Bethlehem Democrats hope to get candidates elected on another party line

By ALI HIBBS
hibbsa@spotlightnews.com

DELMAR — The Bethlehem Democratic Committee has overwhelmingly chosen to support two candidates who will not be appearing on their party line in the November election.

During a meeting at Bethlehem Public Library on Thursday, Sept. 14, committee members debated how to approach the coming election after two Democratic candidates filed a lawsuit that bounced their opponents, BDC's chosen candidates, from the Democratic ballot.

After Democratic Elections Commissioner (and former BDC Chair) Matt Clyne informed them of an error in paperwork BDC filed with the Albany County Board of Elections, Town Board candidate George Harder and Highway Superintendent candidate Dan Morin filed a lawsuit that ultimately invalidated the candidacies of their respective opponents Dan Coffey and Giles Wagoner.

Second Complete Streets meeting set

By ALI HIBBS
hibbsa@spotlightnews.com

BETHLEHEM — A second public meeting for the 'Delaware Avenue Complete Streets' transportation planning study, jointly sponsored by the town and the Capital District Transportation Committee, is scheduled to take place on Tuesday, Sept. 26, at Bethlehem Town Hall from 6 to 8 p.m.

The goal of the study is to create a plan for a more balanced transportation system, known as a 'complete street,' along Delaware Avenue from Elsmere Avenue to the Normanskill Bridge, that will enable safe and comfortable access for users of all ages and abilities, including pedestrians, bicyclists, transit users and motor vehicle drivers.

The study will determine if a road diet is feasible on this section of Delaware Avenue. Road diets reduce the number of travel lanes on a roadway, making more room for bicycles, improving pedestrian crossings, reducing travel speeds, and improving overall roadway safety.

Creighton Manning

Engineering will facilitate the discussion at the Sept. 26 meeting, which will begin with an open house at 6 p.m. CME has analyzed the traffic operations along Delaware Avenue under various road diet scenarios and will present the results at the meeting. There will also be an opportunity for the community to provide input on the alternative proposals for the Delaware Avenue corridor.

In February, more than 100 people attended the first public meeting, expressing an interest in seeing corridor improvements that addressed traffic calming, pedestrian and bicycle access, and automobile access to businesses and side roads. Participating residents also identified beautification of the corridor as an important priority.

including the draft existing conditions report and meeting summaries of the study Advisory Committee and business stakeholders meetings, please visit the study website at www.delawareavecompletestreets.com.

BCSD tax bills mailed

BETHLEHEM — According to the Bethlehem Central School District, residents should call the BCSD business office at (518) 439-7481 if they have not yet received their school property tax bills.

Several residents have complained that they have not received their bills, including at least one Slingerlands resident, who said that the post office indicated that it has received "many questions" about where the missing bills are.

A spokesperson for BCSD said that the district is unaware of any widespread delays, but that the business office fielded a few calls from residents in Slingerlands and on Jordan Blvd. in Delmar who were missing their bills.

Everything must go

BETHLEHEM — Bethlehem Grange No. 137 is having a huge sale on Friday, Sept. 22, and Saturday, Sept. 23, from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m.

The sale will be indoors and all items must be sold. Antiques, linens, decorations for most holidays, household items, tools, chairs, and a variety of other items for a host of different uses will be offered. All reasonable offers will be accepted.

Proceeds from the sale will be used to cover the costs of both ongoing maintenance and major repairs at the Grange Hall, which is listed on the National Register of Historic Places.

The Bethlehem Grange No. 137 is among the oldest grange organizations at 143 years old, with the National Grange celebrating its 150th anniversary this year.

The Grange is located at 24 Bridge St., in Selkirk, off of State Route 396.

Save a life with your hands

ALBANY — The American Heart Association and the Empire BlueCross Foundation hosted a hands-only CPR training at the state Capitol on Wednesday, Sept. 13.

More than 350,000 cardiac arrests occur outside the hospital each year and hands-only CPR has been shown to be as effective as conventional CPR, which includes chest compressions and rescue breaths. Hands-only CPR has two steps: First you call 911 and then you push hard and fast in the center of the chest cavity until help arrives.

Part of the training session included playing a song that had 100-120 beats per minute, the number of times the chest should be compressed while administering hands-only CPR.

Albany County Sheriff's sophisticated new drones are already in high demand

By JIM FRANCO
francoj@spotlightnews.com

COLONIE — The use of drones by law enforcement is a relatively new phenomenon and they are currently being used to perform a plethora of tasks related to search and rescue missions, accident reconstruction, aerial mapping and fire scene analysis.

For example, the latest mission flown late last month by the Albany County Sheriff's Department drone pilots utilized cameras and mapping software to reconstruct a fatal motorcycle accident in Knox.

Since it was the first time a drone was used for such an application, State Police used the old fashioned tripods and survey equipment to check the numbers taken from the air. The measurements were the same, and rather than take up to three hours to reconstruct the scene, the drone did it in 33 minutes and, conceivably, the road could be re-opened in a fraction of the time.

But, drone use by law enforcement is so new that just a handful of states have formally regulated the use of drones by police — New York is not one of them — and address the accompanying privacy concerns.

The Town of Colonie is currently accepting bids to purchase two drones for the Police Department, and Lt. Todd Weiss said while the program is still in its infancy, it is looking to follow the protocol established by the Albany County Sheriff's Department.

Commander Lee Bormann pilots one of the sheriff department's new drones with the use of dual joysticks and an Apple iPad.

"We plan to use them essentially for search and rescue and to document crime scenes and accidents and fire scenes," he said. "And, down the road, if the situation arises, it would obviously be better to use a drone than to send an officer into harm's way."

There are at least five bills pending in the state Legislature that would address drone use by law enforcement and most are directed towards Constitutional privacy concerns and requiring a warrant to use any evidence gathered by a drone in court. Flying a drone outside a window isn't as easy as it appears on television, but they are easily equipped with an infrared camera that can monitor activity behind walls or in the dead of night.

For now, though, Albany County uses drones for non-criminal activities and Colonie plans to follow suit.

"The plan is to maximize efficiency and to increase safety for both the residents and our officers," said Town Board member Jennifer Whalen, who sponsored the legislation to purchase the drones, adding the funding will come from drug forfeiture money. "Say a little kid gets lost, or a resident with Alzheimer's gets lost, with a drone we can cover so much more ground."

The Sheriff's program

The Sheriff's Department purchased two DJI Inspire drones — along with an interchangeable standard zoom camera and an infrared camera — in January and have flown 13 missions.

The first, in February, assisted Troy officials in their search for a person missing in the Poestenkill Gorge who was eventually found in the Hudson River. They have also been called on to assist various fire departments locate hotspots with the infrared camera and to assess how equipment is set up to fight fires — once a fire truck is set up, moving it is a difficult and time-consuming endeavor.

The potential uses of drones by his department are limitless, said Sheriff Craig Apple, and as of now doesn't include any traditional law enforcement activities like surveillance and/or chasing down bad guys.

"We have been experimenting with it for over a year and it is turning out to be an absolutely marvelous law enforcement tool," Apple said. "The program we developed is really the foundation used by other agencies across the state."

In charge of the program is Commander Lee Bormann, who shepherded pilots through the basic Part 107 tests for commercial pilots and developed and obtained the Certificate of Authorization that other agencies, like Colonie, are mirroring.

The COA covers all the different scenarios and applications of potential drone use and they were first scrutinized and then ultimately approved by the FAA. Now, pilots can fly over the head of people, for example, and can fly at night and can pilot a drone out of a pilot's direct line of sight, all conditions commercial pilots and hobbyists are prohibited from flying under.

The Albany County Sheriff's Department is one of the first law enforcement agencies in the nation to get a COA.

