GLENMONT

Job Corps center reaches out to community

The Glenmont Job Corps Center is four years old—an anniversary surprising only because it has attracted so little attention.

Four years ago, it appeared that the center would remain very much on the minds of Glenmont residents, an intrusion of undereducated city kids in this quiet farming and suburban community.

It hasn't worked out that way. The Job Corps Center still looks like a college campus—immaculate and self-contained—and may be in better shape today than when it was as the Our Lady of Angels Seminary. The 325 students work with a sense of purpose and enjoyment which belies that early image of young prisoners. Incidents, with the exception of the occasional runaway report filed with the Bethlehem police, are virtually nonexistent.

In fact, the center, as well as the entire Job Corps program, has prospered. "We evidently have become a favorite program of the Republicans," says center Director Forest Corbin.

This is a federal program which can demonstrate its success—93 percent of the graduates at Glenmont are placed in jobs as soon as they leave. Add to this the close ties to big business, which runs the majority of job centers, and it's easy to see why Job Corps has become the darling of the new conservative wave in Washington.

The Glenmont center is run by Singer, which is the largest corporate contractor of Job Corps centers. Others are run by RCA, AVCO, ITT and the Interior Department. "It's a mixture of profit and non-profit," says Corbin; Singer makes money on its job corps contracts, but the company counts as its major benefit the experience and expertise it has gained in the field of job training and motivation. The concept of individualized instruction, often combined with programmed learning devices, has applications in many other fields.

No less a personage than Orin Hatch, the conservative Republican from Utah, recently plugged Job Corps on the Senate floor. While other federal programs wince under the Reagan-Stockman ax, Job Corps continues to open new centers.

In Glenmont, Job Corps community ties are increasing after a very rocky beginning. The U.S. Labor Dept. is looking into the prospect of asking Bethlehem for sewers, after having successfully obtaining water from the town three years ago. The sewers would require participation of the center's neighbors, which would be another test of how things have changed since the angry hearings of 1976.

According to Corbin, relations are excellent. The Near Neighbors Council meets every other month (except during the summer). "I call them all the time, he says.

The center also host blood-mobiles, contributes to local fund drives and helps out when needed. The culinary arts students have served refreshments to senior citizens groups and were at the opening of the new Bethlehem Town Hall. The auto body students repaired a damaged police car, and several building maintenance students worked on the town hall renovation project.

More important, the job corps approach to training is no longer a novel idea in the Capital District. Corbin says he gets more and more of the "can I get my kid in" calls, even from well-to-do neighborhoods in Bethlehem.

In 1979, the center added 30 non-resident trainees to its contingent of 325 resident men and women. Glenmont has its own local recruiter on staff. The cosmetology program was added because of local demand. The on-the-job training program has almost too successful, because local employers want to hire their trainees even when they have roots in other parts of the state.

And perhaps the ultimate indicator of success is the enthusiasm of the students themselves. "We're starting to get word-of-mouth applications," says Corbin. "And we're starting to get brothers and sisters of kids who have already gone through."

Instructors needed

Interested in working with children? Like being outdoors? Opportunities are available for instructors at the Five Rivers Environmental Education Center in Delmar to guide outdoor lessons for school classes at the center.

The instructors will be teaching environmental education lessons to small groups of school children from kindergarten through sixth grade. After attending training sessions and observing other instructors in the program, instructors will receive a small stipend for each lesson that they teach.

The guided school program has served over 10,000 students in its three-year existence. "The increasing popularity of the program," says Grace Weatherby, program coordinator at the center, "makes it necessary for us to expand our present corps of 20 instructors for the upcoming fall season."

Interested persons should be available on weekday mornings and/or afternoons. A background and interest in the outdoors and in working with children is required. Fall training sessions will be held on Sept. 15, 16, and 17. For further information, contact Gerry Oakley at 457-6092.

Sewer project restrictions outlined

Bethlehem is getting approximately $4.9 million in state and federal aid to complete its massive sewer extension project. Naturally, there are strings attached.

The town board held a public hearing last week to outline the conditions imposed on the projects by the federal Environmental Protection Agency, which include restrictions on new building in flood plains or in state-designated wetland areas.

"They've found in the past that funding sewer projects tends to promote development," explained Robert J. Fraser, of J. Kenneth Fraser Associates, the town's engineering consultant on the project.

But in this case restrictions should make little or no difference to the way property is developed in Bethlehem. Only one area, the Belldale Rd. near Krimkill in North Bethlehem, would appear to be affected by the 100-year flood plain, restrictions, and the residents there rejected new sewers when they were offered, according to Town Supervisor Tom Corrigan.

