Three counties make primary tough to call

Backlund: record speaks for itself

By Tom McPheeters

By simple arithmetic, Nils Backlund should have the best chance of any of the four candidates running for the 102nd Assembly District. He is the Greene County candidate, and Greene County has more registered Republicans than either Columbia or Albany Counties.

But this not a simple world, and no primary follows simple arithmetic.

Of all the candidates in the Sept. 9 primary, Backlund has been getting the most flack because of his role in the Greene County legislature in developing solid waste disposal alternatives for the area — flack that has allowed other candidates to make inroads in the southern part of the county. In addition, Greene County is predominantly rural, and difficult to organize. Whether Backlund can take advantage of his registration advantage is one of the many questions that won't be answered until Sept. 9.

Lately, however, Backlund has been trying to turn those problems into opportunities. Voters, he says, recognize that any public official who has the courage to take positions and work on solutions to problems leaves himself open to attack. And his recent offensive against John Faso, the Columbia County candidate in the race, highlights the differences between the two — Backlund has solid roots in the community and hands-on experience in local government.

Faso's transgressions, according to Backlund, range from telling

Faso: would speak out

By Tom McPheeters

When John J. Faso sought advice on running for the Republican nomination for the 102nd Assembly seat, he was warned about primaries. You don't get any party support. You don't get a lot of media attention. And you run against people who are usually on your side.

"It's like you're a marathon runner out there by yourself," he says.

But Faso, a young, personable Kinderhook lawyer who has pursued a career in government since 1979, figures he is as well equipped as any of the four candidates to deal with the rigors and pitfalls of a primary campaign. For one thing, he is Columbia County's candidate, and that should mean a lot, he says.

Columbia County has not had a representative in the state legislature for 22 years, and people are upset about that, says Faso. So upset, he says, that if he doesn't

An early boost into the world of learning

By Patricia Mitchell

In early August, the children in the Developmental Kindergarten program at Ravena Elementary School went on a fishing expedition.

Before the young anglers were allowed to cast off for Rensselaer Lake in Albany, however, they had some preparation to do. The class talked about fishing as a sport and about family experiences with fish, and read stories about fish. It was also an opportunity to reinforce the letter "f."

These Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Central School District students, who will be entering kindergarten and first grade at Ravena Elementary School this week, were about to get another boost into the world of learning.

The children made homemade fishing poles from two crossed popsicle sticks tied with a length of fishing line, a bobber, and a fishing hook. Ravena Principal Dominic Nuciforo, second year teacher Pat Dellarocco and aide Linda DeFlumer were in demand among the three girls and six boys for baiting worms and throwing the lines into the water.

"I can't catch no fish yet," one young angler piped up.

Acquittal boost for hospital

The acquittal of a former New York City health official on a charge of accepting a bribe from Nu-Med Inc. of Encino, Calif., may clear the way for plans to build a psychiatric hospital off Rt. 9W in Glenmont.

Plans for construction of a private 96-bed psychiatric care facility by the Hospital Group of New York, in cooperation with Albany Medical College, were put on hold by the Bethlehem Town Board and the state Office of Mental Health until a State Supreme Court jury in Manhattan decided whether or not John McLaughlin, the former president of the city's Health and Hospital's Corp., was guilty of accepting a bribe in the form of discounted stock from Nu-Med Inc. Nu-Med is the parent company of the Hospital Group of New York.

While the Manhattan jury found McLaughlin innocent of accepting the bribe, he was found guilty of 5 out of 14 other counts against him, including grand larceny and forgery.

"We will complete the review of the application (for the proposed Northeast Psychiatric Hospital in Glenmont)," said Robert Spoor, a spokesman for the state Office of Mental Health, after learning of the jury's decision.

Bethlehem Supervisor J. Robert Hendrick had said the town board would wait for the state review to be completed before deciding whether to grant the controversial hospital the necessary zoning approval. The Bethlehem Planning Board has already approved the hospital's plans.

McLaughlin was indicted last September on 16 counts of larceny, forgery and tax evasion related to his work as an attorney and co-administrator of a trust for Ann L. Maytag, the washing machine company heiress. In

McAndrews appointed for interim

By Patricia Mitchell

Dr. J. Briggs McAndrews has been appointed interim superintendent for Bethlehem Central schools.

He will lead BC while the board of education searches for a replacement for Dr. Lawrence Zinn. Superintendent of Bethlehem Central for 15 years, Zinn will leave on Sept. 19 to take over as superintendent of the Saratoga Springs City School District.

McAndrews said he has no plans to go after the permanent superintendent's job, and he likes the area that he is in now.

"I have no designs on it at this time," McAndrews said after his temporary appointment was approved.

"This is a super district to work in. There is a lot of opportunity to keep growing," McAndrews said. The district also has a fine staff of administrators, teachers and support personnel, and good programs. "I am glad to be able to work with them in this role."

McAndrews has put in 13 years as assistant superintendent at BC. Before he came to Bethlehem, McAndrews was assistant professor of educational administration at Pennsylvania State for a year, and was assistant principal at McCaskey High School in Lancaster, Pa. He received his doctorate in education administration from Penn State in 1971.

A native of Pennsylvania, McAndrews was a general science teacher at New Hartford, N.Y., and a biology teacher in Scranton, Pa. He received his master's in natural science from Colgate University in Hamilton, and his bachelor's in biology from East Stroudsburg State College in East Stroudsburg, Pa.

At its special meeting Wednesday, Aug. 27, the board of education also approved a temporary leave of absence for McAndrews from his present position as assistant superintendent for Educational Programs and Instruction at BC. The board will have to find a temporary replacement for McAndrews while he fills his temporary position.

McAndrews will be interim superintendent for six months to an academic year while the school board conducts a national search for a new superintendent.

Tax warrants for the academic year were signed at the special meeting.

The board also approved a change order on the high school roofing project. Recommended by the district architect, the district will save $11,466 by the elimination of roof flashing, or metal work where one roof connects with another roof or where there is an edge.

The next meeting of the BC school board is slated for 8 p.m. Wednesday (tonight) in the district offices.

Lunch prices increase

An across-the-board 5 cent increase in the price of school lunches at Bethlehem Central goes into effect the first day of school Thursday.

Prices for a regular lunch,

J. Briggs McAndrews

including milk, are now: elementary, 80 cents; middle school, 85 cents; high school, 90 cents. A la carte items, individually priced, are also available at the High School.

The varying lunch prices are a reflection of the different portion sizes for the different ages. The price of milk remains at 25 cents.

Applications for free or reduced priced lunches will be sent home with students on the first day of school. Eligibility requirements are explained on the applications, but questions can be directed to Mrs. Williams or Mrs. Duffy at the Bethlehem Central Business Office, 439-7481.

"Sometimes you have to wait awhile," reassured DeFlumer. "Boy, you sure are getting the swing of it there, Miss Dellarocco," she said as another line is tossed into the water.

"I want you to hold onto this, and hold onto it tight," said Nuciforo he tossed in a line.

"Watch your bobbers, watch your bobbers," said DeFlumer. "You have got to watch now, they come awfully quick."

As the morning progressed, the adults also come into demand to disentangle lines and unhook weeds.

Finally, a six-inch sun fish is you caught a fish," Dellarocco said.

"William, how do you feel about catching a fish?" Nuciforo said. "Good? Bad?"

Polec, the center of attention, smiled, blushed, and munched on some potato chips.

"How did you feel when there wasn't something else on there besides the same old worm?" Dellarocco asked.

Still quiet, Polec reached for his glass of lemonade. Nuciforo moved to the top of the table with his camera.

"Ladies and gentlemen, look over here," Nuciforo called, as the class turned and said "Cheese!"

The pictures will go up on a wall outside Nuciforo's office, and Polec will try to develop his fishing expedition into a personal experience.

In its second year, the Developmental Kindergarten program is designed for children who do not always have the benefit of a lot of experience at home for various reasons, Nuciforo explained. Early development is a growing national trend and a typical need of most school districts, he said.

"Everyone could benefit from it."

Starting his third year as principle at the Ravena School, Nuciforo said he had become concerned about a typical pattern among kindergarten students who were not doing well. These students had problems with perception and memory and with their auditory and visual skills, and because of their problems, they would probably do poorly in school.

After pinning down the pattern, Nuciforo said he talked with Superintendent William Schwartz, then the assistant superintendent, and the district psychologist. The program was developed, and a federal grant was received for the first year. The class was designed around 15 students, a teacher and an aide.

Most children participating in the program need to beef up developing experiences, Nuciforo said. Most are typical students who might not do well in kindergarten, and shy children that need to have their barriers reeled in, and a proud William Polec holds it up for Nuciforo to take a picture.

"Can I take it home?" Polec asked.

"No, but I will give you your picture," Nuciforo said as he threw the fish back into the lake.

