What's the assignment?

Bethlehem Central administrators don't see why there's a push to eliminate school resource officers from school campus

By MICHAEL HALLISEY
halliseym@spotlightnews.com

DELMAR — When the Town of Bethlehem submitted its police reform plan to the state, one of several details included the intent to define a clear role for the resource officers it provides to area schools. Bethlehem Central, however, still has questions about that assignment.

When then-Gov. Andrew Cuomo ordered municipalities in 2020 to devise plans to revise law enforcement, the onus was placed on local government. Bethlehem soon after started evaluating the nearly 40-year relationship it had by providing school resource officers to Bethlehem Central through its Police Reform and Reinvention Collaborative. The committee of town officials and community members argued over the need to have armed police officers in schools. They ultimately described the decades-long D.A.R.E. program as ineffective; pointing to personal experiences, national headlines and case studies.

Police calls down in 2020

Bethlehem PD called 20,089 times last year

DELMAR — Calls to the Bethlehem Police Department were down last year, according to its annual report recently released to the public.

In 2020, 20,089 calls were placed to the police department in Delmar. According to a breakdown of service calls, 2,588 were for Emergency Medical Services, the highest number of calls within a category.

The pandemic may have played a roll in the decreased activity, especially in the patrol numbers.

Last year, there were 2,611 motor vehicle stops — less than half from the previous year. There were 7,229 stops in 2019 and 7,991 in 2018.

Traffic and speed arrests were also down by a considerable amount. From 2018 to 2020, traffic arrests went from 3,985, 3,956, to 1,385. Within the same time period, speed arrests went from 511, 558 to 209.

Conversely, there were two fatal accidents last year, compared to just one in 2019. Personal injury accidents climbed from 121 to 168. Property damage also rose from 645 to 804.

The police report can be accessed by visiting the town website at townofbethlehem.org.

According to the police report, the officer noticed the driver of the vehicle, Paul Rakoske, Jr., 33, of Delmar, had watery and bloodshot eyes and had an odor of an alcoholic beverage. Rakoske said he had consumed some drinks.

He allegedly failed a field sobriety test and a preliminary field breath alcohol test. After he was transported back to the police station, he allegedly failed a chemical test that registered a 0.12 BAC reading.

Rakoske was arrested for DWI and also ticketed for an excessive speed violation. He will return to Bethlehem Town Court on Nov. 16.

Child survives harrowing accident

Mother has long advocated for safer roadway, school bus safety

By MICHAEL HALLISEY
halliseym@spotlightnews.com

SELKIRK — A mother's worst nightmare played out before her eyes as she watched a truck-and-trailer strike her daughter down while she was waiting for the school bus.

According to the police report, Kyle H. Rous, 26, of Otego, was operating a truck-and-trailer combination vehicle for Truck Co. Hudson Valley Pump and Tank in Coeymans Hollow on Friday, Nov. 5. He was traveling northbound on Route 9W shortly after 7:30 a.m. when the vehicle in front of it slowed to make a left onto Hoffman Street. Rous did not have enough room to stop.

In an apparent attempt to stop from hitting the car in front of him, police said Rous went into the southbound lane, then made a left turn onto Hoffman Street. When he turned onto the dead end street, his truck struck 15-year-old Juliana Fahey as she was waiting for her school bus.

Fahey, a student at Ravena Coeymans Selkirk, was sent to Albany Medical Center. According to Bethlehem police she suffered only minor injuries. As of Monday, Nov. 8, she feels sore.

Rous was issued tickets on charges for failing to keep right and failing to obey a traffic control device. The police report did not issue her name on account of her being a minor and the victim of the accident. Spotlight Newspapers contacted her family and received their permission.

Renee Fahey has been advocating for changes to the stretch of Route 9W near her family home in Selkirk. The busy state road switches briefly from a two-lane roadway to a four-lane highway, with motorists permitted to travel at 55 miles per hour. But, she said they commonly go faster. A few days before Halloween, she captured one motorist as it buzzed by a school bus coming to a stop. She said she's been encouraged by the Albany County Sheriff's Office to record license plates and report them.

"Route 9W in Selkirk has been terrible for years," she wrote on Facebook. "Vehicles get to where it turns into two lanes and they make it a speedway, and motorcycles in the summer time scare the hell out of us because they're clearly going over 100... it boggles my mind that there [aren't] more vehicles pulled over here, or more accidents."

The following account of the accident comes from Renee. Any act described as a violation of the law is alleged.

Renee said she was parked across the street, watching over Juliana as she was waiting for the bus. The bus was running late, she said. Juliana looked over at her mother, each shrugging their shoulders, before Renee's phone buzzed with an incoming text. It was Ravena Coeymans Selkirk's notification service informing her that the bus was going to be 15 to 20 minutes late. As she was reading the notice, she said she heard a "loud, grinding noise."

"When I look up I see a truck and a trailer flying down my road... I don't see Juliana," she said. "I flew across the street and followed the truck down to the end of Hoffman street looking for blood on the ground, because I thought he was dragging my baby girl."

Renee described the truck having turned abruptly into a neighbor's lawn, settling near the woodline at the end of the road. Rous jumped out as she got out of her car, "you hit my kid," she screamed. "Where is she?" From her account, he sounded just as frantic, repeatedly yelling, "I don't know. I don't know." The driver from the other car yelled out to Renee, "She's in the woods!"

The driver of the car that had stopped to make a turn off of Route 9W. She was waiting for on-coming traffic to drive by before crossing over the two lanes of traffic. She was turned and about to drive in when Rous' truck cut her off "doing 50-60 miles an hour," Renee said.

When the truck hit Juliana, the impact sent her flying back into the woods about 30 feet away. When Rous attempted to stop his truck, he allegedly told Renee that he applied his brakes so hard that it busted his brake lines, he no longer had the ability to stop. His truck eventually stopped after having dragged against the guardrails near the opening of the street, and resting at the woodline at the end of the road.

