New BC superintendent gets raves

Andover, Mass., administrator picked after 10-month search

By Patricia Mitchell

Dr. Leslie Loomis, appointed superintendent of Bethlehem Central schools last week, comes to the district with a reputation as an innovator and a well-respected administrator.

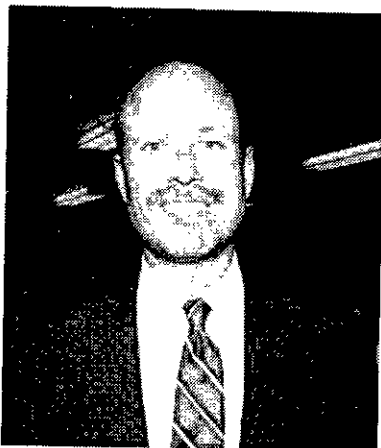

The appointment was approved by the school board Wednesday after a 10-month search. Loomis will have a three-year contract with the district starting July 1, at a salary of $75,000.

"I am just very happy at the prospect of serving you," Loomis said to the school board.

A native of Rochester and a Harvard University graduate, Loomis, 42, is an assistant superintendent of the Andover, Mass., public schools.

He has also held positions as a principal, assistant principal, a social studies teacher, and as a foreign language instructor and professor of organizational development in Colombia, South America.

Fluent in Spanish, Loomis holds his doctor of education and a masters in business administration from Harvard University, and a bachelor in arts from Williams College in Williamstown, Mass.

At Wednesday's meeting, Loomis said he was pleased to be named superintendent and to have the opportunity to serve BC. He said he was much impressed with the caliber of people in the district and said it is clear the district is one of the best in the state.

He applied for the BC post because he was interested in coming back to New York State, he said, and he was looking for a high-quality suburban district. Loomis also said he was looking forward to live in Bethlehem's type of community.

One of the issues he will be facing is a predicted rise in enrollment followed by a space crunch in the district's buildings. Loomis said he looks forward to studying and addressing the problem when he starts his new job.

Loomis was appointed in a 6-0 vote, with board member Charles Reeves absent. However, Reeves did leave a message with the board offering his congratulations and his support.

Board President Bernard Harvith characterized Loomis as a "Renaissance-type. I think that is what we were looking for," he said.

"Welcome to a great school district," said board member Sheila Fuller.

When visiting Andover, board member Robert Ruslander said he found nothing but "rave notices" about Loomis. "Their loss is our gain," he said.

Loomis will replace Dr. Lawrence Zinn, who left BC in September, 1986, after 15 years, to take over as superintendent of Saratoga Springs Veteran of his first Father's Day Race some ten years ago, John Lane has entered four to eight races distances up to 18.6 miles. He is a regular participant in the Sunday morning running group.

Pat Kane of Delmar, age 38, has been running for ten years. When she can get a babysitter for her four children, all preschool age, she runs five days a week. Otherwise, she jumps rope.

Malcolm Dale of Delmar runs 12 to 15 miles a week in three to four runs always after work and before he does anything else, breaking for two and a half months each year if the snowbanks get too high.

Jessica Stasack, a junior at Bethlehem Central High School, runs about six miles, three to four times a week. She runs the mile cross country at school meets and occasionally challenges her dad to a run.

What makes them run?

By Lorraine C. Smith

"It helps to clear your head and put things in perspective," reflected Delmar resident John Lane, identifying some of the benefits of his early morning runs. "You're out with nature is what it is... You get a different perspective of your neighborhood, of the area. This town is deserted on Sunday morning, it's a very unusual feeling to be by yourself."

Over 25 years ago, more than half his lifetime ago,

Lane had just entered the work force, had less time for physical activity, started gaining weight, and "just didn't feel right." Week-end events were insufficient for good conditioning, Lane recalled. Because it required no planning, no special location or time, not even athletic ability, Lane started running.

"People knew you were crazy then," the Boston native acknowledged, "Now they just think you're crazy. There's strength in numbers."

At first, he would drive himself to a park, walk, then run, until he "couldn't do it anymore. Walk-run, walk-run." Slowly he improved.

Just ten years ago, Lane entered his first race — Delmar's own Father's Day Run. "I almost died," he admitted, "You take off with the pack and run faster than you're used to." But since races offered incentive to train a little more, to do a Millard Harmon of Delmar departed yesterday (June 16) for a second flight to the Soviet Union in Ten Romeo, his single-engine airplane.

Harmon's most recent "friendship flight" commemorates the 50th anniversary of the Chkalov, Belyakov and Baidukov flight in the single-engine ANT-25 from the Soviet Union along a polar route to Vancouver, Washington, on June 16 to 18, 1937.

Harmon traveled commercially to the Soviet Union in March to publicize his friendship mission. Harmon met General Georgie Phillip Baidukov, 84, who completed a similar mission 50 years earlier. "It was one of the most exciting meetings of my life," said Harmon after the Soviet's press conference. "I really touched history today, and walked away with a new friend, General Baidukov."

Baidukov reportedly compared Harmon to Wiley Post. "We are delighted to meet another American today who once again loves flying our skies," said Baidukov.

Harmon describes his latest flight as a "private initiative designed to open new paths to American-Soviet understanding."

The pilot's fascination with American-Soviet friendship began in 1958. As a doctoral student of educational administration at Boston University, Harmon conducted a field study in the Soviet Union.

While serving as director of summer sessions for the State University of New York in 1968, he placed students in the Soviet Union to study Russian culture and language.

After serving as a teacher, academic administrator and senior staff member with the New York City Schools. After Zinn's resignation, the school board appointed assistant superintendent Dr. Briggs McAndrews as interim superintendent, and Dr. James O'Connell, dean of the education school at the State University at New Paltz, as consultant for the nationwide search. O'Connell was paid $8,000, including expenses, for his services.

BC received about 80 applicants for the superintendent's position, and McAndrews was reportedly one of the finalists for the post.

After the meeting, McAndrews said he will go back to his assistant superintendent for educational programs and instruction position. He was granted a one-year leave of absence to be acting superintendent.

The school district is "beholden" to McAndrews for guiding it through a difficult year with the search and a number of major decisions and projects undertaken, Ruslander said. "Briggs has done an excellent job... beyond the call of duty," he said.

Andover is about 20 miles north of Boston and was founded in 1646. Much of the workforce are executives in Boston's businesses and industries. About 80 percent of all high school graduates go on to college. Like many school districts, Andover experienced declining enrollment for some years, but is now seeing increases in the elementary grades.

Contacted after Loomis' appointment, several members of the Andover community said they had regard for the new superintendent.

BC is fortunate in having a superintendent of Loomis' caliber, who is an excellent family man with sound values, said Dr. Kenneth Seifert, superintendent of the Andover schools. Loomis is a "forward-looking person," perceptive problem solver, can recognize problems quickly and is not "bashful" about solving them.

Seifert also said he is sensitive, involves people in decision making and has had an excellent education and training.

Loomis does appreciate working in an environment that plans more than one year ahead, Seifert said.

When Loomis started at Andover three years ago, Seifert asked him where he wanted to be in about five years. Loomis wanted to be superintendent at a district, and Seifert said he wanted to give him the opportunity.

Even though Loomis held his Andover post for three years and his previous posts from one to three years, Seifert said he understands Loomis was looking for a community to live in and raise a family. That is one of the reasons Loomis is coming back to New York, Seifert said, adding he himself moved seven times in 10 years when he was first starting out.

Loomis undertook several major projects while at Andover, Seifert said. For example, he was instrumental in setting up a curriculum and instruction program at the secondary level that is progressive and involves critical thinking and student involvement.

He also chaired a business, industry and school collaboration, Seifert said. It discusses how businesses can cooperate with schools more and businesses also come into the high school with teaching modules. He said the program was "limping along" when Loomis took it over and injected "new life" into it.

County to pave Albany streets

By Patricia Dumas

The Albany County Legislature has angered its Republican minority by again authorizing the use of money to finance city street paving—even though a previous Republican legal challenge to the practice had been successful.

The authorizing resolution was approved 26-12 last week by the Democrat-controlled legislature. It allows the county to award a $207,835 contract to Hudson River Construction Company for resurfacing parts of Washington and Central avenues in the City of Albany. Two years ago when the legislature approved a similar resurfacing project for part of George St. in Green Island, Republican legislator Peter D. Ryan of Colonie protested by filing a lawsuit against the county. It was supported by fellow Republicans and the county's move to dismiss the suit was legally denied. However, the issue was averted when George Street was made part of the county highway system.

The enabling resolution for the resurfacing project in Albany described Washington and Central avenues as arterials which "serve a vital transportation need of the county" as defined under the law that governs highway repair funding. But Ryan and fellow Republicans reminded their legislative colleagues about the Green Island matter and questioned the extent of county responsibility for city streets.

"Maybe we should check on the paperwork. We didn't dot our i's and cross our t's on Green Island and we just might have to make both Washington and Central avenues county highways," Ryan said. "If it's necessary to file a lawsuit, then that's what we'll do," he added.

"I think," he concluded, "that this is just stealing the county taxpayers' money to pave streets in the City of Albany."

Minority leader W. Gordon Morris Jr. of Delmar said he was voting against the project "because of my usual objection to the expenditure of county funds for the sole purpose of the City of Albany."

Although the resurfacing project involves Washington Ave. between South Swan and Lark streets, the county funding for those sections could lead to future responsibility for maintenance of both streets, Morris warned. Both he and Republican legislator Robert W. Hoffmeister of Delmar expressed concern over that possibility.

"Once we make a determination that this is a vital link, are we locking ourselves in and taking responsibility for maintenance?" Hoffmeister asked.

"We are opening the door for Albany County to accept responsibility," Morris said. He pointed out that the applicable highway law section gives the county that authority at its option.

