VOORHEESVILLE — Andrew Ward, the village public library's digital services librarian, delicately unearthed a petite beige and worn-out diary from the library's archives boxes. Placing it on the cold, grey table, it appeared unassuming and modest but its cover alone already indicated why it's been safely kept in storage.

Glenmont biz debuting two new salsas

New recipes await in the kitchen

By DIEGO CAGARA
cagarad@spotlightnews.com

GLENMONT — Larry's All Natural has recently added two new sauces, Medium and Mild Chunky Salsas, into its growing line-up of products.

Each new sauce, but with a different spice level, is a combination of fresh tomatoes, green chiles, onions, jalapeno, cider vinegar, garlic, kosher salt and fresh cilantro.

These are vegan, gluten-free and have no added sugar.

They also will give customers more options, along with the three original sauces: Ranchero Sauce, Mole Sauce, and Chipotle Sauce.

While the two new sauces technically first became available to customers this past December, Glenmont resident Larry Sombke — who co-owns Larry's

All Natural with his wife, Catherine Herman — said that they are appearing in many more local stores in the past few months.

“They are great local and all-natural products because we use fresh ingredients, unlike many other similar products, and they are much more homemade and flavorful,” said Sombke. “Many customers have said to me that our salsa does not taste like it’s processed like those from big manufacturers with cheap ingredients.”

Sombke added that the whole product line-up is available in many local stores like Hannaford, ShopRite and Price Chopper across the Capital District, as well as smaller venues like the Delmar Farmers Market and McCarroll's.

They can also be seen in many upstate New York universities’ cafeterias and online via Amazon.com and Foodlyn.com.

Depending on which store a customer purchases it from, the new sauces have an average price of $5.99 each.

Sombke also said that he personally helps to deliver his products to local stores where he has been able to interact with interested customers.

“It’s been a rich and rewarding experience and the response has been so positive,” he said. “I also help fulfill the Amazon orders and deliver them to my post office. In fact, the delivery process does not affect the salsas at all.”

He added that he has forged friendships with store owners too who also enjoy serving local products to their patrons.

“Our new sauces are delicious, versatile and easy to use, and I hope everyone tries them,” he said.

Looking ahead, Sombke revealed he has plans to craft a new salsa product soon and has preliminary ideas for at least three more potential products.

“My goal is also to be a strong regional brand and we could expand more throughout New York, Pennsylvania and New Jersey,” he said. “We want to still make sure our products are well-represented in the shelves and manage them well.”

He also brought up that his family-owned business is approaching its 10th anniversary sometime this summer and he may have plans to help celebrate that milestone.

Town Board debates on local grant vote

Addressing concerns of potential impropriety

By DIEGO CAGARA
cagarad@spotlightnews.com

BETHLEHEM — The Town Board approved two local small businesses, Bake for You and Dorsey Sign Company, to receive a grant of $35,000 each on Wednesday, April 10 after both applications were reviewed by the Microenterprise Grant Application Review Committee last month.

Dorsey Sign Company, however, was the subject of a debate among the Town Board members as they acknowledged concerns related to alleged political affiliations.

The business, located on 750 Delaware Avenue in Delmar, has been solely run by Heather Dorsey since it first opened in January 2016 and it creates signage and lettering for its clients.

Heather did not attend the Town Board meeting. However, she said that when she found out she received the grant money, she was “thrilled because it’s a big deal for my business and I never had any funding like this before. Part of it just seemed surreal but ultimately, it’s everything I’ve worked so hard for.”

She also expressed hopes of expanding her business and she plans to use her grant money to purchase specific machinery and equipment.

The Town Board members discussed whether voting on approving a $35,000 microenterprise grant to the Dorsey Sign Company, a local Delmar business, would be inappropriate, due to the owner’s family ties and alleged political affiliations.

Community Renewal.

For this year, the town had received $200,000 in state aid this past December which would help at least 10 businesses. Half of the grants must at least go to start-up businesses that began operations less than six months ago, at the time of their application.

In a follow-up phone interview, Staubach said that qualifying small business owners were able to start applying on Feb. 25 to Town Hall where the Department of Economic Development and Planning staff looked through and determined which were eligible, before they were further reviewed by the town’s Microenterprise Grant Application Review Committee in March.

Staubach confirmed that this Town Board-appointed review committee consisted of seven local residents with comprehensive experience in law and finance, as well as some who were grant recipients themselves in past years.

The full list of members and their position titles is available on www.townofbethlehem.org/709/Microenterprise-Grant-Program.

After the committee reviewed the applications, they made recommendations to the Town Board members who would then either approve or reject giving part of the grant money.

The controversy

Heather is the brother of Marc Dorsey, the Democratic candidate running for Town Highway Superintendent this year who was endorsed by the Bethlehem Democratic Committee, and the daughter of BDC member Leo Dorsey.

The Town Board is made up of one Republican and four Democrats, the latter three of whom — Town Supervisor David VanLuven, and Town Board members Joyce Becker and Dan Coffey — were recently endorsed by the BDC in this year’s election too.

Citing the above family and political connections, Jim Carriero, the Bethlehem GOP-endorsed Republican Town Board candidate, appeared before the Town Board to voice his concern that VanLuven, Becker and Coffey should not be voting at all on whether Dorsey Sign Company should receive any grant money or not.

“It has the appearance of impropriety. So I understand it’s a fine operating company and et cetera, but there’s clearly a connection between members of this board and the Democratic Committee and the people that are applying for the grant, so I ask you to please recuse yourselves from this vote,” he said.

The process

Elizabeth Staubach, the town’s Economic Development Coordinator who also appeared that night, explained that the Microenterprise Grant Program aims to award grants, from $5,000 to $35,000 each, to rising and existing small businesses that plan to be located in or will expand within Bethlehem.

The program has awarded grants every other year since its inception in 2014 and is offered by the state Office of Homes and

cagarad@spotlightnews.com

BETHLEHEM — A Bethlehem Central School District bus dropped off student Michael Seavey at his work site on Monday, April 1 at around 11:15 a.m. As he alighted, the bus left while he approached the building, only to discover it was locked and there was no one nearby to help him.

According to his parents, Michael could not call anyone. The 21-year-old autistic student, who is in his last school year, had not been allowed to bring his cellphone. He left his phone at the high school. Michael's mother also said he could not search for anyone nearby to help him as he struggles with his communication skills. Even if he had found someone for help, she said he could not communicate easily with them to explain what happened.

The work site —

In light of the incident, the Bethlehem Central School District said it has improved its special needs transportation protocols but did not elaborate on its details.