Later, over peanut butter and jelly sandwiches under a tree, the class talked about the sole fish that was caught.

"It must have been his lunchtime," said Dellarocco.

"He must have heard you guys were serving some good snacks," Nuciforo said. "I'm so glad someone caught a fish."

"Boy, William, I didn't believe broken down and need to feel more comfortable with themselves and school. Nuciforo said if these children went through a regular kindergarten program, they would not be problem students, but they could have fallen between the cracks.

The program starts the summer before kindergarten. Nuciforo said this allows the class to get used to going to school, dealing with classmates and gives some extra experiences that the students might not have been able to experience. The class meets for six weeks during the summer for two and a half hours each morning.

After the summer program, the school year starts with the same classmates. Learning is more individualized and slower than for regular kindergarten students. Children go at their own rate, learning the same lessons that regular kindergarteners learn. More time is also spent on visual and auditory perception, needs of most children in Developmental Kindergarten.

This past spring, at the end of the first year for the program, spaghetti, and wrote letters on tables with shaving cream. Second summer students also went to Heath's Dairy Farm, Five Rivers Environmental Center, Ravena Village Park and Rensselaer Lake.

A week in the summer is built around an experience on Thursday or Friday, with both classes spending most of the week getting ready for that experience.

"We try to give them experience that adds to the learning environment. We are teaching skills based on a theme," Nuciforo said.

The program is achieving its goals, Nuciforo said. Out of 13 students that completed the program in its first year, nine were promoted to first grade or pre-first, two will be repeating kindergarten, one will be attending BOCES classes and one has transferred out of the district. Without the advantages of the Developmental Kindergarten program, Nuciforo said, these children would not have been as successful.

Children completing the Developmental Kindergarten program have to meet the same standards that other children have to meet to be promoted to first grade. Some of the requirements includes being able to name eight colors, recognize rhyming words, print the alphabet, identify four basic shapes, count verbally up to 15, hold a pencil correctly, use scissors, express creative thoughts in an original story and know how to dress.

"It will be interesting to see how they will do this year (in first grade or pre-first). They should just shine," Nuciforo said.

Nuciforo said he believes the program will continue because there will always be a need for enrichment. He said the program has received support from the parents, the teachers and the district. This year, Nuciforo said the school district will be picking up the tab for the program.

Backlund

people that he has the backing of retiring Assemblyman Larry Lane to challenging the accuracy of Greene County's registration figures. There are unwritten rules when Republicans run against Republicans, says Backlund, and Faso "is not adhering to them."

Backlund also charges that Faso, a relative newcomer to the district, is being primed by certain — unnamed — state politicians to take over the assembly seat.

Backlund, on the other hand, is not only a native of the district, but has legs in all three counties. Born in Coeymans Hollow and a graduate of Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk High School, he has lived in New Baltimore for 49 years and has a Chrysler dealership, Village Dodge, in Hudson.

"I was born in Albany County and my business is in Columbia County," he notes. Furthermore, he worked in Delmar for four years as a partner in Gochee's Auto Sales. Other business ventures include the formation of the Shady Harbor Marina in New Baltimore.

More important than his three-county identity, Backlund says, is the fact that "I'm the only candidate who has sat in the hot seat."

As a town supervisor for 10 years in New Baltimore, he says, he obtained a $1.5 million federal grant for sewers in the town and also a grant to replace an unsafe railroad bridge. In the county legislature, his focus was on economic development.

"One of my first priorities was to establish an economic development staff for the county," he says. As a consequence, he says, tourism in Greene County has increased in the last five years, and so has revenue from the county sales tax. That has also translated to higher employment, although Backlund agrees that the county has serious problems in this regard.

Greene County has established an Industrial Development Agency and has attracted a number of small industries to the area. Because of the high personal income tax, he says, "It's a tough situation to bring anything into New York State... But our gains far outweigh our losses as far as job opportunities go." In the assembly, he says, one of his priorities would be to work for lower taxes.

Casino gambling, touted as a way to revive economically depressed parts of the state, is not on Backlund's political agenda. "I do not believe we need casino gambling in Greene County," he says. He would support the idea only if it were approved in a local referendum, but said he remains skeptical about the distribution of funds.

Backlund's most visible efforts in the Greene County Legislature have been as the leader of efforts to come up with a solution to the area's solid waste disposal problems — an issue he started working on as a town supervisor. It's been an uphill battle.

"My project was incineration," and his support came only after years of personal research. After much study, the county and the state settled on a site adjacent to the Cossackie Correctional Facility, which would have allowed recovery of some of the energy for the facility, with the rest to be converted to electrical power and sold.

The idea was opposed by "a small group that made a lot of noise," Backlund says, and finally the concept was moved to Stockport, a rural area north of Hudson, in Columbia County, "for economic reasons," he says. The Columbia County site has more available land for landfilling of burn residue, and will still allow the plant to sell power to local utilities.

Into Cossackie has come BFI, a major solid waste disposal firm that is proposing a giant landfill that would serve the entire area. "I am definitely opposed to that," says Backlund. The problem, he added, is that there is no zoning in the town, making it difficult for local government to effectively oppose the plan.

Backlund has parted company with some of the local officials in Cossackie, and his political opponents are doing their best to tie him to the BFI proposal. "I am not going to take the flack for that, I'll tell you that," he says. But, he adds, there has been "a media blitz to discredit me in my own town," apparently with some success.

The controversy has allowed Faso and Gary Swan of Glenmont, who is also campaigning heavily in Greene County, to "gain a foothold" in Cossackie. Swan, for instance, has the endorsement of the Cossackie planning board chairman, who has been actively attacking Backlund.

"It's a real nasty political situation," Backlund says. Many local officials have backed away from their original pledges of support for the burn concept, he says. But Backlund says he doubts that the issue will hurt him elsewhere. "I know I have good, unified support," he says. "People in the rest of the county will understand that we have a crisis."

If the solid waste issue has hurt him locally, Backlund argues that it is also evidence that he would make a good assemblyman — that he is willing to stand up for what he believes in and take the heat. He also feels his record shows he can be an effective representative, even in a legislative body that he heavily weighted against his party.

"I realize we're in the major leagues now, but throughout my political career I've done that. If you have a project that's worth while, you can work with people of the other party," he says. "I would be more concerned about the upstate-downstate differences than party differences," he adds.

Nevertheless, there are issues he feels his constituents feel strongly about, and that he intends to work for — primarily tax reform and some solution to the "totally unfair" use of property taxes to finance education. Backlund says he would work to substitute a more "broad-based" tax for property taxes. "If I go there, I'm going to make some noises," he says, but also: "My first priority and my first job will be for the people of this district."

Backlund has reported raising $26,225 as of Aug. 4 ($20,000 of that sum is from a loan taken out in his name), and is following the proscribed tactics for the race — lots of signs, direct mailings and some newspaper advertising. With the exception of his complaints about Faso, he thinks the campaign has been run cleanly, and isn't worried about the after effects of a hard-fought primary.

"I think the time is long past that we continue to play politics after you're in office. I think the other Republicans are going to unite behind the winner," he says.

Nobody's calling this election

There are so many variables in next Tuesday's Republican primary for the 102nd Assembly District that not even 24-year incumbent Larry Lane will hazard a guess on the outcome.

All he knows is that he's staying out of it. "I haven't endorsed anyone, and I'm not going to endorse anyone," Lane said last week from his Windham hotel, which he operates with his family. Most of the candidates, he said, have helped him at one time or other, and all are qualified, he said. "Three or four of them would make great assemblymen."

Polls are open from noon to 9 p.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 9.

The four-way contest in the 102nd District includes two Bethlehem residents, Bernard Kaplowitz of Delmar and Gary Swan of Glenmont. Nils Backlund of New Baltimore in Greene County and John Faso of Kinderhook, Columbia County, round out the field. All of the candidates are counting on some support from their home counties, but how extensive that support is — and how well their organizations can get out the vote — remain major questions.

The latest figures from Albany County Board of elections indicate that Bethlehem now has more registered Republicans than the Columbia County towns in the 102nd District. 7,923 Republicans are registered in Bethlehem and 1,122 in Coeymans, the other Albany County town in the district. The Columbia County Board of Elections reports 7,687 registered Republicans in the nine towns and one city in the district.

Greene County reports 10,997 registered Republicans.

Registered Conservatives will choose between Shaun, Marie Levine of Coeymans and Greene County's Vincent Sheridan as their candidate for the assembly post.

Republican voters in Bethlehem's 10th election district will also vote Tuesday in a contest for committeeman. Incumbent Kenneth Hahn, a Swan supporter, is running with William Cleveland to challenge incumbent committeeman Michael Frantsov.

Only one committeeman primary remains on the Conservative line in Bethlehem. In the 15th district, Vincent and Dale Crisafulli are in a contest with Robert McDonald.

win the Republican primary many Columbia County residents will vote for the Democrat, Eugene Keeler, who is Columbia County district attorney.