In other action, the legislature voted 34-4 to sell four parcels of land in the City of Albany to their former owners. The land had been taken from them because of tax delinquency. Menands Republican Kenneth S. MacAffer Jr. objected to the term "redemption" in the resolution that described the sale because he said it violated the spirit of the law.

"This county should get rid of the land by honest sale in public auction. The spirit of the law is not to give delinquent taxpayers a break," MacAffer said.

County Attorney William Conboy replied that there would be fewer "redemption" sales in the future "because the county is really going out against delinquent taxpayers."

State Legislature, Harmon took early retirement in 1983. He flew Ten Romeo in Moscow in 1985.

Harmon boasts of the numerous flying records he has set in his well-equipped Beechcraft-36. Since his retirement, the adventurer has flown his aircraft to the Bermuda Triangle and to the North Pole.

Harmon and his wife, the former Ruth Anness, have five children. Their two grandchildren may one day read about grandfather's friendship mission on the front pages of old American and Soviet newspapers.

Harmon views his bridge building as a possible mission based on the basic humanity of all people.

Harmon asks, "What is more normal than a capitalistic, retired American school teacher flying his aircraft in Soviet skies on a mission of friendship?"

also reorganized and made more receptive under Loomis' leadership, Seifert said. Andover is college-oriented, and the guidance department now holds about six seminars per year with parents and students on applying to college, he said.

In his job, Loomis also dealt with the parent associations, working out the responsibilities of parents and the responsibilities of schools. Seifert said this has led to better communication and more mutual respect.

Also at Andover, Loomis worked out a more dignified graduation ceremony that Seifert said was "extremely well done."

The president of the Andover teachers union said Loomis listens and tries to treat everyone fairly. Ed Bennett said Loomis is personable and friendly, treats teachers fairly, and has a good handle on the curriculum. However, Bennett said there have been no specific issues between the district and the union in the past few years.

"He does listen to all sides. I think he will make a good superintendent," Bennett said.

Loomis is considered an innovator, a good person, and a bright man, said Dane Strother, a reporter covering the Andover school district for the Lawrence Eagle-Tribune, the area's daily newspaper. Strother said there have been no major controversies recently, but Loomis has been against health clinics in the schools dispensing birth control for students, a topic that has not been brought up at BC.

Before becoming assistant superintendent at Andover, Loomis was principal at Fayetteville-Manlius High School in Manlius, outside of Syracuse. From 1978 to 1981, he was assistant principal at Ridgefield High School in Ridgefield, Conn., and held the same job from 1976 to 1977 at Newton South High School in Newton Centre, Mass.

Loomis taught social studies at Brighton High School in Rochester from 1973 to 1975, and at East High School, also in Rochester, from 1972 to 1973.

In Pereira, Colombia, Loomis was foreign language director and an instructor in English and Spanish for executives from 1970 to 1972 at the Language Instruction Program. From 1968 to 1979, he was a professor of organizational development at the Universidad Tecnologica and a teacher at Reform School La Combia.

Loomis also worked as a consultant at the Educational Development Center in Newton, Mass., the Gulf Management Institute in Boston, the University of Maine at Bangor and Portland, the Bureau of Indian Affairs in Albuquerque, N.M., and Phoenix and at Siron Inc., in Rochester.

He holds certification from New York, Massachusetts and Connecticut.

On his resume, Loomis lists that he has traveled extensively throughout Europe and Latin America, and that he covered South America from the top of the Andes on horseback to the tributaries of the Amazon in Indian dugouts.

Loomis and his wife, Betsy, have one daughter, Kate, who is four years old.

Motorcycle spill leaves 1 dead, 1 hurt

One man was killed and another man is in fair condition at an area hospital after the motorcycle they were riding crashed into a guardrail Sunday afternoon, Albany County Sheriffs said.

Steven M. Duell, 31, of East Berne, was pronounced dead at the scene by Albany County Coroner James Keeher, deputies said. His passenger, Gary Willsie, 32, also of East Berne, was listed in fair condition Monday at Albany Medical Center Hospital, a hospital spokesman said.

Duell was driving east on Rt. 443 at 12:24 p.m. Sunday at Cass Hill Rd. in the Town of New Scotland when he apparently lost control and hit a guardrail, deputies said. Both men were thrown from the motorcycle.

Deputies said they are still investigating the crash.

Town board takes Delmar Village lead

By Kevin Mullen

The Bethlehem Town Board has declared itself the lead agency for Delmar Village, meaning there will be a 30-day wait for more action on the controversial development

The state Department of Transportation, the state Department of Environmental Conservation and the Albany County Department of Health "have 30 days to refute" the town board's action, according to Supervisor J. Robert Hendrick, who read a designation letter for a state Environmental Quality Review determination at last week's town board meeting.

Delmar Village, the 11th Planned Residential District in the town, has come under fire from a local grass roots group, the Bethlehem Citizens For Responsible Planning, and others. Delmar Village is planned for 56 single family homes and 232 apartments on 92 acres between Delaware Ave. and Orchard St.

Hendrick read a formal letter from the planning board that recommended approval of the project. The planning board made its recommendation at its May 19 meeting with several suggestions, including a provision that Fisher Blvd. extension to be constructed (or bonded) prior to the issuance of any building permits but closed to through traffic (except for emergency vehicles) at the intersection with Orchard St until such time as existing Fisher Blvd. is improved. Also, the planners said, a sidewalk should be constructed along the entire length of Fisher Blvd. Extension as well as on Richfield Dr. for its full length.

Community center

The board also heard a report from Philip Maher, administrator of Parks and Recreation Department and chairman of the town Community Center Committee. The committee, appointed in February, is studying if there is a need for a community center. The biggest question seems to be whether a new building should be constructed or if an existing building could be used, Maher said.

Maher recommended that a State University at Albany graduate student and an assistant be hired to conduct a survey of town services. Maher said that they'll find out "how well utilized these places are. Maybe there is a lack of facilities or some are not being used." Maher said the study will "help identify what and where the place is." He said that this type of study "has never been done before" in Bethlehem.

Board member Sue Ann Ritchko said, "lots of school districts are not being used. I was surprised how underutilized they were, rather than the opposite."

Linda Mannella of the Stencil Studio, left, and Gail Leonardo Sundling of the Delmar Bootery inspect Mannella's decoration of a trash can at the four corners in Delmar. Several containers were donated by C.D.T.A. and installed by the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce at various locations in the town.

Patricia Mitchell

Maher said that there are between 70 to 80 facilities in the town. He said the study would entail the completion of a three or four page questionnaire, which would include initial contact, a telephone call, on site visit, and a follow up visit. The board approved $2,000 from the contingency fund for the study.

Stop signs in Elm Estates

The board set a public hearing on July 8 for four-way stop signs at University St. and Dorchester Ave. and a 30 mph speed limit in Elm Estates. Police Chief Paul E. Currie made the recommendations, but two residents of Elm Estates, Barbara Dorsey and Betty Costanzo, argued for more controls. Costanzo said that other stop signs are needed and that "thirty miles per hour is inappropriate when you have no sidewalks. We were hoping that the police department would recommend an increased monitoring of speeders in the neighborhood."

Currie said that eight residents have been given summons for speeding in the development and that six of them were residents of Elm Estates. He said that it's a "problem of education" and that "you'd think that being a resident" of the development would preclude people from speeding.

"We feel frustrated," said Costanzo. She said that there are over 300 children under 16 years old in Elm Estates.

Hendrick said the board will refer the suggestions of Dorsey and Costanzo to the new town Traffic Committee.

Hahn, board spar over job

The sparring over the use of town computers in the office Bethlehem Receiver of Taxes and Assessments Kenneth P. Hahn, who is being challenged in a Republican primary, continued at last week's town board meeting.

The board tabled a request from Hahn for the appointment of Janice D. Skilbeck to the position of account clerk, effective July 1. Councilman Fred Webster is conducting a survey of other towns' computer setups. One has been completed but Webster said the other one should be completed by next week. At an April board meeting, a similar request by Hahn was also tabled, pending Webster's study.

Webster said that it would be more cost effective if the tax department were included into the computer system and that the tax department was the only one in the town not on line.

Hahn said that he wanted to "correct misinformation" that was given by Webster at the last meeting. Hahn said that the tax department is not the only department that isn't on an in-house computer. He said that the assessor's department "is not on an in-house" but on "rental services."

Hahn said that "the first thing to do would be to put assessment on an in-house."

Supervisor J. Robert Hendrick agreed that when the town was planning to install a computer the decision was made to farm out the tax assessment and tax collection work because of its size and complexity. Hendrick said later that Webster's survey is on the question of whether Hahn should be using the town system for posting of water bills, which is currently being done by hand.

In a related development, Hahn announced last week that his supporters have "far surpassed" the 400 signatures required to secure a place on the Sept. 15 primary ballot. "We'll continue to build a margin of additional signatures since an attempt may be made to invalidate some on minor technicalities," Hahn said in a press release.

The Bethlehem Republican Committee has endorsed Charles Fritts of Glenmont, chairman of the Bethlehem Board of Appeals, for the post held by Hahn for 24 years.

Students create state

Andrea Armstrong, a junior at Bethlehem Central High School, has been selected by the Nathaniel Adams Blanchard American Legion Auxiliary to participate in the Empire Girls State at Cazenovia College.

During the one-week program, Armstrong will learn about the duties, rights, privileges and responsibilities of adults. The participating students will create and govern their own state.

The program has been approved by the state Board of Regents and may be used for college credit.

Armstrong is the daughter of Mrs. Albina Vista and James Armstrong.

Glenmont man killed when loader overturns

A Glenmont man was killed after the front-end loader he was driving apparently went down an embankment and pinned him when it landed, Colonie police said.

The incident is still being investigated, police said.

Howard Doxie, 23, of RD 1, Glenmont, was doing excavation work in back of Al's Garage at 1408 Central Ave., when the loader he was operating apparently rolled down an embankment sometime after midnight Sunday. Police said the loader came to rest at a swampy area at the bottom of the hill, where Doxie was trapped. There were no witnesses.

