Dolls, Dolls!

What has become a tradition, the Christmastime display of dolls, will be open to the public at National Savings Bank, 90 State Street, Albany from November 30 through December 6. This is the thirteenth year The Salvation Army has made available dolls which are dressed by various groups. Responsible this year for the 1400 different costumes are New York Telephone Company, Altamont Post #7662, Veterans of Foreign Wars Auxiliary and the following departments and sections of the New York State offices: Audit and Control, Civil Service, Commerce, Employment (Addressograph and Field Audits), Labor (Employment and Research), Public Works (Finance and Right of Way), Social Welfare, Taxation and Thruway Authority in Elsmere.

All of the dolls will be given to little girls, many of whom might not receive a gift if it were not for The Salvation Army and its many friends.

Individual patients in the Veterans' Hospital, Albany, will be able to choose dolls to be given as Christmas gifts by them to their own little girls. This distribution will take place the morning of December 8. About 700 of the dolls will be selected as workers help The Salvation Army in spreading this good cheer throughout the hospital.

Christmas morning and during the year, some patients in children's wards of local hospitals will receive dolls.

The Salvation Army Toy Shop will open on December 21. Dolls and toys, gift-wrapped, all ready for Santa Claus, will be selected (without charge) by mothers for the little girls and boys in their families.

Co-chairmen of the display are Mrs. Clifford Allanson of

Treasure Tree

There will be a Treasure Tree in the Delmar Library in early December. The Treasure Tree is a unique Christmas tree trimmed entirely by Tri-Villagers and their friends with trimmings destined to travel all over the world.

The trimmings may be sweaters, bootees, mittens, blankets, or blanket squares, balls of yarn, Surprise balls (just wind yarn around a toy), sewing kits and school supplies. The American Friends Service Committee (Quakers) sponsor the Treasure Tree, and will see to it that the gifts reach the children who need them.

Will you start your knitting now? Will you help to make this year's Treasure Tree beautiful to see, and a joy to children who need Christmas particularly this year?

Delmar and Mrs. Thomas Hale, Slingerlands. More than 50 hostesses will give time during the week of the display. These women are members of the Albany Salvation Army Advisory Board and interested friends. Helping to prepare the display are Mrs. Leslie Edsall, Mrs. Henry Schiller, Mrs. B. G. Dewell, Mrs. George Winegard and officers of The Salvation Army. Mrs. Brigadier F. William Carlson is project chairman.

Tulip Queen, Bonnie Mason, will be present at noon-time on the opening day of the exhibit in the bank.

Delmar Public Library and John Pruyn Library will have displays during the beginning of December. Dolls dressed by V.F.W. Auxiliary, Altamont, and Thruway Authority will be seen at Delmar Library, arranged by Mrs. Hollis Harrington and Mrs. Barbara Rau, Librarian.

Horse Story

It's easy to see how a drug store clerk might wind up in a nursing profession, but when the same person suddenly finds trotters and pacers occupying all of her spare time, that's a horse of a different color.

"What I really wanted was a nice saddle horse," explains Sadie Sweet, a lifelong resident of Bennington, Vermont, "but then it was suggested that if I bought a race horse first it might pay for my saddle horse, so I took the chance."

This was in 1963 and Sadie's only visit to a race track had been here at Saratoga Raceway the year before.

"At the time, I thought Saratoga was a beautiful spot," Sadie recalled the other day, "but I thought that race horses were only for the wealthy people, so I didn't think too much about it."

She remembers, too, becoming upset with her brother Ralph Knapp of Woodford, Vermont, when he introduced the original pari-mutuel racing bill before the Vermont Legislature.

"I thought it was just terrible that anyone would want to spend their time around a race track," she explains with a laugh now.