The western half of Columbia County — the towns of Claverack, Clermont, Germantown, Ghent, Greenport, Kinderhook, Livingston, Stockport and Stuyvesant and the City of Hudson — is the second most populous section of the 102nd District, and Faso's strategy in a four-way race is clear. Faso is working for a big plurality in his home county, and hopes to come in second in neighboring Greene County. Albany County, with two Bethlehem residents in the race, is of lower priority, he says.

Because only registered Republicans can vote in the Sept. 9 primary, Faso has been concentrating on door-to-door campaigning, a grueling way to go — particularly in the rural areas, where the doors are often miles apart and not well marked. So far, he's reached about 3,500 homes, he said.

"You've got a real public education job in a primary," says Faso. Republicans don't often hold primaries, so many people don't understand the rules and are unsure about whether they can vote.

Nevertheless, Faso feels, many good things come out of primaries — it revitalizes the party workers, and brings out voters that otherwise become apathetic. "We could use more primaries in this state," he says. "The Republican Party in New York State is really standing still."

In Faso's view — which includes a catbird seat in Albany as a commissioner on the Legislative Bill Drafting Commission — the GOP is failing to read the mood of the electorate, and this is one reason why Gov. Mario Cuomo and the Democrats in the legislature have been so successful in pushing their agenda.

On the campaign trail, the issues are "taxes, spending and insurance. Some days it's insurance, spending and taxes," Faso says. "The people in this state are not happy, but they feel powerless to do anything about it," he says.

A professed Reagan Republican, Faso also serves on one of Low Lehrman's Citizens for America committees. Faso would have his party articulate the Reagan message more clearly, and raise more questions about how things are done in Albany. Questions such as why the Thruway can't install automatic ticket machines (patronage?), or why the state leaders can't solve the insurance question (conflicts of interest?), or why New York doesn't allow popular initiative and referendums, as do many other states (are the politicians afraid of a "Proposition 13" movement?).

"I don't have the answers to all these questions, but until the Republican Party starts asking these questions, we'll be stuck in the status quo," he says.

Faso says he would go to the assembly prepared to ask embarrassing questions, despite knowing that he will be a member of the minority party, with little or no clout of his own. "If you adopt a minority mentality, you'll be in the minority forever," he says.

This sounds almost like criticism of Larry Lane, the Windham Republican who has held the seat for 24 years, and who was not known for making waves in Albany. Faso — as do all the candidates in the Republican primary — has only good things to say about Lane, and stresses that he will emulate Lane's hard work and constituent services. "I understand the legislative process," he says. There are ways to raise issues "constructively," without bringing personalities into it and making enemies, he says.

His most fully articulated plank is a plan for reducing taxes in the state, with a proposal for a flat five percent income tax rate, somewhat similar to the federal tax reform movement. Other changes would be a sales tax exemption on clothing purchases, a state income tax credit for school taxes, an increase in personal exemptions, a retirement income exclusion and an interest exclusion up to $500.

Faso calls the reforms "absolutely necessary for the future prosperity of New York State" and said the state currently has sufficient revenues to finance them.

Faso, 34, graduated from high school in Jamaica, N.Y., is a graduate of the State University College at Brockport and holds his law degree from Georgetown University Law Center. He also attended the University of Copenhagen, Denmark.

He worked in Washington, D.C., during law school and after, first as a representative for Nassau County, then as a staffer on the House Government Operations Committee and from 1981 to 1983 as director of the New York State Senate's Washington office. He is Sen. Warren Anderson's representative on the state Bill Drafting Commission.

Faso appears to have solid support among the Republican leaders in his county and to have made some inroads in southern Greene County, where an ongoing fight over solid waste disposal has hurt that county's candidate, Nils Backlund. However, his lack of name recognition and grass-roots political experience may prove a liability in the more rural, conservative parts of the district, and Faso's opponents are making much of the fact that he is a relative newcomer to the area.

As of Aug. 4, Faso reported raising $18,034, which puts him in third place in the money sweepstakes but still in comfortable shape to improve his name recognition. In company with all of the candidates, Faso has participated in the three-county sign wars, vying for prime locations, at intersections and friendly lawns. His major thrust, however, appears to be direct mailing, which allows a candidate to reach registered voters with his message.

Faso estimates the cost of one mailing to the 21,000 Republican households in the district (including copy writing, printing, postage and addressing) at around $4,000.

Town board looks at traffic matters

With any luck, some future meetings of the Bethlehem Town Board may be even shorter than last week's half-hour affair.

The highlight of last week's meeting was consideration of a number of requests for traffic signs — a growing problem in a developing town. While the board discusses many issues of substance, board members have said they think speed limits and stop signs are not one of them, and that many of these requests could be handled administratively. Under present law, however, each one requires a public hearing and approval by the board.

Last Wednesday, the board:

- Set an Oct. 8 public hearing date for new yield signs at the intersection of McGuffey Lane at Wisconsin Ave., and for Westchester Drive North at Wisconsin Ave. Both signs were recommended by Police Chief Paul Currie, who investigated the intersections after the board received petitions from area residents. Currie recommended that no yield sign be placed at the intersection of Westchester Drive South at Wisconsin Ave. because visibility is adequate.

BETHLEHEM

- Accepted Currie's recommendation not to put a speed bump on Dover Drive, as requested by residents, because of concern over liability and snow plowing. Supervisor J. Robert Hendrick said the town would put up caution signs on the street — an action that does not need board approval.

- Adopted a resolution to install a stop sign on Berwick Rd. at Devon Rd. A public hearing had been held July 23.

- Received Highway Superintendent Martin Cross's request for nine new stop signs — on Hague Blvd. at Elm Ave. East, on University St. at Elm Ave., on Dover Drive at Elm Ave., on Brightonwood Rd. at Wemple Rd., on Meadowbrook Drive at Blessing Rd., on Eastmont Drive at Blessing Rd., on Eaton Drive at Blessing Rd., on Journey Lane at Beacon Rd. and on Chrisken Drive at Beacon Rd. All are new streets ending on major town roads. The request was referred to Currie, and the new signs would require a public hearing before approval by the board.

Board members have said they think stop signs and speed limits could be established by the Planning Board when it considers new developments, thus avoiding the need for case-by-case decisions and the expense of public hearings. Where new speed limits are not established, the 55 m.p.h. state speed limit prevails. In the case of speed limits, at least, there may be another solution — codification.

More than a year ago, Bethlehem awarded General Code Publishers of Rochester a contract to codify all of the town's ordinances and laws so that they would be readily accessible. As part of that project, according to Hendrick, all of the existing speed limits will be rescinded and a blanket 30 m.p.h. town limit will be set, with higher limits for specific roads as required. That would mean that new streets would automatically be posted at 30 m.p.h., making the numerous public hearings unnecessary.

Hendrick said the Rochester firm has received all but a small portion of the material it has requested and has started the codification process.

In other action at Wednesday's brief meeting, the board:

- Accepted three right-of-way deeds on Kenwood Ave. that will allow the Highway Department to make improvements in the road in the Rockefeller Rd. area. One right-of-way still must be obtained, Hendrick said. The board also accepted an easement for a turnaround on Elm Drive, off Beaver Dam Rd., so that a turnaround can be constructed.

- Formally established the Feura Bush Water Extension No. 4, which will serve the new eight-acre Honda warehouse now under construction near the Conrail Yards. The board also formally declared that the extension will have no environmental consequences.

- Approved a $3,960 contract to Schuyler Construction Co. for roof work at 114 Adams St., the old highway garage, and at 308 Kenwood Ave., the water tower site. Public Works Commissioner Bruce Secor told the board that although six contractors had been interested in the job only Schuyler had bid; he recommended approval because of time constraints, saying that Schuyler is a responsible contractor and its bid was reasonable. Secor recommended delaying roofing work for the Police Department wing of the town hall until next year. Councilwoman Sue Ann Ritchko voted no on the grounds that the bid documents were not clear.

- Approved $14,953 in transfers to cover costs of salary adjustments and longevity increases granted to town employees at the beginning of the year. The funds came from contingency accounts set aside for that purpose.

Glenmont burglary

A television and a chain saw were taken between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m. Thursday from a Wheeler Rd., Glenmont, home, Bethlehem Police said.

Found at the home was a claw hammer that police said is believed to be the entry tool.

Police said entry was gained through a front window. All rooms in the house were gone through by the burglar, police said.

The television was valued at $400 and the chain saw at $50, police said.

Tools stolen

A Coxsackie landscaping company reported $450 worth of equipment was taken from its trailer while the company was working at a Quincy Ct., Elmsmere, home on Thursday, Bethlehem Police said.

A tool box with tools and a grass cutter were taken from the trailer between 11 a.m. and noon, police said.

