high winds on the Thruway last night," said Michael McCormick, a New Jersey resident, who was driving behind the truck with his wife and 3-year-old son. "I don't know. It looked like he just weaved out into the right hand lane and rolled over the rumble stripes," before the truck spun out of control.

McCormick said he stopped his car before jumping out to join other motorists helping the truck driver. Three bystanders were already attempting to help the driver out of the cab, who was conscious and trying to find his cell phone. When McCormick observed fuel leaking out of the truck, he urged everyone to get out and away.

"He was moving, so my thought was to get him out and move everyone to safety," said McCormick. Once the driver was out, he said he and another driver also helped stop traffic before the police arrived. "Another guy and I took it upon ourselves to basically stop Thruway traffic... before the police, fire department and ambulance showed up."

With serious injuries avoided, McCormick said he and his wife can now joke about the "high-powered" flashlight he used to access the accident scene. The flashlight was something his father-in-law had purchased over the internet, and was initially thought to be a gag gift.

"That thing was bright as hell," said McCormick. "Oh, yeah. It works."

Colonie man charged with felony DWI

NEW SCOTLAND—

On Thursday, Nov. 24, state troopers from New Scotland reportedly stopped Paul Dolan, 48, of Colonie, early in the morning for a traffic infraction on Western Avenue in the Town of Guilderland. Upon being interviewed, officers reported that Dolan displayed signs of intoxication and that, subsequent to field sobriety tests, was arrested for DWI. Dolan was reportedly determined to have a 0.29 percent BAC. Due to Dolan having a prior DWI conviction within the preceding 10 years, he was charged with felony aggravated DWI and is due to appear in the Guilderland Town Court on Dec. 8.

DEC pushes EPA to expand testing

More sediment samples need to be collected in order to determine effectiveness of Hudson River dredging project

By ALI HIBBS

hibbsa@spotlightnews.com

The state Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) has renewed its call for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency (EPA) to require additional sediment sampling for Polychlorinated Biphenyl (PCB) contamination in the upper Hudson River following the remedial efforts of General Electric to remove thousands of pounds of PCBs from its riverbeds.

In 2002, GE was ordered to clean up a 40-mile stretch of the Hudson, from the Troy Lock to Rogers Island, by dredging millions of cubic yards of contaminated sediment at the bottom of the river. Dredging began in 2009 and the project was completed in 2015. A fiveyear project review by EPA is due in April of next year, but DEC, the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration and other environmental organizations have warned that the dredging project hasn't lowered PCB levels enough to meet targets set out in the original cleanup

In a letter to EPA Regional Administrator Judith Enck, DEC Commissioner Basil Seggos expressed a need to expand the analysis of sediments by more than 1,400 samples in the Upper Hudson River, both in areas that were dredged.

as well as those that were not, in order to determine the effectiveness of the

"As department staff has been explaining to EPA for many months," he wrote, "much more sampling is necessary in order to answer the questions many stakeholders have raised about what has been left behind by the remedy."

Under the Comprehensive Environmental Response, Compensation, and Liability Act (CERCLA) and the National Contingency Plan (NCP),

EPA is required to monitor effectiveness of the remedy to affirm that it is meeting the goals set by the federal Superfund Record of Decision (ROD). Currently, the agency plans to collect only 375 samples—fewer than 10 for every mile of river. DEC has deemed those plans inadequate and said they would not provide enough data to assess the effectiveness of the remediation. According to DEC, at least 1,800 samples are needed to have the statistical power to draw accurate conclusions. EPA has repeatedly eschewed requests by DEC for additional sampling, thus prompting the Nov. 15 letter. Seggos said the DEC will step in to undertake the analysis in the event that EPA fails to

"The EPA is apparently unwilling to modify the scope of sediment sampling under the Operation, Maintenance, and Monitoring (OM&M) Program," Seggos wrote to Enck, "even though EPA admitted in its first fiveyear review that portions of the river, especially in River Sections 2 and 3, are much more contaminated than EPA originally predicted."

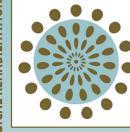

"The clock is ticking. EPA's work is not done and its unwillingness to require GE to perform adequate sediment sampling undermines the five-year review process underway," said Seggos in a statement. "That is why New York State is demanding that EPA undertake more comprehensive and scientific sampling no later than the spring of 2017. If EPA fails to act, DEC is ready to step in. And until such sampling occurs, the EPA must not deem the remediation project complete."

In 1976, DEC banned all fishing in the upper Hudson because of health concerns with PCBs, which are thought to be responsible for health issues that include neurological disorders, lower IQ and poor shortterm memory, hormonal disruption, suppressed immune system, cancer, skin irritations, Parkinson's disease, ADHD, heart disease, and diabetes. PCB contamination in humans may come from drinking the contaminated water, absorption through the skin, eating contaminated aquatic life, and/or inhaling volatilized PCBs. PCB contamination is especially dangerous for pregnant and nursing women.

If remediation objectives will not be achieved in the timeframes specified, DEC is calling on EPA to identify specific areas of the Upper Hudson River that may require further dredging.

"By allowing so much PCB contamination to remain in the river, the EPA has turned its back on the health of thousands of New Yorkers, many of whom represent immigrant, low income and minority communities who regularly eat the fish they catch for sustenance," said Aaron Mair, president of the Sierra Club. "Committing to a full clean up of the Hudson River is the kind of justice these communities deserve."

Enjoy a Little Sunday Music

he library's 2016-17 season of A Little Sunday Music continues on Sunday, Dec. 4, at 2 p.m. with a concert by the Helderberg Madrigal Singers performing music that was first heard centuries ago in the castles, cathedrals, synagogues, drawing rooms and village greens of medieval and Renaissance Europe.

The group is composed of sopranos Martha Bond and Sarah Johnson Popiel, altos Dawn Dana and Beth Gurzler, tenor Dick Dana, and basses David Metz and Tim Smith. When the music calls for accompaniment, members' talents on the recorder, krumhorn, viola da gamba, oboe, guitar and percussion are employed.

Founded in 1978 by a group of Capital District singers who relished the challenge and rewards of a cappella music, the ensemble's repertoire has grown to more than 400 works. The Helderberg Madrigal Singers are all Capital District residents with experience in other groups, including Albany Pro Musica, Glimmerglass Opera, Octavo Singers and more.

Frequently performed composers include Thomas Morley, William Byrd, Orlando Gibbons, Guillaume de Machaut, Heinrich Isaac, among many others.

A Little Sunday Music is generously underwritten by Friends of Bethlehem Public Library. The library is located at 451 Delaware Ave. in Delmar.

YMCA Giving Tree Brings Holiday Spirit

Please sing along with me now...."it's beginning to look a lot like Christmas, every single day, take a look by lobby desk, a tree trimmed with all the best, it's the Giving Tree at the YMCA."

The Giving Tree is a holiday tradition at the Bethlehem YMCA. One that brings warmth to the hearts of those who give and a smile on the faces of children who receive.

The tree is decorated with ornaments handmade by children of YMCA members. On each ornament is written a small gift and some information about a child who otherwise may not have a present on Christmas morning.

Last year, more than 300 low income families were recipients of gifts from the YMCA Giving Tree. Every year we see more and more families that don't request toys at Christmas, but instead need things like gift cards for food, shampoo, a blanket, diapers and formula, coats, hats and boots.

