The birth of a school district

BCSD grad and former teacher asks community for help documenting the district's lesser-known history

By ALI HIBBS
hibbsa@spotlightnews.com

DELMAR — The first 13 seniors graduated from the Bethlehem public school system in 1929. Prior to that, students in the Town of Bethlehem were forced to commute to the City of Albany if they wanted to attend high school.

Beth Anderson, a Bethlehem graduate who taught English at the high school for 25 years, has recently undertaken a project to document the history of Bethlehem Central School District from those earliest years — and she's asking the community for help filling in the considerable gaps.

According to Anderson, who is a self-professed lover of American history and mystery novels, local students would have to commute by train — on the same tracks that now underlie the Albany County Helderberg-Hudson Rail Trail — to attend secondary school in the City of Albany because Bethlehem did not have its own high school until 1925. In 1925, Bethlehem declared itself a “union-free” district, which allowed it to establish the first class of high school freshmen, 13 of which went on to graduate four years later from Delmar High School (currently Town Hall).

Explaining that there were 15 small “common schools” operating in Bethlehem by 1915, Anderson said, “Yet there wasn't anything for secondary education. That amazed me and so I started looking into it.”

The Cedar Hill Schoolhouse, now home to the Bethlehem Historical Association, was among those first 15 state-sanctioned schools. It is also where Anderson, almost a century later, was inspired to begin cataloguing the history of the district. She was doing some writing for the BHA newsletter, she said, “which allowed me to dig more into the town stuff and I noticed there wasn't really anything out there about the school district. I mean, there's little bits and pieces. . .

“No one has ever written an overarching thing on the whole school district and I thought, ‘I could do that!’ And, I wanted to do it.”

District schools that were built since the 1950s — such as Hamagrael, Glenmont and the high school — have much more historical information available, said Anderson, and are less problematic. “I'm trying to dig and find the early stuff as well,” she said.

To that end, Anderson has been attempting to locate and interview anyone who was involved with the district in its earliest years. “I'm trying to find the oldest people around who still remember,” she said. Thus far, she said she's “had some really great interviews,” but feels she's found more questions than answers.

For instance, she said, she discovered there was an experimental secondary school for just one year, 1917-1918, following the passage of a bill called the Township School Act — a copy of which Anderson has yet to find — which allowed the town to establish a specialized high school that taught an agricultural curriculum to male students

St. Thomas School celebrates 60 years

By ALI HIBBS
hibbsa@spotlightnews.com

DELMAR — “The 1960s was really the peak of Catholic education,” said Thomas Kane, principal at St. Thomas the Apostle School in Delmar. It was during that era, he said, when the school had its highest enrollment numbers — close to 50 students per class. These days, that number is closer to 22. Built in the fall of 1956,

St. Thomas is celebrating its 60th anniversary this coming weekend with a series of community events and is hoping to see many of its 3,000-plus graduates — as well as faculty, family, parish and community members — come out to commemorate the occasion.

“Anyone who’s had any connection whatsoever with the school,” said Kane. “We really would like anybody who has had any sort of relationship with St.

Thomas over the years to come and celebrate 60 years of great education.”

Noting that the community around St. Thomas has changed considerably over the last six decades, Kane, who has been the school’s principal for 17 years, said that the school has changed too. For one thing, there are far more staff and faculty members who don’t identify as Catholic. “There are very few religious still in the Catholic schools today,” he said. “They’re not sisters or brothers or priests anymore. That’s been a big change, certainly.”

For another, the school has dramatically expanded its curriculum. “We offer so many more programs than we used to,” said Kane. “Full music programs, theatre programs, art programs, technology.

One thing the school emphasizes is community outreach. Each class has a local charity with which they work closely. “We don’t just see ourselves as being in the community, we see ourselves as being part of the community,” said Kane.

how to become change agents in the world,” said Kane. “They’re called to use the gifts that God has given them and learning as much as they can is the way they can use those gifts.”

The events will span three days this weekend. Friday will feature meet-and-greet events at three local venues — O’Slattey’s, Twisted Vine and Swifty’s — from 7 to 11 p.m. On Saturday, an open house at the school will allow visitors to tour the building and explore its history. On Sunday, there will be a reception, the only event requiring registration, immediately following the 11 a.m. Mass.

“What makes you feel the best, as an educator,” said Kane, “is when a student comes back to you after they’ve graduated and they tell you what they’re doing, and they thank you for how important you were in helping to shape their lives and to get where they are. It’s that visit from a former student, when you’re lucky enough to see what has grown from the seeds you’ve planted. That’s the best.”

Albany Med expanding outpatient services in Delmar

DELMAR — Renovations are underway to convert Albany Medical Center’s facility at 99 Delaware Ave. from administrative offices to a medical office with outpatient physical therapy and bariatric care facilities.

In addition to internal renovations, façade improvements and new signage on the front of the building, AMC is replacing the parking lot and installing a new sidewalk along Delaware Ave., with landscaped center and end islands adorned by 3 Northern Red Oak trees and other flora, such as Winter Green Boxwood, Euonymus, Hydrangea and Dwarf Fountain Grass.

AMC first applied to the Town Planning Board for variances related to parking and landscaping requirements in December 2016 and final site plan approval was given in mid-April, after the board was satisfied that there would be adequate parking for the facility’s intended usage and that a “modified landscaping plan will enhance the appearance of this property in the Delaware Avenue corridor, and thus be a positive visual benefit to the community.”

The physical therapy clinic, already in use, provides numerous rehabilitation services, including: aquatic therapy; balance training; joint replacement therapy; neurological; orthopedic; pediatric; post-op; sports injuries; and more.

Local politicians, experts discuss climate change

By ALI HIBBS
hibbsa@spotlightnews.com

DELMAR — The day before President Donald Trump officially announced the withdrawal of the United States from the Paris Climate Accord agreements, the League of Women Voters of Albany County (LWVAC) hosted a panel discussion about climate change at Bethlehem Town Hall.

LWVAC said the focus of the May 31 panel was to, “move forward to focus on the exciting new innovations currently happening in the field of environmental conservation and to explore new opportunities in business and science in addressing climate change.”

Rumors of Trump’s impending announcement, however, turned much of the talk to the federal action and what that means for states and local municipalities.

Six speakers sat on the panel: U.S. Congressman Paul Tonko (D-20), who serves on the Energy and Commerce Committee and the Subcommittee on Research and Technology in the federal House of Representatives; Dr. Kathleen O’Brien, from General Electric’s Global Research Center in Niskayuna; Dr. Jeffrey Corbin, associate professor of Biological Sciences at Union College; Constantine Kontogiannis, principal engineer and president of Odyssey Energy Solutions in Delmar; Bill Reinhardt, a former Town Board member currently serving on the Albany County Legislature and director of Solarize Albany County; and state Assemblywoman Pat Fahy (D-109), who serves on the Assembly’s Environmental Conservation Committee.

After Town Supervisor John Clark and LWVAC President Margaret Danes welcomed community members, Ann Reynolds, executive director for the Alliance for Clean Energy of New York, moderated the discussion, which lasted approximately two hours.

“The case for acting on climate is undeniable,” said Tonko. “There are so many economic and national security reasons to act. But, I ask the skeptics that I come across: even if you do not share my alarm or that of the environmental community, why not support policies that are going to clean up our air while growing jobs in the United States?”

Noting that the planet has broken global climate temperature records every year since 2014, Tonko continued, “Despite what President Trump and many congressional Republicans would have the American people believe, it is not a choice between growing the economy and addressing climate change. For the third consecutive year, global GDP is up by some 3.1 percent while carbon dioxide emissions have remained flat, if not reduced.”

