Public pensions: funding for the future

By Nat Boynton Copyright 1979, The Spotlight Second of two articles

A Page One story in the Albany Times Union last November gave taxpayers a chill by hinting that they would have to make up losses in the New York State Teachers Retirement System's stock portfolio stemming from the 1977-78 slump in the Dow Jones averages.

The article pointed to a decline of more than $460 million in the market value of the system's $2-billion investment in common and preferred stocks, roughly one-third of its total income-producing assets.

Unanswered was the question: why should the public, which has funded most of the system from its inception, be required to dig deeper to cover investment losses with no voice in the investment decisions?

Few taxpayers realize the unique position of the system's Retirement Board. It is the only body in the state's political structure with the power to levy a direct tax whose members are not chosen by the electorate at large.

That electorate selects the members of all other bodies with direct taxing power in this state—the state and county legislatures, city councils and town and village boards.

Not so the NYSTRS board, which sets the tax rate local school districts must pay to finance pensions, insurance and death benefits of its members. Public pensions are exempt from New York State income tax.

The state's Public Service Commission is the only other appointive body entrusted with such far-reaching regulatory impact. But the comparison is somewhat remote: the PSC sets the rates for necessarily monopolistic public utilities such as electric and gas companies and telephone companies. These companies are investor-owned and financed.

A spokesman for the system's nine-member board of trustees says the Times Union story was misleading. Investment losses, whether real or on paper, comprise "only one of many factors" that determine what percentage of the teaching and administrative payroll school districts across the state must pay into the retirement fund.

That bite now is 21.43 percent and certain to go higher when the pertinent actuarial data—cost of benefits, supplemental retirement allowances, administrative costs and others—are presented to the board.

In the fiscal year ending June 30, 1978, the board reported revenues of $893 million. Of this total, employer (primarily school districts) contributions accounted for $516 million, or 57.8 percent.

The board's next rate action will force the state's 760-odd school districts to factor the higher percentage into their 1980-81 school budgets. The ante for retirement, at the rate to be determined, will crank another one-fifth to one-fourth of the district's instructional payroll into the school budgets to be finalized at this time next year.

Although only elected legislatures have similar direct taxing powers, NYSTRS board members regard this access to the public purse in a different light. As trustees, they consider their function as a stewardship of public funds, serving as protectors of the public interest.

• The chairman, Scotia bank executive Kenneth E. Buhrmaster, is appointed by the state comptroller as his personal representative as custodian of the state's public funds.

• Three members are appointed by the Regents, two to represent the school boards from lists furnished by the New York State School Boards Assn., the third a banker to represent the public.

• Two members are appointed by the state commissioner of education to represent school administrators. On the present board, one is a district superintendent of schools, the other a school district director of instruction. Both are members of the retirement system itself.

• Three members are elected by members of the retirement system itself, chosen by ballot of convention delegates. Two of these are teachers on leave from their district jobs whose salaries are paid by the New York State United Teachers (NYSUT) AFL-CIO at the rate they would be receiving as local teachers.

The main sources of the system's revenue is the districts' ante ($516 million last year) and investment income ($355 million). Those sums contributed to a growth in total assets from $5.8 billion to $6.4 billion.

BETHLEHEM School budget jumps 5.9 pct.

A 1979-80 preliminary school budget of $12.3 million, up 5.9 percent over current spending, goes to Bethlehm Central district residents this week.

The new budget, described as "lean" by Supt. of Schools Lawrence A. Zinn, represents the largest jump in Bethlehem school spending in the last four years. The proposed budget is $682,888 over the current year's appropriations, compared to an increase of $536,000, or 4.8 percent, a year ago, 2.8 percent two years ago and 0.3 percent three years ago.

Responding to taxpayer pressure in the face of a continuing decline in enrollment and escalating inflation, Zinn and the board of education have cut the equivalent of 7.25 teaching positions from the instructional payroll, by far the largest single item in the budget.

