Albany sees 335 new COVID-19 cases since Nov. 1

francoj@spotlightnews.com

ALBANY — There have been 335 new cases of COVID-19 in the county since Nov. 1, said County Executive Dan McCoy during a press briefing on Monday, Nov. 9.

For nearly two weeks, the daily number of new cases are rivaling those of this spring as the pandemic was first taking hold in upstate New York. From Sunday to Monday, there were 39 new cases, which followed 55 from Saturday to Sunday and 69 from Friday to Saturday.

Two more people died over the past week — a woman in her 60s and a woman in her 90s with unknown medical histories — bringing the county death count up to 144.

Driver leaves bang up job at FoCo

Motorist drove away with chained barriers in tow, fled on foot

DELMAR — Bethlehem police is after a motorist who ripped Four Corners apart before he disappeared on foot on Saturday evening, Nov. 7. Police said a motorist driving a Jeep Cherokee took a right turn from Delaware Avenue onto Kenwood Avenue before knocking down lights posts, ripping out chained barriers and smashing two storefronts along the way. He then proceeded to strike another vehicle before driving away.

Despite dragging the chained road posts previously affixed to the sidewalk, the motorist was able to drive a few more feet to dump the Jeep behind Peter Harris Clothes.

Police said the man

Michael Hallisey / Spotlight News

driving the Jeep was able to run away and disappear.

The accident took place at approximately 6:14 p.m. just hours after President-elect Joe Biden was announced. Residents feared there was a connection, but Bethlehem police said that is not true.

Fender bender leads to DWI

GLENMONT — A slight fender bender in the Cumberland Farms parking lot led to a DWI arrest on Monday morning, Oct. 19.

Mirinda Staats, 48, of Selkirk, was backing out of the gas pump area when Bethlehem police said the red Chevy Silverado she was driving hit a jeep that was also driving through the lot.

When Bethlehem police proceeded to ask Staats questions, she allegedly smelled of alcohol. According to the police report, she also failed field sobriety tests. Inside the truck sat a young child she said was hers.

Staats was processed at the Bethlehem Police Department with felony charges of DWI and aggravated DWI with a child in the vehicle. The felony charge stemmed from a previous charge. She was released to her father and scheduled to appear in town court on Nov. 4.

Asleep at the wheel

ELSMERE — A Bronx man was apparently asleep at the wheel when Bethlehem police arrived at a welfare call early Sunday morning, Oct. 18.

A witness called concerned over a Toyota Scion stopped in front of Pioneer Bank with a flat tire and the motor still running while in the eastbound lane of Delaware Avenue. When police arrived, they reportedly found Steven Lamont Washington, 56, slumped forward in his seat with only the seat belt preventing him from hitting his head on the steering wheel. Police also observed that the car remained in drive.

According to the report, reporting officers placed the car in park and turned off the ignition before attempting to wake Washington. Once aroused, he allegedly smelled of alcohol and was observed to have glassy eyes. A tallboy was sitting next to him in the beverage holder and a near empty bottle of brandy was on the passenger side floor.

Washington was arrested on several charges including felony aggravated unlicensed operation of a vehicle, misdemeanor DWI and resisting arrest, and second degree harassment for threatening a police officer. He was scheduled to appear in town court on Nov. 4.

■ ELECTION 2020

Few surprises in local, regional races

ALBANY COUNTY — In the wee hours following Election Day, at least local voters went to bed certain as to who won seats in both the state Assembly, Senate, and county District Attorney.

In Albany County, where registered voters are overwhelmingly Democrat, local races were decided well before the stroke of midnight with little surprise.

Incumbent Democrat Paul Tonko successfully defended his congressional seat against Republican newcomer Elizabeth Joy.

Tonko was able to secure his seventh term in office, despite the Glens Falls native garnering the Republican, Conservative and Serve America Movement lines. Nonetheless, Tonko earned a sizable victory with 62.5 percent of the vote.

Neil Breslin will also return to his seat in the state Senate where he has been since 1996. The incumbent Democrat took 60,538 votes to Republican challenger David Yule's 26,536.

There was a Republican victory in Albany County Tuesday night. Richard Amedure Jr pulled away with his first political victory in a tight race in the state Senate seat left vacant by Republican George Amedore Jr. — pronounced the same, but different by one vowel.

The newcomer fought off fellow first-time challenger, Democrat Michelle Hinchey in a race of familiar names. Hinchey, the daughter of the late Congressman Maurice Hinchey, fell to Amedure by just over 1,000 votes.

The race was tight throughout the night. Amedure's lead stood by less than 200 votes on the two major party lines. The 1,945 Conservative votes enabled him to secure the win.

In the state Assembly, Democrat Patricia Fahy took nearly two-thirds of the vote in the 109th District. It was Robert Porter's second time going up against the incumbent. Despite garnering endorsements from the Republican, Conservative and Libertarian parties, he was unable to overcome Fahy's 35,405 votes.