Michael's parents requested this article omit the site's name and location — was where Seavey was supposed to continue his work-to-school program as part of his regular special needs curriculum. His daily schedule consisted of a few classes in the morning, lunch, then being transported off to his work site from 11:15 a.m. to 1:15 p.m., and returning to school for a few more classes. But with no help or communication device, Michael was left standing outside alone in 30-degree weather until a school bus returned two hours later to pick him up as scheduled. Michael's mother, Tina, said, "He can't be alone. I mean, thank God nothing happened to him, but ever since the incident, he won't leave the house. I can't get him to go to the doctor so the incident. While the owner eventually contacted and apologized to her, Tina reached out to the school district too and was especially concerned that the school bus left without waiting for Michael to at least try entering the building. She said it was a small bus that catered specifically to special needs students; there was also an aide who was supposed to physically accompany the alighting student onto the street level; and the bus was to stay put until the student safely reached his or her destination.

"I have not found out who the bus driver was that day but if I do, I may lose it," she said. "The bus was not supposed to leave while a special needs student is still getting towards their destination. But the bus just drove away from what I gather. In Michael's case, it should take him just two or three seconds to get to the work site's door."

Tina said that the district's Special Education and Students Services director Kathleen Johnston and superintendent Jody Monroe answered her calls, and listened to her concerns. "But the high school principal has not called me once which is upsetting to my husband and I," she said. "You'd think the principal would care for him."

She brought up, however, that the district has plans to schedule a meeting between her family, Johnston and BCHS Principal David Doemel, Jr to further address the situation and discuss possible improvements in the district's protocols on safely transporting special needs students.

Spotlight News has reached out to the school district and relevant individuals for comment and to confirm details. The former provided an emailed statement, acknowledging it as an isolated incident and that it took "immediate his school psychiatrist had to come in and see him. He's also been having panic attacks and he thinks it's a heart attack. He's struggling with post-traumatic stress and he doesn't feel ready to go back to school or the work site."

She explained that the work site's owner apparently had been out of town and one of his employees forgot to communicate that to her prior to the day of action to ensure it would not happen again.”

“Something like this should never happen and is absolutely unacceptable,” said Monroe. “We have put in place new transportation protocols for our work program students to make sure this does not happen again. ... Additionally, we are working to improve the communication with our business partners who host our students.”

The statement, however, did not elaborate on the nature of the “new transportation protocols.”

Tina, who believed her son was neglected that day, said she was “overwhelmed with fear for my son and I was scared that he was all alone for two hours. From a mother’s perspective, I don’t want this to happen to anyone else. It’s heartbreaking and there was nothing Michael could’ve done in the moment.”

She concluded that the district should keep to its word about changing its protocols and teach its bus drivers and aides how to better handle special needs students, regardless of the students’ ages.

Vote on BCSD budget

By DIEGO CAGARA
cagarad@spotlightnews.com

BETHLEHEM — The Bethlehem Central District has proposed a $100.8 million budget for the 2019-2020 school year, for which locals can vote on Tuesday, May 21 from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. at the BCHS gym.

This proposed budget — adopted unanimously by the district’s Board of Education during its April 3 meeting — would increase spending by 2.06 percent and carry a tax levy increase of 2.03 percent, which would be below the district’s tax cap for the seventh consecutive year.

According to a district’s press release, the budget would cause an estimated 1.06 percent tax rate increase for property owners in Bethlehem, or an estimated increase of $56 per $250,000 in assessed home value. It would also increase New Scotland property owners’ tax rate by 5.46 percent, indicating an increase of around $285 per $250,000 in assessed home value. The district noted that such tax rate changes are estimates for now and they are finalized in August.

“This budget was developed to honor the district’s mission to educate and prepare all students to reach their potential,” said Superintendent Jody Monroe. “The budget we have proposed and that the board has adopted, supports our academic programs and ensures healthy learning and development for all children who attend our schools.”

Besides the proposed budget, the district is looking into decreasing its fleet of buses by one large bus, and is proposing a bus replacement referendum on the May 21 ballot. This proposal seeks to replace four large buses and 10 smaller, 30-passenger buses which have been aging through the years, at a cost of $1,088,500. It is estimated that the final cost to local taxpayers is $413,630 and the debt service cost is being reimbursed by the state at a rate of 62 percent.

Also, voters can elect two Board of Education members as Michael W. Cooper’s and Jonathan Fishbein’s seats will expire on June 30. Their seats are each for a three-year term to expire on June 30, 2022; nominating petitions are due this Monday, April 22 and the slate of candidates will be announced shortly afterwards.

BCSD has had the last straw

By DIEGO CAGARA
cagarad@spotlightnews.com

BETHLEHEM — BCSD will reduce plastic straw usage in its cafeterias from Monday, April 29 onwards.

BC Food Service Director Allissa Eiser said in a press release that students and staff will have to consume their beverages from their containers or bottles, without plastic straws, to be more green. This protocol, however, will not apply to students and staff who need to use a straw/cup for specific reasons, and a straw/cup would be available for use.

“We certainly believe that reducing our bulk use of plastic is good for the environment, but we do not want anyone who needs a straw to go without,” said Eiser.

She added that BC wants to help “protect the world’s oceans and wildlife” since plastic straws do not biodegrade and are often mistaken by animals for food. Straws are also hard to recycle since they are physically small although they do naturally break down under sunlight, a process known as photodegradation.

“On average, each straw is used for only 12 minutes but its damaging effects on the environment can last hundreds of years,” said Eiser. “A growing number of cities and businesses are doing away with straws. As a community of more than 5,000 students and staff, we can make a significant impact right here.”

For more information, email Eiser at aeiser@bethlehemschools.org or call the Food Service Department at 518-439-8885.

could begin spending their grant money the day after being approved by the Town Board, Planning Division director Robert Leslie said they must keep a record of their expense receipts to later submit to the town to begin state reimbursements.

According to town documents, grant recipients must also attend Entrepreneurial Assistance Training classes beginning on June 20 at Town Hall where they will learn more skills and information on better managing their businesses like taxes, accounting, advertising and marketing.

The deliberation

Town Attorney James Potter, who sat with the Town Board members, explained the code of ethics associated with potential conflict of interest.

He said a recusal is required by a board member "if they have a direct or indirect financial or material benefit that accrues to the board member or a relative of the board member."

He, however, said that a board member's recusal is not required "if the majority of the board would be disqualified and effectively, you can have no action. So in this case, the concern is apparently political affiliation. If three members of the board had political affiliation, you wouldn't have enough for a majority so a recusal would not be required under those circumstances. But regardless, the political affiliation under the ethics law is not a basis for recusal here because there is no direct or indirect financial benefit for any board member."

VanLuven said that he believed business owners also have the right to express their political views and "patronage politics is dead in Bethlehem. It's a great scare tactic to get someone whipped up on a campaign season but those implications are flat out wrong and I have real problems with them."

He added that regardless of Heather and her family's political views, Heather's business has been successful which "is something we want to foster in town, not tear them down for political affiliations."

Town Board member Maureen Cunningham said she was not aware of the political controversy until the day of the meeting.

