Group home sites: are fears justified?

Faced with the second proposal in a month for a group home for mentally retarded adults in Bethlehem, the Bethlehem Town Board last week fielded more apprehensive questions and a few hostile remarks.

But it appears unlikely that the town will avail itself of the one legal obstacle — a declaration that the town or the area is "oversaturated" with community residences — it could place in the path of either new home. And Supervisor Robert Hendrick went out of his way to point out a study that shows no measurable impact on property values by community residences in New York State. (See Page 3)

On the grill last Wednesday were representatives of Residential Opportunities, which wants to establish a residence for eight developmentally disabled adults at 80 McCormack Rd., near the Cherry Ave. Extension. Two weeks earlier it had been the Capital District chapter of the New York Association for the Learning Disabled, which wants to establish a Wildwood residence at 232 Gay St. for young adults who are "aging out" of other community residences.

In both instances, the audience had been made up primarily of neighbors who had anxious questions about how the residences would affect them, and some thoughts about the methods used to select sites.

"I keep wondering why we're the chosen ones," said one Slingerlands resident last week.

As in the case of the Gay St. residence, the answer on McCormack Rd. appeared to involve availability and suitability of the house — a large ranch-style building with a generous yard rather than some overall plan to put more community residences in Bethlehem. Because the McCormack Rd. residence is on one floor, said Executive Director Alan Krafchin, it can, with some renovations, house clients who are capable of leaving the building on their own in case of fire.

That explanation failed to convince the neighbors, who wondered about both the isolated site and its proximity to busy Cherry Ave. Extension. The price tag — some $160,000 to $170,000 with renovations — also drew comments.

The most probing comments came from Gary Kochem, who lives next door. "I think it's a good program — I have no objection to that," he said. But eight residents in that house "is too many by far."

Drowning raises questions

The drowning of a small child Thursday in Elsmere has raised anew questions about children's safety and particularly safety around swimming pools. The youngster, Kimberly Marie Dawson, who would have been 3 in November, and a young companion wandered away from their babysitter's home at 707 Delaware Ave., Albany, near the Normanskill, Thursday morning, across an old stone bridge spanning the creek and into the back yard of 26 Rockefeller Rd., in Elsmere, where Kimberly was found floating in a backyard pool shortly before 1 p.m.

Bethlehem Police Lt. Frederick Holligan, who pulled the child from the pool, said the two youngsters apparently had been playing for a while in the yard. Their shoes and socks were found in the water, as were a number of items that had been in the yard. Lt. Holligan said Bethlehem police received a call from the Albany Police Department at 11:55 a.m. and the children were found at 12:47 p.m., but it was unclear how long the children had been missing and it was unknown how long they had been playing around the pool.

The house at 26 Rockefeller Rd. is owned by Edward and Barbara Ulmer, authorities said, but no one was home there at the time of the accident. The above-ground pool measures 18 feet across and is about 4 feet deep, the lieutenant said. The pool has wooden steps leading to a wooden deck and the yard is partially fenced, he noted.

Lt. Holligan said Monday he doubted charges would be filed against anyone involved in the tragedy, but that Detective Sgt. Colin Clark and Detective Charles Rudolph were investigating. Albany Police Juvenile Division Capt. Vincent Foley Monday said the case had been discussed with the district attorney and that no criminal charges would be filed against the babysitter, Mary Gayle Cossingham. Police said the woman had five children in her care when the girl and boy wandered off.

Police said Thursday's journey was not the first for Kimberly and her companion, J.J. Ganz, 2 1/2, for whom no address was given. Several months ago the two had wandered away from the Cossingham home and were found on Golder St. in Albany, several blocks away along a heavily trafficked section of Delaware Ave. That time, too, Bethlehem police were called since the Cossingham home is near the Normanskill, which is the boundary between the City of Albany and the Town of Bethlehem.

The dozen or so homes in Normansville, as that settlement along the Normanskill is called, are shadowed by the newer bridge that spans the ravine at the top, rerouting Delaware Ave. over what in the early years of the town was a hub of activity. It is the old Delaware Ave. bridge that the youngsters are believed to have crossed. The houses here are close together so that police going door-to-door in their search Thursday were able to find a neighbor who remembered seeing two unknown children entering the yard at No. 26.

As he rounded the corner of the house, Lt. Holligan said, he spied the child in the pool, floating face up about six inches beneath the surface. He jumped into the pool to retrieve the child and began mouth-to-mouth resuscitation. Bethlehem Officer Raymond Linstruth, a paramedic, arrived

Pool safety regulations vary

Bethlehem, New Scotland and Voorheesville all require fences and locking gates for in-ground pools but the only requirements for above-ground pools are fold-away ladders in some communities.

John Flanigan, building inspector for the Town of Bethlehem, said a four-foot fence with a locking device is required for an in-ground pool.

"There are no fencing requirements for an above-ground pool," said Flanigan. But, unless there are removable steps or fold-away steps with a locking device, a fence must surround the steps leading to an above-ground pool that is more than 24 inches in depth.

Jerry Gordinier, building inspector for the Village of Voorheesville, said the village zoning ordinance mandates a 4-foot fence with a self-closing, selflatching gate for all in-ground pools. Gordinier said all above-ground pools must have a fold-up ladder and a latch.

Walter Miller, building inspector for the Town of New Scotland, said a four-foot chain link fence with some sort of locking device is required for in-ground pools. "The ordinance does not address above-ground pools," said Miller.

within minutes and took over the resuscitation effort, Lt. Holligan said. Albany Fire Department paramedics were on the scene, police said, and Capital District Ambulance crew members took the child to Albany Medical Center Hospital, where she was pronounced dead shortly after arrival. She was the daughter of Raymond and Maryanne Dawson of Mereline Ave. in Albany, authorities said.

Bethlehem police questioned said they could recall only two pool drownings in the town in the past 25 years.

They're not going to be in the community; they're going to be stuck out at the end of McCormack Rd. in a swamp."

Kochem, like Hendrick, had researched the state law on siting community residences, and urged the board to use the section of the law that permits an objection on the grounds that there is an overconcentration of such facilities either in the town or in the immediate area.

Three such residences, all operated by the Eleanor Roosevelt Developmental Center, exist now in Bethlehem — none in the vicinity of either Gay St. or McCormack Rd. Hendrick said he would inquire of the state Office of Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities what the current definition of saturation is, but gave no promises that he would oppose the facility on that ground.

On the contrary, Hendrick had placed on the meeting agenda a resolution approving the Wildwood facility on Gay St. Board members balked at passing the resolution until the town has more information about the organization's ability to provide adequate utilities at the site, but Hendrick said later he would have the resolution back on the agenda at a future meeting.

State Mental Hygiene Law says a municipality may object to a community residence for the disabled when it would "result in such a concentration of community residential facilities for the mentally disabled in the municipality or in the area in proximity to the site selected or a combination of such facilities with other community residences or similar facilities licensed by other agencies of state government that the nature and character of the areas within the municipality would be substantially altered." The municipality may also suggest alternate sites — an option Hendrick said he would not take.

Several neighbors of the McCormack Rd. site asked how many Bethlehem residents would be living in the community residence. Told the residents aren't picked yet, Kochem observed, "if they aren't residents of this area, we must be overconcentrated."

