Rezoning voted down

By Tom McPheeters

After all the tumult of the public hearing, it took the Bethlehem Town Board less than five minutes and very few words to reject the proposed Brooks-Byer rezoning on Kenwood Ave. and Adams Pl.

That is not to say the issue couldn't return if the owners wish to be more specific about what they plan for the area, which is adjacent to the busy Four Corners intersection.

"I don't find this a matter of spot zoning," said Supervisor Tom Corrigan. "But I find that the information provided was rather sparse, and I agree with the residents that it doesn't give us much of an idea what is to be done there."

At a Sept. 28 public hearing, about 80 area residents, many of them brought out by a newly-formed neighborhood association, opposed the request that the property be rezoned from A-Residential to CCC-Commercial. The property now contains two buildings, one housing an insurance office and the other a residence. At the hearing, no one spoke for the applicant except town planner Edward Kleinke, who explained the town Planning Board's reasons for recommending the zone change.

But Kleinke was forced to admit that once the land is rezoned the town would have no control over what happens to the site. He said the owners had not discussed their plans at the time the request was before the planning board.

The town board's action Wednesday, at their first meeting after the hearing, will

A neighborhood arms itself

Editor's Note: Zoning issues along Delaware and Kenwood Avenues, particularly the issue of commercial developments in once-residential neighborhoods, have spawned two new neighborhood organizations in Delmar in the past year. Often residents are surprised by proposals and have to learn the ropes in a hurry in order to mount an effective protest. Linda Burtis, who lives near Elsmere Elementary School, has been following one such developing controversy from the residents' point of view.

By Linda Anne Burtis

It all began at 6:30 a.m. on July 16, when residents of Groesbeck Pl. and Herrick Ave. were awakened by the sound of bulldozers. Neighbors gathered in the early morning hours, coffee cups in hand, to watch as the old Liebich house on the corner of Herrick and Delaware Ave. went down.

What would happen to the vacant land, already zoned commercial and obviously in a prime location, yet right next to the Elsmere Elementary School? Nobody knew, but already the rumors were flying.

What followed was a short, compulsory cram course in neighborhood panic and town government. Without a single leader emerging, without a neighborhood association, panic over morning coffee has turned into community activism.

"It was like stone soup," said Lucy Dunn, who lives on Herick Ave. "People just used their expertise to help out."

It started casually. During the weeks after the house went down, residents met each other on the street corners and front porches and discovered they needed some basic information — who owned the land, now was it zoned and what options they had to oppose unwelcome development.

"Burger King became the catch phrase," recalled Lucy Dunn.

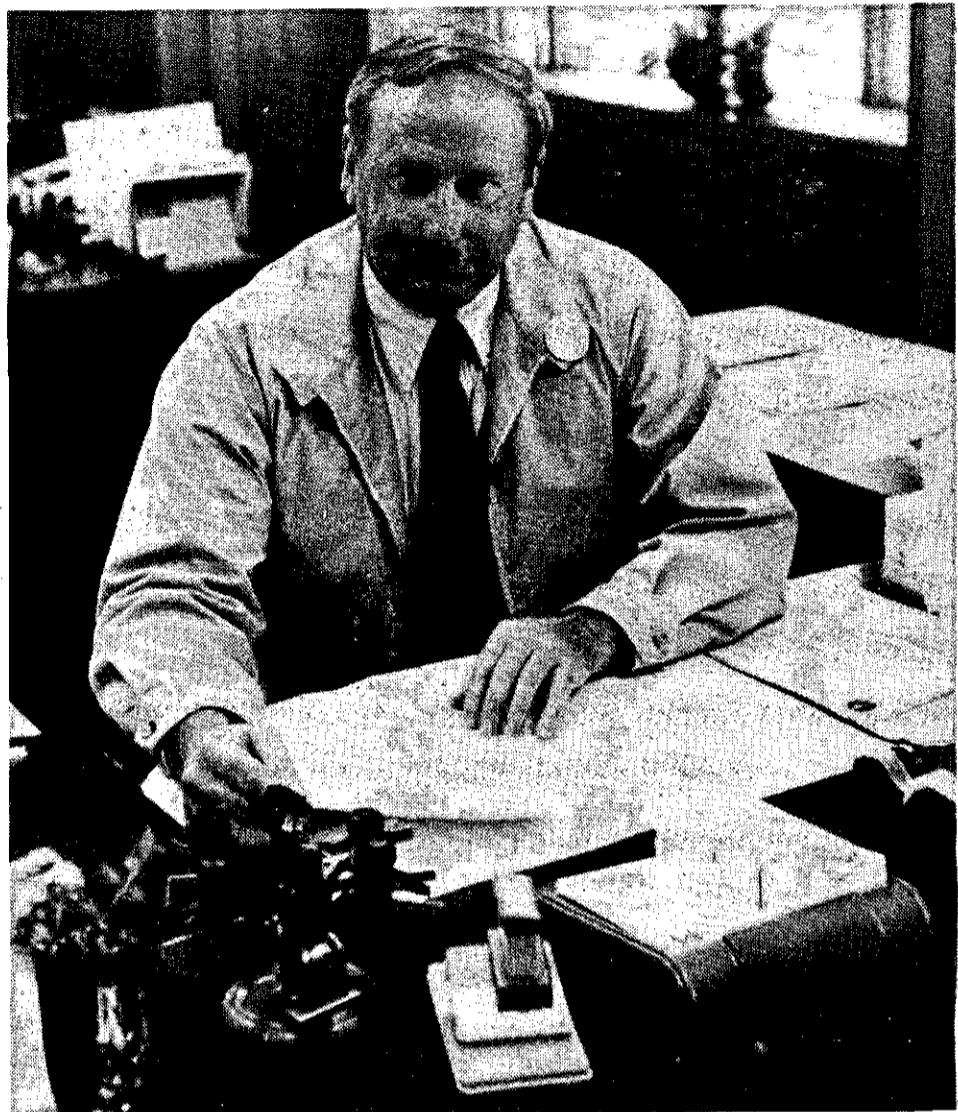

The Burger King scenario is not born of hysteria. The company has in the past looked at Delmar properties. The current CC zoning would allow a fast food restaurant on the site, and the Delaware Ave. location makes it attractive. The Liebich family, which owns the land (and also the adjacent building housing two stores) had said shortly after the demolition that the property is on the market although no particular buyer is being solicited.

As the facts emerged, the initial panic generated by the bulldozers turned to resolve. A group of residents decided to draw up a petition to present to the Bethlehem Planning Board asking that the property be rezoned to CCC-Commercial, which would permit only professional-type offices.

At this point, the organizers stumbled on a major source of support — the approximately 230 parents who sent their children to Elsmere Elementary school. Sheila Otto, president of the Elsmere School Community Organization, the school's PTA, brought the issue before her board. The following actions took place under intense time pressures because the group wanted to bring signed petitions before the planning board's Sept. 20 meeting: the ESCO board unanimously endorsed the support of the petitions on Sept. 14, the petitions were sent home with students on Sept. 16, returned with over 200 signatures on Sept. 19 and were brought before the planning board on Sept. 20.

But the momentum of neighborhood movers and shakers is one thing and the pace of government is an entirely different matter; the grinding gears of procedure brought all these efforts to a halt when planning board members informed the approximately 10 residents at the meeting that they must first seek town board approval before they can be placed on the planning board agenda. Of course, a phone call for this "formality" wouldn't do, and after procedures were followed they were scheduled to be on the agenda for the Oct. 18 meeting.

Mayor Bates calls it quits

By Nat Boynton

Voorheesville will have a new mayor next spring. Milt Bates is stepping aside to spend more time with his family.

For Milton F. Bates it was a hard decision after serving the village for 14 years, the last 3½ as mayor. "I really love the village," he said last week. "But the time demands on the mayor today are tremendous, and I feel I no longer have the time to devote. My years with my family have slipped by, and I've reached the point where I'd like to spend more time with them."

Bates and his wife, Betsy, have three children, Michael, a State University graduate; Margaret, a student at the Austin School of Beauticians, and Matthew, an eighth grade pupil in Voorheesville.

The mayor's decision to step down is certain to touch off a political scramble for the part-time post. The salary is modest — $2,500 — but the job has a measure of prestige and influence in local government.

Bates said he is making the announcement at this time in order to give prospective candidates "plenty of time to consider whether they want to run." The village elections, held annually in mid-March, are five months away.

Expected to be in the forefront of the scramble are Douglas DeDe and Daniel Reh, the two village trustees whose terms expire in March. Both are Salem Hills homeowners who have played prominent roles in the two major controversial issues that have dominated the Bates administration — the Salem Hills sewer rate hassle and a proposal to install a village-wide sanitary sewer system.

VOORHEESVILLE

Bates has been an outspoken advocate of the sewer project, now tied in with the proposed village takeover of the financially troubled Salem Hills waste disposal grid.

Now 45, Bates was named to the village's youth commission when he was 30. In 1970 he was appointed to the zoning board of appeals by Mayor William J. Wenzel. In 1971 he ran for village trustee on an independent ticket, losing by 41 votes, but a year later he was successful. He served four two-year terms on the village board.

In 1980 Bates decided not to seek a fifth term, but when Wenzel, the village's dominant political leader, unexpectedly withdrew as a candidate for reelection as mayor for business reasons only a few days before the filing deadline, he persuaded Bates to become an 11th-hour replacement on the ballot. Bates accepted, and was elected. He was reelected to his present term in 1982.

"I appreciate what people have done in electing me," he said the other day. "I think the accomplishments speak for themselves. I have faith in the future of the village, and I feel confident the voters will select a mayor who will carry on the forward thrust of the past several administrations."

Bates has been a mechanic for Niagara Mohawk for the past 20 years. He and his family have made their home in Voorheesville since 1963.

Members of the Slingerlands Rescue Squad demonstrate emergency methods above at the annual open house at the Voorheesville Fire Department last Sunday. At left, Elsmere fireman Bob House gives a tour at Delaware Plaza to Don Schalk of Delmar and his sons, Teddy, Joey and Bobby. Both events were part of local firemen's observance of National Fire Prevention Week.

Delays often hurt in situations such as this one, but residents have had time to give lots of thought to the impact of a commercial use for that property. Traffic increase is a big concern, and an elementary school with young children not yet trained in the complexities of crossing streets is an especially vulnerable spot.

Sheila Otto, who values the "peaceful" setting of the school, talked about "umpteenth screechings of brakes during the day." Richard J. Herrmann, principal at Elsmere Elementary School, also expressed concern about the additional traffic creating safety problems for the school children.