"I think it's sad if we start to bring that partisanship into the Town Board because we are really all trying to do the best job we can for the town," she said. "I really don't think it's a partisan issue."

She also brought up how she and fellow member Jim Foster, the sole Republican Town Board member, first came onto the board at the same time and she could not recall a voting decision they had done that was related to their party lines.

Foster, however, announced his recusal from voting but he explained that it was due to having "personal relationships with members of the Dorsey family," instead of any possible political affiliations.

He said he wanted to avoid any appearance of potential impropriety for the aforementioned reason although he acknowledged that his recusal was not required by law.

Fellow Town Board member Joyce Becker asked Staubach what type of people and how many served in the Microenterprise Grant Application Review committee.

"The review committee was established by the Town Board to serve as an objective body as applications come in," Staubach answered, adding that the program had not witnessed any political-related controversy in past years. "Politics was never involved in this process and we've been using our original program protocol since 2014."

Fellow member Dan Coffey said that he saw the Microenterprise Grant Program's application process as "fair."

He also gave an example of how he had recused himself from voting on board decisions before due to knowing applicants personally during his time in the town's Zoning Board of Appeals previously, to indicate he had been through a similar type of deliberation before.

Following the discussion, VanLuven, Becker, Cunningham and Coffey voted in favor of approving the grant money to Bake For You and Dorsey Sign Company, while Foster abstained.

Looking ahead

Heather said that such political controversy "have no merit whatsoever. There's no credibility and there's no political concern here. The grant was determined by a grant committee of seven professionals, which exists to keep politics out of this process. I received the grant because my business is deserving. I've worked very hard to get to where I am now."

She also encouraged other local small businesses to take advantage of the town's Microenterprise Grant Program.

She brought up that had she known about it sooner, she would have originally applied for the program back in 2016, the year her business first opened.

She also said that she is looking forward to the Entrepreneurial Assistance Training classes and "in fact, several professionals have reached out to me already to want to guide me and my business plan, because they see what my business is capable of."

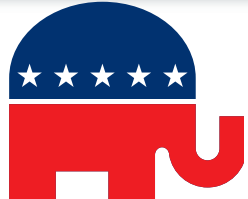

She added that she felt honored to be the program's 21st grant recipient and she is eager for her business to potentially hire employees and grow more efficiently.

"This all means so much to me and nothing can take that away," she concluded. "I'm excited."

According to Staubach and Leslie, the Microenterprise Grant Committee is still reviewing five more applications and interested small business owners can still apply.

"It's always best to come meet with me first," said Staubach. "So you can take advantage of this great program."

OBITUARY

Robert A. Sinuc

COTUIT, Mass. — It is with great sadness that the family of Robert A. Sinuc announce his sudden passing on March 30, 2019.

Bob was born on December 24, 1944 in Chelsea, MA, the son of Albert (predeceased) and Barbara (predeceased) Sinuc.

Bob was a 1962 graduate of Brockton High School and a 1966 graduate of Worcester Polytechnic Institute with a bachelor's degree in Chemical Engineering. Bob played football at WPI and was named Captain his senior year. He was also a member of the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity where he created friendships that he maintains to this day. Bob married Linda one week after graduating college. Bob was first employed by Mobil Oil living in NJ and later relocating to Cartagena, Columbia. In 1972 he took a job with GE Plastics and moved to Glenmont, NY where he raised a family and kept a residence though his death. He was employed at GE Plastics for 24 years, before leaving to work for Allied Signal as Vice-President of Engineering. With Allied Signal he relocated to Germany for a number of years to run the Bendix brake group. He later returned to NY to take a job with Plug Power as Vice-President of Engineering. He then took a job as Vice-President of Engineering and President of European Operations with the Cyclics Corporation where he returned to Germany to oversee the production facility in Schwartzheide. He lived in Dresden while working for Cyclics, made many friends, and grew to love the German culture.

Bob was the consummate engineer, constantly thriving to understand the way that the world worked. He enjoyed working on cars, boats, house projects, and fixing anything that he came across. Evaluating and systematically solving problems was the essence of Bob's personality. He was an engineer to his core, always embracing new technologies, and challenging himself to constantly learn and grow.

While in NY, Bob enjoyed sailing and camping on Lake George with his family. After retiring on Cape Cod, he spent hours working around the house, fixing old German cars, and boating on the Nantucket Sound with his Boston Whaler. Bob also enjoyed traveling the globe with his wife Linda, exploring new countries and cultures.

Bob thoroughly enjoyed working and tuning performance cars with his son Adam. Bob was always trying to "Borrow" Adams fast car for a laugh.

Although retired on Cape Cod, Bob and Linda frequently returned to the Albany area to watch their grandchildren compete in sports, perform in school plays, and just spend time with them.

Bob is survived by his wife of 53 years, Linda (Tirrell) Sinuc, brother, Richard Sinuc of Pembroke, his two sons, Adam Sinuc and daughter in law Victoria of Osterville, MA and John Sinuc and daughter in law Karen of Slingerlands, NY, and his grandchildren, Emma, Madison, and Lauren Sinuc. Titled "Latent Self Closing Diary for 1871," the diarist's identity was not jotted down although the library believed it belonged to a New Scotland farmer at the time named Derrick Van Schaick Raynsford, based on its contents. The diary contained numerous pages of handwritten notes and numerical calculations which Ward assumed that "it was keeping a notation of the money he had, what he bought and sold, and it pretty much showed what a day-in-day-out life was like in the area." Ward observed that much of the diary dealt with his farm work, what products he sold in Albany like veal and pork, when he attended funerals throughout the year, and mentions of enjoying county fairs.

From its contents, Ward learned that Raynsford grew hay, potatoes and carrots; owned an apple and pear orchard; had at least two farm workers, one of whom was his son, Albert; he and his crew worked on Christmas Day; and he attended the Reformed Church in Guilderland Center and the New Scotland Presbyterian Church. The diary also included an 1871 calendar which noted the moon's phases, when the moon rose, and the times the sun would rise and set — this was all organized in a tightly-organized serif typeface.

Once Ward gently returned the fragile diary into its folder and box, he returned it to the library's archives which he said comprised of at least 130 boxes of collected historical photographs, documents, postcards, yearbooks, letters, business records, church and family history, receipts and more. These items were mainly focused on Voorheesville and New Scotland's past, and mostly dated from the 1920s to 1990s.

Ward mentioned that the aforementioned 1871 diary and a photograph of a Civil War-era soldier are probably the library's oldest collected items. He also noted how the Voorheesville railroad station and trains passing by were among the most documented items in the library's archives, including an old photograph of engineers standing in front of a train, one of a train crash, and one that emphasized the railroads themselves.

"We have a lot of documented information about the trains because they were so central to the village, and we also learned that many people were hit by trains in the first half of the 20th century," he said. "This is a very rural area so people and even animals did not realize when there was an incoming train and it became a big thing to properly put up warning signals and lights for crossing."