Phillip Steck will return to his seat next to Fahy in the state Assembly, keeping Republican Dave Feiden down with a 56-44 percent margin in the 110th District.

The race for County District Attorney was practically uncontested as Republicans failed to name a representative for Tuesday night. Matthew Toporowski, who failed to wrangle the Democrat Party's nod from incumbent David Soares, earned 20,966 votes under the Working Families line. That wasn't enough to overtake the 75,096 who voted for Soares.

Safe driving matters in Delmar, too

Trump banner-waving motorist who stopped traffic to harass BLM demonstrators is later arrested, faces reckless driving charge

By MICHAEL HALLISEY
halliseym@spotlightnews.com

DELMAR — A large pick-up truck with American flags and a Trump 2020 banner flapping in the breeze halted rush hour traffic, stopping within feet of a small group of demonstrators, in an apparent act of Election Day intimidation.

Members of an online group Bethlehem Indivisible were holding a "Black Lives Matter" banner along the corner of Delaware and Elsmere avenues when a pick-up truck stopped perpendicular to the flow of Delaware Avenue traffic. The brief faceoff was captured on video by one of its members.

The video starts with a dark-colored Dodge pick-up truck stopped in the middle of the intersection. The sight is accompanied by the blasts of horns from oncoming motorists unable to pass through. Two American flags flank the bank end of the truck. A Trump 2020 flaps in the wind above the front cab, including the phrase "F*ck Your Feelings."

"We were shaken but not deterred by this bully," said one witness who was with the group Tuesday night. "In the moment, I worried about our safety. What if he chose to accelerate?"

The silhouettes of two individuals appear on both the driver and passenger sides of the truck. A metal cross reflects light as it dangles from the rearview mirror.

"Defund the police. Don't call the police," the driver yelled as he leaned out his window. "Stand up for yourselves."

"We are, and others," responded another voice off-camera.

Robert C. Sweet, 53, of Altamont, was arrested the following day after Bethlehem police said they identified him as the driver of the same Dodge pick-up.

The video captures approximately one minute of the standoff before it shows the pick-up proceeding to complete a near 360-degree turn, cutting the path of at least two motorists as it continued west down Delaware Avenue. Before the stream cuts off, a voice off-camera can be heard in an assumed phone call to police.

Bethlehem Indivisible members have often stood at the busy intersection since September to show off its banner in front of rush hour traffic returning home from Albany. It was originally intended to hang above Elsmere Avenue, similar to the purple "Together, we are one Bethlehem." sign that hangs off the bridge now.

The group said it had initially received permission from the county to hang their sign off the bridge, but that was soon rescinded when similar messages on the Rail Trail were met with vandalism earlier this year. Since standing at the corner, members said it's common for motorists to stop and share opposing views, but Tuesday evening was different.

The incident follows just hours after Town Supervisor David VanLuven declared local residents went unscathed by political harassment reported elsewhere across the country. On Monday, a caravan of Trump supporters stopped traffic along the Gov. Mario Cuomo Bridge and New Jersey's Garden State Parkway.

Bethlehem was once a red pocket in a predominantly Democrat county. Republicans had run the Albany suburb for more than a century, but residents have shown the proclivity for voting Democrat over the past 20 years, especially in Delmar.

"I hope the police issued multiple tickets because what this man chose to do and his traffic violations were not OK," said the witness.

Cmdr. Jim Rexford confirmed Bethlehem police received a phone call shortly after 5 p.m.

An investigation into the incident identified Sweet as the operator of the vehicle. Sweet was charged with Reckless Driving and released with a return date in Bethlehem town court on Tuesday, Nov. 24.

Robert Sweet stopped his pick-up truck facing a small group of Black Lives Matter demonstrators, stopping rush hour traffic.