Fraser said he used existing state maps based on aerial photos taken in 1968 to indicate the wetlands which fall in the project boundaries. He added that he doesn't necessarily agree with those maps: "They selected many areas I wouldn't call wetlands and missed many areas I would."

Both the flood plains and the wetland areas are outlined on maps which will remain on file in Town Clerk Marion Camp's office for 30 days. No one in the audience spoke for or against the restrictions at the hearing.

The $6.7 million project will provide new sewers for 16 areas of the town, and will also create a new district to serve approximately 25 homes in South Albany. Tentative approval was announced last December, but this spring town officials realized that Reagan Administration funding cuts could jeopardize the project, so the design timetable was moved up a year.

Fraser told the town board that his firm had met the new Aug. 10 deadline for submitting designs and the completed application.

"The outlook is rather good," he said.

In other business, the board:

- Gave residents on the north side of Delaware Ave. what they asked for, which is a formal statement that the board agrees with the Bethlehem Planning Board that no change should be made in the zoning of the area between the Christian Science Church and Borthwick Ave.

- Set a Sept. 9 public hearing on a proposal to change the speed limit on Elm Ave. between Feura Bush Rd. and Peel St. from 40 to 35 miles per hour. Twenty four residents had petitioned for a reduction to 30 m.p.h., but the board followed Safety Commissioner Ralph Tipple's recommendation that the 35 m.p.h. limit is "in order" because that is the speed limit on the section between Feura Bush Rd. and the town park.

- Accepted six easements which will allow the town to extend sidewalks on the north side of Kenwood Ave. from the water line to Mason La.

- Authorized $24,000 for Fraser Associates to prepare a map and plan for a special sewer district for Halter Rd. in Glenmont.

Workshop for playwrights

The Bethlehem Public Library will present a playwright-ing workshop on Aug 24, 27 and 28. The workshop, from 2 to 4 p.m., will be held by Steven Swartz, winner of the 1981 CAPS award for playwriting. There will be readings from the award-winning play, "The Prince a Ninth Street," as well as workshops in scene development.

Adams House gets board's blessing

After hesitating through the spring and summer, the Bethlehem Town Board last week decided on a direction for the old town hall, now known as Adams House.

The direction is to do a minimal amount of repairs and offer space to community groups which will perform some sort of public service in return.

"I say go with it," said Councilman W. Scott Prothero, who had been the project's chief questioner on the board.

Prothero made it clear he still has questions about the project, primarily having to do with the cost of repairs but also on whether the community groups which have expressed interest in using space will be able to carry through. But, he said, it's time to "give them the opportunity to try."

The old Bethlehem Town Hall, now known as Adams House.

Corrigan said he has an engineer's estimate of $12,550 for repairs to the building's roof and exterior. The board authorized Corrigan to ask for bids on the roof and exterior work.

Corrigan was also instructed to negotiate with the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce, the Daughters of the American Revolution and the Bethlehem Art Association.

The chamber has been actively seeking other office space, apparently concerned that the town board was going to delay its decision indefinitely.

Corrigan said recently that he has talked to the D.A.R. and "they're ready to move in today." The organization plans to run a genealogical center. The art association, which would run classes on the second floor, has also been waiting for an answer.

One of Prothero's concerns has been that none of the three organizations are proposing to pay enough rent to defray the cost of heating and maintaining the old building. The last full year of operation cost the town $17,621, and fuel costs have doubled since then. The board agreed that a condition for leasing space to non-profit groups must be that there be some benefit to town citizens. Both the D.A.R.'s genealogical center and the art association's classes would meet that criteria, and the chamber has discussed the idea of operating a consumer relations bureau as its contribution.

The building served as the town hall up until March, 1980. Since then there have been several feelers from private individuals, although the town has never formally put the building on the market. "If someone is really interested and the price is right, I think we'd look at it," Corrigan said recently. "We've never had a bonafide offer."

Late last month a local attorney toured the building, but no offer was forthcoming.

Search for the past

Are you interested in your "roots" and want to find out how to trace your genealogy? The Bethlehem Historical Association's School House Museum, Rt. 144 and Clapper Rd., Selkirk, will present a local history exhibit beginning Sunday, Aug 30, and continuing through October on Sundays from 2-5 p.m.