Herrmann raised another issue — lack of supervision for youngsters who might leave school grounds at lunch time to eat at a fast food facility.

And more than one resident is looking at the larger picture of Delaware Ave. itself. "It's beginning to look like Central Ave." said one. "I think it would be to the benefit of everyone if a town with this age and history followed Hilchie's example, with its colonial facade."

The residents know they are jumping the gun by not waiting for a sale to take place. The idea is to put the ball in the planning board's court, and to make land use on Delaware Ave. an issue from the start. It will work, predicts Karin Hendrickson, "if a lot more people become involved and especially influential people."

probably remove the issue from the coming election. The motion to deny was made by Councilman W. Scott Prothero, one of two board members running for reelection this year (with Ruth Bickel).

"I can't find any reason why it should be approved, whatsoever," said Prothero. And that was the end of the discussion. The vote was unanimous.

Smith renews criticism

A candidate for Bethlehem Town Board has renewed her criticism of the town budget's "surplus." This time, Democrat Barbara Smith says it appears the proposed 1984 budget contains "an outrageous $1 million surplus when considering highway, sewer and water budgets."

"Why aren't we using that surplus to cut taxes?"

Supervisor Tom Corrigan, who prepares the tentative budget to be considered by the board in the next month, repeated Monday what he had said about Smith's first charge regarding the budget:

From across Delaware Ave., Elsmere Elementary School can be seen through the trees lining the Liebisch property.

- Set a Nov. 9 public hearing date to establish a no parking zone on the west side of Grove St., at the Four Corners. The new Tri Village Drugs parking lot has recently been paved and curbing installed, which means that for the first time cars could park on both sides, creating a potential hazard for emergency vehicles, according to Safety Commissioner Ralph Tipple.

- Awarded a contract for a new nine-ton trailer for the Public Works Dept. to K.C. Canary, Inc., of Clifton Park, the low bidder, for $3,847.

- Approved a change order that will add $10,546 to sewer district contract No. 2 to be paid to contractor John DiGiulio for extra work encountered while drilling under the Delmar Bypass. Corrigan said the contractor hit a tree stump used as fill when the highway was built. Councilman John Guertze voted against the additional money: "The contractor takes these chances when he starts drilling under a four-lane highway," he said.

"It's not a surplus — it's a revenue."

Money left over at the end of one year is applied as a revenue item to the following year's budget, he said. "It's used to reduce taxes."

Corrigan said that by law the highway, water and sewer budgets must be kept separate from the town's general fund. It makes no sense to lump the excess from one fund with that of another, he said.

"If it is being used to reduce taxes the amount (of the surplus) should go down," replied Smith. "And it's gone up every year."

School bus in accident

A Bethlehem Central school bus was involved in a collision with a car last Wednesday afternoon, shortly after the bus had left Glenmont Elementary School. Twelve children suffered minor injuries in the accident on Bender La., according to police reports. No charges were filed.

Police said the car, driven by a Slingerlands woman, apparently skidded on the rain-wet pavement. Another bus was sent to the scene by the school district and returned the children to the school, where they were checked by the school nurse.

Less than an hour later, police received another report of an accident involving a school bus, this time on Krumkill Rd. in North Bethlehem. The accident involved a Gunderland Central School District bus. Only two children were on the bus and no one was injured, according to police reports. No charges were filed.

TOM McCORD

ON REFORMING OUR CRIMINAL JUSTICE SYSTEM

Lack of coordination is the real problem facing our criminal justice system — an Independent Study Commission should be created to address this problem.

It is time both Democratic and Republican County Legislators stopped playing partisan politics with our criminal justice system and started addressing the real problems facing that system. Democrats argue that 30 more cells are needed in the County Jail but they will not address the issue of the need for community service alternatives. Republicans who were arguing against community service programs here in Bethlehem just a few years ago, are now maintaining that we need such programs rather than more jail cells.

The question, however, is not jail cells or community service alternatives but an appropriate mix of both. Additionally, the real problem is not the development of community service programs and pre-arraignment and pre-sentencing investigations by the Probation Department — those programs already exist. The real question is why these programs appear to be utilized on such a limited basis at present.

The basic problem facing our local criminal justice system is one which is widespread throughout the United States — lack of coordination in the "system." After looking at local criminal justice systems throughout New York State, for example, the Linman Commission recently concluded that the "present system is unmanageable...the police, the district attorneys, the judges and the parole boards go their own way, making policy decisions in isolation and often at odds with other parts of the system."

I therefore call for the creation of an Independent Study Commission made up of representatives from the SJNY School of Criminal Justice, the clergy, concerned citizens, the Bar Association, and the courts, police and probation agencies.

Budget sessions near

In a preview of the decision making that comes later in the budget process, the Bethlehem Town Board Wednesday heard from two organizations that already perform services in the town but need more money to continue.

Board members listened to presentations from representatives of Project Hope, which has a satellite office in Glenmont, and the Albany Dispute Mediation Program, but made no commitment at the meeting. Supervisor Tom Corrigan said later that he expects to hold the first of a series of workshops on his proposed 1984 budget later this week or next week.

Bethlehem, like most municipalities, has a number of contractual agreements with other government bodies and private agencies to provide services. Many of those agreements are renewed year after year with little discussion — operation of the fire training tower in cooperation with area fire departments and recreation programs run with the Bethlehem Central School District are two examples. Earlier this year the town board approved a joint agreement with the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce and the board will have to decide whether to include $3,000 for the chamber in the 1984 budget.

Project Hope has been in operation in the town since February, and has garnered an impressive list of endorsements from area educators.

"The goal of the program is to keep the child in their own family," explained Louis Krupka, the program's director. At the Glenmont facility, he said, none of the youths who have stayed with the program have reentered the juvenile justice system, and 92 percent have remained in the school system.

Krupka said he is asking for an 8 percent increase in funding, but is not sure at this point what Bethlehem's share of that increase will be.

The Albany Dispute Mediation Program is already operating in the town, and director Cynthia Krouner told the board she is asking for $3,600 to increase the paid staff positions. She stressed that the 36 trained volunteers are all volunteers.

"What we do is defuse anger," she said. Follow up studies indicate that 90 percent of the agreements made in mediation remain in effect, "and I think the reason for that is that the people themselves are involved," Krouner said.

In other action, the board:

- Gave final approval to developer Kent Jenkins' plans to build 17 townhouse units in Dowerskill Village. An Oct. 4 public hearing before the planning board had turned up no opposition to the project, and the planners had recommended approval.

- Gave Public Works Commissioner Bruce Secor the go-ahead to plan an extension of the town water district to about 30 acres of undeveloped land on Orchard St. Secor told the board that the owner, Dr. F.C. Maxon Jr., is willing to pay the entire cost of the new line, which would run up Fisher Blvd. from New Scotland Rd. This could make it financially feasible for other property owners on Orchard St. — including the state Department of Environmental Conservation's facility at Five Rivers — to get water.

- Reviewed Secor's plans for the proposed sewer district extension on Rt. 144 from Union Oil's proposed new truck stop at Thruway Exit 22 to Cedar Hill. Again, Union Oil is proposing to pay all of the cost of the extension, which would allow property owners along the way to get sewers at much less cost than otherwise. Secor outlined his proposed route, and explained which properties along the way would "rationally" be included in the sewer district. Councilman W. Scott Prothero, who has been campaigning in the area, noted that even if a property owner chooses not to hook up he will still have to pay to be in the sewer district — an estimated cost of $8 to $15 per year, according to Secor. There will be some opposition, Prothero predicted. Nevertheless, the board ordered Secor to proceed with the final plans, after which a public hearing will be scheduled.

At language conclave

Three Bethlehem Central School District staff members will attend a conference next week at the University of Pennsylvania as the first step in an area campaign to strengthen foreign language instruction in public schools. J. Briggs McAndrews, assistant superintendent; Ralph Vander Heide, supervisor of foreign language instruction for the district; and Joan Platt, foreign language teacher at the Middle School, are among members of the newly formed Upper Hudson Foreign Language Consortium whose mission is to foster cooperation between high school and area colleges in foreign language instruction.

The group has received funding from the National Endowment for the Humanities and the Rockefeller and MacArthur foundations.

Callanan completes first century

The community of South Bethlehem has a rich history and has over the years retained an identity of its own. Historian Allison Bennett begins her tour of South Bethlehem with a look at Callanan Industries, which is 100 years old this year.

The first Peter Callanan in our area served in the Third Regiment, Albany County Militia, Land Bounty Rights, under Capt. John Vanderheyden in the Revolutionary War. He is buried beside his wife, Susan, in Mt. Pleasant Cemetery, South Bethlehem, near the place of his residence at the time of his death in October of 1824, aged 89 years. Peter Callanan served as a soldier, but after the war he turned to farming on the fertile land near the present location of the village of South Bethlehem, where he prospered and raised a family. His descendants, however, looked beyond the fields of hay and grain for another livelihood, turning toward the hills surrounding the little village.

TIMES REMEMBERED

Allison Bennett

A recent anniversary celebration at the Empire State Plaza Convention Center marked the 100th anniversary of the founding of Callanan Industries. The company was founded in 1883 by a grandson of the Revolutionary soldier, also named Peter Callanan. The Callanan Road Improvement Co. was formed to make riprap stone ballast for the emerging Buffalo and Weehawken Railroad and others. Peter Callanan visualized this ballast business and also a system of state highways that would serve the increased traffic over the old-fashioned plank and dirt roadways. He interested some of his neighbors in his venture and started what is now known as Plant No. 1. Among them were Philip Scharbauer, who ran a store in South Bethlehem; the local physician, Dr. J.R. Davidson, and John Newton Briggs, who had large ice houses in the Village of Coeymans. Callanan held the controlling interest and supervised the quarrying operations. In those days no machinery was in use, only manpower. Drillers used sledges and steel points to put down the holes for blasting, and screening and loading was done by hand.

In 1895, Callanan was awarded the very first contract let by the state for highway construction.

In 1895 a crushing plant was constructed and Peter's youngest son, Reid Callanan, later to become president of the company, was born. Also in that memorable year the company was awarded the very first contract let by the state for highway construction. This was a stretch of road leading out of the city along Northern Boulevard. Credit must be given to Peter Callanan for pioneering road building as he traveled throughout the state, speaking to town councils and setting forth his ideas. He even wrote a book on the subject and had it published. Sadly, Peter died the following year and his brother, John J., and cousin, Olin, took over operation of the quarry.