Help for Special Needs Children

Children with handicapping conditions and those with behavioral problems start out in life with disadvantages not faced by most of our kids. In order to insure that such kids have a chance to make it in life as adults, I believe that it is essential to provide them with an early diagnosis and treatment.

Presently, there are 12 school health demonstration projects in the state, serving thousands of children on a daily basis. These projects have developed in model programs which offer a wide range of comprehensive primary school-based health services that include elements as screening, comprehensive physical examination and follow-up care and health counseling.

The kids in these projects have been receiving the benefits of early diagnosis and prompt treatment, precluding the development of chronic conditions that could insure possible failure for them in the future.

These beneficial programs were begun in this state under Chapter 198 of the Laws of 1978. They were scheduled to end this year. However, under Chapter 205 of the Laws of 1986, they have now been extended for another two years until July of 1988.

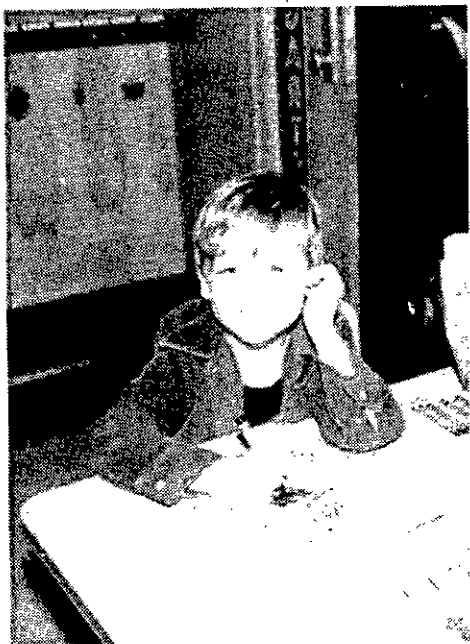

It is the responsibility of all of us in public life to insure that every New Yorker obtains the benefits of a public education. For these kids, this cannot be done without a little special assistance as provided by these demonstration projects. As your next Assemblyman, I will support measures to extend and expand such health projects until all kids in New York with such problems can benefit from them.

Clarksville bonds approved for water

CLARKSVILLE

After receiving approval from the state comptroller on the Clarksville Water District, the New Scotland Town Board last week agreed to float bonds to finance construction.

The next step will be to pinpoint the best area for the placement of water wells on the Weisenburn farm to service the hamlet, said Ronald LaBerge, Jr., of LaBerge Engineering.

"Once they get the money, we get the resources," LaBerge said.

If all goes well, LaBerge said, construction should be finished next year.

The town board met Friday in special session to float $1.225 million in serial bonds. Board attorney Fred Riester said the town board rushed to approve the bonds because on Monday, Sept. 1, changes in tax regulations would have had a negative influence on the bonds.

Approval from the state comptroller was received on Thursday.

The project is expected to cost $1,815,500. The town has received $1.339 million in grants from the Farmer's Home Administration (FmHA) and the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD). The town expects to borrow $500,000 from FmHA and receive a district loan, making up the long-term debts of the project.

Riester said the $1.225 million in bonds that were floated on Friday will cover construction costs, and the town will not need the extra $600,000.

The town has received proposals from Hydro Group of Schoharie and Dunn Geoscience of Latham, two engineering firms, to pinpoint the best area for the wells by placing test wells on the Weisenburn farm and then the final wells, LaBerge said. The Weisenburn farm, located off Rt. 32, about two miles south of Clarksville, has already been tested, but the new test wells will be to verify the placement.

"Both firms say they can start within two to three weeks," LaBerge said.

Soil borings will also be done on the Weisenburn farm to test the soil contents. LaBerge said a subcontractor will finish aerial maps of the well site and the area to Clarksville within three months so a route for piping the water to the hamlet can be selected.

The project should go to bid next spring, hopefully in late February. "Everyone wants work (then). The sooner the better. It is a large project and we would like to get some good prices," LaBerge said.

BCHS to dismiss early on Thursday

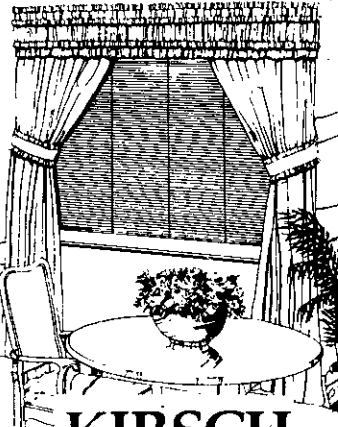

To ease any confusion over bus transportation home, BC High School students will be dismissed earlier than usual on the first day of school, Thursday.

Dismissal for that day only is scheduled for 1:40 p.m. The extra time is built in to allow students to locate and board their buses, so arrival home may not be any earlier than usual for those students riding the bus.

No early dismissals for the first day of school are planned for the Middle School or any elementary school.

Town will hear views about mining

By Patricia Mitchell

An amendment to town zoning law that allows mining in designated zones could be buried after a public hearing Wednesday (today) by the New Scotland Town Board.

The amendment was approved by the town board in May, 1984, and has generated concern from neighbors of a proposed mine on the former Tall Timbers Country Club.

The town board will hold the public hearing to repeal the mining ordinance after its regular monthly meeting at 8:30 p.m.

How that repeal would affect the application of Voorheesville Sand and Stone, doing business as William Larned and Son, to mine a large section of the former Tall Timbers Country Club is a matter of debate.

When the planning board recommended repeal of the mining ordinance, board Chairman Richard Stickley said the repeal would have no effect on the application. Because it was presented to the town before the repeal and a public hearing had been started on the application, under due process the application has to be acted on, he said.

Board attorney Fred Riester said he "can not say" if the repeal would affect Larned's application.

Bob Morrison, chairman of Concerned Citizens of New Scotland, a group opposed to the proposed mine, said his group will ask the town board what will happen to Larned's application at the public hearing.

Concerned Citizens of New Scotland, and their attorney, James Linnan of Albany believe the repeal will prove the mining ordinance was never part of the town's master plan, and the miners never had any legal rights Workers hammer away at new roofing on the Clarksville Elementary School Friday. Part of the $4.6 million bond issue approved by Bethlehem Central voters last December, the roof at Clarksville will cost $53,000. Most schools in the district are slated for roofing work under the bond issue.

Patricia Mitchell

to apply for the special use permit.

"I don't know if that was a valid ordinance to start with. The repeal is only right and proper," Linnan said. "It is our position that he never had any legal rights to start with."

When the amendment to the zoning regulations was approved in May, 1984, two small-scale mines were proposed for operation, and the town needed to set up a procedure to consider the mining applications.

The mining ordinance allows the removal of fill, gravel or soil in low density residential or industrial zones with a special use permit granted by the planning board.

A special use permit to mine about 27 acres of the former Tall Timbers Country Club off Hilton Rd. by Voorheesville Sand and Stone for William Larned and Sons was put before the planning board last spring. In May, a four-hour public hearing was held in front of an audience of over 400. The public hearing was adjourned to a later date until more information on the effects of the mine could be gathered.

Since then, the town has hired Fred C. Hart Associates, Inc., of Albany, to study the area of the proposed mine and possible effects on area ground water. Stickley said he has received a preliminary report, and he plans to go over it with Riester and members of the water resource committee. Once the final report is received, the planning board is expected to conclude the public hearing.

Pleasant St. plans put to bid

By Patricia Mitchell

Plans for the Pleasant St. sewer system have been put out to bid, and the Voorheesville village trustees plan to meet with residents after the bid opening.

At their meeting Tuesday, Aug. 26, the trustees said they will wait to get work figures from contractors and then meet with residents about the system. Bids will be opened on Monday, Sept. 22.

"We are just looking to get some bids in," said Trustee Edward Donohue.

At an earlier meeting with residents of Pleasant St., the village board, the village's engineering consultant and the residents agreed to a cost under $350 a year for each home.

According to plans approved by the Albany County Health Dept., improvements call for a new sewer line to be placed on Pleasant St., and for the extension of the leech field in back of the village hall.

The new sewer line that will carry extra seepage from the septic systems will be built next to the existing sewer line and the older line will carry rain water.

The sewer lines will carry the waste and the water down Pleasant St. to Center St. across Voorheesville Ave. to the driveway of the village hall and down to the back of the hall. The existing leech field will be extended, and all the discharge will be absorbed by the field.

The existing leech field is not able to absorb it all, and leaks into the Vly Creek.

Village officials signed a consent order with the Albany County Health Dept. and the state Department of Environmental Conservation last August to take steps to stop raw sewage from households, on Pleasant St. draining into the Vly Creek.

In other Voorheesville Board of Trustees action, the board approved purchasing one acre of land in back of the village garage for approximately $15,000. The land has been earmarked for use as the village's salt shed. The land on Altamont Rd. was purchased from village resident Keith Mabie, and the village will deed a small tract of land near the road to Mabie for his use.