The exhibit, assembled by the Bethlehem Genealogy

Group of which Florence Christoph is Chairwoman, will feature several early families of Bethlehem and will show their genealogy as well as display some of their possessions. The exhibit will also detail the committee's research for genealogical material on the people of Bethlehem from Federal census, town, church, cemetery, road and school records.

Board to consider open container law

Bethlehem may reluctantly follow the area trend toward open container laws, but town board members made it clear last week that they want to avoid anything that smacks of more bureaucracy.

A number of suburban towns now have open container laws, and Albany passed one earlier this year. Many police officials say a law which makes it illegal to possess an open container of alcoholic beverages in a public place is necessary to replace the old, but now repealed public intoxication laws as a way of controlling disorderly behaviour.

Town attorney Bernard Kaplowitz told the board last week that Bethlehem Police Inspector Richard LaChapelle had asked him to draft an ordinance. Bethlehem has had its share of situations where the ordinance would be useful, "although it hasn't been as bad a problem this year as it was last year," Kaplowitz said.

The board was generally receptive, but wary. "I wouldn't like to get into a big permit thing," said Town Supervisor Tom Corrigan. Kaplowitz agreed that the questions defining public places and deciding how to grant permits "call for some study."

The board also agreed that this would be a good time to review the town's policy on not allowing beer at the Elm Avenue Park and the Henry Hudson Park. Councilman John Guertze, who caters numerous area picnics, said the town is losing money because of its policy.

Beer sellers arrested

Bethlehem police have taken to attacking the problem of under age drinking at the source. Following an investigation which began last month, police Wednesday obtained warrants against three young women who are clerks at the Stop and Go and Cumberland Farms in Delmar and the Grand Union in Glenmont and charged them with selling beer to minors.

Tower vandals caught

Bethlehem, which is paying to have the inside of the Kenwood Ave. water tower painted, has been at a loss to stop some rather unsightly freelance painting of the outside of the tower. Wednesday evening, however, Bethlehem police caught three 18-year-old Delmar youths more or less black-handed.

Acting on a call, police officers arrived at the tower at 10:25 p.m. to find the three at the top of the tower. Two cans of black spray paint were recovered at the scene.

The youths were ordered to appear in Bethlehem Town Court Tuesday on trespassing charges. Their names were withheld pending possible youthful offender status.

Sue Ann Ritchko reports:

Albany County Legislature

Starting Sept. 1, Albany County residents will pay one percent less on the county home heating fuel sales tax. The Albany County Legislature last week reduced the county sales tax on home heating fuels from two percent to one percent.

Republican legislators have long fought to eliminate altogether this tax, pointing out that the county surplus made this tax unnecessary. It severely affects older residents on a reduced budget, most of whom need a fairly warm environment. The Democrat majority have been in opposition, arguing that it would be fiscally unwise to eliminate the tax.

In another action which may have far-reaching effects, the legislature appointed a three-person commission to evaluate the existing 39 legislative districts and draw up a new election map based on the 1980 census figures. The county charter required that a plan be ready within 90 days.

Because of population changes since 1970, Albany would lose representation in the legislature, thus possibly cutting into the Democrats present two-thirds majority. Colonie and other Republican-controlled suburbs would stand to gain.

The new districts would be used for the elections in 1983, the next election year for county offices.

The three-man commission appointed by the Democrats is heavily weighted in their favor. The chairman is Henry E. Dennis, a Colonie Democrat; County Engineer Paul C. Cooney and former County Legislator Donald R. Munn of McKownville, a Republican, are the other two members.

Republicans attempted to substitute Colonie Republican Legislator James W. Derbyshire for Munn, as a more equal match for the chairman, an active Democratic legislator.

They were overruled by Majority Leader Richard Meyers. Munn was described by Democrats as "a person easy to work with." The resolution passed 26 to 11.

The legislature also hired John J. McEneny, commissioner of the Albany Department of Human Resources and architect of the city redistricting plan, as a consultant to the commission at a fee of $3,500. This also passed over the objections of the Republicans.

In other actions:

The legislature voted to spend some $9,600 for the basic educational program at the Albany County Jail to replace monies the program is losing from federal cutbacks for the remainder of this calendar year and to spend approximately $33,900 for 1982 if no new funds become available. Edward Sargent, Republican of Bethlehem, said the rate of return to jails for inmates who participated in the program is much lower than for inmates in general.

• The legislature also set a public hearing for 3:30 p.m. Aug. 26 at the County Court House on a proposal to have hotel owners pay their one percent county hotel room tax at the same time they pay other county taxes.