The department's seven-pound drones are flown with the assistance of iPads, which utilize software to complete detailed maps, fine tune camera settings and record flight data. They can travel up to 48 mph, can navigate in winds of up to about 30 mph and can carry about four pounds. With the two setups, the department has about $20,000 invested with the majority of that going for imaging equipment and software.

Bormann said the applications of a drone are endless. For example, if a drone locates a missing hiker or someone lost in the woods, it could then drop water or a cell phone until ground troops reach the person. If someone falls through the ice, it could

EDUCATION

Good customer service a high priority

Just one of many promises RCS' new superintendent looks to keep

By KAITLIN LEMBO

intern@spotlightnews.com

RAVENA — While Brian Bailey, Ed.D., has set many goals for his first year as Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk's superintendent of schools, there is one in particular that stands out to him.

"We want to establish good relationships with the parents in the school district," Bailey explained. "We need to do this by being as frontward-facing with information and plans as possible."

Bailey said that there are four reasons why parents often step back from their involvement in their children's education. All of them have to do with their own education experience.

"Parents are either respectful of the work we do and don't want to mess it up, or they believe we are capable and can see that their children are getting a lot of attention at school," Bailey explained. "Or parents had a bad experience in their own schooling and feel unwelcome, and they don't really know how to break that feeling."

One change that Bailey is looking to implement is getting the graduation rate up from 82.5 percent to 85 percent. In comparison with neighboring school districts, this hike would put RCS on par with bigger districts like Bethlehem and Guilderland, which have graduation rates in the low 90s. RCS would surpass smaller districts like Berne-Knox-Westerlo, which had an 82.6 percent graduation rate in 2016. When Bailey took the RCS' principal position in 2010, it was at 76 percent. They were gradually able to raise it to 89.2

Kaitlin Lembo/for Spotlight Newspapers percent for one year in 2015.

To boost the graduation rate up those 2.5 points, Bailey hopes that the new Chromebook program that RCS has implemented, along with the eventual use of open Wi-Fi in schools, will give students one-to-one access with computers as education becomes more digital. Currently, RCS has 13 Chromebook carts in the district, with most in the middle school.

"We want to encourage students to dig deeper in their education and enjoy what they are doing. The use of computers is such a great way to do that," Bailey said.

In going digital, Bailey said that fields included in the STEAM program, which include science, technology, engineering, arts and math, are becoming more powerful

"So much of those programs are digital. We need to provide students with those options.

Another change that will be coming into RCS this year will be a new approach to the epidemic of bullying. Bailey said the district will be partnering with Price Chopper CEO Neil Golub to participate in a program called "A World of Difference," which is sponsored by the Anti-Defamation League. The motto is, "Imagine a world without hate."

"We are anticipating a meeting with Neil in the coming weeks to learn about the program and how we can implement it," Bailey said. "What [it] provides us today is a new focus on what's right and what's wrong. Between this and using programs like Positive Behavior Intervention and Support (PBIS), I believe we can make schools a much friendlier place."

PBIS aims to reward students for good behavior through positive reinforcements. By doing this, students who are not perpetually in trouble are also rewarded and noticed for their good deeds throughout the school.

In order for these programs to work, parents and community members are encouraged to come out to monthly Board of Education meetings, which are held on the first Tuesday of each month. There will be a time for public comment, and Bailey says this time period is critical for communication between the school board and community members.

"We want people to come out and talk to us," he said. "We want to hear from you."

Among the character building improvements Bailey plans to implement at RCS this year are what he refers to as his "Five Steps" — the values of inquiry, collaboration, risk-taking, participation and empathy — which he says will help every member of the district to better succeed in the community.

"These five qualities apply to both students and staff," Bailey said. "These qualities transcend into real-world traits that students will need. We want our students to be better prepared for college and beyond. We want our staff to be able to help each student and value the ability of each individual child." A mailing describing the five steps was mailed to district residents after Bailey's appointment as superintendent.

Bailey said that these qualities have helped him during his seven-year tenure at RCS. He first came to RCS as high school principal in 2010 after working at Guilderland High School and Schalmont Central Schools. He moved into the assistant superintendent position in 2013, serving under Superintendent Alan McCartney, Ed.D., until his death, and then Interim Superintendent Robert K. Libby. Bailey was unanimously voted in as the district's permanent superintendent on June 6. He officially took office on July 1.

"All of these milestones are because someone gave me a push," Bailey said. "When I taught music, I was able to practice my craft every day. I now get to work with students and parents. I have a hand in influencing the system and making a difference in education."

He obtained his doctorate from The Sage Colleges this past year. He said that this milestone, which was hanging over his head for a long time, was something that really helped shape his view on education.

"I was so lucky to do something important to me," he said. "Doing this type of work makes you ask more questions, and it keeps you curious."

One thing remains for sure. Bailey said he is excited for this year. With many plans, he said he could not be readier for the beginning of the year.

"We have a lot of oars in the water, but it's exhilarating," he said.

Clyne, Morin and Harder have all criticized the process by which BDC leadership chose to endorse Coffey and Wagoner after Brent Meredith accepted a job at the University at Albany and declined to run for reelection late in the process, after petitions had already been gathered. The timing of events, said current BDC Chair Jeff Kuhn, necessitated the hastened process.

The state appellate court decided in late August that the certificates filed by BDC had been properly invalidated, ejecting Coffey and Wagoner from the Democratic ballot line and denying them a primary contest against Harder and Morin. As the Working Families Party, which filed the substitution paperwork correctly, also endorsed Coffey and Wagoner, they will still be appearing on the November ballot — but only on the WFP line. On Sept. 14, the full Democratic committee gathered to decide whether they would support the candidates appearing on the Democratic ticket or the candidates appearing on the Working Families ticket.

A decision to support the candidates appearing on the WFP ticket means risking a split vote, as some Democrats are likely to simply vote their party line while others will vote with the committee to support their party's chosen candidates. In an election season with tough GOP competition for those seats, the decision was not one to be taken lightly.

Committee members, who clearly felt their ballot line had been hijacked, however, were unwilling to be held hostage by candidates they repeatedly characterized as under qualified, if not downright dishonest.

After Morin released video of an August BDC meeting to former Bethlehem Republican Committee Chair Keith Wiggand, in which both men misconstrued something Kuhn said to mean Democrats had knowingly filled out the substitution certificates illegally (rather than merely erroneously), committee members have questioned his loyalty to the party. Wiggand posted the video to his Facebook page and indicated that he would be attempting to get BDC leadership arrested and disbarred.

At the outset of the Sept. 14 meeting, committee member Emily Saunders introduced a motion to request Morin not share video coverage of the meeting with Wiggand. The motion passed. Morin told Spotlight News he had no intention of showing the video to Wiggand, who he has described as a lifelong friend, and said that he was merely making the recording to review the committee's statements for any inconsistencies.

Many committee members criticized the close relationship

Harder and Morin seem to have with the opposing party and, in particular, with its more outspoken members. Wiggand, some noted, has made some personal attacks against committee members (at least one of which, disturbingly, involved a member's teen-aged daughter) and has even gone so far as to ask those he has targeted if they "have had enough."

Incidentally, both Harder and Morin came to the Sept. 14 meeting directly from a fundraiser for Gary Fish, the Republican candidate for Town Supervisor. Morin later told Spotlight that he was unaware that event at Swifty's Pub would be taking place and he had only been eating dinner there with his kids, but he and Harder were seen seated at a table with Fish and his supporters.

Morin later explained he has friends on both sides of the political aisle, having lived in Bethlehem for almost 50 years. "I grew up with a lot of people and just because they might be on another party doesn't mean I'm not friends with them," he said.

Having ejected Coffey and Wagoner from the Democratic ticket, Harder and Morin requested that BDC formally endorse their candidacies, including financial support for campaign materials. Harder referenced BDC by-laws, which he said require the committee to support him and Morin as the Democratic candidates.