While these items have been safely stored here, the library has begun digitizing them since 2015 in order to make them more accessible

Diaries and photographs are just a few items the library has that helps researchers understand early town life.

Diego Cagara / Spotlight News

to the public who may want to view it out of curiosity, for research or to reminisce about the past.

Ward said a program called New York Heritage was developed then which works with many statewide libraries to have digitized collections of photographs, documents, maps and more, to give people easy access to them for free. The New York Heritage is a combination of seven Empire State Library Network members, one of which is the Capital District Library Council which oversees the Voorheesville library. "I think that having free access in a searchable, indexable way online is great and that's how digitization helps us," he said. "With younger generations, quickly looking up items is what they can expect."

Ward explained the digitization process: placing the historical item on a flatbed scanner to develop high-resolution scans, crop the file and/or make any needed color corrections, preserve the master digital file, transfer it into a JPG file and put them in a reasonable resolution for people to view.

For now, the library has only the flatbed scanner for the process but Ward said it may not always be the ideal digitization mode, especially when handling more three-dimensional items like books, diaries and even an old Smith Tavern's cup. "You obviously shouldn't take a book and put it on a flatbed scanner because you could damage its spine, unless there are loose individual pages to scan easily," he said. "What I could do is instead maybe place the book on a table and have a camera on a tripod above that's far enough to take a picture of one page. Then, I can crop it and manipulate it for a digital scan."

Although Ward said the current flatbed scanner gets the job mostly done for now, he said it is slow — he could not recall how old the scanner is — and it wouldn't hurt to get a new and faster scanner perhaps one day. "It's something that I've definitely thought about," he said.

Regardless, he said that while the library is "nowhere near close to being done with scanning all the two-dimensional items," people interested in accessing the physical archives should make an appointment with the library — he warned that not every librarian here is equipped to handle the archived materials though — and he would be able to present items to them. People would need to fill out some forms first so that the library can record who has been accessing the archives and upon arrival, Ward would be able to help them out.

"I would just remind people that these are our history and they could make the most out of them if they want to learn about their past or the village's history, if they find it interesting," he said. "It's partially why the library safely keeps them and why I do what I do here."

Reflecting back on the 1871 diary, Ward brought up how the writer most likely did not realize that his diary would become important decades later to showcase what local everyday life in 1871 was like, which is another reason why the library continues to digitize its archives.

"These things are irreplaceable and although they might not be copies of the Gideon Bible or the Magna Carta, they're things that we have very little knowledge about and we're certainly not taught about the history of everyday life then," he concluded. "We also don't really get to learn what everyday people thought in various periods of history, so it's stuff that will get lost if we forget or don't care about it."

GPL helps families out

Babies welcome! Parents and grandparents who reside in the Guilderland Central School District are welcome to pick up a "Welcome Baby Bag."

They contain literature for parents about early literacy, brain development, library services and fun things for babies, such as a new board book, baby maraca, and more. There is a one bag per baby/household limit, while supplies last.

The bags were sponsored by NBT Bank Guilderland, and the maracas were donated by Ms. Erin Lancraft. This is just part of our effort to increase services to children and caregivers ages birth-age 2.

In the past year and a half, we've hosted sensory playtimes for babies, parent social hours, and child development experts covering topics such as sleep, nutrition, routines, and soothing crying infants. We've also increased our family literacy offerings for babies.

Baby Bounce (birth to 18 months) is offered Tuesdays at 10:30 a.m., and Waddler Time (for new walkers up to 24 months) is offered Thursdays at 10:30 a.m. Babies are also welcome at our ever-popular 3 Little Birds Music and Movement class on Friday mornings at 10:30 a.m. This program resumes May 3.

I Heart Art

Tweens and teens are invited to push the boundaries of creativity and construct their best (or worst) "disasterpiece" on Monday, April 22 at 7 p.m.

You may be pleasantly surprised by how much you enjoy the process (bad art = good fun), and pleased with the final result!

On Tuesday, April 23 at 2 p.m., grades 2-5 are invited to Meet the Impressionists.

We'll learn about prominent artists of this style, then participants can try their hand at an impressionist-style painting. Please register for both programs online, by phone or in person.

Library Renewal

For the past 18 months, we've listened to over 2,100 citizens of Guilderland voice their opinions on the library's needs, and now our May 21 referendum is fast approaching. Come to an open meeting to hear about the final proposal—how it will meet present and future community needs, and what it will cost if approved.

Library Director Tim Wiles, Architect Paul Mays, and Library Board members will present this information and answer your questions Thursday, May 2 at 6:30 p.m.

Board of Trustees meeting

All are welcome to attend our Board of Trustees meetings. The next regular business meeting occurs Thursday, April 18 at 7 p.m. in our Tawasentha Room.

Holiday Notes

Please note that no library programs are scheduled for Friday, April 19 or Saturday, April 20, due to Passover. The library will be closed Sunday, April 21 for Easter.

Cookbook Club

Join us on Wednesday, April 24 at 3 p.m. (vacation week) for a special kid-friendly edition of our popular Cookbook Club: Cooking With Your Kids!

Select a recipe from "America's Test Kitchen: The Complete Cookbook for Young Chefs or Good Housekeeping: Kids Cook!" at our Information Desk, then bring your dish to the library to share. Sample everyone's creations too!

One lucky participant will win a copy of the cookbook of their choice. For grades 3-8 with an adult; please pre-register.

Disney Trivia

How much Disney knowledge lurks beneath your mouse ears? Come find out at Disney Trivia Night on Friday, April 26 at 6 p.m. Assemble your team (up to five people, with at least one person age 16+) to compete for top honors on a night of family fun during April vacation week.

Feel free to bring dinner as food for thought; Disney costumes encouraged!

Register for online, by phone or in person.

"Miracle Met" Art Shamsky

Meet Art Shamsky of the 1969 World Series Champion Miracle Mets and co-author Erik Sherman on Saturday, May 18 at 2 p.m., featuring their book, "After the Miracle: the Lasting Brotherhood of the 1969 Mets." Catapulting from "Lovable Losers" to World Series Champions in an improbably magical season no one saw coming, this is a rags-to-riches story that every Mets fan—and every baseball fan—will appreciate.

Mr. Shamsky will sign copies of the book, priced at $30, plus one other item for anyone who has also purchased a book. Please register online, by phone or in person.

Summertime family fun

Visit the public library and take in a story time hour. Go to the local animal shelter and ask if they need volunteer dog walkers. Gather up some old clothes, write a story and put on a play in your living room. These are some of the 30 different activities we have for you and your family to tackle this summer. And, the best part of it all is, they are free. Because, camp is only for a few weeks. You still have a so much more time to burn this summer.