The board also learned that a five-lot subdivision on an extension of Urbandale Rd. has received site plan approval from the planning commission, but an agreement between the village and the developer, Giovanni Mazzio, to improve drainage in the area has been put on hold.

The drainage plan was recommended by the planning commission as a condition on the site plan approval. Trustee Daniel Reh said the developer has agreed to place a drain under Urbandale Rd. from where the road presently ends to Rt. 85A. However, he said, the developer agreed to the new drain pipe as long as the village agrees to place a larger drain under Rt. 85A because the developer feels it should be larger. Mayor Edward Clark said in a letter to the commission that he did not want the village to be committed for those major repairs.

"I disagree with (the developer)," said Superintendent of Public Works William Hotaling. "It is like 10 grand to go under that road (Rt. 85A). If he wants to build houses there, let him pay for it."

Reh said the subdivision and the proposed drain pipe on Urbandale Rd. are back in the hands of the planning commission for further recommendations.

The five-lot subdivision would extend Urbandale Rd. to end in a cul-de-sac. Located in a Residential-A zone, the lots would use individual leech fields for sewage and village water would be available. The land is owned by Philip Barbera and George Rodman. Reh said the planning commission will meet at 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 16, to discuss the subdivision further.

Building Inspector Jerry Gordinier told the board the state Health Department did several borings around the village, including in the Scotch Pine development and Koonz Rd. for radon gas emissions.

"They came up with nothing extraordinary," Gordinier said.

The next step, Gordinier said, will be to compare the tests results with the Capital District area, and the health department could come back to the village for more extensive testing.

Gordinier said the health department is most interested in areas where homes are sitting on gravel-type soil because the radon gas is able to travel quickly through the porous material.

The next meeting of the board of trustees will be at 8 p.m. Tuesday, Sept. 23.

Theatrical evening

A parent's night at the theatre to see A Chorus Line will be sponsored by the New York State Federation of Catholic School Parents on Tuesday, Sept. 9, at the Colonie Coliseum. Proceeds of the event will be used to provide scholarships for area Catholic school students and provide funds for educational improvements at area Catholic schools.

Tickets are available for $12.50 by calling Eileen Fox at 438-3029 or Mary Lou Knox at 477-2152.

The board of directors of the Kids Club is pleased to announce the appointment of Cynthia Manguilli as director of the after school child care program which will begin this fall at the Voorheesville Elementary School.

Manguilli comes to the program from Seton Family and Community Service in Troy, where she has worked since 1980 following completion of an associate degree in early childhood education at Hudson Valley Community College. At Seton Manguilli was coordinator of the Day Care Program where she was involved in the planning and implementation of classroom activities, supervision of staff and other administrative duties.

In 1983 she became a family service worker, coordinating services for children and families involved in the day care program.

Those interested in learning more about the Kids Club program are invited to call Nancy Basal at 765-2637.

According to director, Jim Hladun, this year's offerings include many new courses, including party preparation, model railroading, teddy bear workshop and machine applique.

Length of courses vary from 2 to ten weeks. Several one-night mini-courses will also be given on such topics as candy making, interior design makeover, personal color analysis and wardrobe and accessories.

Registration fees are payable at the time of registration and vary from course to course. Those who did not receive a detailed flyer concerning course offerings may call the high school at 765-3314 for more information.

Those unable to register in person may sign-up by mail. Details are in the brochure. All mail registration applications will be considered after personal registration nights. Although adults will be given first preference, students in grades 7 through 12 are welcome to participate in the program providing there is sufficient space in the course and approval is granted by the director of continuing ed. Senior Citizens are also invited to sign up for courses at a discount price.

Scouting sign up

Speaking of registration, a sign-up evening will be held for girls interested in becoming members of the daisies, brownies or girls scouts this Tuesday, Sept. 9, from 7 to 8 p.m. at St. Matthew's Church on Mountainview Rd. Learns speed writing Teachers as well as students are returning to the classroom. For Jane Willey, business teacher at Clayton A. Bouton Junior-Senior High, vacation included a chance to further her profession as she and 29 other business educators from the area attended a three-day speed writing Alphabetic Workshop held recently at Siena College.

Led by Irene Schindler, chairman of the business education department in Mount Vernon High School in New York, the workshop gave participants an opportunity to observe and discuss methods of teaching speed writing, an alphabetic form of shorthand that can successfully be used by prospective office workers or college-bound students.

FOR ASSEMBLY COMMITTEE

Look past records to future

"If you knew you were going to be given a class of 13 particular students, would you read their school records before the first day of class?" That question was part of an interview I had some years ago for a teaching position downstate. It is a good question to ask a prospective teacher because it touches on several issues. I considered the question for a moment.

"No," I said. The furrows of my interviewer's skeptical brow deepened. I went on with something about the importance of not judging a person by his past and how negative expectations could become a kind of self-fulfilling prophecy, but that a student's record might be of use later in the year as situations arose. I wasn't happy with the answer, but the interview moved on from there and never returned. The question dogged me for days afterwards as I wondered what else I could have said. A better answer came to me a week later and a hundred miles away.

The content of a student's file is of limited use to a teacher and must always be carefully interpreted. Among other things, a file contains report cards for each of the years a student has attended school. Elementary school report cards are usually a decent source of information that evaluate a wide range of student characteristics, including academic achievement broken down by subject area, academic skills, study habits, social skills, and self image, with ample remarks on the student's outstanding traits penned in by the teacher. High school report cards yield much less as they presume to succinctly summarize a young person with a letter — A,B,C,D, or F (some schools cleverly use E instead of F to avoid trauma) — and a number, either a "1" to connote something vaguely good about the student or a "2" that translates as "student is disruptive," "lacks effort," "does not interact well with peers," "exhibits bizarre behavior" or anything else connoting badness. The numbers are usually impossible to define as each teacher defines them differently. Anyone attempting to interpret these numbers risks lapsing into the binary language in which the totality of each student has been encoded. Hence, 1=yes, good kid; 2=no, bad kid.

A student file also contains results from standardized tests. There are the STEP tests, the SCAT tests, the PRCT and the RCT, the SPIRE Tests, The Stanfords, the California Achievements and the Iowas, to name a few. (I recall taking most of these tests and wondering whatever happened to the results; now I know.) The results appear as numbers, ratios, lines on line graphs and bars on bar graphs stating things like raw score, adjusted score, local stanine and national stanine. Despite the apparent complexity of the scoring, the results of these tests are usually self-evident to anyone who can read a graph or a ratio; and, the results are sometimes useful. It is interesting to compare the standardized test results, which tend to measure skills, with the report cards which measure performance. Sadly, the standardized test results are often higher than the report card grades. For many students, underachievement is a way of life. But the standardized test results can't always be trusted. Students these days are so thoroughly tested that results may say more about fatigue and impatience than ability. I recall that in ninth grade, after sitting through what must have been a month of standardized tests, I finally lost my cool and filled in the last page of dots so that from a distance the columns and rows formed the words "NO MORE." Unfortunately, my humor was too subtle for the machine reader and I was pulled from class several weeks later to retake the entire test.

Student folders also include documentation of outstanding events in a young person's academic experience. A letter home: "Today, Murray bit his classmate in the neck. He drew blood. Murray's classmate was immediately sent to the nurse and appears to be O.K., but this is certainly not the kind of behavior that we expect of our students here at..."

Sometimes the really important information about a student's life is not spelled out but must be inferred from, say, the list of schools attended — The Northmouth School for Boys, Project Mercy Day School, Brown County Juvenile Facility — or from phrases and notations on correspondence — "currently under foster care," "legal name changed in eighth grade," "legal guardian," "phone disconnected," "person in need of supervision."

A student's file is like a collection of primary source documents in an historical investigation: memoranda from the front, transcripts of events taken while the events were yet unfolding, sometimes confused, sometimes inaccurate. They lack depth and scope. And, as in any historical investigation, they must be heavily interpreted in order to be of use. Student records bear testimony to a person who has been but is always becoming unpredictably someone new. I can't recall all the students who have walked into my classroom at the end of their junior or senior years bearing so little resemblance in appearance and manner to the freshman who walked through the door every day four years earlier. It would be wrong to judge a student by the contents of his folder.

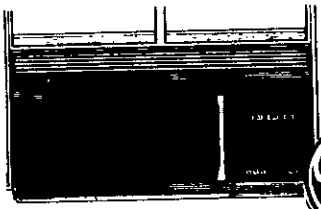

A historian knows the present before he learns the past, and only a fatalist will suggest the past predicts the future. Most of us like to think that a knowledge of the past helps us understand the present and take a hand in shaping what is yet to come. So, I like to get to know a student before I look into his past, and then what I learn, sifted carefully and considered thoughtfully, may help me shape who is to become.