During the Sept. 14 meeting, Kuhn responded by addressing Harder's claims, going through the by-laws and concluding that the committee has a responsibility to support the most qualified Democratic candidate, regardless of which line they are running on. He noted committee members have repeatedly indicated overwhelming support for Coffey and Wagoner and went on to question Harder's campaign tactics, which he claimed ran afoul of the very BDC by-laws invoked by Harder to impel BDC endorsement.

Kuhn told the committee, "I don't decide whether or not I'm going to endorse someone who has called me a criminal. That's up to you guys."

"Had there been a primary and George [Harder] and Dan [Morin] had won, I would've supported them," said one committee member. "But, by their behavior, by their ignoring the requirements and requests and the votes of the committee prior to this, they've disqualified themselves from getting my support. I don't think they've shown that they're even smart enough to handle the kind of difficult decisions that need to be made by people on our town board. If they can't even understand that trying to hold us hostage, trying to decapitate the candidates that this committee has wanted to run, is likely to get them the support of this committee. I, for one, can't endorse these gentlemen for any role of responsibility in this town."

Several members voiced their agreement.

"Why would someone want to take our choice, as voters, away from us," asked committee member and County Legislator Bill Reinhardt. Calling the error that got Coffey and Wagoner booted from the Democratic line "an honest mistake," said that he felt "the committee should support the best candidate."

Ultimately, the committee — again — unequivocally decided to support the candidacies of Coffey and Wagoner.

"I am so honored and humbled to have the endorsement of the Bethlehem Democratic Committee," said Coffey. "I will continue to campaign door-to-door meeting one voter at a time and keep my campaign focused on issues and how best to move our Town forward. I also have the endorsement of Bethlehem Indivisible and the Working Families Party. I am confident the well-informed voters of our Town will vote for me on Row "E" come November.

Coffey said he's ordering bumper stickers saying "Endorsed Democrat on Row E" and will be placing them on all his lawn signs.

At the beginning of the meeting, Coffey resigned his position as the committee's first chair, stating he "felt it best to avoid any potential conflict of interest between doing what is best for our party versus what may advantage me as a candidate."

A vote was immediately held and Joanne Cunningham, a county legislator and former BCSD board member, was overwhelmingly approved to replace Coffey. The only other name put forward was Jared King, who was nominated by Harder. As King is not a committee member, however, he was ineligible.

"I am honored to join the leadership team of the Bethlehem Democratic Committee, which includes some of the hardest working, dedicated and thoughtful folks that are committed to the highest standards for our candidates and our political discussion," Cunningham told Spotlight the following day. "I look forward to rolling up my sleeves to help our Committee continue to make a positive difference in our great town."

"To paraphrase Bernie Sanders, a man I greatly admire for his tenacity and perseverance," said Harder following the Sept. 14 meeting, "all over this town we have a lot of bright, decent, good people of all party affiliations who say you can't beat the corrupt Coffey/Cunningham/Clarkson machine; you can't win; I'm giving up. That is exactly what the leaders of the machine want you to say! We can win this fight against governmental incompetence and dishonesty if we stand together."

Morin declined to comment on the events of the evening.

OBITUARIES

Goodrich, Barbara S.

DELMAR — Barbara S. Goodrich (Hummer), age 83, left this world to be reunited with her husband, Ariel L. Goodrich, on September 13, 2017, after being apart for six years. Barbara and Ariel were married for 59 years.

Born October 5, 1933, in Albany, N.Y., she was predeceased by her parents, Christian Hummer and Susan G. (Dyke) Hummer, and her stepmother, Erva M. (Wolf) Hummer.

After she graduated from Albany High School in 1952, she devoted her life as a wife, mother and homemaker. "I think the more we use it, the more we'll find situations where it can be a valuable tool," he said.

As of now, the Sheriff's Department has not used the drones for typical law enforcement uses. Part of that is because technology is just becoming advanced enough to make it practical. Plus, there are so many regulations already in place regarding the flight of drones and their use that haven't even touched the privacy issues.

"When we started this we said we were going to do it right. We are going to set the example and follow the rules and the laws and we are going to be the example for everyone else to follow," Boremann said. Identity theft and fraud: How to stay protected

By Ruth Mahoney,
President, Capital Region,
KeyBank

Identity theft related to the Equifax breach is dominating headlines. More than 140 million people are at risk for identity theft as a result. While the Equifax issue is dominating headlines, it is important to remember identity theft can happen at any time to any one—not just when a database is breached.

According to a 2017 study by Javelin Strategy and Research, more than 15 million individuals were victims of identity fraud in 2016—representing $16 billion in losses.

Identity theft occurs when someone wrongfully obtains and uses your data to access your personal information or financial assets for their own personal gain. It has been and continues to be one of the fastest growing crimes in the U.S.-

As an individual, the best advice in protecting your personal information may come from Sun Tzu's The Art of War. "Know your enemies and know yourself." Cyber criminals want your personal information so they can commit fraud. Your best safeguard against this happening is to understand your behaviors and how cyber criminals capture your information.

Ruth Mahoney

The three kinds of identity theft

There are primary methods of identity crime: cyber, phone and paper.

Cyber attacks are digital. That is, someone uses malicious online tactics to get you to reveal personal information, such as passwords and account numbers.

To fight cyber theft, use unique usernames and strong passwords for your online accounts. Install computer security programs, including firewall, anti-spy, anti-virus, spam filter and pop-up blocker software, and keep all programs up to date. Know and watch for signs of phishing or other email scams. Delete emails from suspicious sources immediately. When in doubt, never call the number or click on a link in an email. Go right to the source by visiting the website of the company you want to deal with.

Phone attacks involve an individual falsely acting as a representative of a financial institution, such as a credit card company or bank, or listening in on personal phone conversations taking place in public. Be wary of requests for personal information by phone or through a mobile device. When it is necessary to share information via phone, ensure the person requesting your valuable information is in fact who they say they are. Also, understand that the IRS never calls. This common tactic by identity thieves is very successful in getting unsuspecting consumers to give up sensitive information, such as Social Security numbers and PINs.

An extension of phone attacks is scams targeting your text messages. Called 'smishing,' these text messages appear to be from your bank, favorite retailers and other organizations. Do not send sensitive information via text message.

One of the more overlooked methods of identity theft is paper. Identity thieves scavenge mail or paperwork, including sensitive information that has not been shredded. Mail fraud isn't as sophisticated as cyber or phone fraud. This makes it easier for everyday thieves to carry out and thus more widespread. The issue is so prevalent that the United States Postal Services has created Informed Delivery to allow consumers to report missing or stolen mail before identity theft can occur.

The power of proper protection

You can actively prevent and protect your finances from identity theft and fraud by building cautious habits and working with your financial advisor to determine necessary levels of insurance protection. Here is a list of effective tips:

- When in public, don't provide credit card numbers or other personal identification numbers (PIN) over the phone.
- Don't carry important documents, including your birth certificate or Social Security card, unless necessary.

- At home, install a mailbox with a lock, and pick up mail quickly. If mail containing personal information, such as your bank statement, doesn't show up on time, call your financial institution immediately.

- Get a shredder. Prior to throwing out financial mail or paperwork, such as preapproved credit card or loan applications, shred them.

- Change passwords and other online credentials regularly, and make sure they are complex.

- Don't use the same password and login credentials for multiple financial sites.

- Avoid clicking through to online financial management accounts via emails sent to you. Instead, directly visit the financial institution's website.

- Pay attention to statements and billing schedules. If a check or other payment does not clear when expected, consider placing a stop payment. If an account statement or bill seems late, check to see if there's any reason to believe it could have been stolen from your mail.

- Never, under any circumstances, reveal verifying personal information (name, social security number, address, date of birth, account numbers, etc.) to anyone who has reached out to you—whether by phone, email or text.