But that economy has been more than offset by the proposed replacement of six buses. the installation of an elevator in the Middle School to comply with new mandated requirements for handicapped students, and the major lump of faculty pay raises written into the third year of the present three-year contract with the local teachers' union. When the board settled its long hassle with the Bethlehem Central Teachers Assn. in January, 1978. by granting salary hikes of 17 to 24 percent over the length of the contract, it deferred the brunt of the impact to the third year, which comes due in the new budget.

The recommended budget was scheduled to be unveiled at the regular school board meeting on Wednesday of this week (April 4). A formal public hearing has been set for Tuesday, April 10, at 8 p.m. at the Educational Services center at 90 Adams Pl., Delmar. Whatever revisions are made will have to be done by April 18, when the board is scheduled to adopt the budget that will go to district voters in the annual election on May 23.

If the numbers remain relatively intact, the new budget will dictate an estimated increase in property taxes for Bethlehem taxpayers of $2.35 per $1,000 assessed valuation, up 1.91 percent from the present rate.

Zinn says that the "very conservative" budget was pruned in every way possible, in an effort to keep the increase in property taxes below 2 percent. "We had to cut out everything that wasn't absolutely necessary," says Zinn. He added that possible budgetary opposition will be hard pressed to find other places to trim the appropriations. "There's no place left to cut unless we go deeper into staff, which means going into programs.

Teachers' salaries are budgeted for $4,267,894, up $194,734 over the current year due to contractual increases.

Budgetary figures provided by Zinn are based on estimates calculated from previous years. assuming a 3.1-percent increase in assessed valuation of town property. Zinn's office also assumes that the school district will be "save harmless" and receive the same amount of state aid, $2.7 million, as last year. If the district should get less than the expected revenue which is earmarked for operating aid and transportation, Zinn admits "we'd be hurting. But we don't anticipate receiving less."

BETHLEHEM Race shaping up for board seat

There will be at least one contest in the May 23 Bethlehem school elections when district voters elect three members of the board of education and ballot on the 1979-80 school budget.

Susan Lieberman of Slingerlands, a local PTA leader and active classroom volunteer, this week announced her candidacy for the "short-term" vacancy on the seven-member board. She will oppose Marjory C. O'Brien of Delmar for the unexpired term of Mary Anne Stringham, who resigned when she moved from the area with one year remaining on her term.

Mrs. Lieberman, 41, taught elementary classes in the Mineola and Guilderland systems. She served two years as president of the Slingerlands PTA, two years as vice president and is chairman of the Upstate PTA district membership committee. She has been on the Slingerlands elementary board for seven years, served as chairman of the school fair and the book fair, and has been a classroom volunteer for six years.

She also has served three years on the Middle School steering committee and is on the board of the High School Parent-Faculty Organization. She has been a volunteer in career education at BCHS for two years, and served on the district Language Fair committee.

A graduate of William Smith

Susan Lieberman

College, Geneva, with a degree in psychology and education, Mrs. Lieberman has four children ranging in age from 14 to 3. Her husband, Dr. Robert Lieberman, is a medical doctor.

Mrs. Lieberman has served on the board of the Albany County Medical Society, as a volunteer at St. Peter's Hospital and Memorial Hospital, and as Community Center program leader. She is a Cub Scout leader and serves as Capital District admissions coordinator for William Smith College.

In her announcement, Mrs. Lieberman declared that district taxpayers "cannot measure the quality of education by spending more money." Her statement said that "tax money must be used wisely and efficiently."

Two other candidates so far are running unopposed for full three-year terms on the Bethlehem board, but other names are expected to be added to the ballot before the April 23 deadline for filing petitions. John H. Clyne of Elsmere, senior member of the board, is seeking reelection for a third term, and

Balky driver, 58, faces 5 charges

For a while it appeared that the motorist was playing games with a Bethlehem police car. Officer Robert J. Samsel was on patrol on Rt. 32 heading for Feura Bush when an approaching car crossed into the westbound lane. Samsel swung the patrol car around and halted the errant driver.

As Samsel approached the vehicle, the motorist took off. Again Samsel stopped his quarry, approached the car and again the driver sped off. After several reruns, the driver was finally halted east of Murray Ave. on the Delmar By-pass.