YMCA members can take an ornament off the tree, purchase the gift listed on the ornament, bring it to the Y, and we will get it to the family in time for Christmas. We identify children and families by working with the Bethlehem School District, as well as recipients of YMCA scholarships from our Annual Campaign.

One of the great gifts we receive is when a family is contacted because they previously received a YMCA Giving Tree gift, and they thank us and say life is getting better, their situation has improved, and they no longer need our assistance. However, so many families in Bethlehem are still in need of help. With your spirit of giving, the holidays will be brighter for those in need.

Most people are in a hurry when they get to the Y. A hurry to start their workout. A hurry to get to the their car and get home. Please, next time you come to the Bethlehem YMCA, take just a moment in the lobby to look at the Giving Tree and consider taking an ornament home with you and donating a gift.

Yes, it's beginning to look a lot like Christmas. If you help make someone's holiday brighter with a simple act of kindness, it will feel a lot like Christmas

This is going to a wonderful experience for children in grades three to six, and their folks. This is part of our regular series where local college science and engineering students come to GPL and bring fun science activities for kids! Register by calling 456-2400 ext. 4, or by going online to the Events & Registration Calendar at www.guilpl.org.

Origami Fun & Folding

Children in grades two through six can learn about origami – those amazing, delightful creatures crafter with folded paper – when they come to "Origami Fun & Folding" at GPL on Tuesday, Dec. 6 at 4 p.m.

We supply the paper and fun; you bring your creativity to fold your own masterpiece ... maybe even a paper crane! Sign up by calling call 456-2400 ext. 4, or registering online via the "Events & Registration Calendar" atwww.guilpl. org.

Pinterest Wins: Cupcakes Edition

Once a month, we will explore different uses for Pinterest, the content sharing service that allows you to "pin" images, videos and other objects to your pinboard. At the Thursday, Dec. 8 session, at 7 p.m., we tackle baking! Join us as we make a few different cupcake frosting recipes that we found on Pinterest – cupcakes will be served! Sign up by calling 456-2400 ext. 2, or registering online via the "Events & Registration Calendar" atwww.guilpl.org.

Holiday Teas

What is tea, anyway? Find out when you come to "Holiday Teas and Cooking with Tea" at GPL on Wednesday, Dec. 7, at 6:30 p.m.

Most people don't know that white, green, oolong and black tea all come from the same tea plant, just what happens after it is plucked makes tea those different kinds of styles. In this informative session Matthew from Short and Stout Tea in Guilderland will discuss topics on tea basics including: what is tea, history of tea, how to brew tea and of course a tea tasting. Sign up by calling call 456-2400 ext. 2, or registering online via the "Events & Registration Calendar" at www.guilpl.

finished first among the youngest racers with a time of 19:39.

Over the years, the race has developed into a social gathering as much as it is a race. Many of the participants dress in creative outfits, depicting turkeys, comic book characters and more.

Runners of all ages, and species, were encouraged to participate this year. Some runners pushed toddlers along in strollers, while others were accompanied by their four-legged canine friends.

Proceeds from this year's race went to benefit the Bethlehem Food Pantry.

Split decision

Bethlehem bounces back from opening loss to down Cortland-Homer

By ROB JONAS

jonasr@spotlightnews.com

colonie — Less than 24 hours after losing a heartbreaker against defending state champion Mamaroneck, the Bethlehem hockey team downed Cortland-Homer 6-1 Saturday, Nov. 26, to finish the Shaker/Colonie Thanksgiving Tournament with a 1-1 record.

The Eagles struck for four goals in the second period to blow the game open. Zach Nunez had two of the four goals and finished the game with a hat trick to lead the offense.

Brian Harder contributed a goal and two assists for Bethlehem, and goaltender Alex Breiner stopped 17 shots.

DPW association applauds Trump's pledge to improve infrastructure

Organization's leader calls on president-elect to appropriate funds to state, locally owned roads

francoj@spotlightnews.com

ALBANY — As the higher profile drama of cabinet appointments, protests and recounts dominate headlines, a group who do the day-to-day, nuts and bolts work of any municipality are reacting favorably to one of President-elect Donald Trump's campaign promises.

Trump has pledged to spend $1 trillion on transportation, water, energy and telecommunications. More than half of that is planned for roads, bridges and waterways.

"A federal funding commitment of this magnitude is certainly needed," said Tracy J. Eldridge, president of the New York State County Highway Superintendents Association and Hamilton County superintendent of highways. "It's just as important though to assure a significant portion of this funding be directed to locally-owned roads, bridges and culverts in New York."

Last year's federal Fixing America's Surface Transportation Act put in place a multi-year funding plan for the nation's highway and bridge transportation system, Eldridge said. But, FAST funding levels are directed primarily to the National Highway System meaning interstates, principal arteries and expressways.

The American Society of Civil Engineers New York State Council, in a report issued last year, gave the state's infrastructure a "C-," with roads and bridges getting grades of "D+" and "D-" respectively.

According to the society, which would benefit from municipal infrastructure improvement projects, the nation should spend $3.3 trillion over the next decade to beef up its aged roads, bridges, water and sewer systems and other infrastructure.

The 2016 Better Roads Bridge Inventory report ranks New York 48th among the 50 states and District of Columbia as having the highest percentage, 37.7 percent, of structurally deficient/functionally obsolete bridges out of its total bridge inventory.

More than half of the state's 17,456 are older than 75 years and more than 400 are older than 100 years. There are 2,012 structurally deficient bridges across the state and about 100 are closed because of serious deficiencies, according to the report by the civil engineers.

"The needs are well

Should President-elect Trump successfully implement his proposed $1 trillion infrastructure improvement program, we could see a lot more of these signs around the state and nation.

documented," Eldridge said. "What we look forward to now is a nationwide plan that is long-term, adequately funded and responsive to the maintenance and rehabilitation demands of the transportation system regardless of which levels of government own and maintain the roads and bridges."

Trump's plan would spend $550 billion over the next decade on roads, bridges and other areas of transportation like waterways. He claims the program would create about 3.3 million construction related jobs and Moody's claims it would add 0.4 percent a year to the nation's economic growth.

The details of how Trump would pay for such an ambitious undertaking without borrowing and adding to the deficit is still an unanswered question. Also, as Eldridge points out, a number of roads and bridges in need of work are owned by individual states and municipalities. How the money would be distributed is also yet to be determined.

"As the newly-elected president continues to develop his plan, we urge the Trump team to consider the significant needs of our locally-owned aging and deteriorating roads and bridges," Eldridge said. "In this way, we will promote an expansive and diverse transportation system that is seamless between the many levels of government owners, well maintained and functional to promote safe travel, enhance commerce and support economic development and job creation."

Local mother and daughter fight MS

By KASSIE PARISI

parisik@spotlightnews.com

COLONIE—A mother-daughter team raised more than $200,000 in their fight to defeat Multiple sclerosis, a disease that causes nerve damage which disrupts brain to body communication. Their next fundraiser is Sunday, Dec. 4, at the Century House in Latham.

Karen Waldron, 45, was diagnosed with MS in 1997 on Valentine's Day. But Waldron's road to a diagnosis was not a short one. The December before her diagnosis, Waldron explained that her body had gone numb from head to toe. Eventually, the numbness worked its way out of her body, but remained in her hands, and still remains in her hands today. As a result, Waldron, who was working as a bank teller, was forced to take time off work.