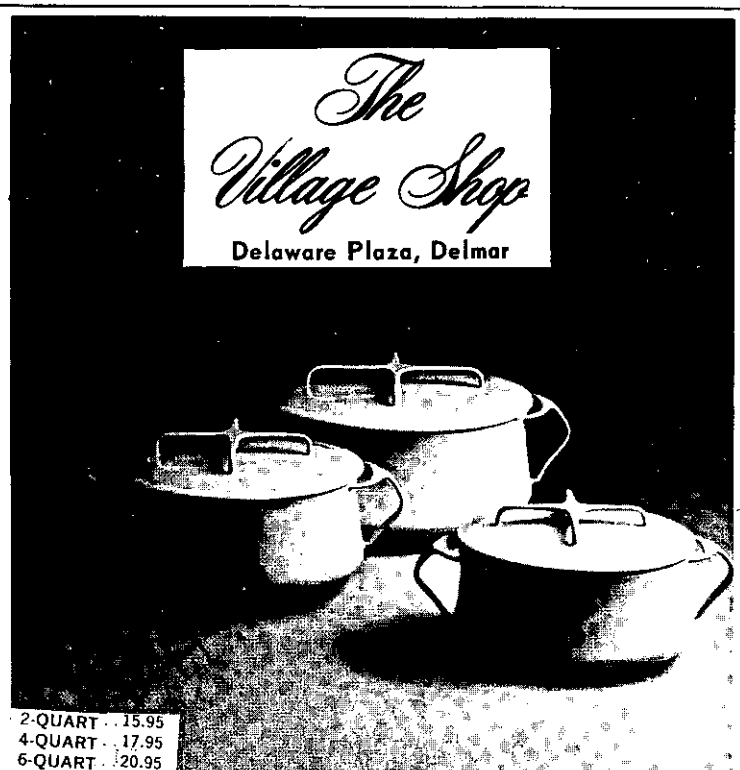

But, let's get back to that suggestion about letting a race horse pay for the saddle horse she wanted so badly.

Almost before she knew what was happening, Sadie found herself up in Lewiston, Me., purchasing a five-year-old horse named Junior Mite for $1,000. He had won only one race at the time and was regarded as somewhat of an outlaw because of his manners.

Nevertheless, the well known Bennington trainer-driver Noel Olin finally made a gentleman out of Junior Mite, drove him to a mark of 2:03 3/5 and he became the star of Sadie's stable.

says Sadie, "he has carried the stable. If it wasn't for him, I wouldn't have the others," she continues in reference to three more that are racing and another pair currently turned out.

There is also no question as to Sadie's favorite.

"My biggest thrill is just watching Junior Mite race, no matter where he finishes," she says.

Incidentally, she has received an offer of $20,000 for the Bud Mite gelding, but wouldn't think of parting with him.

Duffette was the second horse she purchased and, after buying Joy's Golly and Jimmy Wic, neither of which are racing at the time, she acquired Success Comet and Nab via the claiming route this season and has also seen them come through with flying colors.

And, as her stable has grown, so has her interest and enthusiasm.

"I come over from Bennington just about every day," she reports, "and I really want to start doing some jogging this winter."

Oh, yes, about that saddle horse.

Sadie says she wouldn't have time for one now anyway, but what she would really like is six or eight more race horses, so that she could race one string in the south during the winter and another up north here in the spring and summer.

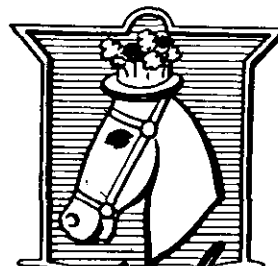

Are you listening Junior Mite?

There, we've said it and we're glad.

No, we don't have parking for 2000 cars, but you've probably only got one or two cars in your family. And you've always been able to park.

And we don't take 8-page ads in the Downtown papers. But after all, we're not trying to sell the Great North-east. We're not even trying to cover Troy, Schenectady and maybe Saratoga, too (although we've only nice things to say about those cities).

No, we're specialists. We specialize in the Bethlehem area. It's a big area and growing, and we're proud of it. And we love you if you live NEAR Bethlehem too.

We want to please you. We want to fill our stores with all the wonderful Christmas things we know you love; show them to you; wrap them for you and send you on your way with the right things, not merely what we can sell you.

After all, you're our neighbors, our customers, our friends. When we please YOU (NOT Chicago, Los Angeles, not New Orleans), we know we've done our job well.