• The Legislature voted to give an 8% pay raise retroactive to January 1, for middle-level personnel in the Sheriff's Department. This would amount to $101,000.

A final question:

What will the Gypsy Moth damage be next year if prompt measures are not taken? The U.S. Forest Service says this year's Gypsy Moth damage was the worst in a century. There is every reason to believe that the damage will be worse next year, according to the Forest Service.

Free enterprise

A Delmar 10-year-old tried to sell two pieces of silver flatware at several area antique and second-hand stores last week before Bethlehem police caught up with him Friday.

After one dealer told him he needed a note from his parents, the boy showed up at the Antique Exchange in Delaware Plaza Friday with a typewritten note. Under questioning from a police officer, he first said he found the items in a field, then admitted stealing them from a Slingerlands home. The boy was returned to the custody of his parents and juvenile authorities notified.

POLITICS

Who wins with reapportionment?

Thirty nine or 41? The debate over whether to increase the size of the Albany County Legislature is not strictly a partisan one, but the decision will have obvious political consequences for towns like Bethlehem and New Scotland.

The legislature last week appointed a committee to reapportion its districts based on the 1980 census. The committee probably won't finish its work until after the November elections, and the new districts would be effective for the 1983 county elections.

Among other things, reapportionment could mean combining parts of Albany with Bethlehem and other suburban districts, and it could also mean a new rural legislative district in New Scotland, Coeymans and the southern part of Bethlehem.

The Democrats, and Albany Mayor Erastus Corning, will control the reapportionment process by virtue of their control over the legislature. First, however, a decision has to be made on the size of the next legislature — a decision which could go either way, based on comments by Democratic leaders and private guesses by local Republicans.

If the Democrats decide to keep the legislative districts in Albany contiguous with the new aldermanic wards, the total number of legislative districts will have to increase from the present 39 to 41. That would mean a net gain of three districts outside the city, since Albany has already reduced its wards from 16 to 15.

If the Democrats decide to keep the number of legislative seats at 39, it almost certainly means forming new legislative districts in Albany, ones which are not contiguous with the wards and which will probably overlap city-town boundaries. For instance, Bethlehem's Ed Sargent could conceivably find himself representing part of Albany's South End as well as Glenmont and Elsmere.

This difficult choice is mandated by Supreme Court rulings requiring that legislative district sizes vary no more than eight percent either way. Because Albany lost about 12,000 people in the last census, its wards have shrunk, and a similar shrinking would be required all over the county if the ward lines are kept for the legislative districts.

Bethlehem currently has three full legislative seats—held by Sargent, W. Gordon Morris and Sue Ann Ritchko, all Republicans—and two districts in the Guilderland seat held by Democrat Ann Gafney. Census figures indicate that if the legislature stays at 39 seats Bethlehem will gain several more districts, and if it goes to 41 seats the town should have about three and a half seats.

There are political advantages and disadvantages to either choice. For the Albany Democrats, keeping the legislative lines contiguous with the city wards makes organization and control of the party machinery much easier and more secure. But it could also mean giving the Republicans three free seats, since the Republican towns of Colonie and Guilderland recorded the bulk of the county's growth in the 1980 census.

On the other hand, creating legislative districts which overlap town lines would, theoretically, allow the organization Democrats a chance to cut their losses in the suburbs. The danger here is in miscalculation — that the overlapping districts would be more vulnerable to either an attractive Republican or independent Democrat.

But the politicians are also concerned with the way the Albany County Legislature operates. Its critics say it is far too large already, with most of the work done by two or three members while the others draw $8,000 a year for showing up at a few meetings. Gordon Morris of Bethlehem, the Republican minority leader, advocates cutting the size in half and increasing salaries so the legislators could be nearly full time.

But local Republicans are betting that the views of Jack McEnny, the former census director who will be the legislature's consultant for reapportionment (and who also did the city's reapportionment earlier this summer), will prevail. McEnny has long been an advocate of "neighborhood lines" — of making elective districts more or less recognizable to the people who live in them. That means keeping the Albany ward lines and increasing the legislature to 41 seats. But it does not necessarily mean creating three new suburban Republican seats.

McEnny said Friday his preliminary look at the numbers indicates that there is sufficient population growth in the hill towns and the southern part of the county to warrant another seat in that area. "I can see the possibility of a new county legislative seat in Coeymans, New Scotland and Bethlehem," he said. "You would have another legislator with a strictly rural constituency."