Ed Solomon, a representative of the Office of Mental Retardation, explained that when a new residence opens the agency must select from a waiting list that probably will include non-Bethlehem residents. But, he said, when openings occur, local residents will get first priority.

Russia revealed to eager teens

Three Delmar-area students are participating this summer in a Russian studies program at the Junior College of Albany. The four-week institute, titled "Russian Studies: Gateway to Understanding," ends Aug. 2.

"It seemed like a fun thing to do," said Aaron Halsdorf, who will be a senior this fall at Bethlehem Central High School. "Most of us only know about the political and military differences between our country and Russia. It's nice to learn about the culture and the people."

The Russian people "know more about us than we do about them," said Mark Freeman, a junior at Bethlehem Central. "We were told there are more teachers teaching in English in Russia than students taking Russian in the United States."

An "interest in foreign affairs" drew Robert Hardt of Slingerlands to the program. A junior at Doane Stuart School, he said he "wanted more detailed instruction on Russia than I was able to get at school."

The institute at JCA is sponsored by the college and funded through a $35,000 youth project grant from the National Endowment for the Humanities. From 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. each weekday, some 37 area high school students are practicing Russian language and studying the country's history, art, music, politics and literature through lectures, discussions, films and field trips.

Under institute coordinator Thomas Gutch, foreign language supervisor at Shaker High School, the group visited the Jordanville Monastery, a Russian Orthodox seminary, and traveled to the Russian Consulate at the United Nations. Other highlights include luncheons with Soviet emigres and exchange students and special lectures from visiting Russian scholars such as Erastus Corning III.

"The Russian language is fun to learn," Halsdorf said. "It's like learning a secret code."

"Surprisingly, I enjoy the language," said Freeman, whose interest in history led him to the program.

For Hardt, the most interesting part of the program is the discussions. "We have some pretty interesting debates," he said, "on what our policy should be toward the Soviets."

The students will share what they learn with their high schools in the fall by producing half-hour video tapes on each of the special lectures. Study guides also will be developed for each subject area with suggested topics for discussion.

The institute will conclude with a panel discussion and reception Aug. 2. Three local Russian experts, Prof. Robert Sharlet of Union College, Dr. Linda Scatton of Harvard University, and Prof. Erik Hoffman of the State University at Albany, will discuss issues covered in the course. The evening begins at 7:30 p.m. in Room 224, JCA, 140 New Scotland Ave. It is free and the public is invited.

Home Impacts studied

A Princeton University study of group homes in New York State has concluded that the homes have "no long term effects on neighboring properties or on turn-over rates."

The study, conducted by the university's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs in 1978 and updated in 1982, was cited by Bethlehem Supervisor Robert Hendrick at last week's town board hearing during a discussion of a group home proposed for McCormack Rd. Bethlehem already has three group homes for mentally retarded people, and two more are proposed.

The 1978 study looked at the long-term neighborhood property impacts of 42 group homes, including two in Albany and five in Troy, finding "no appreciable impacts." In 1982, 32 of the homes were rechecked, making it possible to examine property sales in the five-year period subsequent to the establishment of the homes. The homes were also surveyed for their visual impact. The conclusions:

- "Proximity of neighboring properties to a group home does not significantly affect their market values in the short or long term.
- Establishment of the group home was not associated with a higher degree of neighboring property turnover in the short or long term.
- "The group homes are not very conspicuous neighbors; those with fewer residents (eight or fewer) are generally less conspicuous...
- "The group homes are generally well maintained and on a par consistent with other home on the same block.
- "Neighborhoods with established group homes have not been targeted for additional homes for retarded people — a 'fair share' system has been maintained."

Democrats to field a full slate for fall

Bethlehem Democrats have come up with a full slate of candidates for the town elections this fall, returning to a practice abandoned two years ago.

As expected, the candidates for town board are David C.W. Sawyer and Richard M. White, and for supervisor Rick Picarazzi. Rounding out the slate are Margrethe R. Powers for town justice, David T. O'Brien for superintendent of highways and Joan Uhrik for town clerk. All were nominated unanimously at a caucus held by the Bethlehem Democratic Committee Wednesday.

Party Chairman William Burkhard, who will be quarterbacking his first town election, called the choices a "quality slate" that will give town residents a choice for all offices. When the Democrats skipped the supervisor contest two years ago, he noted, the town board candidates ended up running against Supervisor Tom Corrigan rather than the Republican incumbents.

Picarazzi, 28, is a life-long resident of Selkirk. He is a former legislative director for state Sen. Martin M. Solomon (D-Brooklyn) and served as an intern in state Sen. Howard Nolan's office while attending the State University at Fredonia, where he was president of the student body. He is currently operating his own furniture building business.

Sawyer, a Delmar resident for five years, is a veteran of political campaigns in both Albany and Bethlehem, and came within 126 votes of winning a county legislature seat in 1983. He is a former state budget examiner and is currently a consumer services specialist with the Department of Public Service. He served as an alderman in Albany from 1973 to 1977.

White, 24, of Delmar, is a senior administrative aide to Assemblyman John C. Dearie (D-Bronx) and said he will use his legislative experience to help seek state and federal grants. He is a graduate of the State University at Albany, magna cum laude.

Mrs. Powers is a Delmar attorney with 23 years of practice,

HMC plan gets go-ahead

Two controversial Bethlehem zoning issues have apparently been resolved with actions taken by the town board last week.

The board unanimously approved the zoning change for HMC's proposed development of 92 acres of land between Delaware Ave. and Orchard St. after hearing a report that there will be no major environmental impacts.

And the board accepted a consultant's report on the stability of soil on the site of the proposed Norman's Gate subdivision off Euclid Ave. in Elmsere, ending a protracted legal battle over the construction of 36 homes.

HMC, which includes among its owners Slingerlands developer Norris MacFarland and state Sen. Howard Nolan, proposes to build approximately 280 apartments in five clusters and to sell 57 lots for single family homes. What has proven controversial about the project is the proposal — urged by the town — for a limited access road through the property connecting Delaware Ave. with Orchard St., part of a long-range plan to extend the Delmar Bypass westward and link it with New Scotland Rd.

At a public hearing eight neighbors objected to the increased traffic the project will bring and the Slingerlands Homeowners Association formally opposed any plan that would utilize Fisher Blvd. to continue the bypass extension to New Scotland Rd.

Last week, however, town board members commented on how limited the opposition had been. "It really was an affirmation of community support," said Councilman Sue Ann Ritchko.

Earlier, the town's board members heard a review by planning consultant Edward Kleinke of the environmental impacts of the project. The developer's proposal for clustering the apartments "reduces the impact" of the project on the land, and by leaving the ravine on the west side untouched the plan "minimizes greatly" the impact on the small creek running through the property. As for traffic, Kleinke said, the developer's consultants established that the impact on Orchard St. will be minimal.

"It is my opinion that all of these impacts will be small to moderate," he said. The board accepted Kleinke's recommendation that the town file a "negative declaration" of impact, which means that no formal study will be conducted and made available for public review. Kleinke said HMC's preliminary studies, which are available for review, closely resemble a formal impact study.