"I couldn't write, I couldn't cut my meat," Waldron said.

The full body numbness was not the first sign of an issue. In April of 1996, prior to her diagnosis, doctors told Waldron that she had Optic neuritis, an inflammation of the optic nerve that is frequently associated with MS. A neurologist also told Waldron that her issues were the result of stress, and that she could go back to work. Another doctor told Waldron that she had Fibromyalgia, gave her medication, and repeated the sentiment that she could go back to work.

Eventually, after months of bouncing around from doctor to doctor, from diagnosis to diagnosis, Waldron's general practitioner took her out of work, and Waldron got a second opinion. She returned to her neurologist, went through an MRI, and was finally, officially diagnosed with MS, something that Waldron said she could have told the doctors months before. Waldron was given medication for relapsing-remitting MS, and went back to work in the summer, but her hands are still affected 25

Twenty years ago, Waldron said, MS was difficult to diagnose and treat due to lack of technology and medicine that could halt the disease. Waldron also pointed out that many people go awhile without a diagnosis.

"There's quite a few people out there that have MS who weren't diagnosed for quite awhile," Waldron said. She said it's easier to diagnose MS now because doctors are more aware of what's going on with the disease, and technology, specifically MRIs, have advanced to the point where they can more quickly diagnose people. There are also many more therapy options now.

"I was fine," Waldron said about finally being diagnosed. "It was just a matter of being diagnosed and getting the treatment. Being diagnosed, it didn't bother me, really." She had been doing research into the disease prior to her diagnosis, she said, and mentioned that her family was more surprised with the diagnosis than she ever was.

Stephanie Kunes, who is the president of the upstate chapter for National Multiple Sclerosis Society, said that being able to work with both Waldron and her mother Sylvia D'Aprile has been an illuminating experience. She pointed out that Waldron, as someone who is living with MS, is by no means taking her life sitting down.

"It's wonderful working with both of them," Kunes said.

Kunes said that Waldron and her mother do 99 percent of the fundraising and event organization themselves, and the chapter is only there to give them any support the need. Kunes has been with NMSS for 35 years, and when she started she said there was no treatment for MS. She said working with the Waldron and D'Aprile who, according to her, has an impressive ability to bring people together, is all part of the larger effort to halt the progression of the disease.

Sylvia D'Aprile with Jason Schewe, general manager of Delmonico's

"It's an amazing family that really put their heart and soul into raising money for MS."

Right now, Waldron suffers from some cognitive issues, and extreme fatigue, but D'Aprile said that MS is not something that others can see from the outside.

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

Continue to be thankful

hanksgiving has come and gone, and gone too quickly.

The last Thursday of November is, for many, a day full of tradition. It is day set aside just once a year to invite friends and family to join us at the table, to share a meal and give thanks for the gifts that have been bestowed upon us. Some may have more to be thankful than others, but Thanksgiving Day provides a chance to be grateful for even the little things, despite life's challenges.

Unfortunately, the gratitude seems to have become all-too-brief in our consumer-driven culture. Each year, commercial marketing encroaches on Thanksgiving more and more. It's no wonder our collective behavior changes so swiftly from that of contented gratitude to vicious materialism when the day we set aside each year to give thanks for what we already have is barely given a chance to be. Black Friday sales have virtually sprung ahead on the internet, and shopping malls now open their doors on Thursday evening. Thanksgiving is prefaced with declarations of gratitude, only to be followed a mere few hours later by us busting down storefronts and trampling over each other for more material goods. The irony is as thick as gravy.

Walk into a shopping mall in October, and you're already being introduced to silver, greens and reds, and bombarded by the music of Burl Ives and Bing Crosby singing of reindeer and dreams of snow. That's approximately one quarter of the entire year devoted to commercializing a holiday that lasts for a mere 24 hours... and is, one is taught, supposed to celebrate the birth of a religious figure who famously rejected material wealth.

"Then he said to them, 'Watch out! Be on your guard against all kinds of greed; life does not consist in an abundance of possessions."

(The Parable of the Rich Fool, Luke 12:15, NIV)

We need only to read headlines and watch the news to be reminded to be thankful for all that we have in this country. A free press, access to health care and emergency services, and protection from persecution, just to name a few of the bigs ones. Even as we venture into frenzied malls in the coming weeks, may we challenge ourselves not to lose sight of that for which we are grateful—for those things are not guaranteed and, without vigilance, are all-too-easily lost.

■ WHAT HAPPENED IN 2006...

10 years ago: A home for young people

Almost 40 years ago, a Jesuit monastery in Glenmont was transformed into a job corps site, where disadvantaged young adults were given the chance to live and learn new vocations.

According to a 2006 Spotlight News article, there were more than 300 disadvantaged young people between the ages of 16 and 24 who were using the Glenmont Job Corps to earn a GED or train for a new job at River Road site. According to the same article, there were 148 instructors at the facility as well.

"To take my experience and have an impact on people, it's great," Vince DeSalvatore, who taught automotive technology at the site, said in the article.

"It's really important for these young adults to see themselves as citizens," Ramona Smith, then director of media relations at the facility, said in the 2006 article.

The Glenmont site, which was one of three job corp sites in New York state, was a 100acre campus overlooking the Hudson River. The Glenmont site serves the entire Capital Region.

Student were able to learn about culinary arts, auto repair, and business technology, among other things.

At Glenmont Job

Corps, students also participated in projects such as local food pantry donations and deliveries.

"It's an important resource for students who need us and the community," then executive director Rose Walker-Cook said.

Today, the site hosts 243 residential students and 23 non-residential students. Recently the recipient of a $25 million makeover, there are two new dorm buildings and a new recreation center on the premises. Now, students are able to take classes in peer leadership, and can be involved with student government, seasonal sports, and field trips.

FRANKLY SPEAKING: Democratic Party battle is getting uglier

It's funny how the Albany County Democrats have an uncanny knack of taking care of their own ... and eating their young ... at the same time.

As first reported by this paper, the Democratic Party proper, under the leadership of newly elected Chairman Jack Flynn, is trying to oust Matt Clyne as its Board of Elections commissioner.

Yes, the party voted last month to recommend Clyne to another two-year term, but only after a motion to table the vote failed. Clyne thought he dodged a bullet, but last week Flynn decided the process was flawed because candidates didn't go in front of the Candidate Review Committee.

Clyne opted to not subject himself to the interview, clearly a step in a sham process with the goal of getting rid of him. Instead, he filed a lawsuit asking the courts to validate last month's vote, and to stop the new vote, which was slated for a Monday, Nov. 28 special meeting called by Flynn.

Attorney Joshua Ehrlich did interview, however, and word is he was set to get the recommendation. Ehrlich specializes in Election Law and has done work for the Democrats, Republicans and the Independence Party. You can't blame him for working for whoever is willing to pay, but a died in the wool Democrat he is not.

That's all on hold for now. On Monday morning, Judge Richard Platkin agreed to issue a temporary restraining order, and the meeting was canceled pending formal arguments.

Just to clarify, the party recommends who it wants as a commissioner and then the county legislature appoints that person to the position. It's kind of a funky process in that the legislature can't appoint anyone but who the party recommends. It can deny a recommendation, but it can't unilaterally fill the spot without first going through the party.