Police painting job questioned

Police Chief has detectives paint office, Town Super defends choice

By MICHAEL HALLISEY
halliseym@spotlightnews.com

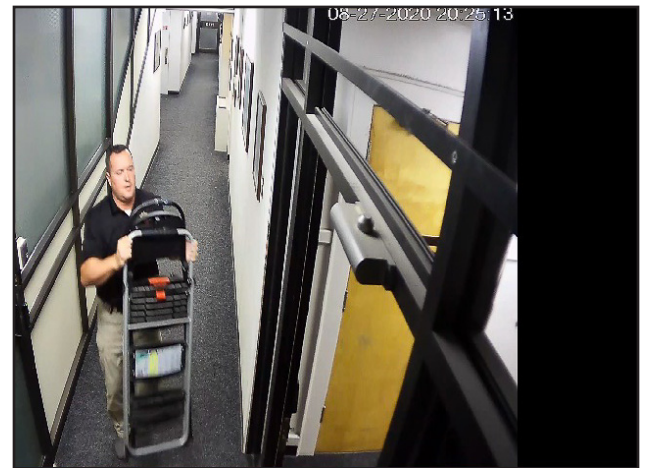

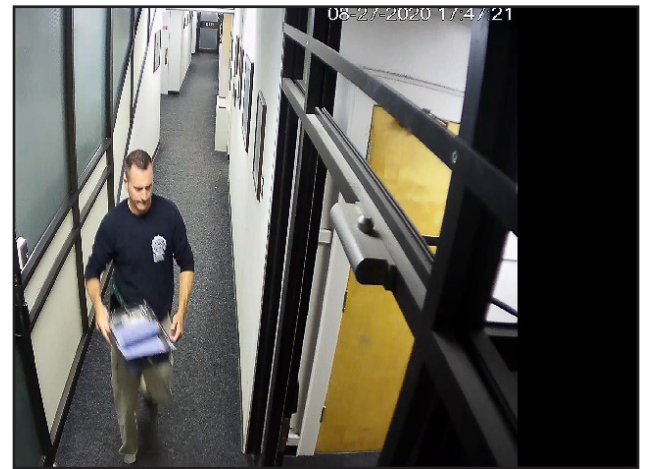

Within 24 hours of being appointed Bethlehem Chief of Police, Gina Cocchiara had help painting her new office. She said it had gone without a fresh coat since Lou Corsi was sworn in more than 15 years ago.

The new chief used the activity as a team building exercise. The town's first woman and openly gay chief rose up the ranks through a tumultuous environment where peers targeted her for being an ambitious career person. When Town Supervisor David VanLuven appointed her to the lead post, he said it was Bethlehem's first step towards police reform.

Four detectives stepped to the task. A review of a police department surveillance video revealed the surreal sight of one walking into the office with a ladder, while another holding a paint tray; each with his service revolver holstered at the waist.

In the days leading to her swearing in ceremony, Cocchiara described her promotion as a relief of pressure despite public criticism over the process that led to her appointment. She's fielded questions over her personnel file — as recently as last month after an August request from District Attorney David Soares was reported in local newspapers. Advocacy groups protested the lack of inclusion in selecting the new chief. And, there's the global push for reform that has had all police agencies answering to angry barbs.

Since taking her post in August, Cocchiara describes the morale in the department as good.

Bethlehem police detectives walk to Chief Cocchiara's office with painting supplies as part of a team building exercise.

Bethlehem Police Department

"I think it's sad that rather than support a fine police officer who has been given an opportunity to lead, change and evolve the culture in this police department she is just being relentlessly torn down by people who would prefer to have not seen her promoted."

— David VanLuven,
Town Supervisor

There are at least a few within the agency who have said otherwise. Days after her office was painted, The Spotlight received an anonymous letter describing the date and times of the exercise, alluding to something improper.

Cocchiara's appointment to chief was the first of several advancements within the department. Where the agency started the year with a chief, a deputy chief and a commander, the town was left with having to address the vacancy of its top two positions by July. Officers Chad Ferraro and James Corrigan were each promoted to sergeant in November. Officer Michael Berben rose to detective. Michael Cozzy and James Rexford were each named commanders a month before. The shift in personnel could factor into possible turmoil.

"Nobody was on overtime for painting," Cocchiara said. "This is team building. We're trying to make everybody's offices new, fresh. ... Get people comfortable in their spaces and work together."

Real McCoy eyes expansion or move

Brewery wants to add a small kitchen, patio

By MICHAEL HALLISEY
halliseym@spotlightnews.com

DELMAR — The Real McCoy Beer Company may explore other options if the town's zoning board nixes its latest idea to expand.

The town Zoning Board of Appeals will host a public hearing on that expansion plan when it meets again on Wednesday, Nov. 18.

The nano-craft brewery has helped generate a modest nightlife in the center of Delmar since it first opened in 2016. In its four years it has expanded to accommodate a bar and seating area that has cultivated sports viewings and live music entertainment.

What has been missing for consumers is food service. Owner Michael Bellini has invited food trucks to collaborate on an overall experience. In October, he submitted an idea to the Zoning Board of Appeals that would expand the brewery's footprint towards that same direction.

Bellini wants to modify two, 40-foot shipping containers into a small, commercial kitchen. The renderings of the plan shows a continuation of the modern industrial look present in the town's warehouse district of Hallwood Road.

Each of the "high-cube" containers stand 9-feet and 6-inches tall, measure

8-feet wide and 40-feet long. The metal containers, often seen on cargo ships and freight trains, would be cut and modified with large, glass doors accented by black lattice. The interior would appear to include dark wood flooring with a large, granite counter top for patrons facing an open kitchen complete with stainless steel appliances. In addition to indoor seating space, the plan includes a patio-like dining area with umbrellas, just outside of it.

At issue would be the placement of the kitchen, which is proposed to sit at the back end of the 20 Hallwood Road property, nosing a property line defined by pine trees, a stockade fence and a 10-foot retaining wall. The kitchen will stand as close as nearly 9 feet from the property line and just over 12 feet from its back neighbor's garage.

Real McCoy's plans reveal sleek, modern look to repurposed storage containers that will serve as its proposed kitchen. But, it will need town approval first. The Real McCoy Beer Co.

