Bethlehem Town Board approves two initiatives, following years of planning, discussion and debate

By ALI HIBBS
hibbsa@spotlight.com

BETHLEHEM — Town Board members approved two controversial items during their final meeting of the year on Wednesday, Dec. 13.

One, a much discussed and long awaited open spaces conservation plan, was approved without much discussion as board members have become intimately familiar with the proposal over the previous year. The plan, as has been reported, sets out a series of objective criteria to help town officials decide when to pursue the preservation of a piece of available land in town, as well as the tools available to do so.

After months of back and forth between the town and concerned residents, none of the residents who spoke at the public comment period preceding the vote voiced opposition to the final plan. The resolution to accept the plan and implement use of the criteria was passed unanimously, and with enthusiasm.

Renovations need to start STAT

Construction costs climb for new EMS, DPW facility on Adams Street

By ALI HIBBS
hibbsa@spotlightnews.com

BETHLEHEM — Town Board members approved four contracts for the renovation of the property at 114 Adams Street during their meeting on Wednesday, Dec. 13. The project will repurpose the existing garage to house both Delmar-Bethlehem EMS (DBEMS), which contracts with the town to provide emergency medical services, and the town's Department of Public Works.

The project, approved in the 2018 town budget, was initially expected to cost $4 million. According to Deputy Commissioner of Public Works Paul Penman, however, it will now cost the town closer to $5 million, due primarily to an abundance of construction work available in the region. To pay for the additional cost, board members also approved the use of up to $900,000 from the town's sewer fund capital reserves.

Bids on the project were received about a month ago, said Penman. "And it came in over budget, around $735,000." In addition to an excess of work, he said, a relative scarcity of materials such as lumber and sheetrock, caused by natural disasters that have occurred around the rest of the country, has also contributed to rising costs. He noted that the town attempted, but was unsuccessful, in courting additional construction companies in an attempt to make the bids more competitive.

"It does happen," he said, noting that projects are occasionally completed under budget, as well. "Unfortunately, this is a bigger project for us and so the dollar amount seems significant."

The project involves a full rehabilitation of the town-owned structure on the property, a one-story garage with a partial second floor. According to Penman, the project will add a complete second floor (excluding an existing addition at the rear of the building). Once complete, the first floor will be split between DBEMS and the town's sewer department while the second floor will house DBEMS offices, living space and a multi-use training/community room.

"In order to build the second floor, we will need to make structural reinforcements to the existing first floor walls and foundation," explained Penman, who told Town Board members that will be the most expensive portion of the project. He said that several desired items, such as a computerized lighting system, had been omitted in an effort to lower the project's price tag.

"I'm really concerned about the steadily increasing costs," said Supervisor-elect David VanLuyen. "Initially, when it came in, it was like $2.8 [million] and then it was up to $4 [million] and, now, we're up to $4.73 [million]. It really concerns me that we're $735,000 over the $4 million budget — that's almost 25 percent over the budget."

While VanLuyen stated his support for DBEMS, he said he wasn't convinced of the need for the large, second-floor meeting room, which he said would be almost as big as the Town Hall auditorium. He wondered if there were other ways to bring the project back within budget.

Penman responded that the building was envisioned as a space that would be able to accommodate expected future growth. "Unless you're going to change the program requirements and have everybody make do with less date, Penman and a project

space, then it is what it is, I guess."

Outgoing board member Julie Sasso said she didn't want to be short-sighted and felt it made sense to spend a little extra now to avoid spending more several years down the road, when the extra space is likely to be needed.

When board member Joyce Becker questioned him about the project's anticipated completion

Celebrating the season of generosity

Guiderland-based businesses, organizations galvanize to provide family in need with Christmas

By ALI HIBBS

hibbsa@spotlightnews.com

GUILDERLAND — Sarah Bailey still doesn't know what caused the fire that destroyed her Cohoes home in March, displacing herself, her husband and their six children.

"You never think a fire is going to happen to you," she said, recounting the story of how the back of her house caught fire on a rainy day in March, while she was home with two of her sons, one of whom was only around four months old at the time, and her brother-in-law.

The four of them got outdoors safely, although Bailey admits to running back for her purse and nearly being trapped by the smoke before she got back outside. "I thought I would have time," she said. "You don't realize how fast... It's not just the fire that moves fast, it's also the smoke." Luckily, she explained, the stairs from her bedroom led directly down to the front door and she was able to avoid becoming disoriented as she left her home for the last time.

"I just stood there and watched my house burn for five hours," she said. "It took five hours and four different fire companies to put it out. It was the most devastating thing I've ever been through in my life."

Shortly after she watched all of her belongings go up in smoke, her husband, Albree, became ill with a bone infection that nearly took his life. He underwent two major surgeries and Bailey, who had taken time off from her job following the fire, was unable to return because she had become the primary caretaker of her husband and their children.

Photo provided

"It took a mental toll on me that I didn't expect," she said.

Several weeks ago, Bailey took one of her sons to see the doctor and was speaking with a social worker at Samaritan Hospital in Troy. "I asked them if they had size five or six diapers because we didn't have the money to get him any," she said.

The social worker suggested that Bailey try the Guiderland Food Pantry, as the Baileys were now living in a rented home in the Town of Guiderland. "I didn't even know there was a food pantry out here," Bailey said.