On page 9

As a parent, you probably fall under one of two camps. You're either feeling guilty over the thought of sending your child away for camp, or you're flippin' ecstatic over plans you have with spending some alone-time with your better half. Neither camp is wrong here. There are a number of different factors to mull over while trying to decide whether camp is the right idea, and what kind of camp is the best fit for your child and your family. But, perhaps the common denominator that cleaves the fear, the guilt or the deviously selfish intentions you may have, is fun. How much fun is your child going to have? Weigh that for a second, and you may find yourself more at ease.

Keep in touch with kids at camp

Summer camp is an exciting way for children to spend their extended vacations from the classroom. Camps cater to various interests, including sports, crafts and even technological hobbies.

Children who attend overnight camps may spend several nights away from home. Some kids take this in stride, while others, possibly away from home for the first time, may experience some homesickness. Staying in touch while the kids are at camp can help alleviate fears and show children their parents care.

Camps now handle communication issues differently than they might have when today's parents were campers. While it once common for campers to send handwritten letters or short missives home to mom and dad, technology has changed that. Today's campers may have access to email accounts, or they even may be allowed to bring mobile phones along. This can facilitate communication, but it also may take away from the camping experience.

Parents need to find a balance between what might be too little or too much contact with campers. After all, camp is kids' chance to grow independent for a few days or weeks.

Learn camp rules.

The camp will likely provide information regarding correspondence. Camps may permit parents to send one-way emails and regular mail, but limit campers to handwritten letters only. Determine if mobile phones are allowed or should be left at home. Knowing the rules can help parents and kids plan accordingly.

Pack correspondence supplies.

Send kids to camp with fun papers, stickers, pens, and other crafty items. This way they'll be inspired to write home once or twice. Provide brief lessons on how to address an envelope for campers who may not know how.

Check blogs and texts.

Some camps may blog about campers' progress, post information on social media or send out mass texts. These messages can reassure parents that their youngsters are doing just fine. Figure out which tech options are available from camp administrators.

Send a care package.

Treat the campers to some supplies from home. Pack camp-approved snacks and other reminders of home. Be sure to include enough for the entire cabin and your son or daughter will be the camp star.

Expect some silence.

If camp is going well and campers' days are fun-filled, they may be too busy for daily correspondence. Parents may get nervous when they don't routinely see or hear from their children, but chances are everything is going swimmingly.

The camp experience is often harder on parents than children, as campers have their friends and activities to keep them busy. Brief communication helps campers grow more confident and independent.

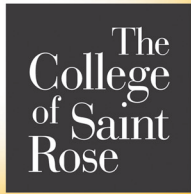

The magic of sleep away camp can whisk children away from keeping in touch with you. Wield some of these tools of parental alchemy to maintain contact with them while they are away.

Getting out and being with nature

The six things to know about pitching a tent

Camping provides the perfect opportunity to get in touch with nature and disconnect from the daily grind. Camping is a timeless tradition forged by cooking over portable stoves, foregoing indoor plumbing and sleeping under the stars.

A 2015 survey from Kampgrounds of America (KOA) said camping attracts people looking for an opportunity to explore the many wonders of the environment. The great outdoors affords people an opportunity to recharge in the peace and quiet of natural surroundings.

Results from the 2017 North American Camping Report found an increasing number of people say they plan to camp more, and camping is helping to add more balance to a person's life. Currently, 75 million households in the United States include active campers. Households in western Canada are likely to go camping, and data from Statistics Canada points out that camping rates increase with income.

Although there are many ways to camp, tents are often key components of camping trips. Learning to pitch a tent correctly is an important part of successful camping. Here's how to become a tent-pitching pro.

1. Purchase a freestanding tent. While there are many variations to tent designs and ultralight backpackers may prefer a tarp or another non-freestanding device, tents that are able to stand on their own are easier to set up. Many tent designs have two poles and fabric that creates a dome shape and are relatively easy and straightforward to set up in just a few minutes.

2. Practice at home. Before arriving at the campsite, learn to recognize the parts and instructions for your particular tent. Make sure all equipment is present and in working order.

3. Buy a footprint. Many tent floors are sturdy, but campers can always use a little extra protection against the ground. Footprints are essentially a tarp that fits underneath the floor of the tent as an extra layer of protection, advises REI. They should be slightly smaller than the area of the tent.

4. Scope out the tent location. Avoid sites littered with sticks, stones, roots, or branches. Stay away from low-lying areas that may get soggy in rain storms. Look for natural windbreaks, and place the tent so the side that has the strongest pole structure is facing the wind.

5. Make it a team effort. Enlist a helper or two to set up the tent. Ensure all zippers are closed when erecting the tent. Try to push poles through openings instead of pulling on them. Allow for some wiggle room when extending the poles. Guylines should follow the seams of the tent where possible, and lines should be pegged down back to front. Guylines help keep tents sturdy and also keep a rainfly away from the tent body to minimize leakage, according to the Appalachian Mountain Club.

6. Use daylight to your advantage. Set up the tent while it is light outside, and outfit it with anything that will be needed in the middle of the night, such as a lantern and other gear.

Camping is easier when people can erect a tent swiftly and accurately.

Want that camp? Now is the time to act

Get prepared for summer camp season

Summer camp season is just around the corner. Each summer, millions of children depart for campsites around the country to swim, hike, craft, and enjoy the companionship of friends.

Summer camps in North America were first established in the 1880s and were attended by children without their parents for overnight stays. By the 20th century, summer camps had become an international phenomenon, and various organizations hosted traditional summer camps or camps geared toward religion, sports, music and other subjects and activities. According to the American Camp Association, each year more than 14 million children and adults in the United States attend camp. America is home to more than 14,000 day and resident camps (8,400 are overnight camps and 5,600 are day camps). Nonprofit groups are the largest sponsors of summer camps.

Many people put off summer camp planning until it is too late. Parents should keep in mind that camps begin registration early in the year and have specific cut-off dates for enrollment. Parents who want to beat the crowds this year can use this guide to help plan a summer camp agenda.

Start gearing up now for summer camp plans to guarantee kids attend the camps they prefer.

Attend an orientation seminar.

Take the time to visit prospective camps for a tour, and use this open house as an opportunity to learn more about the programs offered. If available, find a camp employee to discuss your child's eligibility for enrollment. Some camps may offer webinars for convenience.

Fill out the enrollment package completely.

Each camp has their own requirements for registration. Expect to submit some personal information, including a medical background and proof of insurance, names and numbers of emergency contacts, and any other pertinent information as it applies to the camper. This may include allergies, fears, physical or mental disabilities, or even preferences in camp courses.

Establish payment schedules.

Summer camps vary in price. The ACA says camp costs range from $100 to more than $1,500 per week. However, many accredited camps offer some sort of financial assistance for children from families with limited financial means. If cost is a factor, be sure to broach the subject.

Prepare children for the physical challenges a camp may present.

Summer camp activities may be rigorous, and campers may need to be cleared by a physician before starting. Be sure to schedule your child a physical and bring along any pertinent forms. Children also can increase their levels of physical activity compared to the often sedentary nature of winter. Such preparation can prevent injuries when engaging in outdoor and physical activities.