Hospital

April of this year, McLaughlin, who had served as head of the New York City Health and Hospitals Corp., was indicted for allegedly accepting a bribe for Nu-Med Inc.

According to an Associated Press article printed in the Aug. 28 issue of the Schenectady Gazette, a tape recording made by investigators for Manhattan District Attorney Robert Morgenthau was played at the trial. "On the tape, which was introduced as evidence in the trial, McLaughlin talked about the stock transaction with Nu-Med, in which 10,000 shares worth at least $150,000 were sold to Maytag for a discounted price of $1.75 each," the article stated.

"Nu-Med Chairman Maurice Lewitt, McLaughlin said on the tape, agreed to the deal because he figured McLaughlin would be returning to the hospitals agency and it would be 'a favor well made.'"

"In return, the prosecution said, McLaughlin lobbied for the company and voted in favor of a $1 million consultant contract with Harlem Hospital.

"Also Assistant District Attorney Michael McManus linked the stock deal to a $50,172 deduction McLaughlin took on the price of an apartment he bought from Maytag, which he said McLaughlin explained as a fee for arranging the stock purchase."

However, the jury acquitted McLaughlin on the bribery count. He was convicted on two counts of grand larceny, for having billed the same expenses to both Maytag and her son, John C. Poulos; one count of forgery, for having increased to $858 from $355 the amount of an airline ticket he submitted for reimbursement to the Maytag trust; and two counts of filing a false document, for misstating financial information on his New York City financial disclosure form and a background investigation report submitted to the Department of Investigation. McLaughlin's attorney has said there will be an appeal.

Blackbirds plan to maintain team's winning tradition

It's coming up fall in Voorheesville, and when that happens, the top attraction in town is football and the Blackbirds.

Pete Douglas, entrusted with preserving the Tom Buckley tradition of winning teams, isn't letting the departure of 16 graduates interfere with the business of putting together another production. He has 10 lettermen back from last year's 6-2-1 team, half of them starters in the lineup that went down to the last game of the season before settling for second place in the Colonial Division of the Capital Football Conference.

That's plenty to build on, and with talent from last year's 8-1 junior varsity and the kind of enthusiasm for football Voorheesville kids seem to be born with, there is little need for the crying towel. Village fans can expect to see the same familiar run-and-shoot offense, probably with more aerial action, and the usual display of hard-nosed, bang-bang football that was Buckley's trademark.

Ask Douglas how he sees Voorheesville stacking up against the rest of the crowd in a league noted for having the strongest small-school teams anywhere around, and he will tell you that "it all depends on how quick the juniors develop." Starting his second year as varsity head coach, he admits his new crop is, overall, "maybe a little heavier" than last year, with possibly a bit more team speed.

The key holdovers are three experienced interior linemen, Frank Donnelly, Chuck Gianatasio and Rich Kane, all of whom were two-way starters last year. They are the only 200-pounders on the roster, Gianatasio checking in at 254 pounds. Kane, a champion wrestler, is 6-2 and 222. Douglas will have at least two of the three in combat at all times, presumably on a rotating basis.

Also returning are Tom Donohue, a scrappy defensive back, and Roger Ginder, an experienced strong safety. Both may get assignments on the offense this year, Donohue at halfback and Ginder at split end.

Of four other senior lettermen, Kevin Kelly is the only holdover starter on the offense. Playing alongside his older brother Bill, an outstanding running back, Kevin had a fine year as a junior, and also showed well in the defensive secondary. Joe Jackson, Brian Smith and Jeff Mazzaferro played a lot of defense, and will probably see more two-way action. Mazzaferro, 5-9 and 190 pounds, is working at fullback, Smith at halfback and Jackson at end.

Bruce Kinisky, a sophomore letterman a year ago, was Vince Foley's backup at quarterback. This year he is one of three juniors competing for the starting job. The others are John Meacham, the JV signal-caller until he was hurt in mid-season, and Darren Duncan, who stepped in to finish the campaign.

Douglas declines to favor one over the others at this early stage, and rates them virtually even. Kinisky is the biggest at 5-11 and 182. The others are 5-7, Meacham weighing in at 150 and Duncan 134. All throw well, well enough so that Douglas may have to wait till mid-season to make a firm choice.

The coach has a lot of options in the rest of the backfield. Mazzaferro is the only fullback with varsity experience, but will probably split playing time with John Traudt, a 165-pound junior who was the JV battering ram. Both are good blockers. At halfback Kelly is an established ball carrier. The other starter will come from Brian Smith, a 5-10 senior, two junior scatbacks in Matt Cillis at 5-foot-5 and Bill Connell at 5-6, and possibly Meacham or Donohue.

Up front the offensive line will be anchored by combinations of Gianatasio, Connelly and Kane at the tackles and either Jason Graziano or Scott Malagrida at center. Graziano, a big kid at 5-11 and 182 pounds, is the only sophomore on the varsity at the moment. The guard slots are open for grabs. Douglas is looking at four juniors, Jayson White, Tom

Voorheesville football fans will be back on the bleachers when the Blackbirds travel to Chatham at 7:30 p.m., Friday, Sept. 12. Experienced interior linemen, Frank Donnelly, left, and Chuck Gianatasio will be making the plays called by Coach Pete Douglas, right, and his assistant, John Sittig. R.H. Davis

Hampston, Kevin Tyrell and Mark DeLorenzo, all good hitters, and it's a good bet that all will get plenty of playing time regardless who gets the starts.

There is also open competition for the two flanker positions. At the moment Ed Sapienza, at 114 pounds the lightest player on the squad and possibly in the league, is alternating with Ginder at split end with Steve Smith as backup. At tight end it's between Jackson and Marty Gordinier, a 6-foot-2 junior and all-around athlete.

On defense Douglas plays five up front with two linebackers and a diamond in the secondary. To man the forward wall he can go with White at noseguard, Kane and Gianatasio at tackles and Donnelly and Kinisky on the ends. Mazzaferro, Traudt and a 5-7 junior, Ed Galvin, can handle the linebacking, with Gordinier, who can play any position, available if needed. In the secondary Douglas can use variations of Brian Smith, Meacham, Donohue and Ginder on the corners, Kelly or Cillis at free safety, Ginder or Duncan at monster back, and Gordinier anywhere somebody needs help.

Tamba Bissell, a junior halfback, is being groomed as the kicker. The only medical casualty at this writing was junior Mickey Schoonmaker, a 5-11 180-pound split end.

On Saturday the Blackbirds will get their baptism in extra-terrestrial combat when they return to Latham for the annual controlled scrimmage with Troy High, Johnstown and the host Bison. Next Tuesday they will have another workout with Cobleskill at home, and the following Friday will be playing for keeps in the league opener at Chatham, a night skirmish starting at 7:30.

Schalmont, which played a JV schedule in 1985, has joined the league, full-scale, this year, and will be in Voorheesville for the home opener on Sept. 27. Chatham is the only crossover game this time. Of the seven divisional games, Schalmont, Academy, Mohonasen and Watervliet will be coming to the Helderbergs. The road trips will be Lansingburgh, Ravena and the crossover playoff contest at a Southern Division site Nov. 7 or 8, depending on who has lights.

There are several coaching changes. Jim Duncan, who works at the Cossackie correctional facility, has returned as a replacement for Dennis Ulion. Dave Burnham is back after a three-year furlough. John Sittig continues as line coach and Chuck Farley as head JV coach. Larry Dedrick is again assisting Farley, with help from volunteers Carl Burnham and Brian Dollard.

While Indians go for crown

By Bart Gottesman

After the Indians failed to repeat as Capital Conference Champions last season, RCS football coach Gary VanDerzee doesn't see many external obstacles standing in the way of regaining the crown — only the possibility of internal letdown.

VanDerzee doesn't feel that his team will walk over other Council foes, but he thinks that Ravena will be one of the teams to beat in the always tough Colonial Council.

"We have a good nucleus back from last year and we have good athletes at skilled (as in running back, quarterback, receivers and defensive backfield) positions," said VanDerzee.

The majority of this year's team is made up of a group of players that as freshmen were thought to be the Indians next generation of football champions. In their freshman year, the team was unstoppable, scoring almost at will and allowing few touchdowns. They won games by as much as 50 points in an undefeated season. As JV's, the group once again proved that they were to be reckoned with as they suffered but one loss, a two-point defeat at the hands of Rensselaer. Last year, the group was mixed with seniors from the previous years championship team, but the combination couldn't quite gel and the team played inconsistently throughout the season en route to a 5-3-1 overall record and a 3-2-1 council standing.

This years leaders in charge of building their team's morale and confidence and preventing fellow players from "slacking off" include three seniors, Jerry Baranska, Mark Williams and Rich Losee. Williams will play as a receiver while his co-captains are capable of playing on either the offensive or defensive line.