The stretch of Route 9W is commonly used by heavy commercial trucks as they travel back and forth from Coeymans and other points south to the New York State Thruway. To access the Thruway, trucks turn east onto Maple Avenue.

Renee said she'd like to see RCS evaluate their bus stops to make them safer for children. She'd also like to see heftier fines for motorists who drive past stopped school buses.

"There are so many scenarios and what ifs," Renee said. "Sticking to the facts of this situation and the problem at hand is people don't pay attention. Period. ... Yesterday could have gone so much [worse] for our family," Renee said.

Juliana "walked away" from the accident with a sore chest, arm and neck, Renee said. She believes a guardian angel — her father — was looking over Juliana when the accident occurred. At the end of the day, she peeked at the picture Albany Medical Center took of her husband for his visitor's ID badge. She saw her own father.

"I saw my dad's face," Renee said. "He was there, it was him."

■ TOWN NOTICE

Work continues on Kenwood Avenue

Both lanes to close between Adams Place, FoCo

DELMAR — Bethlehem Public Work crews continue to repair the failed sewer line underneath Kenwood Avenue near the Four Corners, but additional work requires both lanes be closed between Adams Place and Delaware Avenue.

The town released notice of the road closure on Friday, Nov. 5. Construction remains to be completed by the end of the week.

Town crews have been working on the failed sewer main since Monday, Nov. 1. The line was originally installed in 1929. The town was forced to shutdown one lane of the road as it started to repair damage. The failed line was reportedly damaging the roadway above it.

According to the town notice, the work is expected to be completed by Sunday, Nov. 14.

BC student is earning his stripes

Junior is making the fight against global warming personal

DELMAR — While world leaders continue their global climate summit in Glasgow, Scotland, one BC student is working to make the effects of climate change something we understand on a more local level.

Nikhilesh Radosevich, a junior at Bethlehem Central High School, is the creator of a website called earthstripes.org. The site allows users to learn more about the impacts of climate change in their own hometown with maps and a search engine that shine a spotlight on increasing temperatures, changing precipitation patterns and prevailing attitudes toward climate change in different communities across the country and around the world.

Visitors to the site can enter their zip code, city or county and readily find climate change information tailored to them and their location.

Radosevich also gives visitors a unique way to easily share what they've learned about what's happening locally. He does this by partnering with online retailer Zazzle so people can purchase magnets, mugs, neckties and facemasks featuring a simple bar graph showing local warming data trends over 100-plus years.

With stripes in shades of blue (lower in annual temperature) and red (higher in annual temperature), the warming trends in any community are easy to see and easy to explain.

The teen got the idea for the website and for the location-based merchandise when he saw a local meteorologist wearing a striped tie showing the worldwide global warming trend. It turned out that a professor named Ed Hawkins at the University of Reading in the U.K. created the "Show Your Stripes" images using scientific data and the red and blue stripes to simplify the data and make it easy to understand.

Radosevich decided he wanted to do something similar but make it more personalized.

"When it's more personalized to you, it lets you tell a better story," said Radosevich.

Over several months, Radosevich created his website by overlaying data from the top science agencies and universities with map coordinates to create more targeted data and stories to help people understand climate change. Some of the sources used by Radosevich include the Environmental Protection Agency (EPA), the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration (NOAA) and a non-profit called Berkeley Earth.

He also uses information from the Yale Climate Opinion Survey 2020 to help describe a community's attitude toward climate change by location. The survey shows that 78 percent of adults in Albany County believe global warming is happening, 6 percent higher than the national average of 72 percent of adults.

An early start and a perfect score

Web design and computer science is not something new for Radosevich. His interest in computer science, he says, began back in third grade when his mother signed him up for a Scratch class at summer camp.

"I remember not wanting to go because I just imagined a lot of noise and a lot of kids scratching things and that didn't sound fun," said Radosevich. "It turned out to be a really fun computer camp where I learned how to make programs and I ended up really liking it."

Since then, Radosevich has been creating websites for family members, friends and groups he's involved in, like the Boy Scouts. He studies computer science at the high school and was recently notified by the College Board that he had received a perfect score on the AP Computer Science Principles exam he took last spring.

The AP exams are scored on a scale of 1 to 5. Radosevich not only received a score of 5 he also received a perfect score and was one of only 335 students out of approximately 115,000 worldwide who earned a perfect score. The head of the College Board's Advanced Placement program Trevor Packer described Radosevich's perfect score as "so superior that it falls into an extremely select category" in his October 15 letter.

"We are extremely proud of Nikhil. His achievements are a testament to his impeccable work ethic and caring nature," said BCHS Technology and Engineering Teacher Eric Fana. "I'll be rocking my stripes in support!"

Radosevich, who is a president for the high school's Computer Science Honor Society, said he plans to keep working on his earthstripes.org website to try to add more data from outside the United States and to focus on making some of his key environmental data from the EPA "pop."

"Right now I'm working on a way to make the stripes available for any town or city in the world," said Radosevich, who spent nearly 200 hours over the last several months on the website, adding, "but that requires a lot of math."

BCSD Board member apologies

'Mortified' to learn archaic term offensive to Asian culture

By MICHAEL HALLISEY
halliseym@spotlightnews.com

DELMAR — A contrite Bethlehem School Board Member told the community he was "mortified" once he learned a word he had used during a recent board meeting was offensive as he publicly apologized on Wednesday, Nov. 3.

"I want to apologize to the community and to anyone who was offended and hurt by my description of an Asian-American girl in the book 'Eyes That Kiss [in the Corners]," Jonathan Fishbein said. "I honestly had no idea and I was mortified to learn that the 'O word' was offensive to some. If I had been aware, I never would have used it.

I chose my current public service in education because education is important for a culturally rich and diverse and inclusive society.

"I've learned from this experience and it will not be repeated."

Bethlehem administrators set aside time during its Oct. 20 meeting to recognize its members as part of New York State School Boards Association School Board Recognition Week. Board members presented stacks of books of which they had chosen from a predetermined list that would later be donated in each of their names to various schools within the district.