Each year at this time of year the American Legion Auxiliary Units throughout this area participate in one of their favorite activities in a project well-known as "Gift Shop" at the Albany Veteran's Administration Hospital. An abundance of gifts are either bought or made by Auxiliary members and donated to the Shop so that patients may choose for their wives, children, parents and members of their immediate household a gift to be mailed in time to spread Christmas cheer. Ambulant patients and those in wheel chairs come to the shop to make selections for their families, while hospital carts are loaded with gifts and wheeled to the bed sides of those who are bedfast. These gifts, which are given without any exchange of money for there is no cash register at Gift Shop, are then gift-wrapped and mailed at the expense of the Auxiliaries.

How To Simplify Your Housework

No matter how large your family or how much time you spend on housework, you may be able to make your daily chores easier, have more time for fun and family by heeding a few tips from the experts.

By simplifying your work, you can save energy and lots of time as well. For in cleaning a house, as in winning a spouse, the right techniques can save you hours, weeks, even years of effort.

First of all, find your own rhythmic, relaxed way of doing things and stick to it. Playing music while you work, for example, may help you relax. Hasty thinking and hasty working seldom accomplish what you want - and cost you more time in the long run.

By organizing your jobs so that you can stay on one floor of your home or in one area of your apartment until you have completed them, you can save yourself a lot of unnecessary steps. A table on wheels can be used for assembling and transporting food, dishes, groceries, cleaning supplies, laundry and many other things from place to place. It also saves heavy lifting and provides welcome extra work space where it is needed.

When you tackle those cleaning jobs, make sure you're using the most convenient appliances you can afford. Long-handled dust pans, brooms, and mops will spare you a lot of stooping. Two dust mits, one for each hand, speed the cleaning chore. You'll save time and trouble by keeping all your cleaning supplies together in a basket.

The clothes you wear for doing your chores can make a big difference in how much you can accomplish during the day and how you'll feel afterwards. Blue jeans help you to be more comfortable while you take care of the house. They give you more freedom of movement, too, which enables you to get things done with greater ease.

Take a load off your feet by sitting to do your work whenever you can. You can sit to do a wide range of tasks - ironing, cleaning vegetables, feeding the baby.

When you sit to iron, for example, the chair should support your back and be comfortable in height to permit you to use the same arm movements as when you stand. First assemble everything you need within easy reach. Place dampened clothes at your left (preferably on a portable table) and set a rack to hold ironed clothes at your right.

Washday woes? If you're the mother of a growing, rambunctious family, don't forget the youngsters when you go out shopping for your own blue jeans. While kids love blue jeans for their handsome, rugged appearance, you'll love them for their easy-care qualities when washday rolls around.

Every housewife spends a great deal of time in the kitchen, but you can make cooking and doing dishes less bothersome with these work-savers. Store seasonings, serving dishes and utensils needed at the stove right next to your range on easy-to-reach shelves. You may find open shelves preferable because they make it easier to get at supplies. Many utensils such as stirring spoons and pancake turners can be hung on walls near the stove. You'll do less stooping while preparing family meals if your stove has a high oven.

The height of your kitchen sink is also important. If it's too low, you strain your back by stooping to do dishes. A rack in the sink underneath your dishpan will raise it to a more comfortable height. When washing dishes, always scald dishes and let them drain dry. When you don blue jeans for cooking and cleaning up after meals, you won't be so worried about spilling stuff on your non-washable, expensive-to-dryclean clothes. They also help contribute to household safety by keeping your mind on what you're doing, no matter how messy.

After you've gotten to the habit of practicing these steps, you'll be pleased to find that housework needn't be household drudgery. And who knows - the whole family may enjoy the change!

... WATER THROUGH THE AGES ...

What has been the single most important factor in the development of mankind? Water! Without it a person would die within a few days. Throughout history it has been one of man's most valuable resources.

The first civilizations developed in the river valleys of the Nile, the Tigris and the Ganges. These rivers provided early man with drinking water and irrigation for the crops he grew. Where man squandered his water, civilization failed. The first catastrophes were the result of failing to plan ahead. And so primitive man, aware of water's vast importance, began building reservoirs to store it and aqueducts to carry it from one place to another.

Excavations have uncovered one aqueduct built in the Nile Valley as early as 2000 B. C. Traces of ancient wells, reservoirs and aqueducts have also been discovered in such diverse places as China and Central America. But none of these systems could compare in efficiency to the modern delivery systems that carry billions of gallons that still survive, such as the forked branch of hazel, called a divining rod. When controlled by a qualified person, the rod is said, to this day, to be able to indicate by its movements the presence of water-springs.