McEnny didn't mention it, but it would be possible to get a nearly equal balance of Democratic and Republican voters in such a district.

It's official: area growth slows down

The final count is in on the 1980 census, and it pretty much confirms what people were saying last fall — slow growth for Bethlehem, moderate growth for Voorheesville, and no growth for New Scotland.

The final figures, released by the Capital District Regional Planning Commission, show some slight changes from the preliminary figures and add racial breakdown for area municipalities. Overall, the commission said, the Capital District had a moderate 2.7 percent population growth rate, the highest of any large urban area in the state. The greatest growth occurred in Saratoga County; the City of Albany lost 14,054 people.

Bethlehem's increase in population was 3.7 percent over 1970, which is what officials were told last fall. The final count is 24,296. The town has 350 black residents, 197 residents of Spanish origin and 321 listed as "other."

Housing units in Bethlehem increased 19.9 percent, from 7,440 in 1970 to 8,921 in 1980. That confirms the trend toward smaller units and fewer occupants per unit.

The Village of Voorheesville, which saw a boom in the 1960's, leveled off to a 17.5 percent growth rate in the 1970's. The final population figure of 3,320 is somewhat less than preliminary figures released in the fall. Also, the 1,054 dwelling units in the final report is 124 less than reported last fall, although still a 31.1 percent increase over 1970.

The census shows seven blacks, 18 Hispanics, and 24 persons whose race is listed as "other" in Voorheesville.

New Scotland grew by one person, to 5,656, according to the census. That's better than the preliminary figures, which showed the town with a 0.9 percent loss in population. The town's housing stock increased by 264 units, to 1,993, which is slightly less than the preliminary figures. The town has 12 blacks, 33 Hispanics and 44 persons listed as "other" by the census.

'A lifetime of memories'

I'm really putting up a kind of front," confides George Fowler. "I'm leaving behind a lot of lifetime memories in Slingerlands, including the house I live in. I built it when I was 22."

Slingerlands will be losing one of its oldest families when Fowler and his wife Agnes pack up and move to Ft. Lauderdale, Fla., later this month. Having enjoyed retirement in his McCormack Rd. house for 13 years since selling Fowler's Liquor Store, he says he's ready for a change.

Born in 1898 at the corner of Cherry and Kenwood Avenues, Fowler moved when he was six months old into the original Tollgate building, where his mother collected the toll for the plank road that ran in front. The charge for passage was five cents a single horse and ten cents a team. His father was the first rural delivery postman in Slingerlands.

"There was no high school in Bethlehem, so we took the train for the seven-mile trip to Albany High," he recalls. "Delmar had always been the largest of the three villages, but Slingerlands had the nicest station because the general manager of the D & H lived there. There was a blacksmith in town until the Stanley Steamers came in 1902. The cars led to gravel roads in 1910. Back then, Kenwood and Delaware were called state roads because they were the largest. Adams Street probably was the area of biggest growth. But Bethlehem didn't really start growing until just after World War II. That's when the Four Corners became more important."

After high school, George Fowler was a printer with the Slingerlands Printing Press, but in 1940 he opened his first liquor store next to where Vet's Garage is today. In 1957, Fowler and his one employe moved from their cramped quarters to the store's present location at 257 Delaware Avenue. "Within one year I doubled my business," he said. "I only had three workers when I sold the store to the present owner, Edward Spain, but I would deliver as little as a pint of liquor if a customer wanted it."

Somewhat of a tee-totaller himself, Fowler says the trends in liquor have changed. "Wine, especially from New York, and vodka have grown in popularity."

Between 1965 and 1967 Fowler was honored as one of the top 10 sellers of Gallo wines north of Poughkeepsie. He ambitiously started his own brand of liquor, bottled in Boston, which is still sold exclusively at Fowler's.

Fowler served as the first chief of the Slingerlands Fire Department in 1927, was a pioneer local Boy Scout leader, and one of the founders of Bethlehem's American Legion Post.

Voorheesville News Notes

Maryann Malark 765-4392

The Religious Education department of St. Matthew's parish, Voorheesville, will sponsor the film, Discipline in the Christian Classroom, following all the masses on Sunday, Aug. 30. James C. Dobson, Ph.D. in Pediatrics and associate clinical professor at the University of Southern California School of Medicine, instructs his audience on how to achieve a relaxed yet controlled atmosphere so that effective learning can take place. All teachers in the catechetical program at St. Matthew's are requested to attend. The film will be shown at 8:45 and 10:45 a.m. and 12:15 p.m. in the church.

