GOP-ARAMA

On Saturday, November 1st, the Student Prince Restaurant in Westerlo will be the scene for a swinging "Hilltown GOP-ARAMA." At 8 P.M. the affair will swing into high gear and plans are being readied by leaders from the four hilltowns of Berne, Knox, Rensselaerville, and Westerlo to assure a "spectacular" which will be remembered for years to come.

Mrs. Franklin Loucks, Republican Chairman of the Town of Westerlo, will chair the event along with Mr. Walter Zehnter, GOP Candidate for Supervisor of the Town of Westerlo, as Co-chairman. Mrs. Loucks, in announcing the heads of various committees, noted that free beer and dancing would be available and an open invitation to the public is being extended.

Heading up the Prize Committee are J. Robert Lansing, Supervisor of the Town of Rensselaerville and Alva Ostrander, Supervisor of the Town of Knox. Political rally decorations are being styled by John Crosier of E. Berne and Mrs. Peg Crosier of Berne. Publicity is under the direction of Mrs. J. Robert Lansing of Rensselaerville and Mrs. Betty LaGrange of Westerlo. Mrs. Carl Warner of E. Berne and Mrs. Robert Whipple of Knox are on the Reception Committee.

Performing Toastmaster chores will be Philip Pearson, Republican Candidate for Town Justice of Rensselaerville.

A number of dignitaries will be on hand to keep the GOP Bandwagon rolling. Among those expected to attend are: Joseph C. Frangella, Albany County Republican Chairman and Secretary of the Republican State Committee; and Mrs. Helen Williams, GOP County Vice Chairman. Representative Daniel E. Button, 29th Congressional District, and Assemblyman Larry Lane, Assembly Representative for the Hilltowns, are also scheduled to attend.

Highlight of the evening's festivities will occur when Senator Walter B. Langley, 40th Senatorial District, and Arnold Proskin, Albany County District Attorney, will share presentation honors by introducing various GOP candidates among who will be Gordon Holmes, Candidate for Coroner; Franklin Schultes, Berne, Candidate for County Legislator, 39th District, and other town candidates.

So climb on the bandwagon and come over to the big "Hilltown GOP-ARAMA."

Hearings Set

The Board of Appeals will hear three applications on the evening of November 5, 1969. The hearing scheduled for 8:00 P.M. will be on the appeal of the Farmer In the Dell Dairy Drive In, Inc., for a Variance from Article XI of the Town Zoning Ordinance to permit a six-foot high fence in front of applicant's store, located at 246 Delaware Avenue, Delmar. The fence was erected before applicant realized it is prohibited by the Zoning Ordinance.

The second petition, to be heard by the Board at 8:15 P.M., is from Benjamin Cohen for an extension of time to complete a gasoline service station on Route 144, Glenmont. Applicant did not appear on October 1, 1969 before the Board to prosecute a previous, identical appeal, therefore, has resubmitted his application for a hearing.

At 8:30 P.M. the Board will hear the appeal of Mr. A. Richard Reissig, 23 Glendale Avenue, Delmar for Variances from Article XII and XIII, side yard limitations and rear yard limitations, respectively.

The previously described hearings will take place at the Town Hall, 393 Delaware Avenue, Delmar.

Winner

The winners in the Albany County Pumpkin Growing Contest were announced by Walter Russell, President of the Men's Garden Club of Albany, and Andrew J. Levey, 4-H Division Leader, of the Albany County Cooperative Extension Association.

It has since developed into a world-wide operation with representatives in some sixty countries, involved annually in the exchange of more than 5,000 young men and women between the United States and 100 different nations.

The Experiment originated and introduced the family homestay to international exchange, a concept since widely adopted by many other agencies.

ARE THEY ASHAMED?

Why do our Democratic opponents refuse to admit that they are Democrats? Why do they try to convince the voters that they are "independents"? Mr. Thacher's and Mr. Gray's political ads in the October 23rd Spotlight do not mention the word Democrat or use the Democratic symbol. They are apparently ashamed to be linked to the Albany County Democratic organization and do not want to publicize the fact that they are Democrats.

Democratic candidate for Supervisor of the Town of Bethlehem, definitely promised the people of Selkirk a financial "break" on heavy cost of the sewer extension which has disturbed many of the residents of that village. Said Mr. Thatcher in his speech to the capacity crowd, "I don't feel that you people of Selkirk, who have large rural lots should have to carry the cost of sewers for the small home owners of the Delmar-Elsmere area. Our present supervisor has talked about it, but I am going further. I make it a pledge to you to give you people of Selkirk a break in this." He stated that the people of Selkirk have been neglected in the Town of Bethlehem, and that the present Supervisor is beginning to realize this, but it's a little too late.