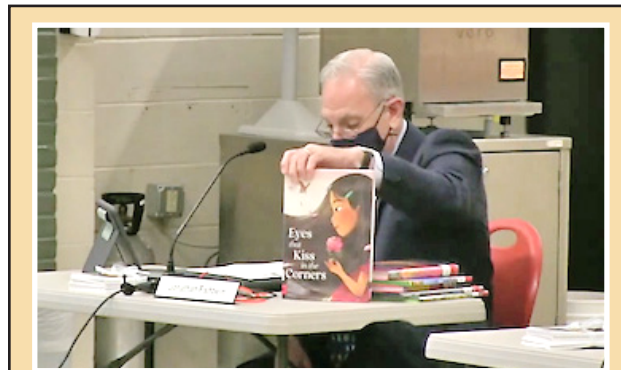

Board members selected from a common theme of topics that included racism and cultural awareness from critically acclaimed books, some of which have been listed on the New York Times Best Sellers' list.

Fishbein had shared details from his books to be donated to Hamagrael Elementary. Among the six titles he chose was Joanna Ho's "Eyes That Kiss in the Corners." The best-selling author, who is Chinese and is vice-principal of her San Francisco high school, wrote the story about a young Taiwanese girl who notices her eyes look different from her friends.

"And through her mother and other powerful women in her life she learns to really appreciate that her eyes are different, that they are beautiful, and it brings her a great sense of beauty in honor of herself and self-empowerment," he said. "It's a wonderful book. I hope every girl in the school gets to read it."

But, instead of describing the main character as Taiwanese or Asian, Fishbein had used

"I want to apologize to the community and to anyone who was offended and hurt by my description of an Asian-American girl in the book 'Eyes That Kiss [in the Corners]. I honestly had no idea and I was mortified to learn that the 'O word' was offensive to some. If I had been aware, I never would have used it. I chose my current public service in education because education is important for a culturally rich and diverse and inclusive society. I've learned from this experience and it will not be repeated."

the term Oriental. The word, which derives from the Latin word meaning East, is widely considered a derogatory term when used to refer to people of Asian descent. Once commonly used, school administrators and government officials have since phased it out from use in curriculums, documents and legislation for being offensive.

School Board President Holly Dellenbaugh acknowledged that it was an "outdated" term and that mistakes while working towards social justice.

"I know that education and work on social justice issues is a lifelong process," Dellenbaugh said, "and we all make mistakes. The important thing is to keep the conversation going so that we can learn from those mistakes and we can continue to improve and do better."

What's the assignment?

"I encourage you all to read the Police Reform report, said Katie Yezzi, an educator and member of the town committee who spoke to the board following an SRO presentation facilitated by the Bethlehem Police Department. "Regrettably, none of our committee's recommendations appeared to have had an impact on the presentation this evening. I believe that moving forward, the district has a responsibility to at least respond to, if not implement, the recommendations from our committee around SROs."

Superintendent Jody Monroe explained that she and high school principals David Dormel and Michael Klugman spoke with Town Supervisor David VanLuven, but the district was not an active participant in the town committee.

"When this came up I asked, what's the concern?" Monroe said. "Because in the time that I have been in the district, I've not had any concerns brought to me... about the SROs."

Willow Baer said she called for the presentation on Wednesday, Nov. 3. The school board member said she observed the discussions happening on the town level, but not with the school board.

"It wasn't directed to the school board, because that wasn't the committee that was doing the work" Baer said. "So, I felt that it was incredibly important that we provide the community the opportunity to to address the appropriate body about their same concerns, and to have an internal discussion here, about whether or not the recommendations of that committee is something we want to explore further as the body responsible for the SRO program and DARE program in the school district."

Drug Abuse Resistance Education — known best as D.A.R.E. — started between the Los Angeles Police Department and the Los Angeles Unified School District in 1983 as a means of introducing a friendly face to law enforcement for elementary school children. Police officers would join classrooms to speak about specific drugs, their effects and the dangers associated with taking them, including addiction. Over the 30 years since its launch, the curriculum has evolved beyond crime prevention and has developed into a counseling role.

The benefits of having SROs on campus have been weighed against drawbacks defined by fear of racially biased law enforcement. Supporters of the program point to a decline in nationwide drug abuse starting in the 1980s. Detractors, however, drill down to a 2009 analysis reported in Scientific American magazine that states the program doesn't work.

School districts across the country have opted to remove police officers from their campuses since the death of George Floyd last

May. According to a recent New York Times article, a superintendent in Seattle said having an armed police officer at school "prohibits many students and staff from feeling fully safe."

"Since I've been here - in 20 years and 8 years on the school board - there's never been a complaint that's come from a parent on any action that an SRO has done inappropriately in the district," said Christine Beck. "I love the examples in the national report, but they have to be applicable to our school. And they're not."

Jonathan Fishbein said he wasn't surprised to hear harsh comments against the DARE program. While his now-grown children attended Hamagrael Elementary School, the school board member recalled it did little to detract kids from using drugs.

"I never thought the DARE program was effective," he said. "I haven't seen the studies that show it is effective. ... I'd like to see a program that is effective."

Bethlehem Police

Department Det. Michael Berben said he wouldn't advocate for or against the program, but explained how he viewed his role as an SRO for Bethlehem Central was "very valuable."

"The reason why I believe that my presence here is important, is the exchange of information that I bring from the community, to the administrators, to the social workers, the councillors, the teachers," he said. "To be able to have the communication that works in the best interest of making the students here feel comfortable and safe in their school and in their home."

Darnell Douglas, a school district counselor, later described a situation where Berben helped a student in crisis.

Without sharing too much information to reveal the student, Douglas said that a child outside of school wrote on an online chat service that they were going to kill themselves. The next morning, Berben shared the information with Douglas. They then spent the next two hours trying to track the child down.

Once they did, the reached out to the parents. The family was unaware, and at first, dismissed the call. Douglas and Berben went through their information again and returned back with confidence. The parents didn't realize their child was in crisis. Berben then visited the home to evaluate the student.