"We would like to continue to grow our business and the addition of food service for our brewery is a large part of our business plan," Bellini stated in his application.

"We do not own the property so we are utilizing the shipping containers as a way to invest in assets owned by the brewery."

Bellini said he has explored options to expand his business through other means, including buying out Brewtus Roasting from its neighboring storefront or purchasing the 20 Hallwood Road property from his landlord.

Bellini said he has also pursued buying the 343

Delaware Ave. property left vacant by TD Bank. But, he said, the negotiations for that purchase had stalled after virus-related restrictions limited indoor seating for restaurants.

"Short of moving our brewery to an entirely different location all-together we have run out of options," Bellini said.

Bellini's 191-page application is full of support from local residents and patrons, including strong words of encouragement from state Senator Neil Breslin and state Assemblywoman Pat Fahy.

"This is exactly the kind of innovative pivoting and expanding that we need to nurture in today's tumultuous economy," Fahy stated. "We need to support these kinds of small business that provide the quality of life our communities depend on for our economic health."

“Our positive numbers continue to go up as do our hospitalizations and those in the ICU,” McCoy said. “If we don’t follow the guidance to stop the spread, the numbers will continue to head in the wrong direction.”

While he does not foresee universal shutdowns like this spring and into the summer, he does see a zoned approach at controlling the virus having an impact on local businesses. For example, if the infection rate in an area within a region reaches a certain point, there will be restrictions put in place for just that area. He said Boston just initiated a mask mandate whenever anyone is in public regardless of if they are alone or not and bars and restaurants must now close at 9 p.m.

As of Monday, the total number of positive cases in Albany County jumped to 3,950, up from 3,645 a week ago. Most of the new cases over the last month are from close contact with someone who has the virus, people traveling out of state and those living in congregate settings. There is no clear source of infection for about half the new cases.

Hospitalizations are also on the rise. As of Monday there were 32 residents in the hospital, up from 23 a week ago, for a rate of 0.81 percent. There were four county residents in the ICU, up from one a week ago.

The numbers are indicative of a much feared and anticipated second wave of the virus that is ripping through Europe and other parts of the world. It is coming along with the holiday season and officials are already warning people to avoid gatherings of all sizes outside the immediate household.

“It’s the time now to double down on the preventative measure instead of loosening the restrictions,” said Dr. Elizabeth Whalen, head of the county Health

“Throughout the pandemic our priority has been the health and wellbeing of our students and educators. We determined the January Regents Exams could not be safely, equitably and fairly administered across the State given where the pandemic currently stands. We will continue to monitor applicable data and make a decision on other state assessment programs as the school year progresses, being mindful of the evolving situation.”

— Betty Rosa,
Interim State Education Commissioner

Department. “People need to be committed to continue wearing the mask, which should cover the nose and mouth and limiting social gatherings, which include holiday gatherings. Unfortunately, this year has to be different but that is for the greater good.”

Other COVID news

- The January regents exams are cancelled, said Interim State Education Commissioner Betty Rosa last week, and will propose modifications to the assessment requirements students must meet in order to earn high school diplomas.

There has not been any decision on the June and August, 2021, exams or other state assessment programs.

“Throughout the pandemic our priority has been the health and wellbeing of our students and educators,” said Rosa in a statement. “We determined the January Regents Exams could not be safely, equitably and fairly administered across the State given where the pandemic currently stands. We will continue

“The COVID pandemic has stopped our local economy in its tracks so it is critical to provide the tools and make the investments needed for recovery and growth,” said Andrew Joyce, chairman of the Albany County Legislature.

- As the abbreviated fall athletic season nears its end, school districts and athletes are waiting on guidance from the state regarding the winter season. The winter season is more difficult to navigate given most contests take place inside and most involve close contact between competitors.

Guidance on sports like basketball, hockey and wrestling could come as early as this week but likely no later than next week.

Unlike high risk fall sports like football and cheer that will compete to some degree during what is called “Fall Two” in March, if winter sports are cancelled there is no alternative plans being discussed.

to monitor applicable data and make a decision on other state assessment programs as the school year progresses, being mindful of the evolving situation.”

- The County Legislature is expected to create an Local Development Corporation to help local small businesses survive in uncertain times created by the pandemic.

The Legislature was expected to allocated $500,000 to kick start Advance Albany County Alliance LDC at its meeting on Monday, Nov. 9 after this paper went to print.

The Town of Bethlehem is updating its Comprehensive Plan to help guide the future of our community. The updated Comprehensive Plan will inform the community's land use, development, policy, programs, and infrastructure decisions for the next 15 years.

Bethlehem Forward is designed to encourage town residents to stay connected to ongoing activities and events by signing up for announcements, meeting invitations, survey opportunities, and other interactive ways to participate through the website www.BethlehemForward.com, liking and sharing the Facebook and Instagram posts to spread the word about the planning process, and emailing thoughts and ideas to bethlehemforward@townofbethlehem.org.

