Each year, a Glenmont backyard hosts a 16-team volleyball tournament

GLENMONT — Volleyballs are not the only things expected to soar high during the Colonial Acres Tournament in Glenmont on Thursday, Aug. 1.

The neighborhood volleyball CAT tournament, celebrating its 10th anniversary, will happen at the Colonial Coliseum on 82 Cambridge Dr. at 5 p.m. First created by brothers Nick and Garrett Bernardo and their childhood friend Alex Martin in 2010 as a night of volleyball with friends, it has since grown from an eight-team (six players each) event to a 16-team one this year. The Colonial Coliseum is their nickname for their backyard actually.

No emergency here, just a community

Night dedicated to help establish positive bonds between police, people

By DIEGO CAGARA
cagarad@spotlightnews.com

BETHLEHEM — The town's police department wants to continue strengthening its relationship with the local community with its National Night Out event on Tuesday, Aug. 6.

Happening from 6 to 8 p.m. at the Elm Avenue Park on 249 Elm Ave. in Delmar, the event joins many other neighborhoods throughout the country in bringing residents together with not only the police force, but also local emergency services. Bethlehem Police Department Commander Adam Hornick said that all the town's fire departments, for example, have appeared in past National Night Out events and should be returning this year.

Many of the departments' vehicles, equipment and gear are expected to be on display so residents can see them and sometimes interact with them up close. "We will have displays with personnel to educate people there, and we'll have the police car available for people to climb in and see the equipment and let people know how it feels inside," Hornick said, confirming that this is the fourth year the Bethlehem police is participating.

The public can also expect a fun night filled with live music by the Little Jack band, face painting, free make-your-own sundaes donated by Stewart's, barbecue and games. While Hornick said some police officers will remain in uniform to show the public how it looks like up close, all officers will at least be readily identifiable and manning booths.

"It's an event to bring the community, the police department and emergency services together and get a better understanding of what everyone does," Hornick explained, adding that his colleague, Sergeant Mike Whiteley originally came up with the idea. "It would make everyone know that we're a community and there's still a philosophy of community policing. Each year, it has expanded and it gets better, and we get more donations and input from the public. It also gets the community to come and go over community concerns with us."

Speaking of concerns, Hornick acknowledged that the country is undergoing a polarizing time where the public are increasingly more afraid of or do not trust the police much at the national level. "I think that exists in every community and that's why community events are important.

It's a polarizing but also a changing time," he said. "We live in a society of social media where as soon as something happens, an incident is on social media before we, the police, know about it. By then, it's already spread and sometimes we're not on the scene yet." While he added that it's been a "challenging dynamic" where people do not respect authority and can be violent, there has not been an issue in any of the National Night Out events so far.

When asked if he has any favorite memories of National Night Out, Hornick brought up how it feels most rewarding when "actually seeing the faces of kids and when they get in the police car and they see all the sirens and lights. It's exciting to interact with parents too. A lot of times, people think that when they see the police, there's a bad thing or a fight happening. But the event is strictly in a positive light and to continue community interactions."

New popsicles to break the ice

Locally sourced ingredients, diverse flavors, positive vibes

By DIEGO CAGARA
cagarad@spotlightnews.com

BETHLEHEM — Market Pops founder Heidi Nathanielsz wants to bring unadulterated joy to the Capital District with her gourmet ice pop and its diverse flavor options.

Holding a ribbon-cutting ceremony for her new Market Pops business on Wednesday, July 17 at 3 p.m. at the Capital Region Chamber of Commerce, Nathanielsz said she handmakes all of the popsicles. One main important factor is sourcing as many ingredients as possible from local vendors, she said.

Examples include coffee from Brewtus Roasting in Bethlehem, local rhubarb and lavender from Lavenlair Farms in businesses and farms all at once.”

Market Pops, originally founded in July 2018 and officially launched on May 1 this year, offers flavors like Strawberry Rhubarb, Sweet Plum Ginger, Key Lime Pie, Lemon Lavender, product and so on.”

