READERS REPLY TO CRITICISM OF SUNDAY MOWING, CALL PRACTICE ``UNAVOIDABLE''

Last week we printed a letter which deplored the use of power mowers and similar noisy machinery on Sunday. We asked for comments from other readers . . . and we got plenty. Today, we are printing a few of the views from the Let-'Em-Mow-on-Sunday side of the fence. They seemed interesting enough to put on Page One.

To The Spotlight:

In reference to the "violation" of the Sabbath (which was made for man, and not the other way), it must be noted that Sunday is not a universal day of rest. There are those among us who observe another day. Secondly, many residents of our area work six days a week; Sunday is the only day they have to trim their lawns and keep their homes up, lest letters to the editor decry overgrown lawns and rundown homes.

Some among us work for relaxation; their idea of a day of rest after five or six days in a shop or office is to work on the soil and beautify their dwellings.

Our Father's house has many mansions; let all of us be free to observe the Sabbath as we see it best. Let neighbors settle their legitimate differences individually, but let us not condone the idea of a "town ordinance" which would penalize many for the idiosyncracies of a few.

A Delmar Resident To The Spotlight:

In answer to the letter print-

At a recent meeting of the Bethlehem Senior Citizens in Delmar, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Bender (second couple from right) were honored with a surprise celebration of their 50th wedding anniversary. Mr. Bender is president of the organization. Shown with the honored couple are (left to right) Mr. and Mrs. Walter Wright, Mr. Harry Waltermire (Mrs. Waltermire was absent), Mr. and Mrs. Bender and Mr. and Mrs. John Murray. All are active members of the Bethlehem Senior Citizens and the married lives of these four couples total 206 years, ed in the July 23rd paper, I would like to argue my side of the story.

Agreed and quite true, Sunday is a holy day; yet, I am sure that we can respect the Sabbath and still do things essential to our living on that day. For instance, I have three pre-school children, so I must wash clothes at least once each day.

My husband works six days a week and many evenings, too. Thus, in order to accomplish some kind of order and neatness around our home, things such as mowing the lawn must be done on Sunday . . .

Generations ago, Sunday was a day allowed for nothing more than church. The meals were even cooked days before in readiness for that day. This is certainly not to be expected in our day of wonderful machines and many opportunities.

If I stopped working on Sunday, our family would go hungry! My homemaking jobs are work, just as much as anyone mowing lawns or pulling weeds and painting, which I do many times, plus my other duties. I would like to see anyone do what I do in one day and say it's not work!

"The better the day - the better the deed."

To The Spotlight:

You may find yourselves in the middle of a dandy little controversy, but I think both sides will be talking different languages. People under 30 are apt to enjoy noise; with or without words. Oldsters of 35 or even 40 are likely to be irritated by it.

Sunday Mowing To The Spotlight:

I certainly was most interested in the views expressed by a lifelong resident of the Tri-Village area, regarding the use of power mowers on Sunday, as printed in your last edition.

Yes, I do suppose that a power mower might annov a next-door neighbor, or possibly someone two, or maybe three doors away, but I really don't think that they disturb whole neighborhoods, as intimated. Now, if this "good neighbor" really wants to be just that how about the many residents in the area who burn leaves on Sunday, Spring and Fall, smoking up the whole town? Many times, when driving through the Tri-Village streets, smoke clouds from the many piles of burning leaves, obliterate almost a whole block. This, too, is most disturbing, and as such, would said lifelong resident suggest a ban on burning leaves on Sunday? Why not?

There are many Tri-Village residents who work in nearby cities five and sometimes six days a week. If these people were not allowed to mow their lawn on a Sunday, we'd have a nice looking town.

Certainly, most people are considerate enough to realize that if someone works nights and has to sleep late in the morning, they would not deliberately create a disturbance to annoy their neighbor. Well, I feel that unless it was necessary, a person surely wouldn't mow his lawn on Sunday, either. We all would like to have a day of rest — it just so happens that there are exceptions to every rule, and some folks even have to work on Sunday.

Anyone who thinks that his way of doing things is the only way of doing things, and wants all types of ordinances to back him up — why, where is our freedom? One of the best ways to be a good neighbor is to try to get along with your neighbors, and if they are doing something which annoys you, try a little reasoning and mutual consideration.

E.W.

To The Spotlight;

Although there is much truth in the article on the noise in our area on the Sabbath, perhaps the writer does not realize that most of this is a necessary evil. Our men work during the week to make it possible for us to live in this wonderful community. To keep their lawn's and houses up, they must do it weekends. Very few can afford to pay to have this done weekdays.

Perhaps a Sunday curfew of say, 2 o'clock on lawn mowing, etc., would be good for all concerned. It would also make our men relax before starting back on Monday to their various jobs.

A problem I believe much worse is the way dogs are allowed to run wild. I am not talking about the wild (?) dogs discussed in The Spotlight a while back, but about the hundreds of family pets.

I love dogs and all pets . . . but just as a child is trained to respect her family's prize flowers, etc., and not let out in the morning to run wild until it is meal time . . . those of us who have dogs should give them similar attention.

I wonder how many readers wish something could be done and are tired of cleaning up the lawn, tying up a plant, etc.?

To The Spotlight:

I have read the comments ... * and will say that the writer has * some points with which we agree. We do not think that such noise-making occupations as lawn mowing and other power equipment should be used on Sunday, provided the user should have sufficient time to do these things on other days. Sometimes people do not have old people who are very noisy - and last but not least, the untrained dogs that bark until sick folks or old and nervous people are on the verge of nervous collapse . . .

Some cocktail parties are not the best sleep inducers; neither are the loud record players or TV sets.