To be effective, the Comprehensive Plan must build on the shared visions and goals of the Bethlehem community. Residents are invited to post a picture of what they love in Bethlehem with the hashtag #BethlehemForward on Instagram, or Like on Facebook at @BethlehemForward, and to provide feedback on what they want Bethlehem to look like; what kinds of commercial services do they want to attract and where; how can the town best manage traffic and create a more walk and bike friendly community; where are more parks and natural spaces needed; and how can the town plan for a future community that makes it residents proud to live, work, and play in Bethlehem for years to come.

Through the end of 2021, Bethlehem will continue to seek public input in a variety of ways. Town Supervisor David VanLuven is excited to see an active community engagement effort, stating, "Bethlehem Forward is our opportunity to recognize the things that make Bethlehem such a wonderful place to live and have a business, and to identify what we need to do together to continue and enhance them. The key to success is active participation by all of our residents, which is why we're creating so many different avenues for input." Due to the Covid-19 pandemic, many options for residents to participate will be available online throughout the year. The Town will also offer small in-person activities, mailings, and pop-up events in an attempt to reach all populations, especially those that may not be comfortable with, or have access to, the online platforms.

The Economic Development and Planning Department is leading Bethlehem Forward and the Town convened a Comprehensive Plan Update Committee (CPUC) to provide guidance for the project and ensure that the Plan addresses issues relevant to all stakeholders. The Town hired a consulting team to assist with the Comprehensive Plan Update. The team includes members from SWBR, Highland Planning, Fisher Associates, and Kevin Dwarka LLC. Contact Bethlehem Director of Planning Robert Leslie, AICP at reslie@townofbethlehem.org or 518-439-4955, ext.1157.

LETTER TO THE EDITOR

Town should retract allegiance with BLM

Spotlight Editor,

Whereas I see signs around town that suggests we are one, you the Town Board pass a divisive resolution that accuses our people of systemic racism. You cite a number of people of color as martyrs who died at the hands of police.

How many of you wish you had a son like George Floyd?

I didn't think so.

How many of you wish your daughter would hook up with a man like Breonna Taylor's boyfriend?

Guess not.

We don't see black victims. We see a rapist, addict, thief and drug dealer who violently resisted arrest. Sure black lives matter. But so do blue lives and any other life. A black man shot a black 5-year-old in the head, execution style. Which black life mattered?

The BLM movement is no longer what it was intended to be. It has become synonymous to burning, looting, assaulting and murder and infiltrated with terrorists.

You would be hard pressed to see justice, police bias or racial inequality in the Town of Bethlehem. If one is legal and moral they have been welcomed here. The police do a fine job in this town, let's not imply otherwise. There is always room for improvement and your study group could be beneficial if pursued without bias.

Rensselaer retracted a similar resolution. You would do well to retract yours.

Sincerely,
John LaForte
Delmar

GUILDERLAND — On its last regular season game of the year, the Lady Dutch defeated Albany, 6-0, to finish with a record of six wins, two ties and two losses.

Guilderland was led by two goals from Allison Rive and Jenna Meier while Riley Grimm and Michaela Gordon chipped in a goal each.

Courtney Fish had 23 saves for the Lady Falcons of Albany while Guilderland's standout keeper Molly DiCaprio was not called on to make a save and was not in goal in the second half.

The Lady Dutch lost 1-0 to the undefeated Shen on Oct. 3, the first game of the season, and 3-1 to Averill Park on Oct. 20. The squad tied Columbia and Shaker.

There will not be any sectional or state competition this year due to the pandemic, but there will be a Suburban Council tournament.

obtained by The Spotlight, at least two of the detectives who painted Cocchiara's office were on duty when painting took place on Aug. 27. Although Cocchiara said no overtime was used, one of the four detectives finished the pay period with at least 50 hours. The annual base salary for a first-year detective in Bethlehem is $78,716, exceeding the $46,145 annual salary of the average Delmar resident according to BestPlaces.net. The town board is also scrambling to make up for a dearth in collected sales tax. Its proposed budget for next year will take $1 million from reserves to compensate while freezing built-in raises for non-union employees.

"What's below payscale?" asked a dismissive VanLuven. "If I see a piece of garbage on the floor, do I not pick it up because it's below my payscale? No. I'd scrub the bathrooms if there was the need."

With Town Hall closed due to the pandemic, VanLuven said he couldn't excuse hiring an outside vendor to do the job. He said the town has a three-person maintenance staff, but with security clearance requirements to enter the police station, only one could have been used.

"There are a lot of allusions to mythical improprieties that have been flying around for awhile now," VanLuven said. He commended his police chief for using the opportunity as a team building exercise. He said he was not concerned with on-duty employees painting the office. Employees often paint town facilities, he said. The Department of Public Works had recently done the same.

"I think it's sad that rather than support a fine police officer who has been given an opportunity to lead, change and evolve the culture in this police department she is just being relentlessly torn down by people who would prefer to have not seen her promoted," VanLuven said.