"So, when I say we have a relationship, that's really what it's about," Douglas said. "Because I know Mike Berben, he's able to give me information so that I can do my job more effectively as a school counselor. Because if I didn't have that information, there's a possibility that I could have gone days without me connecting with that student, and that student possibly could have died."

After listening to approximately six attendees from the audience, the school board said it would review suggestions from the Police Reform and Reinvention Collaborative.

TOWN GOVERNMENT

Blue wave washes over Bethlehem

DELMAR — Each Democrat town candidate won their respective seat Tuesday evening, as a blue wave washed over Bethlehem on Nov. 2.

Town Supervisor David VanLuven defeated Republican challenger Paul Heiser, garnering 61 percent of the vote to earn his third term at the helm. He will start the new year with an all-Democrat Town Board.

Newcomer David DeCancio earned the second of two seats available on the Town Board. The Democrat wrangled the chair away from Republican incumbent Jim Foster by a nearly 1,400 vote margin. He will be joined by fellow Democrat Maureen Cunningham, who returns to the board for her second, four-year term.

Other Democrats enjoying victories on Election Day included current Highway

Superintendent Marc Dorsey and incumbent Town Justice Andrew Kirby.

Dorsey fended off a strong challenge from his predecessor, John "Tiger" Anastasi. The current highway czar garnered 54 percent of the vote.

Kirby will return to the bench after having earned 61 percent of the votes against Republican challenger Colin Dwyer.

Nanci Moquin will return as Town Clerk. She ran uncontested this November.

Another two years for VanLuven

DELMAR — David VanLuven will see another two years in Bethlehem Town Hall as town supervisor, his third term starts at the end of December.

The Democrat incumbent garnered 61 percent of the votes on Tuesday, Nov. 2, defeating his Republican challenger, Paul Heiser by more than 2,400 votes.

VanLuven sought another term based on the strength of creating a new, 147-acre Normans Kill Ravines natural parks; launching a community-based process for updating the town's comprehensive plan; and bringing the community and police together to envision a more modern approach to policing and addressing systemic racism.

LaGrange defends New Scotland seat

NEW SCOTLAND — Election Day ended with Democrat Douglas LaGrange successfully defending his seat as New Scotland Supervisor by garnering 55 percent of the overall vote.

The incumbent holds an unofficial 1,673 to 1,381 lead over his Republican challenger, Erik Grissell. As of Monday, Nov. 8, the Albany County Board of Elections had yet to declare it as an official result.

Close race in New Scotland

NEW SCOTLAND — Four politicians were vying for two seats on the New Scotland Town Board, and less than 100 votes separated the candidate with the most from the person with the least.

According to Albany County Board of Elections' unofficial results, Democrats Daniel Leinung and Adam Greenberg collected enough votes to each take a seat on the board. But out of a field of four candidates, the two garnered 25.85 and 25.65 percent, respectively.

Republicans Peter Drao and Charissa Mayer are within two whole percentage points. Drao, who collected the least amount of votes at 1,442, is behind Greenberg by 87 ballots for the last chair on the board.

The fight for who will be the next town clerk is separated by 22 votes. As of Election Day, Democrat Lisa Williams was ahead of Republican Lori Dollard by a count of 1,536 to 1,514.

Dems sweep in Guilderland

GUILDERLAND — Town Supervisor Peter Barber ran unopposed so all eyes were on the six candidates vying for the two chairs on Town Board, in the end, the Democrats won.

According to Albany County Board of Elections' unofficial results, Christine Napierski and Amanda Beedle each garnered enough votes to take a seat on the Town Board after ballots were tallied on Tuesday, Nov. 2.

The race was close for each of the four candidates running under either the Republican or Democrat party lines. Napierski and Beedle collected 25.78 and 22.67 percent, respectively. Republicans Brian Sheridan and Amanda Knasel garnered 21.27 and 18.91 percent.

The race between Beedle and Sheridan ended within 200 votes on Tuesday night, which leaves residents to wonder. Kevin McDonald, running as a candidate for the Working Families Party, earned 1,070 votes. Paul Pastore, as a Conservative, collected 702.

2022 Budget vote Wednesday

DELMAR — Bethlehem Town Board members are expected to pass the proposed 2022 budget when it meets Wednesday, Nov. 10.

In addition to defining each department's spending power for the year, the budget will include mandatory wage increases pursuant to Section 108 of the Town Law.

Here are some of the proposed salaries for the following officers, subject to final approval of the 2022 Town Budget:

- Supervisor $128,998,
- Town Board Members (each) $17,020,
- Town Clerk $84,146,
- Superintendent of Highways $113,674.

■ TOWN GOVERNMENT

Do you want cannabis?

You can answer that question at Town Hall as Bethlehem opens the floor to the public

By MICHAEL HALLISEY
halliseym@spotlightnews.com

DELMAR — The Bethlehem Town Board is opening the floor to the public to weigh in on the topic of whether or not to allow cannabis dispensaries and on-site consumption lounges in town when it next meets Wednesday, Nov. 10.

Albany opened the doors to recreational marijuana use, and a new commercial market to support it. But, state legislators also allowed each municipality to decide for themselves if they want to permit dispensaries or on-site consumption lounges in their towns, or disallow them altogether.

The legalization of adult-use cannabis is an enormous public policy shift so the regulatory framework is expected to take time before it is fully developed. The Office of Cannabis Management will need to draft and issue regulations to implement the law in order for adult-use sales to begin. However, while there are currently no stores open to purchase adult-use cannabis, the possession and use of cannabis for adults 21 years of age and older in accordance with the MRTA, is now legal.

Town Planning Director Robert Leslie said he would anticipate new dispensaries or lounges would want to seek storefronts in the town's established commercial areas — Delaware Avenue, Route 9W or New Scotland Road. Prospective locations are already limited by their relative distance from schools and churches. For example, lounges would be at least 500 feet away from school grounds and 200 feet away from a house of worship. MRTA allows towns to extend those thresholds even farther.