"I was contacted by a social worker at Troy Samaritan Hospital," explained Sue Hennessey, director of the food pantry. "She asked if we might be able to help provide a Christmas for one family."

"She called Sue," said Bailey. "Sue asked if I needed anything and I said all I needed was size six diapers. And she said, 'Is that really all you need?'"

So Bailey told Hennessey her story.

Hennessey spent the next weeks contacting local businesses, which have worked together to provide a merry Christmas for the Bailey family.

Representatives from The Guiderland YMCA, Ballston Spa National Bank's Westmere branch, Techworks Consulting, Inc., AllSquare Wealth Management, Howard Realty Group, Guiderland Town Hall, The Grand Rehabilitation and Nursing at Guiderland, and Systems Management in Troy donated money, food, gifts and gift cards. Representatives met staff and volunteers at the food pantry to collect the donated food and gifts before delivering them to the Bailey family on Wednesday, Dec. 20.

"They donated money for a Christmas tree, and ornaments and lights for the kids," said Bailey. "She spoke with BSNB bank here in Guiderland and they adopted the children and got them gifts. Guiderland Elementary School got them a whole bunch of gifts as well. And the Guiderland Food Pantry gave us our Christmas meal.

"We are just so blessed," she said. "And our children are just going to be so grateful. Their faces are going to so light up with joy. They're so excited already. Because they weren't expecting anything. My husband and I let them know that this year we may not have a tree or presents, and they told us they were just grateful that we are all still here and have a place to live."

"We are thrilled to be able to help out this family, along with other local families in need," said Josh Held, assistant administrator for The Grand Rehabilitation and Nursing at Guiderland. "We have had an Angel Tree in our lobby for a number of weeks now and have been busy collecting gifts. Patrons chose a star from our tree, purchased a gift, and then returned it to us for distribution tomorrow with the holiday meals."

The Baileys plan to stay in their Guiderland rental for the foreseeable future and Bailey says her husband is recovering well after his second surgery and is hoping to return to work in January. "The doctors say he's doing well," she said. "He's starting to walk and they say he'll probably need to do physical therapy for a few months, but he's progressing faster than they thought he would and they're very happy with his outcomes so far."

"I'm just so grateful to God for everything that he's allowed to happen," said Bailey. "Everyone has just been such a blessing to us and our children."

“Town staff, in partnership with the Conservation Easement Review Board, has worked hard this year to research and develop several robust tools to add to the Town’s ‘conservation toolbox,’ with the intent to balance future consumption of land for development with the conservation of land for its open space value,” said Karen Shaw, who will remain in her position as the open space coordinator at the Planning Department.

“With this open space plan in place, the town now has data-driven conservation values maps, a 25-point conservation criteria list, and a GIS-based conservation analysis tool,” she said, “that will inform town staff and boards, including the Conservation Easement Review Board and the Planning Board, so that they can more effectively make decisions regarding open space values and priorities when conservation opportunities arise.”

The other agenda item, which has received more vocal opposition in recent weeks than the open spaces plan, was a resolution to move ahead with the idea of implementing a road diet on Delaware Avenue between Elsmere Avenue and the Normanskill Bridge.

Opponents of the plan argued that it elevates bicyclists over drivers, questioned a study that found it would add 50 seconds of travel time for commuters, and worried that potentially diverted traffic would negatively impact businesses along that corridor.

Proponents consistently pointed to increased safety and said they felt that the project would have a positive economic impact on businesses, as they would be easier to not only walk and bike to, but also improve access by cars from the opposite side of the street. Currently, many argued, left hand turns are too dangerous to make across two lanes of traffic traveling at 40 miles per hour.

The plan would reduce the lanes of traffic to one in each direction, with a central left-hand turn lane. It would add a bicycle path and install additional crosswalk safety features. Details of the project are far from finalized, said Rob Leslie, the town’s planning director, allowing more time for public input and to address specific concerns.

If implemented, the project would make that portion of Delaware Avenue essentially a “complete street,” hospitable to all modes of transportation. And, according to Leslie, studies have shown that road diets increase safety for all users and have been found to enhance economic opportunity. The complete streets initiative, widely promoted as offering improved safety, health, economic, and environmental outcomes, is one that has been championed by a diverse national alliance of supporters, including advocates for senior citizens and the disabled.

The Complete Street Act, which was signed by Gov. Andrew Cuomo in 2011, actually requires local governments “to consider the convenience and mobility of all users when developing transportation projects that receive state and federal funding.” The resolution under consideration would encourage the New York state Department of Transportation, which owns the road, to consider implementing the project when it repaves the roadway sometime in the next few years, as well as give the town’s Planning Department the go-ahead to seek out funding for those parts of the project that would not be funded by the state.

Both of the newly elected incoming town board members commented on the proposal.

Democrat Maureen Cunningham spoke in favor of the road diet, as well as the open space plan. Of Delaware Avenue, she said, “I do think it’s the infrastructure of the past and I think we need to be forward-thinking. We, as a town board, need to ensure that the businesses continue to thrive in this town and so I’m in support of the road diet, on the condition that we continue to put economic revitalization as one of our priorities, along with safety.”

Incoming Republican Jim Foster, however, had concerns. “Don’t try and be something that you’re not,” he said. “I think, maybe, although road diets are certainly a great thing in many communities and many applications, perhaps Delaware Avenue is not one of those instances in which this is appropriate.”