By the end of the season in 1902 they were looking forward to increased sales and expansion, but disaster struck when fire leveled the crushing mill. Many stockholders felt it would be foolish to start over, but Hannah Callanan, Peter's widow, had the vision to rebuild and hold the company together.

There were no mechanical shovels in those days and stone was picked by hand. It was not washed and the dust in the mill was tremendous. The old houses in the hollow near the plant were living quarters and commissary for the transient and contract laborers, with as many as 150 men living there at one time. Many of these men were Italian immigrants. Drillers had no jackhammers and to make a blast hole they sat on a powder box and used a hand hammer and star drill.

Peter's sons, John Hoyt and Charles, were growing up and taking over the business operations. Roads were being built at a record rate and railroads had increased the amount of ballast per mile of road to take care of heavier trains. All of this was reflected in the prosperity of the company until 1909, when once again disaster struck as holes were being prepared in the rock to hold charges of dynamite. While the average blast could be of as much as 3,500 pounds of dynamite, this particular blast was to be much greater in intensity. The blast was scheduled for five o'clock. Somehow a spark ignited the 10th hole on a ledge of rock about 80 feet above the ground shortly after two o'clock and the mined holes were set off with a roar that could be heard as far away as four miles. So great was the explosion that parts of bodies were found hanging from tree limbs 200 to 300 feet away.

Among the 29 men killed were John Hoyt Callanan and Charles Callanan, 14 Italian laborers and several men from local families. Only one man was left to tell the tale. The great tragedy attracted much publicity and left an indelible imprint on the families of the village, as many had lost husbands or sons. For some time afterward the courageous Hannah, who had lost two sons in the blast, worked tirelessly to visit and assist the families of those who were killed. For these efforts she earned the gratitude and respect of the entire community. Hannah prevailed again upon her brother-in-law, John Callanan, to come back and take charge and again the quarry operations resumed and new machinery provided increased productivity.

Next: Mechanization comes to the quarry and an ownership change heralds a new era for the business.

Arrested in crash

Howard E. Fuller, 50, of Rensselaer was charged with failure to yield right of way after a two-car accident Saturday afternoon on Rt. 32 at Kenwood Ave. Pamela Vadney of Delmar, driver of the other car, was taken to Albany Medical Center Hospital by the Delmar Rescue Squad and was treated and released. The rescue squad took Fuller to St. Peter's Hospital, where he also was treated and released.

The Town of New Scotland Historical Association has produced a calendar for 1984 that celebrates the past. The calendar features old photographs of the Voorheesville school, built in 1892; the Unionville Reformed Church and Unionville Reformed Church and Unionville School, taken in the late 1890's, and the former Feura Bush railroad station. The calendars may be purchased for $2 each at the New Scotland Town Hall, Voorheesville Pharmacy, Crannell Lumber, Houghtalings Market in Feura Bush and at Stonewell market, among other locations. They also may be obtained by telephoning Martha Slingerland, 768-2184, or Marion Parmenter, 765-4652.

Craft fair at Elsmere

The Elsmere School-Community Organization will give everyone an early start on their Christmas shopping at its craft fair and bake sale on Saturday, Oct. 22, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. at the Elsmere Elementary school, gym. Preventing abuse goal

The Bethlehem Central school district this fall will present a kindergarten through fifth grade program aimed at preventing sexual abuse of children. The first phase of the Bethlehem programs consists of training teachers to be aware of the issues, and the second phase will be an hour-long classroom program. The curriculum was developed by Eloise Guzior, school psychologist, and Eileen Perkins, school nurse, with consultation from child protection agencies and school districts that have abuse prevention programs.

The program consists of filmstrips, videotapes and information presented by the teachers in grades K-3 and 5. The fourth grade program will be part of the Red-Cross basic aid training and will be conducted by B.J. Lornell, school social worker. The audio-visual materials were selected by a district panel, and a parent committee reviewed and approved the program.

Vending box broken

A newspaper vending box on Delaware Ave., Delmar, was broken into sometime Saturday and about $100 in currency, mostly quarters, was taken, according to police reports. Police are investigating.

NEWS FROM SELKIRK AND SOUTH BETHLEHEM

Barbara Pickup 767-9225

Classroom with sails

Some 100 Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Junior High School students participated in a "Classroom of the Waves" program on the Hudson River sloop Clearwater Thursday. Supervised by science teachers Kathleen Hill and Robert Patterson, one group of students sailed in the morning, the other in the afternoon. The outing was organized by Raymond Endreny and funded in part by the Atlantic Cement Co. Students boarded the sloop at the Atlantic Cement Co. dock in Coeymans.

The Clearwater, a replica of an 18th century sloop, is the only full-sized Hudson River sloop in existence. Its purpose is to make people aware of the potential wealth and beauty of the region's waterways.

Upon boarding, the students were divided into small groups, with one member of the crew's educational staff heading each group. Moving from station to station, the students helped with tasks associated with sailing the vessel, including bringing up the anchor, setting sail and taking the tiller. They also took water samples and studied the aquatic life, and helped dredge the river. They were taught the importance of sea chanties and the rhythm they set for hauling in the sails. The students were encouraged to participate in any on-board activity they could perform safely — with a constant reminder to respect the marine life "borrowed" from the river for their studies.

Breakfast benefit

The Bethlehem Elks are holding another event to benefit others — this time, the victims of cerebral palsy. The benefit — a Sunday breakfast — will be this Sunday, Oct. 23, at the lodge, Rt. 144, Selkirk.

Pancakes, eggs, sausage, bacon, juice and coffee — all you can eat — will cost

$3 for adults and $2 for children under 12. Tickets will be available at the door.

Grangers coming

For the first time in a number of years Albany will host the State Grange Convention. The five-day session begins Friday, Oct. 21, at the Thruway House, Washington Ave., and will continue through Tuesday.

Representing the Bethlehem Subordinate Grange as delegates to the convention will be Helen Raynor and Randall Drobner, both of Selkirk. An invitation has been extended to the Bethlehem Junior Grangers to assist in the Sunday morning open forum. They will be participating in the opening and closing of the 11 a.m. program. Friends and family are invited to attend the Sunday morning program, Oct. 23.

Good eating

The menu for Senior Projects of Ravena beginning Thursday, Oct. 20, will be: Thursday — frankfurter, baked beans, sauerkraut; Friday — vegetable soup, cheese omelet, Lyonnaise potatoes, cauliflower; Monday — ham, potatoes au gratin, mixed vegetables; Tuesday — stuffed cabbage in tomato sauce, mashed potatoes, green beans; Wednesday — roast turkey with gravy, dressing, cranberry sauce, mashed sweet potato, peas and pearl onions; Thursday — pea soup, baked haddock with lemon butter, baked potato, carrots.

Feast and a fair

With only two short weeks to go, members of the First Reformed Church of Bethlehem are busy preparing for one of their biggest events of the year, their annual turkey dinner and fair. The event will be Thursday, Nov. 3, at the church on Rt. 9W in Selkirk. The meal will entice people from all neighboring communities with a menu that includes turkey, stuffing, mashed potatoes, gravy, green beans, cranberry relish, butternut squash, rolls, pumpkin pie and a beverage. Due to the popularity of the dinner, three servings are necessary — at 5, 6 and 7 p.m. The cost is $5.50 for adults and $2 for children. Reservations are required, and may be made by contacting Mildred Elmore, 767-9935, or the church office, 767-2243.

Beginning at 3 p.m. the day of the dinner, the downstairs auditorium and adjoining classrooms become a beehive of activity with the aroma of freshly baked breads, rolls, cookies and cakes filling the air. But the bake sale is just a small portion of the wares offered at the fair. There is a room usually just

Residents of the New Salem Volunteer Fire Department's district will be given emergency stickers and a calendar in a door-to-door distribution beginning Saturday, Oct. 22. The "Tot sticker" is to be placed in a window to alert firemen that there are children in the family who may need help in an emergency. The other lists the fire department's and state police emergency phone numbers. The volunteers will distribute the items to homes in the district and donations will be accepted.

5 face DWI charges

A Connecticut man faces a felony charge of driving while intoxicated and five other drivers face misdemeanor DWI charges as a result of Bethlehem police action over the weekend. John F. Kraus, 51, of Derby, Conn., was charged with felony DWI after his car went off Rt. 144 in Selkirk and hit a tree. He was taken to Albany Medical Center Hospital by Bethlehem Ambulance, where he was treated and released. The felony charge was filed because Kraus has a previous misdemeanor DWI conviction, according to police reports.

Among the other drivers charged was Richard F. Dragon, 27, of Selkirk, who was arrested shortly after 1 a.m. Monday after his car was involved in an accident at Rt. 144 and Beaver Dam Rd., Selkirk. Dragon also was charged with obstructing governmental administration and was taken to Albany County Jail when he was unable to post $1,000 bail at his arraignment.

School board starts replacement search

By Tom Howes

In June, the Voorheesville School District will observe the retirement of three employees with over 90 years of school district experience among them. Preparing for the changeover, the Voorheesville school board approved a plan last Tuesday night that will involve the board, faculty, superintendent, principals and the public in the search for successors.

Retiring after more than 30 years experience each are grade school Principal Robert Farrell, assistant grade school principal Roger Kallop and high school guidance director Kenneth George.

In an effort to include a variety of voices, the board created a 13-member criteria committee to establish candidate standards and guidelines. The committee is composed of three school board members, three faculty members, the two retiring principals and the District Superintendent Werner Berglas plus four citizens. Although the board did not specify source groups for the citizen spots, discussion indicated support for at least two positions to be filled by P.T.A. and Advisory Committee representatives. Board members will submit names to the board for consideration.

Each position has been assigned a sub-committee of three board members for the initial interviewing of candidates. Berglas will select a candidate from this screened list for nomination before the board. The district must make its appointments by May 14.

In other action, the board:

- Heard high school principal Peter

Griffin recommend an indefinite cancellation of the annual senior trip, citing disciplinary problems. "The situation deteriorated in the past six or seven years — we can't count on the students behaving," he said. "Most staff are reluctant to chaperone." Seven students were sent home from Toronto on last year's trip following rule violations.

Griffin added that there will be other opportunities presented to this year's seniors. He expects a list of alternatives soon, currently being drawn up by a student committee.

- Approved district participation in a national outreach program to curtail substance abuse. The school will present

Substance abuse meeting set

The Voorheesville Board of Education's newly formed substance abuse committee has invited 27 community organizations to attend meetings Nov. 2 and 9 to view a television program and discuss what to do next.