If you suspect fraud, act

If you believe you have been a victim of identity theft or fraud, report it to local police and your financial institutions immediately—before further damage is done. You should also check government-run sites, including identitytheft.gov and consumer.ftc.gov, to know all channels that might be compromised.

It's important to understand that everyone—regardless of finances—is a target to cyber criminals, whether you are an active online user or not. With a little work, you can protect yourself from becoming a victim.

The impact of fraud on emotional and financial wellness

When it comes to your finances, identity thieves are targeted and thorough. They can empty financial accounts, max out credit cards, open new accounts and purchase big-ticket items, such as furniture, cars and even homes. For business owners, this can mean a data breach resulting in loss of customer information, income and operating expenses. While this sort of fraud can be recovered, many consumers and business owners spend even more money resolving the theft.

What's more, according to the Aftermath 2016 Report, an annual survey conducted by the Identity Theft Resource Center, after having identities stolen, consumers feel:

- Frustrated or annoyed (81 percent)
- Fear regarding personal financial security (69 percent)
- Rage or anger (58 percent)
- Powerless or helpless (54 percent)
- Less trusting (51 percent)
- Betrayed (44 percent)
- Isolated (31 percent)
- Shameful or embarrassed (28 percent)
- Afraid for their physical safety (23 percent)

In addition, one of the often-overlooked aspects of identity theft is the amount of time it takes to resolve related issues. The Federal Trade Commission estimates the average identity theft victim invests more than 200 hours and spends a total of 18 months resolving the issue with credit reporting agencies. That equates to stress and hours spent away from work—potentially affecting your earnings, either directly or indirectly.

This is why incorporating identity theft protection into your financial planning is so important for your overall financial wellness. Services that can help with this include:

- Account alerts – notify you via email or text of important events occurring in your account.
- Identity monitoring – monitor personal information used in credit applications, public records, websites and other places for any unusual activity that could be signs of identity theft.
- Credit monitoring – regularly review your credit reports for changes or inaccurate information that may indicate fraudulent activity.

County benefits for military discharges

Military personal discharged under 'Don't Ask, Don't Tell' policy won't be barred from county services or benefits

By ALI HIBBS
hibbsa@spotlightnews.com

ALBANY COUNTY — The Albany County Legislature unanimously passed a local law this month that will allow LGBT veterans who were discharged under the federal 'Don't Ask, Don't Tell' (DADT) military policy to receive benefits for which they have been previously ineligible.

"The Legislature finds that Albany County, being a leader in equality and justice for all, will not forget the generations of LGBT veterans who suffered through past institutional discrimination and were forced out of military service due to their sexual orientation or gender identity," reads Local Law No. X. "An estimated 114,000 service members have been discharged because of their sexual orientation or gender identity since World War II, leaving many with tarnished military records and reputations that have unfairly jeopardized their ability to access employment, scholarships, and vital services."

"I remember what it was like raising my hand and swearing an oath to the country I love," said County Legislator Andrew Joyce (D-9), the bill's lead sponsor. "It was one of the proudest moments of my life. I can't imagine making that commitment only to be told you cannot serve because of who you are or who you love. That was all I needed to see this legislation through to unanimous support."

Under the legislation, no veteran will be denied eligibility for any county program, service or benefit based solely on his or her status as a discharged LGBT veteran. It will also empower those individuals to seek assistance "in requesting discharge characterization upgrades, changes of narrative reasons for discharge, changes of separation and separation program designator codes and changes of reentry/reenlistment codes" from the Albany County Veterans Bureau.

A discharged LGBT veteran seeking assistance or a certificate of eligibility must provide a copy of his or her discharge papers, as well as a personal affidavit describing the circumstances surrounding the discharge and any relevant records. The veteran will only be eligible for assistance if there were no other

"aggravating circumstances that would have independently led to a discharge characterization that was less than honorable."

"With the latest attack on transgender members of the armed forces by the Trump administration, the Albany County Restoration of Honor Act is a progressive step in the face of discrimination and injustice," said Martha Harvey, executive director of The Pride Center of the Capital Region.

"There are presently thousands of transgender individuals serving in the armed forces — from troops on the ground to medical providers," said Harvey. "It is crucial to recognize their service, as well as the service of lesbian, gay and bisexual patriots, who enlisted to serve their country. Once the ban is instituted, we will see more transgender veterans returning to communities across the country. That is why this proposed legislation is so important."

"The DADT policy was sanctioned discrimination," said County Legislator Alison McLean Lane. "They have fought to preserve our freedoms, including freedom from discrimination. Now, we are obligated to fight for them. I'd like to thank Andrew Joyce for introducing this important legislation, and for his service to our country."

FROM THE EDITOR'S DESK

Sci-Fi comes to life, finally Science Fiction has promised a lot of things over the years. Aside from the dystopian plot lines we would all hope would never come to reality, there are gadgets and doodads we can all recall from our childhood in which we hoped would become real. Here we are in the 21st century and we don't have flying cars. (That may be a good thing.) Lightsabers, though from another galaxy "A long time ago," never did make it into our hands. (As unforgiving one may be for someone who is accident prone, really doesn't have a practical use for most people.) But, we can say Chester Gould got it right when he donned his Dick Tracy character with a phone watch back in 1931. We have that. (Some of our spouses, however, would love to take a lightsaber to our phones as some of us have grown too dependant on them.)

Technology has gifted us a few things over the years. Some of which we could not imagine. Though, the flying car is absent from our skies, we have remote controlled drones that are now helping law enforcement and emergency services in a very practical, very cool way.

Some of us are familiar with drones, but that technology is likely akin to the remote controlled planes and helicopters we've all had access over the past thirty years. The Albany County Sheriff's Department, however, has a little something that's a little more Buck Rogers, relatively speaking.

Our Jim Franco witnessed the technology first-hand, and though there are some who would instantly think of this new equipment as nothing more than just playthings, they'd be mistaken. Fresh out of the box our local law enforcement officers have developed logistics around these flying marvels to assist in reconstructing accident scenes. The cameras each are equipped with can track down perpetrators on the lam in the darkest of settings. They've even been in demand by local firefighters who could use the infrared cameras to detect hot spots behind closed doors and walls.

We are living in marvelous times, and though you may not have your hoverboard to skate around town, the practical uses of today's tech continues to help save lives and protect our families.

THIS WEEK IN 1987...

WMHT shocks public with financial reserve disclosure

ALBANY — It was revealed early in the summer of 1987 that local public television station WMHT (Mohawk Hudson Television) had a local reserve fund of almost $6 million, shocking local viewers, members and volunteers who had contributed time, money and effort to raising funds for the station.

Just how damaging were the revelations? Had WMHT been up to something questionable, or was the station simply guilty of poor public relations? Most important to public television, what did it mean for future fundraising efforts?

William E. Haley, Jr., who was vice-president and general manager of the station in 1987, said that he was sorry about the way people learned of the surplus funds, but was not overly concerned that the news would harm the station's future.

"We should have been told," said a volunteer, who also said she would continue working for the station even though she was "quite shocked" to find out about the extent of the reserves. She added that she thought it would make it more difficult to get people to donate, but that station employees deserved raises.

Peg Lewis, a WMHT volunteer, said at the time that she hoped the disclosure would result in fewer on-air fundraising pitches. Another volunteer expressed concern about the effect the revelations would have on other public stations' fundraising efforts.

Haley ultimately conceded that language in renewal notices, stating that the station anticipated a "deficit," should have said

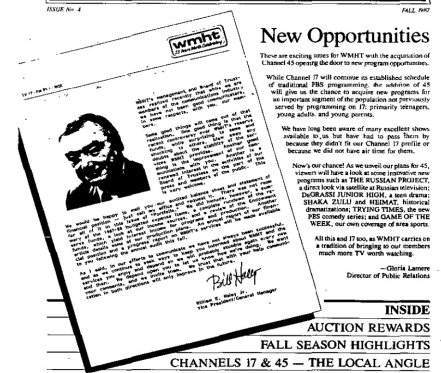

"membership shortfall" instead, meaning that station management had anticipated more subscription revenues.