Foster said DOT studies around the country have shown that road diets are not necessarily advisable on roads that carry more than 15,000 cars a day. “There are about 18,300 road trips on Delaware Avenue,” he said. “What that tells me is that the primary use of Delaware Avenue, as much as we might want it to be this quaint little main street through Bethlehem that links the east and the west, it’s primarily a corridor through which vehicles and commuters travel.”

Reluctant to believe any lost business caused by routes to avoid increased travel times would be balanced by increased foot and bicycle traffic, Foster said, “I’m concerned about the businesses on that corridor just as much as I’m concerned about safety and I just think we need to make sure that we’re considering all these factors before we proceed.”

Of the 18 people who spoke on the topic that night, 11 were in favor, six were opposed and one said she wasn’t sure there weren’t better options.

One supporter, a resident of Albany, said he was speaking to the board “from the future.” Martin Daley, a planner at the Capital District Regional Planning Commission, lives two blocks from Madison Avenue where a similar road diet was recently implemented. Working with concerned businesses, he said, a compromise was reached that satisfied their concerns, and added, “Since then, we’ve seen some significant investment in Madison Avenue. We certainly haven’t seen a drop in traffic.”

Tim Talmadge, who lives and works along the Delaware Avenue corridor, questioned the sense of including a dedicated bike path with no connections on either end. He also said he felt slowing traffic would negatively affect his chiropractic practice.

Of 35 comments emailed to the town, 22 were in favor of the full road diet and 13 were completely opposed to the proposal or skeptical about certain aspects. Leslie included those comments, along with responses, in the agenda packet available on the town’s website.

After a brief conversation, board members passed the resolution unanimously.

“To me, what we’re really talking about,” said Supervisor-elect David VanLuven, “Is Delaware Avenue a bypass corridor to move cars through as quickly as possible ... or is it part of a neighborhood like the rest of Delaware Avenue is?”

Town board appoints Wagoner to fill vacant seat

By ALI HIBBS
hibbsa@spotlightnews.com

BETHLEHEM — Twenty-two residents submitted resumes for the 2018 interim Town Board seat vacated by soon-to-be-Supervisor David VanLuven.

Using the same process by which Doris Davis was appointed to serve for the interim year following William Reinhardt’s election to the County Legislature, the other board members — Joyce Becker and incoming members Maureen Cunningham and Jim Foster — and VanLuven identified and interviewed six candidates: Patricia Beeler; Donna Gilberto; Steven Grasso; Seanan Herrick; James Pike; and Giles Wagoner.

Describing all 22 applicants as “a deep group that reflected our community’s interest in and commitment to good town government,” VanLuven said it wasn’t an easy choice. “It was an exceptional group and a difficult decision, but we ultimately chose Giles Wagoner.”

Wagoner, who won the election to serve the final year of Reinhardt’s term in 2017, was initially going to run for the full four-year term last fall, until the candidate for Highway Superintendent Brent Meredith withdrew his name to take a job at SUNY and the Bethlehem Democratic Committee substituted Wagoner for the job. Conflict within the party resulted in a split ballot in the November general election and both Democratic candidates lost to John “Tiger” Anastasi.

Celebrating 60 Years

The Chamber: Connecting Our Community

BY KATHY McCARTHY
Special to The Spotlight

Connections. For 60 years, that's been the No. 1 offering of the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce.

Today's Chamber grew out of the Bethlehem Businessman's Group, which had a strong focus on the Four Corners. For the past six decades, it has strengthened the town by providing a place for businesses to come together.

"The Chamber let business people meet each other, and do business with others," said Marty Delaney, who was president of the Chamber from 1986 – 2010. "We focused on growing membership, helping businesses relocate, and letting them make connections."

Before Delaney became president of the Chamber, there was an office with a part-time staffer to answer phones. Delaney led the Chamber as it grew from about 350 members to 650.

"Those were high times," Delaney said. "People were excited about business and investing."

The Chamber is a resource that's often the first stopping point for businesses just starting out.

"We could give advice and a little background to new businesses," Delaney said. "Sometimes we could identify a problem, and help solve it."

In 2000, for instance, a landslide on the eastern end of Delaware Avenue closed the bridge into Albany. The Chamber, Town Hall and police all worked together to keep things going. A grant from then-

Assemblyman John Faso let businesses advertise and provide direct mail so people knew they were still open. DOT's lighted signs made travel easier. When the road re-opened, then-Gov. George Pataki cut the ribbon.

THEN..... Elsmere Fire Ca. 1957

NOW..... Elsmere Fire 2017

“We were a little old Chamber of Commerce in little old Bethlehem,” Delaney said. “But look what you can pull off if you just try.”

“We are often a sounding board,” past president and longtime member of the Chamber of Commerce Greg Turner, president of Burt Anthony Associates, said. “We can’t always take a position on things, but we can allow the membership to express their views and agenda.”

Turner said the Chamber has benefitted the 55-year-old business that Burt Anthony began in his living room in Unionville.

“The contact with other businesses and the networking have been helpful,” Turner said. “Being part of the Chamber has also been something that has assisted my clients as they establish and expand their businesses.”

A strong and well-connected business community has enhanced the whole community, Delaney and Turner both said. That’s something Jennifer Kilcoyne, president of the Chamber since 2010, has continued.