The program, called "The Chemical People," features First Lady Nancy Reagan and is designed to not only raise the question of drug and alcohol abuse in communities across the United States, but also create community action. It is being shown on WMHT, Channel 17, at 7:30 p.m. on the two dates, and will be followed by panel discussions both on television and locally.

According to Voorheesville Superintendent Werner Berglas, the meetings at the high school cafeteria will begin with a viewing of the program, then feature a panel discussion of local citizens and end a television program on Nov. 2 in the cafeteria, and a follow-up one week later. Board president Jack McKenna said he hopes a community committee will develop from the experience. "We'd really like to turn leadership over to the community," he said. "This shouldn't be just a school-focused activity."

- Upped the price of sports tickets to $1.50 adult and $1 student effective for basketball and wrestling this year, and football in the '84 campaign. The increase brings Voorheesville into line with other area schools and will help cover an increase in officials' fees. If attendance figures remain steady, Berglas said he expects a $2,600 increase over last year's $5,463 sports income.

- Appointed board members Steven Schreiber to the Elementary School Advisory Committee and David Teuten to the Junior-Senior High School Advisory Committee.

- Approved the '84-85 school calendar.

with planning of "a community effort intended to combat substance abuse."

The Nov. 2 program is titled "A Chemical Society" and the Nov. 9 show is "A Call to Action."

District residents are welcome to attend the meetings at the high school, or to watch the programs at home.

The board's substance abuse committee was formed this summer in response to incidents at the high school and also a general concern about substance abuse in the Voorheesville community, according to Berglas.

Camera club to meet

Kaye Sorenson will show his slides on Denmark to the Delmar Camera Club on Tuesday, Oct. 25, at 7:30 p.m. at St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Elsmere.

New post at SUNY

Walter Gibson, chairman of the physics department at the State University at Albany, has been named associate vice president for research and educational development. Gibson, a resident of Voorheesville, will be working to further research cooperation between the university and private sector while continuing as head of the physics department. He was a researcher for Bell Laboratories for 18 years before coming to Albany.

Gibson recently helped set up a research program involving several SUNY campuses at the Brookhaven National Laboratory at Long Island. The research program will allow researchers throughout the State University system to use a powerful new national facility for study of materials.

Commended scholars

Nine Bethlehem Central High School seniors were recently named commended students in the National Merit Scholarship Competition. Among the top five percent of students who took the PSAT (Preliminary Scholastic Aptitude Test) last year were Jaron Bourke, Bruce Ekstein, Christopher Hill, Robert Irvine, Amy LaForte, Thomas Nucci, Jeffrey Randles, Benjamin Walter and Benjamin Wolin.

Colleen Nyilis and Julie Ann Sosa were previously announced as National Merit semifinalists. They finished in the upper half of one percent of the nation's scholars.

Attends D.C. session

Bike path ceremony

Bikers will be ready to roll this weekend as the newly constructed bike path between the elementary and high schools is opened. An official ribbon-cutting ceremony will be held at 10:30 a.m. on Saturday, Oct. 22, at the grade school with a number of town, village and school representatives on hand. Also in attendance will be Assemblyman Richard Connors.

According to coordinators of the event, Councilman Herb Reilly and grade school science coordinator Don Otterness, the opening events will include a ceremonial trip down the stretch of almost two miles by a number of school children on bikes as well as a run over the span by area joggers of all ages. Refreshments will be provided by the Kiwanis Club of New Scotland and Boy Scouts from Troop 73 will assist with various activities. All are invited to attend the festivities and participate in the opening of the project constructed by the New York State Department of Transportation.

Parents go to class

A reminder to parents of students in grades 9-12 that open house for the Senior High will be held on Thursday, Oct. 20, at 7 p.m. Parents will have a chance to participate in an abbreviated version of their children's schedule, meet their teachers and learn of class curriculum and requirements.

Cub Scouts active

The gym at the elementary school is sure to be filled with unusual characters on Thursday, Oct. 20, when Cub Scouts of Voorheesville's Pack 73 hold an old-fashioned Halloween party at their monthly meeting. The festivities beginning at 7 p.m. will include games, skits and the singing of pumpkin carols. Anyone interested in seeing the Cub Scout program in action is invited to attend. Cubmaster Nareen Copeland says that people interested in helping with the program are always welcome.

Also the scouts will be going door-to-door for the next few weeks, without their disguises, taking orders for items from the Star Enterprises kit. The gifts range from $1 to $6 and are ideal for the holidays. This is the pack's only fundraiser of the year. Those interested in purchasing such items may contact Copeland at 765-2390.

Fall pickups slated

Good news for people who have been doing their fall cleaning. The first of two fall clean-up days will be held this Saturday, Oct. 22. All articles except garbage will be picked up if left by the curb by 7 a.m. Leaves in plastic bags will be picked up until Dec. 1.

Anyone having large items such as appliances should call the village office, 765-2692, to make arrangements. A second clean-up day will take place on Saturday, Nov. 4.

Church to celebrate

The Mountainview Evangelical Free Church, currently meeting at St. Mark's Community Center in Gunderland, will be celebrating its fifth anniversary on Sunday, Oct. 23. The parishioners, who are mostly from the Voorheesville area, and are led by Rev. William James, also of Voorheesville. They will be taking part in a day-long celebration with Rev. Trygve Landru, district superintendent from Trumbull, Conn., in attendance. Morning worship will begin with Sunday School for all ages at 9:30 a.m. followed by a family worship service at 10:30. In the evening a covered dish supper will begin at 6, followed by celebration and worship at 7. Music for the day's services will be provided by pianist Dorothy Green. All are invited.

Pumpkin contest coming

Halloween is just around the corner and area youngsters are invited to share in the spirit of the season and come to a Pumpkin Bash at the Voorheesville Public Library on Friday, Oct. 28, at 4 p.m. Each child should bring a pumpkin that has been carved or decorated to enter in the Great Pumpkin Contest. Awards will be given to the funniest, scariest, happiest, smallest, biggest and most unusual entries. Halloween films will be shown.

Spooks getting ready

Members of St. Matthew's Youth Group are busy getting ready for the Haunted Church, which will be held Oct. 28, 29 and 30. Youth group members are reminded that a dress rehearsal will be held on Sunday, Oct. 23.

Walk a success

The New Scotland chapter of the Nuclear Weapons Freeze Campaign reports that about 40 people of all ages walked in the Freeze Walk in Voorheesville on Oct. 1. The organizers would like

Super dads and just plain dads

I recently caught my friend Erma (Bombeck) on a talk show. I don't really know her, but like millions of other Bombeckians who digest her column first and then go on to the news, weather and coupons, I feel that I do.

Erma was discussing her new book, Motherhood: The Second Oldest Profession, and focused on the image of a perfect housewife/mother to whom she refers as "Super Mom." This flawless creature may, for instance, sculpt a Snow White and the Seven Dwarves cake for her child's birthday party, but leaves a bitter taste of moldy bread in the mouths of Bombeckians everywhere.

When I was a boy, I recall my dad's lightning fast ping pong serve...I still seethe at his uncanny luck in our gin rummy games...

After flicking off the TV set I fell into long and arduous moments of self-reflection considering my own performance as father of three children. I have thought all along that I have been a terrific father, and a terrible father, both. Upon reviewing my 17 years of fatherhood and projecting the next five after which my youngest will presumably trot off to seek his fortune, I again concluded that I have been superb, mediocre and downright bad, each in its own time and largely dependent on my mood at the time.

What intrigued me in my mental meanderings, however, was the image I initially formulated of the father I was to become, my role model, my "Super Dad." Naturally, I thought of my own dad first, because, as I was taught in my professional studies, one's father is a primary influence over one's assumption of the father role.

When I was a boy, I recall my dad's lightning fast ping-pong serve. I savor recollecting his specially prepared oatmeal on a Sunday morning. I still seethe at his uncanny luck in our gin rummy games where he would invariably knock just as I was about to go out. And I remember those comforting times when I or my brother was sick in bed and Dad would bring home a bunch of comic books, or when I would call home from a party across town at midnight and he'd get out of bed to pick me up.

But Dad was just Dad, not Super Dad. He had flaws like everyone else and never came on as the perfect father. He was comfortable walking around the house chewing an unlit cigar. He puttered with hammers and screwdrivers, but never rewired the house or remodeled the kitchen.

He made no apologies for yelling at me and my brother with the kitchen window wide open, but would stop abruptly when Mom slammed it shut and scolded "The whole neighborhood can hear you!" Nor did Dad catch every ball I threw him or ride a bike down the street with me or ever tell me about the birds and bees.

Dad didn't resemble the patriarchs on "Father Knows Best" or "My Three Sons" or "Little House On The Prairie." He displayed no trophies of athletic superiority on the mantle (we didn't even have a mantle) and he never won a fight, because to my knowledge he was never even in one. When he was embarrassed, his face would redden. When he was frustrated, his temper would flare. When he was happy, his eyes would flash smiles, and if he were struck with something really hilarious, he would laugh until he cried.

That's my dad, I thought, and began comparing his image to others I have since encountered. I pondered those men I know who don't own a pair of jeans and get casual by replacing their rep tie with an ascot. I bet their kids never get to see their bare feet unless they are swimming.

I contemplated those fathers whose patience seemed unending. Whenever their children were in any distress, major or minor, they were right there, sitting, listening, talking, walking, going for a soda. Then I remembered that many of their children confided to me that they found it hard to come clean with these dads, because they didn't want to disappoint them. Besides, they hated the talks everytime any little thing went wrong. I told them I used to get spanked sometimes, and they said they'd prefer it, because it's quicker.

I returned to the present and thought about how my kids seem to regard me and how I see myself now. I'm not a Super Dad. I have no trophies even though I now have a mantle. I've never been in a fight and the only scars I have suffered, all resulted from self-inflicted accidents while attempting home improvement projects. I wear jeans around the house often, usually ones with holes in the knees, and I own two pairs of dress shoes, one that shines up spiffy and one that rejects all shoeshines.

I used to play cards with my kids often, but because I usually won they don't want to play much anymore. They don't take to comic books very much, but will accept all the record albums they can get. The price of soothing a sick child has certainly gone up.

I returned to the present and thought about how my kids seem to regard me and how I see myself now. I'm not Super Dad.

Every once in a while I'll do something in front of the children I hadn't done before, like a magic trick or a feat of manual dexterity or a grotesquely funny face. They will stop in their tracks transfixed for at least 15 seconds, and say, "Gee, Dad, I never knew you could do that," and then resume whatever it was they had been doing. It leaves me with the feeling I have scored another one of those indelible marks on their memory of dear old dad.