"It saddens me."

A day at the beach with Rochmon

By MICHAEL HALLISEY
halliseym@spotlightnews.com

SARATOGA SPRINGS — The Rochmon Record Club will dive into one of the Beach Boys' classics next Tuesday.

Chuck Vosganian, also known as Rochmon, invites all to converge via Zoom to listen to and learn about Beach Boys "Pet Sounds" on Tuesday, Nov. 17, at 7 p.m.

A Rochmon Record Club Listening Party is meant to inform and deepen our understanding of the history of the individual performers, songs and the stories that went into the making of this classic album. By listening together, we hear the music again for the first time.

In December 1965 the Beach Boys label mates, The Beatles, released "Rubber Soul." Brian Wilson, the Beach Boy's

The Beach Boys / Capitol Records

chief songwriter and resident savant, left the road and sequestered himself in his home. It was then, with advertising copywriter turned lyricist Tony Asher, Wilson wrote the bulk of the album we know as "Pet Sounds."

Vosganian said "Pet Sounds" is an absolute work of genius that features the Beach Boys classics

"Wouldn't It Be Nice," "Sloop John B," "God Only Knows" and "Caroline No" to name a few.

The Rochmon Record Club Listening Party for The Beach Boy's "Pet Sounds" begins at 7 p.m. with a live audio and video presentation.

The Rochmon Record Club will be streaming live on Zoom. Go to caffelena.org to register for tickets! Attendees will be sent information to access the show after you register.

Rochmon Record Club takes place on the third Tuesday of each month at Caffé Lena Saratoga Springs. For more

Albany Symphony

James Brown lives

Albany Symphony will perform pandemic-inspired program

By KAITLIN LEMBO
lembok@spotlightnews.com

The Albany Symphony Orchestra is back, and this time it's dabbling in current affairs.

The group, which is down to 15 members for this performance, will perform "Black and Alive" by Andre Myers, Debussy's "Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun" and Mahler's "Symphony No. 4." The show will be broadcast virtually from Universal Preservation Hall on Saturday, Nov. 14, at 7:30 p.m. Grammy-Award winning conductor David Alan Miller will conduct the performance. There will be a conversation between Miller and Myers at 7 p.m., followed by a post-show Q&A with the audience.

"Despite the different time periods when these pieces were written, I find they actually work well together because they all have this life-affirming quality to them," Miller said. "I find Debussy's piece works well introducing the modern era of music and is a great intro to Andre's piece."

Myers has had his works commissioned by the orchestra before. Miller said he was intent with working with Myers again this year — once the pandemic turned the group's schedule on its head, Miller was happy to find a work that fit all the boxes he was looking for.

Myers describes "Black and Alive" as "Stravinsky meets James Brown,” and his proclamation of “I’m Black and I’m not dead.” Myers said he has spent much of his life under the radar, trying to convince others he’s not a threat and being as small as possible. “If there’s anything I’ve learned from this year, it’s that being not dead and being alive are two very different things,” Myers said.

Miller said “Black and Alive” is unique because it’s not narrative; there is no chorus or narration. In his words, it’s quite the opposite of the tumultuous emotions and events of 2020 — something Miller said drew him to the program.

“Andre has always said he owes as much to Stravinsky as he does some of the most prolific jazz singers in the industry,” Miller said. “I think this piece does a great job of demonstrating his skill and bringing something fresh to the table.”

The UPH performance will be as close as possible to normal performances, however, it’s obvious much as changed. Before the COVID-19 pandemic, the group was set to perform several sets at the Palace Theatre, where space could accommodate both a larger orchestra and a great audience. The pandemic has forced Miller to scale down the performers to 15 people at UPH, but promises those 15 will show the beauty that can be found in smaller numbers.

“Obviously, there have been a ton of fairly dramatic changes since the beginning of the year, and we still find ourselves having to adapt to the circumstances,” Miller said. “But what really inspired me was demonstrating the clearness and cleanliness of this small group of musicians. We want the show to be of gentle comfort to those who are in attendance.”

Admission to the concert hall can be purchased by making at least a $25 donation. Subscribers will have access to the show. Subscribers have access to all streamed and in-person shows once it is safe for gatherings to take place.

A COVID-19 transmission model inspired by gas-phase chemistry is helping the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) forecast COVID-19 deaths across the country.

Developed by Yunfeng Shi, an associate professor of materials science and engineering at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, and Jeff Ban, a professor of civil engineering at the University of Washington, the model uses fatality data collected by Johns Hopkins University and mobility data collected by Google to predict disease spread based on how much a population is moving within its community.

The researchers' tested their model against data from 20 of the hardest hit counties in the United States and found it to be valid. Their findings are available in preprint on medRxiv, an online repository of papers that have been screened but not peer-reviewed.

The team has also been able to show how the forecasts change as schools open, communities lockdown, and masks are mandated. The researchers' website, which illustrates those forecasts, was developed by Tanooj Shah, a graduate student in Shi's group.