Pointing out that the Paris Climate Accord has been joined by more than 140 nations and ratified by more than 100 (leaving the U.S., Syria and Nicaragua — the latter actually wanted a greater commitment — the only outliers), Tonko said, “Retreating from the global climate effort would damage [the] United States’ economic competitiveness and hurt our international reputation. Other countries are positioning themselves to lead the climate energy transition and to dominate clean energy markets.”

General Electric (GE) has spent approximately $20 billion on clean energy research and development since 2005, said O’Brien, “and we have succeeded in creating $170 billion in revenue.” Part of the company’s research, she noted, is not simply focused on reducing GE’s immediate carbon footprint, but also that of the products it creates.

Digitization and the interconnectivity of the growing number of smartphones and other devices, she said, are closely interwoven with that research. “We’re really just starting to look at this, but we’re seeing along the lines of $80 billion in cost-savings to businesses and avoidance of 820 megatons of carbon dioxide emissions per year — just by making our devices smarter and able to talk to each other.”

Noting that gas and oil prices are relatively low, O’Brien said, “We’re actually seeing that wind and solar are cost-competitive today, even with that really low cost of oil and gas. We can pull a ton of shale oil out of the ground, but we can still make wind and solar, and deliver that power to

■ POLICE, FIRE AND EMERGENCY ARRESTS

GC teen dies in car crash

GUILDERLAND — On Sunday May 28, at approximately 8:25 p.m., a single-vehicle crash on Hurst Road in Guilderland ultimately took the life of one Guilderland Central High School student and sent two others to the hospital.

The operator of the vehicle, a 2007 Honda CRV, was 17-year-old Alyssa Gelfand of Witte Road in Guilderland. Gelfand suffered severe traumatic injuries and was airlifted to Albany Medical Center Hospital via MedFlight. She died after succumbing to those injuries on Tuesday, May 30.

The passengers in the vehicle, 16-year-old Sophia Melfe and 17-year-old Sergio Medina, both suffered non critical injuries and were transported via ambulance to Albany Medical Center Hospital.

Police said speed was a contributing factor in this crash and that alcohol was not a factor. A similar accident along the same stretch of road took the lives of two teens in 2000.

The Guilderland school district has been notified and has made counseling available for students.

“Our thoughts go out to the family and friends of the students involved,” said GCSD spokesperson Aubree Kammler. “During this time as the school community processes the news, counselors will be ready to support our students and staff. We will share more information when it becomes available.”

Memorial contributions may be made towards “The Alyssa Project,” a feature film written by Alyssa Gelfand and Dmitry Gelfand, directed by an award-winning director. Contributions may be sent to: SMG Entertainment LLC / 11054 Ventura Blvd., P.O. Box 128, Studio City, CA 91604.

State Police arrests:

GUILDERLAND — On Saturday, May 20, Andrew L. Gartelman, 24, of Clinton Corners, was arrested for a misdemeanor DWI.

State troopers reportedly stopped Gartelman for speeding on SUNY Campus Road in Albany. While he was being interviewed, he allegedly displayed signs of intoxication. Subsequent to field sobriety tests, Gartelman was arrested and taken to the Guilderland barracks for processing. There, he was reportedly determined to have a 0.12 percent blood alcohol concentration and was charged with misdemeanor Driving While Intoxicated. He was released on tickets and was due to appear in Guilderland Town Court on Thursday, June 1.

GUILDERLAND — On Saturday, May 27, troopers stopped a vehicle that 26-year-old Davon K. Poole, of Cohoes, was in for a reported traffic infraction on State Route 155, in the town of Colonie. During interview, troopers detected an odor of marijuana emanating from within the vehicle. Subsequent to a search, Poole was reportedly found to be in possession of marijuana, crack-cocaine, and MDMA (3, 4-methylenedioxymethamphetamine), a psychoactive drug commonly known as Ecstasy or Molly.

Poole was arrested and processed at the Guilderland barracks. He was charged with unlawful possession of marijuana, a violation, and criminal possession of a controlled substance in the seventh — (a class A misdemeanor— and fourth — (a class C felony) degrees. He was remanded to Albany County Jail in lieu of $15,000 bail.

GUILDERLAND — On June 3, state police in Guilderland arrested 22-year-old Bryon C. Barnes, of Clifton Park, for misdemeanor DWI.

Troopers reportedly stopped Barnes for a traffic infraction on Western Ave. in the Town of Guilderland. During interview, Barnes allegedly displayed signs of intoxication and, subsequent to standard field sobriety tests, he was arrested for DWI and taken to the Guilderland barracks for processing. There, he was allegedly determined to have a 0.11 percent blood alcohol concentration.

Barnes was charged with the misdemeanor and released on tickets. He is due to appear in the Guilderland Town Court on June 22.

GUILDERLAND — On Wednesday, May 31, at approximately 3:46 a.m., state police stopped a vehicle on I-90 in the Town of Guilderland for an equipment violation. While interviewing the driver, the trooper established probable cause to search the vehicle. The passenger, Matthew Smith, age 17, of Guilderland, was found to be in possession of 1.9 grams of MDMA (Ecstasy) and approximately 0.5 grams of marijuana. Smith was taken into custody, transported and processed at the Albany station, where he was subsequently charged with fourth-degree criminal possession of a controlled substance; a class C felony; and unlawful possession of marijuana.

Smith was arraigned in the Town of Guilderland Court and the driver was issued traffic tickets and released.

and domestic arts to females. "It says in this [Altamont Enterprise] article that it was established in the Wright House on Kenwood Avenue," she said. "But there was a general practitioner doctor out here named Thomas Holmes who volunteered at the age of 35 to go to serve in World War I, and I read an article that said his house was used since he wasn't there and he was a widower."

The Township School Act was repealed that very winter, said Anderson, who came across another article about the auction of items from the discontinued school. Hoping to find any extant school board minutes that may have been kept by the district after it officially incorporated in 1930, she went to go see BCSD Superintendent Jody Monroe, who suggested she visit the basement of the current middle school, formerly the high school. "So I talked to Dave Doemel, the interim principal there, and we went down into the creepy basement and, actually, one of the cool things down there was I saw the metal door that was original fallout shelter door — which, honestly, wouldn't have protected anybody."

While poking around the basement of the middle school, Anderson found a box marked 1904-1925. "It was like, 'ding!'," she said. "And so I pored through these handwritten school board notes in old ledgers in varying degrees of penmanship." Ultimately, she was still unable to learn more about the short-lived school because the clerk that year neglected to take minutes. Anderson said she did come across 1919 documents recommending the removal of the same clerk for that very reason. "Because he was not taking the minutes," she said rolling her eyes in mild frustration. "That didn't help."

Pointing out that the high school had a Greek fraternity/sorority culture that was still in existence when she was a student there, Anderson said she has been unable to learn much about its origins either. An old schoolmate agreed to let her photograph his high school Phi Delta Phi jacket, but a plea to her graduating class yielded no other responses.

She did speak with a married couple, both of whom graduated from Bethlehem in the '50s. She said she learned some interesting things about the Greek culture at that time and even got to look at communications between the wife and her sorority. For sororities, she said, "it was less of a party function than it was sort of a service thing. The fraternities, not so much — they shot darts and, if they could get beer, they drank it."

"There's part of me that wants to represent that," she said, "but I'm not having a lot of luck finding things."

(Some of the earliest high school fraternities in the country, in fact, began in New York in the 1800s, such as Alpha Zeta, which came into existence at the Union Classical Institute in nearby Schenectady — which was associated with Union College, home of the college fraternity movement — in December 1869.)

In speaking with long-time district faculty members, one thing that has stood out to Anderson is the way the community has changed over 90 years, as evidenced by the way teachers were once hired. "One fellow who taught with the district for more than 30 years was hired on the District Superintendent's screen porch," she said. "He wasn't even from here." After being directed to Bethlehem by a woman a teachers' organization in Albany, the former educator found himself directed to the superintendent's home, where, after a drink, he was asked when he could start.