When I had contemplated and concluded all that I was going to, I reached a new revelation: even though I am not, never was and will never try to be a Super Dad, my kids really think I'm okay, are comfortable with me, and they like me pretty much the same as I do my dad, and with this dad — that's super.

'It's not a gift'

Cellist Nancy Winn of Slingerlands, who has played with the Albany Symphony Orchestra for 30 years, began her musical career with the piano. "But I hated it and wasn't doing well," she recalled recently. However, when a cello became available through her school's music program, "it was love at first sight. I took to it immediately."

"I didn't choose the cello," she said. "It chose me."

After graduating from the University of Rochester, she attended the Eastman School of Music. During much of her tenure with the Albany Symphony, Mrs. Winn also has been a member of the Mahigian String Quartet, organized by Leo Mahigian, concertmaster of the symphony. She also frequently performs with Martha Creighton, harpist with the symphony. Mrs. Winn fulfilled the role of librarian for the ASO for 15 years, gathering together and keeping track of the music the orchestra plays each season.

When she first joined the Albany Symphony, it "was a nice community orchestra," she said. "The caliber was light years away from what it is now. Now, it is on a par with orchestras that are bigger and better funded."

For young people just starting to play an instrument, Mrs. Winn has this advice: "You have to practice — it does not come as a gift. You have to want to do it."

Next step for Chamber?

With 37 new members under its belt from its recent open house, the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce is ready for new projects. The question is, what projects?

Chamber officials pronounced the open house at the new chamber quarters opposite Delaware Plaza a success, but decided one aspect of the event needs more work. That is a questionnaire (see below) aimed at determining how businessmen feel about business in Bethlehem. Chamber President Peter Merrill said about 100 forms were completed and returned.

"Now we're asking for the residents' viewpoint," Merrill said.

But the chamber is already moving into one area that is likely to be a major town issue in the next year. At a meeting last Thursday, the group's board of directors named a committee to study Bethlehem's commercial zoning and planning procedures and make recommendations to the town board.

Bethlehem planners have been faced with a number of controversial commercial zoning cases in recent months, and a Spotlight editorial recently raised the issue of planning and town control along Delaware Ave.

DAVE SAWYER
on The Issues:
GOVERNMENT REFORM

"We need to change the County structure to improve the distribution of power and to identify clearly the authority responsible for County operations."

Dave and other concerned citizens compelled the County Legislature to present a charter form of government to the voters ten years ago. While the approved Charter, which separated administrative functions from the legislative branch of the County, was a significant improvement, there continues to exist an imbalance in the County structure, and confusion in the Charter as to whom Department heads owe their allegiance.

Dave proposes amending the charter, in accordance with the Municipal Home Rule Law, to correct these problems. This amendment would:

- Permit the County Executive to appoint his own Department heads, (currently, they are appointed by the legislature).
- Provide the County Executive with full veto power, (currently he is limited to a veto of increases which the legislature adds to his budget); and
- Allow the County Executive to authorize housekeeping funding transfers between Departments without a resolution of the legislature.

You can count on Dave's experience and ability to work for you to make government work better.

Time for some spirit

This is Spirit Week on Delaware Ave. and Bethlehem Central football coaches are hoping the buildup of patriotic fever will serve as a tonic for their struggling team.

After Saturday's lethargic performance at Guilderland, some sort of tonic is needed to fire up the 1-4 Eagles for Saturday's Homecoming game with 4-1 Shaker. The 14-3 setback at Guilderland marked the second time in three weeks that the Eagles had provided a first victory for the opposition. The Dutchmen were 0-3-1 going in.

That was particularly frustrating because three of the next four games are with Suburban Council powers — Shaker and Burnt Hills are 4-1 and Shenendehowa is 3-1.

"It was discouraging because Guilderland is a team we could beat," philosophized Coach John Sodergren over the weekend. "We didn't play well. We got handled up front, and we never got untracked offensively. We couldn't establish anything. They just ran the ball; they only threw a couple of passes."

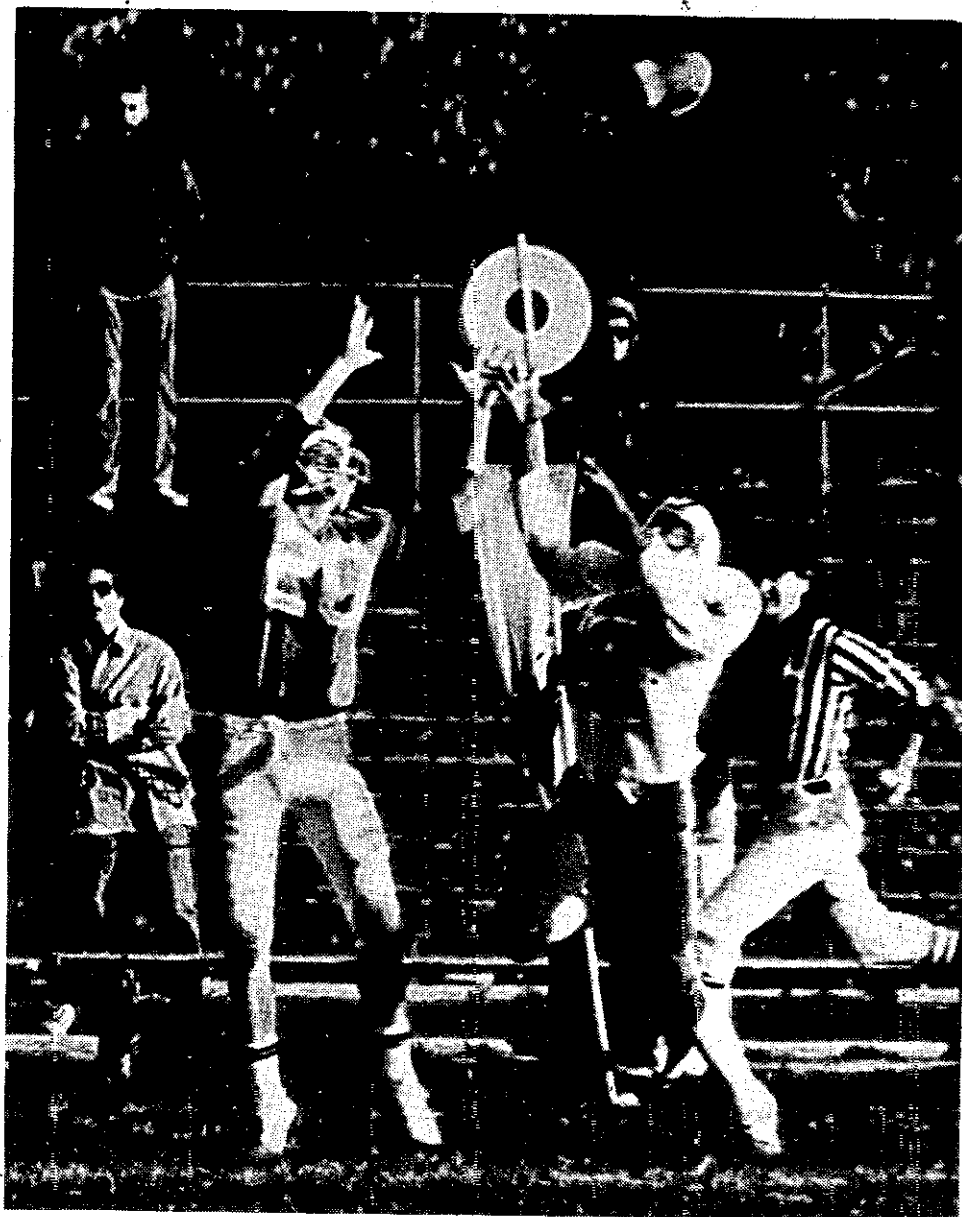

Bethlehem ran only three offensive plays in the first quarter and only eight in the entire first half. Even at that, the deficit was only 8-3 at intermission, thanks to a 32-yard field goal by Jim Lockman on the last play of the half.

At the weekly Sunday night meeting of BC's board of assessment, the coaches gave out only four orchids instead of the usual seven or eight. Rick Bailey, the big junior tackle, won the offensive lineman award for the second week in a row. Mike Cronin was the defensive back of the week, Chris Oberheim the defensive lineman. Dave Young was cited as the specialist.

Young, a senior quarterback who has been playing behind junior Steve Mendel since an early season injury, has been playing on the special teams. "He did a good job," said Sodergren. "He was on all the special teams, recovered a fumble and was in on several tackles."

Preparing for Shaker, a team the Eagles upset last year, Sodergren plans a few changes. "We're starting back at Square One. We're working to improve the fundamentals. The kids are working hard, we've had compliments from officials who are impressed with the way the boys handle themselves in adversity."

There's a lot going on for Spirit Week, including a pep rally and welcome for former players as part of the school's 50th anniversary celebration, but the long-awaited uniforms for the marching band — BC's first — are still delayed by a material shortage. Kickoff is at 2 p.m.

Watervliet loss put behind

Ravena's football Indians will make a bid for second place in the Colonial Division of the Capital Conference Saturday in a home game against Voorheesville.

The Indians are coming off a sleepy performance at Watervliet, losing five fumbles and the game, 26-6. "We played poorly, and we beat ourselves," commented Coach Gary VanDerzee. "We'd stop them defensively, then give up the long gainer."

A bright spot was the running of Jay Askew, who gained 52 yards in eight carries against a rugged defense. The Indians got a consolation touchdown in the final quarter when Mike Kerrigan threw to split end Chris Carroll for a 13-yard score.

Ravena has been tough against Voorheesville. On the Blackbirds' last visit, the Indians came within a point of pulling off an upset, and last year it was a Ravena win at Voorheesville.

Road race set

The starting gun for the second annual South Bethlehem road race will go off at 11 a.m. on Saturday, Oct. 22, at Selkirk firehouse No. 3 on Rt. 396. Volunteer officials, as well as runners, are still needed for the 14-mile race and four-mile

Eagles savor Scotia win

A spectacular rally that turned an apparent 3-0 defeat into a 4-3 victory has given Bethlehem Central's embattled soccer team a new life.

But the Eagle booters face a perilous uphill struggle to get into the Sectionals, so perilous that one loss in the remaining four games will lock them out. They started the week at 3-6-2, and need a .500 record to qualify for post-season play. With powerful Guilderland in town yesterday (Tuesday) and Burnt Hills coming up Saturday, the task looked ominous.

Other games on the schedule are Saratoga Thursday and Colonie next Wednesday.

Regardless of what happens in the home stretch, Coach Gene Lewis and his crew will look back on Saturday's 4-3 triumph over visiting Scotia as the season's highlight. BC was trailing 3-0 as Lewis chose to give the visitors the strong wind in the first half and take it in the second.