The board then voted to rezone the HMC property to Planned Residential Development. The next step is for the developer to present a specific site plan, which must be reviewed by the Planning Board and then approved by the town board. The entire process generally takes more than a year, and actual development of the land is not expected to take place until next year.

The proposed Norman's Gate subdivision has been in litigation for nearly two years, but the major issue was settled by a state Supreme Court judge who ruled that the developers were within their rights to put an access road through a lot on Euclid Ave. that now has a house on it. The remaining major issue was the stability of the soil in an area known for slides into the Normanskill gorge.

Last year, the town hired Clough Harbour Associates to study that question, with the developer paying the bills. The final report, said Public Works Commissioner Bruce Secor, "essentially says the soil is stable."

Secor added, however, that the Clough Harbour report establishes a new setback line — beyond which nothing can be built — and said he isn't sure how many homes can be built on the remaining land. That will be a decision for the planning board after a review by the town's building department, he said.

In other action last week, the town board:

- Received another request for commercial zoning on Rt. 9W north of Glenmont Rd. and referred it to the Planning Board, which is conducting a general review of zoning in the area. The latest request is from Paul Nelson, who owns the Petrol Gas Station on the east side of Rt. 9W as a non-conforming use in what is now a Residence B district. There have been reports of plans for other developments in the Rt. 9W area.

- Transferred $37,000 to pay for increased insurance premiums — a development that has hit municipalities all over the country and is expected to get worse, since many insurance companies are withdrawing from municipal coverage. Supervisor Robert Hendrick said insurance on the town's property has gone up 30 percent, and insurance on vehicles has nearly doubled.

- Heard a report from Secor on the town's water situation. Although the Vly Creek Reservoir is only at 56 percent of capacity, he said, "our concern is not so much for this year but next year." Current conservation measures appear to be having an effect, and education is the town's current objective, he said. So far, the police have issued 47 warning notices to people found sprinkling outside of the permitted hours, Secor said. "There are just one or two problem cases that we're working on."

- Approved new yield signs in the Elm Estates subdivision following a brief public hearing.

- Accepted the resignation of an equipment operator in the Highway Department, who is taking the early retirement option. Also, hired a probationary police dispatcher, leaving one opening in that department.

- Approved, with stipulations, a dumping permit for the Unity of Faith Christian Fellowship Church on Krumkill Rd. for a period of one year.

Workers from Prairie Tank Co. are putting together a four million gallon water storage tank on Rt. 85 in New Scotland, part of Bethlehem's $4.2 million water improvement project. Work on the second tank, near the town's Elm Ave. park, is just getting underway.

More questions on mining

By Mary Pratt

The new and larger meeting room at the New Scotland Town Hall was all but filled to capacity July 23 as residents and the Planning Board discussed sand and gravel mining in the town. Neighbors came armed with a video camera and detailed questions, and town officials tape recorded the meeting. Although,

NEW SCOTLAND

Town Supervisor Stephen Wallace rarely attends Planning Board meetings, this one attracted Wallace and two other town board members, Wyman Osterhout and Kenneth Tice. Voorheesville Sand and Stone has proposed to mine 27 acres of the "back nine" of the former Tall Timbers Country Club off Hilton Road. The likelihood of a second mine in their area has attracted the attention of residents living in or near the Appleblossom/Smith Lane subdivision between Route 85A and the Delaware and Hudson Railroad tracks. With all the vacant land in New Scotland, one asked, "Why do they have to put it there?"

Their vocal questioning was brought out in part because of an existing nearby open pit sand and gravel mine operated by Chester Oliver.

Allan Hewitt of the State Department of Environmental Conservation (DEC) said it had been "approaching several violations" of state regulations that govern mining. The Oliver pit is now being reclaimed (regraded and partly filled in), Hewitt told the meeting. The pit and surrounding land, about three acres, could eventually serve as open space or a grassy area, but Hewitt doubted it would be suitable for home sites.

Hewitt detailed the types of activities that often take place at a sand and gravel mine and the restrictions his agency can impose on those mines. The town government can also impose additional restrictions, such as on hours of operation or reclamation standards, because it requires the mining company to apply for a Special Use Permit.

One resident summed up what neighbors wanted to know. "Most of us are here because of our water, noise pollution and dust." Robert Allen of Bullock Rd., another area of the town, suggested that the early history of mining in the town, the strength of the state mining law, and the impact of the proposed mine on water be looked at.

Because the neighboring homes draw water from individual private wells, those in attendance asked what recourse they would have if the proposed mine disturbed their water supplies.

Hewitt explained that before any mining could begin, the annual high level of the water table would be determined with test wells in the spring, and that mining would cease five feet above the high water mark. In New York, even when mining has been done below the water table, no adverse effect on the quality of quantity of water in an aquifer has ever been demonstrated to have occurred, he said.

Noise might be partly suppressed at Voorheesville Sand and Stone's mine by berms to be built and topped with evergreen trees between the mine and the Delaware and Hudson Railroad tracks. These tracks in turn lie between the Appleblossom/Smith Lane homes and the area to be mined. The haul road would go through the woods and away from residences. Residents complained that noise from the Oliver pit could be heard as far away as the Colonie Country Club on Rt. 85.

Residents also stated that people with emphysema and asthma live in the area, and asked what effect dust might have on them. Dust would be controlled by watering the mine's roads, according to the state permit.

As mining takes place, Hewitt explained, reclamation is also supposed to proceed. However, a miner's best efforts can be "systematically aborted" by off road vehicles that can enter reclaimed areas and rip up newly laid mulch or planted grass. Riders avoid substantial barriers and even have cut wire fences to get into mines elsewhere in the Capital District. Hewitt suggested that the town consider enacting an ordinance to regulate off road vehicles because of this.

Town officials are moving cautiously, partly because of the situation with the Oliver pit, which had very steep faces in some sections and was beginning to be used as a dumping ground for demolition debris. "I was horrified when I saw that thing," said Planning Board attorney Frederick Edmunds.

The mining company has already secured its permit from the DEC, and since it has done so, Edmunds pointed out that the people who own the land have the right to use it in a legal fashion. Since the state permit has been issued, there can come a point where, he said, "we don't have the right to turn them down."

Selkirk mine proposed

A proposal to mine sand and topsoil from a farm in Selkirk is being considered by the Bethlehem Town Board and the state Department of Environmental Conservation.

Robert J. Hillmann is seeking permission to establish the mining operation on his farm on Lasher Rd., near the Conrail yards. According to Hillmann's application, the mining would reduce the level of the farmland a maximum of 10 feet, and the area would be reseeded when the mining is completed.

At its meeting last week, the Bethlehem Town Board decided that since the town does not issue mining permits the Department of Environmental Conservation should act as "lead agency" in processing the application and considering any potential environmental impacts.

Mayor: It's end of the line

By Theresa Bobear

After meeting with representatives of Albany County and New Scotland, Voorheesville Mayor Edward Clark informed town resident Bernard Stempel at last week's village board meeting that the village would not provide him with a water tap for his new house on Rt. 85A, outside of the village.

Stempel claims that the well water for his new house is contaminated with sodium. Until recently, the Albany County Highway Department maintained a salt pile on Rt. 85A, near Clayton A. Bouton Junior-Senior High School.