VanDerzee feels that his team's major competition will come from Watervliet, which finished first in the council last season and has only suffered the loss of three players, Voorheesville, last year's second place holders, and Mohonasen, which has combined with Draper to form one team.

In addition to the co-captains, key players going into the season will be Brent Shook, one of the area's most dangerous and entertaining runners; Tony Williams and Ken Koonz, who will alternate at quarterback and defensive back; Don Keyer, a tight end who stands at 6-feet 4-inches and weighs well over 200 pounds; John Waddingham, a linebacker back after a year off; and Tim Baranska, a versatile player with size who can play virtually any offensive or defensive position.

These key players will mean a lot to how the team performs, but VanDerzee feels his team doesn't need superstars—if all players play to potential and can play as a team. The only weaknesses the coach foresees, he said, are mental letdowns and overconfidence that could lead to crucial losses to "inferior" teams.

The Indians open the season at home on Sept. 13 against traditional rival Tamarac at 1:30 p.m. RCS also gets a chance to tune up for opening season kickoff in a four-way scrimmage Sept. 6 at Bethlehem Central High School.

China in transition

Morag Stauffer will discuss the dramatic changes that continue to affect the People's Republic of China on Wednesday, Sept. 17, at the Bethlehem Public Library, beginning at 7:30 p.m. All are welcome to attend the free program.

A deer miss

A Selkirk man escaped injury Tuesday, Aug. 26, when he swerved to avoid a deer on Rt. 144 in Glenmont and ended up on the shoulder of the other side of the road, Bethlehem Police said.

The man was driving south on Rt. 144 just after midnight when he spotted the deer. Police said as the man swerved to avoid the deer, the vehicle went into the other lane and finally stopped against a guard rail facing north.

Eagles rebuilding football program

There are enough good things on Van Dyke Rd. these days to give rise to a suspicion Bethlehem Central may have a pretty good football team this autumn.

First, there are 15 players with varsity experience back in action, half of them starters from last year and including three-fourths of the 1985 defense.

Second, there's Ed Perry, who gives Coach John Sodergren the rare luxury of a quarterback who has been a starter for the past two seasons. Furthermore, Sodergren thinks his senior co-captain may be the best high school quarterback in the Albany area this semester.

"He's a good runner, he can throw short and deep, he has good size, and he is a great leader," the coach says. "We look for big things from Ed."

Third, there's the schedule. This will be the first time since the Suburban Council was formed more than 25 years ago that Bethlehem, a charter member, won't be playing league football. For the past seven years BC has been the Council's most consistent cellar-dweller, only twice winning as many as two games in a season. The administrative decision to play an independent schedule has been billed as a one-year leave-of-absence, an experiment aimed at rebuilding an eroded football program.

As a result, Bethlehem will play only five Suburban Council rivals, and will not have to serve as cannon fodder for Shenendehowa, Colonie and Saratoga. The gaps will be filled by smaller schools,

Bethlehem Central's returning backs, Adam Acquario, left, and Ed Perry, right, flank Coach John Sodergren. The season will kick off at 7:30 p.m., Friday, Sept. 12, when BC hosts Shaker. R.H. Davis Johnstown, Hudson Falls and Mont Pleasant, which should make for a better-looking balance sheet than last year's 1-8.

Sodergren, starting his third year as varsity head coach, feels that having so many holdovers from the 1985 varsity and showing good team speed overall will counter the lack of size and depth. These are problems that have plagued BC coaches since the championship year of 1978.

"We're scrambling to develop depth, especially in the offensive line," Sodergren said this week as the team prepared for the annual four-way pre-season scrimmage. "We're moving people around, and with limited numbers we'll have to go both ways with more guys than we'd like to."

On the bright side are two areas where depth is not a problem, both of them on offense. That's the backfield and the receiving corps.

Three of last year's starters in Sodergren's four-back attack have returned. Perry at quarterback and Adam Acquario at halfback are holdovers. John Lindsay, a better-than-average fullback last year, has moved over to halfback, and Rich Gray, a junior up from the JV, takes over at fullback. Lindsay will again do the punting.

"With four quality backs I feel comfortable with the backfield," says Sodergren. "We'll have a balanced attack and we can share the ball. I'm also comfortable with the wide receivers."

On the flanks Sodergren likes to use two split ends whenever he can, and he has three veterans who saw a lot of playing time last year, Brian Battle, Sean Mooney and Jeff Boyd. It is probable they will again operate in relays as Sodergren's messenger system, carrying in the play calls. More importantly, they give Perry various combinations of passing targets.

Sodergren is building his interior line around two holdover stalwarts, Eric Heathwaite, a junior who moves into a guard spot after starting every game last year at center, and Paul Evangelista, a starter at tackle now shifting over to tight end. Doug Pratt, a senior letterman, moves into the center slot. "He was our long snapper last year, and a good one," observes Sodergren.

A bright prospect for the line is John Reagan, the only sophomore on the squad. At 6-foot-4 and 225 pounds, Reagan is the biggest player on the varsity as well as the youngest. He also is the largest lineman BC has had in many a year.

Another newcomer is Pat McCormick, a senior transfer who has played for Ravena last year. He has been working at split end.

Other starters from the 1985 varsity are Gary Mendel, Andy Miller and Mike Hodge. Mendel, a linebacker last year as a sophomore, will see time on the offensive line as well this year. Miller, a senior, will play linebacker and offensive tackle, and Hodge, who made the varsity as a sophomore a year ago, will again operate as a cornerback on defense and as Perry's backup on offense. Pete Rizzuto, a senior, letterman, is slated for a lot of two-way duty at tackle.

Hodge and two other backfield backups from last season's jayvees, juniors Gervie Santos and Joe Rappazzo, are small but have good speed. Also promoted from the JV are Corey Wiles and David Brown, seniors, and Pete Jeram and Jim Hoffman, juniors.

Sodergren will have to deploy many of these troops on defense.

BC schedule

September

12 — Shaker	7:30
19 — Johnstown	7:30
26 — Columbia	7:30

October

2 — Guilderland	7:30
11 — at Niskayuna	7:30
17 —	open
24 — Hudson Falls	7:30

November

1 — at Burnt Hills	1:30
7 — at Mont Pleasant	7:30

He has lost two key men in all-Metro second-team defensive tackle Scott McAndrews and Brian McGarrahan, but he's got a lot of experience in the secondary with Hodge, Perry, Battle, Boyd and Mooney. Lindsay, a starting linebacker last year, is also getting a trial at one of the corners this time.

As usual, there are a lot of question marks, several of which will get some answers in this weekend's scrimmage. Impatient fans will be able to get a free preview on Saturday night when the Eagles mix with Ravena, Mechanicville and Taconic Hills, in a controlled exercise, the same teams that for several years have been banging each other around in Ravena the Saturday before the season opens. This time the perspiration will be in Delmar under the new lights.

Those lights, incidentally, will shine on the Eagles at least five times in the regular season, six if by some miracle AD Ray Sliter can find an opponent for the open date on Oct. 17 at home. That gap in the schedule was caused by a decision last week at Bishop Gibbons to jettison football because only 22 players were in pads.

A rare twist this year has BC playing its first four games at home. Sept. 12 with Shaker, after that it's Johnstown, Columbia and Guilderland in succession.

The only change in the coaching staff has Chris Rutschmann, a new PE teacher, replacing Rick Wassenaar as a JV assistant. John Furey and Ken Hodge work with the varsity, Carl Freitag is the head JV coach, and John DeMeo and Bob Salamone are back with the frosh.

What Mortgage Rates Mean To You

- Even if you've long since paid off your own home mortgage, the current lowered lending rates should be important to you. First, because they increase the market: more people qualify to borrow today than when rates were near 20 percent. Second, because lower rates may increase the value of your property: when money doesn't cost so much, a buyer may have more to offer you.

- Lowered mortgage rates are just one of the factors we consider to set a market price for a property. We constantly keep an eye on current sales; we know what comparable properties have sold, and what they sold FOR. We know what buyers want and how closely your property fits their ideal.

- A good real estate agent is your link to the marketplace. We follow local and national sales trends, so you don't have to. We do the number crunching to set the price, and the negotiating to help you get that price.

Voorheesville's Wes Knapp a teacher for all seasons

By Lyn Stapf

Wesley Knapp is a teacher firmly grounded in two centuries.

Knapp, a Voorheesville resident who for the past two decades has taught physics at Scotia-Glenville, for the second summer in a row has been awarded a National Science Foundation Fellowship to study a physics-related topic on the West Coast. When he is at home, Knapp is proprietor of the Woodburners Shop on Rockhill Rd., where he teaches customers the fine art of burning wood and conserving energy.

Knapp, along with nine other teachers, was selected to attend a special Laser Physics Workshop co-sponsored by the National Science Foundation and five companies involved in laser physics research and development.