Market Pops interestingly lacks a physical storefront and Nathanielsz opted instead to operate it in a mobile Icicle Tricycle, which she said was a customized bicycle made from Oregon.

“Not having a storefront is a way to be out in the community and we can bring the pops to the people,” she explained. “It was a really great tool to both store and deliver ice pops. The more I can be out and interacting with the customers, the more it benefits me.”

She added that the Icicle Tricycle was an additional creative marketing tool for her business too, particularly with its bright and colorful exterior and bearing its social media and website links.

“People love the bike and I have bike enthusiasts who like to come check out the gear, and kids who want to hop on the bike and ring the bell, and people now recognize it in public,” she said.

For now, the business is designed to serve customers from May to October, and products may show up in local grocery stores someday in the future, depending on demand.

While some flavors would remain available throughout the entire May-through-October timeframe like lemonade and mango, Nathanielsz expressed interest in offering limited specific flavors too.

“As we shift through seasons, when we started in the spring, for example, there were a lot of citrus-flavored popsicles. So, in the fall, maybe we’ll have a pumpkin or caramel-flavored one,” she said. “It’s interesting to look into what we eat, depending on the temperature outside.”

Also, more flavors may be added after Nathanielsz assesses the customer demand by the end of this year.

Market Pops’ roots stem from Nathanielsz’s personal affinity for food, conversations she had with her own children, and her entrepreneurial background.

Nathanielsz had graduated from the Capital Region Chamber Entrepreneur Bootcamp, run by the area’s Chamber of Commerce, and won the grand prize in its business plan competition in fall 2018 for her Market Pops business plan.

“It was a state-funded program and was essentially a crash course of running your own business,” she said. “Every week was a different panel of experts from the region that come in to go through every aspect of a small business.

Topics included fees, marketing, financial projections and legal issues about owning a business. At the end of this course, Whitehall, honey from Good Day Honey in Coeymans, and berries from Bulich Creekside Farm in Catskill.

“That makes the business unique because when you buy a popsicle from me, you’re actually also supporting several other local vendors,” she said. In an additional emailed statement, she added that Market Pops “strives to bring local fruit straight from farm to freezer, showcasing the incredible flavors of our region. The fresh ice pops you get from us may have ingredients from several other vendors at the same Farmers Market; your purchase from us is supporting local Mexican Hot Chocolate, Blueberry Lemonade, Peach and Watermelon Mint.

The Capital District-centric business serves three local Farmers Markets in Troy, Delmar and Schenectady; special pop-up events; and local private events like weddings, college engagements and corporate events.

“People have mostly been reaching out to me and we’ve had tremendous success so far,” Nathanielsz said. “It’s been a grassroots social media effort as well as positive word-of-mouth which was my design in the beginning where I wanted to get out there, talk with customers about the you'd leave with a comprehensive business plan which you'd need to secure funding."

Nathanielsz said the grand prize she won was $2,000 and a year-long membership to the Capital Region Chamber of Commerce.

Since the business was launched, Nathanielsz said that it can be a challenging journey at times.

"You have to put in the hours, you have to hustle and really believe in your product," she said.

You really have to love what you're doing because it's a huge time, money and energy commitment but the rewards of owning your own business are invaluable."

Looking ahead, Nathanielsz said she hopes to grow Market Pops into a "true regional business where we have our own manufacturing facility, and our own fleet of bikes that are everywhere from Glens Falls down to Poughkeepsie and maybe to western New York."

When asked if she had a message for any entrepreneur hopefuls, Nathanielsz said, "If you have an idea and you want

While they said it is open to all ages, it would also feature around four to five hours of volleyball time, a live DJ, play-by-play announcements, a food truck, a photoshoot with teams on a red carpet, drinks and more.

The tournament is presented by NOVUS Clothing Company, an Albany-based custom sportswear and apparel company, which the Bernardo brothers and business partner Scott Klimchak founded in 2011. All participants this year will be given special 10th anniversary CAT jerseys created by Garrett, NOVUS' lead designer.