We who can look back 40 years can remember when the worst culprit was the old rooster who had a habit of announcing the break of day. Since we have become so modern, we will just have to bear modern disturbances and can't single out any certain day when we can have quiet by making ordinances. We will just have to make the best of it or move away back where we have no noisy neighbors and won't disturb our neighbors with our own noises.

THE PLOT OF JANUARY 18

The place: an exclusive men's club in New York City.

The subject: money.

1st plotter (dejectedly): We've written each of these guys 7 times and haven't heard a peep out of them. Might as well call it quits.

2nd plotter (hopefully): I'll bet they'd come through if we could sit down and talk to them personally. But we're running out of time, and they're scattered all over the country.

3rd plotter (enthusiastically): Let's talk to them anyway. By telephone!

Sunday afternoon, January 18: Plotters and their associates assemble in the Mark Hopkins Room of the Williams College Club, scene of the final phase of the Williams College Alumni Fund Drive. By late afternoon they have made 632 personal appeals-by telephone -to alumni in every part of the country.

Results: Nearly $6,000 in contributions from people who had not responded to 7 previous mail appeals.

Moral: Whether you want to raise funds, take advantage of a sale across town or chat with a faraway friend, the easiest, quickest, most pleasant way to do it is by phone. Yet, for all it does, the telephone is one of the biggest bargains in your budget.

ON DELMAR BY-PASS In a recent issue, we made public a request to the State Department of Public Works by the Nathaniel Adams Blanchard Post No. 1040 of The American Legion, asking for State action on the proposed Delmar by-pass from Corning Hill to the Junction of Route 85, New Scotland Avenue and Voorheesville Road.

We are happy to print an excerpt from a letter to Herbert G. Drew, Delmar, chairman of the Legion Posts Traffic Committee. Signed by J. Burch Mc-Morran, Superintendent of Public Works, the letter said:

"Thank you for your letter . . . regarding the construction of the Delmar by-pass.

"Plans for the construction of this project are now being prepared. The Department recently reviewed the preliminary plans and has now authorized the preparation of the final design plans for a construction contract. We anticipate that these plans will be ready for contract letting late in 1960 or in 1961."

Marion Sharpe, known throughout the area for her portraits, has a one-man show in the Delmar Public Library.

Mrs. Sharpe, who has recently moved to Font Grove Rd., Slingerlands, includes in her exhibit portraits, landscapes and still lifes, in both oil and watercolor.

Actually Mrs. Sharpe has had little formal instruction in art. At the age of four she began to draw on her mother's cookbook. Bridal veils and "people doing things" dominated this period and may have pinpointed in their own way the interest which developed into her portraits of today. Born in Albany and wending her way through public school, and Milne she attended Russell Sage, where George Kohler gave her a great deal of encouragement in that field. Among teachers under whom she studied for short periods of time were Eduard Buyck, well known Albany painter, Ogden Pleissner, and Lugi Lucioni. These last two both taught at the summer school of The Art Students League in Woodstock. Their advice to her was to go home and work constantly: to draw, to paint and keep at it.

When she returned to Albany, David Lithgow, a famous Albany artist, offered her the use of his studio. Mr. Lithgow, a delightful old gentleman, was 89 at the time and still an enthusiastic painter. Often he enjoyed talking of art and philosophy while Mrs. Sharpe painted or sometimes he played his cello as she worked at her easel.

Since then, she has shared a studio with Betty Lancaster, also well known throughout Albany for her portraits, and has found time to work there a number of hours each day as well as finding time to raise a family of two boys; Peter III who is 13, and Andy, 6. With her husband she has designed and gone through the pangs of building a new home which exhibits the Albany.

In contrast to Mrs. Christensen, whose exhibit of modern art was in the Library during July. Mrs. Sharpe has strong feelings on the subject of realistic or near-realistic art. She says "I think that the trend is swinging back toward the realistic approach, particularly in the field of portraiture." "However, 'she goes on to say: "Modern Art is so full of slipshod measures that the public is content with pseudo-talent. The minority have been able to impress on the majority that these are good." She feels somewhat incensed over the modern art that dominated the American Exhibit at Brussels in the World's Fair last year, and joined many critics in feeling that it is not representative of American work and fell down when compared with exnibits from other countries.

Speaking of actual techniques, Mrs. Sharpe said, "It is a pity that today nobody knows how to draw; that they don't know beans about drawing. Modern art lets students skip drawing and says 'let's express ourselves'. It is really a shame that a lot of fine talent is lost in the waters of self expression."

Marion Sharpe has taught art for a number of years in private classes, at the Institute of History and Art and part-time at the Albany Academy for Girls. Next year she will be teaching full time at the Academy. "Teaching came as a surprise," she commented, "I never thought about it until I got into it and then discovered the tremendous satisfaction one can get in passing on to someone the things one knows. By putting it into words I became more aware of things I had been doing for years quite unconsciously. It is difficult but one must not force one's own style on a student but always tell them what they need to know and let them go. Teaching does wonders for one's outlook, too; ideas become less rigid and narrow. I not only enjoy teaching, I benefit from it constantly."

Mrs. Sharpe won the Frank Stout Memorial Prize at the Berkshire Art Exhibit in 1957. She has had paintings in the Regional Show of the Albany Institute and was a charter member of the Albany Artists Group. She has painted portraits of many prominent Albanians and many of her paintings are in private collections. Two paintings are now at the Ogunquit, Maine, Art Show and she has been accepted for the list of out-of-town painters by "Portraits, Inc." of New York City.

Though with her crowded schedule there is little time for full fledged hobbies, Marion Sharpe says that old houses, antiques and ghosts are among the things that fascinate her. When there is a moment to spare, she likes to write short stories and philosophical essays.

Mrs. Sharpe's exhibit in the Library will continue through August.