Six minutes into the second half the Eagles hit the net twice within 15 seconds. Bob Keens scored on a cross off a Scotia player, and Jason Tilroe made it 3-2 with a high, hard shot from 25 yards out. Seven minutes later Tilroe knotted the count.

With 6½ minutes remaining, Brett Zick, a junior who began the year as a stopper and later was moved to midfield, rammed in the go-ahead goal. Zick, playing center forward in this game, was under heavy pressure in the front zone, but kept the ball and beat the keeper with a straight-ahead shot in front of the goalmouth.

Scotia, defending state Class B champion, came close to deadlocking the game in the waning moments, but BC fullback Keith Miller came up with a critical play. On a Scotia breakaway, BC keeper Mike Guarino came out, but the shot eluded him and caromed off other players. Miller cleared it with a key boot.

Earlier in the week, the Eagles succumbed to Niskayuna's title-bound machine, 5-0, but came back to blank CBA in a non-league fracas. Chris Kelly got the goal.

Girls notch 2 victories

An overtime goal by Amy Zick lifted Bethlehem Central to a 2-1 victory over Colonie, Saturday in Suburban Council girls soccer. The win followed a 3-1 triumph over Linton of Schenectady in a non-league encounter and a 3-0 loss to Niskayuna.

Zick's goal came three minutes into the second overtime. Kathy Schenkel got the first goal on an assist from Jill Kaplowitz as the Eagles let fly 20 shots on goal to 10 for the Raiders.

Schenkel had two goals and Kaplowitz a goal and an assist in the Thursday contest at home. Cathy Tartaglia was credited with an assist. BC peppered the Schenectady nets with 35 shots to 13 for the opposition. Kelly Burke had seven saves at Colonie, 11 against Schenectady and 18 against Niskayuna, but the Niskies outshot BC by 29-10. Niskayuna's girls' team is in first place with 8-1-2, while the boys' team was leading the Gold Division with 8-2-1.

BC varsity girls' soccer action against Linton. BC's Jill Kaplowitz and Kathy Schenkel threaten near the Linton goal. Center, Kathy's shot is on target, and bottom, a minor celebration. Tom Howes

Blackbirds, Buckley take their punishment

Voorheesville Coach Tom Buckley will take his bruised and battered but battling Blackbirds to Ravena Saturday with an eye on second place in the Colonial Division of the Capital Football Conference.

The 1:30 p.m. confrontation will touch off a renewal of a strong neighborhood rivalry. Both teams took a beating last week, and are locked in a four-way tie with their conquerors, Albany Academy and Watervliet.

The Blackbirds will operate without split end Mike McCarty, a productive receiver and defensive halfback, who suffered a concussion in Saturday's 26-6 loss at Albany Academy. Lee Kraus, one of the team's top defensive players, was severely shaken up but is listed as a probable starter.

The Cadets outmuscled the Blackbirds with an aggressive display of old-fashioned hard-hitting football. They kept Voorheesville in the hole for most of the first half, pounding out two scores on ground level drives and not permitting the Blackbirds to get beyond their own 46.

Down 12-0 at intermission, the Blackbirds played the Cadets even in the third period and mounted several threats in the fourth. It was still 12-0 with three minutes to play and the Blackbirds driving to the Academy 29. Then disaster struck. A fumble, a 16-yard run and two long passes gave the Cadets a 70-yard touchdown with 2:56 on the clock.

Back came the Blackbirds with an aerial assault that produced a touchdown in six plays with 1:25 left. The final Academy score was a giveaway on the final play of the game.

So aggressive were the Cadets, playing before a Homecoming audience of 3,300 that included some 900 Blackbird boosters on the opposite side, that they ruffled Buckley's usual workmanlike decorum on the sideline. Disturbed by a half dozen official timeouts for injuries to his players, two of them forcing quarterback Sean Rafferty to the bench, Buckley uncharacteristically stepped on the field four times to complain to officials. When he made a last foray before the kickoff following the Voorheesville touchdown, he was cited for unsportsmanlike conduct and 15 yards were subtracted from the kicking tee.

New Salem's usually compassionate Celt was reluctant to talk about the officiating after the game, but confided that the game films Sunday did nothing to soothe his anger at the officials for failing to protect his players on the field.

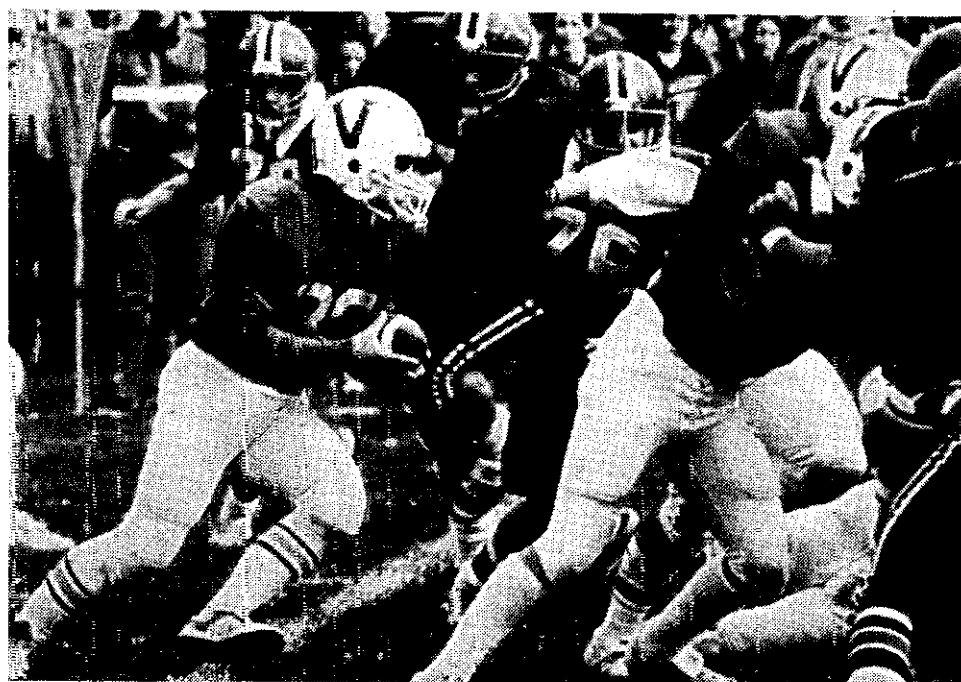

"It was a game of late hits and flagrant helmet hits, and the officials never saw anything," he fumed. "The films show butting with helmet on Rafferty by a defensive end whose hands were behind his back with no move to grab the quarterback."

The officials called only one penalty in the first half, a clip against Voorheesville. The Cadets were assessed three penalties in the second half, one for roughing the kicker on a Blackbird punt from the end zone, another for a personal foul on a late hit on Ed Mitzen out-of-bounds after he had caught a pass on the right sideline at the Blackbird 45 in the fourth quarter.

Buckley said he would file a written complaint with league officials, and indicated he was considering inviting Saturday's game officials to review films of the game.

But the veteran tutor was quick to say that the alleged fouls were not a factor in the outcome of the game. "Physical teams are toughest for us," he observed. "They (Academy) were big and very physical and they outplayed us."

A Ravena coach who scouted the game

Voorheesville's all-around star, junior Ed Mitzen (30) found the yards came hard in Saturday's contest at Albany Academy. Mitzen got two yards on this first-half run. Spotlight - R.H. Davis to chart the Blackbirds, Ravena's next opponent, agreed with Buckley's appraisal. "The helmet rules are there for the protection of players. The officials are there to control the game, and when they don't do their job, they are risking serious injury to high school players."

The numbers made it look more like a 12-6 game than 26-6. Rafferty completed 10 of 13 passes, including a 6-yard touchdown toss to Mitzen in the right corner of the end zone. Mitzen snared seven others, two in a deep drive that was balked when Rafferty was stripped of the ball on the 9, and two more in a 66-yard drive in six plays that accounted for the lone touchdown.

Voorheesville managed only three firsts in the first half, but ended up with 14 to Academy's 15. Mitzen also contributed 45 yards on 8 carries, John Ryan had 48 for 7 and almost broke one, and Mike Ricci was 7-for-31.

Waterfowl outlook

Waterfowl hunting looks good this fall because of the wet spring and dry summer, which provided favorable conditions for duck production, according to the state Department of Environmental Conservation. However, in the southeastern zone, no black ducks may be taken from Nov. 17 to Dec. 11 because of a declining population. The season in this zone runs until Oct. 23 and then opens again Nov. 4 to Dec. 11, with the bag limits five daily. Shooting hours are one-half hour before sunrise to sunset.

The department noted that the Hudson River steel shot zone has been reduced. Only steel shot may be used in such a zone, regardless of the gauge of the gun. The zone was established to curb lead poisoning among waterfowl whose habitat has been contaminated by lead shot. Some waterfowl have been found to contain high levels of lead and other contaminants so the state Department of Health advises that waterfowl be eaten only twice a month, that all fat be removed before cooking, that stuffing be discarded and that no mergansers be eaten.

Waterfowl hunters 16 or older must have a federal duck stamp in addition to a hunting license. Proceeds from sale of the stamps are used to buy and improve the habitat for migratory waterfowl. The stamps are available at post offices and must be signed across the face by the hunter to be valid.

Voorheesville girls out of Sectionals

In a match that could have gone either way, hopes of a Sectional championship for the Voorheesville girls' tennis team were set to rest as they were defeated in the first round of the tournament by an experienced Maple Hill squad, 3-2.

With the regular season over, the girls compiled a deceiving 2-4 league record and an overall mark of 3-6. Two losses were at the hands of undefeated Colonial Council league champion Lansingburgh, while two other defeats were dished out by undefeated Patroon League champion Catskill, league foe Watervliet, last year's Class C Sectional champion, also dealt out two losses to the Blackbirds. Most of their defeats were by a single match.

Inexperience played a major role in the outcome of the season. The team had no seniors and sported several players in the lower grades. "Our record doesn't show how competitive we were," stated Coach Tom Kurkjian. "I'm very pleased with the season. They show great promise for next year."

The Blackbirds traveled to the regional tournament at Prospect Park in Troy today (Wednesday). Scheduled to compete were freshman Donna Mensching, eighth-grader Paige Hotaling and sophomore Sue Merritt. Teaming up for the doubles were juniors Adrienne Fitzgerald and Courtney Brenna, seventh-grader Michelle Petre and freshman Betsy Zeh along with juniors Terry Balfie and Tina Rasmussen. Half of the schools that field girls' tennis teams in Class A-D play at Prospect Park while the other half play at Central Park in Schenectady. The top eight in each group will compete in a weekend elimination to determine Section 2's representation in the state tournament.