Doxie was not found until about 7:30 a.m. Sunday, when a woman walking in the area reported the incident, police said.

Doxie was taken to Albany Medical Center Hospital for an autopsy by the Albany County Coroner, police said.

Eagles graduate

Bethlehem Central High School will hold its commencement ceremony on Friday, June 19, at 6:30 p.m. in the high school's lower gymnasium. Bethlehem Central will graduate 294 students.

Attorney named to fill planning board vacancy

Attorney John T. Mitchell of Delmar has been appointed to the planning board, filling the seat vacated by the resignation of Dennis J. Corrigan, who made his first appearance on the town board last week.

Mitchell, who is currently an enrolled Republican, ran unsuccessfully for the Albany County Legislature as a Democrat in 1979, opposing Sue Ann Ritchko, who is now a town councilman. Mitchell is the second former Democrat selected by the all-Republican town board to fill vacancies.

Mitchell, 48, has been an attorney with the Albany law firm of Casey, Yanas, Clyne, Mitchell and Amerling since 1969. Former Albany County Court Judge John J. Clyne of Delmar changed his party designation from Democrat to Republican last year to run for the state Supreme Court. Clyne lost to Warren Travers of Troy.

Mitchell, a native of Amsterdam, practices general law but specializes in real estate and banking law.

He attended Albany Law School and received an LL.B. degree in 1967 and J.D. degree in 1968. He received a B.A. in English from Canisius College in Buffalo in 1961 and was Canisius Man of the Year in 1961. He graduated from St. Mary's Institute High School in Amsterdam and finished in the top 10 per cent of his class. In 1960 he attended University College in Dublin, Ireland, on a scholarship.

From 1962 to 1964 he served in the United States Army Artillery, and was discharged as a first lieutenant.

He is a member of the Albany County Bar Association, New York State Bar Association, American Arbitration Review, New York State Trial Lawyers Association, and Association of Trial Lawyers of America.

His wife is the former Mary Ann Scully. They have three children.

It took 7 years, but Feura Bush has its park

By Patricia Mitchell

It all began seven years ago with some boys looking for a new place to play ball, and finally Feura Bush has its park.

The grand opening for the Feura Bush Town Park was held Sunday, with more than 100 people on hand to welcome the addition to the hamlet.

The new park, complete with picnic tables, a baseball field, basketball courts and spaces for other games, is off Mathias Rd. in what used to be a cornfield.

Judith Wing, president of the Feura Bush Neighborhood Association, read a letter describing how the park started. In the letter, Cliff Nooney recalled how as a boy he used to play baseball next to the old Feura Bush school, even after it was turned into apartments. One night, a sheriff's deputy told the boys that the property was posted and they could no longer play there.

The Houghtaling family then let the boys play baseball in their yard, even though Nooney said he knew Ann Houghtaling was afraid she would find her picture window smashed. He asked his mother, Julia Nooney, what could be done to find another place to play baseball. She said the boys should present a petition to the town board requesting a place to play, and to get all his friends to get signatures on the petition.

"We got the signatures and Mrs.

Mimi the clown also known as Mira Nolan, of Delmar, entertains the kids at the Feura Bush Town Park opening last Saturday.

Patricia Mitchell

Houghtaling loaded a bunch of us up and took us up to the town hall for the meeting," Nooney wrote.

The boys presented their petition and the town board members promised to look into the matter, and then George Houghtaling took everyone up to the Tollgate for ice cream, Nooney wrote.

After that, Julia Nooney, his grandmother, Julia Chamberlain, and Bernadette Lewis went to every town board meeting.

"This went on for years until finally they were told the park was a going concern and they left the board members alone," Nooney wrote. "It took a lot of years and a lot of time, but I hope it will be worth it for the little kids who are still around town."

Supervisor Stephen Wallace said it is typical of government that the request for a park was started about six or seven years ago, but it is always a pleasure to see such a project finished. Many of the boys who first worked on the idea will be graduating from high school this spring, he said.

The Feura Bush Neighborhood Association is "one of the finest" that Wallace said he has worked with, adding that the members are very understanding and patient. He said the new park is an example of people and government working towards the same goal.

Pastor Dave Mulholland gave the invocation for the park.

Citations for their work on the park were given to Julia Nooney, Mark Sengenberger for his landscaping and design, and to Wallace and the town board. Wing also thanked Charles Houghtaling for getting contributions from local businesses to purchase equipment, and to Norma Wally and Donna Freuh for working on the grand opening.

Wallace also cited the highway department and the parks department for their work on the new park.

The General Electric Corporation donated $600 and Owens-Corning Fiberglas. donated $250 to the development of the town park.

Do town zoning laws have teeth?

By Patricia Mitchell

The New Scotland Planning Board wants the town to hire a surveyor to determine if a fence inhibits a "forever wild zone."

But if it is determined that the fence along Rt. 155 at Rt. 85A is in violation of the zone, the question remains how the town can enforce the law.

When approving section three of the Orchard Park subdivision, the planning board stipulated that a 20-foot strip of undeveloped land must be maintained along Rt. 155. That condition was included with the deeds, but a row of trees and other plants are not there any more and a fence has been built along the back of two homes.

Zoning attorney John Bailey has been meeting with the two homeowners to work out details to replant the strip, but it is unsure whether it will be determined that the fence encroaches on the forever wild zone. He has said a "quick reading" of the condition set by the planning board indicated the fence should not be within the zone, and the only way to settle the question would be to hire a surveyor.

However, Bailey said at the board's June 9 meeting, the planning board has no budget and only the town board would be able to hire a surveyor. Even though one section of the fence appears in violation of the 20-foot zone, he said the question is whether the town wants to have it moved a few feet back. A survey of the fence is needed to determine just where the fence is and if it is a minor technical violation or a major violation.

Bruce Houghton and Harry Van Wormer, both members of Concerned Citizens of New Scotland, questioned what a survey of the line would establish. They both brought up the question of the fence encroaching on the forever wild zone at a previous meeting, but Van Wormer said the town has no enforcement of its zoning laws. He said the town's building inspector should have been over at the subdivision when it was being built.

"Not after the fact," Van Wormer said.

Board member John Loucks said the town's building inspector is a part-time position. "It is impossible to do it," he said.

The stipulation to keep the strip was included with the deeds, and Houghton said for someone to violate that requirement is wrong.

Bailey said Van Wormer and Houghton could ask the town board to hire the surveyor to study the land and the fence. He also said one of the homeowners claims that Niagra Mohawk destroyed the forever wild zone when putting in power lines. When Van Wormer asked if the 20-foot strip is now a forever wild section, building inspector Walt Miller said it is not known if it can be reclaimed because of the power cables.

The question of enforcement was also raised when the planning board approved a special use permit for an in-law apartment on Jones Ave. in Feura Bush. The board approved the apartment with the condition that the apartment only be used for the parents-in-law.

Board member William Childs made the motion to include the condition because of concern voiced by several neighbors to keep Jones Ave. single-family residential. He said the board approved a similar apartment with the stipulation that it revert back to a single family home when the apartment is empty.

Bailey questioned whether the condition would be enforceable, but Doug DeForge of Albany, proposing the apartment, said he would be willing to comply with the condition.

The in-law apartment will be constructed for DeForge's parents in-law when his family builds a house on about 1.2 acres of land on Jones Ave. The lot has public water and the Albany County Department of Health has approved the septic system.

In other planning board business, Miller said Neale Dunston of Rt. 85 has until Oct. 1, to have an old building on his property torn down, shubbery planted on the south side and his business in operation. The planning board issued a special use permit in September, 1985, for a garage, but board member Annick Belleville said none of the conditions in the permit have been met yet.

The next meeting of the New Scotland Planning Board is scheduled for 7:30 p.m., Tuesday, June 23.

Library to open

The Feura Bush library could be open by the end of June at its new location in a one-room schoolhouse behind the Jerusalem Reformed Church on Rt. 32.

Feura Bush Neighborhood Association President Judith Wing said the association is hoping for an opening date by the end of the month.

Voorheesville developer Peter Baltis has donated $2,000 for the library's expenses, Wing said.

A room at the Onesquethaw Fire House was the first home of the library when it opened in 1985. After a year, the department needed the space, and the library couldn't open. In April, the library was moved into the schoolhouse.

Wing said people are still needed for renovations and for getting the library ready to be opened.

Trotting past Bird-in-Hand and on to Paradise

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the third report by Madelon Paterson Pound of her journey by horse-drawn buggy from her home in New Scotland to Tennessee. This segment of the journey is from Bath to York in rural Pennsylvania. With her is her dog Bonnie and her horse, Black Beauty, called B.B. A friend, Elyce Turner, is driving a station wagon with camping gear and spelling Pound with the buggy driving. Pound is delivering the carriage, which was built in her grandfather's factory in Flint, Mich., to her nephew for safekeeping.

By Madelon Paterson Pound

The last time I wrote to you the time was 3 a.m. and the place was the floor with the light coming from the closet. The Schnabels were most hospitable and would have been happy to have me write you at the dining room table or anywhere in their interesting, ancient stone house, but fumble along as I may, I couldn't find a light switch.

A solitary morning dove eventually greeted the dawn and the "baaing" of sheep roused Bonnie, who reminded me that B.B. needed attention. B.B. was spending the night in a neighbor's barn. The Martins were Mennonites and had horses, carts, buggies and many darling children. They were kind, gentle, generous people and sent us off with a bag of just picked sweet green peas to eat on the way to Shiver's Youth Hostel near Union.

We went through Moslem Springs near Yellor House and decided to by-pass the Daniel Boone homestead in order to stay on less congested roads. We drove up hill and down dale until at last we reached Geigerstown — geiger means violin, I was told — and were warmly greeted by Millie Shiver and her husband. B.B. was tired and had been slipping on the hills, so Janice, the daughter, called a blacksmith who was able to come out the next day.