Shop for supplies.

Camps are likely to provide a list of requirements with regard to clothing and other equipment campers will need. Make sure kids have enough shorts, T-shirts, socks, athletic shoes, swimsuits, toiletries, and other camp necessities before they leave.

Keep children in the loop.

Engage children in the planning process to help alleviate their fears and get them excited about summer camp.

Summer camp can foster lifelong memories. Parents can help kids prepare in advance for the fun that's soon to arrive.

Pick the right SUMMER CAMP

Adults often look back fondly on their childhood experiences at summer camp. Camps can provide the opportunity to form lifelong friendships and discover rewarding hobbies that can enrich campers' lives for decades to come.

Choosing a summer camp is no small task, as the options at families' disposal range from overnight camps to weekday afternoon camps to camps that specialize in certain programs, such as music or dance. Cost also is likely to factor into families' decisions, as the American Camp Association notes, that cost can vary greatly depending on which camp families choose. For example, the ACA notes that the average daily fee at a resident camp is $85, while the same fee at a day camp is $43.

When looking for a summer camp for kids, families should make the decision together. Kids should be involved in the selection process, as they're more likely to have an enjoyable camp experience if they had a say in where they will be spending their summers. The following are some factors families should consider as they look for summer camps, courtesy of the ACA.

Kids' interests

The ACA urges parents to consider the child's interests and personality before choosing a summer camp. Parents might want their children to attend the same summer camp they visited as youngsters, but each child is different. Just because mom and dad liked a particular camp does not mean their children will. The ACA notes that summer camps should align with children's interests and maturity level.

Locale

Locale may only be a consideration for families considering overnight camps. Kids will likely be familiar with the locations of local day camps, but overnight camps might be set in mountain ranges, near the ocean or environments less familiar to youngsters. Kids who love the ocean might benefit from oceanfront camps that focus on marine biology, boating or other activities synonymous with the water. In the same vein, youngsters who like camping and hiking might be more likely to embrace camps located in mountainous regions.

Session length

Camps may last as little as one week or up to a couple of months. Session length should be considered by families looking at both local day camps and overnight resident camps. Parents who want their children to enjoy a largely schedule-free summer might not want to commit their children to lengthy camp sessions, even if those sessions are close to home. If parents think their children can benefit from the same structure they're accustomed to during the school year, then an overnight camp that stretches for several weeks might be what they're looking for.

The measure of a man is judged by the number of people he touched along the way. "It's amazing," said Michael Eck, an adjective most people attribute to a spectacular feat that inspires amusement. However, that's not what he meant.

The musician and wordsmith, who has penned songs and earned bylines on the pages of the Albany Times Union, was responding to news anyone else would describe as stunning, staggering, shocking, disconcerting. Shattering.

*Someday I'll wish upon a star
 And wake up where the clouds are far behind me
 Where troubles melt like lemon drops
 High above the chimney tops
 That's where you'll find me
 Somewhere over the rainbow

 Birds fly over the rainbow
 Why, then, oh, why can't I?
 If happy little bluebirds fly
 beyond the rainbow
 Why, oh, why can't I?*

Hangar on the Hudson — Wednesday, April 17

TROY — Bailen will perform at Hangar on the Hudson on Wednesday, April 17 at 8 p.m.

Bailen’s otherworldly musicality springs from a very deep well — in fact, it’s in their DNA. Raised in New York by their classically trained parents, Daniel, David and Julia immersed themselves in the family’s diverse record collection. The groups highly collaborative songs are formed by three very different individuals who were all inspired by literature and a love of language. The resulting confident, meticulous songcraft of Thrilled To Be Here is rooted in the young group’s preternatural dexterity, insight and lyrical bite.

Greg Haymes

Greg Haymes died on Wednesday, April 10, at the age of 68.

However, it is amazing. To consider the depth in which one man’s impact has had on a community, Haymes “touched so many people,” said Eck. “He had a hand in all of it — his generosity. He gave and gave and gave.”

On the following day, Jocelyn and Chris Arndt posted a tribute video on Facebook. Chris plays an acoustic guitar while his sister sings a melodic rendition of “I Wanna Be a Lifeguard.” She sweetly echoes the words Haymes first sang as lead singer to Blotto in 1981. The campy song was picked up by a radio disc jockey in New York City, and the video made its way onto the maiden broadcast of MTV.

“When I met him through a mutual friend, I was starstruck,” said Greg Bell, of Guthrie Bell Productions. “He was one of the coolest people who I had ever met. He was talented, funny, friendly and handsome. His smile would light up a room and he had a wonderful laugh. We became close friends from that moment on.”

Haymes started out in the local music scene as an undergraduate at the University at Albany with the band the Star Spangled Washboard Band. It garnered local success after landing a residency at, of all places, Gaslight Village playing daily shows to Lake George’s summer crowds. Ultimately, the group disbanded. Haymes and some of his bandmates later formed Blotto.

“As a musician, he never failed to entertain. As a friend, he was always there if I needed him,” said Bell. He credits Haymes for introducing him to the local music scene. And, as Haymes moved on to contribute news and reviews with Metroland, Bell said he would give his shows an extra push for help. “As far as I am concerned, there would not have been a music scene in the Capital District without him. I am pretty certain that there would be no Guthrie/Bell Productions without his influence.”

Haymes wrote reviews for Albany’s alternative weekly under his stage name, Sarge Blotto. For years, he’d cover a full array of events, from punk rock to opera. Nothing was out of his wheelhouse. He would later earn bylines with the Albany Times Union before starting out with his own online blog Nippertown in 2008. He was ever present, from concert events to open mic nights.

“Sarge was a champion of creativity in all of its forms,” said Paul Rapp, Blotto bandmate, and fellow Metroland columnist, “and his entire life was spent in pursuit of art and beauty.

I’ll miss him every day.”

Haymes’ death comes within a month of another tragic loss within the local community, that of Caroline “Motherjudge” Isachsen. Earlier, she had announced that she had terminal pancreatic cancer. Haymes performed with the Ramblin Jug Stompers at a fundraiser for her benefit held at McGeary's.

"He was a supporter of the arts," said Tess Collins, owner of McGeary's. "You would see him at plays, art galleries and exhibits. He nurtured people with quiet support. He would always show up."

Haymes performed with Eck at the fundraiser, despite that it was his birthday, and ignoring that he had felt under the weather. The night was a who's who of the local music scene. Isachsen, who could not attend, died days later. A few days afterwards, Haymes was diagnosed with stage 4 cancer, which spread from his lungs to his thyroid, kidneys and brain.

Haymes continued to regularly update Nippertown with news of upcoming shows and noted anniversaries. On April 2, he and his wife Sara Ayers reached out to Nippertown contributors to share his news. He and his wife had previously made plans to step aside from the blog after its 10th anniversary this May, but he hinted of an escalated situation.