The trio decided to work with the Boston-based Dana-Farber Cancer Institute and the Jimmy Fund this year to help raise $5,000 for cancer research and treatments. The topic of cancer has impacted the trio's personal lives as the Bernardo brothers' aunt, Karis Bernardo, is fighting stage four cancer for two years now, and Klimchak's mother, Kathy Klimchak, passed away last October from cancer.

"We thought it seemed fitting to honor people like our aunt and Scott's mother, and also people out there who are continuing to fight cancer," Nick said. "Why not use this event to have a little bit more meaning? It seemed like a no-brainer."

"We really want to raise awareness of the issue and engage anyone in the community who needs help, and that can be through a financial donation or simply just coming out to the tournament to support us," Garrett said. "When everybody starts to come together and rally around a great cause, great things happen."

Garrett said that the tournament has almost 10 supportive corporate sponsors now and "we're already a little over 75 percent there in reaching our $5,000 goal in the last week and a half. We'd started the fundraising page earlier this month." All proceeds will go directly to the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute — the brothers said their aunt did her treatment there — and the Jimmy Fund.

In addition, the brothers acknowledged how children who'd participated in the annual tournament's early years have been growing up, including their 14-year-old brother, Caden who will start attending Bethlehem Central High School this fall.

"People are moving away like to college and in some years, we wondered how we're going to continue the tournament," said Garrett. "But it's cool that it is still a family event and generations of kids have been cycling through it. They're moving up to do great things — some are business owners, professional athletes or working at the Capital — and it's really cool that an idea that started out as summer fun is now making an impact on people's lives here. It really goes beyond what's happening on the court."

Nick said that there may be as many as 96 contestants and "a lot more people coming out in support." He added that a local woman going through cancer will speak at the tournament too about her journey and to spread an empowering message to the public.

"We hope that this event can be a reminder and an inspiration so that people can go out and do the same thing," Garrett said. "We just want everyone to know that you can put a great cause behind something fun. It's amazing to see what people are capable of."

Looking ahead, Garrett said that this would probably be the last year the tournament will be held at the Colonial Coliseum, explaining that as NOVUS and attendance grows annually, it would be an opportunity to "make it a bigger event that needs a bigger venue."

LIBRARIES

Out of this world

Let's explore the Solar System together! Kevin H. Knuth, a University at Albany professor of physics and former NASA research scientist, has a universe of stories to tell.

On Tuesday, Aug. 6, at 7 p.m., he will be at the library to discuss the last 50 years of space exploration – with a focus on the major planets and their moons. Enjoy high-quality images of each of these worlds, as well as images from the surface of Venus, Mars and Saturn's moon Titan.

Learn about the volcanoes and molten lava fields of Jupiter's moon Io, as well as the subsurface oceans of Jupiter's moon Europa. Take a closer look at Saturn's rings, the methane seas and lakes of Saturn's moon Titan, and the liquid nitrogen geysers of Neptune's moon Triton.

You'll find that the diversity of worlds in our own solar system hosts a multitude of wonders and discoveries that will engage explorers for centuries to come.

Knuth is something of an expert in this area, having spent time at NASA Ames Research Center in the Intelligent Systems Division designing artificial intelligence algorithms for astrophysical data analysis.

His current research includes the search for and characterization of extrasolar planets. He has authored more than 90 peer-reviewed publications and lectured in more than a dozen countries.

His presentation is the final in a series of space-themed programs for adults that tie into the Summer Reading theme of a Universe of Stories.

Concert, ice cream social

The 2019 Evenings on the Green summer concert series wraps up Wednesday, Aug. 7, with a family-friendly focus, thanks to the Friends of Bethlehem Public Library, our series sponsors.