Michael Albano, the candidate who is running in the 38th district for county legislator, stated in his speech that when elected he would bring before the county legislature the proposal for a small 25-bed emergency hospital in this area where people might bring their sick and injured. He further stated, "I will ask for a nightly patrol by the County Sheriff's Patrol in the Selkirk - South Bethlehem area."

Toastmaster Louis Picarazzi said of the Kick-Off Dinner, "This is the largest group of Democrats ever gathered under one roof at one time in the Town of Bethlehem."

Other candidates introduced were Rex Ruthman, Bill Gray, Michael Bergen, George Harder, James Carter, Dorothy Stephens and John Leonard.

Notary Named

Clifford J. Peters of 7 Salisbury Rd., Delmar, has been elected to membership in the Americas Society of Notaries, a national non-profit organization of persons who hold the office of notary public. Peters is vice president of the Colonial Finance Co. in Rensselaer.

New Prexy

The new president of the Albany Area Builders Association is a respected and well liked member of his industry whose experience has ranged well outside the Town of Bethlehem, his base of operation for 25 years.

Locally, Frank Williams and his brother, Gus, are the principals of Williams Brothers Builders, Inc., a firm which has raised more than 700 homes in the Delmar area.

His overseas experience was earned largely through the efforts of Uncle Sam who arranged transportation to the South Pacific where Frank helped build hospitals and submarine bases during World War II.

Elected to the president's chair of the association at its October meeting, Williams succeeds Gerry Goldie, president of F. Harris Patterson Const. Co., who has been at the helm for the past two years.

While Williams does not anticipate any decrease in the home construction field in the years immediately ahead, he does feel that today's trend towards multi-family construction will continue locally into the early 1970's. He then expects the trend will gradually revert to more emphasis on single home construction.

Williams pointed out that Association membership activity in multi-family housing was in response to a need brought out by a number of factors, principally the influx of new population attracted by such major area developments as the South Mall, a continually expanding economy and the expanded State University at Albany.

TO ALL VOTERS OF THE TOWN OF BETHLEHEM

Do you want the Albany County Democratic Organization, which has aptly been called the last of the old-time political machines, to take control of the Town of Bethlehem? There is no doubt that this would happen if the Democratic candidates in the Town should win this fall. As the Democrats see their power base in the City slipping, they are seeking to establish new bases in the towns. Let us be sure that this does not happen in our Town. It is no coincidence that many of the Town Democratic candidates have been conferring regularly with top officials of the County Democratic Organization, including Mayor Corning, who is the recognized spokesman for the Democratic machine. This is the organization that has allowed the City and County of Albany to deteriorate until citizens are afraid to walk the streets at night and businessmen are pleading for help. This is also the organization that uses real property assessments for political purposes. We are sure you do not want this to happen in the Town of Bethlehem.

We are confident that you want a continuation of the able and progressive leadership that has made the Town of Bethlehem the finest Town in the State. We are confident that you also want to keep in office our Republican Legislators and help gain control of the County Legislature.

On the other hand, he feels that the home market will move along in good style since the Capital District area is one of the few in the nation where mortgage loans are available to qualified applicants.

The towns, he pointed out, have more professional people who work closely with builders to plan developments with continuing emphasis on environmental design, maximum utilization of land and natural open spaces in planned unit development. Such cooperation further allows consideration for new recreational facilities and coordination of residential construction with town plans for new schools and adequate shopping facilities.

Also during Goldie's presidency, the local Association sponsored Northeastern New York's first annual Builders Trade Fair which drew participants from Syracuse to Massachusetts and Newburgh to Plattsburgh. The event focused on new products to east many of the cost problems facing the industry.

LET'S SET THE RECORD STRAIGHT

The Democratic candidate for Town Justice is masquerading as an "independent" candidate. He is no more independent than any of the other Democratic candidates. In fact, Mr. Gray is probably closer to the Albany County Democratic organization than the other candidates. For two years he was an Assistant Corporation Counsel of the City of Albany, and for six years was an Assistant District Attorney for the County of Albany.

His claim to be the candidate of an "independent" party is likewise meaningless. In order to get a second line on the ballot he circulated a petition. More than 75% of the people who signed this petition are enrolled Democrats, however, so the second line is, in fact, just another line for the Democratic Party.

BAA ART

On Monday, November 3, The Bethlehem Art Association will be host to Dennis Byng, who will give a lecture demonstration on his new technic of sculpture in plexiglass. The Club feels very fortunate in gaining the services of Mr. Byng, who has just returned from Manhattan where he had an exhibition of his work at the Martha Jackson gallery. He must now prepare for his next show, in January at the Albany Institute, sponsored by the Capital District Council on the Arts. His work attracted considerable attention at the SUNY Art Gallery (Mr. Byng is on the SUNY faculty of art) and is also to be seen at the Arts and Presents Shop in Altamont.