Registering wins in the close loss to Maple Hill last Thursday were Mensching, (6-1, 6-3), and Brenna (6-3, 6-2). Hotaling (6-2, 6-4) and the doubles combinations of Petre-Zeh (6-2, 6-3) and Rasmussen-Balfie (6-0, 6-0) tallied victories the previous day against Watervliet in a 4-3 loss.

Slow pace to fitness

The Albany YWCA is offering a program for people who want to approach physical fitness at a slower pace. The program has been approved by doctors at John Hopkins Hospital in Baltimore. The class is for people who have been inactive for several years, are more than 30 pounds overweight, or have any limiting physical problem. Classes for the six-week session will meet two mornings and two evenings a week starting Oct. 31. For information, call 438-6608.

Alcoholism workshop

The Albany YWCA is sponsoring a three-session Saturday workshop for adults and daughters (or any other adult/teen relationship) entitled "Alcohol: Exploring Values and Beliefs" beginning Oct. 22. Each session runs from 1 to 3 p.m. and adult/teen pairs will work together as equal partners building skill in interpersonal communication, assertiveness and project planning, while learning about alcohol and alcohol abuse. Facilitators include a psychiatric nurse, counselor of adolescents, and a clinical psychologist.

Harriers face two top teams

Voorheesville's varsity cross-country teams are coming off another successful week. Last Tuesday against Ravena the Blackbirds flew high.

The boys' team shut the Indians out by taking the first five places. Freshman Chuck Rogers took first place, followed by junior Adam Shiabe, 8th-grader Lenny Mertens, junior Gerry McNamara and junior Doug Arthur.

The Ravena girls' team, lacking numbers, was also shut out by Voorheesville. Junior Vicki Ross finished first, senior Kirsten Ford second and senior Cathy Teuten third. The victories boosted the boys' team to 7-0 in the Colonial Council and a 9-2 overall record. The girls' team is also unblemished in the Council at 7-0, but is 7-2 overall.

On Saturday the Blackbirds headed south to Poughkeepsie and the Marist College Invitational. Both teams came away with fine finishes. The girls were fourth out of 22 teams, and once again Ross led the way. She finished 11th, Ford 22nd and Teuten 33rd out of 145 runners.

As for the boys, they were able to capture a fourth place finish from 17 schools. Rogers ended up in fifth position, Shiabe 8th and Mertens 13th out of 115 entries.

This week the Blackbirds are in the dubious position of racing against both Cohoes and Albany Academy. All three teams went into the Tuesday date undefeated in the league. The winner will own first place in the Council. On Friday the Blackbird harriers for Albany State for the Albany County championships. A 4 p.m. start is scheduled for both events.

Booters are improving

By Peter Fisch

As the 1983 soccer season winds down, the Blackbirds of Voorheesville have improved their play, but have only three victories to show for the young team.

In the first meeting of the season with Albany Academy on Oct. 3, the local booters fell prey to the Cadets on their home field, 3-0. Traveling to Cohoes two days later, the Birds defense collapsed in a 8-2 loss. The Tigers scored the first five goals of the game before Voorheesville got on the scoreboard, despite being almost even with shots on goal.

On Friday, Oct. 7, the Blackbirds finally put it together at home by blanking Ravena, 2-0. The local booters registered the first shutout of Bob Crandall's coaching career as senior Jeff Rockmore chipped in a goal and assisted on another by sophomore Dean Solomos.

Against one of the Colonial Council's better teams, the Birds played what could well be their best game of the season at Waterford, only to lose 3-2. Solomos assisted on goals by Rockmore and senior Brerton Bissell to enable VC to take an early 2-0 lead. The Fordians tied the game at 2 by the half and went ahead for good 10 minutes into the second half. With only 13 players eligible, the Blackbirds, plagued by injury and sickness, outshot the home team and seemed to play a better game.

Thus far the booters have compiled a 3-7 league record and are 3-9 overall. "Our record is not indicative of the type of soccer we're playing," stated Crandall. "We have a lot of weaknesses, but also a lot of strengths."

Congratulations BRAIN, or rather BRIAN on your B.S.

(Does a REX degree really count?)

Life at the top: joys and frustrations

By Nat Boynton

In one of the Capital District's established tennis strongholds, it's hard to realize that the last Treadway is playing her last match for Bethlehem Central High School this month.

Laura Treadway, 17-year-old BC senior, won 41 of her 48 varsity matches in Suburban Council singles over four seasons, but the defeat she will remember longest doesn't show on the records.

In a strong, competitive league like the Suburban, there are always young phenoms coming along, child prodigies in the 7th and 8th grades who have done well on the tournament circuit shooting to become another Chrissie Evert or Tracy Austin. Laura never pretended to be one of these, but she faced them across the net, and when she lost to a younger player like Tracy Steve of Guilderland, she took it in stride.

Bethlehem has one of these, Jody Jones, the eighth grader from Slingerlands who has played on the BC varsity for two years. When the season started in September, Laura faced a challenge from young Jody to retain the No. 1 singles spot she had held all through junior year in 1982.

Laura defeated Jody, and the two teammates played One and Two as BC breezed through to another league championship unbeaten at 9-0. Just before the final match Jodie challenged again, and this time Laura had a real battle on her hands. The two girls split sets before running out of time.

A day later they started from scratch, and this time Jody wore Laura down in three sets and gained the No. 1 spot. With the team sectionals coming up, Laura last week made one last bid to wind up her brilliant scholastic career in the perch she had occupied for two years.

She didn't quite make it. Again they split the first two sets, and again there was no time to finish. That was Monday, and when it rained Tuesday, a crestfallen Laura went to the Sectionals playing No. 2 behind Jody.

The fact that she swept her three Sectional matches, including a win over Saratoga's No. 2 in the final singles match of her four-year career as Saratoga denied BC's bid for a sixth straight Section 2 crown, was small consolation. Nor was the fact that another Saratoga prodigy, seventh grader Ginny Whelan, whom Laura had beaten in their regular-season match, defeated Jody by 6-2, 6-1 in the wind-plagued Sectional final.

But that's the way things often go in scholastic tennis.

Playing No. 1 singles is frequently like playing in a pressure cooker. Not only does the pressure come from the strong teams — Niskayuna, Shaker, Shenendehowa and now Saratoga — but often weak teams like Scotia and Guilderland come up with one outstanding player in the top spot.

Looking back on her career this week, Laura said she didn't feel any overpowering pressure in playing the other team's best player match after match. "I didn't expect to be undefeated at No. 1," she said. "I knew who the other players were, I knew which ones I might lose to."

Laura, youngest of three Treadway sisters who played No. 1 for BC, made the varsity as a freshman. She was unbeaten her freshman year at No. 4 singles, was 11-1 at No. 4 as a sophomore, 9-3 in the top spot as a junior and 6-3 as a senior before giving way to young Jody. Her Sectional sweep closed her singles book at 9-3 for the year, 41-7 for four seasons.

Whatever chance she had for an undefeated season this year vanished in the opening match against perennial power Niskayuna. She lost to Jessica Vernon, whom she had beaten the year before. "I was ahead in the second set, and I really thought I could win. It was discouraging, because it was the first match."

A few days later she lost another, this time to Tracy Steve, a talented younger player who poses the only threat on a weak Guilderland team. Tracy had also won their 1982 confrontation, and will be Jody's problem next year.

"I lost to Tracy last year in three sets and I thought I could have beaten her," Laura recalled. "This year we were in the third set and I lost concentration. I just felt kind of down."

What's it like playing in the No. 1 spot while some of her teammates in the lower rungs have superior won-lost records?

BC Coach Grace Franze shows undisguised admiration for Laura Treadway. "It's natural to get discouraged when you go up against the best player on each team we face," said the coach. "But Laura is a real team player, and she always gave everything she had in every match."

Laura's comment: "It's more discouraging when it's really close, because I think back when it's over and I remember the important shots, the ones I missed at a critical time in the match. I think one of my problems is when I go into a match thinking I'm going to lose."

Her steady game and beautiful strokes will be missed on Delaware Ave., the last Treadway in an unbroken span of some nine scholastic seasons. Jessica played No. 2 at Albany State her senior year and now works for the UPI in Rochester, and Molly, a Hamilton College junior, was unbeaten at No. 3 singles when last heard from in Clinton. Laura hasn't decided where to send college applications.

Meanwhile she'll be playing doubles in the Sectional tournament this week, hoping for a second straight trip to the state championship. Maybe she'll play some indoor tennis this winter, and possibly a few local tournaments next summer if she finds time between her studies and an after-school job at Kay-Bee Toys at Delaware Plaza.

After all, tennis isn't everything in the life of an active schoolgirl, and, like swimming and riding a bicycle, she will always have those smooth strokes whenever she picks up a racquet.

BC's Sectional string snapped

Bethlehem Central will attempt to salvage a doubles trophy this weekend as the annual Section 2 tennis tournament — known as the individual Sectionals — determines the area's delegates to the state championships.

The post-season matches come as an anti-climax for the proud Eagles, who saw their 35-match win streak and dreams of a sixth straight Sectional team championship bounce away in gusty winds in Schenectady last Saturday. BC lost the final to Saratoga, 5-4, as fickle breezes swirled across the Linton High School courts, making it difficult for both teams.

Once again it was the doubles that did the Eagles in. Bethlehem needed five of the six singles matches after losing all three doubles points, but could only come up with four. Earlier, the Eagle girls had swept Shenendehowa, 8-1, and Burnt Hills, 9-0. BC had edged Saratoga, 5-4, in close matches during the regular season.

Ironically, in 1982 the Eagles were squeezed out of a fourth straight Suburban Council Championship, but won the Sectionals. This year BC won the league with a 9-0 mark, and finished 11-2 but out of the money in the Sectionals.

Bethlehem's success has been carved with team depth and balance without top-ranking individual stars. Hence Coach Grace Franze again will deploy her six singles players into three doubles teams, and send her younger players into the singles draws, primarily for experience. In the matches starting today (Wednesday) at Central Park, Schenectady, Jody Jones and Ayrán Shayegani are seeded No. 1 in doubles, and Laura Treadway-Leanne Cory No. 2. Julie Liddle and Eileen Berry form the third BC entry.