Presently the academic head of the science department at Scotia-Glenville Central Schools, Knapp was to spend time at the University of California in Los Angeles as well as two weeks in the laboratories and facilities of Hughes Aircraft, Northrup, the Jet Propulsion Laboratories, Rocketdyne and TRW.

No newcomer to such prestigious awards, Knapp spent last summer on the west coast as one of 30 physics teachers chosen from over 1,000 applicants nationwide to receive a National Foundation and Chevron Corporation fellowship for summer study.

Spending two weeks in La Habra, Calif., where he studied off-shore drilling and processing of crude oil, Knapp said he was extremely impressed with what he considered to be "one of the finest plants in the country."

According to the Union College graduate, once he got over the future shock of the extensive use of robotics in all sections of the plant he was well able to fully appreciate the efficient set-up, which harvests additional crude oil from previously drilled wells using both steam and water pressure.

The laboratory set-up, which listed over half of its staff as having Phds and which placed a high priority on the continued education and well-being of its employees, also scored high with Knapp.

All in all, Knapp found the Chevron experience most impressive and obviously the feeling was mutual since the company tapped Knapp as the one member in his group of 10 to return this past March and assist in selecting this year's fellowship winners. Chevron arranged to co-ordinate his return to California with his appearance as a presenter at the National Science Teachers Convention in San Francisco, where he addressed his fellow members on "Industry Sponsored Seminars."

Other honors bestowed upon the teacher of physics include National Science fellowships to such institutions as RPI, the University of Iowa, the University of Nevada, the University of Colorado and the University of Maryland. He is among the 10 physics teachers nationwide — five from colleges and five from high schools — who sit on the committee which composes and reviews the achievement test questions in physics developed for the examination given to college-bound seniors.

An adjunct physics professor at Hudson Valley Community College, Knapp also served as a testing consultant in the development of the Harvard Project Physics course at Harvard University and was consultant to Columbia University in its International Science Study.

As if all this weren't enough, Knapp is owner and operator of the Woodburners Shop in Voorheesville, which specializes in selling and servicing wood burning stoves — an enterprise that began as an offshoot of Knapp's interest in the environment.

Knapp became involved in the movement when he taught a course in environmental ecology at a time when most schools were not involved with the topic. In his research for the class he became familiar with wood heat and was especially impressed by the stoves built by Robert Fischer. After writing an article on the subject for the New York State Energy Task Force, Knapp found that many dealers, some of whom knew very little about their products, began referring people to him.

"Everybody was randomly selling wood stoves — even gas stations and supermarkets," Knapp recalls. He decided to begin his own business, dedicated to providing consumers with an easy, inexpensive and efficient way to heat their homes. Knapp even encourages his customers to install their own stoves — with his expert instructions, of course.

"Besides enabling people to save a little money, it also helps them to better understand the working of the stove, adding to the appliance's effectiveness," he says.

Open daily Monday through Saturday from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m., the store has kept current with the research in the field and Knapp is still convinced that heating with such energy-efficient equipment as Fischer stoves, which use 58 percent less wood and are 92 percent more efficient, is worth while.

Practicing what he preaches, Knapp uses wood to heat the house in which he lives on the Vly reservoir and which has been in the family for 70 years. There he resides with his wife Wanda, a teacher at Voorheesville Elementary School; his daughter Wendy, a junior majoring in chemistry at Chatham College in Pittsburgh and his son Wes, a senior at Scotia-Glenville.

When he's not involved with physics or environmental conservation Knapp likes to dabble in photography, work on his ham radio or just go fishing.

Driver found

Bethlehem Police said they identified a Brooklyn man as the driver of a car that was involved in an accident in Glenmont on Monday, Aug. 25. The man was contacted in Brooklyn on Friday, Aug. 29, and notified he faces charges of leaving the scene of an accident and failure to obey a traffic control device, police said.

A Latham woman reported she was driving north on Rt. 9W at 10:35 a.m. Monday when the vehicle driven by the Brooklyn man came out of Hannay La. going the wrong way on the one-way street. Police said the Brooklyn man's vehicle entered the path of the Latham woman's vehicle, and the two vehicles collided.

No one was injured, police said.

Body found

State Police said they found the body of a Voorheesville man Wednesday in the Pine Bush area of Guilderland.

The body of John D. Bugarin, 38, of Koonz Rd. in Voorheesville, was found in a wooded area off Old State Rd. in Guilderland near his car by a state police detail, state police said. The county coroner and the state police ruled the death a suicide, state police said.

Bugarin had been missing for about a week, state police said.

Selkirk man jailed

A King Ct., Selkirk, man has been charged with two counts of assault, resisting arrest and disorderly conduct after he allegedly hit his wife and a Bethlehem Police detective last week, police said.

The man was arraigned on the misdemeanor charges before Town Court Judge Rodger Fritts on Thursday, Aug. 28, and was sent to Albany County Jail pending further action, police said.

The arrest stemmed from an incident at 5 p.m. Wednesday, police said. The man's wife reported to police Thursday evening that the man allegedly hit her several times. After detectives John Cox and Charles Rudolph obtained a warrant for the man's arrest on assault charges, the man allegedly resisted arrest by pushing the detectives and punching Cox in the neck and the chest, according to police reports.

The detectives were not hurt in the incident, police said.

Supports Kaplowitz

Editor, The Spotlight:

Why are you supporting Kaplowitz? This is a question I have been asked many times and I feel I should set the record straight.

When Larry Lane announced his retirement, I was contacted by both Bernie and Gary Swan to work on their campaigns. After considerable thought, I elected to support Bernie because he will make the best representative of or for the people of the 102nd. Bernie's qualifications developed in the day-to-day problems in a changing town cannot be duplicated by spending years as a legislative aide. Bernie has demonstrated a humility that is not evidenced by Mr. Swan! Bernie does not pretend to know all the answers to even the unasked questions. He has said he will create advisory committees to advise him on the problems and suggest courses of action for consideration.

I want a representative who will be responsive, understanding and will be forceful and tactful enough to accomplish things for the people of the 102nd Assembly District. I want a representative who will start with a clean slate in the Assembly and not one who owes years of debts. Bernie Kaplowitz is that man and this is why I choose to support him!

I ask all my friends and supporters to support Bernie Kaplowitz with their vote on Tuesday, Sept. 9.

W. Gordon Morris, Jr.

W. Gordon Morris is a Republican county legislator from Elsmere and is campaign Coordinator for the Committee to Elect Bernie Kaplowitz. Ed.

Supports Swan

As a registered Republican in the Town of Bethlehem, I wish to express my support for one of the candidates for our Assembly seat. Gary Swan is one of the most exciting candidates for public office from the area in quite some time. One has only to meet Gary to feel his energy and eagerness to serve his constituency. With his candidacy he has exhibited a willingness to be open and public. This was exhibited with the release of his income tax information, which identified him as a candidate that the average taxpayer can identify with.

While his opponent in Bethlehem promises to address local issues should he be elected, Gary Swan has already shown himself to be responsive to the concerns of those he will represent. Gary's impressive record of community service and proven interest in areas that concern residents of the 102nd Assembly District, in addition to his experience in the State Assembly, indicate that he will be an extremely capable representative who is prepared to serve us for many years. The fact that Gary is not a lawyer adds to his appeal as a candidate for this public office.

On Sept. 9, Republican voters will have the opportunity to select their candidate for our Assembly seat. Republicans in the 102nd Assembly District deserve a candidate like Gary Swan.

George Kaufman

George Kaufman is chairman of Concerned Citizens of Bethlehem, which has campaigned against the proposed Northeast Psychiatric Hospital on Rt. 9W in Glenmont. Ed.

Thanks from seniors

Editor, The Spotlight:

The Bethlehem Lions Club recently entertained the Sunshine Club and the Bethlehem Senior Citizens at the Elm Avenue Park with a barbecue, serving hot dogs and hamburgers.

The Lions sponsored this affair as they have for the past 26 years. The event was looked forward to and enjoyed by all. Thank you.

Not her position

Editor, The Spotlight:

While I do regret — and as a board member voted against — the BTA's cancellation of two local tennis tournaments this year because of difficulties in getting adequate liability insurance coverage, the article in last week's Spotlight did not accurately reflect my position. I did not say to your reporter that the cancellations were a "copout" or that the association's officers were "running scared." These were her words, not mine, yet they were attributed to me as direct quotes, which caused me considerable embarrassment. Although members of the current BTA board disagree from time to time on various issues, we are good friends and respectful of each other's opinion. By suggesting otherwise, your article does the association a disservice. Do you think you have adequate insurance coverage against libel suits?

Aussie Shayegani

Delmar

We stand by the accuracy of the quotes in the story. While the story did point out a disagreement on the BTA board, it was not intended to indicate any personal differences among board members. Ed.