Leslie later used the neighborhood bar analogy to describe its use. Where a customer could buy alcohol, sit down and consume the product. He then likened a dispensary to a beverage center where consumers can purchase the product to use at home.

Municipalities weighing the benefits to allow dispensaries and lounges will consider the taxable income it promises. A statewide 9 percent tax would be charged on all sales. Another 4 percent would be levied locally, with 3 percent going to the town in which the business resides while the other 1 percent goes to the respective county.

Unlike the tobacco license process Bethlehem introduced last year, the state will not allow for locally issued licenses. A new Office of Cannabis Management will issue licenses and develop regulations.

Colonie and Ballston Spa have each opted to allow for dispensaries, but chose to go without on-site consumption lounges. Whether Bethlehem decides to follow in similar fashion will happen after the Town Board listens to the public before passing a local law anticipated for December.

CVS Health to carry pediatric COVID-19 vax

Shots for eligible children to be available at nearly 1,700 CVS Pharmacy locations

WOONSOCKET, R.I. — CVS Health announced last Wednesday that select CVS Pharmacy locations will be offering a two-dose primary series of the Pfizer-BioNTech COVID-19 pediatric vaccine to children ages 5 to 11 years of age.

The pharmacy chain stated the service on Sunday, Nov. 7.

This follows authorization of the vaccine by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) based on guidance from the organization's Advisory Committee on Immunization Practices and Food and Drug Administration (FDA) Emergency Use Authorization. Parental or legal guardian consent is required for this age group, and children must be accompanied by an adult.

"We know many parents have been waiting for the opportunity to vaccinate their young children and are looking for convenient access to a trusted resource for vaccinations," said Troyen A. Brennan, M.D., MPH, Executive Vice President and Chief Medical Officer of CVS Health. "Our immunizers have been preparing for this important role, and stand ready to help answer parents' questions, guide them and their

2021 'CleanSweepNY' Collection Events Safely Remove Chemical Waste from New York's Environment

ALBANY — The New York state Department of Environmental Conservation announced Wednesday, Nov. 3 that it had collected 230,000 pounds of pesticides and chemical waste at two CleanSweepNY events earlier this year.

The first collection event, held during the week of May 10, included counties in the Hudson Valley. The second event was held during the week of Oct. 11, and included counties in the Capital District.

DEC's CleanSweepNY program helps promote healthy and sustainable communities by providing opportunities for proper disposal of unwanted and/or obsolete pesticides and other chemicals.

ongoing efforts to protect public health and our environment it's critical to remove excess pesticides and other chemical wastes from our communities and landfills," Commissioner Basil Seggos said. "We are pleased that so many farmers, businesses, and institutions participated in CleanSweepNY events this year and that so many New Yorkers recognize the importance of safely removing potential hazards from the environment."

The spring CleanSweepNY event collected more than 86,600 pounds of chemical wastes from 89 participants in Ulster, Sullivan, Orange, Rockland, Dutchess, Putnam, and Westchester counties. The fall event collected over 143,500 pounds of chemical wastes from 69 participants in Albany, Columbia, Delaware, Greene, Montgomery, Otsego, Rensselaer, Schenectady, and Schoharie counties.

DEC employees visited four sites for the collection of waste chemicals unsafe to transport due to the poor condition of pesticide containers and storage areas. DEC also facilitated safe disposal for participants that had difficulty safely handling and transporting waste chemicals to collection locations.

DEC schedules and organizes CleanSweepNY events in collaboration with the New York State Department of Transportation. Collection events were held at multiple DOT facilities.

The 2021 events mark the 29th and 30th collection events administered by the CleanSweepNY program since its inception in 2002. The program has resulted in the collection of more than two million pounds of chemical wastes across New York State, as well as the safe collection of more than 950 pounds of liquid elemental mercury. In addition, approximately 6,100 plastic pesticide containers, including many 55- and 30-gallon triple-rinsed pesticide drums, which would otherwise have been disposed of in landfills, were collected and properly recycled. The program is endorsed by Cornell Cooperative Extension, the Agricultural Container Recycling Council, Soil and Water Conservation Districts, the New York Farm Bureau, and related agricultural associations.

CleanSweepNY services are available to agricultural and non-agricultural professional pesticide applicators, schools, and certain businesses that use pesticides such as golf courses, cemeteries, and marinas. Homeowners cannot participate, but information about reducing household hazardous waste is available on DEC's website.

Marie became a New York State certified English teacher, and taught in public high schools in the Finger Lakes and Voorheesville High School. She spent the majority of her teaching career at Schalmont High School in Rotterdam. After 26 years of teaching, she retired, spending time with William visiting historical sites, and learning more about state history and American history. Above all activities, reading was her first love, and sharing books with her husband, children, grandchildren, students and friends always brought great joy to her.

Relatives and friends were invited to the Applebee Funeral Home, 403 Kenwood Avenue, Delmar, New York. A Mass of Christian Burial was at St. Matthew's Church, 25 Mountainview Street, Voorheesville, New York 12186. Interment will follow at Mount Pleasant Cemetery in New Salem.

Mary was actively involved in the N.Y.S. Retired Teachers Association and served on the board of the Bethlehem Humanity Institute for Lifelong Learning. A particular highlight in her life was the year she spent travelling the British Isles on a literature sabbatical.

Mary was a thirty-year member of the GFWC Delmar Progress Club, serving as club president and chairman of multiple committees at the local, district and state level.

She claimed her success in these positions because of her well-known "teacher voice."

Mary never needed a microphone! She was an avid advocate on saving the environment and never failed in addressing issues regarding the well-being of our planet.

Mary loved opera and especially enjoyed her opera trips to New Mexico, Florida and abroad. She enjoyed classical music, books, and travel. She was a devoted Red Sox fan as well. Guilderland upset by CBA GUILDERLAND — The Brothers scored 13 points in the fourth quarter to upset the Dutchmen in the Class AA semifinals.