"That just fascinated me," said Anderson, "because now it's so competitive." She said that she has spoken with four former teachers who were hired in similar ways. Now, she noted, teachers aren't hired without the approval of a committee composed of both administrators and educators. "And it's all done online now; back when I was hired, there was still a lot of paperwork."

In less than a century, BCSD has become one of the top-performing districts in the region, state and nation. Twice in the last three years, it has been ranked first among 84 school districts in the 11-county Capital District region, and sixth in all of upstate New York, based on five categories: language and reading; social studies; science; math; and a category that measures graduation rates and outcomes by calculating the percentage of graduates who plan to attend college and the percentage of students who graduated with advanced Regents diplomas. (Last year, BCSD dropped to second place in the Albany Business Review rankings, trailing Niskayuna by less than half a point.)

If Anderson sees any room for improvement within the district today, she said that she would really like to see more curriculum opportunities for students who may not be bound for college. In a culture that produces so much academic success, she pointed out, students with talents that may not be as academic in nature may experience depression and lower self-worth without other subjects in which they might learn and excel.

That being said, however, Anderson noted that she has long been aware of the district's academic prestige, which she considers well-earned, and specifically commends its efforts to keep up with the latest advancements in teaching and technology. "It's not easy," she said, "but it's important."

Anderson is hoping to connect with individuals who may have family members who remember the district's earliest years or those who have memorabilia from older family members that were educated in Bethlehem. "I love digging and researching and finding," she said. "And people need to understand what's behind what they have."

"Don't let the history be lost," urged Anderson. "We need to know what the foundation is and what we came from. I'd love any information, stories, old photos, any little ephemera or old programs. Any little thing that represents how it was in the early days of the district."

Anyone with anything to share can reach Anderson at: eanderson58@gmail.com or (518) 439-3185.

"In this wonderful age of technology, where we can capture words and images and save them," said Anderson. "I think it's important."

Lady Dutch make it to regionals

The Lady Dutch lacrosse team, after beating Shenendehowa for the Section II championship, made it to the Regionals this year by beating Kingston 15-8 on Wednesday, May 31, before losing to North Rockland 13-10 on Saturday, June 3.

The squad finished its stellar season by going 12-1 in the Suburban Council and 16-3 overall.

In the sub-regional against Kingston, of Section IX, Kadi Futia led the Lady Dutch with four goals and an assist, Kerry Gerety had three goals and two assists and Amanda Nieman and Hayley Kmack had three goals each. Shea Thomson added a goal and an assist and Jamie Golderman had a goal to round out the Lady Dutch offense.

Alexa DiCaprio had eight saves for Guilderland.

Kendal Parker had two goals and two assists for the Section IX Kingston while Analiese Amato and Juliana Sickler each had two goals. Grace Perry had 11 saves in the losing effort.

Against North Rockland, of Section I, Gerety, Golderman, Thomson and Courtney Rafferty each had two goals while Futia and Nieman added a goal each.

DiCaprio had five saves in the losing effort.

Elizabeth Fox and Kerri Gutenberg had five goals each to lead North Rockland, who will play Section XI's Middle Country on Friday, June 9, in the semifinals at SUNY Cortland.

FOR COMPLIANCE AND INFORMATIONAL PURPOSES ONLY. HELP FOR HOMEOWNERS IN FORECLOSURE New York State requires that we send you this notice about the foreclosure process. Please read it carefully. SUMMONS AND COMPLAINT You are in danger of losing your home. If you fail to respond to the summons and complaint in this foreclosure action, you may lose your home. Please read the summons and complaint carefully. You should immediately contact an attorney or your local legal aid office to obtain advice on how to protect yourself. SOURCES OF INFORMATION AND ASSISTANCE. The State encourages you to become informed about your options in foreclosure. In addition to seeking assistance from an attorney or legal aid, there are government agencies, and non-profit organizations that you may contact for information about possible options, including trying to work with our lender during this process. To locate an entity near you, you may call the toll-free helpline maintained by New York State Banking Department at 1-877-Bank-NYS or visit the Department's website at www.banking.state.ny.us FORECLOSURE RESCUE SCAMS Be careful of people who approach you with offers to "save" your home. There are individuals who watch for notices of foreclosure actions in order to unfairly profit from a homeowner's distress. You should be extremely careful about any such promises and any suggestions that you pay them a fee or sign over your deed. State law requires anyone offering such services for profit to enter into a contract which fully describes the services they will perform and fees they will charge, and which prohibits them from taking any money from you until they have completed all such promised services. Section 1303 NOTICE YOU ARE IN DANGER OF LOSING YOUR HOME If you do not respond to this summons and complaint by serving the copy of the answer on the attorney for the mortgage company who filed this foreclosure proceeding against you and filing the answer with the court, a default judgment may be entered and you may lose your home. Speak to an attorney or go to the court where your case is pending for further information on how to answer the summons and protect your property. Sending a payment to your mortgage company will not stop this foreclosure action. YOU MUST RESPOND BY SERVING A COPY OF THE ANSWER ON THE ATTORNEY FOR THE PLAINTIFF MORTGAGE COMPANY AND FILING

our customer at a competitive cost. This is not a science experiment anymore."

Last year, according to O'Brien, half of new power-generating plants were built for renewable energies. GE expects that number will climb to 75 percent within five years.

Likening the day's headlines about Trump's expected abandonment of the global climate agreement to a punch in the stomach, Corbin said he was more concerned with other steps taken by Trump to undo climate protections put in place by his predecessor, which set goals for reducing carbon pollution and protecting public health, as well as intentions announced by new EPA Administrator Scott Pruitt to revisit vehicle emission standards. "The real damage is what they're actually doing with the policies," he said.

"Clearly, there are really strong opportunities across the job market," said Corbin. "I found out today that solar and wind energy jobs are growing 12 times faster than the economy as a whole. Companies, too, are hiring at a rapid pace to address issues of sustainability, not just because it's the right thing to do, but because they realize it makes economic sense to bring their own costs down."

While Kontogiannis heralded the advances in solar and wind energy that have made them more affordable, he explained that retrofitting commercial buildings to make them more energy efficient can have a far greater return on investment. "A displaced megawatt is always cheaper than a new megawatt," he said. "And there's so much possibility in this state and in this region."

"We're just not doing enough," Fahy said of state government. "And part of it is that we just don't have enough folks who care about this."

"If Washington was functional," said Reinhardt. "You would have Republicans, and Democrats like Paul [Tonko], who would be saying, 'Okay. We all agree that climate change is real. Now, what are the right policies to get that done?' That's where we should be. And, unfortunately, that's where most of the world is.

"We're stuck in this situation where we can't even reach a consensus that this is a problem," he said. "And I just really have trouble understanding why that doesn't resonate more with people."

Town Board member and the Democratic candidate for Town Supervisor David VanLuven also attended the panel, and said, "I particularly liked the emphasis on practical steps that communities can take to reduce our energy use. It doesn't matter whether people are motivated by climate change or reducing expenses... everyone benefits from energy efficiency and modern energy sources.

"I want to see Bethlehem continue to improve the town's energy efficiency and increase our use of renewable energy," he said. "We were recently designated a Clean Energy Community by the state, so we now have access to more state funds to advance this effort. We also need to continue

"... [Albany County] is pledging its support to continue its green agenda and working to implement policies that reduce our impact on the environment. ... Albany County is committed to be a place where kids can grow up in a clean, healthy environment and look forward to exciting job opportunities that are being created in a clean energy economy."

who signed an executive order articulating the County's commitment to uphold the Paris Climate Agreement on June 2 thinking about how changing weather could affect our town facilities and residents. For example, as the Hudson floods more frequently, what steps can we take to ensure the treatment plant, well field, and Henry Hudson Park are resilient?"