The whole thing revolves around a vicious power struggle within the Democratic Party.

One team is headed up by County Executive Dan McCoy, who appears to have aspirations of becoming the next Dan O'Connell.

In his corner is Albany Mayor Kathy Sheehan, who McCoy has already endorsed, and Flynn, a relative of McCoy's by marriage who ousted former Chair Carolyn McLaughlin last month.

On the other side is Frank Commisso Jr., who will likely take on Sheehan next year and Councilmen Ron Bailey and Judd Krasher, who Clyne hired to replace Flynn from the BOE, and now Clyne. I really don't think Clyne had a dog in this hunt until they tried to take him out.

Instead, Clyne fired Flynn from his position at the BOE and won Round I in court. Don't worry about Flynn, though, Sheriff Craig Apple created a position for him at a salary close to what he was making at the BOE, $48,500.

See where I got the opening graph from now?

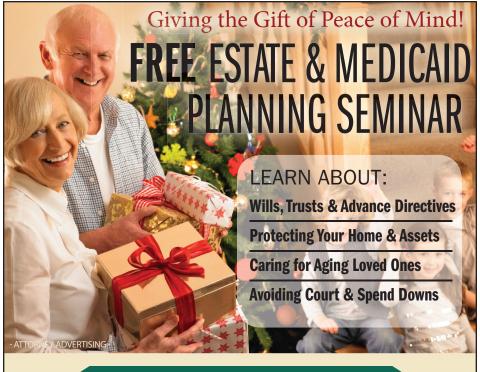

If it comes down to a floor fight over the next BOE commissioner, or an effort to rally the troops in a primary between Sheehan and Commisso Jr. McCoy's team has to be the favorites if for no other reason than it has jobs to offer in county and city government.

Commisso's corner may have more energy, and a sense of being right, and that is all fine and dandy but it doesn't pay the bills, or offer health care, or a 401K or even get you a cup of coffee.

Now back to the legislature's role in all of this. Odds are you know Frank Commisso Sr. is Junior's dad and that he is the majority leader and one of the most powerful on the 39-member body. The legislature controls the county purse strings and already flexed its muscle once by denying one of McCoy's appointments.

Who knows how much pressure it will put on McCoy, but every indication is it's going to get ugly. Again, see where I got the first graph from?

can make people a little more aware of that method."

"We have the advanced website, which has Notify Me," pointed out Supervisor John Clarkson, "which is very helpful for people who sign up that are interested in it. Frankly, our Facebook section—the website automatically posts to our Facebook site—has not been a big success and I can't say why.

"Notification—always important," he continued. "I think we do it. We don't do a lot it except in special cases, as legally required, and in some other cases like Wemple Corners, for example. I think we did a very large mailing to get people out, far beyond any legal requirement." Noting that certain projects tend to generate more interest than others, he pointed out that a project proposed for the old Mangia site has already garnered plenty of public response before even making it before the Planning Board.

"I'm not sure that there's one answer or an easy answer," said Clarkson, expressing interest in

"Frankly, our Facebook site - the website automatically posts to our Facebook site has not been a big success and I can't say why."

Supervisor John Clarkson

Leslie's comment about posting signs.

Ultimately, he said, regarding the proposed zoning changes, "We're hearing about a lot of other things from people as they're looking at this, because they have other things on their mind and that's good. They're things that I would like to look at."That being said, he expressed reluctance to allow newly raised concerns to interfere with process on things that have been "duly identified and worked on for quite a long time."

Before ending the meeting, the board agreed that it would be best to vote on the raft of changes before the end of the year, when a new board member will be taking his seat. As the next meeting on Dec. 14 will be the last time the board meets in 2016, Clarkson asked, "Do we feel that we have enough information to vote on this at the next session?"

"Probably," said VanLuven, who mentioned that he needed time to review changes proposed for Rural Industrial Light Districts.

"Given how this was put on the agenda so close to the meeting date," he added, "I would encourage all the people watching on TV to reach out to us with additional comments and input since they weren't able to do it tonight." (Video of the full town board meeting, with discussion of zoning change updates, can be found on the town website's meeting portal.)

"We will be posting an updated draft in accord with the discussion tonight," said Clarkson, who said he thought Leslie would be able to have it ready sometime this week. Residents are encouraged to look at the zoning proposal and reach out to board members, by phone or email, with any questions or

"Up until three years ago, you wouldn't know that she had MS. Nobody on the outside would knows she had MS," D'Aprile, 67, said. She explained that, upon Waldron's diagnosis, the family came into contact with others affected by MS, and they began their fundraising efforts.

Waldron's first foray into raising awareness for MS came very soon after she was diagnosed. That April, she participated in Walk MS, a fundraising event held around the country to raise awareness and treatment and research money for the disease. After that, she became involved with the upstate chapter of the NMSS. Waldron has been the upstate chapter chair for the past three years. Waldron also began to do fundraising at work, selling small stuffed animals with MS tags on them.

Since then, Waldron has created her own Walk MS team called Waldron's Walkers with the goal of raising more money each year to help fight the disease. About 11 years ago, D'Aprile attended her first Women Against MS luncheon, and it was after attending the event she decided she wanted to do more to raise even more money to fight the disease.

As a result, Waldron and D'Aprile created an annual fundraiser that is held at Delmonico's Steak House in Colonie, in which 100 percent of the proceeds are donated to Waldron's Walk MS team.

After initially struggling to build attendance, the Delmonico's fundraiser now hosts 300 people each year. They have also started their own MS 5k, called the Monster Scramble.

"It's just always on my mind to go from one thing to the next," D'Aprile said.

One of the largest hurdles to the activism work, D'Aprile said, was actually getting people to donate. Waldron and D'Aprile either pay for event advertising out of pocket, or have it donated, said D'Aprile, and she mentioned it's been crucial for her to develop supportive relationships with local organizations that will in turn assist them.

"It's a lot of time that you spend doing this. And when things change in your life, you don't have the same time that you used to," D'Aprile said.

Since 2000, Waldron's Walkers has raised $232,278. D'Aprile's goal was to raise $300,000 by 2020, but said now that they will go over that mark next year due to their fundraising events.

For now, D'Aprile is constantly striving to reach the next step in her fundraising efforts, mentioning that she functions on a motivation to totally end the disease. She also understands that there is a lot she can learn about that will in turn bolster her efforts, but for now, the large team involved with Waldron's Walkers will keep the team at the forefront of the local MS fundraising efforts.

"It's good to look on the positive end of something, not the negative end of something. You find your really true friends and family really help you be more successful. I'm all about fundraising and spreading awareness and going forward," D'Aprile

Zach Deputy's one-man show is a marvel to the ears

SARATOGA SPRINGS —

Zach Deputy's schizophrenic oneman show often leaves audiences bewildered, if not amazed and entertained.

"I'm not that good at a lot of other things," said Deputy, "but when I do that it seems simple to me. So, I don't know. It's just a gift, as far as I can tell. Because, it hurts people's brains, but for me that makes sense. But, if they start popping popcorn, I might mess that up. As far as doing loops, I feel I was made for it. As soon as I started making music when I was 13, before I even knew what looping was, I was looping."