Haymes died less than two weeks later. Ayers posted a thank you to readers and advertisers that night on Nippertown.

"Thank you for 9 years, 10 months and 15 days of sharing and highlighting the arts of greater Nippertown," stated Ayers. She accompanied the post with three videos: Tom Waits' "Somewhere," Marshall Crenshaw's "Somewhere Down the Line," and Tom Jones' "Somewhere Over the Rainbow." "See you down the line, or over the rainbow."

In the years that have since followed "I Wanna Be a Lifeguard," the Capital

District's music scene has blossomed. Just four days after Haymes passed away, Proctors hosted the Capital Region Thomas Edison Music Awards. The storied theater was filled with players, supporters, purveyors and patrons of the local arts in a setting reminiscent of the Grammy Awards. Several of them shared stories of Haymes during the pre-show party. Nippertown earned the award for Arts Publication of the Year. WMHT's Chris Wienk, who had shared on social media how Haymes helped advise him as the station launched, thanked him as he walked with the Radio DJ of the Year award. The Daily Gazette's Michael Hochanadel, while at the podium to accept the Music Journalist of the Year, suggested renaming the awards to The Greg's. Individual accolades continued to be celebrated, but a fitting tribute was paid to both Haymes and Isachsen. A scene gave thanks to two of its longest serving champions, as they mourned the loss of open mics, intimate performances and their insight. Eck, who was also in attendance, said he'll miss, "everything."

Born Gregory Charles Haymes on March 3, 1951, in Buffalo, Haymes was the son of Charles Haymes of Covington, Louisiana, and the late Lynn Haymes. Haymes graduated from Kenmore West High School in suburban Buffalo and the University at Albany.

In addition to Ayers and his father, Haymes is survived by his sister, Yvonne Haymes of Covington.

Contributions may be made in Haymes' name to the Mohawk Hudson Humane Society, 3 Oakland Ave, Menands, New York 12204.

MUSIC

Bailen

Bailen's otherworldly musicality springs from a very deep well — in fact, it's in their DNA. Raised in New York by their classically trained parents, Daniel, David and Julia immersed themselves in the family's diverse record collection. The groups highly collaborative songs are formed by three very different individuals who were all inspired by literature and a love of language. The resulting confident, meticulous songcraft of Thrilled To Be Here is rooted in the young group's preternatural dexterity, insight and lyrical bite. Hangar on the Hudson. 675 River St., Troy. Also, "Shape and Shadow: The Sculpture of Larry Kagan." A retrospective exhibition that will feature 50 works from three distinctive phases of the Troy sculptor's career: the 1970s cast acrylic sculptures that reflect and refract light; the found steel works from the 1980s and 90s that play with texture, pattern, and shape; and, more recently, the shadow pieces that rely on strategically positioned steel rods to sculpt light. Fugue States paintings by Virginia Bryant

The title comes from musical structures & the physicality which are a core part of her methods. This originates in several years of early ballet study and choreographic processes. Her paintings have been featured in exhibitions such as "A Sense of Place" at the Atlantic Center for the Arts, "Florida Contemporary" at the Baker Museum in Naples, "A Painter's Progress" at Florida Gulf Coast University and most recently "To the North" at Thomas Aquinas College at Sparkill, which was her first solo exhibition in New York State. Her paintings are collected internationally & have garnered awards and press nationally. The paintings have musical structures in the sense that the patterning has variance, rather than the exact patterning of applied design. The fugue structure investigated repeats patterns using the two dimensions of the canvas to create contrapuntal & polyphonic synchronizations. A concern with harmony in the form of balance is a key attribute of this practice. Morgan T Paine of Florida Gulf Coast University says, "Bryant's work connects with and expands the vocabulary of abstract painting" and John Casey of the Island Sun, also in Florida, dubbed her painting "Abstraction at its best." The Chapel Cultural Center is open from 9:00 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday and 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday. The artist will be present for a reception on April 26, at 6:30 p.m.. What was that word salad?

Salads are a dietary staple across the globe. Salads are traditionally served chilled or at room temperature, and many are enhanced by oil, vinegar or another dressing. Many people are quick to think of certain varieties of lettuce as the prime base for salads. However, just about any fruit or vegetable can serve as a foundation for a tasty salad.

Zucchini and tomato provide excellent nutrition and can be hydrating, which can come in handy once the weather starts to warm. These versatile ingredients can be combined to form a robust salad to accompany any meal or one that can be enjoyed on its own. Such is the case with this recipe for “Raw Zucchini Salad” from “The Mediterranean Diet Cookbook” (Rockridge Press) by the editors of the Rockridge Press. Refreshing and filling, this salad may quickly become a staple of your diet.

Raw Zucchini Salad

Ingredients: Serves 2

- 1 medium zucchini, shredded or sliced paper thin
- 6 cherry tomatoes, halved
- 3 tablespoons olive oil
- Juice of 1 lemon
- Sea salt and freshly ground pepper, to taste
- 3 to 4 basil leaves, thinly sliced
- 2 tablespoons freshly grated low-fat Parmesan cheese

Instructions:

Layer the zucchini slices on two plates in even layers. Top with the tomatoes. Drizzle with the olive oil and lemon juice. Season to taste.

Top with the basil and sprinkle with cheese before serving.

Pairing:

Vendange Sauvignon Blanc
Vendange — California

The grassy and citrus aroma from a pour of this sauvignon blanc lends for a good first impression as you sit down to this meal. It's bright. It's crisp. It provides lemon grapefruit flavors with balanced acidity.

Ride that bike

Family cycling is an enjoyable escape

Going for a bike ride is one of the best ways for people to exercise in fresh air. Cycling is not only earth-conscious and convenient, but it also is a fun and popular activity that anyone can enjoy.

Around 1.6 million residents of New York City ride a bike at least once a month, and in Portland, bike riding rose by 3 percent each year since 2012, according to Bikemunk, a website dedicated to helping people understand bikes, especially in the context of making a purchase. The Alliance for Biking & Walking discovered that 0.6 percent of all commuters in the United States biked to work in 2013, up from 0.5 percent in 2009 and 0.4 percent in 2005. But many people are embracing cycling as an entertaining form of recreation that the entire family can enjoy.

Adults may have fond memories of their own cycling adventures as children that they want to pass down to their kids. Since families may feature cyclists with various levels of experience, it can be safe to employ certain strategies in the hopes that everyone gets the most out of their time in the cycling saddle.

Buy the right bikes.

Take time to research different brands of bicycles and what they offer. Some bikes are ideal for streets or paved trails, while others are better for rustic roads and trails. A qualified bike retailer can help shoppers find the right bike for them and their families, ensuring everyone in the family is riding the right size bike and the one commensurate with their skill level.

Limit the distance.

Children won't be able to put in as many miles as their parents or older siblings. Limit cycling excursions to a reasonable amount of time so youngsters' health is not compromised.