The ancient Hebrews believed that rain was a blessing from Heaven in return for their obedience to the law. Drought, they thought, was the result of their having sinned in some way.

To the Greeks and Romans, Zeus (or Jupiter) was also considered the god of rain. The Greek rainmakers dipped a branch of the oak (Zeus' sacred tree) into water. The Romans cast little images into the Tiber River.

The Druids went in processions to sacred wells or springs where they beat upon the surface of the water, poured water over special stones and tossed it into the air. In Christian times these rites were taken over by the Church, and the processions were led by a priest and the image of a saint. But in later times, the practice was denounced and forbidden.

to the public at the rate of 150 gallons per person each day.

In addition to its practical uses, water has also figured in the beliefs of many peoples. Before storage and transmission of water, man relied directly on the rains for his water supply, and out of this dependency grew many rituals and superstitions of water to today's Americans. According to the American Wa-

In modern India, Buddhist priests try to induce rain by pouring water into little holes in the temple floor to symbolize rain sinking into the earth. In southern India, women tie a frog to a winnowing fan and sing a song about the frog's need for water while other women pour water on it.

Thanks to modern techniques for processing and storing water, modern Americans don't have to rely on amulets and incantations to assure an adequate supply for their needs. According to the American Water Works Association, the real problem isn't a shortage of water, but lack of planning and building of facilities on the part of many communities.

Whether you ever realize it or not, the United States is presently using less than 25% of the fresh water that is economically available — so there is more than enough water to meet all our future demands. The Association notes that restrictions on its use occur only in cases where men have failed to arrange far enough in advance for the facilities necessary to store, process, and deliver water to users.

But hundreds of American communities today are reaping the results of their failure to plan for today's water demands. Others will in the future if they fail to act now. For more information on what your community can do to assure an adequate supply of water, even during dry spells, write for the free booklet, "Better Water for Americans," American Water Works Association, 2 Park Avenue, New York, N. Y. 10016.

As the U. S. has grown, so have its water utilities multiplied and improved. America's first piped water supply was built in Boston in 1652. Between 1652 and 1800, only nine water works were known in this country compared to 20,000 in existence today.

Today water is even more vital to the welfare of American communities that ever before. Safe public drinking water, for example, has helped to eliminate water-borne diseases like cholera and typhoid. Every town — large or small — can now have its swimming pool. An adequate water supply helps stimulate community growth, because most types of industry require large quantities of water for air-conditioning systems, if not for processing. When industries look for new locations, communities who cannot show that they have made plans to meet future water demands will be by-passed.

"You never miss the water till the well runs dry," the saying goes, and the idea certainly holds water. But with today's modern water utilities, the well doesn't have to dry up.

As a commodity, water can be costly. For example, in the Sahara, a rich merchant once paid a camel driver $20,000 for his gourd of water. But, delivered to your tap, 60 gallons of delicious fresh water actually costs you less than a bottle of pop!

Big Ideas in Small Fashions

The littlest fashion plates will be saucer-eyed over some of the latest developments in children's wear. Their mothers will be happy, too, for never have children's clothes been more practical or more appealing . . . thanks to Avril a new and unique rayon fiber.

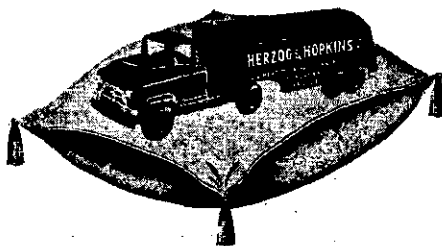

Strong, absorbent, shrink and stretch resistant, Avril rayon has a soft luxurious texture and look, and takes beautifully to color.

Fall colors are special—clearer and richer than ever. Red, that childhood favorite, is the star; many new outfits team it with white, navy or even bright orange for added "zing." But there are also plenty of pretty pastels, as well as classic browns and grays. Muted heather tones, especially heather blue, loom large on the young fashion landscape.