“When I first came on board, I made a concerted effort to engage the community,” Kilcoyne said. “Bethlehem is a very tight-knit community, and the residents want to buy local.”

Kilcoyne has made that easier, especially during the holidays. The Holiday Shopping Card came out in time for Small Business Saturday right after Thanksgiving. Forty-nine businesses are participating in the discount program that grew out of the Buy Local program, and the Holiday Shopping Card is available at local businesses or the Chamber.

There’s also the Shop Bethlehem gift card program, which offers a gift card good at more than 35 local businesses.

And Restaurant Week, which offers a 3-course meal at many local restaurants, priced according to the year.

Today's Chamber continues to offer a benefit that was a big draw in the days before the Health Exchange: health insurance.

"A lot of Chambers opted out of carrying health insurance," Kilcoyne said. "But we kept it, and have a part-time benefits administrator that people can sit down and talk with, face-to-face."

Kilcoyne and Delaney are also proud of the events that the Chamber has been part of, or has led, that bring businesses and community together.

"I sit on a lot of committees," Kilcoyne said, naming First Night Bethlehem, Art on the Rail Trail, and the Turkey Trot.

"Chamber members really grew the Memorial

60 YEARS 1957 - 2017

Day Parade, starting with the 50th anniversary in 2007, when we borrowed a '57 Chevy to be in the parade," Delaney said. "There was the Bicentennial Parade in 1993, Feestelijk, the midnight releases of the Harry Potter books, the Four Corners re-do, and of course, the clock at the Four Corners."

Turner said the Chamber's recognition events help promote the community, and maintain a small-town feel.

"They're a nice recognition for local people," he said. "At the annual dinner, we recognize the business person of the year, and give a community service and lifetime achievement award."

What does Kilcoyne see for the next 60 years?

"We have hundreds of members to thank," she said. "We want to continue to serve the chamber membership and the community."

■ OBITUARY

Lierheimer, Joan Lawrie Haynes

SLINGERLANDS — Joan Lawrie Haynes Lierheimer, 87, of Slingerlands and formerly of Delmar, passed away on Sunday, December 10, 2017. Born on March 24, 1930 in Greenville, Pa., she was the only child of Margaret Lawrie and George Ezra Haynes. She spent much of her youth in Rensselaer, N.Y., and graduated from Van Rensselaer High School. She received her Bachelor of Science Degree from the State University College at Oneonta and her Master of Science degree from Teachers College, Columbia University. Early in her career, she taught elementary school in Saugerties and East Greenbush, N.Y.

She is survived by her son, Paul Lierheimer and his wife, Kimberley, of Tucson, Ariz., and her daughter, Margaret McIntire and husband, Travis, of Tampa, Fla. She is also survived by seven grandchildren, Taylor, Drew, Christopher, Faith, Abigail, Rachael and Laine, whom she adored. She was preceded in death by her husband, Alvin Paul Lierheimer, and two children, Amy Lynn and Christopher George.

Lawrie was an active member of Westminster Presbyterian Church, for many years. She was a dedicated PEO sister and an unflinching champion for women and children of all ages. During her second career, she was employed by Albany Business College and later by the New York state Department of Education. Lawrie was an avid reader and bridge player, and was often seen with the New York Times crossword puzzle in hand.

Lawrie's main focus was her love of family and friends and commitment to life-long learning. She personified unconditional love, true faith, tolerance and perseverance throughout her life; her quiet and gracious presence will truly be missed by many.

A memorial service will be held at Westminster Presbyterian Church on State Street in Albany in the spring.

Contributions may be made to The Beverwyck Scholarship Fund c/o Beverwyck at 40 Autumn Drive, Slingerlands, NY 12159 or Westminster Presbyterian Church at 85 Chestnut Street, Albany, NY 12210.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Be your kids' moral compass

It is my opinion that to most good parents, the welfare of their children is of extreme importance. You want what is best for them and in a selfless way, make sacrifices on their behalf.

It is your obligation to God, Our Father, yourself and your children to raise them to be responsible adults. Hopefully, things work out that way, but that is not how life always unfolds. Some parents try hard and still end up with negative results. However, they can still take solace in knowing that they gave it their best shot and left nothing on the playing field.

Remember, you are not supposed to be your children's best friend. That is a common mistake that some parents make. Although they mean well, it usually brings bad results. Quite often that path leads to a very bumpy road of disrespect and outward defiance. Your role as a parent is to reach and demonstrate leadership by setting a virtuous example.

Kids are like sponges, they pick up on things much quicker than most adults realize. You may reap only what you sow. As a parent, you need to keep a watchful eye on what your kids are viewing and a very sharp ear on what they are listening to. Rap is mostly crap. In most cases, it sends a negative message to impressionable listeners. Some call it music, but I will not.

However, it is not the sound that is concerning, it is the content and the words that are troubling. Does that kind of language instill values and ethics? You be the judge. Family should be the brick and mortar of a sound society. The home should be a foundation for virtue and integrity. As a parent, you need to set the tone and standards of what is and is not appropriate for your children.

Also, the internet can be, like a lot of great inventions, have a double-edge of both good and bad. You need to stay on guard and vigilant. They may not always like your decisions, but it is important that they respect them.

You may not always be right, but you always need to try to be right for the sake of your kids. Parenting can be a very humbling experience. It needs to be taken very seriously. Let the love in your heart be your navigator.