While Republican candidate for Town Supervisor Gary Fish was out of town on the day of the panel, he later said that he believes climate change is an issue that ought to be addressed by local governments, even if he's not convinced that climate change is man-made. He supports Trump's decision to withdraw from the Paris Climate Accord, however.

"I just don't think, at this point, that it's really beneficial in terms of jobs and the money being spent," he said. "I mean, we're putting out a lot of taxpayer money and China isn't paying anything."

While Fish said he isn't convinced that fully 98 percent of climate scientists agree that human actions have led to global warming, he said, "I think it's a good idea to look at all forms of energy, including renewable, and investigate any steps to make it viable for the town."

Happy Pride

This week, a convergence of gay and transgendered individuals will come together at Albany's Washington Park in the city's annual Pride Festival. It's a celebration of diversity and acceptance of those differences that continues to grow into the largest festival of its kind in upstate New York.

Political figures from across the county gathered at the footsteps of Albany's City Hall on Thursday in recognition of June being LGBT Pride month. Albany Mayor Kathy Sheehan, County Executive Dan McCoy, State Assemblywomen Patricia Fahy and City Councilman Richard Conti joined representative of The PRIDE Center of the Capital Region in the hoisting of the Pride Flag. All stood under the City Hall's shadow on a bright, blue sky day, surrounded by the buildings that define the city skyline — the State Capitol and the Empire State Plaza's Corning Tower. The message they all shared, however, would likely have bristled the Masters of the Universe who first walked those buildings, even the tower named after former Albany Mayor Erastus Corning, completed in 1966.

Each expressed pride in the lengthy strides our community, and society as a whole, have taken to embrace the differences of our neighbors. According to U.S. Census figures, New York state has the third largest population of lesbian, gay, bi-sexual or transgendered adults. With more than half a million LGBT adults, New York is just behind Texas, and well behind California (at more than one million). With those figures in mind, it seems only natural to understand how New York was one of the first states to allow same-sex marriages by law — 45 years after the first gay pride march in New York City.

But, there's still more to be done.

With any pride event, whether it be focused on sexual orientation or heritage, some people are often quick to ask as to why there is no such an event for caucasians or men. The underlying question is, why should any particular group be separated and lauded for its differences? Why should they be lifted up upon a pedestal higher than the rest of us? The answer to both of those questions would be that, they are not being lifted higher. They are simply being lifted up.

We are all the benefactors of brave individuals who stood up against commonly accepted perceptions that oppressed groups of people. Think of the words gay, black, latino, transgendered, and you'll still hear the echos of vile epitaphs that were once socially acceptable to use. When the first pride march took place in 1970, it was attended by the few who dared to come out in public, risking loss of job, friends, family ties, and, far short of hyperbole, life.

There is little need for pride festivals for white men, because it's the white man who has long written the history books. When we still find ourselves adding the "first" moniker in front of an accomplished individual, it means we've only just taken the first step towards establishing the country our Founding Fathers envisioned with when they declared every person was "equal."

WHAT HAPPENED IN 2012

Five Year: President Obama visited SUNY Poly

CAPITAL DISTRICT — During a visit to Albany on Tuesday, May 8, 2012, President Barack Obama said the Capital District was doing everything right to make economic success happen sooner rather than later.

Standing under bright lights in NanoFab X, a $365 million computer chip manufacturing lab that was still under construction at the College of Nanoscale Science and Engineering, Obama praised the high-tech work being done there and deemed it a valuable part of the nation's future progress and a model for the rest of the country.

"Right now, some of the most advanced manufacturing work in America is being done right here in our state of New York," said Obama. "Cutting edge businesses from all over the world are deciding to build here and hire here."

The president pointed to GlobalFoundries in Malta as an example of attracting cutting-edge business and keeping jobs here. "Companies like IBM, GlobalFoundries could decide to pack up and move elsewhere," said Obama, "but chose to stay in Upstate New York because it made more sense to build here."

Bethlehem Supervisor John Clarkson said the NanoCollege and GloFo didn't "have the space for everything" so he hoped the Vista Technology Park would pick up the slack and find its own place in the nanotech world. "We're hoping that Vista can really benefit from that and pick up a lot of their technology business," he said.

Supervisor Paula Mahan said the Town of Colonie was doing its part..

"In our economic development plan we have been working on bringing spinoff companies from GlobalFoundries and jobs to this area and we have had some businesses that have already settled in Colonie that are technology-based and preparing for the future," said Mahan, who met Obama when he landed at Albany International Airport just after 11 a.m. that morning.

Obama spent a few minutes shaking hands with lucky crowd members and VIP guests before heading back to the airport just before 2 p.m. and boarding Air Force One for his flight home.

Elm Park pools open today

BETHLEHEM — The Elm Avenue Park pool complex is open to Town of Bethlehem residents and their guests today, June 7, at 11 a.m.

Non-resident guests must be accompanied by a resident with a valid pool pass. Bethlehem Central School District residents who do not live in the Town of Bethlehem may obtain a special Pay-As-You-Go pass and pay guest rates.

A Bethlehem Central School District tax bill is required to obtain a pass.

Pools are cleared daily at 7:50 p.m. Pool complex rules are posted on the town's web site and on location. A family changing area available. All children under age 9 must be accompanied by someone age 14 or older. Town of Bethlehem residents with a valid pool pass may reserve the "arts and crafts" shelter and surrounding grass area near Splash Islands for parties. Reserve a date using the Pool Party Permit form on the town's web site.

Albany politicians took to the steps of City Hall for the raising of the Pride flag Thursday, June 1, to usher in Pride Month. It also marked the official launch of the Capital Pride Festival.

ALBANY — Planning and coordinating the highly-anticipated Capital Pride Parade and Festival that will happen Sunday, June 11 at Albany's Washington Park takes a lot of time and energy, according to Martha Harvey, the CEO and executive director of the Pride Center of the Capital Region. However, she felt that it was all worth it as it is meant to perpetuate positivity and celebrate the local lesbian, gay, bisexual, transgender and queer (LGBTQ) community.

"It really is about changing the hearts and minds of people because not only do we want the LGBTQ community to feel safe and accepted, we also want to be more inclusive and encourage allies to come and support what we do," said Harvey who attained her position title back in January. Hosted by FLY 92.3 DJ Shawn Gillie, the Capital Parade and Festival will feature performances by Australian singer Betty Who, British R&B and soul singer Maxine Nightingale, local act Grand Central Station and Pride Drag Revue. Besides live entertainment, vendors will cater to the public who can attend both events for free while floats, merchandise and shops permeate the general area. Elected officials, local businesses and community organizations that support the events will appear too.

Having previously worked as the executive director and co-founder of the Hudson Pride Foundation which is a pro-LGBTQ non-profit organization until 2016, Harvey noted that the events she helped coordinate there were much smaller whereas those for the Capital Pride Center required more time and energy to plan out.

Important Information for Breastfeeding Mothers

Lawrence Kotlow DDS

As a parent you have great expectations for motherhood. Unfortunately for many mothers, breastfeeding becomes a toe-curling, painful experience because of poor or missed diagnoses of tethered oral tissues such as tongue-ties and lip-ties. Dr. Kotlow's new book, SOS 4 TOTS, demystifies why. Dr. Kotlow has been treating infants for breastfeeding difficulties due to tongue and upper lip-ties since 1974. In recent years, with the increased number of mothers desiring to breastfeed their infants, he has revised countless abnormal frenum attachments of what are now referred to as "tethered oral tissues" (TOTs). Don't let anyone tell you it is a "Placebo" effect when these tissues are revised. Thousands of infants and mothers have been able to successfully resolve these issues and have a pleasurable, successful breastfeeding experience. No need for your baby to undergo needless general anesthesia or spend time in the hospital, using the state of the art in laser oral surgery, infants and older children can safely and quickly have these tissues corrected. No need to have most infants take adult acid reflux drugs when most infants having reflux do so due to swallowing air. Air induced reflux, not adult acid reflux! Rekindle that bond you wanted with your infant.