The Georgia based singer, songwriter and multi instrumentalist just released his new album "Wash It In The Water" in September. It includes catchy, upbeat tracks peppered with Caribbean influences and showcases a sense of humor through his versatile voice, ingeniously enhanced by his creative looping.

Deputy started the art of looping through a karaoke machine with a double-tape deck, "this was when tape decks were a thing." But, instead of singing along to Sublime's "Santeria," Deputy would lay down a 30-minute track of beatboxing.

Stop. Eject. Switch out tapes.

Followed next with him laying down a few chords off his guitar.

Dare to Dream

Disney on Ice presentation inspires children to pursue dreams

ALBANY — Disney's princesses are coming to town bringing with them a message for children to "Dare to Dream."

The Disney on Ice tour "Dare to Dream" stops at Albany's Times Union Center for a four-day stop from Thursday, Dec. 15 to Sunday, Dec. 18.

Join Mickey Mouse, Minnie Mouse, Donald and Goofy as they follow four of Disney's most inspirational princesses on their adventures to fulfill their dreams in Feld Entertainment's newest ice spectacular, Disney On Ice presents "Dare to Dream." Combining the contemporary stories of two modern-day princesses, Rapunzel and Tiana, with the classic elegance of Cinderella and Snow White, "Dare to Dream" whisks audiences away on exciting journeys where dreams really do come true.

Audiences begin their magical, musical voyage in New Orleans celebrating the story of "The Princess and the Frog" with Princess Tiana and Prince Naveen, and then escape into the enchanted forest with Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs. The trip continues to Cinderella's kingdom in her search for true love and follows Rapunzel as she discovers the world beyond her tower on her quest to see the floating lanterns. The Disney Princesses then come together for the first time on ice during the finale, to welcome Rapunzel into their royal court in the ultimate princess experience.

"There's something within each of the stories of Tangled, The Princess and the Frog, Cinderella, and Snow White and the Seven Dwarfs that speaks to women and girls and families around the world," said show co-producer Nicole Feld. "Each of these princesses is searching for what truly makes them happy. And I think that's very reflective of what audiences are like today."

Show co-producer Juliette Feld added that this show has a few added features from shows of the past.

"This is the first time Rapunzel is featured on the ice with her tremendous amount of hair," said Juliette Feld. "And new this year, the princess who started it all, Snow White, will be joining the show with the Seven Dwarfs, bringing more magic than ever before."

'A Christmas Carol' at Palace

ALBANY — The Nebraska Theatre Caravan will perform "A Christmas Carol" at the Palace Theatre on Wednesday, Nov. 30 at 7:30 p.m.

The Caravan's 37-year-old tour adds to Dickens' classic story by incorporating traditional Christmas carols throughout the narrative.

Tickets start at $32.50. For more information or to buy tickets visit www.palacealbany.org/events or the box office at 19 Clinton Avenue in Albany.

Mozarteum Orchestra of Salzburg at Troy Music Hall

TROY — The Mozarteum Orchestra of Salzburg will perform at the Troy Savings Bank Music Hall at 30 Second Street in Troy on Thursday, Dec. 1 at 7:30 p.m.

Founded in the city of Mozart's birth, the Mozarteum Orchestra of Salzburg is among Austria's finest musical ensembles. This program includes works from Schubert, R. Strauss and Beethoven.

turn out, it set a record for us and was the catalyst to continue hosting unique and fun public events like our Vineyard Grape Stomp and MUZAPALOOZA," said The Hill at Muza Business Parter Timothy Tyrrell. "This year we've challenged ourselves to take it up a notch, so we've got something really special planned, a little 'holiday magic."

On Thursday, Dec. 1, at 7 p.m., The Hill at Muza will light a 15 foot spruce tree from Bob's Trees in Galway N.Y. The tree will stand on an outdoor "stage" area, about six feet above the beer garden, and is decorated with 500 feet of twinkling Christmas lights. (Note: The rain date is Saturday Dec. 3, same time.)

Miracle On 15th Street

During its first year in business, The Hill at Muza earned a reputation for hosting special events with a fun vibe and distinct sense of humor, > such as Dyngus Day, Vineyard Grape Stomp, Fire On the Hill, and Muzapalooza. For Miracle on 15th Street, The Hill at Muza will deliver, in true Muza spirit, a bona fide flying holiday miracle guaranteed to charm the crowd and warm hearts with small American city pride.

Hot Chocolate Red Wine

There will be a special house-made hot chocolate red wine, using real chocolate hand whipped by The Hill at Muza team. Hot mulled beer, hot chocolate, regular beer and wine will be available from the bar, as well as foods from the newly expanded kitchen.

Complimentary plates of Christmas cookies will be served.

The Rensselyrics, an RPI student acapella group, will perform holiday carols and songs for the crowd from 7 to 9 p.m., and will be joined by a special surprise musical guest.

The Drink Line Will Move

This year, to ensure the drink lines move hastily, there will be a second, draftonly, auxiliary bar in the outdoor garden, wrapped like a giant Christmas present with a big bow. The outdoor garden is heated with eight, 9-foot tall flame torch

For those who like it a little toastier, the enclosed bar space is warmed by a cast iron fireplace. The indoor area will be festively decked with holiday lights and

Off The Record to play holiday show at the University Club on Friday, Dec. 2

ALBANY — Who said blondes have more fun? Ask Joanna Palladino and she would disagree.

"I have to say redheads," she said with a laugh. "I'm a redhead on stage, and a blond in real life."

On stage Palladino fronts Albany's threepiece cover band, Off The Record. The trio boasts of being the Capital District's lone lounge band, covering '60s rock with a go-go flare. Guitarist Bill Harrison and drummer Bob Resnick come across as two, clean-cut, all American gents on stage. Their white shirts and black ties are contrasted by Palladino's crimson bee hive, leopard skinned long coat and heels. The coat usually comes off after the first song, often revealing a sleeveless dress and long, white gloves.

To say the three have fun would understate the attention they demand while on stage. At a recent show opening for The Fleshtones at The Hangar, Palladino jumps and jives, stomping on stage, whipping up the crowd. With songs that predate most of those in

"When we got together five or six years ago, we just started picking out songs that we liked," said Palladino, explaining how the band became to be. "And, what we discovered was that the majority of them were '60s songs, and we didn't even realize it. So, from that point on we made a conscious decision to [cover] mostly '60s, and some then we would take newer songs with a retrovintage feel. That '60s, rock & roll lounge kind of sound."

That sound conjures images of times gone-by, where men wore fedoras and drove gas guzzling Buicks. Where the Masters of the Universe met in exclusive downtown clubs, drinking scotch in smoke filled barrooms. If you think of AMC television's "Mad Men," you're following along nicely.

Friday, Off The Record take its show to The University Club of Albany, perhaps no better pairing between venue and act. Founded in 1901 by prominent members of Albany society, the University Club is housed in a brick, Colonial Revival on the corner of Washington Avenue and Dove Street. The assembly rooms adorned with chandeliers, crown molding and Greek archways at each

"And, my favorite is the women's bathroom is carpeted and has Aqua Net [hairspray], usually," said Palladino. "So, personally, I really love it because it is a little throwback. It's not completely modern, in a modern sense. It's a really neat space," she said, adding that that club has managed to maintain the charms of its past despite the years.