At the BAA meeting (7:30 p.m., Monday, November 3rd, Community Room, National Commercial Bank, Delmar) Mr. Byng will explain and demonstrate his technic using partially completed and finished pieces. His solid laminated columns are constructed of both clear and transparent colored plexiglass, having highly polished surfaces which produce internal reflections. This visual effect, "Total Internal Reflection," is capable of producing constant transmission of light and color, uninterrupted by dead air space. Actual color forms and colored light are revealed to identify with, and redefine the cube-like volumes.

Mr. Byng works with 5 color panels: red, orange, blue, yellow and green, set within clear plexiglass sections at different intervals to provide varying densities of color. From certain views a maximum of structural color form is produced by a minimum of physical parts. William C. Seitz, Director, Rose Art Museum and The Poses Institute of Fine Arts at Brandeis University writes that Byng's . . . "Perfectly articulated placement of color planes within a transparent block is original, pure and beautiful. As the spectator moves, their changing relationships offer a sequence of interweaving changes in light and color and should be endlessly rewarding to view."

The meeting promises to be another high point in this year's BAA activities and will include the usual refreshments and opportunity to socialize. Visitors and guests for the evening will be most welcome, and also art students and interested young people. The evening will start with Mr. Byng's demonstration and will include a short business meeting after the social hour.

Club members (and prospective members) are reminded that time is getting short for preparation of their entries for the BAA Third Juried Art Show. This will take place in stock for a two week run beginning October 28 at the Civic Theater on Second Avenue in Albany. The theater box office will be open each evening from 7 to 10 P.M. for public sale of tickets one week prior to opening. Marjorie Feiner will direct the humor and homicide production with Justine Caldes, Peter Eustace, Hank Maloy, Jack Ryan, Bob Van Slyke, Georgia Kramer and Dick Harte weaving the excitement of the play to a surprising ending. Rehearsals of the show are being kept closed to insure the 'who dunnit' ending. Albany Civic Theater is in its sixteenth year of offering live theater in the area and box office reports that weekend tickets have been sold out but that seats are available for early week seating, both weeks.

Dick Harte of 18 Rural Pl., Elsmere will play 'the big boss' part in ACT's opening production. He recently played the leading man in the Slingerlands Community Players presentation of "The Show Off" for which he received critics' acclaim for outstanding performance. He has appeared in too numerous to mention ACT productions as well as having directed last season's popular Children's Theater offering "The Wizard of Oz." Employed by the State of New York, Mr. Harte has appeared with the Knights of Columbus, Arena Theater at SUNY, St. Joseph's Alumni, Siena College Players and the Arundel Opera Theater at Kennebunkport, Maine. Besides acting and directing his interests include gardening, oil painting, sailing and interior design.

Edward G. Robinson starred for two years on Broadway in this, Chayefsky's first play. The role, to be portrayed by Gerald Duckor, is that of a garment manufacturer, 53 years old, a widower, and lonely. Into his life comes Jean Thompson, characterizing the attractive Betty Preiss, a girl nearly thirty years his junior, who has had an unhappy marriage with a fly-by-night musician, and who in turn is lonely and adrift.

They fit together; they belong together. But the disturbing question, with meanings far beyond the confines of the play, is whether or not a man of this age has any right to a woman so young. Do sympathetic temperaments and minds have the strength to withstand the demands of marriage? Neither his nor the girl's family favors them. But they must choose and bring the matter to a conclusion.

The Drama Workshop has reached out to many areas of the Capital District to bring together the best possible personnel for the cast and crew of its forthcoming production. In addition to Loudonville's Gerald Duckor, Delmar's Jean Thompson and Jerry Gordon and Schenectady's Rochelle Stracher, the cast will include Jean Sheber, Harriet Arenstein, Madeleine Alfred, Mel Wilcove, Beverly Vener, Edna Goldfeder and Gail Goodman all of Albany.

Eleanor Koblenz, one of Albany's most able directors, will be assisted by Dan Goldstein of Colonie. Working under them behind the scenes are Larry Ginsburg and Jack Stembach, who have developed and designed a new sliding panel system of changing the sets. Mr. Ginsburg and Rona Goldstein, wife of the assistant director, will make sure that the audience can see the production by careful operation of the lights. Lillian Greene will be on hand to make everyone on stage look his best as she applies the actors' make-up. The great number of props needed to put on a show of this type will be collected and created by Frances Eisenhandler of North Bethlehem. Costumes will be designed and coordinated by Shelley Squire of Voorheesville while her husband, Don, is back stage trying to tie all the loose ends together as

More Vandalism

Ronald E. Erhardt, Manager of Pinkerton's Albany office, today urged parents and businessmen to launch a twofold attack on young vandals and malicious older people who threaten properties and even human lives during the Halloween holiday period.