The Friends will be hosting an ice cream social and membership drive beginning at 6:30 p.m. Later on at 7 p.m., Alyssa Yeager takes the stage to perform some energetic music for all ages that will engage the imagination with imagery and creative storytelling.

Bring a blanket or lawn chair, pick a spot on the Green, then sit back, relax and enjoy the last concert of the series. Concerts are always free. We will move indoors if it rains.

Family book discussion

Reading is a family affair, and according to literacy experts, children read more when they listen to and discuss books.

Help encourage a love of reading in your child at our next Family Book Discussion on Thursday, Aug. 8, where both parents and children are invited to talk about Kieran Larwood's "Podkin One-Ear," a tale of three young rabbit siblings on the run from the villainous Gorm.

Share your impressions and enjoy activities related to the story at one of two sessions: 2:30 or 6:30 p.m. Haven't read it yet? Pick up a copy at the Children's Place desk. Check out the calendar at www.bethlehempubliclibrary.org for even more upcoming school-age literacy events.

How times change

Life up and down Wolf Road

By SPOTLIGHT STAFF

news@spotlightnews.com

COLONIE — Today, more than 20,000 cars run up and down Wolf Road on any given day, making it one of the busiest roads in the Capital District.

Each stop along the length of Wolf Road is a storefront, further indicating that it is a destination point for many of those driving those cars.

Over the years, the landscape has changed. Where once the Albany County Club stood among several working farms, Colonic Center now stands. The shopping mall of the 1960s changed how people shopped. Department stores gave way to one-stop mega complexes with dozens of stores.

Today, shopping habits continues to change, creating a challenge for such malls. Sears, which once owned Colonic Center, is no longer an anchor store. The retail giant closed its doors in 2018.

However, not everything changes. Near the center of the mall, kids can still spend a pocket change to buy a handful of M&M's.

A row of candy machines stand outside Colonic Center's food court. The machines continues to present memories for kids, as they once did at the local department stores shopping malls once replaced generations ago.

The place to go to take in a movie

They paved paradise and put up a parking lot over what was once Fox Colonie Theater

By JOHN MATTISON
 intern@spotlightnews.com

Fox Colonie Theatre, which was located on Wolf Road across from Colonie Center, left a lasting impact in the time it was created on January 8, 1969 to its closing in 1984. Featuring gold drapes on its walls and an 800 seat auditorium, Fox Colonie was one of the go-to places to watch a movie.

A large amount of iconic and impactful movies were released during Fox Colonie's period of operation, including the classic Star Wars series. Many members of the community today still look back fondly at some of their first experiences seeing these movies at Fox Colonie, and we reached out to the public on social media to hear their stories.

"I remember standing in line with my dad for 'Return of the Jedi,' which wrapped around the building. I was 8," stated Ed Rogers, "We passed the time by him answering all the questions I had about Empire because I was 5 when I saw it and needed a quick refresher. The big question though... is Darth Vader really Luke's father?"

"Empire Strikes Back." Forty years later, the cat's out of the bag. Darth Vader is Luke Skywalker's father. However, from once the bomb was dropped in 1980 to when the followup story continued the storyline with "Return of the Jedi" in 1983, fans were to question and hypothesize amongst themselves. There was no internet. Today, fans are often leaked information about movies well before they are released.

But, for some, the saga was a welcomed escape from real life drama.

"I remember the day I was laid off from my job, called my parents in tears, they said 'go to a movie,'" stated Kathleen Cummings, "I picked up my friend Steff and we went to see the opening of 'The Empire Strikes Back'. The line wrapped around the outside of the theater, but we got in it and waited through a couple of performance before we finally got in. It was worth it."

Fox Colonie Theatre, as it stood in the summer of 1976, advertises the Robert Reford and Dustin Hoffman film, "All The President's Men."

In 1990, Fox Colonie Theatre was torn down to be made into a parking lot, where a Chile's was later constructed in 2004. Even with this being the case, Fox Colonie Theatre will remain a place full of fond memories of wonderful movie experiences for years to come.