The weather was cool and raining so I was glad to have a chance to find out about the history of the valley and the people. Millie had been running the youth hostel for several years when President John Kennedy offered her funds for enlarging and improving the facilities. The Shiver's son has collected trains from the Reading Lines, America's largest anthracite carrier, and is qualified as an engineer of steam engines. The latest addition to his collection was long, sturdy, yellow train used for testing tunnels and bridges. There is something attractive to me about a caboose, possibly because as a child I used to wave at the worker riding in the last car of a freight train being pulled up the New Scotland hill on the west shore tracks.

There are other things I could tell you about the Shiver family, but then this week would be cut short.

Friday was a beautiful day. The mists in the valleys cleared and the air was fragrant with honeysuckle and wild roses. We drove through land bordering the state forest and game lands to escape traffic on 23 West. I was offered a box of rain-washed strawberries — delicious. I met a retired teacher of a small stone school house called the California School near a spring-filled trough of cold, clear water. B.B. wasn't interested, but I was.

We were traveling through Amish country and stopped in Churchtown at Moses Smucker's. He has an extensive business of harness making. He kindly checked our harness and even added to it free of charge. Then we went on to New Holland to have the buggy wheel checked and straightened by the well-known wheelwright, Mr. Widmer. We arrived rather late at the home of Melvin Martin, put B.B. in his stall and found a welcome motel in Ephrata.

Madelon Pound's destination, Sleepy Creek, W.Va., became closer after another week of horse and buggy travel. She began the week in Bath, Penn. and has traveled through the state towards York.

In 1732, there was a communal society of Seventh Day German Baptists living near Ephrata. They lived a cloistered life and were known for their fine printing, calligraphy and music. The group was disbanded in 1934, but 10 of the society's buildings have been restored. There are so many side trips to be taken — a reconstructed iron mining village at Hopewell and the Crystal Cave near Kutztown. In the Pennsylvania Dutch country, we wished that we had the time to visit Bird-In-Hand, Paradise, Intercourse and the Hans Herr House, which is the oldest Mennonite meetinghouse in America. Andrew Wyeth, a descendant of Hans Herr, depicted the medieval stone house in several of his paintings.

B.B.'s first experience with the Amish horses and buggies was quite exciting. He sensed other horses behind him. He arched his neck, pricked up his ears and whinnied plaintively. Soon I heard "trot-trot, trot-trot" behind me and swooping and swerving past came a beautiful team of chestnut horses pulling a high cart. It was driven by a man dressed in black and wearing a flat stiff-brimmed hat. Beside him, looking straight ahead, was a boy in identical clothes. B.B. strained his bit and leaped after them as they trotted briskly up the road. He tried his best to keep up with them, but after awhile he gave up and settled into his routine jog. After that episode he was interested, but not challenged by the Amish horse and buggies.

We broke up the next long stretch of highway by finding the home and barn of the Erving's near route 462 and Mountville at Silon Springs. B.B. was happy to have an enclosed field to himself and Bonnie could run. At the end of the day, she does grow a bit tired of riding in either the buggy or in the car, whichever I happen to be driving.

The fields and farms in this part of Pennsylvania are beautifully kept. The corn is as high as Miss Piggy's eye, the wheat and oats are still green and the hay is being harvested. The soy beans are just poking through this fertile land, the manicured vegetable gardens are all visible because the fields are cultivated to the very edge of the road. There are no hedge rows or brush to hide them and of course from my seat in the Patterson buggy I can see far a-field.

The Blessing Farm came into view as I left the highway and drove B.B. down a rather steep lane to her nights quarters in a stone wall enclosed paddock with access to any stall she should chose in the traditional spacious Pennsylvania farm. The beams and hinges seemed enormous compared to our Dutch barns.

Crossing the Susquehanna was traumatic for Elyce. She was attacked by a cloud of moths, so she whipped up B.B. and turned the reigns over to me at the end of the bridge. The Susquehanna is one wide river and Elyce fears moths.

We regretfully left the Blessings — they really were a blessing to us — and headed for York. More about that historic city later, but two things I want to tell you. We met the first woman firefighter in the fire department of Springettsburg and I took B.B. through McDonald's drive through. We didn't set off the signal right away, but we were served through the window to the surprise of the waitress.

More later.

Homeowner arrested for serving minors

A Mosher Rd. woman was arrested by Bethlehem Police Saturday night for allegedly serving beer to minors at her home, police said.

The woman was charged with unlawfully dealing with a child and was scheduled to appear in Bethlehem Town Court Tuesday (yesterday), police said.

When police arrived at the Mosher Rd. home, they said they saw over 50 cars parked on the street and several youths in front of the house with beer. Police said after talking to the youths, they found them under 21 years of age, the legal drinking age. When they went to the back yard, they saw many more youths holding cups of beer and two kegs of beer that appeared empty.

Window cracked

Bethlehem Police said an Orchard St., Delmar, woman reported her front window was cracked at about 7:30 p.m. Wednesday. Either a BB gun pellet or a similar object struck the window, police said.

THE HANDMADE TIE

The handmade tie is centuries old, and was originally referred to as a cravat by the French.

The shape, and body of a tie are determined by its interlining. Each handmade tie is uniquely fitted to its interlining by hand folding the tie silk around the interlining, then it is slip stitched by hand to secure the shape. This gives a perfect fit of tie silk to interlining, and assures a well defined knot.

The slip stitch is strong and resilient, allowing the tie to return to its original shape.

This handmade tie is of superior quality. It was made by quality conscious, and patient hands.

ARC rejects group home alternatives

By Patricia Mitchell

The ball in the dispute over a proposed community residence on East Rd. in New Salem has gone back to New Scotland officials after the Albany County Chapter of the state Association of Retarded Children rejected three alternative sites suggested by the town.

However, the project has encountered other problems — its funding is in danger and the ARC's option on the East Rd. house has expired.

Association officials said Tuesday the move to reject the sites came after they learned their proposed home would be placed on a priority list that could be receiving state funding this year. The list was made when the state froze all funds going into residences that are just starting up.

New Scotland officials were to be notified in a letter Tuesday of the association's decision to reject the alternative sites. Edward Lukomski, executive director of the county chapter, said the association would like to meet with Supervisor Stephen Wallace and zoning attorney John Bailey to discuss the next step.

The 30 East Rd., New Salem, home is still the preferred location, Lukomski said.

The town's options at this point, Lukomski said, are to call for a state Office of Mental Retardation and Developmental Disabilities (OMRDD) commissioner's hearing or to approve the 30 East Rd. site within 15 days of notification. Usually commissioner's hearings are called if there is an over-saturation of group homes in the town or if the association rejects the alternative sites that are considered adequate, he said. This is the first community residence proposed for New Scotland.

Wallace said he would wait to comment on the association's actions until after he has talked with Bailey and received the letter.

Bailey could not be reached for comment Tuesday morning.

New Scotland

If New Scotland calls for a hearing, tying up approval of the home, and it is sold to someone else, the county chapter may be able to seek legal recourse against the town, Lukomski said.

New Scotland officials said they suggested the alternative sites because they believe there are more services available for residents in the village.

Two of three homes suggested by town officials in a May 27 letter, 117 Voorheesville Ave. and 31 South Main St. in Voorheesville, either were sold or were not for sale when the county chapter went to look at them, said Larry Fuld, director of residential services.

The third location on Spoor Rd. has several problems making it ineligible for use as a group home, Fuld said. It was rejected by both the county chapter and the OMRDD. Because of its size, the house could accommodate 10 adults instead of the county chapter's desired seven, and therefore was not feasible for the program. It also has an inground pool that is a safety concern, would be costly to renovate, has no public water, and is in an isolated section of the town, about five miles away from Voorheesville. The town board suggested alternative sites from 30 East Rd. because they felt it was not in the mainstream and close to the village, Fuld said.

Lukomski said he was "somewhat surprised" the Spoor Rd. home was suggested because the town board seemed most concerned that the home suggested by the county chapter was not closer to the village. He said it was "contradictory" for the town to offer a site so far away from the village.

However, the county chapter could lose the 30 East Rd. home because it has been placed back on the market after a purchase option ran out this week. Lukomski said they were notified last week that the state had overextended itself this year, and all associations running community residences with projects in the works were told to terminate those projects. The New Scotland house was one of those projects to be terminated, Lukomski said.

The chapter was notified Monday afternoon that the state had looked at all of the projects being worked on and decided to prioritize them according to their progress. The county chapter's project was one of those looked at and Lukomski said there was an "extremely good chance" that they would be high on the list.

The purchase option on East Rd. was allowed to run out because the county chapter was told by the state it could not proceed and Fuld said they could not string the owner along.

The county chapter had to decide on the alternative sites within 15

DWI charged

A Delaware Ave., Delmar, man was scheduled to appear in town court Tuesday (yesterday) after Bethlehem Police said they arrested him for driving while intoxicated.

Police said they stopped the man at about 11:50 p.m. Thursday while he was driving north on Rt. 9W near the Coymans Town line going 71 miles an hour.

Police said they ticketed him for DWI, speeding, failure to keep right and driving with registration and license suspended.

The school year ends

Pomp and circumstance are sure to accompany the class of 1987 as they graduate from Clayton Bouton Junior-Senior High School this Friday, June 19, at 7 p.m.

The main speaker will be Dr. Bruce Crowder, who is assistant commissioner for district superintendents, school district organization and development with the state Education Department. Crowder holds his undergraduate and graduate degrees in English from the University of New Hampshire. He received his CAS and doctorate from the University of Massachusetts, where he studied curriculum and administration.

Crowder has served as principal of Colonie Central High School, assistant superintendent of the Scotia-Glenville district and superintendent of the Highland Falls district.

Other speakers will include Valedictorian Donna Mensching and Salutatorian Laura Martin.

All are welcome.