According to Samsel, when the driver was asked for his license, he said: "If you want it, you can get it from the government." That didn't set well with the officer, and when the driver refused to take a pre-screening test for intoxication. Samsel arrested him, called for a tow truck and took the motorist to headquarters.

At the police station the motorist, identified as Edward L. Rimbaud, 58, of Castleton, refused to take a breath test. Police wrote out five tickets, charging him with failure to keep right, driving while intoxicated, driving without insurance, refusing to take an alcohol test and following too closely.

The incident took place between 4:30 and 5:15 a.m. Sunday.

Club members started Monday on a two-week campaign with a goal of $5,000 to finance the Houston trip for 10 students and their chaperones and counselors. They are selling Cadbury candy bars at $i each with a sticker good for a free Big Mac at McDonalds with the purchase of the first Big Mac. They are putting their own marketing promotion and merchandising skills to use in publicizing the drive. Posters featuring Willison's photo are being distributed in high-traffic spots in the Tri-Village area, along with coffee cans for candy purchases "on the honor system" in local banks and stores.

Winners in the regional competition who earned the trip to the state conference include Cathy Fancher, Joanne Beckman, Jenny Elwell, Kristin Bove, Beth Bennett, Donna Serafino and Mike Parker, first place ribbons, and Denise Koban, Diane Miller, Becky Lenox and Don Hendrickson, second place winners. Others nominated for the Houston trip are Karl Eidberger, Mary Kaye Orvis and Sandra Weigand.

A PEEK AT ORIENT Visiting China: a breathless pace

V. Remington Rich, a Slingerlands artist, her husband and daughter joined a group of 25 people from several states who recently toured areas of China. Her impressions and some of her sketches provide rare cameos of the Chinese people and their culture. By V. Remington Rich

The English have the reputation of being the tea drinkers of the world, but I think the Chinese outrank them. Everywhere we went in China we got cups of hot tea constantly refilled. With Chinese tea you get the leaves, too, and I couldn't help but wonder, if we could read the leaves, what the future would hold for this country with a population nearing one billion.

Seven million of the people live in Peking, the capital and second largest city. One might have expected this city, as we approached it at 9:30 p.m., to look like Boston or New York, but from the window of our CAAC (Civil Aviation Authority of China) 707 the lights of Peking looked more like a huge Tri-Village area at 11:30 on a weeknight. The airport was deserted and dark. Our plane appeared to be the only one.

One hundred and fifty people hanging onto hats and carry on luggage headed for the terminal, only to be stopped dead in our tracks by flagflying limousines to the left and a 747 plane on our right landing within 50 feet of us. Rumor had it Prince Savonouk, exiled leader of Cambodia, was the celebrity.

After customs, our group was loaded on new buses. Two interpreter-guides who spoke perfect English welcomed u during the 25-mile ride through the dark tree-lined streets o Peking. The bus driver turned and we entered the gates of th Friendship Hotel, complete with guard carrying a 30 caliber military rifle with bayonet.

Our hotel, built in 1956 b the Russians, was one of five se in a garden-like complex. Th newly decorated dining room-100×150-could accommodat 300 people at round table seating 10 at each.

beauty. If our dining room with maroon drapes, hand painted frieze and Chinese orientals was typical, the end result will be a thing of beauty.

Our rooms were clean and comfortable. Suites going to three or more guests, color TV in some rooms, comb. brush and slippers for each and replenished each day, two bottles of beer, orange soda (2), two huge thermos bottles, one of hot water and the other cold, tea, oranges, apples and pears, complete with a 60-watt bulb in each room.

The itinerary for our stay was posted, with our day starting anywhere from 6 to 8 a.m., back for lunch and off again, and finally, dinner. We had evenings to ourselves unless theater or entertainment was planned. Most nights everyone dropped into bed exhausted, but eager for the next day's visits. (more on next page)

PEARL GRANT-RICHMANS ... STUYVESANT PLAZA ALBANY, NY. OPEN 438-8409 Monday-Friday 10-9 Saturday 10-6 Because of the intense pace of our trip, as an artist I found it almost impossible to capture the incredible sights as we traveled nearly 1,500 miles through Peking, Shanghai, Soochow to Canton and Foshan travelling by plane, bus, train and boat.