In the past, the village has granted water taps to other residents of the area who complained of sodium-contaminated water. Clark said the village first got involved as a gesture of cooperation with the county — as a one-time deal.

But Clark pointed out that the problem is now "an open-ended situation." Clark said he did not receive any assurance from the county that this request would be the last one.

"Our responsibility is to the residents of the village...It is our charge to protect their (water) system," said Clark, noting that village is only 50 percent developed.

"What we want to know is where is the end of the line?" Trustee Richard Langford inquired. Langford said the county was not accepting liability of contamination of the water supply.

O'Dell tapped as planner

Donald O'Dell has been appointed to fill the late Margaret Gott's seat on the Voorheesville Village Planning Commission.

O'Dell, who moved to Voorheesville from East Greenbush in 1978, holds a bachelor's degree in political science from the University of Louisville, Ky. A past member of the board of directors for the Salem Hills Park Association, O'Dell is an associate planner with the Department of State.

Prior to joining the Department of State 10 years ago, O'Dell was employed by the State Office of Planning Coordination.

for the situation. Donald Meacham, board attorney, said there is no legal conclusion that the county is liable.

"I'm sorry, Mr. Stempel," said Clark.

Village resident Peter Baltis said the state Department of Transportation stores salt at Rts. 155 and 85A. Stating that the aquifer for Voorheesville is located directly below the site, Baltis speculated that the Village of Voorheesville may have the same problem (sodium contamination of the water supply) in a couple of years. "I think it's a very serious matter for village officials to look into," said Baltis.

Steve Lukowski, director of environmental health for the Albany County Health Department, said Friday that the village's wells are considerably upstream from the state DOT facility. The salt pile at Rt. 155 is kept covered and appears to be no danger to the water supply, he said.

The board accepted the only bid received, from M. Caputo and Associates of Saratoga Springs, for the purchase of an $8,500 used sewer jet for Sewer District No. 1. The sewer jet will be used to periodically flush out the system.

Observing that the notice of bid was dated July 18, Thomas Mensching questioned whether or not the July 23 deadline gave other potential bidders a reasonable time to reply.

Trustee Edward Donohue reported that the Albany County Health Department had recently reminded the sewer advisory committee to correct the Pleasant St. sewage disposal situation.

The board authorized Clark to sign an $18,745 contract between the village and the village ambulance service. Donohue said the annual budget for the ambulance service is divided between the village and the town. Donohue said possible expansion of the facility, which presently consists of just a bay for the ambulance, is being considered.

Trustee Susan Rockmore reported that some businesses were inadvertently left out of the village directory, recently compiled and published for the first time. Rockmore said the directory will hopefully be reprinted whenever necessary with the omissions included.

Baltis referred to the omission of his business from the directory as a "continuation of the blacklisting of Baltis Electric for the past 15 years."

In other business, the board:

- Heard Mensching commend William Hotaling, superintendent of public works, for the prompt repair of a recent water main break.

- Appointed Alan Parsons to the sewer advisory commission.

Support for parents

The Capital District Easter Seal Society has announced a new program of support for parents of children with disabilities. The "Parent-Friend: One-to-One" program is intended to offer parents confidential, individual support by a "parent-friend" who is also the parent of a child with a disability. In addition to providing emotional support, "parent-friends" often are able to provide practical information about managing a disabled child in the home.

Persons interested in learning more about the program are encouraged to call Barbara Neiman, program coordinator, at 434-4103.

Fair Time

Good times come and go but one tradition that has stayed over the years is the annual Punkin-town Fair. The summer festival has thrilled children with its rides, fed them and their parents with warm weather delicacies and excited the whole crowd with a variety of games. Although all those facets will still be there, there will be several changes at this year's fair in New Salem.

Instead of being held two consecutive week-ends, as in the past, the fair will be held only one week-end this year. But besides Friday and Saturday evenings the merriment will continue on Sunday afternoon as well.

Also, the winner of this year's raffle will drive off in a new 1985

Chevrolet Celebrity. In a first at the fair, 1,400 lucky people will be offered the chance to donate $10 each and have their names placed in the drawing for the car. Drawing for the grand prize will be held on Sunday, Aug. 4, at 5 p.m.

John Conley, fair chairman invites everyone to come on down to the once-a-year fundraiser for the benefit of the New Salem Fire Department. Fairgrounds will open at 7 p.m. on Friday, Aug. 2, 6:30 p.m. on Saturday, Aug. 3 and from 1 p.m. until 5 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 4. Admission and parking are free.

Buckley Memorial Progressing

benefit the Thomas Buckley Memorial Fund activities are in the final stages. Plans for the raffle to be held from August to October are being finalized and tickets will be printed up within the next few weeks. Although chances on prizes will be sold at the Community Day and the following month, the drawing will take place on Oct. 12, the day of the dedication of the high school field in memory of Buckley, who coached the football team for over 20 years.

Meanwhile, the Aug. 18 date will hold fun for everyone, with firematics competition, races for children and an evening concert in the park by Southbound. Those interested in helping with any of the events may contact either Karen Leach at 861-8147 or Bruce Martelle at 765-4930.

Southbound at Plaza

Speaking of Southbound, the fast-rising country western group from Voorheesville has been more than busy this summer. With their single from Warner Brothers being released any day now, the popular country-western quintet has been making a number of appearances. During the last week alone the band has appeared at a benefit for the Berne Fire Dept., held at Zwicklbauer's Hofbrau, at Pine Lake with The White, at the Colony Coliseum with Crystal Gayle and at the Saratoga County Fair. The group will appear at the Empire State Plaza on Wednesday, Aug. 7, as part of the summer evening series sponsored by the state. The program at the plaza is free.

More Music

Still on the subject of music, the Kiwanis-sponsored summer band program will hold an open house this Thursday, Aug. 1, at 9 am at the Elementary School. According to Lydia and Leonard Tobler, who have directed the program for the past few summers, students will be performing in band, stage band and small instrumental groups during the morning of music.

Students in grades five through high school have been practicing at the grade school every Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday mornings during July.

Mrs. Tobler, who directs the elementary and junior high bands during the year, says the summer music program is an interesting experience "since you never know who is going to show up," taking into consideration vacation and the host of other activities. All are welcome to come to the free offering.

The Movable Library

Fun continues at the library as summer programs are in full swing. This week's movie brings the talent of Danny Kaye to the screen as he portrays the famed story-teller Hans Christian Andersen. The musical biography includes such favorite songs as "Inch Worm" and "Thumbelina." The two-hour movie will be shown on Tuesday, Aug. 6, at 2 p.m. and again on Wednesday, Aug. 7, at 1 p.m. Both free viewings will take place at St. Matthew's Church.

Both sections of the summer Reading Club are sure to have an exciting gathering this week as those in grades K through three present a stuffed animal parade while those in grades four through six participate in a Mad Hatter's Party. Primary grades meet on Thursday, Aug. 1 and intermediate grades on Friday, Aug. 2.

Water Bills Due

August begins tomorrow and besides signifying that summer vacation is now half over it also means that those who have not paid their annual village water bills will now be paying interest on the unpaid balance.

To ward off those extra finance charges those who have yet to pay their water charges for the year may do so Monday through Friday at the village hall.