Toys “R” Us may return one day

Former toy store served Wolf Road until 2018

By DIEGO CAGARA
 cagarad@spotlightnews.com

COLONIE — Locals would remember that a Toys R Us store used to be located on 38 Wolf Road in Albany that closed in early 2018 but their memories may soon become a reality again in the future.

The larger Toys R Us company had become defunct by summer 2018 in the U.S after filing for Chapter 11 bankruptcy protection in September 2017 prior, following a slump in sales amid an evolving consumer culture worldwide.

Mark Eagan, president and CEO of the Capital Region Chamber of Commerce, said that the Wolf Road store closed because it was part of the chain’s closure process, not necessarily because the store itself was not doing well though. “We know that shopping trends have changed,” he said. “Now, someone doesn’t have to go into a physical store to browse and shop when they can just go online to buy. That’s the challenge that retail has been facing today.”

Eagan’s point related to how consumers nowadays are veering their attention onto other means of entertainment like electronic devices and they increasingly enjoy the convenience of online shopping.

However, the Toys R Us brand emerged from bankruptcy this past January, now under the Tru Kids Brands parent company. Tru Kids Brands announced on Thursday, July 18 that it will open two new small-scale Toys R Us stores domestically this holiday season; one will be in The Galleria in Houston, Texas and the other in Westfield Garden State Plaza in Paramus, New Jersey. The stores are said to encourage more engagement with shoppers, especially children, with more activities in a playground-like atmosphere.

Toys R Us

Tru Kids Brands added that they “plan to open additional locations in prime, high-traffic retail markets within the U.S. over the course of 2020.” Babies R Us is also planned to return in some capacity in the future but there are no details regarding that development for now. To see the full press release, visit www.toysrus.com/PressRelease.html.

When asked about the possibility of Toys R Us returning to the Capital District in years to come, Eagan said, “I would think that if their model proves successful, I’d be very surprised if that doesn’t come here.”

Spotlight News also encouraged locals to comment on several Facebook posts in mid-July about their memories of the store and their thoughts on Toys R Us potentially returning upstate.

One reader, Angelina Addario LaSure, wrote that she remembered when the store first opened and “we walked in and it was amazing to see so many toys all in one place. There was everything from Jax to Hot Wheels tracks, and just everything you could think of.” She added that if Toys R Us ever returns to the Capital District, it could set up a store at Delaware Plaza in Delmar.

Another reader, Erin Wagner, commented that she missed Toys R Us and she used to bring her children there so she could learn what sorts of toys they wanted for Christmas, pretending that Santa Claus would eventually give them but she was “secretly Toys R Us, now owned by Tru Kids Brands, revealed it will open two new stores in Texas and New Jersey this winter. If they are successful, more stores are expected to emerge, begging the question if it will return to the Capital District.

making a list so [she] could go back later." She added, "When my cousins and I were little, my aunt would give us each a $5 or $10 limit and we could pick out anything we wanted. It was my favorite place as a kid."

A fellow reader, Amy Modesti, brought up that when she was younger, she used to visit the Toys R Us store at Clifton Park, which also closed in 2018, to buy her dolls. She also commented that she recalled visiting the store on a Black Friday to buy the Banjo-Tooie video game on the Nintendo 64 console — this was first released in 2000 — and she finished playing it by that Christmas.

Another reader, Weatherly Whitestone Webb, wondered if the to-be-reopened Toys R Us stores would honor old gift cards. However, the company's website indicated that it will not since the company is now "an entirely new entity [and] it is impossible to honor any financial agreements made by the previous company." This policy also concerns any unused coupons, store credit and rewards points.

It does not seem like Toys R Us can return to its former Wolf Road storefront for now since it is being occupied by Hobby Lobby, an arts and crafts store, which offers home decor, fabrics, knobs, children's crafts, and supplies for parties, weddings and sewing. The toy retailer was one of several major businesses along or near Wolf Road to close down within the last decade, like Sears at Colonie Center and Borders.