"Overwhelmingly," he said, "people approve of our fundraising — they just want to be kept informed."

Haley said he planned to keep members and supporters better informed in the future, claiming that he'd been planning all along to start sending station members an annual financial report. That was scheduled to begin in early 1988, he said, but the station was already sending copies of the previous year's financial report to anyone who asked.

"We have not been good communicators, in some respects," he said in the member newsletter, the WMHT Portfolio.

PORTFOLIO

The fall issue of the WMHT Portfolio is dedicated to the station's new openness campaign. The back page contains a full page of information on the station's budget, revenue sources and reserve funds.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Elect strong, qualified leaders to continue town's success

Editor, The Spotlight

While the latest season of "Game of Thrones" has just ended, the intriguing political season here in Bethlehem is just getting started.

For over eight years, I served our Town on the Planning Board and as Chair of the Zoning Board of Appeals. I also served on the Town's committee which reviewed our Comprehensive Plan. I presided over countless public hearings and was able to meet and learn from scores of our residents who sought or opposed a zoning variance request. Not everyone agreed with the ZBA's decisions, but everyone was given a full and fair opportunity to be heard and all points of view were always considered.

I am a lifelong Democrat and, until last week, served as First Vice-Chair of the Bethlehem Democratic Committee ("BDC"). When Brent Meredith advised the BDC in June that he had accepted a job at UAlbany and was declining his candidacy for Highway Superintendent, the committee voted to substitute Town Board member Giles Wagoner for the Highway position and substitute me for Giles' Town Board slot. Giles and I were sued by George Harder and Dan Morin and the court invalidated the substitution paperwork, denying the voters a chance to choose their party's candidate at a primary. Fortunately, Giles and I are still on the ballot on the Working Families Party line and have every intention of winning in November.

We live in a community where our services are first rate and our annual tax increases have been kept within the state-mandated tax cap. Bethlehem has the highest possible "fiscal stress" score. We have top rate parks and services. We should never take for granted the hard work of our elected officials and Town staff. To assure our continued success, we need to continue to elect strong, qualified individuals to positions of leadership.

There is more we can do. We need to address our aging infrastructure. We need more sidewalks to connect our communities. We need a bypass from Exit 22 in Selkirk to Route 9W to direct truck traffic away from residential neighborhoods and to spark business development. We need to fill Vista Tech Park with businesses paying taxes. We need a task force to address our Town's growing opioid problem. We need to regularly review and update our Comprehensive Plan and zoning code to assure it is current given changes in our Town.

We need to encourage open space preservation through tax incentives and the development of an open space fund.

I am committed to campaigning hard and look forward to meeting with as many residents as possible. I am confident the voters will choose the best candidate on November 7 regardless of how far down the ballot his/her name appears. Please contact me with any issues or concerns you have at Dan@coffey4townboard.com.

COMMUNITY

Taking donations for hurricane victims

Hurricanes Harvey and Irma left behind a path of devastation in Southeast Texas and Southwest Florida, impacting peoples' lives and communities. In each region, their local YMCAs stepped up to the challenge of helping people in their areas deal with being flooded out of their homes, losing power, and working to recover and rebuild.

To help with the recovery efforts, the Bethlehem YMCA will hold special events to raise donations for the YMCA of Greater Houston and the YMCA of Southwestern Florida. On Sunday, Sept. 24, the Bethlehem Y will hold a day of activities where you will have the opportunity to donate to victims of hurricane Harvey and Irma.

The schedule of events includes a swimathon from 3 to 5 p.m.; Boot camp with Connor from 4 to 5 p.m.; a Zumbathon from 5 to 6 p.m.; and Ice Skating from 4:45 to 6:45 p.m. All funds from the public skating will go to hurricane relief, and there will be suggested donations from other events. There will also be a raffle of gifts and prizes as well including tickets to Disney's Frozen on Ice, and a free professional photo portrait session.

The YMCA of Greater Houston serves an area

the size of New Jersey. With a population of 6.5 million people. During the hurricane, the area received more than 9 trillion gallons of water due to Harvey. Like thousands of homes and businesses in the Houston area, the YMCA facilities suffered severe flooding. After five days, more than 14 Houston-area Ys reopened to serve their communities and help with the recovery efforts by providing a place to work out, shower, have coffee, use a phone, or just to see a smiling face.

In addition, Houston YMCA staff helped sort tons of donated clothing, food, and supplies, and provided childcare and programming for thousands of people in area shelters. Y staff also provided childcare for employees of the regional utility who worked around the clock to restore power.

Paul McEntire, President and CEO of the Houston area YMCA said: "We've worked hard to get our facilities open and make them accessible. We slept about 75 firefighters in our meeting space and 50 National Guard troops that stationed at another Y. Our goal as a YMCA is to serve our community in any way we can. So many people nationally have been so generous to us and I want to give your our commitment that we continue to stretch those resources as far as they can go so we make a difference in every person's life that we possibly can. Thank you for all you are doing for us and Houston will not forget you."

Christina Naletko, Director of Marketing for the YMCA of Southwestern Florida said: "We set up a day camp for children in our community because all of our schools were closed. We served kids a hot breakfast and lunch every day when they had no power at home. We provided charging stations and supported food banks. It was truly amazing to see our entire community and the YMCA staff coming together to help others. I drove around our community and saw neighbor helping neighbor and it really gave me hope."

The YMCAs in Houston and Florida are doing their part to help respond to the needs of their communities and help people rebuild their lives. The Bethlehem YMCA wants to support them and we hope you will consider coming to our Y on September 24th to work out and, by doing so, donating to a good cause.

Noah coming to Palace

Host of "The Daily Show" brings comedy routine to the Capital District in December

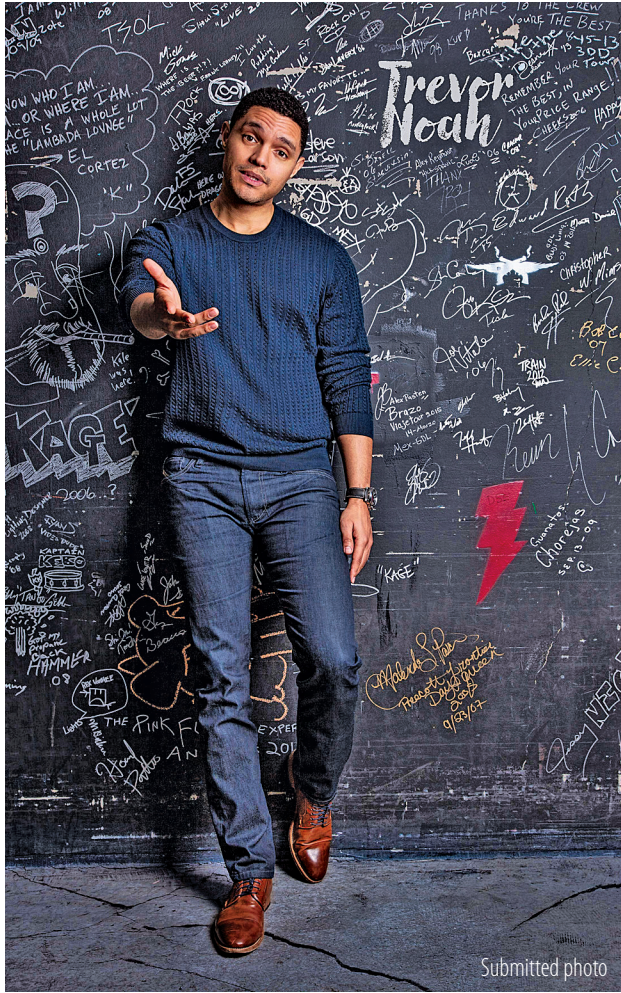

ALBANY — Trevor Noah earned the "anchor's chair" of the parody news show "The Daily Show" from Jon Stewart and is now coming to Albany for a show at The Palace Theatre on Saturday, Dec. 9, at 7 p.m.