New School Director

The Community Nursery School of Voorheesville which is housed in the Voorheesville First United Methodist Church, has announced that Rosemarie Pakenas will serve as the new teacher-director of the school when classes begin in October.

Mrs. Pakenas has resided in Voorheesville for the past six years. A graduate of the University of Potsdam, she taught kindergarten and first grade before the birth of her children Andy and Kati.

Active in school and community functions, Mrs. Pakenas has served as vice-chairman of the nursery school board and, along with her husband Lawrence, as recording secretary of the Voorheesville PTSA. She has also served as room mother and this year will hold the position of room-mother co-ordinator, along with Mary Nolan.

She will replace Nancy White, who left her position at the nursery school to become a master teacher at Maria College. In this capacity she will not only teach three and four year-olds but supervise student teachers as well.

V'ville library site search shifts

By Lyn Stapf

Plans to acquire a lot in Salem Hills as the site for a new village library have been shelved while the Voorheesville Library Board looks at two other village-owned sites.

At last week's Voorheesville Village Board meeting Mayor Edward Clark stated that after walking the site near the sewage treatment plant and taking into consideration all the stipulations set down by the board—such as continuation of the foliage barrier, adequate angle of repose to limit erosion and retention of enough property for a future expansion of the sewage treatment plant—that the remaining pie-shaped piece of land was definitely limited. Clark said he also felt that the board must be sympathetic to the negative reaction of the Salem Hills resi-

Although he did not offer a definite no to the possible use of the property, Clark said it was his hope that the Salem Hills site would not be pursued any further at this time.

At the library board meeting the following night, Edward Donohue, who serves on both the library and village boards, added that a poll of Salem Hills residents conducted by members of the sewage commission revealed that use of the property on Stonington Hill Road was not at all favorable.

Residents are concerned with the traffic which would result along the stretch of land which serves as the only entrance to the development, which contains over

With this information before them, the library board members decided to table their pursuit of the Stonington Hill Road property and concentrate their attention on the two other village-owned sites. Although the one site on Grove St. and Main does suit the needs of the library it was the opinion of some board members that the Voorheesville Ave. site, where the village salt is presently stored, is a better choice, since it needs less work to ready it for building. Both sites will be examined by board members over the next month.

Several other privately owned lots are also still being eyed as possible sites for the new library.

Balloons bear message of love

More than 30 children took part in this year's Vacation Bible School held by the South Bethlehem United Methodist Church the week of July 15-19 at the church on Willowbrook Ave. The youngsters, who ranged in age from nursery to sixth grade, enjoyed a full week of activities that included crafts, games, Bible stories and singing. They particularly enjoyed listening to Rev. Gary Dickson who played guitar and sang for them. Instructed by their teachers, Ada Court, Louise Mahon, and JoMary Dragon, the children created attractive planters, crosses, tissue-paper flowers, refrigerator magnets and even some tiny mice and butterflies.

The highlight of the week though was the picnic and balloon release the last day that was attended by their families. The children, teachers, and teens who assisted in the program released more than 40 balloons into the sky. Each balloon had the message enclosed—"God Loves You, And So Do We". It also included the person's name, the name of the church, and the address. They hope to get an even bigger response than last year when people who found the balloons wrote from as far away as New Hampshire.

In appreciation for all her time and effort coordinating the program, the children presented JoMary Dragon with a porcelain "precious moments" figurine of a little girl holding balloons accompanied by a note—"In appreciation for Sharing Herself, and God's Love."

Although regular meetings of the Bethlehem Subordinate and Junior Grange in Selkirk have been discontinued for the summer, most members are busily preparing their entries and exhibits for the Altamont Fair, which begins the week of Aug. 12. ## Sentenced in sodomy

Robert L. Denney, 67, of Mill Rd. in Delmar was sentenced Monday in County Court to 2 1/3 to 7 years in prison on his plea of guilty to one count of sodomy in the second degree, according to a spokesman for the county district attorney's office. Denney was arrested May 21 on the felony charge by Bethlehem police following an investigation involving Bethlehem Police, the Albany police juvenile unit and the county's Child Protective Services. ## Accident on bridge

A three-car accident on the Delaware Ave. bridge over the Normanskill sent two motorists to the hospital Monday morning. According to Bethlehem police reports, all three vehicles were eastbound when the 7:50 accident occurred. Police said a van driven by Richard S. Bennett, 18, of Delmar struck the rear of a vehicle being operated by David R. Gill, 25, of Albany, which had slowed for traffic. The Gill vehicle was forced into the car in front of it, which was being driven by Stephen Johnson, 42 of Albany, police said. Bennett told police he had been adjusting the van's radio when the accident occurred, according to the report.

Gill and Bennett were taken to the Albany Medical Center Hospital by the Delmar Fire Department Rescue Squad, police reported. Both received emergency treatment and were released, a spokesman for the hospital said. No charges were filed. Rush hour traffic was rerouted via Rockefeller Rd. out the old Delaware Ave. bridge.

Village Stage and Wilder at library

The Village Stage, Bethlehem's newly formed amateur theater group, will present a 25-minute Thornton Wilder play at the Bethlehem Public Library tonight (Wednesday).

"A Happy Journey to Trenton and Camden" will be staged in the Library's Community Room, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Judy Lamprecht is directing the short play, which she says is suitable for people from 6 to 96. "It's a charming story set in the Depression years of the 1930's," she said, "about a happy reunion that takes place after a family makes a long trip to visit a married daughter."

The cast includes Pat DeCecco and Bill Finnen, as the mother and father; Michael DeCecco and Alison Drew, as young members of the family; and Judy Spevack, as the married daughter.

There will be no admission charge to the dramatic production, and everyone in the community is invited.

Although this will be one of the library's "Evening on the Green" summer entertainments, the decision was made during rehearsals to present the play indoors for more favorable acoustics and fewer distractions.

Village Stage members Allison Drew (Caroline), left, Pat DeCecco (Ma Kirby), Michael DeCecco (Arthur), and Bill Finnan (Elmer) will present Thornton Wilder's A Happy Journey to Trenton and Camden tonight (July 31) at Bethlehem Public Library's Evening On The Green, beginning at 7:30 p.m.

Proctor's new season

Individual tickets to approximately 50 concerts and shows at Proctor's Theatre, Schenectady, go on sale to the general public on Aug. 1 at 10 a.m. The list of presentations includes Broadway blockbusters like 42nd Street and Noises Off, the Berlin Ballet, Andre Watts, Marilyn Horne, Mel Torme and Jack Jones, the Vienna Symphony and P.D.Q. Bach.

All Proctor's tickets are now computer-generated. This service, new to the theatre for the 1985-1986 season, will enable purchasers of all tickets, even those bought by telephone, to know at the time of purchase precisely what locations they will receive.

The box office will be open this season Monday through Saturday from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., except for performance days, when it will close at curtain time. Tickets may be ordered by telephone during the same hours with Master Card or Visa by dialing 346-6204. Tickets to all Proctor's events will also be on sale at the Community Box Office in Colonie Center, Empire State Plaza, Stuyvesant Plaza, all Carl Company branches, the Palace Theatre, and all Drome Sound stores.