When asked how he felt about this phenomenon, Eagen said that it would be a different story if those companies were flourishing but chose to leave Wolf Road. "Borders is no longer existing, Sears has very few stores left today, and their glory days are, unfortunately, over," he said. "But Wolf Road is not just for retail, there are office buildings, strip malls, supermarkets and nearby apartment complexes."

He concluded that businesses along Wolf Road today, like those in Colonie Center, have been acknowledging consumers' evolving mindsets towards Generations of children would beg parents to visit Toys R Us to find that highly sought after toy. In 1982, Amsterdam-based toy manufacturer Coleco produced the hottest holiday toy item, the Cabbage Patch Kid.

“Wolf Road is still a regional destination which is really the main street of the greater Capital Region for commerce and restaurants. People can live in Columbia or Washington or Fulton County but if someone says Wolf Road, they know what you’re talking about,” Eagan said, adding that Toys R Us’ closure did not significantly impact Wolf Road due to the property quickly being taken by Hobby Lobby. “As one real estate developer once said

Platt's: More than just a dairy

Local dairy grew from a summertime staple into a catering operation

By KATIE HOPSICKER
 intern@spotlightnews.com

COLONIE — Picture yourself standing outside Colonie Center mall. You are surrounded by noise and movement: cars sitting stoically in a massive parking lot maze, people walking in and out of built up business buildings and restaurants, and the constant chaos from Central Avenue and Interstate 87. One hundred years ago, you would have been standing on a golf course.

Now look west. You would have seen farmland, a few small buildings, and past Sand Creek Road, three important homes. One home was torn down to become the Days Inn and International House of Pancakes. One home became Herman's Sporting Goods, and later Barnes and Noble.

And the last home? That home belonged to the Platt family.

Built in 1948 by Edward and Natalie Platt, the home stayed in the family, with son Peter and his wife Jean moving into the house in 1966. The Wolf Road natives stayed there until 1969 and lived right next to the family business: Platt's Dairy. The dairy was opened in 1939 and continued to operate until 1999, when it was leased to Buca di Beppo.

In the book "Wolf Road: A Century of Development," written by Peter Platt, Jean Platt and Richard Naylor, the operations of Platt's Dairy were explained: "Milk was purchased from local farmers and processed. It was then distributed to area homes, schools, and businesses. In 1951 the Platt's opened a dairy store featuring 35 different flavors of homemade ice cream."

It continued, "the dairy continued to operate until 1968 when processing operations were discontinued. Platt's continued to be a distributor of dairy products until 1983. On July 4, 1970, Platt's moved into its new building which featured a complete delicatessen and an ice cream store plus a catering operation."

The Platt family's influence was integral to the development and success of Wolf Road. Not only did they live and work on Wolf Road, but their book helped tell the stories of many family businesses like their own.

Unfortunately Peter and Jean Platt have both passed away, but co-author Richard Naylor spoke on their success and their dedication to the history of Wolf Road.

"I think Peter and Jean were very proud of this book. It meant a lot to them," said Naylor.

He explained that the book started with a library presentation, featuring a collection of old photos from the area. Naylor knew that he "didn't want to lose" the history shown, so they came up with an idea to make a PowerPoint of the pictures.

However, after collaborating with the Platt's, Naylor knew "this was much more than a PowerPoint presentation." The book was born.

From a house next to the country club, to Platt's Dairy, to Platt's Place, and finally to the industrious and successful metropolitan Colonie street, Wolf Road would not be where what it is today without the development and roots of family businesses like Platt's.

For more pictures and information about the history of Wolf Road, check out "Wolf Road: A Century of Development." It is available at most libraries in the area.

Platt's Place nearly remained in business until the 21st century. However, it closed the doors on its Wolf Road operations in 1999.

ALBANY — Judi Gabler looks over the website of a modular home manufacturer, admiring the modern fixtures featured in the picture.