Bryan Elson,
Albany

TOWN GOVERNMENT

Property tax payments accepted beginning Friday

Full payment must be made with cash or check

BETHLEHEM — The Receiver of Taxes will begin accepting payments for 2018 property taxes beginning Friday, Dec. 29, 2017.

If a property owner wants to pay his or her bill prior to the beginning of the new year, he or she must make his or her payment in person at the Receiver of Taxes' office during regular business hours. The town will provide the property owner with the tax amount he or she owes which is only payable in full by cash or by check made out to Receiver of Taxes.

Property owners should note that the Town of Bethlehem's authorization to accept these payments is premised on the expectation that Albany County will provide the town with the tax warrant dated Dec. 29 2017.

Town property owners should also be advised that the authority for the town to collect 2018 property taxes does not address the deductibility of such prepaid taxes for income tax purposes, as that issue is under the purview of the Internal Revenue Service (IRS).

The office of the Receiver of Taxes, Alicia Roney, is open Monday through Friday, between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m.

it substantially completed and ready to move into by early November. "In order to do that, we really need to proceed. Even a month could delay the project and not let it happen."

During the public comment period prior to the meeting, Linda Schacht from the DBEMS Board of Directors commended the Town Board for undertaking the project, which will ensure that DBEMS has a home when the lease on its current location expires at the end of next year. She also pointed out that the volunteer-based staffing model employed by the non-profit EMS corporation has saved the town more than $4.5 million since 2013.

"No one likes price increases," said Clarkson. "This is not fun ... but when I look at the options we have, which are limited at this point, there don't seem to be any that are availing, other than going ahead with the project."

Clarkson also noted the $4.5 million in savings created by DBEMS.

The $900,000, said Penman, would be coming out of the sewer capital reserve fund, which currently holds about $2.5 million. Ideally, the department likes to keep $1.5 million in that account in case of unexpected emergencies. That will allow the town to avoid borrowing to pay for the project, which would take additional weeks and incur greater expense.

Ultimately, board members approved both items unanimously.

"We realize the project is expensive and the costs are greater than anticipated," said Schacht. "I want to assure you that the funds will be invested and the facility will go to a good use, by myself and my 75 colleagues, who are volunteers, plus our paid personnel."

DBEMS receives about 3,500 calls each year. It is staffed primarily by volunteers between 6 p.m. and 6 a.m. — approximately 100 volunteer Emergency Medical Technicians (EMTs), Advanced EMTs, paramedics, firefighter drivers, and DBEMS services are supported by a combination of billing revenue and tax funds provided by the Town of Bethlehem Ambulance District.

LIBRARIES AND SENIORS

A year in review at BPL

As we wrap up another tremendous year at the library, it's a good time to reflect on all the ways throughout the past months we've been able to connect with the community – a relationship that inspires us to grow and enhance the services we provide.

2017 Highlights :

Our Friends-supported Library of Things continues to expand, with the addition of musical instruments, American Girl dolls, and tech tools like solar chargers, laptops and more.

Our Children's Place was host to a brood of chicks this spring that our young patrons helped raise from eggs and tend to with help from naturalist George Steele.

We launched Rubber Ducky Club, a year-round early literacy program that allows babies, toddlers and preschoolers to log literacy moments and earn prizes.

The library handed out more than 1,000 solar eclipse viewing classes and featured special programming leading up to the rare Aug. 21 celestial event.

We redesigned our website for a cleaner, more accessible look.

Musical programming remains strong, with our Sunday Music concert series delighting classical music fans in the winter and Evenings on the Green providing more lively outdoor fare in the summer. We also began a partnership with the Center for Disability Services to co-host morning concerts for all ages and abilities.

Our popular Project

Runway teen sewing series went green this year with a challenge to incorporate recycled materials in the designs.

The Ann Seegal Memorial Storytelling series featured Emily Ellison in the spring and a "Travel the World in Tales and Tunes" extravaganza in fall.

The library's Halloween costume swap continues to grow and provide a way for even more people to "upcycle" their old costumes, and everyone got into the spirit of the annual indoor preschool Halloween parade.

Adults and children have enjoyed library cinema series with popular titles specially selected for them.

Indoor mini-golf returned this summer with a special guest appearance by Pete the Cat.

Job coaching and programming throughout the year aimed to help people make the next step toward their career goals.

Famous impersonator talks about career as a comedian, and his future as an actor

By MICHAEL HALLISEY
halliseym@spotlightnews.com

SCHENECTADY — While the name on the marquee reads “Frank Caliendo,” it’s not the name of the man people come to see. The comedian has made a living portraying others for nearly 20 years. When he is on stage, people don’t see the husband, father or the once-aspiring broadcast journalist. They see John Madden. They hear Morgan Freeman. They are entertained by the dozens of impersonations witnessed countless of times on television and radio. If people were asked to describe Frank Caliendo, they would likely describe him as that guy on television who does impersonations. In turn, when Frank Caliendo is asked to describe himself, he calls himself something else.

Re-opening the new TU

Moriah Formica joins James Taylor, John Legend and Jim Belushi for arena's celebratory first show

ALBANY — The ceiling keeps getting ever higher for Shaker teen Moriah Formica.

The young rocker who turned heads — and chairs — on NBC's The Voice is going to open at the Times Union Center's Grand Re-Opening celebration on Friday, January, 26, at 8 p.m.