If you were blonde and carried a sketch pad, it was even worse. These friendly people were so pleased with "this strange artist making many small pictures," they crowded in so close trying to watch that it was an eyeball-toeyeball scene, with the strong aroma of garlic in the air. The Chinese eat garlic for breakfast.

Our two guides, Mrs. Chu and Mr. Ku, accompanied us everywhere in Peking, and arranged, it seemed with a flick of the hand, many requests of these "foreign friends." Mr. Ku, about 28, earned 56 yuan a month, or approximately $37. One yuan equals two thirds of a dollar. Out of his 56 yuan, he spent two yuan for rent, 14 yuan for kindergarten for his little girl, 13 to 15 yuan for food.

The highest-paid person in China earns 350 yuan a month. A new bike is 150 yuan, or $100. Most families have two bikes. There are no privately owned cars. The license on each bike is the only way to distinguish them. They are all the same color, not locked and there are no thefts.

Mrs. Chu, Mr. Ku's superior, was about 40 and had a son, 18, attending college. Both worked for the Peking branch of the Chinese International Travel Service.

All around the city were projects in progress—wall building, road building, you name it. Almost like a giant jigsaw puzzle, where all the parts are there but haven't been put together yet. The one or two-room dilapidated peasant house was being replaced with high-rise apartments.

Peking is flat and low-key in color. The people, male and female, wear blue Mao jackets and caps and baggy blue pants. The homes and babies were the most colorful thing in today's China. Two-wheel carts for hauling were drawn by people, mules, horses, bicycles and an occasional 10-horse field tractor

In this Northern city so close to the Mongolian border, there were few leather shoes. All seemed to be the traditional black slippers with white socks. Further south it reversed, and leather shoes prevailed.

The Taopu commune, 2,471 acres (medium size) and 16,000 people, was started in 1958, an outstanding example of the farmers' place in China. Families were housed in motel-like poured concrete buildings. Each unit was two stories and quite spacious. No central heating or plumbing. The occupants built their own homes for $7,000 and own them.

We were served a 10-course lunch at the commune dining room, complete with beer and wine. Everything served was grown right there. They had their own pigs, chickens, cattle and a variety of 158 vegetables. This type meal is only prepared on Chinese New Year's and one other special occasion. When our host was asked, "If someone is a slacker and doesn't want to work, what then?" he replied, "Those who don't work, don't eat."

A carpet factory, arts and crafts research institute, and a middle school were but a few of the many endless visits arranged The school equivalent to our high school had classes of about 50 each. We sat in on a class teaching English. There is a choice of Russian or English, starting in the first grade.

A surprise visit by the mayor and village trustees interrupted teenagers playing amusement games at the Arcade in Voorheesville. Spotlight

voorheesville Village monitors 'teen hangout

Voorheesville's village board is investigating a new round of complaints that a teenage amusement parlor in the center of the village should be padlocked as "a public nuisance."

Although no immediate legal steps are contemplated, Mayor William J. Wenzel said that "if the complaints are justified, steps will be taken."

Wenzel and the trustees paid a surprise visit to the Arcade on Main St. last Tuesday, and the mayor returned for a second spot-check shortly before 10 p.m. Friday. On both occasions the scene was peaceful. Lane, a construction worker who owns the Arcade, agreed last October to provide adult supervision at all times and to observe certain closing hours. The agreement followed a brief legal skirmish that saw the village notify Cargill they were revoking his certificate of occupancy and Cargill countered with a restraining order in State Supreme Court.

Last week several residents appeared at the board's regular monthly meeting to complain that the "noise level is incredible" and that Cargill has not lived up to his pledge to provide adult supervision.

The residents conceded that "some progress was achieved" after the complaints last fall, but stated that recently "the noise level has been rising, foul language and drinking have been resumed and decent living is incompatible with that place."