Hosts get benefits

Scholarships of up to $800 that can be applied toward international education and travel programs are available to U.S. families who host English-speaking high school age students for a semester or an academic year. The intercultural exchange program is sponsored by the American Institute for Foreign Study (AIFS) Scholarship Foundation of Greenwich, Conn.

Students from Germany, Spain, Japan and 20 other countries attend local high schools during their stay. Paul A. Cook, executive director of the foundation, said the organization will make an effort to match the student's interests to the host family's, which may screen applications.

Host family members earn scholarships applicable to more than 100 different international learning tours suitable for junior high, high school, college, or adult travelers. Programs ranging from one week to a full year include homestays, cruises and campus stays.

For information, interested persons may send a post card to Laurie Douglass, Department TE, AIFS Scholarship Foundation, 100 Greenwich Ave., Greenwich, Conn. 06830; or call toll-free, 800-243-4567.

The Lost Princess of Ansoneer

Long ago there was a place in the world called Ansoneer. It was a land of peasants and princes, castles and cottages, meadows and mills. It could have been a lovely place, except for one thing: the princess was missing and no one knew who or where she was.

The princess had been born to the King and Queen of Ansoneer, and since she was their first child, people from all over the land gathered at the royal castle beneath the balcony of the Queen's bedroom. When the cries of a newborn baby interrupted the low murmuring of the crowd, everyone held their breath for just a moment to be sure of what they heard, then let out thunderous shouts of happiness proclaiming the birth of their princess.

Soon the King appeared on the balcony and the crowd cheered more loudly than before, because he was a kind and just ruler and the people loved him dearly. He raised his arms high above his head to ask the people to listen to him, and they grew quiet. In a loud voice filled with pride, and glistening eyes filled with tears of joy, he announced, "Ansoneer is more beautiful today than it was yesterday, for now we have a princess!"

For an entire week following the birth of the princess, the people celebrated with feasts, dances, concerts and plays, and sports events, and a special feeling of love toward one another. In fact, during all of that week, not one argument was heard, not a single child punished, not one stray dog went hungry, nor was a single complaint heard, not even on the day it rained heavily and prevented the peasants' picnic from being held.

On the last evening of the celebration, a royal ball was given in honor of the princess. Kings, queens, and noblemen from neighboring lands were invited to attend, and, because the King of Ansoneer felt such devotion for all of his subjects, the peasant people from all over the kingdom were invited as well.

It was that evening which brought a dark cloud of sadness over the once brilliant sun that had shone on Ansoneer, a cloud that would dim the land for fifteen years. No one knows how it happened. Some believed it was an evil demon behind the deed, while others blamed a jealous chambermaid in the castle. Many

*A short story in four parts
by Norman Cohen*

simply accepted it as a stroke of misfortune without blaming anyone. Nevertheless, whatever or whoever brought it about, when the Queen went to the nursery to present the little princess to the guests at the royal ball, the baby was gone.

All that night not a person in the kingdom slept, for they were searching everywhere for the baby. All the coaches and carriages of the visiting royalty were examined before they were permitted to leave Ansoneer on their long journeys back to their homelands. Old people and young people carried bright candles through every house, every barn, every shop, and every mill looking for the lost baby. Specially trained hounds sniffed the child's crib to get her scent and were then turned loose throughout the land, but they ran in circles unable to find a trace of the lost princess.

The efforts to find the princess continued for nearly a year before the King and Queen decided to call off the search. Yet they hadn't lost all hope, and so they offered a reward of half the King's treasury, a great sum to be sure, for anyone finding the princess.

Although the King did not mean for it to happen, people from all over the land, indeed even from foreign lands, became greedy in trying to win the handsome reward offered by the King. Year after year, they brought little girls to the King claiming that their daughter was the real princess, claiming that the treasure was rightfully theirs.

People began spending much time trying to make their daughters pretty by fitting them with specially made clothes, putting curls and bows in their hair, teaching them to sing and dance and play music, and instructing them in how to walk with elegance and how to speak with fine accents. More than a few parents tried to make their daughters believe themselves to be the real princess.

The young ladies of the kingdom learned to compete with each other. They learned to make the winning of prizes more important than being honest, and so they learned to cheat. They became cruel and selfish. They learned to feel good about themselves by trying to make the other girls feel ugly and stupid and clumsy.

Many grown people also seemed to forget the kindness their King had taught them for so many years. They grew quarrelsome with each other, and began committing crimes, some so serious the guilty ones had to be banished from the kingdom forever.

The King and Queen were so saddened by the loss of their daughter, they spent most of the time inside the castle quietly reading or just thinking with empty expressions on their faces. They attended to royal duties only when it became absolutely necessary. They hardly ever spoke to the people from the balcony of the castle as had been the custom. The people began to forget what the King and Queen looked like.

Because of the greed that grew in Ansoneer, and the King's inability to lead the people back the way they had been during the happy history before the princess was lost, the land became barren, the mills produced less than ever before. Most of the people grew poorer and poorer while just a few stayed rich. It made many people think a great deal about the reward offered by the King for finding the princess. They dreamed of having half the treasure in the King's castle and all the wonderful things they could then buy, just like the few rich noblemen in the land. But not everyone.

'Joshua' distributed nationally

Richelieu Court Publications of Slingerlands has announced an agreement with Walden Books for nationwide distribution of a novel written by Fr. Joseph F. Girzone of Slingerlands, entitled Joshua.

"Joshua has been a consistently strong seller in all out regional stores ever since we started handling it," said Gary Mele, district manager for Walden Books. "Though simply written, its thoughts are profound. I put it in a class with Tolstoy and Dostoevsky. It will be a classic," said Mike Du Four, who reviewed the book for Walden Books.

Joshua, which is already in its second printing, has been selling in more than 300 stores throughout the country. Based on the past year's sales figures, Richelieu Court Publications projects that sales could reach 250,000 by the end of 1985.

Joshua is a story about a woodcarver whose mysterious identity arouses conflicting passions and inevitable intrigue. Richelieu Court Publications attributes the widespread popularity of the novel to the fact that its message transcends denominational boundaries.

"It seems to respond to a deep-seated need in everybody," said Girzone. "It's nothing more than what Jesus really taught." Girzone said the success of the novel "shows how people really are attracted to the message of Jesus when it's presented in the right fashion."

Girzone is a retired Catholic priest. Born in Albany, he joined the seminary at age 14. Ordained in 1955, he taught in the Bronx, in the mining community of Pottsville, Pa., and at the seminary in Auburn, N.Y. He began his work in the Albany Diocese 21 years ago, serving on the Human Rights Commission, the Bishop's Criminal Committee and the review board for the Division of Youth. Following doctor's orders, he retired from his last parish assignment in Ravena six years ago.

Girzone is now writing a follow-up to Joshua. The author hopes to complete his novel about Joshua in Northern Ireland before the holiday season.

Fingers do the shopping at area Price Choppers

Price Chopper has introduced the latest in electronic shopping, the Touch-n-Save automated discount warehouse and the Avon Beauty Express.

The Touch-n-Save machine, which is about the size of a telephone booth, is an electronic catalog with approximately 3,000 general merchandise products to sell. Here's how it works, according to Price Chopper:

At the heart of the machine is a glass screen similar to a television screen. In reality, it is a grid of infrared lights. When it is touched, it feeds information into a computer that gives instructions to the visual display unit. The result is that a potential customer can get an array of names of various items on the screen. A touch of any one of these brings that group of items into view and another touch brings a specific item on the screen with information on its features and its price.