"Unfortunately, the tradition of harmless pranks at Halloween has led to much more serious crimes against properties and individuals," Erhardt said. "Parents and property owners must take precautions early enough to avert potential harm and financial losses."

According to Erhardt, there have been increasing incidences of ill-intentioned people placing dangerous pills, including barbiturates and sleeping tablets, into the trick-or-treat bags carried door-to-door by youngsters. "In recent years, there have also been alarming reports of children finding razor blades inserted into apples and candy bars by these spiteful people," the manager said.

Parents of children who visit entire neighborhoods on Halloween should warn the youngsters not to eat the treats until they return home, and then only after they are thoroughly inspected by the parents, he warned.

The manager urged parents, especially those with young children, to accompany the youngsters on their rounds because of the threat of older children accosting the younger tots.

"These vandals are also contributing substantially to the business community's problems of property protection, especially on Mischief Night (October 30)," Erhardt said.

This year, Pinkerton's will provide business establishments with more than 1,000 uniformed guards to discourage vandals on Mischief Night. It is one of many special occasions when uniformed guards are used on a short term contract basis. "We have found uniformed guards to be most effective deterrents to mischief-makers," the manager said.

"Automobile dealers with open car lots, nurseries with shrubs displayed outdoors, and all-night establishments such as laundromats are particularly vulnerable to hoodlumism," he said. The manager also cited churches, synagogues and cemeteries as areas for which security personnel should be considered.

In New Quarters

New York Power Pool Control Center staff members have moved into their newly constructed headquarters in Gunderland and are proceeding with the job of getting the Center ready for limited operation by early next year.

According to John R. Vogel, Jr., manager of NYPP, the move of some 40 employees from temporary facilities at Niagara Mohawk's Albany Steam Station was completed last week. The new $3 million Power Control Center is located on a 17-acre site approximately six miles south of Schenectady. Eventually about 55 persons will be employed there.

When fully operational, the control center will direct electric power production and flow throughout New York State. It is the latest step of many the state's eight major power producers are taking to further maintain the utmost reliability of service.

Construction of the new center building is virtually completed except for a few interior details. During the next two and one half months, work will continue on the installation of various pieces of operating equipment, Mr. Vogel said.

Operations at the Center will first be restricted to monitoring and scheduling of daily generating and transmission of electricity in the state. Eventually, the Center will coordinate all day-to-day scheduling of generators and transmission systems supplying electricity to more than 98 percent of all power consumers in New York State.

On a larger scale, the Power Control Center will also coordinate operations of the NYPP with those of neighboring pools in New England, Canada and Pennsylvania-New Jersey-Maryland insofar as they may affect the reliability of bulk power supply on the interconnected systems in the region served by these pools. It will include arrangements for the interchange of energy and capability required for reliable operations, as well as for economical reasons, Mr. Vogel said.

The New York Power Pool was formed in 1966 by the state's major utilities. Work on the new Center began in mid-1968. Members of the pool are: Central Hudson Gas and Electric Corp.; Consolidated Edison Co. of New York, Inc.; Long Island Lighting Co.; New York State Electric & Gas Corp.; Niagara Mohawk Power Corp.; Orange and Rockland Utilities, Inc.; Power Authority of the State of New York and Rochester Gas and Electric Corporation.

Marine Midland's Master Charge card has been cited by the American Standards Institute of New York as the prototype of the standardized credit card recommended by the Institute.

James A. Graham, director of the Master Charge program for Marine Midland Banks, said that after a two-year study, the Institute recommended a single standardized card. The immediate advantages would be an increase of efficiency and economy in insurance and acceptance of charge cards and a facility of automated interchange among the businesses honoring the card. Master Charge, the principal card issued by the Interbank Card Association member banks was singled out as the recommended example in use of the standard card and embossing arrangement.

Program Announced

The Albany Jewish Community Center Adult Program Committee has announced that plans for the 1969-70 Performing Arts series are launched. This will be a very ambitious undertaking since the artists who will perform in the series are of the highest caliber.