One resident added: "Guilderland Center had a similar experience. They closed it, and now we're getting the spillover from there."

The board's reaction was prompt. Wenzel recessed the meeting, put on his coat and hat and led the four trustees on a short walk in the night air. Five minutes later the group entered the game center to find a dozen youngsters playing the mechanized amusements. At the counter was Robert Lee, whose age was given as 19. The time was 8:40 p.m. Back in village hall, Wenzel told the small audience the board would look into the complaints. The indication was that although no violations were immediately evident on the surprise visit Tuesday night, the complaints had been persistent.

"It's serious," he said. "We gave him (Cargill) a second chance, and apparently it's not working."

Scout camp parents

An orientation meeting for parents who have registered children for Girl Scout camp or are considering doing so will be held from 7:30 p.m. to 9 p.m. Thursday, April 5, at the Citizen Genet School, East Greenbush. The school is located on Rt. 4 just north of the junction with Rt. 9.

BETHLEHEM Roard to seek Ritchko successor

Art Ritchko, the winningest head football coach in Bethlehem' Central history who has just come off a first place undefeated 1978 season, feels its time he stepped down as head coach.

In a game where numbers count and success is paramount, Ritchko has accomplished in his 21 years with Bethlehem what many coaches might envy: 123 wins, 42 losses and 8 ties; winning five Suburban Council championships and being runner-up five times.

But his success may keep him from a well-deserved rest. He's ready for a change, and has submitted a request to be relieved from his head coaching duties, but a legal technicality may be a roadblock.

Ritchko is hopeful, if cautious. "There is a good possibility I won't be head football coach next year—but it's unofficial," he says.

Contractual agreements may be the hurdle keeping Ritchko from stepping down. A physical education teacher, required to coach two or three sports, can't resign a coaching position, he can only request replacement, according to Supt. of Schools Lawrence A. Zinn.

Ritchko, who also coaches baseball, says he wants to continue teaching. If he is replaced as head football coach, he would continue coaching other sports.

Zinn says that before the board of education can consider any replacement request, it must consider the quality of the potential replacement. Ritchko's shoes will be hard to fill.

"For any position, we weigh the kind of replacement we can come up with. If we can't come up with the caliber of the person we have, then we keep the position filled with the original person," says Zinn.

Ritchko's determination and dedication, keynotes to his success, have contributed to his need for a rest as well as the difficulty in finding a highcaliber replacement.

"Football is a very difficult and complex sport to coach," Ritchko admits. "You put a lot of pressure on yourself, and it takes a lot out of you. To be successful in any endeavor you have to be dedicated and put time in. I spent so much time in the game that it came to the point where I'd like to spend time doing something else."

Student 'shadows' police

A Bethlehem Central High School senior had an unusual experience last week—he "shadowed" Bethlehem police.

As a participant in the "shadow experience" program administered by the school's guidance office, Matthew Waschull of Delmar has expressed an interest in law enforcement as a possible career. At 118 Adams St., he was assigned to Officer Richard Vanderbilt of the police youth bureau, who showed him as many aspects of police work as he could in a 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. day—from criminal investigation to use of the radar "gun."

Benefit sale planned

The Ladies Auxiliary of the Delmar Fire Dept. will sponsor a garage sale and bake sale on Saturday. April 7, from 10 to 3, and are soliciting donations of baked goods or usable items. Larger items will also be brought to the firehouse from 6:30-8:30 p.m. on April 4-5-6. Pickup can be arranged by calling 439-3914 or 439-0567.

Tips for resumes

A resume writing workshop will be held at the Bethlehem Library on Monday, April 16, and on Monday, April 23, from 7 to 9 p.m. Michael D'Attilio, dean of students at the College of St. Rose, will conduct a free two-session workshop designed to help job-hunters produce an effective resume.

Science fair held

Nonika Mascarenhas, an eighth grader, was awarded the "best of fair" ribbon for her exhibit of "Hormones and Bud Production in the Moss Polytrichum" at the Bethlehem Middle School Science Fair last week. Other winners were: Grade 6 - exhibit, Ruth Choppy; demonstration, Philip Kaminsky; Grade 7 - exhibit, Janet Shaffer: demonstration, Brad Green; Grade 8 - exhibit, Whitney Obrig and Lauri Trotta; demonstration, Matt Healy.