Focus on fun.

Consider what kids will get out of the trip and gear the afternoon around that. Choose a path that leads riders to a playground or one that circles a scenic lake. Make your cycling excursion more of an afternoon out than a marathon biking session.

Take frequent breaks.

Little legs may not be able to keep up, and adults will need to anticipate stopping along the way.

Know the terrain.

Stick to routes you have ridden before. Leave the more intense courses that include extreme climbs and dips for those times when kids are not in tow. Stick to lightly trafficked routes, or travel during off-peak hours. Consult with trail guides and read reviews as well.

Check bikes before departing.

Make sure tires are inflated and everything else is in working order. Bring a small tool kit along in case a repair needs to be made.

Cycling as a family can be an enjoyable way to spend an afternoon and get some exercise.

Phan's sample Trey's 'Ghosts'

Albany welcomes Trey Anastasio and his newest project, Ghosts of the Forest, with open arms

By PETE MASON
nysmusic.com

When Trey Anastasio spoke during the encore at The Palace Theatre on Tuesday, April 9, he said he hoped to play music for 50 more years, and given his workload – writing Kazvot Vaxt and Ghosts of the Forest nearly back to back – and his increasingly positive outlook on life, that task is not out of reach.

This is Anastasio who is the unofficial celebrity spokesman for Light (now, with more brightness!). He's been dropping notes of light in songs for a decade now, and with Ghosts of the Forest, we may have hit a new peak with Anastasio's profoundly personal and positive lyrics. Anastasio spoke about Albany as being his second home, and close to those he loves in Burlington and New York City, and how excited he was to bring this new project to the Palace and a sold out 'hometown' crowd.

With a band consisting of fellow Phish bandmate Jon Fishman on the kit (sans muumuu, he looks like your Saratoga Springs' Tony Markellis took up bass duties, as he has in every side project Anastasio has had since 8 Foot Fluorescent Tubes debuted in 1998 at Higher Ground. Energy in the room was palpable, as many eschewed listening to the recordings of shows from earlier this month for a first-look experience that is otherwise hard to come by. Even the album won't be released until April 12, making this a nearly-virgin experience for the majority of fans in attendance.

Ghosts of the Forest can be translated as deep memories in our mind, and throughout the songs, themes of loss, love and decade-long friendship were present. Anastasio lost close friend Chris "CCott" Cottrell to cancer recently, and the experience led to a number of the songs performed by Ghosts of the Forest. Anastasio spoke to Rolling Stone about playing acoustic guitar while CCott was in his final stages, and would play as he went in and out of consciousness. "Drift While You're Sleeping" draws from that, while having a mid-1970s psychedelic rock feel – think Derek and the Dominoes with space built in for Anastasio to stretch.

MUSIC REVIEW

The Dirty Pennies' 'EP'

Washy guitars and repetitive lyrics leave listeners entranced

By PAULA CUMMINGS
nysmusic.com

With 2017's "Kick Out The Rocks," The Dirty Pennies blend blues with other styles of music, feeling out the boundaries of how far they could push the genre. Now with their new EP, aptly entitled "EP," they've mapped out their niche: grungy rust-belt garage rock, steeped in surf rock and blues.

"EP" is short, but sweet, containing only three songs. "I'm Giving Up" whets the appetite. The song starts off slow and surreal, but picks up by the end of the first chorus, effectively changing the song from an end-of-the-workday dirge to a happy-hour anthem. The music video for this song is a lot of fun, too. It features the band members breaking free of the drudgery of banal workaday life. "I'm a sad man, too. I'm your poor man's blues," sings Ryan Klem with a slight warble. "But I know, yeah I know it ends somewhere."

"Things You Say" is a heavy-hitter. Drummer Lucas Howe pulls no punches as he shows off with his ability to both unleash the beast and reel Kelm back in. Joe Mungo holds down the rhythm on bass, keeping the song grounded so Klem can let-fly some lofty guitar riffs.

"EP" ends with the five-plus-minute ballad "Kingpin." It's heavy and heady, with an undulating psychedelic beat. The washy guitar effects and the repetitive lyric "I get up/I get down" leaves the listener entranced. About halfway through, the tempo changes and they're injecting some good old fashioned rock and roll. The song comes full circle, winding back down. "You can't stop me. I'm not as easy as they come. Stuck in the same frame, I'm making my way out on my own."

The Dirty Pennies have come a long way since "Kick Out The Rocks." You can still hear elements the members' various musical interests (including Americana, hard rock, and alternative), but they've blended them in such a way as to make a sound all their own. Not some polished newly minted copper, but a sound that befits their namesake.

"EP" was recorded at Rochester's Wicked Squid Studios, where it was engineered by Josh Pettinger and mixed and mastered by Greg Thompson. Album artwork credit goes to Mike Turzanski.

Cellulite treatments: What works and what doesn't?

As long as women have been conscious of the presence of cellulite on their bodies, the search has been on to find effective treatments. People have gone to great lengths to eradicate cellulite. Gaining a greater understanding of what causes it and the treatments available can help women effectively address cellulite.

According to the American Society of Plastic Surgeons, cellulite affects up to 85 percent of adult women compared to only 10 percent of men. Many people think that cellulite is simply fat, but it is much more complex. Cellulite is caused by the fibrous tethers, known as septae, that run through fat and pull on the fascia that lies underneath the dermal layer of skin. Women's connective tissue isn't as tightly formed as men's, so their fat can push through more easily, creating the ridges and "cottage cheese" effect synonymous with cellulite.

The Mayo Clinic says that no single treatment for cellulite is entirely effective. Most treatments, at best, can only temporarily improve the appearance of cellulite. Doctors use a variety of techniques to help reduce cellulite — with results that can last a year or longer, states the American Board of Cosmetic Surgery.

Laser treatments

The ABCS says this treatment uses a tiny laser probe inserted just beneath the skin through a small incision. The laser heats tissues beneath the skin's surface to release some septae, reduce thickness of the subcutaneous fat layer and stimulate the production of collagen. The procedure is typically performed using local anesthesia and down time is one to two days.

Subcision

This procedure involves a dermatologist or plastic surgeon inserting a needle just under the skin to break up the tough septae, states the American Academy of Dermatology Association. The results may last two years or longer.

Acoustic wave therapy

This features radio frequencies that can reduce the appearance of cellulite over the course of several treatment sessions. Some radio frequency treatments are paired with infrared light or electromagnetic fields, says ASPS. These energy-based treatments are delivered through the skin and are noninvasive.

Topical treatments

Topical therapies use rollers or vacuums to "knead" the skin and subcutaneous fat, helping to break down the tethers.

Creams and lotions may only boost up collagen to mask cellulite underneath. As a result, they're not typically effective at reducing cellulite.

Women are urged to speak to a dermatologist or plastic surgeon about their options in regard to treating cellulite.