As, too, Off The Record's music.

TROY — Head to downtown Troy on Sunday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. to ring in the holiday season with your family and friends during the Northeast's largest, free holiday festival, the 34th Annual Troy Victorian Stroll. The theme for this year's rendition of the popular event, presented by the Rensselaer County Regional Chamber of Commerce, is "Celebrating Troy's

Take a step back in time as you casually stroll through downtown Troy's streets, joined by revelers of all kinds in period clothing.

Check out the holiday storefront displays created for this year's Window Decorating Contest and take a moment or two to browse through some of the city's boutiques, where you're guaranteed to find some unique gifts for the special people on your shopping list.

You'll also have ample opportunities to eat, drink and be merry as you enjoy delicious cuisine and beverages while either sitting inside one of downtown Troy's many restaurants or by grabbing a quick nibble from one of the food vendors in Monument Square before you make your way around town. There will be plenty of live entertainment on hand, too, with more than 100 live performances taking place during the course of the five hour festival.

Be sure to head back to Monument Square for 5 p.m. for the city's tree lighting ceremony, caroling, and a special Happy Birthday sing-along to celebrate The Collar City's bicentennial.

For more information about the event, including a detailed list of participating vendors and merchants, visit the official website at www.victorianstroll.com. For a full list of events taking place in association with the stroll, visit www.victorianstroll.com/events-2.

Food & Vino

After-Thanksgiving Turkey Salad

By MICKEY SPELVIN

news@spotlightnews.com

CULINARY ARTS

Perhaps it should go without saying, but if you still have Thanksgiving leftovers in the fridge right now, you may be taking a chance eating it.

According to eathydate.com, leftover Thanksgiving turkey (assumed it's been refrigerated) has a seven-day window before it spoils.

Nonetheless, here is a recipe for today's daring, and tomorrow's more practical, diner. We recommend you keep a hold of this one for next year so you have another approach to eating those holiday leftovers, other than the tried-and=true turkey sandwich ... with sourdough bread, a healthy slathering of mayonnaise and a little slat and pepper... Starting to feel a little daring, aren't you?

Be careful out there.

Ingredients — serves six

- 3 1/2 cups diced turkey
 - 4 celery ribs; sliced
 - 4 green onions; chopped
- 1/2 cup toasted pecans; chopped 1/2 cup red bell pepper; chopped
- 1/2 cup low-fat mayonnaise
 1 Tb dill weed
 - Salt and pepper; to taste Lettuce

Preparation

In a large bowl, combine turkey, celery, onions, pecans and bell pepper. Combine mayonnaise, lemon juice, dill weed, salt and pepper in small bowl and stir into turkey mixture. Refrigerate until serving. Arrange turkey salad on lettuce leaves.

Wine Pairing

Chateau Ste. Michelle Riesling
- Columbia Valley, Wash. — No matter how succulent that turkey tasted on Thanksgiving, the meat drives out over time in the refrigerator. So, instead of going with a dry white wine, grab a riesling.

"This wine offers crisp apple aromas and flavors with subtle mineral notes." — Winery Notes

HEALTH & FITNESS

Season of giving

'Tis the season for overeating and now's the time to call in the reenforcements to aid in your fitness routine

By DAN ROMAND

news@spotlightnews.com

It's the holiday season, a time when we all look forward to spending time with our family and friends, having fun and just relaxing.

It's also the time we tend to pack on the pounds. Trust me, as a trainer, I get it. Heck, sometimes I succumb to it myself.

Let's face it, the days are getting shorter, it's cold out and we have a lot of things to get done to prepare for

Add to that, for many of us, stress goes up both at home and at work. The last thing many of us want to do is get to the gym and workout, or worse, pass up those holiday treats that always seem to be lying around

But it doesn't have to be that way. You don't need to pack on those five or ten extra pounds that so many of us do.

Here are some tips you can follow to help you navigate around the holidays.

Schedule your workouts: Whether you work out at home, in the office or at the gym, put your workouts on the calendar and stick to them. Rather than leave it to chance, be proactive and set aside dedicated times when you will do your workouts.

Get your workouts in before your brain wakes up: Yep, you heard it right. Set the alarm clock a bit earlier and get your workout in before everyone else wakes up. Not only will you have more energy throughout the day, you'll be less inclined to blow off your workout due to things that come up during the day.

Get a partner or work with a trainer: As personal trainers, this is where we see the biggest benefit for our clients. They know if they don't' show up, we will hold them accountable. You'll be less inclined to skip a workout if you know someone is waiting for you.

www.spotlightnews.com November 30, 2016 | the spot 518 B15

Change up your workout routine: Boredom can be a killer when it comes to motivation. What better time to shake things up than now? Do you only do cardio workouts before resistance training? Need to work on flexibility? How about some yoga? It's a great time to get out of your usual routine and incorporate something new. Not only will it help motivate you, but you'll confuse the body and force it to react to the new workout which can help you break through plateaus.

MODERATION: Don't just say, "I'm not going to eat any of the tasty treats." Hell, most of the time, you'll get so tempted you'll go crazy and eat ALL of them. Instead, say, "I'll enjoy them but within reason." Let's say you love Christmas cookies. Well, instead of saying, "I'm not going to have ANY," (and next thing you know you've eaten the entire tray in one sitting) say, "I'm going to allow myself to have one or two each day." This way you won't feel deprived you'll get more enjoyment out of them and you'll feel less guilty. One cookie a day isn't going to pack on a ton of weight eating the entire tray; well, that's another story.

Set a very specific goal(s): We all know about the New Year's resolutions to get fit and lose weight. Many times it's because we've gained weight over the holidays and feel guilty. Why wait? Start now by setting goals. It can be as simple as I won't gain any weight during the holidays or I will work out four times a week. Whatever your goal is, hold yourself accountable to it and if you can't have someone else do it for you, that's what we personal trainers do! This way instead of digging a hole for yourself before the New Year, you'll already be raring to go!

We all know how busy we get during the holiday season but incorporating these suggestions, even just a few of them, can go a long way towards getting through the holidays without gaining those unwanted pounds.

MUSIC REVIEW

Look who's back

A Tribe Called Quest drops first album since 1998 with "We Got It From Here ... Thank You 4 Your Service"

By DAVE OSTROFF

ostalgia has taken over modern pop culture. Star Wars and Ghostbusters are back in theaters, Dave Chappelle guest starring on Saturday Night Live, and now one of the most influential American rap groups rises again for the first time in 18 years to release its sixth album. It's a product of the exact recipe of what makes a Tribe album so revolutionary, but with a slight variation of every ingredient.

The production value of this album is immaculate. It feels like listening to a remastered, never released album.

A Tribe Called Quest led the public to believe its 1998 release "The Love Movement" was its fifth, and last, album following the group's break up that same year. Though members of the band cited issues with record label Jive Zomba for the split, Malik "Phife Dawg" Taylor didn't shy away from being critical of Kamall Ibn John Fareed, or "Q-Tip", in his 2000 solo release "Ventilation: Da LP." Differences had been placed aside long enough for a handful of reunion shows, but never another album, before Taylor's death back in March.

Even without all of the original members, "Thank You" sounds effortless and always moving. Taylor's passing of was an inspiration for the production of the album that includes a variety of unpredictable, unique jazzy grooves and heavy drum and bass beats, placed under quick and witty lyrics.