School year closes

Although attendance in the Voorheesville Central School District will end this month for graduating seniors, students in kindergarten through grade 11 will enjoy just a summer vacation from classes.

Formal classes have already ended for high school students in grades 7 through 12, who have been on an examination schedule for the past week.

The elementary school students will be dismissed for the summer on Friday, June 19, at approximately 11:15 a.m. An awards assembly will be held in the morning.

Summer classes begin

Just a reminder to district parents that there will be remedial classes held in the district this summer.

At the elementary school, programs in math and reading will be held for grades 4 through 6 from July 6 through Aug. 7. Interested parents may call John Tobiasen, assistant principal, for information at 765-2382.

At the high school English and math classes for those in grade 7 and 8 will be offered from July 1 through Aug. 12. Classes will be held from 8:30 a.m. through 10 a.m. and 10:05 a.m. until 11:35 a.m. Classes will not be held on July 3.

The deadline for registration is June 29. To register call Barbara Blumberg, junior high guidance counselor, at 765-3314.

The classes are offered free to district residents, but students must provide their own transportation.

Library plans summer fun

Librarian Nancy Hutchinson announces that there will be a great variety of things happening at the library this summer.

Family movies will be shown at the Voorheesville Public Library every Wednesday at 2 p.m. The schedule includes Sounder on July 8, Charlotte's Web on July 15, Rocky on July 22, Willie Wonka on July 29, A Christmas Story on Aug. 5, Where the Red Fern Grows on Aug. 12, Danny on Aug. 19, and Phantom Toll Booth on Aug. 26.

All are welcome to attend the free presentations.

Story hours for pre-school children will be held every Monday and Friday at 10:30 a.m., with an additional session Friday afternoons at 1:30 p.m. No reservations are required.

Several special events for the younger set are also planned. Listed on the schedule are bedtime stories on July 23 and Aug. 13, a safety puppet show on July 9, a film program on July 30 and a visit from Tammi Stewart of the Devils rounds third on her way home for the winning run. The Devils beat the Donuts 4-3 Saturday for the Kiwanis softball championship.

Reading program on hold

The summer reading program for the 1987-83 school year has temporarily been put on hold so that a committee of teachers may evaluate the program and determine what format changes may be advisable.

With no formal reading program scheduled for this summer, students need only borrow or purchase books for their own reading pleasure.

Summer programs begin

Summer swim lessons begin on Monday, June 22, at the high school pool. To register call the high school at 765-3314.

Registration for the summer tennis program, sponsored by the Village of Voorheesville, will be held on Monday, June 22, and Tuesday, Cranberry the Clown on Aug. 6.

School children are invited to join the "Dinosaur Daze" summer reading program, beginning on July 7. The lower grades (kindergarten through grade 3) will meet on Thursday afternoon. Students in grades 4 through 6 will meet on Fridays at 3:30 p.m.

The students will enjoy crafts, science lessons, food festivals, and visits from Dean Davis and his travelling zoo. Both groups will finish the summer with a party.

Registration will be held from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m. on Monday, June 22 and 23, or from noon until 5 p.m. on Wednesday, June 24.

All programs are free. For information call Hutchinson at 765-2791.

June 23, from 8 a.m. until 9 a.m. The free program is open to village residents age 8 and older.

Music teacher Lydia Tobler invites young musicians to sign up for the summer music program, sponsored by the Kiwanis Club of New Scotland. Forms are available at the grade school and the high school.

Soccer registration opens

Registration for the Kiwanis youth soccer program will be held at Voorheesville Elementary School this evening, June 17, from 7 to 8:30 p.m., and on Saturday, June 20, from 9 a.m. until 11 a.m. Girls and boys in the Town of New Scotland entering grades 4 through 6 are welcome to register. Forms listing more information are available at the grade school office and will be available at the registration sessions.

Girl Scout ceremony held

Brownies and Girl Scouts from Voorheesville ended the year with an awards ceremony on Tuesday, June 2.

The evening included a slide presentation by members of Cadet Troop 259, who later this month will visit "Our Cabana," a Girl Scout World Friendship Center in Mexico.

Among those receiving awards were Jill Guyer, Michele Schaff, Judy Olsen and Karen Russo, all graduating seniors who have been in scouting for the past 11 years.

The evening ended with cake and balloons in celebration of the 75th anniversary of Girl Scouting in America.

Dance recital Sunday

Students from the Gallagher School of Dance, New Scotland Rd., will present their annual recital at 2 p.m. on Sunday, June 21, at the Guilderland Middle School on Rt. 155.

"A Little Traveling Music" will featuring students of tap, jazz and ballet.

Tickets may be purchased at the studio.

PTSA installs officers

The Voorheesville PTSA recently installed officers for the 1987-88 year.

Serving on the PTSA board next year will be: Debbie Baron, president; Elaine Burns, assistant president; Jeanne Knouse, first vice president; Dorothy Patashnick, second vice president; Molly Getnick, treasurer; Pam Seh and Chris Burns, recording secretaries, and Michelle Krajewski, corresponding secretary.

The group will hold a meeting during the summer to plan activities for next school year.

Canning considered

The Albany County Cooperative Extension will show video tapes on five different aspects of home food preservation during the week of June 22. The tapes will be shown at the William Rice Extension Center, Martin Rd., Voorheesville, on Monday, June 22, and Wednesday, June 24 through Friday, June 26, from 9 a.m. until noon. There will also be a viewing Monday evening from 7 to 9 p.m.

A home economist will be available to answer questions and check pressure canner lid gauges.

School asbestos report

By Sal Prividera

Tests for asbestos in the Clayton A. Bouton Junior-Senior High School have measurable levels in some storage areas, but none in areas used by students.

The report was discussed by the Voorheesville school board at its meeting June 8. Asbestos was found in high school air samples during tests done April 21 by Testwell-Craig Laboratories of Albany, according to Superintendent Louise Gonan. The finding was that the percentage of asbestos in the air was within standards set by the federal Occupational Safety and Health Administration (OSHA), but not within those of the federal Environmental Protection Agency.

The friable asbestos is not in areas that students come in contact with, according to Gonan. Friable asbestos is exposed in ways that it could be easily crumbled and can get into the air. Most of it is in the football storage area off the boy's locker room, the chlorine room and crawl spaces, she said.

The custodial staff has been told not to enter the friable areas "unless it's absolutely necessary," said Gonan. She added that masks had been purchased for the protection of anyone who must enter those areas.

Gonan said the district will "take care of" the friable areas and will wait to take any further action pending Environmental Protection Agency recommendations. The report results were requested by the agency.

The report concluded that there was no asbestos in the air samples taken in the elementary school.

The district plans to pay for any necessary asbestos removal as part of the capital improvements project bonding to be put before voters in a special vote, Gonan said.

Mini-grant applications for the 1987-88 school year were discussed and approved by the board on the recommendation of Gonan. The mini-grant is part of staff and curriculum development "that might enrich our curriculum," according to the superintendent.

Due to a later start on grant writing, there were fewer grant applications this year, Gonan said.

The eight approved mini-grants for the next year include three proposals that will improve the district's teaching of computer skills. Another grant will result in an oral and written history of the Voorheesville Central School District. Students from the gifted and talented program as well as selected English and social studies class will participate.

A grant was written to develop a curriculum for teaching French to students who have difficulties learning foreign language. An art appreciation program for grades one through six will be made part of the art curriculum. Students will participate in a five-day outdoor environmental program conducted by "Nature's Classroom" in Connecticut under another mini-grant. A project will be undertaken to improve the evaluation and teaching of math seven and math eight.

In other business, the board:

- Approved the use of a fourth classroom in the elementary school by BOCES for special education.

- Discussed the number of new students expected to enter the elementary school in the fall. School principal Donna Canavan reported the number of new students is currently 27.

- Approved the 1987 summer school and summer swim programs.

Classmates meet

On Friday, June 5, a field day was held at Pieter B. Coeymans Elementary School for fifth grade students of A. W. Becker and Pieter B. Coeymans Elementary Schools. The event was planned to allow the children to become acquainted in a relaxed casual situation before they begin their classes together in the fall at Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Junior High School. Supervised by gym instructor Jack Curry, the students participated in a variety of field events. The day concluded with a pizza picnic on the school grounds.

Father's Day breakfast

Sunday, June 21, is Father's Day. So, why not treat that special Dad to the Father's Day breakfast buffet at the Bethlehem Elks Lodge 2233? An "All You Can Eat" buffet will be served from 9 a.m. until noon at the lodge, Rt. 144 and Winnie Road, Selkirk. The cost is $4 for adults, $3.75 for seniors and $2.50 for children under the age of 12. The lodge's next breakfast will be served in September.

Outdoor services

The new outdoor chapel at the First Reformed Church of Bethlehem, Rt. 9W, Selkirk, will be the setting for Vestper Worship throughout the summer months. Through the cooperation of the four Venture Churches (the South Bethlehem United Methodist Church, the First Reformed Church of Bethlehem, the Glenmont Reformed Church and the Faith Lutheran Church), 30-minute services will be held every Saturday evening, from July 11 through Aug. 29. The services of scripture, prayer, song and reflection will be led each week by a pastor from one of the four churches. All are invited.

Seniors graduate

Commencement exercises for the 1987 graduating class of Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk High School will be held at 6:30 p.m. on Saturday, June 20, at the high school. Weather permitting, ceremonies will be held outside. Tickets have been issued to the students. A limit of six guests per graduate will be allowed if it is necessary to hold the program inside.