Because of increasing family responsibilities, Chris Daily, youth coordinator for the First United Methodist Church in Voorheesville, will not return to that post this fall. In her place the education commission of the church has secured the services of Karen McMartin. A graduate of the University of Minnesota's College of Education and Institute of Technology, Karen taught high school chemistry and general science in Roseville, Minn., before coming to Voorheesville.

Since coming to Voorheesville, Karen has been active in church as well as community affairs. She has served as chairperson of the Methodist Education Commission church school superintendant and president of the United Methodist Women. Karen is a familiar face in the Voorheesville P.T.S.A. and has in the past chaired their annual book fair. She resides with her husband and family in New Salem.

BUSINESS

Main Care named CITGO distributor

Main-Care Heating Service has been designated a regional distributor for CITGO gasoline, according to William G. Vincent, president of the Delmar firm.

The new CITGO market encompasses a seven-county area including Albany, Schoharie and a segment of Columbia.

CITGO service stations were formerly Texaco outlets served by Main-Care. Approximately 30 service stations are involved in the changeover from Texaco to CITGO.

Main-Care Heating Service retail trade — residential and business — includes fuel oil delivery and installation and maintenance of heating and air conditioning equipment.

Bernard F. Ashe

Named to ABA post

Bernard F. Ashe of Delmar, Albany general counsel for New York State United Teachers, has been elected chairman-elect of the Section on Labor and Employment Law of the American Bar Association. He automatically will become chairman of the 12,000-plus member section next year.

The section on Labor focuses on law affecting labor relations. It provides ABA members a forum in that field and promotes recognition of the supremacy of law in labor-management matters.

Ashe has headed the Albany legal office of the United Teachers since 1971. He previously was assistant general counsel for the International Union of United Auto workers in Detroit, an attorney for the National Labor Relations Board in Washington, and a teacher in the Baltimore public schools.

The new chairman-elect is a graduate of Howard University, from which he also subsequently received his law degree. He is a member of the Board of Directors of the Urban League of Albany, Inc., and is an adjunct faculty member of the Albany Extension Division of the Cornell University School of Industrial and Labor Relations.

To share job

Mary P. Fleis of Elsmere, state capital bureau chief for the Associated Press in Albany, and Christine McKnight, a former New York State editor for the AP, will share the position of news director at the State University at Albany, effective July 30.

Ms. Fleis first joined the Associated Press in Albany in 1974, and has been assigned to the state legislature beat for the past four years. She has directed the AP's capitol bureau since October 1980.

She is a graduate of Douglass College of Rutgers University. She also has worked for a reporter for the Patterson, N.J. News, and as News Director at Union College.

Fleis is married to former Associated Press reporter David Shaffer, who is now director of public affairs and communications for the Business Council of New York State. McKnight is married to AP news photographer James M. McKnight, Jr.

SWIMMING

Delmar star breaks 2 state records

Delmar's swimming sensation Janet Shaffer wasn't quite satisfied with taking two gold medals for two first places in the Empire Games at Syracuse over the weekend—she shattered the records in each event.

Competing against the top swimmers from six regions of New York State, the 15-year-old Dolfin speedster set a new Empire Games record of 28.11 seconds in the scholastic girls' 50-meter freestyle, and lowered the mark for the 100-meter free to 101.50.

Doug Schulz of Delmar swam the 200 individual medley in 2:25.41, good for second place in the championship final and a silver medal. Four other Dolfins placed in the statewide meet: Jay Henahan finished No. 5 in the open men's 1500-meter and 400-meter free style finals and got a sixth place in the 400 IM; John Demarest earned a fifth place in the scholastic boys' 50-meter free and a sixth place in the 100-meter free; Donna Schulz was fifth in the open women's 100-meter backstroke finals, and Steve Bonowitz gained a fifth in the open men's 100 backstroke.

Janet Shaffer at her home pool, Elm Ave. Park in Delmar, two weeks ago.

Sue Mallery of Delmar, a 12-year-old swimming for the SUNYA Swim Club, clipped two-fifths of a second off her own fastest time in the girls' 100-meter butterfly at 1:12.5, but did not place in the first six, and was an alternate (7th) in the 200 'fly.

JCC offers fall course

The physical education department of the Albany Jewish Community Center will begin its fall programs the week of Sept. 14.

The department announces that the following courses are open to the public, center membership not required:

Meta yoga with Hans Frenkel will be taught Monday mornings. The course will incorporate a variety of yoga and aerobic movements in addition to relaxation and breathing techniques and meditation.