Once an item is selected, the screen shows the full cost including tax and delivery. To complete the ordering process, the customer pushes the order button. The screen then has a place to type in the address to which the item is to be sent. Insertion of a VISA or Master Card completes the transaction. (Payment can also be made by check or money order mailed in a postage paid envelope).

The order is then flashed to a warehouse in Tacoma, Wash. or Nashville, Tenn., a receipt slips from the machine and, if the credit card is valid for the amount purchased, the goods are delivered by United Parcel Service in approximately seven days.

The discount warehouse is fully stocked with name goods. Each item comes with the manufacturer's original warranty, and if the customer is dissatisfied with any item purchased at Touch-n-Save, he/she can return it within 30 days with the sales slip. Refunds will be issued in the form of the original payment.

Touch-n-Save machines are available in 39 Price Chopper Supermarkets throughout the greater Capital District and Western Massachusetts area.

The other innovation in supermarket shopping is the Avon Beauty Express, tested recently in Crossgates Mall. Price Chopper is the first supermarket in the country to test the machines; and machines are now in place in four stores in Schenectady, Latham, and Clifton Park.

Conrail earnings

The Consolidated Rail Corporation has reported a net income of $154.8 million for the second quarter and $209.5 million for the first six months of 1985.

These figures compare with record net income of $178.9 million and $269.8 million, respectively, for the similar periods of 1984. But Conrail did not pay industry scale wages in the second quarter and first half of 1984. If the company had, its earnings would have been approximately $147 million for the second quarter and $205 million in the first half of 1984.

"In 1985's first half, Conrail restored most employees to industry-scale wage levels, while also making lump-sum payments of $53 million for retroactive wage increases for the full second half of 1984," said L. Stanley Crane, Conrail's chairman and chief executive officer.

"Most important is this: despite the first half traffic and revenue declines and the substantial increase in wage levels, Conrail was able to produce railroad operating income comparable to the best of the other major rail systems in the nation and increase its cash balance. Concurrently, Conrail continued its massive capital expenditure program of more than $550 million for the year and enhanced its service quality," said Crane.

"Our results provide additional and mounting evidence of Conrail's capability to continue programs to improve customer service and maintain long-term viability, while operating as a 'normal' company in a highly competitive environment," added Crane.

Strike could slow area economy

Although most residents of the Town of Bethlehem will be unaware of this strike for the time being, the walkout of members of Teamsters Local 294 could hit home if the strike is prolonged. The union represents drivers of four area trucking firms, Anchor Trucking, M & G Convoy, Nu-Car Carriers and KAT Trucking. All of the companies are involved with the transporting of new automobiles from the Selkirk rail yard and the port of Albany to car dealerships throughout the northeast.

According to strikers at the Anchor Trucking site on Long Lane in Selkirk, as many as 100,000 jobs could be affected by the end of this week. Long-term effects would be a backup of cars at the two rail yards, resulting in the auto makers cutting back production of new models simply because there will be no room at factories to store them. "There won't be any new cars built, period."

As in most labor disputes, the major issue is money. Drivers leaving the area to deliver autos to a dealer are paid a per mile rate. On the return trips if a driver is bringing a load to an area dealer, owners want to pay drivers one half of the rate they pay for the trip from the local area. "The dealers are still going to charge the new car buyer the same destination charge based on the higher rate of transports whether or not full or half rate was paid to move that car," said one striker. The union seems to have anticipated this job action for a while. They say they will stay out as long as it takes to get the issue settled and have set aside strike funds to see it through.

Fumes fell two

Two janitorial workers at the K-Mart store in Glenmont overcame by fumes from cleaning fluids early last Wednesday were taken to Albany Medical Center Hospital by the Bethlehem Volunteer Ambulance Corps, according to Bethlehem police reports. Santiago Perez of Clinton Ave., Albany, remained hospitalized Monday, in fair condition, while Alphonso Cruz, also of Clinton Ave., declined treatment, a hospital spokesman said.

Three other employees of New York Janitorial Services, of Syracuse, were in the store at the time, before it was opened to the public, but apparently were unaffected by the fumes, according to reports. The fumes are believed to have come from a mix of cleaning agents containing chlorine bleach and ammonia, authorities said. The store was cleared by the use of large fans. A representative of the state Department of Agriculture and Markets said no food items in the store were contaminated in the incident because all were packaged.

Glass leak stopped

Delmar fire fighters were called out Thursday when a glass leak occurred in a furnace at the Owens-Corning Fiberglas Corp. plant on Rt. 32. Gary Carlson, production superintendent, said it is standard procedure to call the fire department when such a leak occurs.

The leaking molten glass was confined by a retaining wall around the bottom of the furnace, Carlson said, and solidified when water was sprayed on it, stopping the leak. Normal production is continuing while that section of the furnace is being repaired, Carlson said. The leak occurred during routine maintenance procedures, he added.

New Scotland soccer going strong

By Peter Fisch

During the past few years, soccer has been on the rise in the United States and the community of New Scotland is no exception with its newly formed soccer club.

Under the direction of veteran high school coach Jim Hladun, the club was organized and entered the Capital District Youth Soccer League last year with four teams. Except for a small town recreational league formed by Hladun in 1980, the town had been without competitive soccer for some time. The only other form of competition came in the form of a 1983 under-16 team in the CDYSL, consisting of New Scotland players but playing for the banner of the Guilderland club.

"There was no real competition in the recreational league," noted Hladun, a teacher at Voorheesville High School and junior varsity soccer coach for the past 13 years. "We decided that the boys needed something with a little more competition so we looked at the CDYSL."

Hladun set out on his quest and invited Delmar's George Tilroe, founder of the Bethlehem Soccer Club, to speak at an informational meeting. "George explained the league to us and left it up to us to get the ball rolling," said Hladun.

After two years of operation the club now includes close to 100 players on traveling squads in five different age divisions. Hladun feels there is plenty of room for expansion within the club and is looking toward the newly formed girls program at Voorheesville High School for assistance in that area.

"There's always room for expansion," commented Hladun, the club's president. "I think we'll get a carryover for the new girls' program at the high school. We don't have any girls teams in our club right now but we have let girls play on the boys teams. They have not been excluded from playing."

One problem that could surface with expansion, Hladun feels, is

trouble in finding coaching. "Not too many people have soccer knowledge so getting coaches is a problem," he said. "Many people have picked up the game by watching games or attending tournaments but not enough are getting involved. Here's a chance for parents to get involved with something their kids participate in."

Presently, the season begins in late May and extends through the month of July but talks have surfaced about having the league season start earlier. "A major problem with any club like ours is a commitment on the part of the players," explained Hladun. "It's very hard to keep an adequate numbers of players on a team with outside interruptions during the summer. An earlier start might help in that respect but it might hurt us since we are limited in field space and we must compete with other activities for those fields."

Voorheesville High School

varsity soccer coach Bob Crandall, instrumental in forming the club, sees the program as a chance for kids to continue playing soccer in the off-season and improve their skills. "It allows kids to play another season of soccer, work on their skills and work with players they might play with in the fall," said Crandall.