Putting aside the negative feelings and thoughts was the best thing the members could have done for themselves.

Once again, the group has created something one of a kind. A revolutionary album listeners can only hope will inspire other artists to follow in Tribe's footsteps.

CONCERT REVIEW

All You Really Need: DSO at the Palace

Dark Star Orchestra brings back the Dead, replays setlist from 1979

By BEN BOIVIN

ALBANY — Dark Star Orchestra brought the good of Grateful Dead back to life in a stellar fashion with its showing at the Palace Theatre on Saturday, Nov. 18. Excitement filled the auditorium before the first note was played as word had spread Jeff Chimenti would be on keys for the entire show as he did the night before in New Haven, Conn. Normally holding down the boards, Rob Barraco replaced Skip Vangelas on bass, creating a musical chairs scenario we were all ready to embrace.

Opening the set with a heartfelt "Sugaree," the Capital District crowd began to "shake it" on low gear while blissfully enjoying Jeff Mattson's passionate vocals. After the silky first set introduction, rhythm guitarist Rob Eaton wasted no time channeling the cowboy in Bob Weir with a wild west "Me and My Uncle> Big River" onetwo punch. While "Me and My Uncle" is by far the most played song in the Dead's expansive repertoire, I never get tired of the rockabilly energy release after a soul searching Jerry Garcia tune. Chimenti gave the fans a symbolic "YEEHAW" on the keys during "Big River" and reminded the room why he was invited by the remaining Dead members to join them on the "Fare Thee Well" run.

Slowing things down with an exceptional threesome of "Peggy-O," "Cassidy" and "Friend of the Devil," this show was starting to feel like a classic late 70s gathering Barraco displayed his nasty bass playing abilities during "Peggy-O" before Lisa Mackey floated her way on stage during "Cassidy," playing the role of Donna Godchaux. She would return two songs later for "From the Heart of Me" which would turn out to be one of the last times this tune was ever played on stage. It was after "Ramble On Rose" that a wide-eyed seasoned tour-veteran giddily informed me of the Grateful Dead show the Orchestra was recreating: Jan. 11, 1979 from the Nassau Veterans Memorial Coliseum in Uniondale, NY.

My original hunch of a late '70s show turned out to be true, but I did not realize the importance of the date until hearing the tear-the-roof-off "Jack Straw." Cowboy Bob was back for this desperado masterpiece as Mattson threw in some rawer than usual jamming. Deadheads young and old call this one of the best versions of all time for the blistering

Jerry solo and, nearly 38 vears later, DSO honored their heroes to the fullest extent. Also noteworthy in the original performance was Bobby's comical word-swap as he sang, "We used to play for acid, now we play for Clive." But from what I heard on Saturday, Eaton left those lyrics in 1979. Out of all the stand-out moments of the first set, the vocal belting of "Jack Straw from Wichita" hit the crowd with a sonic uppercut that we didn't recover from until after set break. The always rockin' "Deal" closed out a set filled with Jerry's greatest hits and some colossal Bobby moments in between.

Picking up right where the first set left off, "I Need a Miracle" carried the tidal wave of momentum that was felt over the intermission. "Ship of Fools" calmly sailed into the number two slot of the second set before kicking off another Weir-inspired highlight in "Estimated Prophet." Chimenti, Barraco and Mattson provided the foundation for the psychedelic reggae and while we were in Upstate NY, the California lyrics were shown a lot of love. "My time's comin' any day" eerily stood out to me as the original 1979 show would be Keith Godchaux' last appearance at the famed Grateful Dead stomping grounds of the Nassau Coliseum. An even more fitting tune for the final night of Keith in Long Island, "He's Gone" allowed my over-thinking self to read even further into the lyrics, symbolism and song placement of my favorite band. Fortunately, we were given a temporary vocal time-out and the spinners in the audience were treated to a short and sweet "Drums" by Dino English and Rob Koritz on kits and percussion.

New Yorkers from Long

Island to Albany were able to enjoy the home state lyrics delivered in the straightforward version of "Truckin" before the second major highlight of the set, "Stella Blue." Mattson made his guitar strings shine one more time during this bluesy crowd pleaser. "Stella" may have a somber tone, but Jerry's fiery guitar solo always brings the boil to high during this signature ballad and the Orchestra perfected the nucleus of the original. Closing the second set with a reminder of all we really need, "Good Lovin" pleasantly drifted off into DSO show

The boys encored with "Casey Jones," which serves as a rarity in late '70s era. The "upper" drug reference in one of the band's most radio-played tunes gave the crowd the extra pep in their step before pouring out into the street of Albany for a night cap. Similar to the good ol' Grateful Dead, Dark Star Orchestra seems to have a particular affinity for the Empire State. While I have not done the research, I would suggest that New York may have more Deadheads per capita than any other state from sea to shining sea. Saturday night's recreation of a legendary 1979 Nassau show performed in front of an Albany crowd furthered my love for New York State, the Grateful Dead and the incredibly talented Orchestra that pays tribute to them tour after tour.

North "Pole" Menu

The Hill at Muza offers an evolving menu of Polish and Eastern European dishes, tradition with a twist. In addition to staples like burgers, smoked wings and Polish kielbasa, new items include Smazeny syr (a deep fried edam cheese sandwich) and a slowsmoked pork shoulder taco topped with traditional Polish cucumber and cream salad, mizeria.

The beer list features brews from Central and Eastern Europe. The house draft is Zywiec, a pale lager brewed with mountain water that comes in full or half liter pours.

For a full menu, visit: http://www.thehillatmuza.com/menu

Adopt The Hill At Muza As Local "Ski Lodge"

Starting in December, The Hill at Muza will offer Apres Ski specials, all season, bringing the local ski crowd together with their non-skiing friends.

Every Tuesday through Saturday, from 4 p.m until 11 p.m., a variety of specials will be available to those who present a ski pass or social media post from the slopes that day. Skiers on their way back from the mountain are encouraged to relax outdoors in their gear before heading home for the night, making The Hill at Muza "the last hill of the day."

Awesome ski movies will play in the bar room with other surprises to be announced.

"We're embracing the outdoor space, and we want our guests to have as much fun as they can with the winter weather," said Adam Siemiginowski, business partner of The Hill at Muza. "We want to offer an in-between place where skiers and their non-skiing friends can meet and hang out."

The business is located on Route 2, which is one of two major routes connecting the Capital Region to New England ski resorts.

Fireplace, Giant Beers, '80s Music & Polka Bathroom

The Hill at Muza has a uniquely textured space framed by three adjacent buildings, a cobble-lined wall and a wooded hill.

Guests enter through a pair of black gates, located at 379 Congress St. A narrow walkway between two buildings leads to a surprisingly charming open-air landscaped beer garden with intimate nooks of stonework and woodwork, as well as fanciful lighting by Troy-based Lightexture. Arriving in the space for the first time can feel a bit like stepping into Willy Wonka's world of pure imagination.

There is an enclosed clubhouse-treehouse-like barroom with tables and indoor seating. Overlooking it all is a man-made waterfall and stage for performances. After dark, the garden is heated by a collection of commercial flame-torch patio heaters that cast a wonderful glow into the night.