If you are a mother who has been suffering needlessly; there may be times when you will cry as you read this book because you will realize the problems are not your fault; the professionals on whom you were depending for help had a basic lack of understanding. SOS 4 TOTS seeks to expose the myths about breastfeeding and heal the heartbreak to make breastfeeding a joy.

Skidmore presents 'Space and Place'

Storytellers' Institute series of free public performances and presentations of artistic work

SARATOGA SPRINGS — Skidmore College recently announced the 2017 Storytellers' Institute's five-week series of public events held across the college campus.

A highlight of the third annual event is a weekend-long documentary "Festosium," held from Thursday, June 8, to Sunday, June 11.

The public events is part of a five-week summer program for documentarians, college undergraduates and faculty part of the John B. Moore Documentary Studies Collaborative (MDOCS). It offers presentations of artistic work and feature symposium-style conversations around an annual theme.

All activities are open to the public and are free of charge.

This year documentary makers explore the theme of 'Space and Place' through film, sound, interactive media and museum curation to connect with audiences throughout the community.

Public events will feature an international group of storytellers who explore the subject of 'Space and Place' through film screenings, audio experiences, dialogues, and star-gazing in local spaces near Saratoga Springs and the Erie Canal. It also looks at locations outside the Capital District, such as Brooklyn, Chicago, San Francisco, Miami, Poland and India.

Documentaries, discussions, and lectures presented by Storytellers' Institute Fellows and visitors feature filmmaker Brett Story ("The Prison in 12 Landscapes"); archaeoastronomer Tony Aveni, from Colgate University; Albany Symphony Orchestra director David Alan Miller; the data visualization work of the Anti-Eviction Mapping Project and the collaborative art/activism work of Laura Chipley and the Appalachian Mountaintop Patrol.

"Space and Place" was selected as this year's Festosium theme because understanding and communicating how spatial relationships operate is a fundamental part of documentary work," said Jordana Dym, director of the John B. Moore Documentary Studies Collaborative. "Spaces matter: anywhere that people live, work, play, worship, create, and connect shapes and provides context for our experiences. Through human activity these spaces become places, rich with memory and meaning. Places may be open or walled off, welcoming or inaccessible. The documentary work you'll experience at Festosium will help us better understand, enjoy and rethink."

During Festosium II, 'Space & Place,' audience members are invited to connect with an international group of storytellers, experience evocative work and conversations that excite reflection, engagement, and inspiration.

"Central to this year's theme is confronting how race and class-based privilege grants access to space and place for some people and takes it away for others," said Sarah Friedland, the newly appointed director of the MDOCS Storytellers' Institute. "The Institute features groups that use documentary techniques in activist work, such as the Anti-eviction Mapping Project and the Appalachian Mountaintop Patrol, highlighting a documentary's role in preserving place and space and in resisting forced removal of people from the places and spaces they call home.

ALBANY — The school year is just about letting out, but by this coming fall, more than 1,000 underserved children in the City of Albany will have a college savings account.

And, it all started with a bunch of fraternity brothers.

The initiative, called “Collegiate Scholars of Tomorrow,” was launched by the George Biddle Kelley Education Foundation of the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity and Albany Medical Center. It’s a million-dollar pilot program focused to inspire, and fund, the dreams of a college education for low income families.

Albany branch of Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity partners with Albany Medical Center to launch ambitious scholarship program for city kids

“The opportunity to attend college is personal to the Alpha Phi Alpha Fraternity,” said Christopher G Ellis, Jr., chairman of the George Biddle Kelley Education Foundation. “We know full well that we do not have the luxury of standing on the sidelines as the knowledge and innovation economy accelerates into hyper-drive and leaves certain communities in its wake.”

The program is unique in upstate New York, reflecting a community’s commitment to helping improve the high school graduation rate and to inspire youth to visualize the possibility of high education as early as the third grade.

According to the state Department of Education, the Albany City School District has the worst dropout rate among public schools in the Capital District. With a rate of 20.9 percent in 2016, Albany City schools rank below Cohoes (18.4) and Schenectady (18.1). This is in stark contrast to the top schools, all within suburban communities, which average a dropout rate of about 2 percent.

“The Collegiate Scholars of Tomorrow Program, with its college savings fund and special programming, is part of an innovative solution for our community to address an abysmal trend,” said Ellis. “This program’s strength lies in our collaborations and partnerships with stakeholders — leaders from business, education and government — who share with us a common vision for our city’s children: new and increased opportunities and a significant promise of a better tomorrow.”

The program targets third-grade students in Albany schools and the children of graduates of the Baby Institute, a grass roots organization that promotes literacy and school preparedness for families in Albany’s South End, Arbor Hill and West Hill.

“The Baby Institute’s goal is to help parents prepare children for college from the moment they are born,” said Noelene Smith, founder and executive director of The Baby Institute. “With the commitment of the ‘Collegiate Scholars of Tomorrow Program,’ parents can believe in the reality of college for their children. I can’t tell you how unbelievable this moment is to me. This gives our children and families real hope.”

Each program participant will receive a New York State 529 College Savings account, administered by the New York state Comptroller, in the student’s name. All participants and their families will attend special quarterly programs, developed and operated by George Biddle Kelley Education Foundation, to reinforce the importance of college attendance and address critical needs — establishing healthy living, strategies and the tools for parental engagement at school, financial literacy and fostering intellectual curiosity.

Each savings account is expected to reach a modest amount of $400 upon high school graduation. According to Ellis, research shows that students who save for post-secondary education are three times more likely to enroll into college.

The program began last year through discussions with the education foundation and James Barba, Albany’s Med’s president and CEO. With the hospital’s help, the foundation gathered financial commitments from Nigo Companies, Tri City Rentals, CDPHP, SEFCU, NYSCOPBA, Inc., MVP Health Care, Kinderhook Bank, and more. All of which raised nearly $500,000. Another $700,000 was donated by Robert F. Smith, founder, chairman and CEO of Vista Equity Partners in Austin, Texas.

Smith is also a brother of Alpha Phi Alpha.

“This is a challenge for which we all share responsibility,” said Barba. “Together, we can offer all young children the opportunity — and the right — to dream no small dreams. We should deliver to them nothing less.”

Nearly 100 people were in attendance for the program’s announcement at Albany Medical Center in May. Included in the crowd was scores of area business, education, government and civic leaders, a dozen of whom spoke to express praise of the program’s initiative, including Albany Mayor Kathy Sheehan and County Executive Daniel McCoy. All were upstaged by a Albany Community Charter School second-grader, Samir Bunch.

Bunch, who wants to grow-up to be a policemen, had everyone on their feet once he was finished with his speech.

“Language can be hard,” he said, “but it challenges me to do the hard things in life. Even though I haven’t visited a college campus, I know I will go to college to be a stand-up citizen of the community.”

Disc Jam: Our hometown jam fest is getting larger with each year

By ALYSSA LADZINSKI

nysmusic.com

STEPHENTOWN — This week, all walks of festival life will be welcomed into the pineapple ridden, lush meadows of rural Rensselaer County — the stomping grounds for Disc Jam 2017, just as it has been for the last two years.

For the last seven years, jam, electronic and funk fans have flocked to the Northeast to enjoy a smaller-scale celebration of music, and this year it's from Thursday, June 8 to Sunday, June 11, at Gardner's Farm. That's not to say it's small when it comes to heart. Disc Jam has gathered exponentially growing festival goers each year in operation, whether it took place in its starting location of Massachusetts or where it sits now, just 40 minutes from New York's state capital.