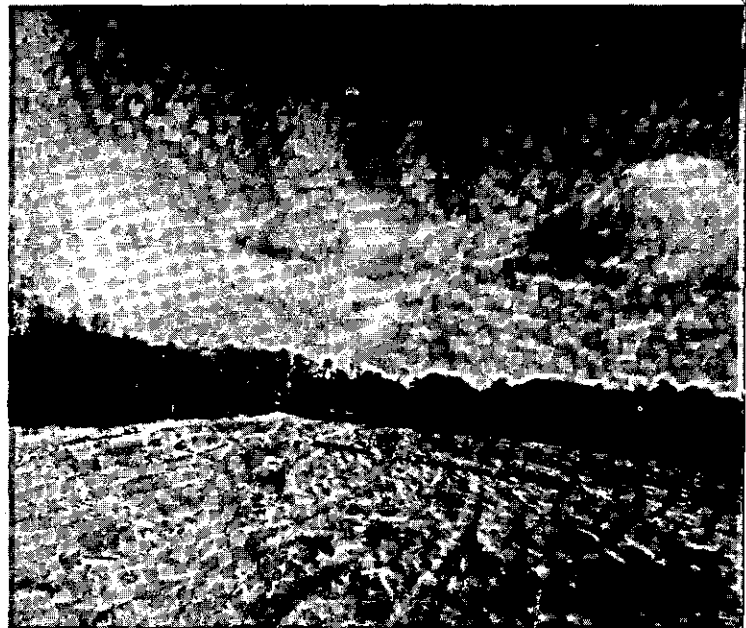

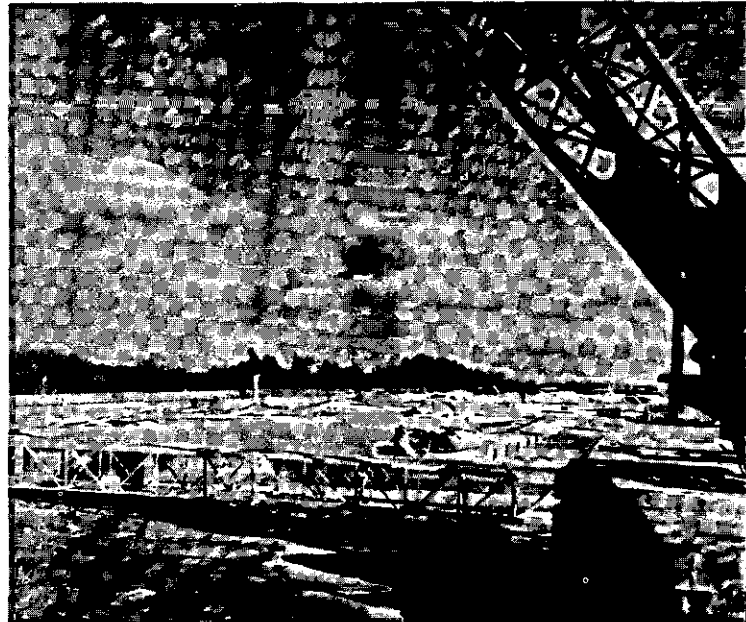

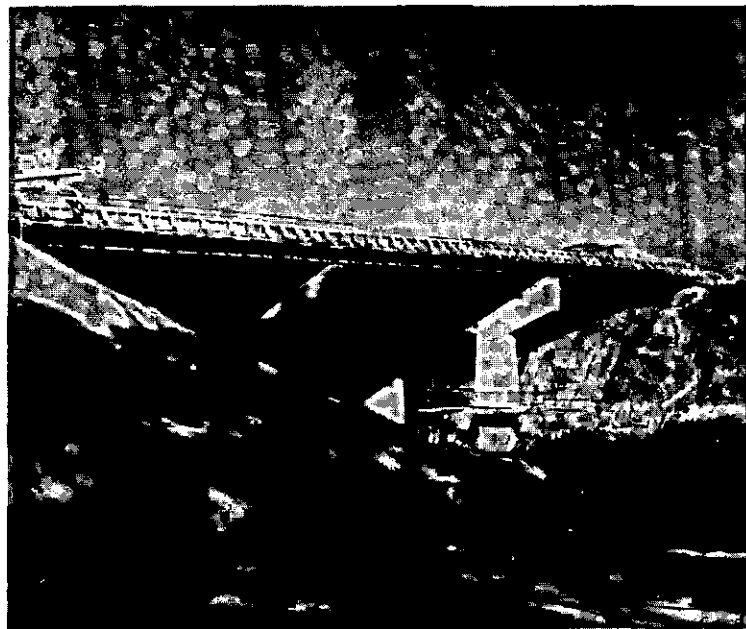

On Sunday, December 14th, a musical program titled "Israeli Virtuosos" will be featured.

MILDRED SHELDON, Superintendent for Harrison & Burrowes Inc., reported that if the weather holds out the bridge span over the D & H tracks will be completed in two weeks. The bridge is 150 feet long and 95 feet wide and has three lanes on each side with a center mall of 16 feet and will have granite curbing. The column supports are 23' high and supporting steel beams are 3' wide x 7' high. Bridge construction covered a span of seven months. Center traffic will feed directly into Elm Avenue and a Y entrance and exit feed into Kenwood Avenue. A light will control traffic flow. The entire length of one mile will have a center mall. Depending on weather working conditions road should be opened for traffic in April or May. Maloy Construction is General Contractor.

MILLARD SHELDON, Supt., of Fort Plain, N.Y. Mr. Sheldon admitted to being 78 years young and having been engaged in construction work since age 16.