Noah is the host of the Emmy® and Peabody® Award-winning "The Daily Show" on Comedy Central. This year "The Daily Show" has been nominated for a Writers Guild Award (Comedy/Variety Series).

Noah debuted his 9th new comedy special "Afraid of the Dark" on Netflix in February. The special was shot before a packed house in New York City at the Beacon Theatre last November. Also last year, Noah debuted his one-hour stand-up special, "Trevor Noah: Lost in Translation," on Comedy Central.

Noah's been the subject of David Paul Meyer's award-winning documentary film "You Laugh But It's True" which tells the story of his remarkable career in post-apartheid South Africa, where he earned the distinction of being the most successful comedian in Africa. His Showtime comedy special, "Trevor Noah: African American" premiered in 2013. He was nominated for "Personality of the Year" at the 2014 and 2015 MTV Africa Music Awards and won the award in 2015. Trevor's success has also spanned to sold out shows over five continents.

Rodriguez

Troy Savings Bank Music Hall — Monday, Sept. 25

TROY — Rodriguez, the legendary singer-songwriter, who is known only by his surname, will take the state at the Troy Savings Bank Music Hall on Monday, Sept. 25, at 7:30 p.m.

Rodriguez began performing in bars and clubs around the city of Detroit in the 1960s and later recorded a pair of studio albums there. While these recordings went unnoticed in the U.S., his counterculture lyrics inspired South African anti-apartheid activists and musicians, where he later reached folk-rock super stardom status. His music career ended up going through an unanticipated renaissance thanks to the South African fans who actively sought him out in the late 1990s.

Steamy, funny play about aspiring authors makes regional debut at Capital Repertory Theatre, Sept. 22–Oct. 15

By MICHAEL HALLISEY
halliseym@spotlightnews.com

ALBANY — Laura Eason’s “Sex with Strangers,” at Capital Repertory Theatre, Sept. 22 to Oct. 15, makes good on its steamy title between two writers, Ethan and Olivia, but the salacious title alone shouldn’t deter conservative audiences.

“Well, first thing you can say, Sex with Strangers derives from the book that Ethan wrote,” said lead actor Ben Williamson, who plays Ethan, hungry to work on his new novel, an antidote to his own catalog of low-brow blog posts turned best-sellers. “It should kind of intrigue you. Because, the play is about a relationship and the pursuit of what people want. How far are you going to get it? ... Just because of the title, I don’t think it should pull people away. I would hope that it would pull people in.”

Williamson has played the role before, at American Stage in Florida, and brings a deep knowledge of the play to the REP. Williamson has also recently been onstage at Actors Theatre of Louisville, Asolo Repertory, Cider Mill Playhouse and Urbanite Theatre, as well as on HBO, Amazon Prime, USA and NBC.

The play does contain mature language and adult subject matter while exploring the serpentine ways people try to get ahead. It also touches upon the disruptive ways the internet affects our moral choices. It’s a torrid, tangled and bittersweet modern dramedy.

WHAT’S HAPPENING NOW

Marshall Tucker Band

Charles R. Woods Festival Commons — Saturday, Sept. 24

LAKE GEORGE — The Marshall Tucker Band brings its legendary act to the Charles R. Woods Festival Commons on Sunday, Sept. 24, at 3 p.m.

The Souther Rock pioneers out of Spartanburg, South Carolina, is one of the greatest bands in rock history, and is still performing close to 150 shows a year. Throughout the ‘70s, they were road warriors, touring the world and performing 300 shows every year. They were major influences to country rock bands Alabama, Travis Tritt, Kentucky Headhunters and Confederate Railroad. Today, they still perform about 150 dates a year, which has earned them a loyal worldwide multi-generational fan base.

Skeeter Creek, a local favorite, will take the stage in support. It may be the closest resemblance to Marshall Tucker Band in the Capital District.

Formed in 2002 by Joe Kulewicz, Skeeter Creek has since earned the reputation as “the hardest working, most dedicated musicians to come from the Northeast Country Music scene in years.” As is the case with Marshall Tucker Band, Skeeter Creek’s live performances are memorable.

Skeeter Creek has shared the stage with countless superstar national acts, including Marshall Tucker, Charlie Daniels, Toby Keith, Faith Hill, Rascal Flatts, Montgomery Gentry, Darius Rucker, Sheryl Crow, Confederate Railroad, Parmalee, Locash, Lonestar, Luke Bryan and Tricia Yearwood.

The band will perform immediately before Marshall Tucker Band.

New York City’s Country Fresh opens the show.

Tickets are on sale at various local outlets, including the Lake George Village Hall, Lake George Town Hall, King Neptune’s Pub and other outlets to be announced.

NIGHT: Young Dubliners

Cohoes Music Hall — Saturday, Sept. 23

TROY — Young Dubliners will be performing at Cohoes Music Hall on Saturday, Sept. 23 at 8 p.m.

Although this band's sound is most commonly called 'Celtic Rock', that label is misleading. The Irish influence is there, certainly, but it's not the only influence that rears its head on its albums, or in live shows. After all, several of the band members have no Irish roots of any kind. In recent years, the band has made two appearances on ABC's Jimmy Kimmel Live!, had songs featured in TV shows ("Sons Of Anarchy," "Human Target") and toured extensively as a headliner and as the opener for such a diverse list of artists including Collective Soul, Jethro Tull, Johnny Lang and many more.

Tabbouleh Recipe

By MICKEY SPELVIN
news@spotlightnews.com

Tabbouleh is a flavorful vegetarian dish from the Mediterranean. Some call it a salad. It consists of finely chopped bulghur, cucumbers, parsley, mint and onion.

Ingredients — serves 12 to 16

- 2 cups cracked wheat (bulghur)
- 2 cups very hot water
- 1 cucumber, chopped
- 3 small tomatoes, chopped
- 1 bunch green onions, (8) sliced
- 1/2 cup fresh chopped mint
- 2 cups fresh chopped cilantro or parsley.
- 2 cloves garlic, minced

Dressing:

- 1/2 cup fresh lemon juice
- 3/4 cup extra virgin olive oil
- 1 teaspoon pepper
- 1 teaspoon salt, or to taste

Directions

Soak the cracked wheat in the hot water until the water is absorbed, about 30 minutes. Drain any excess water, if necessary, and squeeze dry. Combine the salad ingredients, including wheat, in a medium bowl. Mix the dressing ingredients together and stir into the salad mixture. Serve chilled or at room temperature.

Kim Crawford Sauvignon Blanc 2016
Kim Crawford Winery — New Zealand
“These grapes were selected from vineyards in Marlborough’s Wairau Valley and the neighbouring Awatere Valley. Fast draining, alluvial loams over gravelly subsoils in these valleys provide ideal growing conditions for our Sauvignon Blanc. Individual blocks were targeted for their strengths and overall contribution to the blend. The vines ranged in age, up to 14 years, bringing a mix of youthful vigour and depth of flavour. Great to drink with anyone at any time. Pairs brilliantly with fresh oysters, asparagus, lobster, or summer salads.”

HEALTH & FITNESS

Defining your life positively

Three steps to shape life in a positive way

By DAN ROMAND
news@spotlightnews.com

Recently I was talking with someone who wanted to work with me on "Getting Her Life Back." Let's call her Cindy.

Cindy is an amazing woman. She's an executive at a local company, won several awards in her industry and has seen success at every level in her life. Oh yeah, she's also raising three kids.