Formica will not only share the bill with Grammy Award-winning artists James Taylor and John Legend, but acclaimed comedian Jim Belushi, as well.

"This star-studded event is a celebration of the grand re-opening of the Times Union Center and highlights the status of the arena as the premier venue in the Northeastern United States," said Albany County Executive

Daniel McCoy. "We are proud and pleased that the updates to the facility will allow us to offer to the community some of the best sports programming and entertainment in the nation."

The nearly 30-year-old venue is in the midst of a multi-million dollar renovation, the first phase of which is to be completed next August. Already, fans attending the arena have already enjoyed the enclosed atrium that now shields them from the harsh elements of a Capital City winter.

Tickets are on sale now and range from $65 to $195. A portion of the proceeds will be donated to The Pediatric Emergency Department at Albany Medical Center.

To purchase, visit the Times Union Center box office, go online at Ticketmaster.com or timesunioncenter-albany.com or call Ticketmaster at (800) 745-3000.

Chocolate-Strawberry Pie

The holiday season is synonymous with many things, including delicious foods. While Thanksgiving turkeys or Christmas geese will be found on many a table this holiday season, baked goods and desserts are what many people look forward to this time of year.

Holiday hosts with a lot on their plates might not have the time to prepare homemade baked goods for their guests. Thankfully, the following recipe for "Chocolate-Strawberry Pie" from Addie Gundry's "No-Bake Desserts" (St. Martin's Press) can be prepared in just 15 minutes, all without turning on the oven.

Ingredients: Yields one pie

- 1 pint fresh strawberries, washed, trimmed and halved
- 1 store-bought (or homemade) chocolate cookie pie crust
- 2/3 cup sugar
- 1/4 cup cornstarch
- 2 tablespoons unsweetened cocoa powder
- 1/4 teaspoon minced crystallized ginger
- 1/8 teaspoon ground nutmeg
- Pinch of kosher or sea salt
- 6 large egg yolks
- 2 1/2 cups half-and-half
- 6 ounces bittersweet or semisweet chocolate, chopped

- 1/2 tablespoon rum extract
- 1 teaspoon vanilla extract
- Additional strawberries for garnish (optional)

Instructions:

Place the strawberry halves in a single layer on the bottom of the pie crust. In a medium saucepan, whisk together the sugar, cornstarch, cocoa powder, ginger, nutmeg, and salt over medium heat. Whisk in the egg yolks to create a thick paste. Gradually whisk in the half-and-half until the mixture thickens, about 5 minutes. Bring to a boil and cook for 1 minute. Remove from the heat. Add the chocolate and whisk until combined. Add the rum and vanilla extracts. Cool the mixture for 4 minutes. Pour the filling over the strawberries and up to the top of the crust. Chill the pie for 2 hours or until set. Garnish with additional strawberries, if desired.

Pairing:

Veuve Clicquot Ponsardin Rose NV
Veuve Clicquot — France

With New Year's Eve upon us, we figured a choice of champagne was in order. Ideally, you want to pair a drink that offers sweet notes to compliment this dish. Should you wish to branch off, you can go with a red zinfandel, too.

Through Dec. 30. Also, "Elevator Music 34: Tony Oursler: Talking Light." A single incandescent light bulb hangs from the ceiling of the Tang Museum's elevator; its intermittent flickering correlates to the sounds of the artist's voice emanating from a hidden speaker. The work is one of several "talking lights" he made in the 1990s, which explore his fascination with imitation, repetition, magic, mystery, and that which is beyond ordinary human understanding. Through Dec. 30. Skidmore College, 815 North Broadway, Saratoga Springs. Museum hours: Tues.-Sun., noon to 5 p.m.;

■ MUSIC REVIEW

Wavy Cunningham's 'Welcome to the Wave'

By TJ DRUCKER
nysmusic.com

Albany has always had a diverse music scene. The Capital District has a way of nurturing countless acts and genres throughout the years, and our city always seems to have a surprise up its sleeve.

The biggest surprise in 2017 has been the release of Wavy Cunningham's newest project, "Welcome to the Wave." This endeavor showcases Cunningham's ear for samples and his ability to paint a story.

Ever eloquent, Cunningham shows us that he can be the light of the party. His most ambitious project yet starts with "Sunrays," a calypso-inspired introduction track whose chorus echoes the theme that persists throughout the album, "518, if you didn't know you know now."

He peppers his storytelling with various local references and a sound that encompasses the feel of the State Capital. This is apparent in his upbeat manifesto, "Welcome to the Wave," a prime example of how Cunningham can balance the tempo, timbre, bass and rhythm of a track while spinning a yarn to the listener.

The most impressive aspect of Cunningham's work is the sheer number of genres he uses in his samples. Two shining examples of this are the incredible Barry White sample in "Back on the Scene" and the Bob Marley vibe surrounding "Montego Bay." However, Cunningham is able to move past relying on popular samples by creating his own atmosphere, which permeates throughout the album.

"Bout Me" possesses a striking West Coast influence while maintaining Cunningham's Northeast attitude and the angelic track, "Ain't Fo Sho" flourishes while Cunningham floats amongst syllables.

"Welcome to the Wave" shows that hip-hop is alive and well in Albany. This is the perfect summertime album and while we may be in the depths of winter, don't be surprised if the next 518 party you attend has Wavy playing in the background.