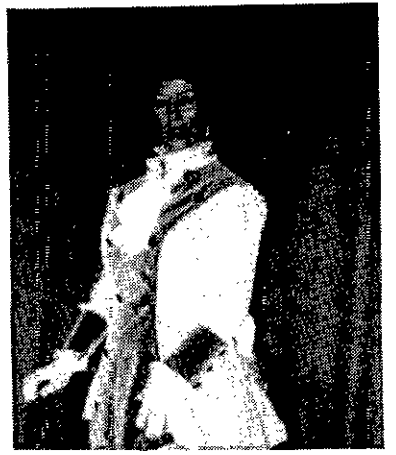

Some 172 students are expected to receive diplomas during the ceremonies. The Rev. LeRoy Seuss of the New Baltimore Reformed Church will give the invocation; The Rev. Stephen Giles of the Alcove Full Gospel Church will give the benediction. Speakers will include Paul Curley, valedictorian, and Christine Doyle, salutatorian. Presentations will be made by RCS Board of Education President Anthony Williams.

Seniors enjoy summer

Last week's monthly meeting of the Sunshine Senior Citizens was well-attended. More than 50 seniors were present for a picnic at the Henry Hudson Town Park in Selkirk. Following the meal, Pauline Butler, the 1986 treasurer of the seniors, was surprised with a special cake. Mrs. Butler will be leaving shortly to make her home near her family in Vermont.

Several upcoming events were announced. On Thursday, June 25, the seniors are invited to a 1 p.m. picnic at the Elm Ave. Town Park, given by the Bethlehem Senior Services Office. Tickets are $3. Reservations are required. A second event is scheduled for the following evening, June 26. Plans are being made to attend a dinner and performance of Dihane Carroll and Vic Damone at the Colonie Colosseum. The group will depart from the First Reformed Church, Rt. 9W, Selkirk, at 5:30 p.m. Reservations for either activity may be made by calling Robert Mayo at 767-3006.

Kathy Keenan of South Bethlehem will portray the very proper governess Miss Prism in the Sarah B. Players presentation of the Oscar Wilde comedy "The Importance of Being Earnest." Performances are scheduled for June 18, 19 and June 25 through 27 at 8 p.m. in the St. Joseph's Hall auditorium at the College of St. Rose. Tickets will be available at the door.

Stolen car recovered

A car that was stolen Tuesday night or Friday morning from a Grove St. garage was recovered a day later, Bethlehem Police said.

The car was taken from the parking lot at Jones' Garage and was found on North St., police said.

Coordinators appointed

Mrs. Clifton C. Thorne of Delmar has been reappointed as national chairman of the Annual Fund Campaign for 1987, according to John Lubbe, assistant vice-president for resource development at the State University at Albany. Thorne will be responsible for mobilizing overall alumni support for the fund.

Edward L. Osborn of Delmar, vice chairman for classes, and Dr.

Kendall Birr of Delmar, vice chairman for faculty/staff, were also reappointed. Each vice chairman will be responsible for coordinating other major segments of annual fund support.

Fowler remembered

The Albany County Audubon Society will meet Thursday, June 18, at 8 p.m. at the Five Rivers

Environmental Education Center, Game Farm Rd., Delmar.

During the meeting, the 1987 Conservationist of the Year award will be awarded to the late Barney Fowler, a Times Union newspaper columnist. Fowler's writings stressed the need for conservation and environmentalism in the Capital District.

The meeting will conclude with a screening of slides.

Please Drive Carefully

3 collide at signal; Who had green light?

Three cars collided Thursday morning at the intersection of Cherry and Kenwood avenues and the drivers of two cars claimed they had a green light, Bethlehem Police said.

A Clarksville woman, Karen Kaulfuss, 39, was taken to Albany Medical Center Hospital for head pains, and later released, a hospital spokesman said.

Police said Kaulfuss was driving east on Kenwood Ave. at about 9:15 a.m., and George Chesbro, 78, of Brockley Ave., Delmar, was going north on Cherry Ave. Both told police they had green lights. Police said Chesbro reported Kaulfuss' car pulled out in front of him and they collided.

Police said a third car, driven by Albert Potter, 67, of Forest Rd. Delmar, was struck by Kaulfuss' car after the first collision while he was stopped for a red light in the westbound lane of Kenwood Ave.

Kaulfuss was ticketed for not wearing her seatbelt, police said.

Postal service accepting applications

Applications will be available from Monday, June 22, until Friday, June 26, for anyone interested in taking an examination to become a U.S. Postal Service rural mail carrier for the Ravena area. The area includes the Athens, Coxsackie, Earlton, Feura Bush, Greenville and Westerlo Post Offices.

No injuries in accident

No one was injured Friday when two cars collided on Rt. 144 at the Selkirk Thruway interchange, state police at Selkirk reported.

A Saratoga man was attempting to turn left from Rt. 144 onto the interchange when his car collided with another driven by a Freehold woman, troopers said.

The Saratoga man was ticketed for failure to yield the right of way, state police said.

YES posts hours

The Town of Bethlehem's Youth Employment Service will begin summer hours on Monday, June 22. The offices, located at Bethlehem Town Hall, will be open from 8:30 a.m. to noon, Monday through Friday.

The Youth Employment Service matches job-seeking young people with area residents seeking part-time assistance with lawn, garden and odd jobs around the home. For information call 439-2238.

CLEAR TITLE

When you bought your house, you were guaranteed a clear title to the property. Indeed, the title search was backed up with title insurance, just in case a researcher missed something. Does that mean the title is still clear?

Not necessarily. There may be a lien that would get in the way when you went to sell.

The way this commonly happens is if you've had a construction project and a mechanic's lien or a material-man's lien has been filed to protect contractors and suppliers until they are paid. Problems arise if a contractor doesn't pay all suppliers, or if the homeowner ignores a notice of lien.

It's wise to insist that your contractor and all subcontractors provide lien releases as they are paid and to hold up final payment until you have all the releases. Be sure to include a "labor and materials bond" to guarantee that the contractor will pay his bills and the job will be free of liens.

She keeps getting better

By Lorraine C. Smith

At an age some would consider slowing down, Mary Reich began speeding up. Five years ago, when she was not quite 55, this attractive, energetic Elmsmere resident enrolled in a running program offered by Bethlehem Central schools.

After thorough physical testing, Reich began a walk-run schedule, gradually building up endurance. Encouraged by early successes, with her first race in August, 1982, she took a second place. That year she ran eight races, including the Friehofer's, in which she placed fourth in her age group.

Her winning strategy: "I race very slowly at the back of the pack until about the fifth mile." In the '83 Corning Cup, the escorting police car was unable to idle as slow as she ran. So for the first part of the race, she ran with police escort in front and the ambulance behind. She admits to being embarrassed, but not for long: after passing 50 to 60 runners she came in second in her age group.

Now, having supplied her family with "tons of t-shirts" won as prizes and entry souvenirs from races, Reich has run most distances in competition: 3.5 miles, 5 kilometers and her favorite, the 10 K.

This might have been too much too soon, she concedes. "The more you run, the more chance of injury." When she increased her mileage to include hill workouts, she developed a heel spur, an injury that meant a year of aggravation. Fitted orthopedics helped solve that problem.

Reich has 20 years experience in dance exercises and aerobics. In addition for the windows she designs for Town and Tweed, Inc. Reich is well known in the community for the aerobic classes she taught in her home studio.

Citing some of the more current statistics available, she referred to research indicating that people who exercise regularly won't get osteoporosis. Reich also adheres to diet suggestions of the American Heart Association.

She has adapted current health recommendations to include swimming and biking in her weekly routine. She also stated that evidence emphasizes walking over running, but still she opts for the run. "I'm not about to give it up, I like the way I feel. I like the challenge of pushing my body harder." Despite the physical problems she has had, including a back condition and arthritis in her hip, "After a run, I feel really good. I feel refreshed."

Reich currently is providing data on her lifestyle for a nationally organized study, conducted by Stanford University, on fitness over 50.

Regular exercise results in a strong sense of energy for Reich, as well as providing reliable weight control. "It's hard to stay healthy," she admitted, although attempting something hard won't stop Mary Reich.

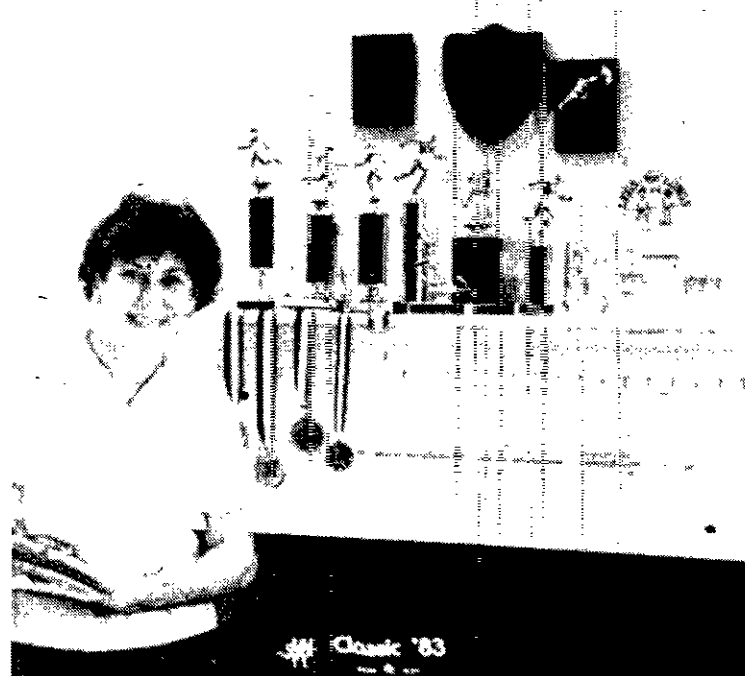

Running doesn't just happen in her day, Reich said. She sets goals for herself, usually five to six miles, four times a week — not every day.

At 5 a.m., getting up is the "last thing I want to do. But if I've made up my mind, I jump into my running clothes. Once I get out there, it's just as clear and crisp. No people, no cars, just beautiful... All the birds, the squirrels."

Running is a form of meditation, she said. "There's a real sense of peace and quiet. I work through my anger, my frustrations."