And like so many others, Cindy expressed to how she struggles to keep her fitness on track. As she said, "Life gets in the way and next thing you know..."

And, as I talked to her I recalled an article I had read a few years back by leadership expert Kevin Eikenberry.

The article was targeted toward business leaders so I knew that would getting healthy or working on your fitness, the truth is, that it's much like running a successful business.

To be successful in building on the strengths of the business to improve profit.

Same when it comes to fixing your health. You workout plan, and then following it. From there you need to address those things that slow you down from success such as over snacking or skipping workouts. You want to build on those strengths you have to help you achieve your goals.

The first step much like in business is defining how you are going to approach it. A large part of that as Mr. Eikenberry pointed out is having the right attitude that can directly support reaching your goals and helping you achieve them more quickly.

Hence, "The Three P's."

The Three P's

The Positive Attitude – This is the first "P" and in my opinion the most important. I've worked with thousands of people to help them lose weight and get in shape and a positive attitude is the No. 1 thing that defines success or failure for most people. Too often people get the all or nothing mindset and go full bore. They eat right for a couple of weeks and get to the gym. But while dedicated at first, they "hate" doing it. They feel deprived, and forced into exercising. Then, when the inevitable life event comes they give up and walk away.

Ever made a New Year's Resolution to lose weight only to give up a few short weeks later? Then likely you approached it with a negative attitude perhaps without even realizing it. Those who are successful go into it with a long-term approach. They know that true success doesn't happen overnight and that they do have to make changes in their lifestyle. But that doesn't mean having to spend hours in the gym or surviving on broccoli and chicken. It's about learning how to eat real food in the right amounts and finding fun activities that you enjoy doing. Most importantly it's about having a positive attitude and knowing that by just moving one step forward each day you will succeed.

The Possibility Attitude - Believing that you can succeed in reaching your goal influences your success in reaching that goal. And this too is something that holds people back when it comes to succeeding at weight loss or improving their health. Simply put, deep down they don't believe they will succeed. So again, when the inevitable "life happens" moment comes, they use that as an excuse. They go to a party and go nuts on food and then use that as the reason to give up because "See it happened again I was good for 5 weeks then blew it at the party. Therefore, I might as well give up," thought process. Those that succumb to that way of thinking I've found, really didn't believe they could succeed. They didn't believe deep down inside in the possibility they might succeed. Those resonate with Cindy. I shared the article with her we redefined it in terms of fitness.

When it comes to business you need to have a plan and then work with that plan. From there it's about focus and fixing issues that hold the business back, utilizing and need to have a plan and then work that plan. That means knowing what to eat, how much and when. It's means scheduling your exercise, having a

■ MUSIC REVIEW

After The Storm's 'Into A New Era' The Penthouse's 'Overnight'

By STEVEN SMITH
nysmusic.com

With metal reigning from all across New York, our humble home has some great names under the NY banner when it comes to the death metal genre. From New York City and Yonkers, we have Immolation, Mortician, and Suffocation. In the bustling and rampaging gore infested Buffalo area the legendary Cannibal Corpse started to take shape. Yes, these bands are the best of the best when it comes to pure disemboweling death metal in our own backyard! With the torch still burning bright, another great band accepts the challenge to keep the nightmare alive. The band is known as After The Storm and they just released their latest EP, "Into A New Era," and it's time to once again show our local bands the support they need in this album review!

After The Storm is a studio project shaped by the hands of Matt Swistak and Pat McFeely. Both are very talented guitar players in their own right. Seeing how two great minds can create such a monstrous beast of a sonic attack, you will get lost in the music as much as I did! The album has such powerful influences drawn from many melodic death metal acts like Soilwork and Solution .45, to name a few inspiring groups. The track "The Awakening" goes for the kill right out of the gate. The finger work of both guitar players are displayed with such beauty and malice. It has the right amount of melody and sheer relentless power. For me it is hard to get into modern melodic death metal bands because they focus mostly on either more of the harmony driven riffs and forget about the more destructive fueled constructs. The boys although, have done a wonderful job balancing the two sides that make melodic death metal amazing. You see this in other tracks on the EP like "Rise as They Fall" and "Stand Unified." These guys really know how to produce a great sound with perfect form!

My personal favorite track on this piece would be "A Great Sacrifice." The overall tone of the track carries the overall vibe and atmosphere the album generates. Deep down I think the reason this track is my personal favorite is because of the call to arms and giving it up to achieve the goals in life we want to grasp in our hands.

When we hear the name Berklee College of Music, it's natural to think of the great musicians who attended this institution such as John Mayer, Donald Fagen (Steely Dan) and Annie Clark (St. Vincent) to name a few. This impressive school has fostered the talent of a countless number of artists and bands and continues to do so with the members of the up-and-coming New England band, The Penthouse.

This indie rock group consists of Eric Derwall on the drums, Kyle Raney on the bass, Jacob Arias on guitar and Patrick James as the front man. The band's latest releases "City Lights" and "Another Day" perfectly embody what it means to be 'indie rock.' Every track makes you both want to move but also listen closely to the story being told through the lyrics. "Best Friend" for example is a relatable track about falling in love with your best friend that also makes you want to dance to its fast-paced and foot-tapping beat.

The band member's varying musical backgrounds make the instrumental portions of their music even richer in songs like "Everytime" and "Clear As Day (feat. Noah Jackson)" as each instrumental solo is just as strong as the next. This new rising band welcomes you to The Penthouse as stated on their SoundCloud page so don't miss a chance to listen to their new music!

Dixie Chicken and The Egg

ALBANY — Little Feat played to a sold out crowd at The Egg on Sunday, Sept. 10. Wasting no time, the group opened up with “Spanish Moon” and throughout their two hour set, Little Feat gave the fans what they wanted with tunes such as “Oh Atlanta” and “Time Loves A Hero.” The American rock band originally formed in 1969, but broke up ten years later due to creativ differences. In 1987, surviving members brought the band together, and they have been performing their unique blend of rock and roll, blues and boogie ever since. In 1975, Led Zeppelin’s Jimmy Page revealed Little Feat was his favorite American band to Rolling Stone magazine.

Ask Barrett and he will tell you Buckley does the best cover of Leonard Cohen's "Hallelujah." And, people do ask for his thoughts. His record store in Troy is adorned by pillars, built at a time when the number of such signified wealth. The wealth is measured by the level of education people learn by walking in. On Saturdays, it's like a barber's shop. A hangout for the neighborhood to sit around to debate and compare. But, on Saturdays in Troy, it's common to catch musicians from the local scene in the store. It's not uncommon to catch them playing in front of the store either.

"I always tell them, buy a record," said Barrett. "If you don't like it, bring it back [and] we'll give you something else. So they will try other stuff and that's worked out well. And, it's not just me. People come in here and music lovers take to these kids like crazy. Saturdays are fun here, because all the musicians come here and hang out. We usually have a performer. ... They come in and they talk to everybody. All the musicians hang out, get together and then they decide to along with someone who's recording. ... This is kind of like a barber shop. It's a boys club, but there's a lot of women involved. Female musicians are very comfortable here. They know we all respect them, and there's lots of laughs." The conversation turns to Joanna Palladino of Off the Record, and Holly Taormina of Holly and Evan.

But, Barrett isn't known simply as the owner of River Street Beat Shop. For longer than most of the musicians and customers who walk through his doors, he's been a staple to local radio. Since 1967, Barrett has hosted Kaleidoscope — a radio show where he mixes classic rock tunes with contemporary and local music. This week, his show jumps up the dial from WVCR-FM 88.3 The Saint to WAIX-FM 106.1 The X.

"I had a phenomenal, wonderful experience where I was at Siena," said Barrett. "They treated me like a million bucks. But, I was ready for a change. I needed a change. My only regret is that I'm not working with my dear friend Dean Charette. That was very hard to walk away from, because we're very close. But, even he understood that I needed it. I'm 71. How much more do I have in the tank? I want to be with a bunch of young people who are fired up about music.