Prints are temptingly varied—Often they play up the stripes and polka dots, plaids and checks that youngsters love. Window-pane plaids — tracing just the plaid's outline without filling in the color — have a fresh new look; so do argyle motifs in unexpected places: on sweaters and tights, for instance. Little girls who've seen the movie of "The Sound of Music" are going to love Tyrolean prints in sleepwear. Look for other prints and details, such as crochet stitchery, which lend an old-fashioned some of this season's most irresistible little-girl fashions. One example, a Westway of Dallas design for girls, is an A-line dress with a tiny scalloped, pin-dotted bodice; a white collar and streamer-bow add dash to the young-dandy look. A small-sister version has a tabbed, white buttoned bodice like a dignified little jacket. Both are made of an Avril-cotton broadcloth designed to keep its cool British composure and lively American color through countless washings and wearings.

Boys will be boys this year in Eton, Norfolk or cutaway jackets, often in the heathery tweeds that will give them, too, a slightly British air. Blazers in bright solids or bold stripes and plaids are also big for little shavers.

For boys and girls alike, this season's fashions stress the coordinated, "total" look. Boys, for example, might wear a navy blazer with navy knee socks and Black Watch plaid shorts; girls could wear matching tops and tights with a skirt in a coordinated print or solid. All these "matches," of course, can be mixed with other outfits to stretch the family clothing budget.

This kind of coordination applies to snow togs and sleepwear as well as to school and "company" clothes. One of the freshest-looking combinations on the winter scene — madras parka with tailored denim pants both in a water-repellent blend of Avril and cotton — turns up in an Alpine Togs snow outfit in both boys' and girls' styles.

P.J.'s, nightgowns and robes for small snoozers come in sleekly tailored, lavishly lacy or nostalgically old-fashioned designs.

WIDE AWAKE YOUNGSTERS
... will recognize Rogers and Hammerstein's "The Sound of Music" as the inspiration for this Tyrolean print sleepwear by Geisha Robes. The fabric is woven with Avril rayon for strength, softness, comfort, and easy-care. 50% Avril rayon/50% cotton. Red or gold; pajama, sizes 4-14, about $4. Robe 3-6x, about $6; 7-14, about $8. Boot, about $2. Not shown: a matching "Granny" gown, 4-14, about $4.

is a robe, a "Granny" gown and a delightful ruffled-leg pajama like the drawers 19th century girls wore - all in a delicate hearts and flowers calico print.

To "top" it off, in a manner of speaking, are high boots in the same soft but sturdy Avril/cotton print - all courtesy of Geisha Robes.

Even a little girl's lingerie is part of the new go-together look. Blouse-slips, money-and-work-saving idea for Mama if ever there was one, are abundantly available in tailored or rilly styles, with almost every kind of collar and sleeve imaginable. These garments have the marvelous virtue of not creeping out at skirt waistbands. They're also eminently practical with the new deep-scooped Courreges-style jumpers.

For almost every item of a youngster's Fall and Winter wardrobe, there's a small world of stylish and sensible fashion creations in fabrics woven with Avril, the new generation rayon.

The History Of Carpets

One chilly evening, a Stone Age hunter put the fleece of a wild sheep between himself and the cave floor - and the carpet was born. It has held the floor ever since.

It has also been hung on walls, spread over tables, even draped as a mantle over chilly shoulders during its long history. Some of its ingenious uses have been developed by modern interior decorators, to bring new beauty and drama into American homes.

Rug-making is one of the oldest civilized arts. Paintings of carpet-weavers at work can be seen on the 4500 year old rock tombs of Beni Hasson, Egypt. Similar drawings at Nineveh show that fine rugs were part of that Biblical city's taste for easy-living luxury. Persian rugs were already prized in 550 B.C.; a Greek writer named Xenophon describes them as thick and yielding underfoot.

In 52 B.C., Julius Caesar became one of the first men in recorded history to roll out the red carpet for an extra-special visitor. His caller: Cleopatra! The story goes that she had herself wrapped in a rug and smuggled into the Roman conqueror's headquarters to ask his help in getting rid of enemies who were plotting against her.

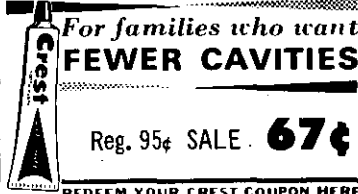

Orientals have always been wrapped up in the subject of rugs. For many centuries, family life literally revolved around the carpet, which served as table, chair and bed in scantily furnished homes. When their imaginations soared, Middle Easterners told tales of flying carpets; one such legend actually appears in the Mohammedan Bible, the Koran! It tells of King Solomon's carpet, big enough to accommodate his whole kingdom - men and women passengers on the right, spirits on the left!