Science Supervisor Tom Atkinson said the 40-odd entries were fewer than last year, but the quality was higher.

Coffeehouse entertainment

Mike DeAngelis and Cindy Reusswig of Delmar will present a concert of contemporary folk music Friday, April 6, at 8:30 p.m. at the Bethlehem Coffeehouse, 125 Adams St., Delmar.

More than 400 people came away from the Delmar Fire Dept. open house Sunday confident that the new Rescue Squad ambulance represents the latest and most sophisticated lifesupport system anywhere in the area. Among the visitors were Bethlehem Supervisor Tom Corrigan, center, and Ralph Mosher of Slingerlands, shown here listening to the enthusiasm of Lt. James Kerr. Community residents contributed $30,000 to a special fund that helped finance the $70,000 ambulance.

Chinese conversation class

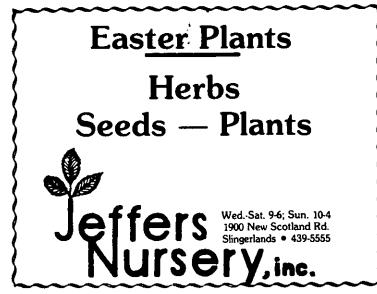

A class in Chinese conversation sponsored by the Chinese Community Center has started at Shaker High School, Latham, taught by four area instructors including Thomas T. Shen of Delmar. It is designed mainly to meet the needs of travellers visiting China. The class meets Saturdays from 10 to 12. For information, call Dr. Shen at 439-2362.

Cable firm appeals

Bethlehem Video, Inc. and Bethlehem's town board have agreed to disagree on the firm's application for an increase in the cable television franchise rates to customers. The town board last week approved a resolution that would permit the company's appeal to go before the State Cable TV Commission. The board last month granted Bethlehem Video a rate increase of $1.04, denying the firm's request for a boost of $1.89 to $9 per month.

Bake sale planned

The Pioneer Girls of Bethlehem Community Church will hold a bake and craft sale Saturday, April 7, at Delaware Plaza from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

DELMAR Students staging 'Battle of books'

Three Bethlehem Middle School pupils will vie with three St. Thomas School pupils for the championship of "The Battle of the Books," on Saturday, April 7, at 2 p.m., at the Bethlehem Library.

Winners at each school have been named on the basis of the number of books they have read during the school year. Although the competition was open to pupils in grades 6, 7, and 8, all three Middle School winners are sixth graders: Rachel King, Beth Schoenfeldt and Karin McCoy. They will receive $25 savings bonds contributed by the Middle School parents steering committee.

At St. Thomas School the winners are seventh-graders Peter With and Ilene Berry and sixth-grader Ann Comi.

Three winners from each school will compete as teams on April 7, answering questions about the books they have read. Book lists of about 100 titles were made available to all the children who wished to compete at both schools, and the questions on these books have been compiled by Shirley Schenmeyer, Middle School librarian, and Diane Gravlee, St. Thomas School librarian. The oral competition will be directed by a Bethlehem Library staff member.

If any of the winners are unable to compete, the following alternates stand ready to join their teams: from the Middle School, Michele Conway, fourth place; and Lisa Henrikson, Kristen Wiltse and Ruth Choppy, tied for fifth place; from St. Thomas School, Diane Wellbrock and Joan Peyrebrune.

BASEBALL Coach is gloomy on BC prospects

"Our biggest problem for this season will be pitching," says Bethlehem Central baseball coach Art Ritchko, who is less than optimistic about his Eagles chances for a winning season.

The Eagles, coming off a dismal record last year, are best described by Ritchko as "inexperienced." He admits he and the team have a long way to go.

"These guys," Ritchko says, referring to his hurling staff, "still have to prove themselves, and our success depends to a great deal on how our pitchers progress."