Matitiahu Braun, violinist and winner of the Concert Artists Guild Award; Spiranzo Herzano, concert pianist and John Spiro, bass baritone who has sung with the Kol Israel Symphony Orchestra, will concertize together.

The World of Paddy Chayefsky will be seen on Saturday, January 10th. Arthur Cantor, famed Broadway producer, will bring to the Center stage selections from three major plays by Paddy Chayefsky. The plays chosen will be "The Tenth Man," "Gideon," and "The Passion of Josef D."

On Saturday, February 7th, "The Voices Four" will offer a program of Hebrew Israeli music. This young group of singers have appeared on the Ed Sullivan Show and at New York City's Town Hall. Out of the recent upsurge in Hebrew-Israeli music a new sound has emerged, bright, driving and wholly harmonious. The Voices Four have added a new dimension to Hebrew music.

Series tickets are now on sale at the Center.

THE PERISCOPE By PERRY GALT

In these times of group protest, mass moratoria, Moonwalks and Mets, it is comforting to realize Election Day is upon us. There is something old-fashioned and unchanging about Election Day, which still comes on the First Tuesday after the First Monday of November. Besides, it's the day you put up the storm windows.

This is an off-year election but it is important to people who care about local government and local candidates, as witnessed by the cocktail party Jay and Nancy Handwerker hosted the other day to help Al Hartheimer in his quest to unseat Father Time in Albany. Local elections may not get our three villages as excited as a school budget vote, but they are important because they involve such vital things as trash collection, snow plowing, purchase of new police cars, the makeup of the zoning board and other neighborhood necessities.

In this environment party labels are meaningless while the personality, popularity and qualifications of the candidate are everything. For decades we have lived in an overpoweringly Republican town in an incredibly Democratic county in a currently Republican state, and nothing much changes. So on the local level we vote for the candidates we like and trust without caring about their parties.

But next year is a different story! Next year is a gubernatorial year, a legislative year, a senatorial year and a couple-of-other years. Now we're beyond the trash-removal, car-wash-zoning level, and into things that deal with Vietnam, income taxes, cost of living, state and federal services and payrolls, and other crushing pressures on our lives. Yet it is curiously true that party labels still remain meaningless although people just won't admit it. Political parties are like church denominations, World Series loyalties, breakfast habits and name brands. You are born into them or let the habit lead you into a rut.

Maybe we should take a little closer look, even in the off-year. The last few presidential elections have been more anti-Kennedy or anti-Johnson or pro-this or anti-that. We have seen ultra-liberal Democrats like Jake Javits and Dan Button win as Republicans, and free-thinkers like Sam Stratton and John Lindsay run under whatever party banner

Next year will be our big year. We can measure a governor who has riddled our household budget with unwanted services, a congressman whose upset victory has been superceded now by the Sweet Life, and legislators who have disenfranchised the constituency while computing scandalous pensions not based on performance, attendance or service to the people who elected them to the bonanza.

The problem, of course, is to find candidates who will sweep the Outs in and the Ins out and do a good enough job to win our endorsement the next time. If we can find a good governor, senator and some conscientious legislators, we consider splitting the ticket and voting for an incumbent in 1972. At the moment, however, the picture looks dim. In the meantime, we'll vote the neighborhood ticket locally and hope the best men win.

CONSERVATION COMMENTS

By Paul M. Kelsey
Senior Wildlife Biologist

Many Rabbits Wasted Unnecessarily

The cottontail rabbit has always been the backbone of small game hunting in New York, furnishing both the most time in the field and the most meat on the table. Unfortunately, a surprising amount of this choice meat will never reach the table for one of two inexcusable reasons. The first is the fear that the rabbit is diseased and not fit to eat, while the second is that it was not properly cared for in the field, and is not fit to eat when presented to the lady of the house.

Tularemia is the disease that causes the most concern, and probably rightly so, for about five percent of the cases in humans result in death. Though these odds may be uncomfortably high, the chances of finding a wild rabbit in New York with tularemia are practically nil. In the past most cases of the disease were found in areas where imported rabbits had been liberated. It has been well over a decade since the importation and liberation of rabbits was outlawed, so it has practically vanished from New York.

How can one recognize an infected rabbit? In the advanced stages of tularemia the rabbit is really sick and will not flush from cover readily. When it does, it will stagger a few yards and stop even fall down. Any animal like this should not be handled, but covered with rocks to prevent a scavenging animal from feeding on it. White spots on a swollen liver are the well known characteristics of the disease. However, nearly all rabbits have white spots caused by the dog tapeworm. The spots of tularemia are small and cover the liver heavily, while the spots of dog tapeworm are few, and about the size of the eraser on the end of a pencil. The tapeworm causes no hazard to the human, for it is removed with viscera when the rabbit is cleaned. You should be careful that your hound doesn't get the viscera though.