MUSIC REVIEW

NYS Music's Best Albums

NYS Music staff and readers choose best music of 2017

By PETE MASON
nysmusic.com

With a wide ranging variety of music across the state, New York has an intense amount of bands releasing music each year, much of it recorded in New York state. Whether it was recorded at in Syracuse at Subcat Studios, at Albany's Overit Studios, New Paltz's Castle Studios, or Dreamland Recording in Woodstock (among the numerous options around the state), these albums from homegrown artists reflect the diverse music being produced right at home in New York.

Staff Picks
Dopapod's
"MEGAGEM"

Dopapod may be taking 2018 off, but it left a fantastic album for fans prior to its year long hiatus. After its Fall Tour closing show in Syracuse, the band gears up for two final shows – Saturday, Dec. 30 at Fete Music Hall in Providence, and Sunday, Dec. 31 at Paradise Rock Club in Boston.

"With their most themed release to date, it's apparent the quartet knew exactly where they wanted to go," wrote music reviewer Alyssa Ladzinski, "as they take their listeners on a dream pop journey to the center of self fulfillment. The fifth studio album comes as a bittersweet symphony, the last creative piece relinquished by the jam rockers before the looming hiatus.

While it's bittersweet to know you won't witness the live, raw talent of a band so deserving of its praises for an entire year, at the very least, we're left to see how the entire album translates on stage and if any of those strings just so happen to surface during fall tour."

Formula 5, Dopapod and The Other Brothers were among the artists named by NYS Music as having the best albums in 2017.

Big Mean
Sound Machine's
"Runnin' For The Ghost"

Ithaca's Big Mean Sound Machine is no small touring band.

Nine members have been storming the Northeast for the past few years, and their fan-funded album "Runnin' for the Ghost" served as a catalyst for the group to launch outward in 2018.

"Known for throwing some of the sweatiest dance parties in the Northeast, Big Mean Sound Machine has been ambitiously touring and working hard to welcome new followers with no plans of slowing down," wrote Ben Boivin. "The new fan-funded album, 'Runnin' for the Ghost,' is just one example of how relentless experimentation on the road can lead to something positive and fruitful in the studio."

Formula 5's
"All Points North"

Eli Stein said of the jam happy foursome "On All Points North, the new album from Albany jam-rockers Formula 5, "North" is not a physical direction, but a mental state. North is up, and up is good."

The Other Brothers' "Jones"

New Paltz is alive and kicking with The Other Brothers storming out of the gates with their Jones EP, released in September with a sold-out show at American Beauty to celebrate. Alyssa Ladzinski said of Jones "With eclectic and effortless transitions between a broad horizon of styles, The Other Brothers don't allow themselves to be labeled as a one-genre group, if anything, they're simply contagious. Instead, they master a collection of ballads and soul-soothing soundscapes leaving their exploration and further projects open to directions of all kinds."

Folkfaces' "How Long"

Folkfaces have had a great year – it was one of the founding bands of NYS Music 87/90; it had a relentless Summer Tour, and released "How Long" back in April. Buffablog said of the album "From the back-country banjo charm of 'Institution Blues,' to the rowdy foot-stomping pandemonium of album opener 'Arrows We Break,' right on down to the sultry jazz elements of 'Indian Lake,' there is something for everyone on this record. No matter what your

New York Artist:

The Other Brothers
"Jones"

Readers loved The Other Brothers Jones, and why not? Their dedicated fans sold out their album release show at American Beauty in September.

Aqueous' "Element Pt. 1" & "Element Pt. 2"

Aqueous has had a monster year, including signing with Nugs.net and releasing not one but two live releases in the form of their Element series.

Best Albums

Nationwide:

Staff Picks

Mike Gordon's
"OGOGO"

The evolution of Mike

Gordon's side project has been a delight to watch over the past decade. The current incarnation of the Mike Gordon Band straddles the line between Phish's jammy goodness and Mike's inherent weirdness. Tracks like "Marissa" and "Crazy Sometimes" have made their way into Phish's rotation this year and OGOGO was well received on Mike's recent fall tour.

Body Count's
"Blood Lust"

Ice-T's heavy metal band returned with its first album since 2014's "Manslaughter" received a Grammy nomination for the song "Black Hoodie."

Kendrick Lamar's
"DAMN"

When you are named the greatest living rapper, you expect greatness. That's exactly what "DAMN." delivers. It ended the year as the #1 album on Billboard, and was nominated for Best Rap Album and Album of the Year, which is Lamar's third consecutive album to be nominated for the honor.

Queens of the Stone Age's "Villains"

Marc Ronson produced the seventh album from the heavy rocking QOTSA, led to longer than usual tracks (six of nine are over 5 minutes long), all based on hearing the Ronson produced "Uptown Funk." Frontman Josh Homme told VICE earlier this year "I knew I wanted to make something that sounded very tight, and with the air sucked out of it and very clear. So he was just a great reminder just as an opening and then his desires are so beat-centric. And so are mine [...] we had this tremendous amount of overlap."

lespecial's "Cheen"

Boston's heavy jamband lespecial produced a winning album in "Cheen," released this past Halloween. We said, 'lespecial has spent several years cultivating a dedicated fanbase with a sound that cleverly interweaves psychedelia, technical math-rock, metal, electronica, and a tribal influence that feels like it comes from deep in the jungle. The entire album has the coherent flow of a concept album, with its many themes seeming to bleed effortlessly from one song to the next.