CBA, the No. 3 seed, ended the season with a 7-2 record and will take on the No. 2 seed Shenendehowa on Friday for the championship. Shen upset the No. 1 seed Shaker in the other semifinal matchup on Friday, Nov. 5.

Against Guilderland, the Brothers struck first on a 35-yard pass from quarterback Donald Jones to Jesse Goebel.

In the fourth quarter, after a blocked punt caused by a bad snap, Guilderland running back Devon McClaine tied it up on a one-yard run. But, CBA running back Brendan Simek gave the brothers the lead with a touchdown in the fourth and Jones followed up with a four-yard run of his own to round out the scoring.

The Brothers stingy defense held Guilderland, which ends the season 5-3, to just 53 yards overall.

Candidate says thank you

To the Editor,
I would like to take this opportunity to thank the residents of Bethlehem for putting your trust in me to serve as your town board member. I intend to continue earning your trust each and everyday, working collaboratively with residents, businesses and community groups from all across town.

I am grateful for the support I received and I feel privileged to have met so many people from our wonderful community during the last several months.

We all care so much for our town. We have many different perspectives, but we all have one thing in common – our desire to see the best for our community. We all want Bethlehem to be the best place to live, raise kids, pursue our dreams, own a small business and retire. And after knocking on approximately 3,000 doors, I believe that even more today than I when I started this journey back in January.

I will work tirelessly to make Bethlehem a place we can all be proud to call home. I am committed to ensuring everyone's voice is heard, respected and considered because at the end of the day it is always more important to get it right than to be right.

I am eager to begin our work together and to demonstrate that inclusiveness is the best way to move forward.

Finally, I want to thank my wife and daughters who were by my side and so understanding while I was out meeting voters and learning about issues important to residents. I could not have done this without their support.

Again, thank you for putting your faith in me. Let's get to work!

— David R. DeCancio

Time to get talking about Delaware Ave together as a town

Dear Editor,

The voters are spoken. It's time for the Town Board to meet with residents and businesses and discuss the future for that 1.3 mile stretch of Delaware Avenue. Everyone agrees that safety is a priority, that the speed limit needs to be lowered and that traffic calming measures are needed. We need to see what can be done to improve that stretch of road, hopefully with the help of state and federal funding.

The stories behind the music

You're invited to a Listening Party this month highlighting the music of Laura Nyro, an American singer-songwriter who wrote dozens of pop hits in the '60s and '70s. We'll listen to Nyro's own recordings of her big pop hits and explore her enchanting and inspiring, music.

At a Listening Party, you have the chance to share your personal impressions and memories with fellow music lovers, rediscover milestones in music history, and talk about the artists

Shai Vosner, originally set to appear with the Symphony in March 2020, will play Brahms Piano Concerto No. 1. as Albany Symphony returns to Troy Savings Bank Music Hall

By MICHAEL HALLISEY
halliseym@spotlightnews.com

TROY — Shai Vosner was just steps outside his home in New York City when he received word that the Albany Symphony had postponed its show for what was then an emerging novel coronavirus spreading across the globe. The acclaimed pianist was prepared to trek 150 miles north to join the orchestra on stage, and with a ring of his cell phone, it was taken away.

Now — 20 months later — he's going to follow through with that plan. He's to make his Albany Symphony debut, and for him he finds the show to be "almost symbolic."

BUZZED DRIVING IS DRUNK DRIVING

“Coming to play with the Symphony is especially meaningful to me right now,” Wosner said. “Not only because I am looking forward to working with David Alan Miller again and with the orchestra for the first time, but also because our previous plan together, back in March 2020, was my first concert that got cancelled as everything shut down.

“So, as we are all longing to regain normalcy, it feels almost symbolic that we get to pick up where we left off.”

The Albany Symphony returns to Troy Savings Bank Music Hall for the first time since January 2020 for concerts at 3 p.m. and 7:30 p.m. on Saturday, Nov. 13. The program features Franz Joseph Haydn’s Symphony No. 96, “The Miracle,” the East Coast Premiere of fan-favorite composer Viet Cuong’s Next Week’s Trees, and Wosner playing Johannes Brahms’ monumental Piano Concerto No. 1.

Wosner hasn’t been sitting on his hands. Last year he released “Schubert Piano Sonatas.” It was released on Onyx Classics just as the pandemic hit, too. Off which he has been described as “Schubertian of unfaltering authority and character” by Gramophone. Of course he’s performed the works of other classic composers. He’s said it’s best to appreciate a composer’s work through all incarnations — concertos, recitals and chamber music. But, of all of them, Franz Schubert is his favorite. He can’t explain why. “It’s easier to describe something you like,” he said. “It’s impossible to explain why you love something.”

Wosner spent his 2020, like everyone else, doing online talks with the Philadelphia Chamber Music Society and New York Philharmonic; the latter of whom he eloquently described how to perform while “in the zone.”

Everyone appreciates the phrase that succinctly describes that surreal feeling of total immersion in the act. He takes it another step, helping students understand how to achieve such a state. In a Frank Herbert kind of fashion, he lays down the act of listening in three acts. There’s the act of envisioning the sound of the key before it is played, the subsequent action of listening to the note as it resonates through the room, and the ability to recall the texture of that sound to play it later.

“I guess I noticed over time that it’s inevitable,” he said. You have to [listen ahead, listen in the moment and listen back] to have a scope of the piece. And when the piece is more than just a minute or two, then immediately you’re talking about somehow planning your way through it,” he said.

When Wosner takes the stage on Saturday night, he is to play

Shai Wosner has a love for Franz Schubert, as documented in 2020 CD release, but his admiration for chamber music leaves him no stranger to Johannes Brahms.

— Jamie Jung

Viet Cuong is renowned as one of the brightest young composers today. The Albany Symphony will feature his work as well on Saturday.

— Aaron Jay Young

Brahms’ Piano Concerto No. 1. It was the German composer’s first orchestral piece performed and widely approved by an audience. It may also be the Albany Symphony director’s favorite concerto.