"The club has helped the Voorheesville High soccer program immeasurably," added Crandall, entering his fourth season at the helm of a program that's had its share of troubles winning in recent years. "Prior to last summer, many kids didn't play any soccer in the summer. If you want to be competitive at something, you've got to put in time and effort."

Crandall feels that the league's wide range of competition is beneficial to the players. "The exposure to the play in the Capital District is helping. Certain players have obviously developed. The club's impact on the school's program may not be seen this year, but it will be seen down the line."

"I used to have to teach skills but now we're coaching kids who've been playing soccer since elementary school so it's easier to work strategy," added Hladun. "You'll see a lot more improvement in the school program because the skill level of the players has come such a long way."

The philosophy of the club is nothing unusual according to Hladun. "We aim to teach the game of soccer to the youth of the community while developing character, sportsmanship and a sense of competition."

"The club is going strong," stated Hladun. "We've gone from four to five teams in one year. I think soccer will be here for quite a while."

Hunting season coming up

New York's 1985-86 small game hunting season dates and regulations have been announced by the state Department of Environmental Conservation Commissioner.

A 1985-86 license must be possessed when hunting on or after Oct. 1, the start of the new license year. Detailed information on the hunting season and regulations will be included in the 1985-86 Fishing, Small Game Hunting and Trapping Guide available from all license-issuing agents beginning in mid-August.

Hunting hours are generally from sunrise to sunset. These shooting hours also apply to woodcock. For other migratory birds, such as ducks and geese, shooting hours are one-half hour before sunrise to sunset. The half-hour before sunrise opening also applies to spring turkey hunting.

A $7.50 Federal duck stamp is not required for hunting woodcock, gallinules, rail or snipe; however, shotguns must be plugged to hold not more than three shells. This is the same three-shell restriction that applies when hunting ducks and geese.

The small game season dates and bag limits for Albany County are as follows: ruffed grouse, Sept. 20-Feb. 28, 4 per day; pheasant, Oct. 1-Dec. 31, 2 per day; wild turkey, Oct. 7-Nov. 17, 1 per season; and cottontail rabbit, Oct. 1-Feb. 28, 6 per day.

Dolphins' Drew sets championship pace

Chris Drew of the Delmar Dolphins set two meet records and captured three first places en route to a banner day at the Adirondack Junior Olympic Long-Course Swimming Championships in Clifton Park last weekend.

Drew grabbed first place and set meet records in both the 100 and 200 meter backstroke, the same two events he'll swim at the Empire State Games this August in Buffalo. The 14 year-old also notched a first place finish in the 100 meter freestyle and a second in the 50 meter freestyle. In the relays, Drew was a member of the second place teams in the 400 meter medley and 400 meter freestyle at the boys 13 and 14 year-old level.

Competing against more than 300 swimmers from 20 local clubs, the Dolphins sent 25 swimmers to the contest, with more than half placing in the top six of at least one event. In the girls 10 and under division, Emily Church placed fourth in the 50 meter backstroke while Meridith Dix grabbed second place in the 11 and 12 year-old girls 50 meter breaststroke. Jenny Mosley, a 13 year-old Empire State Games competitor, took home a first, second and third in the 50, 100 and 200 meter freestyle respectively at the girls 13 and 14 year-old level. In the same division, Jill Cleveland finished second in the 100 meter backstroke.

Drew Patrick fared well in the 11 and 12 year-old boys division with a first in the 100 meter breaststroke and a second in the 50 meter competition of the same event. Patrick Fish tallied a third place finish in the 100 meter butterfly event at the same age level. Another Empire State Games swimmer — Justin Baird — showed excellent form as he nailed down second place in the 13 and 14 year-old boys 200 meter freestyle race and fourth in the 100 meter freestyle. Also in the 13-14 year-old division, Cameron O'Connor placed fourth in the 200 meter backstroke in addition to being a member of both second place relay teams. Baird also helped in the strong finish of the two relay squads. Keith Dix, in the 15-18 year-old age group, registered a second place finish in the 200 meter breaststroke.

Several other local swimmers in various age groups placed well in the two day event. Among those turning in outstanding performances were David Cleary, Paul Engel, Chris Engstrom, Tracie Mull, Chris Nolan and Lisa Ogawa.

Traffic hazards

Editor, The Spotlight:

While on the subject of dangerous intersections (Mr. Selkirk's letter of July 24), perhaps I could add three more that have been a real potential for tragedy. The first is the junction of Elsmere Ave. (Rt. 335) and the Delmar bypass. The situation for people turning left from either of the east or west traveling lanes is unclear at best and dangerous at worst. Separate turning lanes and signals for left turns should be incorporated into the main travel lanes. This would eliminate the bunch-up of traffic in the median, and smooth the flow of traffic on Elsmere Ave. as well. Also, trees and bushes on the edges of the bypass and Elsmere Ave. need to be cut back, to afford those approaching the bypass on Elsmere Ave. an unobstructed view of the intersection.

The second trouble spot is the intersection of the Delmar Bypass and Elm Ave. More protection, with better visibility is needed here, and a traffic light is merited. One stop sign, at the end of a limited-access highway, is simply not adequate.

Finally, as demonstrated by this Monday's accident, some work needs to be done at the junction of Cherry and Kenwood Avenues. A better traffic light, or repairs to the existing one, should be implemented, and signs indicating an approaching intersection should be installed in the south-bound lane before the railroad bridge hill.

Hopefully, before too much more traffic comes to the area, these necessary improvements will be made.

Low blow

Editor, The Spotlight:

A low blow was struck by reporter Tom McPheeters in the "Politics" section of the July 24 Spotlight.

In reporting on the anticipated Democratic town board candidates, McPheeters decided that a press release submitted for a sports story by Richard M. White constituted a formal announcement of Mr. White's candidacy for the Bethlehem Town Board.

No attempt was made to contact Mr. White regarding his candidacy or his credentials for seeking town office.

What was left out of the Spotlight's political report was the fact that Mr. White, not only being an athlete is currently the Senior Aide to Bronx Assemblyman John C. Dearie and a Summa Cum Laude graduate of the State University at Albany. Those Bethlehem residents who will meet him will find him to be intelligent, articulate and forthright.

Mr. White deserves better treatment from our community newspaper, not because he is a Democrat, but because he is a man who cares about his community and, win or lose, will work to make life here better.

Seeking elective office is a severe personal commitment — no one ever doing so will dispute that. Hopefully, in the future Spotlight readers will be given political reporting relevant to the facts and issues at hand and the candidates' qualifications and ability to address them.

Committee.

Action needed

Editor, The Spotlight:

Once again we have read of a tragic drowning of a young child in an unattended above-ground pool.

The Town of Bethlehem requires foldable steps on above-ground pools be left in the up position when unattended. However, this ordinance is infrequently observed and even less frequently enforced.

The Town of Bethlehem does not require the presence of a sturdy lockable fence around above-ground pools. This is clearly an unsatisfactory situation! We have already seen children pull chairs and bikes next to unattended, unfenced above-ground pools in order to climb in when the steps have been removed or folded up.

The time has come for the Town of Bethlehem to pass and enforce an ordinance requiring sturdy, lockable fencing around all above-ground pools.