"There's no mystery as to why there's an outbreak," Shi said. "There's no mystery to how we control it. The science is absolutely there. We want to use the model to give the local government some concrete predictive insight to implement certain policies."

Shi is a computational materials scientist who was curious about how simple chemical reaction analogs could be applied

Combined with Ban's expertise in transportation and mobility, the two have developed a straightforward model that has been accurately predicting disease transmission. The Perfect Snow

While the snow can be cumbersome and dangerous on the commute, there is such a thing as “the perfect snow.” Like anything else, snow has many different variations, from super icy and dense to fluffy and airy.

Whether you’re gearing up for a snowball fight with your kids or your spouse (no judgment here), or you’re an enthusiast hitting the slopes, we’ve got the low-down on how to make the most of the white stuff.

Snowballs

The cool thing about making the perfect snowball is how similar it is to the science of ice skating on a molecular level.

Follow me here.

Think of an ice rink. The ice you skate on is a solid block of matter. It’s frozen water condensed so tightly, the water molecules are too lazy to move like they would when the matter is converted to liquid.

Like an ice rink, a snowflake is a solid piece of mass. It’s much more fragile than the ice rink you would find at your local hockey rink, but each snowflake has a unique, definable shape that takes pressure or heat

November 2020 Week 2

ARIES – MAR 21/APR 20

Aries, balancing work and family is important. Sometimes one or the other should take priority. Communicate often and openly about your needs.

TAURUS – APR 21/MAY 21

Taurus, the stars are putting out some strong energy that can keep you grounded when you face adversity this week. You will stay calm and focused.

GEMINI – MAY 22/JUN 21

Others may be making certain assumptions about you lately, Gemini. Their intentions are good, so don’t hesitate to reach out and lend them an ear.

CANCER – JUN 22/JUL 22

Cancer, your life is going to start to equalize a bit. That means you can feel more relaxed, healthy and balanced. This is a great time to examine relationships and make plans.

LEO – JUL 23/AUG 23

Glowing compliments reach your ears, Leo. You will finally learn how much others respect you. Take the spotlight with grace and remain as composed as possible.

VIRGO – AUG 24/SEPT 22

Planning an event or party will be lots of fun for you, Virgo. All the details are in order and you are a master of timing. Others may enlist your help, too.

LIBRA – SEPT 23/OCT 23

Libra, now is your time to encourage others to turn their goals into reality. You’re a positive force in the lives of so many people, and others recognize that.

SCORPIO – OCT 24/NOV 22

Scorpio, it may not be apparent to you, but you often make a very good role model. You tend to be driven and organized, and young people in your life can learn much from you.

SAGITTARIUS – NOV 23/DEC 21

Sometimes it’s a battle between two sides within you, Sagittarius. Your patient and impatient sides might be at war this week. Take a step back and reconsider your approach.

CAPRICORN – DEC 22/JAN 20

Capricorn, let someone with high energy inspire you to be a go-getter in the week ahead. They may be on to something, and you can benefit from the extra hop in your step.

AQUARIUS – JAN 21/FEB 18

Even though change is good, it isn’t always comfortable, Aquarius. Transitions in your life may feel a bit challenging this week, but surround yourself with support.

PISCES – FEB 19/MAR 20

Dreams may have you tossing and turning, Pisces. Just remember that dreams are not necessarily indicative of what’s to come. Rest easy.

to deform.

When you create a snowball, you are using pressure to condense those individual snowflakes into a new shape.

“You want the snow to be within 5 degrees of the freezing point, but obviously not over the 32 degree temperature so it stays as a solid,” Jennifer Fisk-Jaskolka, a seventh-grade science teacher at Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Middle School, said. “What you do when you create a snowball is use pressure, not temperature, to convert the snow to a liquid for a split second so it freezes back to a solid mass. This process is called sintering.”

Fisk-Jaskolka noted the snow being right below the freezing point gives the snowball a better chance of sticking together. If you try to form a snowball with a freezing cold ball of snow, the pressure will not be enough to condense the molecules. Chances are, if the snow is too cold, you will end up with a semi-formed ball that will fall apart if you look at it wrong.

“The reason it relates to ice skating is that when you skate, your body weight is concentrated on this very thin sliver of metal, which becomes extremely sharp,” Fisk-Jaskolka said. “As you skate along, the pressure of your skate forcibly creates a thin separation in the ice and you’re skating on molecular water. This is why any divots in the ice look kind of glazed over.”

Pressure is the make-or-break component of the perfect snowball because the molecules need to heat up enough to form together. Without really packing that snow into your gloves, you will end up with snowflakes all over your jeans.

— Jennifer Fisk-Jaskolka, a seventh-grade science teacher
at Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk

So, when you make that snowball, make sure to squeeze as hard as possible.

