HONORS AT HARTWICK!

Byron McAlpin, a 1960 Bethlehem Central graduate and a History-Political Science major at Hartwick College, has recently been elected President of the Nu Iota chapter of Alpha Psi Omega, the national honorary dramatics fraternity. Byron was initiated into this fraternal organization last fall, and is one of the few freshmen to be so honored, membership usually being limited to Juniors and Seniors, not only at Hartwick, but at some 300 plus chapters in the country.

Byron will also be serving as the vice-president of The Cardboard Alley Players, the local dramatics group of Hartwick College, and as an elected student representative to the student senate. At the annual Cardboard Alley dinner this year, Byron was again honored by receiving the Little Theatre Oscar for best backstage performance in a major role. This award was given by the members of The Cardboard Alley Players to Byron for his Direction of "An Evening in Search Of an Objective Correlative," which consisted of readings and dramatic presentations of the poetry of Thomas Sterns Eliot.

Byron got his first taste of "grease paint" when he played the role of Bobby in his classes senior play "The Boyfriend." Since then he has served in all

Gentlemen:

Bang!

Seems like I pulled the cork on a well-fermented jug.

First, several parents are heard from who have had worse experiences than the one I complained of, and now a resounding volley from the "enemy."

Mr. Auerbach's opening statement in his letter published in your May 31 issue begins, "I humbly submit . . ."

But that is the last humbly I can find in it. His choice of adverbs was hasty.

My major complaint, outside of poking a bit of fun at the pomposity of the reports we receive from time to time on the progress of our young, is the simple, easily verified fact that my children do not know how to write. The young one in particular, but they all show a lack of skill which indicates that the substance of whatever penmanship courses they study must be deficient. Not the teachers, mind you, but the substance of the courses!

Mr. Auerbach finds in this objection nothing to criticize, or at least no defense of the present program was offered.

Instead, he recommends me to a qualified counselor, suggests that my communications with my offspring are deficient, and infers (I mean assumes, you educators) that we are out of contact with our children's teachers. And that in voicing a complaint in public about an apparent defect in our educational system, I am indulging in a "personal emotional catharsis."

Sounds to me like he worked off a pretty good purge, himself.

Just for the record, communications with my young are lucid if monosyllabic; my primitive attitude on simple rewards and punishments together with love and understanding seems to be producing people a cut above the average in manners, behavior, and performance; our contact with teachers has been so pleasant that they often return without a problem to discuss; and if the new procedures Mr. Auerbach mentions in parent-child communications perform like some of the other things I have complained about, I'm not sure I'm interested. I'll stay primitive.

I may be guilty of a misjudgment, but I get the distinct feeling that in Mr. Auerbach's letter the Voice of Authority is chiding a vocal upstart and restoring him to his place at the end of the line.

Nothing is so hard to raise successfully as a child. Most parents know this; know that the routine duties of making and keeping a home chew up most of their available hours and leave precious little time for the principal reason for the home - its children.

So they hire competent professionals to take over in areas where they are unable or unqualified to perform. They hire them, Mr. Auerbach, and they pay them, and they have a right to expect results. And if they chide them, they have a right to expect a constructive response, if a response is called for.

Criticism is a lot easier to produce than results, but this applies both ways.

Very truly yours,
K.S. Ruthman

To the Editor of the Spotlight:

Having had five children in our Bethlehem Central system, I have read with interest recent letters criticizing our schools. While I would not deny that there is some basis for criticism, there is one point upon which I would insist. Any parent who has had enough interest to get to know the Bethlehem teachers and school administrators to whom they entrust their children will find that the vast majority are very sincerely dedicated to the job they are attempting to do.

Should we, therefore, give them "A" for effort, and close our eyes to the deficiencies in the system? Not at all. The only ways in which a group of sincere people can be assisted to do their job better are to work more closely with them and give them more support. Moral support will not hurt. But there is another kind of support that counts a lot more. This spring our School Board was too timid to raise teachers' salaries, because they felt that the taxpayers of the district would not support such a raise. If we wish to assure that our children are not the victims of inexperienced teaching, and avoid their being subjected to incompetents that have been cast off by some other school system, we must make certain that salaries offered will provide for the best. Next spring, I hope there will be many "indignant fathers" at the school meeting who will demand that taxes be raised to bolster salaries. Our Bethlehem Central system can easily slide into the quagmire of mediocrity by paying their teachers mediocre salaries, and every citizen - whether parent or not - will be the loser.