Nestled in a cozy location just over the border of Massachusetts and its original festival grounds, Disc Jam is easily accessible and hours away from larger cities like Albany, New York City, Hartford, Providence and Boston. The Northeast can effortlessly swarm to a flat, perfectly sized area to catch their favorite musicians across four stages, all while staying in close quarters to camp sites, vendors, artists and the side-by-side main stages. Remaining a tight-knit event with around 4,000 attendees last year, Tony Scavone's festival still brings a larger-than-life mentality to the forefront of its stages. Along with booking popular acts in the jam scene, he crafts unique daily lineups with late night sets, silent discos and mesmerizing moves provided the talented flow tribe, helping you get into a groove of your own.

This year, be on the lookout for a number of New York groups coming from all corners of the Empire State. By now, we all know not to miss the heavy hitters like Brooklynites Turkuaz, New York City trio Consider the Source and Oyster Bay's TAUk. Be sure to lend your time to catching Giant Guerilla Dub Squad, Aqueous, Teddy Midnight, The Other Brothers, Chromotropic and Sophistafunk as well as the Capital Region's own Mister F, Lord Electro, Wild Adriatic and Formula 5, who now comfortably holding its own in the middle of the jam pack. Before you know it, these are the names that will one day headline Disc Jam and your other favorite summer fests—jump on the early stages of their careers and enjoy the journey from day one.

Last year's highlights included a Radiohead set by Consider the Source and fans can expect big talent from the enlightening, New York City based trio again with two sets— one being a two hour acoustic set from 2 to 4 a.m. So, if you happened to be passed out in your tent, hooping fearlessly into the night or checking out the cows on site, you have a chance to redeem yourself and see the magic that is Consider the Source after hours.

Remaining a faithful headliner, Dopapod has topped the bill each year since the fest's birth. Fans only have one complaint: they're not playing two sets. Although it's something they've done on past bills, the Boston-born quartet will instead jet over to Colorado for a gig the very next day, which can only lead one to imagine what stops they'll pull out for Dopafans in Stephentown.

On the bill for the second time, Pink Talking Fish brings their tantalizing Pink Floyd, Talking Heads and Phish covers to the Disc Jam stage. The multi-talented group has gained such expedient notoriety over the years; they rank among the best cover bands in the scene. In 2016, an impromptu "bachelor party" for keyboardist Richard James broke out with Hayley Jane leading a band of ladies on stage, appropriately dancing to "White Wedding" and circling him with dance moves and leopard print garments. Both James and Hayley Jane, who recently signed on to be managed by PTF's Eric Gould, will be back this year with their respective bands, ready to surprise audiences with hidden tricks up their sleeves.

NIGHT — Almost Queen

TROY — Almost Queen returns to the Collar City to open the annual Rockin' on the River concert series with a performance, Wednesday, June 7 at Riverfront Park.

The popular Queen tribute band arguably drew the largest crowd when it was a headlining act in last year's series. Frontman Joseph Russo looks and sounds the part of Queen's charismatic lead singer, Freddie Mercury. Steve Leonard (as guitarist Brian May), John Cappadona (as drummer Roger Taylor) and Randy Gregg (as bassist John Deacon) all put on one of the best, authentic sounding Queen shows one can find.

Opening for Almost Queen will be the Troy Music Academy All-stars.

The series runs each Wednesday for ten consecutive weeks, concluding August 9 with Fleetwood Mac tribute band, Rumours.

Each concert will take place from 5 to 8:30 p.m. in Riverfront Park, sandwiched between historic downtown Troy and the Hudson River.

DAY — Saratoga Arts Fest presents 'Beauty and the Beasts'

SARATOGA SPRINGS — The Saratoga Arts Fest presents "Beauty and the Beasts" on Friday, June 9 from 6 to 8 p.m. at The Victoria Pool House in Saratoga Spa State Park, Saratoga Springs

Featured artist Opera Saratoga will perform selections from their exciting, puppet-filled production of the classic opera. Participants can tour the "Animals in Art," exhibit curated by Quinn Tetterton, create a keepsake Venetian Mask or elaborate fan or visit the friendly furry beasts at the petting zoo where kids can take pony rides.

Tickets are free. For more information visit saratogaartsfest.org.

HOROSCOPES

June 2017 Week 1

CAPRICORN

December 22 – January 19

There's no point in stating the obvious, Capricorn. Few are listening. A day on the water will do wonders for the low morale at home. Start the planning.

AQUARIUS

January 20– February 18

Chuck it, Aquarius. You've made all of the fixes you can. It's time to look into a replacement. A bevy of blessings makes a senior feel loved.

PISCES

February 19 – March 20

Don't look now, Pisces, but someone young and near and dear to your heart is about to make a serious mistake. Stop them if you can. A dream nears completion.

ARIES

March 21 – April 19

"Impressive" does not even begin to describe your performance this week. You will wow everyone with whom you make contact, including your boss, Aries.

TAURUS

April 20 – May 20

Mysteries abound at home. Don't don your detective cap unless you are prepared for what you will uncover, Taurus. A financial worry eases for a friend.

GEMINI

May 21 – June 21

Relax, Gemini. The task may look daunting, but it will be a walk in the park for you. A furry friend inspires a weekend of activity. Enjoy every moment.

CANCER

June 22 – July 22

Emotions run high at home, making for a trying week. Luckily for you, Cancer, a party over the weekend will give you a chance to blow off some steam.

LEO

July 23 – August 22

Do you, Leo? You'll have to answer that question first before you can make any real progress. A crazy plan is hatched, but it is not of your doing.

VIRGO

August 23 – September 22

You've got a hunch, and you're right on. Now may not be the time to act upon it, Virgo. Keep quiet and stay low until you're certain everyone is ready.

LIBRA

September 23 – October 22

Yikes, Libra. A senior is yearning for what they cannot and should not have. Divert their attention before they get themselves into trouble.

SCORPIO

October 23 – November 21

You could do it, but why bother when someone else could do it better? Pass the buck, Scorpio. Words of courage come from a long-lost friend.

SAGITTARIUS

November 22 – December 21

Problems arise at home, but not to worry, Sagittarius. You have the answer. The call for adventure comes once more. Heed it this time. You deserve a little fun.

Clean eating

Key Lime Mousse

By STACEY MORRIS
news@spotlightnews.com

Don't sit out the dessert segment of those summer picnics and barbecues... arrive at the event armed with a sweet treat that will treat your body right instead of sending it into a digestive tailspin! This cleaned up version of Key Lime Mousse is a perfect illustration that eating healthy never has to be boring.

This dessert was inspired from a women's magazine I was leafing through at the doctor's office one afternoon. Instantly, I knew I could make a clean version. The result is below, but here's the wrinkle: the recipe in the magazine was for Avocado Key Lime Cheesecake. This turned out to be more of a mousse. The consistency for slicing a piece of cheesecake is of no matter - I usually skip the crust anyway so I was happy to pour this whipped, slightly tart-slightly sweet divinity into dessert cups.

How good is it? Chef Bill detests avocados and Stevia and he liked it. By all means, if you're anti-stevia, switch to the sweetener of your choice. All I ask is that you don't overdo it because the whole point of the dessert is for the lime element to shine. My brand of choice for lime juice is pictured below. It's quite simply the best. I also like Nellie & Joe's Key Lime Juice. Give it a shot. It's the perfect dessert for summer. And versatile enough to tote to a picnic in Tupperware or dollop into a champagne glass at a dinner party!

Ingredients

- 2 ripe avocados, pitted and skinned
- 1 8-ounce container of vegan cream cheese at room temperature
- 1 can of coconut milk
- 25 drops of Stevia or 1/3 cup of raw sugar or coconut palm nectar
- 1/3 cup lime juice (freshly squeezed or bottled)
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Directions

Blend all ingredients in a food processor or VitaMix until completely smooth. Spoon into dessert cups. May be eaten immediately or chilled. Optional: top with Coconut Whipped Cream.