"It's crazy," she said. "It looks like," she said, catching herself before saying a house. As silly as it would have sounded, no one would doubt her ability to recognize the value of a home, let alone to identify one. Gabler Realty, LLC, of which she is broker-owner, negotiated approximately $58 million worth of real people what they can put on it, and how affordable it can be," she said. Another click of her mouse conjures a catalog of models ranging from one-story bungalows to two-story ranches. Each of the homes, regardless of the model, is built in sections, then shipped off and assembled.

The principal concept of ordering a house from a catalog and having it delivered from miles away is not new. Sears, Roebuck and Company started something similar more than a century ago.

"It's very much like a Sears Home," said Gabler.

Sears

The Sears name was once synonymous with quality when it possessed a stronghold on consumer confidence with household goods. But, as more agile companies embraced e-commerce practices, Sears became less visible and less profitable.

Last year, Sears earned headlines when it filed for bankruptcy protection last October. Riddled with debt and pension obligations, the retail giant appeared to be heading in the same direction as other iconic storefronts that have closed over the years, most notably Montgomery Wards in 2001.

Like Wards, Sears was founded at the dawn of America's consumer age of the late 19th century. The Chicago-based retailer developed a connection with people through its catalog, which included everything from sewing machines to automobiles.

"People tend to know that Sears-built houses were good quality. They had a history. It's fun to be able to see the floor plan as it was ordered and the features they had selected. I think it's nostalgic."

— Judi Gabler, broker-owner of
Gabler Realty, LLC

At more than 500 pages, the catalog ironically provided Americans a broad selection of items at a discount, challenging local store shops of the day. In 1908, the store included ready-to-assemble kit houses.

Kit Houses

Sears offered kit houses in its popular catalog in 1908 to address suffering sales in its building materials department. So, instead of selling parts by themselves, the retailer offered a kit: all the pieces you would need to build a house. In that first year, 44 different models were features, with a price range between $360 and $2,890 (or $9,849.60 to $79,070.40 in 2019 U.S. dollars). Four years later, Sears started offering mortgages. Pieces for each home would be delivered in boxcars. Depending on the model, there would be 10,000 to 30,000 pieces that addressed everything but the kitchen sink. Indoor plumbing, heating and electricity could be purchased at an additional cost. According to Rosemary Thornton, author of "The Houses That Sears Built," Sears promised that, with the aid of a 75-page instruction manual, "a man of average abilities could assemble a Sears kit home in about 90 days."

Sales of Sears Modern Homes peaked before the Great Depression. Sears jumped out of the mortgage business once it was forced to liquidate more than $11 million of defaulted loans in 1934. By 1940, kit homes no longer appeared in the Sears catalog. In all, more than 370 different models were offered, and more than 70,000 homes were built throughout the United States, predominantly in the Northeast.

"I know I have talked to folks who have said, 'oh, yes. I have a Sears House.'" said Susan Leath, Bethlehem's town historian. "They're proud of it. It's the concept of your house arriving [by train]. The whole thing, that you go in a catalog and fill out a form. I don't know if a salesman came in, but I find the whole thing intriguing."

Several houses across Olde Delmar have been identified as Sears Modern Homes. A "Concord" model resides on Adams Place. A "New Haven" model, with its distinguished front door archway, can be found on Hawthorne Avenue.

However, Thornton states on her website that many people who claim they own a Sears Modern Home may be misguided. Sears was not the only retailer to offer catalog ordered homes. Ward was just one of several other competitors who offered similar homes. There are a few features that distinguish a Sears Modern Home from others. You can look for unique column arrangements on the front porch or stamped numbers or shipping labels adhered to lumber. Grantor records at the local courthouse may reveal a Sears mortgage.

If a Sears Modern Home is listed for sale, Gabler said she will state it as such in the home's description.

"I think it's charming," she said. "People tend to know that Sears-built houses were good quality. They had a history. It's fun to be able to see the floor plan as it was ordered and the features they had selected. I think it's nostalgic."