Franze set up an intramural round-robin this week to determine which of seven aspirants will earn the No. 3 singles spot behind Carolyn Cross and Barbara Hepp. The contenders are Kelly Hart, Colby and Kelly Woodruff, Libby Thomas, Molly Foresman, Lisa Tomlinson and Kim Burkhart.

The Sectional tourney, with the top three in each draw earning places in the state championships, marks the final scholastic appearance of four seniors. Treadway, Shayegani, Cory and Berry played important roles in collecting those Council and Sectional trophies over the last four years.

Golfers have winning record

Scholastic golf is a game of anonymity. Only the most dedicated aficionados know that Bethlehem Central's varsity golf team finished the 1983 fall season 8-5 in the upper half of the nine-team Suburban Council.

A decade ago the team was ranked third in the state, a single stroke out of first place. Of late it has been stymied by a practice schedule at Normanside Country Club that permits only three days of practicing each week for five golfers, excluding the sixth varsity player and the JV apprentices. The team still had to tee off against such powers as Niskayuna, Shenendehowa and Saratoga, whose players have private lessons with country club pros. Nevertheless, BC had home-course wins over Nisky and the Plainsmen.

Bethlehem is finally "coming out of the rough" with three juniors and three freshmen composing the BC varsity. The three juniors have nine varsity letters amongst them and are members of local country clubs, where they play tournaments and practice hitting "shags" over the summer. Mike Miller is the top player on the ladder, and Loren Balsam, the team captain, plays No. 2. Golf, a non-contact sport, is co-ed, and Tara McKenna plays No. 3. Freshmen Dan Balsam and Jon Forbes play Nos. 4 and 5 respectively, and classmate Mike Roberts plays No. 6 during Council and Sectional tournaments.

What the team lacks in experience Coach Donald Farrell has. He is a retired BCHS gym teacher and has coached the golf team for the last 15 years.

In match and medal play, Balsam and Forbes were the most consistent players. Miller's laurels include a team-low 37 on the front nine of Normanside and an eagle on the long par-4 fifth hole. But it was Balsam who shot a 78 and advanced from a field of 74 golfers at the Class A team Sectionals to the Section 2 tournament in Rexford last week.

The JV team consists of sophomore James Edgar, freshmen Ed Lawson, Doug Pratt and Dave Comi, and eighth-grader Mike Durant. Farrell is still looking to recruit more country club players who already have experience. Last year 28 golfers came out for the team, but 19 dropped out because they could not get practice time.

Racers excel

Local road racers acquitted themselves very well in two area races last weekend. Dennis Northrup of Selkirk, one of the area's top runners, led the field in a 10 kilometer race in Clifton Park with a time of 31:27. And in the Hudson Mohawk marathon, Judy Swasey of Slingerlands was third among the women with a time of 3:15:45 — good enough to qualify her for Boston.

Assault charges filed

A New Scotland youth whose name was withheld by authorities because of his age faces a charge of first degree assault following an incident Thursday afternoon in a wooded area in the town. Asst. Dist. Atty. John Wappett said it has not been determined whether the case will go to the town or county court. The arrest was made by state troopers.

Workshop on resumes

The Bethlehem Public Library will host a free resume writing workshop on Saturday, Oct. 29, from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Career counselor Karen Maher will give tips on how to resumes for entry level jobs as well as high level professional positions. To register, call the library at 439-9314 by Oct. 27.

Kevin Tighe of Delmar will be among the thousands of entrants in the New York City Marathon to be run Oct. 23. The 26.3-mile race will be nationally televised. Tighe, 27, runs an average of 10 miles a day.

Televised life saver

Starting this week the public can learn what to do in medical emergencies by watching a program produced by the regional Emergency Medical Organization. The half hour program will be on Bethlehem Video public access channel at 9:30 a.m. Tuesdays and 8:30 p.m. on Wednesdays. The programs use only local emergency care providers and are meant to provide a new self help and awareness approach to emergencies arising in the home and workplace.

Swimmers undefeated

With an easy victory over Glens Falls, the Bethlehem girls' swim team has compiled a record of 6-0 in the past few weeks. The team is shifting gears in preparation for the remainder of the season. Coach Buzz Jones had been working his team on endurance, but now has changed his practice routines to stress work on sprints.

"I'm really pleased with many of the girls' times, and it will be interesting to watch some of those times as we begin our taper," Jones said.

In one of the closest meets of the year, the girls went down to the last relay against Burnt Hills, before gaining the second place finish that assured their victory. Jones found a bright spot in his team's performance by singling out Annika Berge. Berge, who placed well in the 200 and 500 free with personal best times, was also part of the last relay.

In the meet against Guilderville, it was Lynn Apicelli who swam well, winning both distance freestyle events in good times. Putting together one of his better relays, Jones was pleased with a clocking of 3:56.43 in the 400 free relay. Members of the relay were Berge, Apicelli, Susan Mallery and Sandi Blendell.

Swamping Albany 57-28, the team swept the freestyle events with several best times from Sue Mallery, Lynn Schulz and Becky Friedlander in the 50, 100 and 500 respectively. This week the team travels to Hudson and Scotia.

Editor, The Spotlight:

I was gerrymandered out of my seat on the Albany County Legislature by the Albany County Democrats through reapportionment. Now I observe with dismay Dave Sawyer's campaign signs stating, "Dave Sawyer, County Legislator."

For the information of Bethlehem voters, I am the County Legislator from the 34th District until January, 1984. Mr. Sawyer is running in part of my district, and I would appreciate his stipulating on his signs and campaign literature that he is a candidate for the 36th District seat and not presently a county legislator.

Let's give the people of Albany County at least one straight story.

Spotlight IN RETROSPECT

Oct. 16, 1958

Betty Tinney, community ambassador, will speak of her experiences in Germany at the Slingerlands Home Demonstration meeting Tuesday at the Slingerlands School cafeteria. Refreshments will be served by Mrs. Richard Harrington, Mrs. Robert Carpenter, Mrs. Daniel Lantz and Mrs. John Underhill.

Work has begun on grading and clearing a wooded area behind the Bethlehem Junior High School on Kenwood Ave. to be converted into playgrounds, tennis and basketball courts and a baseball diamond. A barrier of trees will be left between the present diamond and the new one, and most of the land will remain as a "clear area" for future development.

Oct. 17, 1963

Boneless rib roasts and sirloin steaks are advertised at 79 cents a pound at the Grand Union-Empire supermarket at Delaware Plaza, Elsmere.

The State Department of Transportation will conduct a traffic study at the intersection of Maple Ave. and New Scotland Rd. in Slingerlands, scene of a fatal accident last month and three personal injury accidents in 1967. The intersection of New Scotland Rd. and Bridge St., a quarter of a mile west of Maple Ave., has been the scene of seven accidents in the past two years.

Oct. 18, 1973

Plans have been announced for the demolition of the Schnurr and Wood Building at Delmar's Four Corners, a community landmark for more than three quarters of a century. The building, which will make way for a new bank, houses the Schnurr and Wood feed store, the Village Shop, Tad's Men's Shop and Delaware Pharmacy. Also slated for demolition is the abandoned gas station on the corner.

Oct. 19, 1978

A smashing 30-14 win over defending champion Shenendehowa on a slippery field at Clifton Park has established Bethlehem Central's Eagles firmly atop the Suburban Council football standings at 5-0. Shenendehowa has won the last five league titles. Steve Nowak was 6-for-8 in the air, passing to Bill Hannmann for one touchdown, and Buddy Nevens scored two others on the ground. BC's last outright championship was in 1967. The Eagles were in a triple tie for the crown at 6-2 in 1969.

When five new police officers were hired for the Bethlehem police force, one a woman, Linda Jasinski Davis of Bender Lane, Glenmont, was so angry at being passed over that she filed a show-cause against the town board in State Supreme Court. Mrs. Davis had the highest mark in the recent Civil Service examination for the post, scoring 96.0. The officers appointed, who scored between 92.0 and 80.5, were Cynthia Reed, James Haker, Joseph Mastriano, Wayne LaChappelle and Anthony Arduini.

Respite care available

Respite care providers in the Capital District have logged over 540 care days for frail, elderly persons, both at home and in nursing homes, since the Coordinated Respite Care Project of the Capital District began last December.

Under the direction of the Foundation for Long Term Care, the project was designed in 1982 to provide a temporary break for persons caring for a chronically ill, disabled or frail aged person at home.

"Usually the caregiver is a family member or friend who needs some time away from the responsibilities of the day-in, day-out care of an older loved one," explains Lloyd Nurick, executive director, of the foundation for Long Term Care in Albany.

Participating agencies in this demonstration project include the Home Aide Service of Eastern New York and the Visiting Nurse Association, both of which provide temporary care in the usual place of residence of an elder.

Also included in the project are three nursing homes: Teresian House in Albany, Welsey Nursing Home in Saratoga Springs and the Eddy Memorial Geriatric Center in Troy.

Greek Cauliflower

2 medium heads cauliflower juice of 1 lemon
2 tomatoes, chopped or 2 tablespoons tomato paste and 1 cup water
2 tablespoons oil
1/2 small onion
1 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1 teaspoon basil
Wash cauliflower and break into flowerets. Toss with lemon juice. Chop onion.

Heat oil in heavy saucepan with a lid. Saute onion until soft. Stir in cauliflower.

Combine the tomatoes and seasonings. Add to cauliflower and stir well. Bring to a boil, cover, and simmer over medium heat until liquid is absorbed (about 15 minutes).

Serves 6 to 8.

Laurel's Kitchen, by Laurel Robertson, Carol Flinders and Bronwen Godfrey, 641 pp., 1976, Bantam Books/Nilgiri Press, $3.95.

Yes yes, it's a cookbook. It's a vegetarian cookbook, in fact, passed on to me from my Mom (as all great cookbooks are), a prime defense of hers in dealing with my compulsive-intensive-gardening Dad.

I'm not a vegetarian or a gardener but I am an eater, and I thought that around this time of year when everybody is having veggies foisted upon them by over-productive friends and neighbors (and suffering it gladly), it would be nice to share some true green cuisine.

Don't boil it! Read Laurel's Kitchen.

COMMUNITY CORNER

Color on the Field

Saturday will be a gala day at Bethlehem Central. It's more than just BC's Homecoming football game, it's part of the 50th anniversary celebration. When BC plays its longtime rival Shaker (kickoff 2 p.m.), there will be colorful ceremonies at halftime, including a demonstration by more than 100 cheerleaders. Despite the disappointment of the delay in shipment of band uniforms, the BC marching band will be on hand if not on foot, and many of BC's "football alumni" will be introduced.

Come out, support your team and have fun!