Dance aerobics combining dance and fitness movements will be taught by Kathy Symansky on Monday and Wednesday mornings as well as Tuesday and Thursday evenings.

Aerobic exercises—fitness through dance—will be taught by Marge Tynan on Monday and Wednesday evenings and Tuesday and Thursday mornings.

Mid eastern dance will be offered Thursday evenings with classes in beginners or intermediate levels with instructor Susan Schultz who performs with the Capital District Mid Eastern and dance troupe "Yallah."

For registration information about these or any other programs offered by the Albany Jewish Community Center, call 438-6651, Sunday through Friday.

BASEBALL

Blue Jays win 2, challenge lead

The Delmar Blue Jays did what they had to do last week to have a shot at winning the Schenectady Twilight League title, trouncing PNA Wednesday and then edging the Rotterdam Esquires Sunday.

The Jays, now 13-5 in the league, have two games to play—one against league-leader Sons of Italy (14-4). If they win both games, the title is theirs.

The PNA game belonged to designated hitter Charlie Leonowicz, who had a 370-foot homer, four RBIs and went five for five. Center fielder Mickey Brantley had a tripple and two singles, and Tom Lorenzo had three singles and four RBIs. Neil Stickles picked up his seventh win against no losses in the 15-8 contest.

Leonowicz also had the game-winning hit Sunday. His line-drive single in the fourth drove in Ward Phalen, who had singled and stolen second, breaking up a 4-4 tie.

Greg Brown pitched a five-hitter for the Jays. Pitcher John MacDonald played second base for the slightly injured Rick Verderse and hit a 360-foot two-run homer in the second. Brantley had two hits, including an RBI ground-rule double over the right field wall, and also produced some sparkling plays filling in at third base.

Softball finals tonight

The winners of two semifinals Tuesday are scheduled to meet tonight (Thursday) at the Bethlehem Central Middle School for the Church Softball League championships. The third-round games pitted Cluster against Delmar Presbyterian and St. Thomas against Bethlehem Community.

The church league is completing its 11th season, and currently has an opening for one team for next year. All teams play each Thursday night beginning the first week in May. Any church interested in joining the league should contact Bob Lynk at 439-3948.

Bridge tournament set

The Capital District Bridge Association will host a regional tournament Aug. 19th through 23rd at the Empire State Convention Center in Albany.

The tournament is open to any bridge player who wishes to play, or just come watch. Membership in the A.C.B.L. is not required. The schedule of events includes women's and men's pairs and teams, open and master's pairs and a flighted (by masterpoints) swiss teams. The scoring will be duplicate in style. The entry fee is $4.50 per session, and there is no charge for kibitzers, those who just come to watch.

Practice for archers

Rakowana Archers are opening their 14-target bow-hunting range to the public Saturday and Sunday. Targets include animal faces of all kinds at many different distances—excellent practice for the hunting season.

The Rakowana Archers are located on the Helderberg Workshop land located on Picard Rd. off Rt. 156. The site is ideally situated on the side of the Helderberg Mountains, with scenic, winding trails for hunting practice.

Swordsmen In Syracuse

YWCA Fencing Club member Susan Shipherd, of Delmar, qualified in second place in women's foil at the Adirondack Region competition for the Empire State Games held in Syracuse last week. Her son, J.P. Shipherd, qualified in second place in the junior men's division.

The YWCA Fencing Club meets Monday evenings at 28 Colvin Ave., Albany.

Youth is served at Junior tourney

The Bethlehem Tennis Association's Junior Tennis Tournament came to a close last week with some very young players making an impressive showing.

Eleven-year-old Jody Jones played a tough match against Laura Treadway in the semi-finals for the girls' 17-and-under title, losing 5-4 in a tie-breaker after having Treadway down 5-2 at set point.

Eight-year-old Kristen Jones made it to the semi-final of the girls' 14-and-under division.

Tournament results are as follows:

Girls' 17-and-under: Singles—Kathleen Bragaw over Laura Treadway, 6-3, 5-7, 6-3; Doubles—Laura Treadway and Aryan Shayegani over Jody Jones and Sheila Gould in a tie-breaker.

Boys' 17-and-under: Singles—Alex Macario over Mike Cole, 6-1, 6-2; Doubles—Alex Macario and Mike Cole over Dan Mylod and Scott Rukwid.