Barrett said he's schizophrenic about his music. He bounces from one genre to the next because he can't settle on just one, nor does he think he should. He said good music can be mixed and matched, treated like a good menu.

"I don't know how anyone can stand to listen all day long to a hip hop station, or all day long to a country station, even all day long to a jazz station. Because, after awhile, you become jaded," said Barrett.

That kind of philosophy should mix well at his new home with the Malta-based Empire Broadcasting Company station, since it flipped its format from news to a mixed bag of classic rock, alternative music, and local artists.

"To me, it's like food," said Barrett. "I

"Nothing makes me happier than to tune into a radio and hear somebody at a college station, or somebody I've never heard before, or late at night spinning the dial and hear somebody who knows what they're doing and playing great music. Man, I love that."

— Jim Barrett,
radio personality

don't want to eat the same food everyday. I don't want to eat hamburgers every day. I want to eat Italian one day, and Moroccan the next. ... Music I treat like a great menu. I try something new all the time."

"I'm a child of radio"

Ask Barrett to put a label on himself and he will call himself "a child of radio." He writes and plays music — you've likely caught him on stage playing with the Lawn Sausages — but he won't dare call himself a musician. That's reserved for someone like Jeff Beck, to whom he considers to be the ultimate guitarist. The radio is where he first fell in love. The spark that cut through the quiet of a summer evening as it came to life. It would lead him to experience music history first hand as it came through town.

"The Strip [in downtown Troy] was the coolest thing I've ever been involved with," said Barrett, describing a row of bars and clubs that all played live music from the early 60s to the late 70s in a scene he likened to New Orleans. He starts to name drop bands with national following that stopped to play in Troy — Sam The Sham and the Pharaohs, The Liverpool Set. "Music would start at eight at night, end at five in the morning, four in the morning. Bands were everywhere, and we worked all over the place. That was the Golden Era of music in Troy."

That said, Barrett said Albany, Rensselaer and Schenectady all had something to boast, leading to his opportunity to interview an up-and-coming band from overseas.

"They'd bring in some national bands. And, of course, J.B. Scotts which was ridiculously good. And, the Hullabaloo in Rensselaer. They had the Talking Heads as a three piece. That's how early they got them. They had Joe Jackson and they had The Police as a three piece. The Aerodrome that was the Mecca of God to me. I, actually, for RPI interviewed Led Zeppelin at the Aerodrome." It was Robert Plant's 19th birthday.

Though Barrett said the days of The Strip in Troy may never come back, the local music scene is making a "remarkable" comeback. It's evidenced in the records he sees coming into his shop. It's played on his weekly radio station.

"I don't have an ego about doing radio. I will say, I'm good at it, because I've been doing it for a long time," he said. "But, nothing makes me happier than to tune into a radio and hear somebody at a college station, or somebody I've never heard before, or late at night spinning the dial and hear somebody who knows what they're doing and playing great music. Man, I love that."

Get snowed in...

The story is set at an isolated Michigan bed and breakfast during a March snowstorm. Olivia, another author, is at work on a new novel as she battles through the elf-doubt she developed after a lackluster reception to her first book.

Olivia is played by Jenny Strassburg who returns to the REP after playing a similarly smart, strong and pretty woman in "Venus in Fur" in 2013.

"There's a lot I can identify with in Olivia, in regard to my own struggle as an artist," said Strassburg, "who's been busy in the time between Albany visits, spending three years at the Alabama Shakespeare Festival, and trodding the boards as Lady Macbeth in New York Classical Theatre's "Macbeth," Stella in Virginia Stage's "A Streetcar Named Desire," and starring in the world premiere of "A Class Act" at New World Stages. "This is a very sexy, funny play," she added. "The characters are wordsmiths, so they are always trying to challenge and top each other with language. There's also a clash between Generation X and millennials at work, and the way we communicate now—with social media, selfies and self-promotion—taking a part."

As Olivia works on her novel, she meets Ethan, a bright-eyed decade younger than she, who has more in mind when he arrives in Michigan than just small talk. Though Ethan initially pretends otherwise, he is quite familiar with Olivia's work, fascinated even.

"After reading [Olivia's] book, he has become completely enamored with her," said Williamson, speaking of his character. "The kind of person that he is as an artist, as a writer, is who she is. So, the give and take from each other a lot."

The pair are directed by Stephen Nachamie. Subscribers will remember his work with "4000 Miles" at the REP in 2015. Nachamie was associate director of the 2016 Tony Award-winning Broadway revival of "She Loves Me" (which lands, in a new production, at the REP in November).

"Oh, she's wonderful. She's fantastic. She's great," said Williamson, on working with his co-star Strassburg. "I could not have asked for a better partner on this journey, and I think the world of her. She's really fabulous, and a lot of fun. Really great person on and off the stage. I couldn't be more happy to be in this play with her."

Preview performances take place Sept. 22-24. Opening night is Tuesday, Sept. 26. Regular performances continue through Sunday, Oct. 15. Performance times: 7:30 p.m. Tuesday through Thursday; and 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday—with matinees 3 p.m. Saturday; 2 p.m. Sunday; and 2 p.m. Wednesday, Oct. 4. Capital Repertory Theatre, 111 N. Pearl Street, Albany. Tickets range from $20 to $55. Students with valid ID: $16 all shows. For tickets and information, call Tickets by Proctors, 518.445.SHOW (7469) or visit capitalrep.org.

Opening night includes live music in the café at 6:30 p.m., and complimentary post-show champagne and dessert from Bella Napoli Bakery. The Chef's Table performance, on Tuesday, Oct. 3, includes pre-show music and complimentary hors d'oeuvres for ticketholders, from Hollow Bar + Kitchen, in the lobby, beginning at 6:30 p.m.

Post show discussions with representatives from Sex with Strangers will follow performances on Wednesdays, Oct. 4 and 11.

The Sunday, Oct. 15 matinee is preceded by a Behind-the-Scenes event, which features complimentary light breakfast fare for ticketholders, from ShopRite Supermarkets, and discussion led by the REP's Producing Artistic Director Maggie Mancinelli-Cahill. Food service begins at 12:30 p.m., with the presentation following from 1 to 1:30 p.m.

... life positively that do succeed believe to their very core that they WILL succeed if they just stick to the plan. Sure, there will be ups and downs and moments when they will go off track but instead of giving up they get right back to it and focus on the long term because they KNOW they will succeed if they do.

The Proactive Attitude - Taking action adds to your enjoyment and satisfaction in seeing yourself building up momentum. As mentioned earlier, it's about having a plan and executing it. Without a plan you won't be able to deal with things that life throws at you and trust me friends' life WILL get in the way. Having a proactive attitude when it comes to your health also means knowing that there will be times you'll get off track. There may even be times you go completely off the rails. But instead of giving up they get back to their plan and thus back on track. It also means that in your plan you build in little successes or goals to achieve along the way to help you build momentum. In my case this was a large reason I got 120 pounds off and have kept it off. You see when I first started out I lost 20 pounds in the first couple weeks then NOTHING for the next 6... that's right now 11lbs lost. In fact, I actually gained one back. But because I was proactive I stuck to my plan and believed in it. I also didn't focus on the 120 pounds I needed to lose because that would have been like looking at climbing Mt Everest to me. Instead, in my plan I shot for the next 9.9. At first, my goal was to get to 349.9. Once I hit that I reset my goal to 339.9 and so on. I knew that if I focused on getting to the next 9.9 I'd get back on track because it helped me build momentum.

By having a plan and taking action on it plus building in rewards I was able to get over life's hurdles.

Dan Romand is co-owner and trainer at Full Circle Fitness-NY in Albany and Saratoga Springs.