Rabbits have several other afflictions that in no way make their flesh inedible, the most common of which are the botfly larva and Shope's fibroma. The botfly is a black grub about an inch long and half an inch wide, which lives under the rabbit's skin, usually in the neck region. The Shope's fibroma is a soft pinkish wartlike protuberance on the skin most commonly found on the feet or face. Both the grub and the fibroma are removed when the animal is skinned, leaving a good clean carcass.

It is surprising how many hunters don't give their game the care that they would expect to be given even the cheapest cut of meat at the local market. Only through proper cleaning and cooling can any meat, whether domestic or wild, be expected to produce quality food. It is here that much of the discredit for the flavor of wild game arises.

The immediate field dressing of the animal will remove the major source of bacteria causing spoilage. This is particularly true when the entrails have been punctured by shot, permitting their contents to escape and taint the flesh. This also opens up the body cavity permitting it to cool rapidly. If you jam it into that convenient game pouch in your jacket, you cancel out the chance for it to cool properly. Instead, prop open the body cavity with a small stick and hang the rabbit from your belt. Use your game pouch for your sandwiches and some rain gear.

After the removal of the entrails, the body cavity should be wiped clean with a dry cloth, paper or even dry grass, to remove all the blood clots. Blood on or in the flesh makes it soft and watery and detracts from the natural flavor of the meat. There is always the temptation to wash the body cavity if a stream is convenient. This gets rid of the blood all right, but water also has a softening effect on the flesh and makes it more susceptible to bacterial action.

The skin should not be removed from the carcass until it is being prepared for cooking or freezing, for the skin will prevent unnecessary drying and contamination.

Based on the expenditures by hunters in a recent national survey, the price tag on each piece of small game is about $10. That rabbit is a pretty valuable piece of meat — take good care of it.

Addition Dedicated

A new addition to the State Conservation Department's Wildlife Research Laboratory in Delmar was dedicated on Wednesday, October 22, 1969. Conservation Commissioner R. Stewart Kilborne, in a brief address, reviewed the history of the laboratory and stressed the vital role that research has played in the management of all species of wildlife.

Amplifying on this achievement, Commissioner Kilborne predicted that "the results of these (research) efforts will ensure for our children and the generations that follow an environment in which life can be enjoyed to the fullest."

The 3,300 square foot addition, like the original laboratory itself, was constructed largely with Federal funds under the Pittman-Robertson Act. This legislation taxes sporting arms and ammunition and uses the money for wildlife research and management. The original lab was, in 1941, the first in the nation to be built under that program.

Richard E. Griffith, Regional Director of the Bureau of Sports Fisheries and Wildlife, U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, remarked on the role that wildlife research plays in modern society. "The insidious and far-reaching effects of urban and industrial wastes, detergents and agricultural chemicals have come to public attention through fish and wildlife investigations directed toward managing those resources for recreational purposes . . . The evolution of wildlife research from the classical studies of the past is the result of a galloping technology and man's growing impact on the environment."

Director Griffith also offered a national view of New York's efforts, saying "The New York State Conservation Department has a long-standing reputation of leadership in the field of wildlife research and it seemed to me that the early planning for the Delmar Lab and the broad base program which has evolved over the years is the outgrowth of vision, planning and dedication to purpose."

The importance of technical innovations and training were stressed by Albert G. Hall, Director of the Division of Fish and Wildlife, State Conservation Department. "We are now at a time when men go to the moon and return safely, when electronic devices exist that were not even thought of 10 years ago — much less back in 1941 — and formulas for solving problems are almost unbelievable.

"Twenty-four hour a day data collecting can be provided by machine instead of manpower. This means a new and modern look has to take place in wildlife research. Present staff has to be given training in new techniques, new staff members have to have special abilities and modern equipment has to be provided. This new building - an expansion of an old facility - is part of this and should help to provide for the modern, efficient and up-to-date wildlife research program New York State should have to give the people the service they deserve," Director Hall concluded.

The Delmar Wildlife Research Laboratory is at work on a variety of research projects all designed to learn more about wildlife species and their interrelationships with the general environment so that better management techniques and regulations can be developed. Some of the research areas currently under study include:

- Wildlife pathology and physiology
- Waterfowl management
- Upland game bird studies
- Small mammals investigations
- Wildlife cover control and food and cover improvement

- Big game management investigations
- Game take survey
- Rabies research
- Research supervision

As important as the new facility is, skilled professional personnel are the backbone of the research effort. Commissioner Kilborne recognized this when he summed up: "Considerable professional recognition has come to our research personnel here at the Delmar Lab. For example, members of our staff have been honored by receipt of the American Motors Award, the Sears Foundation Award, several Wildlife Society Awards and the Catskill Deer Forum Award."