Mountain Views

For the skiers and snowboarders, everyone loves those perfect days on the mountain. What makes them so perfect? For some people, it’s the snow, others the temperature; then there are people that love relaxing in the lodge. All of these factors can create the perfect day at the mountain.

Weather on the mountain can vary; it can be sunny one day and a complete blizzard the next. The fresh powder snow benefits beginners and the professionals. The professionals can gain speed going down the mountain, while beginners can enjoy the soft snow as they learn to ride. The texture of the snow will also help beginners stay uninjured; the softer the snow, the better the cushion. Softer snow will also help beginners keep their balance easier.

Keep in mind, mountains make it their goal to make the perfect snow for customers, so you wouldn’t experience as much of a variation in the sport scene as you would when trying to build your snowman.

According to www.snow-forecast.com, the perfect temperature is between about 21 and 30 degrees. These temperatures are comfortable for going down the mountain and result in fantastic soft snow. But you don’t want the temperatures too high, as that can result in undesirable conditions.

Lending a helping hand in today's time

Volunteer safely during the pandemic

Volunteers are vital to the survival of many charitable organizations. Without people willing to offer their time and expertise free of charge, many nonprofits would find it difficult, if not impossible, to meet their missions.

The global pandemic that began in late 2019 and continued into 2020 changed many aspects of life as the world knew it, and that includes volunteering. Social distancing measures and stay-at-home mandates from state and local governments discouraged people from leaving their homes, while various health organizations warned aging men and women to stay home as much as possible. The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention notes that the risk for severe illness from COVID-19 increases with age. In recognition of that threat, many retirees who were heavily involved in volunteering prior to the pandemic were forced to cease working as volunteers, which could have a negative effect on their mental health as the pandemic continues. A report from the Mayo Clinic Health System noted that adults over age 60 experienced greater life satisfaction and greater positive changes in their perceived health as a result of volunteering.

Many people have continued to volunteer during the pandemic, and those that want to do so can take these steps to make sure their efforts to give back are as safe as possible.

- Speak with your physician first. Anyone, but especially seniors, who wants to volunteer during the pandemic should discuss those aspirations with their physicians prior to offering their services to charitable organizations. Doctors can discuss the acute and chronic threats posed by the COVID-19 virus and examine each individual's medical history to help potential volunteers decide if working with a local charity is safe. In addition, doctors can check patients for COVID-19 symptoms and even have them tested to make sure they won't be putting anyone in danger should they decide to volunteer.

- Contact the organization prior to volunteering. Some organizations may not be allowing potentially at-risk volunteers to perform in-person tasks. Contact the organization you hope to work with prior to signing up to confirm your eligibility, but also to discuss the safety protocols they've put in place to protect the health of their volunteers.

- Monitor your own health. If you've signed up to volunteer, it's vital that you monitor your own health. Health officials believe the COVID-19 virus has spread so rapidly for a number of reasons, including the likelihood that many people have had the virus but shown no symptoms. Charitable organizations will no doubt assess the health of each volunteer when they show up to work, but volunteers also should make such assessments on their own. Check your temperature each day and familiarize yourself with the symptoms of COVID-19. If you suspect you are unwell or are even slightly under the weather, contact the charity and tell them you won't be showing up that day. Operating with an abundance of caution during the pandemic can save lives.

- Consider virtual volunteering. Virtual volunteering is a safe way to give back that won't expose volunteers or others to the COVID-19 virus. Charitable organizations need behind-the-scenes help just as much as they need volunteers with their boots on the ground. Virtual volunteers can help with fundraising efforts and event planning, but also help charities overcome the logistical challenges of operating and meeting their missions during the pandemic.

Prior to volunteering during the pandemic, prospective volunteers can follow numerous steps to ensure volunteering is safe, both for them and the people they're trying to help.

FOOD and VINO

The holiday season is an opportunity to indulge. Each person has his or her own ideas on how to treat themselves or a loved one especially well this time of year. Some may see the perks in spending a little more on elaborate gifts, while others may decide to step up their holiday menus.

For those who want to try fine dining for Christmas dinner, "Steak au Beurre de Roquefort" can be the ideal indulgence. Charolais cattle makes for especially tender steaks in this recipe, but if unavailable, substitute the best fillet mignon from the butcher shop. Try this recipe, courtesy of "The Food of France" (Kyle Books) by Sarah Woodward.

Steak au Beurre de Roquefort

Ingredients: Serves 2

2 tablespoons unsalted butter, removed from the refrigerator at least an hour in advance

 Scant 1/4 pound Roquefort cheese, at room temperature
 2 fillet steaks, preferably from Charolais beef
 Sea salt
 Freshly ground black pepper

Instructions

Mash the butter and Roquefort together with a fork. Form into two round pats, wrap in plastic wrap, and chill.

When you are ready to eat, heat a heavy ridged pan for the steak, which you have seasoned. Once the pan is very hot, grill the steak to your satisfaction. Always remember to ask your fellow diners their tastes as well. Put the cold pats of butter and cheese on top of the hot steak and serve straight away.