While she prefers to run alone, Reich also takes satisfaction in running with someone else. And although she won't race unless she is prepared, she races to win. "I'm very competitive. If I see someone, I have to pass."

Reich referred to area races, each of them with its own distinctions: The Turkey Trot, on Thanksgiving Day, "the real big one in Troy, all the kids are home from college;" the Pepsi Challenge, "a nicely run race, well supervised route, plenty of water stops, lots of volunteers to be sure no cars pull out;" the Friehofer's Race, "a special, special race, because it's a woman's race, the very best come to compete."

Mary Reich shows some of the trophies, ribbons, t-shirts and other awards she has earned through running area races.

"I like the idea of women doing all these things," said Mary Reich, mother, former aerobics teacher, window dresser, active church member, runner. "I was born at the wrong time."

No you weren't, Mary Reich.

Everybody's race

limited. And what will make it fun are low entry fees, a requested after-race fare of fruit and yogurt and the congenial atmosphere of running at home with fellow community joggers.

For both fathers and mothers, kids of both varieties, and all others of all ages, the 9:30 a.m. race covers 3.5 miles and begins and ends at Hamagrael Elementary School. It offers prizes in eight age categories, including trophies for first place, and ribbons for second and third. The total of 48 awards provides "a good opportunity to take home a prize."

For 13 years, the Father's Day Race has been a Delmar event. Sponsored by BOU for the past three years, the race represents the organization's philosophy: road races motivate runners, and running is a healthy outdoor activity both in itself and an enhancement to other sports. "Be active," is the message, "Let running be part of that lifestyle."

Running also rewards its participants with cardiovascular fitness, effective weight control and an increased self-confidence, said Salamone, a physical education teacher at Bethlehem Middle School. "While modern culture stresses mental development, we often neglect the physical aspect of our life until you lose it."

Salamone described the 3.5 mile runners' route this Sunday as one cheered on throughout by friendly people. The runners themselves, he said, will be sharing a common goal to finish the race. The best time might be 13 minutes, while a slow steady finish might be 45 minutes. A PR, or personal record, will also encourage each entrant. Always present is the camaraderie of sharing a good time extending from comparing foot-gear to commenting on the weather.

To preregister, call the Elm Ave. Park office at 439-4131, or come to Hamagrael an hour before the race.

Why do they run?

little more, Lane entered the racing circuit.

Lane now runs four to eight races a year with 30 kilometers, or 18.6 miles, the longest. He considers himself a "moderate runner." "Running doesn't consume my life, it's just a part of it."

A trim, well-groomed, easy-going, always involved and interested individual, Lane manages Anderson-Little Co. for New York State. And although his family has never really shared his enthusiasm for running, they each participate in some athletic activity. Nancy, John's wife, is a walker, daughter Kim plays tennis, second daughter Jennifer attends aerobic classes and son Chris plays soccer.

Lane runs year round, in light rains, light snows, wherever he is: "It's ritual," he said. "There aren't many days that you couldn't get out." He referred to the importance of knowing how to dress and how to be prepared for inclement weather, dressing in layers and the right fabrics.

One cheerless week last year, in the midst of persistent snowstorms, Lane admitted to his regular early morning routine. Wasn't that foolish? With all that ice unyielding to anyone's right of way? "No one said that runners are sensible people," he replied.

Yet some sensibility is evident here: Lane limits his runs to four or five times a week because he's learned that every day is too often. He includes a preliminary ten minutes of sit ups, leg stretches and push ups. And while he's never had an injury, "I've had warnings. I listen to my body. I hope I know if I've overdone it or when to take it easy."

From sneakers to state-of-the-art running shoes, from a walk-run regimen to a 25 mile weekly base, Lane is achieving his physical fitness objective, and then some.

Last year he bought a light bike to train for the increasingly popular triathlon which includes a mile of swimming, a 10 K run and a 25 mile bike ride.

At some time in the future, he intends to run a marathon: 26.2 miles. "It's part of a runner's life, a milestone."

Most often placing in the middle third of an event, Lane explained why he races even when he knows he won't win. "No matter how you've run a race, you win something. You've faced the elements, the winds, the cold, the heat and humidity, the pavement... you really feel like you've accomplished something."

Lane admires runners in their 70s and 80s. "The older I get, the more important running becomes. It makes you feel healthy. It's free, it's easy, no-one's around, you're free... You feel good about yourself."

Special meeting set

The Bethlehem Town Board will hold a special meeting on Wednesday (today) at 4 p.m. to consider adding more stop signs in Elm Estates. Two stop signs would be added at the intersection of Peel St. and Fairlane Dr., making the intersection a four-way stop.

At its meeting June 10, the board set a public hearing date for four-way stop signs at University St. and Dorchester Ave. and a 30 mph speed limit in Elm Estates. Residents of the area had argued for more traffic controls in the growing subdivision.

Delaware Ave. accident results, in 1 injury

A wet pavement was the apparent cause when a Delmar man tried to stop for traffic Friday morning but instead slid into the path of another car in the oncoming lane, Bethlehem Police said.

No tickets were issued following the crash.

Edward Languish, 36, of Leonard Pl., Delmar was driving west on Delaware Ave. at about 8:05 a.m., when he tried to stop for traffic, police said. However the van he was driving slid on the wet pavement and swerved into the east bound lane, striking a car driven by Gerald Winn, 59, of Partridge Rd., Delmar.

A passenger in Winn's car, Virginia Winn, 55, was taken to St. Peter's Hospital for neck pains, police said.

Field study planned

An outdoor study of the history and habits of beavers will be held at the Five Rivers Environmental Education Center, Game Farm Rd., Delmar, on Tuesday, June 30, at 7 p.m.

Main-Care hangs in there

By John Bellizzi III

Main-Care won two games last week to stay on top of the Tri-Village Little League major division. The team, managed by Randy Gambelunghe and coached by Mary Jo Blanchard, improved its record to 9-2 by defeating General Electric and Starwood Fund Raising.

Spotlight had a 1-1 week, defeating Starwood and falling to Price-Greenleaf, to bring its record to 8-4. Greenleaf is in third place by a game, with a 7-4 record. Starwood's two losses last week lowered its record to 5-6, good enough for fourth place. GE won one and lost one last week, moving to 3-9, and Professional Kitchen Design holds sixth place with a 2-9 record after falling to GE on Saturday.

Main-Care broke a 6-6 tie in the bottom of the sixth to defeat General Electric last Tuesday, 7-6. GE was behind 6-5 going into the top of the sixth, when Marc Mannella was awarded first for catcher's interference with one out. Three more batters drew walks, scoring Mannella and tying the game.

Jamie Fraser led off the bottom of the sixth with a double, and stole third after Josh Lanni walked. Kory Snyder scored Fraser with a sacrifice fly to win the game. Mike Gambelunghe started on the mound for the winners, striking out eleven and walking eleven, and giving only two hits. Gambelunghe aided his cause with two singles, and Lanni contributed a double. Adam Carpenter singled and doubled, Fraser hit a double and Bob Conway singled. Jon Pesnel was the losing pitcher, striking out three. Pesnel had one of GE's only two base hits that game. Third baseman Sam Stasko doubled in the fifth for the other hit.

Starwood Fund Raising was shut out by Main-Care 9-0 Saturday afternoon. Winning pitcher Kory Snyder pitched a one-hitter, giving up a single in the fourth inning by Duncan McKaskill. Snyder struck out five and walked two batters. Gambelunghe put a home run over the fence with the bases loaded in the top of the fourth for one of Main-Care's four hits. A single by Lanni and two singles by Nick Dubroff made up the remainder of their offense.

Spotlight, which held first place for the first five weeks of the season, started last week off on a good note by defeating Starwood 6-3 on Tuesday. Spotlight's usual pitcher-catcher trio of Dave Miles, John Schaller and Mike Pellettier was in action for that game with Pellettier and Miles on the mound, combining to strike out five and walk five, and Schaller behind the plate. Pellettier and Darren Studler led Spotlight's offense, each with a two-run homer to their name. Miles, Jon Scholes and Jeff Hoefs helped out with singles. McKaskill hit a solo home run in the second inning, but even combined with Matt D'Ambrosi's two singles and Chris Macaluso's single wasn't enough to secure the victory.

Price-Greenleaf outlasted Spotlight Saturday night in a 3-2 ballgame. Pellettier accounted for Spotlight's two runs in the top of the first when he scored himself and Studler with a two-run homer. Brian Garver, Mike Aylward and Mark Herzog crossed the plate for Greenleaf. Aylward threw a two-hitter, giving up Studler's single and Pellettier's home run in the first. Ten Spotlight batters went down on strikes and only one drew a base on balls. Spencer Kirkman had two RBIs, including the winning RBI. He scored Garver on a single in the bottom of the third, and brought Herzog home in the fourth on a triple. Aylward scored the second run on Scott Hasselbarth's single in the third.

GE defeated Professional Kitchen Design 12-1 Saturday afternoon. Ed Luberda was the winning pitcher, striking out eleven, walking one and giving up five hits. Luberda fared well at the plate also, with a single and a three-run homer to his name. Stasko, Chris Stankovich and Jim Gavin each singled twice, and Pesnel hit three singles. For Professional Kitchens, Mike Fabe had two singles and a run batted in, Andy Black a single and a double,

A Spotlight player heads for first in the teams losing effort against Price-Greenleaf, 3-2.
John Bellezzi

and Adam Perry a double.

Stewart's gave Davies Office Refurbishing their first loss on Saturday, 11-2, in the Intermediate League. Adam Hornick was the winning pitcher, relieved by Ronnie Hollins. Davies, at 7 1/2 and 1 1/2, is still first place in the American Division, but tied with Peter J. Verardi Electrical Contracting, first place in the National Division, for the top spot in the league. Davies and Verardi tied each other, and Hoogy's Village Corner earlier this season.

Blue Eagles 1-2 on week

The Bethlehem Blue Eagles Connie Mack baseball team lost two games and won one last week in the second week of their second season.