On the mound, starting hopefuls include returning lettermen Bill Muller, formerly an outfielder, Jim Cebry and Dave Morell, seniors, and transfers Dan Slaughter and Pete Ritchko. Coach Ritchko lost key pitchers Mark Platel, now hurling for a Chicago White Sox farm team, and Jim Fitzgerald to graduation last June.

"The pitching is the most important part of the game," Ritchko explains, "and right now it looks like we won't have the pitching staff of previous years."

Other returning lettermen are Bob Lemieux, senior, at shortstop; Jim Shaw, senior at second base; Mike Soeller, senior, catcher, and Dave Cochran, senior, injured last year. Junior varsity players likely to see considerable action include Mike Hodom, Jim Bain and Tom Barclay, all seniors, and Buch Wadelich, a junior first baseman.

Ritchko feels that it is too early to tell how his team will fare on the other important part of the game, hitting. "We've had a little batting practice, but right now we're just throwing the ball over the plate to give the boys a chance to hit."

The Eagles could use a few power hitters, but Ritchko admits that size is just one of the assets his team lacks. "We've got average sized guys. We've been bigger in the past and we've been better."

Ritchko consoles himself with the possibility that other teams may be just as inexperienced as his Eagles. "Maybe everybody is in the same boat we're in."

The team's first test will be Wednesday, April 11, at Shenendehowa. Doug Payne

A vote for O'Brien

Editor, The Spotlight:

I was delighted to read the Spotlight announcement of Mrs. Marjory O'Brien's candidacy for the board of education. She is an excellent choice for Bethlehem Central voters.

As past vice president and current president of the Slingerlands PTA, Mrs. O'Brien has attended and participated in nearly every school board meeting held during the last two years. She fully understands the responsibility and complexity of school board involvement.

Marge O'Brien's nursing background gives her a great deal of insight into people and their individual concerns. Her Girl Scout leadership gives her first-hand experience with teaching, enrichment and field trip responsibilities. Her work with the Recreation Dept, gives her some familiarity with buildings and grounds and planning. She's a natural when it comes to small budgets and large denands — ask any mother of five. Marge really knows a frill from a priority!

Marge O'Brien reflects the pulse of a community struggling to regain quality education and discipline in its schools while trying to keep spending in check. As a parent, she demands that her children (ages 8-15) exert their best effort toward learning all they can while attending the Bethlehem schools. She full well expects the Bethlehem school system to offer those children a quality education in a secure learning atmosphere.

Any taxpayer who cares about our schools and our ability to pay for them will have a voice through Marge O'Brien. She is sensitive to the fine line between cost and quality of education, effectiveness and efficiency of programs. Constantly striving to make our community a better place to live, she will strive for excellence in our schools as well!

Elsmere

Background for vandalism

Editor, The Spotlight:

In regard to all the articles about vandalism and youth crime reported almost weekly in this paper: who is to blame? Can we really place all the blame on today's youth? I believe the blame should be shared equally by the youth and their parents.

How many parents can honestly answer "yes" when questioned if they know where their children are, who they are with and what they are doing? Or how many really care, as long as the children are not at home bothering them, or interrupting the parents' social lives? Would the parents of these "youthful offenders" feel the same way if they were held monetarily responsible for the damaged property?

When I was a teenager, not very long ago, our parents were concerned with what we were doing, where we were, who we were with, and believe it or not — what time we would be home. We were not resentful. We knew they questioned us because they loved us. Are things really so different now?

Wake up, parents, give a damn, before it's too late.

Community Corner

It's Pancake Time Again

One of the best ways to see all your friends in one place is to have breakfast with the community this Sunday, April 8. The Bethlehem Lions Club is serving its annual pancake and sausage breakfast all you can eat—at the Blanchard Post, American Legion, in Elsmere from 8 a.m to 1 p.m.

Besides being a convivial occasion, the event benefits a worthy cause—the Lions' sight and hearing conservation projects.

And there's no way the Lions will run out of pancakes, sausage, maple syrup and coffee. We'll see you there.

Community Corner, a public service column of important community events, is sponsored by