“Brahms’ First Piano Concerto may just be my favorite concerto in the entire repertoire,” said Miller, “the work with which young Brahms burst upon the musical scene, revealing all his glorious gifts, his powerful sense of drama, aching lyricism, an absolute explosion of the most beautiful musical ideas imaginable.

“The chance to hear it in the gorgeous, acoustically perfect Troy Savings Bank Music Hall, alongside a sparkling Haydn symphony and a great new piece by Viet Cuong is my idea of musical heaven.”

Cuong’s “Next Week’s Trees,” inspired by a poem by Mary Oliver, was premiered earlier this year by the California Symphony, where Cuong is composer-in-residence. His previous collaborations with the Albany Symphony include the 2017 premiere of “Re(new)al,” a work for percussion quartet and the genre-bending Symphony ensemble Dogs of Desire.

The evening performance of this program, along with all Albany Symphony subscription concerts this season, is also being streamed live online to increase access for patrons who cannot attend in person, or live too far away to come to the concert hall. Tickets (including livestream access) start at $20 and are available at albanysymphony.com.

In accordance with local guidelines and in coordination with our partner venues, the Albany Symphony has adopted health and safety protocols for the wellbeing of all patrons, musicians, and staff. From now until the end of November 2021, patrons will be required to present proof of full COVID-19 vaccination and matching ID upon arrival, or, alternatively, proof of a negative COVID-19 PCR test result taken within 48 hours of the event. Patrons will be required to wear masks while indoors, regardless of vaccination status. These measures are being implemented for the safety of our patrons and may be extended or amended at any time if guidance or regulations change.

WHAT'S HAPPENING

'Legends of Rock' to roll The Egg

Saturday's show is a Blue Star Mothers and Veteran benefit concert

ALBANY — The legends of music past will come back and welcome fans to enjoy the return of "the Sixties."

A Capital District ensemble of talent assembled by Gary Weinlein's Classic Rock Productions will recreate the nostalgic era of music on Saturday, Nov. 13, at 7:30 p.m., at the Egg's Hart Theatre.

It is the production's 12th year performing throughout the Northeast, and Weinlein said it is arguably the biggest and most believable tribute concert in the U.S. today.

"Seeing is believing, and if you like classic rock music you will love this

Tommy Love performs as Mick Jagger. Classic Rock Productions

The 1920s and 30s were a kind of golden age for rail travel in the U.S., a period when railroads were portrayed as modern amenities that carried passengers to romantic getaways in luxury and comfort. The Clark Art Institute
Erin Shirreff- This yearlong exhibition in public spaces around the Clark examines Erin Shirreff's practice—between analog and digital media, two and three dimensions, and still and moving images—and its fascination with the mythmaking behind art history. Through photographic manipulations of sculptures found in books, and ones of her own making, Shirreff asks what is left of the original experience of an artwork once it has entered the historical record, and what traces of an artist's labor might still be legible after the fact. The exhibition includes photographs on paper and aluminum that have been creased and cut, to take on sculptural dimensions, as well as the artist's video work. Open: Now- January 2nd, 2021. New York State Museum Thomas Hart Benton

In 1956 Thomas Hart Benton was commissioned by Robert Moses, chairman of the New York Power Authority, to create two murals for the powerhouse building of the state's first hydropower facility in Massena. Alternately titled The Seneca Discover the French and Jacques Cartier Discovers the Indians, the murals depict the 16th-century encounters from two points of view. These life groups were on view at the Museum when it was at the State Education Building.

The original building in Massena where these murals were displayed is now closed to the public. They were removed and conserved beginning in 2018 and are

Alisa Sikelianos-Carter: In the Eye of Belonging- Sikelianos-Carter asserts that Black features are a manifestation of a sacred and divine technology that has served as a means of survival, both physically and metaphysically. She envisions a cosmically bountiful world that celebrates and pays homage to ancestral majesty, power, and aesthetics. Inspired by traditionally Black hairstyles, Sikelianos-Carter uses web and catalog-sourced images to construct new archetypes. Dieting doesn't mean giving up

Prepare your favorite foods with nutrition in mind

Beloved dishes and comfort foods share some common elements, notably their flavor and ability to quell hunger pangs. However, those creamy mac-and-cheese recipes or buffalo wings also may share some less savory characteristics, including a lack of nutrition.

Various popular dishes are made from ingredients that are high in saturated fats and calories. In fact, Nutritionix, a nutritional information reporting company, indicates the average one-cup serving of homemade macaroni and cheese measures in at 510 calories, with 29 grams of total fat and 16 grams, or 80 percent of the total daily recommended value, of saturated fat.

Certain foods also may be cooked through less healthy techniques, such as frying. But rest assured that being fit and healthy doesn't mean having to give up on tasty comfort foods. Just about any recipe can get a healthy makeover. Consider these cooking tips that can make popular dishes a little more nutritious.

Use an air fryer

Frying makes everything from chicken to fries to sliced vegetables more delectable. But with that crispy coating and juicy interior comes the addition of fat and calories from the oil. Healthline says a small baking potato contains 93 calories and 0 grams of fat. The same amount of French fries contains 319 calories and 17 grams of fat when fried.

Air fryers can simulate the benefits of deep frying without the negative side effects. An air fryer uses heat and air (convection) to mimic the results of deep frying with little-to-no oil.

Ditch the cream

Thick and tasty dishes like fettuccine alfredo involve the use of cream. Using low-fat milk that's thickened with flour or cornstarch instead of cream can make such dishes a little healthier. Thickened low-fat milk trims more than 680 calories and 53 grams of saturated fat per cup off of recipes that call for heavy cream, according to EatingWell.com.

Swap mayo for Greek yogurt

Potato salads and cole slaws are prized for their creamy and tangy flavors. These sides can be made more nutritious by replacing mayonnaise with a thick Greek yogurt as the base of the dressings. Greek yogurt adds live and active cultures that can improve gut health, and the yogurt also will cut down on the calories and fat in the recipe. Greek yogurt also can be used in onion or vegetable dips for snack platters.