FILM REVIEW

Wonder Woman: The hero DC needed

Gal Gadot Saves DC Comics
as Wonder Woman

By DIEGO CAGARA
intern@spotlightnews.com

The DC Extended Universe can heave a sigh of relief as Wonder Woman, accompanied by her signature Lasso of Truth, imperishable bracelets, tiara and optimistic disposition, finally makes her cinematic debut and this feminist film yields both a traditional origin story and emotion-heavy sequences.

Israeli actress Gal Gadot does a tremendous job at portraying the iconic comic book character, a powerful Amazonian princess and demigod, who leaves her home, Themyscira, for World War I-stricken Europe. Diana Prince being her civilian name, she operates as a super-soldier of sorts who aids the Allies in fighting the Germans in destructiongalore Belgium.

As a lead-up to the grandiose "Justice League" film which hits theaters this November, "Wonder Woman" could be treated as a standalone film because besides the appearance of a Wayne Enterprises truck and Bruce Wayne's own handwritten letter that Prince receives at the film's start, it aims to bridge a connection between Wonder Woman, a character often tertiary in DC Comics after Superman and Batman, and impressionable audiences.

While Prince's mythological background and the Themyscira setting are initially feared as being somewhat unrealistic, her naiveté, willingness to train for battle and love for the defenseless keep her grounded. Speaking of Themyscira which is depicted as a luscious female-populated island, the imagery and backdrops never fail to dazzle the viewer while enriching the two-and-a-half-hour film's viewing experience, almost as if it deserves its own National Geographic special.

The female-empowering film is directed by Patty Jenkins, the first woman to direct a DC Extended Universe film, who succeeds in balancing romance, war and raw emotion with seemingly far-fetched mythological drama. Philosophy plays a major role here as Prince believes she has to locate and defeat Ares, god of war, believing that this is her destiny which would liberate man from corruption.

The film starts taking strides when Captain Steve Trevor (played by Chris Pine), a spy, crashes near Themyscira which serves as the catalyst for inspiring Prince to help him and the Allies win World War I while falling firmly under the belief that Ares is behind the overall conflict. It becomes almost impossible not to root for Prince, depicted as believing in modern ideals and having a feminist outlook, who delights the casual viewer whenever she literally confronts male army officials and soldiers who micro-aggressively dismiss her just because she is a woman.

The film has sense of nostalgia as Prince genuinely acts like an old-fashioned superhero, with scenes showing how she wants to help numerous injured civilians, confronting male generals for not actively getting on the battlefield to fight and even acting humble when townspeople applaud in gratitude for her saving them from the Germans.

Another traditional-feeling aspect was the brewing romance between Prince and Trevor, with the latter teaching her how to dance as snow falls over the small town they helped save. The inclusion of such a cliché is pardonable as the film actively wants such a nostalgic yet vintage undertone and Prince finding love acts like a rite of passage as the Amazonian princess continues to assimilate to human everyday life. Furthermore, "Wonder Woman" pays homage to the original 1978 "Superman" film in a scene where Prince protects Trevor from a bullet as they are surrounded by armed spies in a dark alley, much like how the late Christopher Reeve's Clark

Kent protected Margot Kidder's Lois Lane in an alley from a shooting thief too.

The film's main highlight is when Prince, in her iconic Wonder Woman ensemble, strips off her thick shawl, climbs up a ladder to leave the filthy trenches and after standing confidently over No Man's Land, she effortlessly deflects German-fired bullets with her bracelets and shield, eliciting scintillating sparks as she advances forward. This scene was intensely powerful, particularly for female viewers, as it showed a determined and undeterred woman leading the way, with all the male Allied soldiers then running ahead too, a mere yelling cluster behind her.

Gadot commands the viewer's attention in every scene she appears, her poised and athletic stature juxtaposed with her youthful beauty and feminine wardrobe choices. The confident aura around her helps make her likeable and relatable in the sense that she simply wants to do the right thing and tend to the vulnerable, despite facing sexist army officials, armed German soldiers and even Ares himself.

The film maintains a sense of humor, which the Marvel Cinematic Universe films excel at while the DC Extended Universe tragically lacks, as Prince gradually learns about the social norms of 1918 Western Europe from Trevor, with amusing results. Comedy is cemented in the character of Etta Candy (played by Lucy Davis), Trevor's bubbly and overweight secretary whom Prince comically perceives as being enslaved when Candy says that her job is to do whatever Trevor tells her to do.

Although she occasionally does not listen to Trevor and her own mother, Queen Hippolyta (played by Connie Nelson), she comes across as a wonderful team player which both results in exhilarating action sequences and a sense of reassuring that she would do well in the upcoming "Justice League" film. "Wonder Woman" artfully plays out in a dichotomous manner, juggling World War I and Prince's internal journey to achieve her destiny of ending Ares.

The film operates somewhat like a massive flashback episode, explaining to viewers who watched 2016's "Batman v. Superman: Dawn of Justice" the context of how Wonder Woman is seen posing with World War I soldiers in a black-and-white photograph. Unlike the 2016 film, "Wonder Woman" seems unconcerned with saturated action scenes, dark undertones and all-too-serious dialogue. Rather, it cherishes the traditional superhero film formula: the hero has an origin story and falls in love with someone, a worthy villain rises, elaborate action ensues and there is a set conclusion.

While 2013's "Man of Steel," 2016's "Batman v. Superman" and "Suicide Squad" were mutually lukewarm, "Wonder Woman" is a triumphant and refreshing win for DC with its compelling human drama, distinctive mythology, empowering message and Gadot's astronomical performance.

LOCAL MUSIC

Let's Be Leonard's 'Live at Gugs'

By ALYSSA LADZINSKI

nysmusic.com

After planting their musical seed in Saratoga Springs, Let's Be Leonard sprouted rather quickly into a jam-jazz fusion powerhouse with all intentions of climbing the jam community ladder. Just a few short years after their formation and quitting their jobs, they've become a prized outfit in the Capital District and beyond.

Following the debut of the band's 2015 debut "Cow," LBL put forth four live recordings on Bandcamp, this time, releasing the fifth, "Live at Gugs" in Glens Falls.

The 5-piece, led by Karl Bertrand (vocals and rhythm guitar), Matt Griffin (guitar), Connor Dunn (saxophone), Chris Cronin (bass) and Paul Guay, (drums) took on their Thursday night gig at Gugs in March. The 14-track live recording displays the group's organic and majestic improvisations, whether they're taking it slow and steady with poppy lyrics and sing-a-long choruses or bringing back the blues with suave, seductive saxophone solos.

The gathering at Gugs was treated to a debut opener of "Spit it Out," a fresh track with buttery-smooth jazz from start to finish and soft vocals to match. "Kindergarten Blues" follows as a well-known LBL track off of "Cow." If you're a previous fan, you've probably heard the blues-referenced track, as well as "Frisbee," the third execution of the night, on radio stations like WEQX. The back-to-back hits ended with attention honed in on Dunne's tickling of the saxophone, a busted drum pedal and verbal rant by Mike Rios. "Jump Ship" comes next with a switch-up in musical approach. Vocals take precedence in this easily accepted track with a story to tell, while the band acts as support on this Bertrandled venture.

In relation to their debut album, Bertrand described them as "generated by feelings you have at the best time in your life: childhood." It's safe to say that the material played at Gugs drew from that same care-free mentality. Other highlights of the night include a blues-heavy "Young Sprite," which bears a slight, yet pleasant sounding comparison to the Dead's "Sugaree" at moments, as well as unmistakable insight to the group's comfort with one another and stage banter, regardless of the time span they've officially been Let's Be Leonard. If all that wasn't enough to be wrapped around their fingers, the sensationally executed guitar solos mark a personal favorite milestone in the set.