"It feels like a secret stone hideaway in the middle of the mountains, but we're proud to be in the hills of Troy," Tyrrell said. "When you visit The Hill you experience a European 'staycation' that's within driving distance from anywhere in the Capital Region."

The bar features a variety of Central and Eastern European halfliter beers, local American beers from Massachusetts and Connecticut, as well as Zywiec Polish Lager, brewed with Polish mountain spring water, on draft in 10 oz., half-liter and one-liter signature glassware. There are several "beer cocktails," including the "Wheat Toast" (Polish wheat beer and sparkling Italian white wine) and "Busy Polishman" (Polish porter topped with a rich espresso shot). The wine list features local vineyards such as Hermann J. Weimer from New York's Finger Lakes as well as international titles such as Vorspannhof Mayr's Gruner Veltliner which pairs well with pretzel bites.

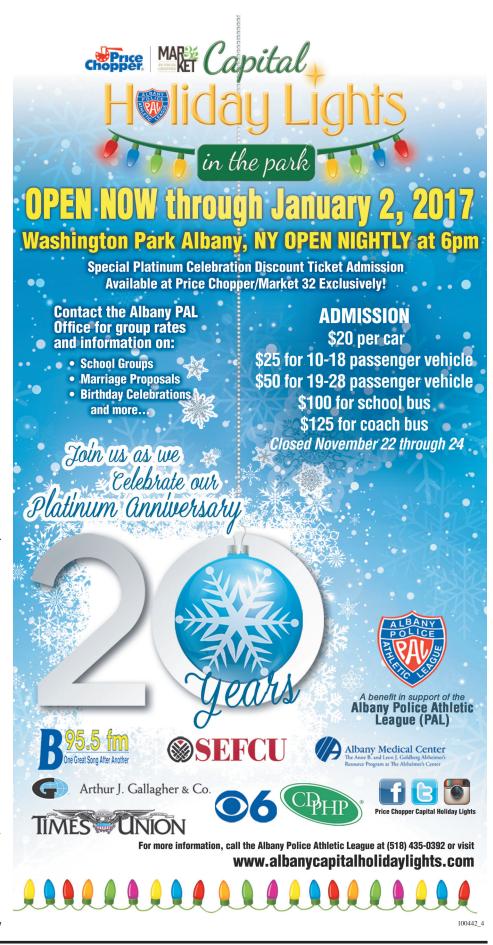

An evolving menu features Polish and Eastern European dishes, tradition with a twist. In addition to staples like burgers, smoked wings and Polish kielbasa, new items include Smazeny syr (a deep fried edam cheese sandwich) and a slow-smoked pork shoulder taco topped with traditional Polish cucumber and cream salad, mizeria.

The music of choice at The Hill at Muza is quality hits from the 80s, except for the bathroom which blasts Polka.

The Hill is an outgrowth of Muza, the adjacent Polish restaurant on 15th Street established nine years ago by Siemiginowski's parents.

Master of the Loop

Stop. Eject. Switch out tapes.

Then, he'd finish it off by playing along on his Casio keyboard.

"Before I knew it, I had an album," he said. "Literally, before I started playing music in front of anybody, I had seven really horrible loop albums, before I even knew there was a loop machine."

"I mean, I don't know what to call my music. Even after all these years, I'm still trying to figure out what it is."

Deputy said he was influenced by his grandmother's music, listening to a lot of calypso, salsa, African, Cuban and samba. "My mom, even though she was Puerto Rican, she would listen to country music. And my dad, even though he was a country boy, he would listen to old Motown and soul music. So, all that music influenced me a lot." Deputy also identifies himself as a child of the '90s, so he admits to listening to a healthy dose of Tupac, Biggie and Nirvana. The amalgamation of each respective school of music has had such an impact on Deputy, his sound has been described as "islandinfused drum n' bass gospel ninja soul."

"I guess my former management coined the phrase. I think I said "gospel ninja soul" and they put in "island influenced drum and bass." I don't really get the drum and bass, but, I mean, we get weird. So, I guess I get it when we start going [beatbox]. So, I get it. It happens."

Perhaps now it's worth noting Deputy is a one-man band. So, when he says "we," it's he, himself and ... well, you'll get the picture in a second.

Deputy is one of four kids. "I'm what I call the 'Super Middle," said Deputy. "When you're the Supper Middle, you're forgotten about. It's not because your parents don't love you, I totally get it. Because, the older one is doing everything first. The youngest is the whiniest and the one you have the nurture the most. And, the only girl, you have to protect like fine china. So, I learned more from my older brothers than I learned from my parents. I think it kind of helped me figure I needed to have a craft. I needed to learn something to make me independent."

Dependent only on technology, Deputy takes the stage and surrounds himself with a bevy of instruments. With a guitar slung over his shoulder, he sits behind a keyboard, delay pedals at his feet, three microphones at his face and a stereo sampler. Ĥe's a cross between Dick Van Dyke's street performer in "Mary Poppins" and Deadmau5. But, Deadmau5 isn't known to speak on stage, let alone to imaginary people.

"I was always in bands that were very satirical, said Deputy. "We always had a lot of banter in between songs, messing with each other, pumping each other up when we took solos ... Being a solo guy, I kind of miss that aspect of the banter. So, I just kind of make it up, and have imaginary musicians."

Leroy is on the bass. Cletus was on the keys, "but, I took the keys away, so Cletus is fired right now. [Laughs.] He was getting crazy, man. And, he's so emotional, we had to get him out of there." T.C., named after the helicopter pilot from '80s television Magnum P.I., is on the drums.

"A lady, not so long ago, came up to me at the end of a show and asked, 'Who's Leroy? I didn't see him on stage the whole time, but I know he plays bass for you," shared Deputy. "So, I had to explain to her. 'No. Leroy is an imaginary person. He doesn't exist. I play all the instruments.'

[Laughs.] And, that kind of blew her mind.'

Deputy said the confusion is shared by musicians, too, who are amazed once they've learned all the music heard live was performed by him alone, right in front of them. It's something of a spectacle show attendees will witness for themselves Friday, Dec. 2 at the Putnam Den in Saratoga Springs.

"I'm the opposite of a magician. A magician is creating an illusion to make you think something is real. I'm doing something that is so unbelievably real, people believe it's an illusion. And, I'm constantly debating with people that I'm doing what I'm actually doing. I take it as a compliment, but it's funny to do something and people not believe it."

IN BRIEF

Opening Reception for "Gravity and Light" at Opalka

TROY — The Opalka Gallery is holding the Opening Reception for "Gravity and Light: Caroline Ramersdorfer Sculpture, 1985-2016" at its location at 140 New Scotland Ave. in Albany on Dec. 2 from 6 to 8 p.m.

Ramersdorfer carves intricate interiors from huge blocks of Vermont Danby marble as if from the inside out, harnessing light and the marble's glittering whiteness. She works in contrasts to create sculptures that simultaneously appear grounded and weightless.

For more information call 518-292-7742, email opalka@ sage.edu or visit opalka.sage.edu.

Ballston Spa Holiday Parade

BALLSTON SPA — The Ballston Spa Holiday Parade and Tree Lighting will take place on Dec. 2 from 6:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. proceeding down Milton Avenue.

Enjoy holiday floats, marching groups, musicians and carolers, animals, fire trucks and more.

For information or to take part in the parade, call 518-885-2772 or info@ballston.org.