No Change

The current political and economic climate does not favor those seeking major changes in the nation's farm policies during this session of Congress.

Existing programs have the inside track, according to agricultural economist Prof. Kenneth L. Robinson of Cornell University, especially since the Republican administration has to deal with a Democratic Congress.

Despite what he calls widespread criticism of the high government cost of agricultural support programs, the Nixon administration can not afford to "turn agriculture loose," Robinson said.

Speaking at the annual meeting of the Cornell Nutrition Conference for Feed Manufacturers in Buffalo, Robinson pointed to the absence of strong opposition from farmers to current programs, and the continuing threat of surpluses as the key factors favoring something like the status quo.

Robinson said that at present, the President and his advisors are preoccupied with the war in Vietnam, inflation, and the problems of urban areas, especially welfare, and that agricultural legislation "unquestionably has a low priority."

"The Administration will try to avoid a serious confrontation with Congress over farm legislation," he said.

Robinson, who is with the N.Y. State College of Agriculture, Cornell, reviewed some of the changes Secretary of Agriculture Hardin has suggested.

These included:

An experimental cropland easement program under which farmers would be paid for cropping rights, but which would leave them free to shift land to grass and forestry;

A new "set-aside" program designed to help control production of wheat and cotton; and Reliance on the President's proposed family assistance program to help low-income farmers which would make it possible to add as much as $400 million to this sector's income.

Commenting on these, Robinson said:

"It is impossible to predict precisely what Congress will do with these proposals, but my guess is that we will end up with a mixture of commodity support programs not unlike those of the recent past."

While price-support loan programs probably will be retained at about current levels for grains, soybeans, and cotton, these will not be high enough to fully compensate farmers for rising costs, according to the Cornell professor.

"This will mean a further squeeze on the real incomes of those producing supported commodities," he said.

"The present administration has given every indication of preferring to make evolutionary rather than revolutionary changes in farm policies," Robinson concluded.

About Pollution

The more than 6 billion pounds of laundry detergents used each year by some 60 million American families are too much of a good thing in at least one respect, a Cornell University professor says.

Despite their undisputed advantages as cleaning agents, laundry detergents play a significant role in water pollution, according to Prof. Mary E. Purchase, of the design and environmental analysis department at the N.Y. State College of Human Ecology, Cornell.

One pollution problem — detergent foaming — was solved in 1965 when manufacturers developed detergents that lost their ability to foam after entering waste disposal systems, Prof. Purchase says.

Despite this achievement, detergents still contribute to a type of pollution called eutrophication, in which plant life in the water is "overfertilized" by detergent phosphates.

Phosphates comprise about half the material in laundry detergents, according to Prof. Purchase, who adds that septic tanks and most disposal plants do not presently remove them from waste water.

After a laundry detergent has been used, the phosphate-laden waste water flows into streams and lakes, where it stimulates the growth of algae and other surface plants.

As these surface plants thrive, die, and decay, they require additional oxygen, which may deprive fish of their vital air supply. If the pollution continues unabated, fish and other aquatic life may die, Prof. Purchase says.

In addition to endangering animal life and upsetting the water's ecological balance, excessive plant growth caused by phosphate pollution lowers the aesthetic value of waterways, she points out.

It is clear that detergent manufacturers find themselves in a complex dilemma.

Since detergent phosphates perform several essential jobs and remain by far the most effective cleaning agents for clothing, the pollution problem can not realistically be solved at present by omitting the phosphates from the detergents, Prof. Purchase says.

You Can Import It

You can import that Spanish shotgun you've had your eye on, legally, under the Gun Control Act of 1968, according to Alfred J. Heekin, IRS Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Chief Special Investigator for Northeastern New York State.

The only difference under the new law is that it is generally unlawful for anyone other than a licensed importer or dealer to transport or receive any firearm purchased or obtained outside the United States, Mr. Heekin said.

However, Mr. Heekin pointed out that an importer or dealer located in the purchaser's state of residence and holding a valid license under the Art must submit an application to the IRS Director of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms Division, to import the firearm ordered by an individual.

To do this, he said the licensed importer or dealer should file the application, Form 6, (Firearms), showing himself as the importer and the individual as the consumer. The foreign shipper should be instructed to ship the firearm to the licensee.

In this way, the delivery of the firearms would then be made between the individual and the licensee in the state of residence, with the dealer recording the receipt and sale, as is necessary under the law, Mr. Heekin said.

A permit must be obtained for all firearms to be imported, regardless of the date purchased, the IRS official added. However, this does not apply to a firearm previously taken out of the country by the person bringing it in, or under certain circumstances, to members of the Armed Forces.

The Bureau of Customs is authorized to release a firearm without a permit from IRS on seeing proof that the firearm was simply being brought back into the U.S. by the same person who took it out.