In Europe, by contrast, carpets — magical or not — were almost unheard of until just a few centuries ago. During the Middle Ages, people walked on floors strewn with straw or rushes. Tapestry floor coverings were used only for state receptions, or beside a royal bed.

When Oriental rugs began to be imported in the 16th Century, no one dreamed of actually stepping on these treasures! Instead, they were proudly displayed on tables, chests and cupboards as the newest status symbol.

These rugs, which reached Europe from Persia, were produced by an art which was very close to being a science. According to American Cyanamid Company researchers, 16th Century, Persian carpet specialists conducted experiments in dye-making, and studied data on how sheep's wool was affected by climate, altitude and diet!

By a series of interesting twists, hooks and crooks, the West soon developed its own carpet industry. The Louvre in Paris, now known as the home of Mona Lisa and the Venus de Milo, was once the headquarters of French carpet weavers — by decree of King Henry IV in 1608.

When Henry's successors began to persecute the Huguenots or Protestants, many of France's best rugweavers had to flee to England — and that country became noted for its carpets. Axminster and Wilton, known to American carpet buyers as methods of carpet construction, gained their first fame in the 18th century as two of England's chief weaving towns.

Today, American carpets, many of them now made via the tufting technique, are famous throughout the world for their high quality, low cost, and fabulous variety of color, texture, and fiber. American textile scientists have performed such feats as transforming acrylonitrile — used during World War II to make synthetic rubber — into a textile fiber that combines the best features of natural and man-made fibers. After 12 years of testing, they developed Creslay, an acrylic that resists dirt, moths and mildew, and soaks up an unusually wide range of dyes.

As a result, the American Home-maker has a more colorful choice of rugs and carpets than ever before. Brilliant rose and blue-tones, apple reds, peacock and indigo blues, amber and honey yellows are some of the latest color trends afoot.

Carpet manufacturers are combining this color richness with a fascinating variety of texture and pattern, Roxbury Carpet Company, for example, is introducing a cut-pile plush, "Evening Sky" of Creslan in 15 colors. Firth Carpet Co. has added an eye-intriguing random-sheared pattern, "Drexel Hill"; it comes in such vibrant shades as Bermuda blue, emerald green, and burnt orange.

To add to the fun, carpets are no longer mere "walk-ons" — they're climbing walls and furniture to assume a starring role in room decor. For example, carpeted wall panels in a high-ceilinged library add dimensional interest and a feeling of warmth; on the practical side, they help deaden sound. For the same reasons, a carpeted headboard is a smart touch of bedroom luxury.

In a den or family room, carpeted benches add a cheery,

Early American note; in a contemporary room, a carpeted window seat and screen "warm up" the simple lines of furniture and accessories.

All these decorator ideas are eminently practical with a soil-resistant fiber like Creslan; regular vacuuming with the upholstery brush attachment keeps carpeted wall panels and headboards looking new. Easy-care modern fibers have also inspired many homemakers to treat themselves to the soft touch of kitchen carpeting - they actually find it easier to keep clean than hard-surface flooring.

Best of all, anyone can now afford a touch of Sunitanic carpet luxury - without paying the king's ransom asked for some rugs. The world's most expensive carpet is a Turkish rug 24 ft. 9 in. by 15 ft. 6 in., containing 100 shades and 28,927,800 knots.

It took an estimated 60 man-years to make. The rug last sold in Istanbul in 1921, was offered for sale in New York with a $250,000 price tag in 1958. So far as is known, it's still available - in case you ever find yourself as the man or woman who "has everything."

Though you may never own the world's costliest carpet, you can walk on the world's largest one - 88,000 square feet, or just over two acres, of maroon carpeting at the Coliseum exhibition hall in New York City. It was first used in 1956 for the International Automobile Show.

From a wild-sheep fleece on a cave floor to two acres of carpeting in a modern exhibition hall is not as big a jump as it seems. The road of progress may have been rugged - but it's usually been kept well-carpeted.