Cook with the right pans

Cast-iron, nonstick or enamel-coated pans and skillets require less oil or butter while cooking to prevent foods from sticking. That translates into roughly 120 fewer calories per tablespoon of oil.

Taste before seasoning

Replace salt with other herbs and spices that can add flavor without extra sodium. In addition, always taste the recipe before adding more salt, as it very well may be fine without it, suggests Harvard Medical School.

Tweaking recipes can make it possible to enjoy your favorite foods without sacrificing nutrition.

Try vegan

FOOD and VINO

Spinach and Mushroom Pita

Veganism is marked by a choice to abstain from the use of animal products, including in one's diet. It is different from vegetarianism because vegetarians may consume some animal products, namely eggs, milk and honey, while vegans will not.

There are many benefits to adopting a plant-based diet. Over the last several years, scientists have discovered veganism may be linked to a healthier heart, lower blood pressure, weight loss, and reduced risk of cancer. It also may help minimize risk of stroke. However there is still much research to be done.

Anyone looking for flavorful plant-based recipes can try this recipe for "Spinach and Mushroom Pita" from "The Mediterranean Diet Cookbook" (Rockridge Press) from the editors of Rockridge Press. This easy pita can make a healthful lunch full of freshness and flavor.

INGREDIENTS: Serves 2

- 2 cups baby spinach leaves
- 1 small red onion, thinly sliced
- 1/2 cup button mushrooms, sliced
- 1/2 cup alfalfa sprouts
- 1 tomato, chopped
- 1/2 small cucumber
- 2 tablespoons olive oil
- Juice of 1 lemon
- Sea salt and freshly ground pepper, to taste
- 2 whole-grain pita pockets

INSTRUCTIONS

Combine all the vegetables, olive oil and lemon juice in a bowl, and season with sea salt and freshly ground pepper to taste. Toss the salad until well mixed. Stuff the vegetable mixture into the pita pockets and serve immediately.

THEATRE REVIEW

Confettifest XVII puts women center stage

By PATRICK WHITE
nippertown.com

ALBANY — ConfettiFest came roaring back to the stage with a celebration of women that had some of the finest actors in the Capital District doing great work in five original one-act plays and in one spectacular, scalding performance threatening to reduce the Masonic Lodge on Corning Place to ashes.

The evening started in a minor key with the very fine Robin Leary being coaxed back to life after months of quarantining. The play was “Grace Notes” by Ingrid Madelyne and it was directed by Peter Kantor. The other two characters in the play, played by Deborah Mazzone and Amy Hausknecht, are just there to serve Robin’s growth. Mazzone is unfortunately staged in shadows or unbelievably behind latticework the entire play but makes her presence felt with only her voice. Robin, miraculously, makes the conversion moving and important.

“Orlando at Dawn” is a very diverting road trip by Judith Barlow, directed by Tristin Strasser. Kristin Crouch (so good in SLCA’s “Pipeline”) and Mathena Rush are Aunt and niece heading to Orlando with fun conversation, variety of action and not much conflict beyond which theme park to choose. It’s not for nothing but these two could make a day long car ride very enjoyable.

The evening ignites with “Desert Roses” by Sean Baldwin (Confetti’s President), directed by Yvonne Perry. From the entrance of Rachel Jenack as a masked Bandit and Sarabelle Wrigley as a bound damsel, this pulp Western commands your attention, mostly from Jenack’s alternatively forceful and laconic performance. She has a pitch perfect dialect, livewire physicality and a thoroughly imagined emotional life that made me gasp. That Wrigley can hold her own and even wrest your attention to her plight is no small thing. The play is jam packed with story and I’m not confident in recalling the particulars but it was never less than watchable, mostly due to Rachel.

Rachel Jenack shows up in a different role after intermission in Laura Darling’s “Gravity” and tops her own performance in the previous play as a sexual abuse survivor who schedules an emergency session with her therapist (a persistent Michelle Sanders) after an encounter in a bar that evening. The marriage of playwright, performer and subject explodes on stage. There were numerous times when I could hear Laura’s voice in Rachel’s performance, especially using caustic humor to “deflect” as Michelle says. The power and emotional specificity of Jenack’s rage riveted my attention throughout and what should have repelled me, her high-pitched banshee scream, only drew me closer because of the uncompromising intelligence that lived in every syllable. A performance that will live a very long time with those who attend. Michelle Sanders had a strong moment at the end of the encounter supporting her patient’s growth and progress by noting her call for help. The play would greatly benefit from rethinking the therapist’s role, giving her more agency and stakes in the encounter.

ConfettiFest XVII continues the company’s tradition of creating many opportunities for actors to try on all sorts of roles, as a great training ground for playwrights and directors to learn and develop their craft and as a showcase for all of us to see the process of creating theater. The evening was two hours and forty-five minutes and would have been much improved by being at least half an hour shorter. This year had an exceptionally strong cast of women actors, especially needed when the bulk of the area’s stages are dominated by roles for men even though there are far fewer men in the Capital Region acting pool. Brava ConfettiFest!

ConfettiFest runs through Sunday, Nov. 14.

Underground music

ALBANY — Empire Underground, the Capital City’s newest downtown club, promised to be an edgy, new venue before it finally opened its doors to a nearly sold-out crowd on Saturday, Nov. 6. The venue opened with The Ryan Montbleau Band. The blues singer out of Boston got people to fill the room. Greg Bell of Guthrie/Bell Productions said it was a cool, new room that “was not even a venue” a week ago. Nonetheless, he sees great potential. “It is a work in progress but definitely has the potential to be “ the” midsize club in the Capital District,” Bell said. Patrons were directed from the front doors of Empire Live to the side entrance on Columbia Street. The threshold of the alleyway was dimly lit except once one walked closer to the doorway. The mid-sized room that was once the basement of the former Capital Repertory Theatre is not fancy. The concrete sarcophagus looks like the first place someone would run to in order to survive a nuclear attack.

And that’s why it’s so cool.