TWO NEW PROGRAMS AT JUNIOR COLLEGE OF ALBANY

Two new programs, within the area of Liberal Arts, will begin at the Junior College of Albany this September, it was announced by Dr. W. Robert Holmes, Dean. The programs are Pre-Physical Therapy and Pre-Law. With the addition of these programs, the number of areas of study at the Junior College will total six, all of which are two-year, Associate degree programs. The other offerings available are: Liberal Arts, Business Administration, General Business, Secretarial Science.

Both the new Pre-Physical Therapy and Pre-Law programs were organized with the assistance and cooperation of baccalaureate colleges working in these fields. The addition of these programs broadens the possibilities of diversification in college work for the Capital District Area student who finds it necessary to do at least part of his college work near home.

The Pre-Physical Therapy program is basically the liberal arts course with an emphasis on laboratory sciences and related fields.

The Pre-Law program is based on the same liberal arts study, but emphasizes more strongly the social sciences such as sociology, psychology, government, history and economics. Laboratory science and mathematics are also required.

THRUWAY OF POWER IS NOW IN OPERATION

Ceremonies marking the completion of a 345,000-volt "Thruway of Power" from Utica to Yonkers, were held recently along the new transmission lines at the nearby Dutchess County community of Pleasant Valley. The new circuits will permit the state's two largest electric companies to quadruple their ability to exchange power.

More than 150 industrial, business and civic leaders from all parts of the state took part in the symbolic occasion at which Charles E. Eble, president of Consolidated Edison Company of New York, and Earle J. Machold, president of Niagara Mohawk Power Corporation, officiated.

The new facility spans the 220 miles from Utica to New York City. New York State now has a 345,000-volt electric transmission backbone which links New York City and Upstate New York with unprecedented transmission capacity.

Just 30 years ago this month the two companies completed an earlier interconnection at approximately one-third the voltage of the new system.

As a feature of the formalities, Mr. Eble and Mr. Machold, acting as "groundmen" for lineman working high in a transmission tower, hoisted canvas bags containing golden bolts used to link the final segment of the extra high voltage circuits.

Brief talks followed a luncheon on the grounds of the Pleasant Valley substation where Con Edison's, Niagara Mohawk's and Central Hudson Gas & Electric Corporation's systems join.

'Family Tradition' Strong At Albany Business College

Maintaining a "family tradition" seems to be a sustaining force in student enrollments at Albany Business College - records over the past 105 years reading like an educational family tree.

When new classes begin each September and February, it's not a rarity to find a new student who can claim a relative somewhere along the line who was previously graduated from Albany Business College.

In some instances, this family tradition of earning an ABC diploma goes through four generations of the same family.

Today's student body of over 500 young men and women includes 13 students who have had sisters graduate from ABC, seven had brothers, 42, cousins; two, grandmothers; two, grandfathers, nine; mothers, four, fathers; 18, aunts; 19, uncles; two, brothers-in-law and two, great aunts. That's a total of 120 present students who are carrying on the ABC family tradition.

Incidentally, this family tradition is also evident in the administration of the Albany school. Prentiss Camell III, the present secretary-treasurer, is the fourth generation of the Camell family to serve the school.

Although following a family tradition seems constant at the Washington Avenue school, changes in curriculum and physical facilities are continually being made to keep up with the changing times.

ABC will carry out another phase in its limited expansion program beginning with the fall semester. In an attempt to better serve the business education needs of the student community, the Albany school plans to expand its school day.

Revision of the traditional school day (9 A.M. to 3 P.M.) will permit fuller use of the school facilities and at the same time allow for a larger number of students.

The same full curriculums, leading to one and two-year diplomas in Business Administration-Accounting and Secretarial training, will be offered at varying times during the enlarged school day.

The present faculty staff of 23 will be augmented by the addition of four new teachers to work with the additional classes.

The summer school program, which begins July 9, is revised annually. The 1962 summer school runs a full six weeks,