A surprise "Brad Paisley" cover ended the night with unconventional onstage vocal motif between the guys, extremely comparable to Phish's "David Bowie." All members repeatedly sing and spew out the country star's name over and over in a mimicked care-free manner as the jam icons. The light-hearted song acted as an engaging way to close out a set that was so obviously and mutually enjoyed by band members and the crowd alike.

While Saratoga Springs is no stranger to celebrity strolls down in its perfect weekend-visit city with SPAC just round the corner, it's hard for residents not to get excited when Brad Paisley is spotted in a local coffee shop. In town for his summer show at SPAC, a local mentioned the group's own "Brad Paisley." I wonder if he ever did get to hear the track of his namesake.

Electrifying start to SPAC season

Brad Paisley kicked off Saratoga Performing Art Center's summer concert series with a bang, bringing an all-star line up of guests. Paisley played his array of songs to a crowd of more than 10,000. Thunderstorms forced an equipment shutdown and attendees to seek shelter for an hour delay. Country stars such as Dustin Lynch, Chase Bryant and Lindsay Ell supported Paisley on the tour giving the fans a bang for their buck.

“Only in Dreams” Weezer tribute hits Central and Western New York

By KAT HORTON
nysmusic.com

Members of Jimkata, Aqueous and John Brown's Body are spending the weekend paying tribute to alternative rock legends Weezer. The four-piece outfit will bring their “Only in Dreams” Tribute to Ithaca, Albany, Rochester, and Buffalo.

“Only in Dreams” kicked off from Rochester’s Flour City Station before moving on to the Hollow in Albany on Friday, June 2 and then the Haunt in Ithaca on Saturday, June 3. The four-show arrangement concluded the following Sunday in Buffalo at Buffalo Iron Works.

The weekend engagement highlighted Weezer’s “Blue Album” and “Pinkerton,” in addition to a few B-sides. In mid-March, Jimkata vocalist and guitarist Evan Friedell was working on an article about his five favorite albums. He innocently posted on Facebook, “Who wants to play a Weezer cover show?” Much to his surprise, the response from his fellow musicians was positive.

“I was deep in the midst of a nostalgic Weezer rage session when I made that post so I’m not really sure what I meant by it,” Friedell told NYS Music, “but I was surprised by the enthusiasm and sincerity of the responses I got, so I began to think this could actually happen.”

Friedell noted that it wasn’t until Bassist Dan Africano (John Brown’s Body, Elephant Wrecking Ball) reached out to him that the scope of the project began to take shape. “It wasn’t until a couple weeks later when Dan hit me up like ‘So when are we doing this?’ that we started to put it together.

For Friedell, it was a natural fit to also enlist Jimkata drummer Packy Lunn. “I knew Packy would be down because we actually started playing music together in middle school doing Weezer songs. And I’ve known Mike [Gantzer] to have an encyclopedic knowledge of anything that he loves. So, when he said ‘I’ve been waiting my whole life to do this’ I took him seriously.”

Aqueous vocalist and guitarist Mike Gantzer, told NYS Music that his passion for the project is deeply rooted. “Weezer, for me, was one of the first bands that really spoke to me; I was 13 years old when I received their Blue Album from an older (much cooler) cousin, and it was pretty life changing.”

Gantzer went on to tell NYS Music that although he is familiar with the music, tributes like this one pose a unique challenge for musicians. “It’s quite a bit of work to get everything together and learn all the material enough to really do it justice, but it’s an amazing exercise musically, because Weezer’s music is very particular and interesting and folks might be surprised to learn that a lot of it isn’t very easy to play or sing at all! I love a great challenge and it feels SO good to me to play these songs and get a chance to rock out with members of other bands I respect so much.”

Friedell noted similar sentiments. “Rivers [Cuomo] is such a great songwriter and guitar player. Weezer has these pop-rock songs that on the surface sound simple but as you listen closer are actually quite intricate and detailed, both in terms of the arrangements and lyrics. We’re discovering this as we practice the material. There’s moments where you discover some key change or time signature change you never noticed before or some lyrical oddity that you never heard correctly. And the guitar solos are always just as catchy as the rest of the song which I think is genius. They don’t waste a moment at all.”

From page B1 ... Happy Pride

She also said that such major celebratory events like the Capital Pride Parade and Festival would not have been possible without the many sponsors, volunteers and even the Albany Police Department. She specifically thanked fellow colleague, Corporate Fundraiser and Entertainment Chair of Capital Pride Steering Committee Scott Levine, who also manages Albany's leading gay bar, Waterworks Pub.

"We needed many volunteers, corporate sponsors, friends from the local community and donors who donated money and time to us to make all this happen," Levine said. "And we have our small group of staff here at the center to thank too."

He remembered how back in 2005, he attended the Capital Pride Festival then and was displeased with how seemingly small the turnout was as well as how only a few local bands played there. Due to his interest in bringing in more entertainment, he hit up his business contacts to get more people involved, particularly noting Barefoot Wine for becoming the longest corporate sponsor since then.

This year's Capital Pride events have amassed over 40 sponsors, including Hannaford, Bank of America and the Times Union.

Addressing concerns from locals who practice sobriety or struggle with alcohol abuse that the events have numerous alcohol-related sponsors like Barefoot Wine, Jack Daniel's, Blue Moon and Miller Lite, Harvey clarified that the Capital Pride Center encourages responsible drinking and that it has to be run like a business.

"It sounds like all we care about is the money but...I personally come from the corporate world and so, I bring a lot of that corporative business sense to this job because that's what we have to do," said Harvey. "The only way to keep the doors open, the lights on, provide the necessary programs, the support, the advocacy, the resources...the only way to do all the good work for the community is if we have funding."

Security was another concern that Harvey touched upon who visibly became downcast when remembering that this will be the first Capital Pride and Festival since the Orlando gay club shooting on June 12, 2016, when 49 civilians were killed in a hate crime orchestrated by ISIS follower Omar Mateen. The tragedy eerily occurred exactly one day after last year's Capital Pride and Festival.

"It's crazy that it takes things like [the Orlando shooting] to happen to bring people together," said Harvey. "Now, we're hearing from people who call into the center who feel scared to go outside, to be who they truly are, to ride the bus [and] to lose healthcare. The fear of uncertainty and not feeling safe is palpable."

Levine, also disturbed by the events, said that gay bars are supposed to be a place where LGBTQ people can feel safe and be themselves, especially back in the 1950s and 1960s when homophobia was much more pronounced in American society.

"Right after the shooting last year, we got everyone together with the Albany Police Department, the State Department and the FBI to basically discuss what's going on in the Albany area and they were reassuring us that there is no credible threat," said Levine. "Violence is still always happening but in general, it is mostly a safe community around here and we strive to keep it that way at the Pride Center and Waterworks."

"You're never going to stop violence, it's part of our human nature since the beginning of time and it will never stop," Harvey added. "But that does not mean you sit back and take it. You resist and persist."

Concerning the planned Capital Pride events, Harvey also encourages the

— Martha Harvey,
Pride Center of the Capital Region
CEO and Executive Director general public to look out for one another and follow in the "see something, say something" mindset.

The parade and festival are among the plethora of scheduled events that are planned by the Capital Pride Center for the month of June, which had been designated as Pride Month to commemorate the landmark Stonewall riots back on June 28, 1969. These riots were seen as the singular event that birthed the modern gay liberation movement and the struggle for LGBTQ Americans to attain equality.

While the flag raising ceremony on June 1 at Albany City Hall marked the beginning of the month's festivities, the month-long celebration would last until June 24 with the Vintage Pride Sunset Cruise on the Hudson River. Since launching in 1970, the Pride Center has been the longest continuous of its kind in the country and will reach its 50th anniversary in 2020, which Harvey and Levine have said that preliminary plans and discussions are in motion already.