Girls' 14-and-under: Singles—Carolyn Cross over Tina Manion; Doubles—Tina Man-

Doubles partners Alex Macario and Mike Cole get set for a return during their finals match against Dan Mylod and Scott Rukwid. Macario and Cole won, and Macario later beat Cole for the singles title. On the cover: Eileen Berry, left, and Tina Manion on their way to the net after the winning point in the girls 14-and-under finals. Spotlight

ion and Eileen Berry over Kristen Jones and Carolyn Cross.

Boys' 14-and-under: Singles—Stan Lee over Brian Walenwick; Doubles—Stan and Eric Lee over Greg Olsen and David Cory.

Girls' 12-and-under Singles—Kelly Woodruff over Kelly Hart.

Boys' 12-and-under: Singles—Eric Lee over David Cunningham.

Novice Division: Boys—Chris Siciliano over Teddy Ward; Girls—Suzanne Ward over Kim Defazio.

nomination now, according to Major Douglas V. Fox, admissions liaison officer in the Bethlehem School District.

No political affiliation is required to apply. Congressional members are interested in receiving applications from well-rounded students who have grades ranking in the upper forty percent of their class, have participated in extracurricular activities that indicate leadership ability, and have kept physically fit.

Students and parents interested in obtaining information about the Air Force Academy may contact Major Fox through their guidance office or by writing 8 Rosebud Lane, Loudonville, 12211.

REMEMBERED... OR FORGOTTEN

It is the duty and privilege of every thoughtful family to care for the last resting place of a departed loved one. Whether a Memorial is large or small is not important. Even a simple Headstone shows that someone cared, but an unmarked grave is a forgotten grave.

Here at Empire you will find that the same care and consideration is given to every Memorial need and that we endeavor to serve in a way that will provide the greatest lasting satisfaction through the years.

Need for new ambulance

Editor, The Spotlight:

This year the Bethlehem Volunteer Ambulance Service is marking its 25th year of providing emergency service to the communities of Glenmont, Selkirk and South Bethlehem.

The squad is made up of about 60 dedicated volunteers who give up a considerable amount of their time in service to these communities. The members are trained in first aid and most are emergency medical technicians. In addition, they spend their own money in discharging many of the duties required of the service.

This particular emergency service is unique in the Town of Bethlehem in that it does not receive any tax dollars for its operations. Every other emergency service in the town, whether it be police, fire, or rescue squad, received tax money. The Bethlehem Volunteer Ambulance Service depends solely on contributions from the community-at-large and the businesses and industries in its service area for financial support.

Some of the expenses for this service include operating and maintenance costs for the ambulance and needed first aid and emergency supplies, as well as the purchase of a new ambulance every three years. The ambulance is now five years old and is rapidly deteriorating; repair costs are astronomical. The squad has been unable to purchase a new ambulance because of lack of funds. There is a growing concern regarding continued service to the communities. A new ambulance must be purchased this year if this service is to continue.

The 1981 Fund Drive began Aug. 1. Letters seeking financial support have been sent to businesses and industries in the service area. Squad members will visit each home in the service area early in September seeking financial help. A donation of as much as you can possibly give will help the Bethlehem Volunteer Ambulance Service reach its goal of $40,000 for the purchase of a new ambulance this year.

The squad wants to continue this valuable, free service for another 25 years with modern, up-to-date equipment. The squad provides the manpower and dedication, but they need funds for continued operation to provide this emergency service to Glenmont, Selkirk and South Bethlehem.

Seniors thank Lions

Editor, The Spotlight

The Bethlehem Senior Citizens wish to publicly thank all the Lions for their yearly Cliff Van Dyke picnic held at the Elm Ave. Park Aug. 13.

They served 175 people.

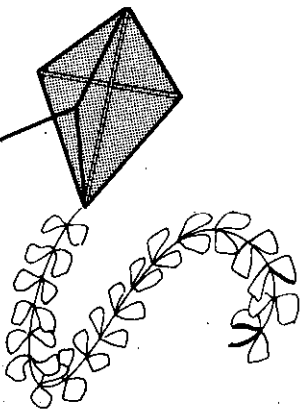

Entertainment was by the "Troupadors."

Community Corner

A Community Resource

Five Rivers Environmental Education Center in Delmar, one of the area's great community resources, is looking for instructors for outdoor lessons this fall. The center's appeal (see Page 8) underscores the growth and acceptance of its activities over the years. More than 10,000 children have gone through the guided school program, and the center runs numerous special programs in all seasons.

Community Corner, a public service column of important community events, is sponsored by