Dopapod's
"MEGAGEM"

No surprise here – Dopapod was a staff favorite, enough to be selected as album of the year nationwide.

Best Albums

Nationwide:

Reader Picks

King Gizzard and the Lizard Wizard's
"Polygonawaland"

Australian Psych rockers King Gizzard and the Lizard Wizard produce a style of rock that is as unique as its name. The band has produced 12 albums in the past five years, with "Polygonawaland" its fifth of 2017 alone.

Dopapod's
"MEGAGEM"

NYS Music's readers were on the same page with us. There's no denying how great "Megagem" is.

Kendrick Lamar's
"DAMN"

Kendrick's conscious rap received rave reviews from media outlets around the country. It'll be a surprise if he doesn't win top honors at the Grammys in January.

Caliendo

"I don't feel like I fit into show business so much," said Caliendo, from his home in Arizona, where he lives with his wife and two children. He describes his typical day like that of any everyday father. He wakes the kids, and after ushering them off to school he proceeds with attending workshops and interviews. When his workday is over, he's taxiing the kids to gymnastics and flag football. Despite the fame, he said he doesn't fit in. He doesn't offer to exchange phone numbers unless asked. He has the phone numbers to famous sports figures on his phone instead of A-list actors or fellow comedians. "I'm just a weirdo who does voices, I don't know."

That's how people know Caliendo. He's a sports guy. His father was a minor league baseball player. His brother pitched batting practice to Major League infielder and World Series champion Craig Counsell. He initially looked to follow in their footsteps, playing baseball as a catcher. He first earned his comedic chops doing impressions from Saturday Night Live, opposing players and sometimes the umpires — occasionally resulting in a few strikeouts.

Caliendo earned his first big break in the short-lived WB comedy series "Hype" in 2000. That's when his John Madden impersonation earned him the attention of Jimmy Kimmel, who was then doing on-air predictions for Fox NFL Sunday. An invite to join Kimmel on-air would ultimately lead to the impersonator to take the place of the now-late night show host on Sundays. From there, Caliendo has developed a portfolio of voices and characters ranging from Charles Barkley to President Trump. For each, he said, there is a formula he follows.

"You create a character out of [the impersonation], so then you can do so much more with it," said Caliendo. He credits Dana Carvey as the best example. The Saturday Night Live actor was perhaps most famous for his take on former President George H.W. Bush. Not only emulating the president's voice, but copying his mannerisms and later spinning off a character full of habits he could take on to a new tangent. "The old Rich Little style, just giving that line, and joke after joke after joke. You can only bear with it for so long, but if you give the person a point of view, and go with that character's point of view, it's like that person is doing the stand-up themselves."

The exception would be that of his impersonations of Morgan Freeman. Freeman's propensity to narrate in films has been put to good use in some of Caliendo's work. Using the voice of the man who once played God to recite LeBron James' declaration to South Beach or to repeat one of President Donald Trump's speeches, has elicited laughs from recent crowds.

"Morgan Freeman, as much as there's a little bit of that take, you don't create as much of a character with him because the voice is the whole thing," said Caliendo.

One of Caliendo's newest characters is a parody of President Trump. Each president is destined to be portrayed in comedy routines. Trump is no exception. Already, Alec Baldwin has established a new career of impersonating POTUS on Saturday Night Live. Caliendo, however, said he approaches the comedy from someplace else.

"My takes come from not being mean," said Caliendo. "You don't even have to agree with their politics, you don't have to agree with anything about them. I find things in the way they talk — the ridiculousness that they can get away with. Alec Baldwin comes from pure hate with Trump, I think. And, I don't enjoy his impression." Caliendo said he avoids the specifics of politics because, "People have different belief systems, and I'm going to get in there and judge it in any way, shape or form."

The guy who does John Madden impersonations said he is moving on. Caliendo is taking steps to transition to another phase of his career. His other impersonations are taking over. Just as he's shedding the retired football coach out of his routine, the actor is losing his resemblance to the overweight coach — Caliendo has lost 50 pounds over the last two years. Now, he said, he's starting to take his career on a similar path to one of his other impersonations, Robin Williams.

Though the comedian continues to tour, he said he is spending less time on comedy and more on acting. Each week, he attends three to four workshops to improve. "I've spent most of my career on the business side, I'm actually now working on the art side of it. Because, I've never worked on that."

The kid out of Wisconsin, who feared he couldn't hack interviewing people after earning a broadcast journalism degree, now wants to branch off into something different. Just as he aimed for a single appearance on late night television — shooting over his target into a successful career in television — Caliendo wants to appear in a play doing serious acting.

"I've also worked on non-impersonation characters, talk about me and family, which is where the next part of my career is going," said Caliendo. Working on the acting side of stuff and being different than the guy who's known for doing the John Madden impression. But, that's kind of what a career is, right? You pigeonhole yourself for doing something to get known, then the second half of your career is trying to figure out how to get out of that pigeonhole you set yourself up with."

Caliendo is to perform at the Rivers Casino & resort in Schenectady on Saturday, Dec. 30, at 8 p.m. For tickets and information, call (518) 346-6204 or visit www.frankcaliendo.com.