Randy Gambelunghe began Bethlehem's franchise in the Eastern New York Connie Mack League last spring to accommodate graduates of the Bethlehem Babe Ruth program, and led them to a successful first year. So far this season, the Blue Eagles hold a 2-3 record. They defeated Twin Town 10-2 in their season opener and fell to Latham 5-1 in their second game.

The Blue Eagles met last week's first defeat on Tuesday at Heritage Park, where they fell to Hoosick Valley, 10-4. Joe Ganley and Ed Perry each contributed two singles to Bethlehem's offense.

Saratoga came out on top in last week's contest with the Blue Eagles, but gave up 15 Bethlehem hits. Paul Evangelista and Perry each hit three singles, Doug Pratt doubled and singled, and Josh Weinstein singled twice.

On Saturday, Bethlehem was victorious over Hoosick Falls 6-2. Evangelista pitched a three hitter, striking out nine batters and helping his cause with a single. Pratt led the offense with a triple and a single, and singles were also hit by Ganley and Jeff Boyd.

GE first in Babe Ruth Gold

The Bethlehem Babe Ruth League finished their second week of the regular season on Sunday with General Electric holding down first place in the four-team Gold Division with a 3-1 record.

Owens-Corning and National Savings Bank are tied for second place with 2-2 records. Davies Office Refurbishing is currently occupying the third-place spot, with a record of 1-3.

In the Blue Division, Ted Danz Heating and Air Conditioning is on top with a 2-0 record. Starwood Fund Raising in tied for second place with Hotaling's Market with a 1-2 record.

Highlighting Gold Division action was a "wildly disputed game," according to league president Jim Dillon, in which National Savings Bank beat Owens-Corning, 7-6. The dispute arose because Owens-Corning's centerfielder caught a fly ball off the bat of Pat Doody with one foot on the grass and one foot on the pavement of the cafeteria lot at the Middle School. The ball was declared a home run because the fielder had to step on the pavement to catch it, securing National Savings' win.

John Hoffman was the winning pitcher, relieved in the last inning by Doody, who had a clean home run in addition to the disputed call. Chris Hughes homered for Owens-Corning.

General Electric won two games last week. Losing 3-2 going into the sixth, GE scored two runs on a single by Jamie Dillon to win the game. Alex Hackman got the win, coming in to pitch in the fifth and giving up one hit. Scott Hodge was the losing pitcher. GE had four hits, including Dillon's game-winning single and double and a single by Jim O'Brien. Dillon was the winning pitcher in a fairly uneventful victory over Owens-Corning, 7-4.

Also last week, Doody pitched a strong game for National Savings to defeat Davies, 8-1. Davies also fell to Owens-Corning last week in a 9-4 game.

John Bellizzi

Mantle team goes 2-1

The second week of play for Bethlehem's new entry in the area Mickey Mantle baseball league was another 2-1 week, giving Bethlehem a 4-2 overall record two weeks into the season.

Last Monday, Bethlehem traveled to Latham and won, 5-4. Jon Skilbeck got the win, pitching 3 2/3 innings of no-hit relief, striking out four batters. Chris Pratt batted in three runs for Bethlehem with a single and a double, while John Reagan went 3 for 4 and brought the other two runs home.

Guilderland fell to Bethlehem at Heritage Park last week in a 7-5 ballgame. Skilbeck was again the winning pitcher, striking out 11. Chris Hughes led Bethlehem's offense with a 2 RBI triple. Pinch-hitter Tim Hansen contributed an RBI single.

Bethlehem came back in a 6-0 ballgame last Saturday to tie at 6-6, but Rotterdam broke the tie in extra innings to win the game, 8-7. Reagan again went 3 for 4, and batted in four runs.

Four games are scheduled for the Bethlehem Mickey Mantle team this week. Tuesday at Heritage Park they were supposed to face Southern Rensselaer County (Columbia) in a double header with the Connie Mack team managed by Randy Gambelungh. Saturday, Bethlehem hosts Latham at the Elm Ave. Park, with an 11 a.m. starting time. Sunday, they play a doubleheader, facing Lansingburgh and Watervliet.

A good friend needs a proper introduction.

"Daddy" may be one of the first words your child says and "Hello Daddy" two of the most important. That's because when you teach your child to say "Hello, Daddy" or "Hello, Mommy" on the telephone, you introduce an essential set of skills for communicating in today's world.

Here are a few simple tips to pass on to your children:

- Children should always ask, "Who's calling, please?" and get you if they don't know who the caller is.
- Your children must never tell strangers they are home alone. Teach them to say, "My Dad can't come to the phone right now."
- Tell children it's O.K. to hang up on "funny" calls—when they hear strange noises, rude language, or no sound at all. Encourage them to tell you of unusual incidents.
- Have children, especially younger ones, ask permission before dialing. Make sure they know that, while the phone is a valuable companion, calls do cost money.
- Limit children's phone time—to prevent billing surprises and to allow others to get through.
- Post important phone numbers, including police and fire departments, your doctor, and a neighbor or relative, by all of your telephones. Include your own home and work numbers.
- Prepare for an emergency by rehearsing with your children. Have them memorize their name, address, and phone number.
- The emergency number to teach your children depends on their age. First, they should learn "0", and advance to "911", where available. Trained operators will take it from there.

Why not take the time now to sit down with your children and explain how and when to use the phone. A few quick lessons will lay a foundation of important skills your children can use for a lifetime.

Playing through Europe

By Sal Prividera

"Volleyball is my favorite sport and I always wanted to go to Europe, but I didn't think the two would mix," says Leanne Frye of Delmar. But the two did mix for the Bethlehem High School junior when she left June 15 for Belgium to play volleyball for a month.

Her mother, Linda Frye of Delmar, heard about the Sport for Understanding program and financed the nearly $2,000 trip. "I couldn't think of a better way to expand her world," said Linda Frye, adding that she picked Belgium because it was a French-speaking country.

The young volleyball player will be part of an eight-girl team sponsored by the Sport for Understanding International Exchange representing eight different states including Alaska, North Carolina and Arkansas.

All the girls on the team range in age from 14 to 17 and will be playing against girls the same age, said Frye. The team will participate in a tournament the second day in the Belgium, but the month-long trip will not include only tournaments. There will be practices and bike riding tours of the country as well as some free time.

Leanne Frye said recently she is "excited and scared" about the trip and thinks it will be a great experience. "My friends think it's a big deal. They're probably more excited than I am," Frye added. She plans to do much sight seeing and is looking forward to experiencing the people and atmosphere of another country.

While in Belgium, she will stay with two host families along with one teammate. She is hoping to put her five years of French to use since French is one of the languages spoken.

A varsity team member this season, Frye has played high school volleyball since eighth grade and intends to play again next season for Bethlehem Central. She is not sure how she got interested in playing volleyball, but described herself as a "tomboy" while growing up liking to play "every sport." "I guess I have a knack for a sport I really enjoy," she said.

Welsh Ponies on parade

The Glynhafan Farms Welsh Pony Drill Team recently made its area debut with a performance at Clayton A. Bouton Junior-Senior High School. The team of local riders between nine and 16 years is coached by Karen Wood of Delmar. The group performs a drill that includes pinwheels and pivots to Beethoven's Sixth Symphony.

Glynhafan Farms, a small Welsh pony breeding farm, is owned by Glenda Armstrong of Slingerlands.

The drill team can be seen later this summer at the Bethlehem Public Library and at the Altamont Fair.

Yankees play for American Red Cross

When the Albany-Colonie Yankees play the Reading Phillies on Saturday, June 20, the proceeds from ticket purchases will be used to continue services of the Albany Red Cross.

The ticket price is $5. Fans who purchase the tickets from the American Red Cross will be eligible to win prizes, including tickets to New York Giants football games.

The game will start at 7:30 p.m. A celebrity softball game will begin at 6:30 p.m.

Tickets are available by calling the Albany Red Cross at 462-7461 or by visiting the Red Cross booth on the night of the game.

BTA tournament still hung up on insurance

By Patricia Mitchell

After cancelling its two tournaments last year, the Bethlehem Tennis Association has decided not to hold its spring tourney but is looking at ways to hold the fall open.

Lack of insurance is again the reason behind the cancellations, said BTA President, Michael W. Hampton.

"As it stands right now, it's status quo," Hampton said. "The insurance crisis is still a crisis."

The fall open, usually held the first two weeks in September, has not been scheduled yet, and Hampton said the BTA is hoping to secure liability insurance to schedule the tournament. He said it does not seem possible to schedule a June spring tournament, he said Saturday.

The spring, 1986, tournament was cancelled because BTA's carrier, the Royal Insurance Co., cancelled its $300,000 policy. The fall open was also cancelled because BTA was unable to get insurance.

The matches are usually played at 24 courts at the Elm Ave. Town Park, and the Bethlehem Central Middle School and High School. The town does not require liability insurance at its courts, but Hampton said the BTA board of directors want some insurance for that site.

The school district, however, requires a $1 million insurance, liability policy, he said, and that is where the problem lies.

"We can't get it," Hampton said.

One alternative for the BTA fall open tournament would be just to use the eight courts at the town park, Hampton said, if an insurance carrier is found. The 10 different events would have to be cut back and there would be timing problems with the matches. Hampton also said the town may be a little reluctant to allow the BTA to use the tennis courts three weekends in a row, but that would be solved if the matches were cut.

The spring tournament is usually closed and attracts about 50 to 100 school district residents, and the fall tournament is open with about 100 to 150 players.

Hampton said he welcomed any suggestions on the possibility of a fall tournament.

Computerese

Editor, The Spotlight:

It's clear from the Spotlight article ("The Hahn-Fritts Contest," 6/10) that those plotting against my re-election as Bethlehem's Receiver of Taxes have found it necessary to create an issue to distract voters from their real motive of political retribution. After all, the petty vindictiveness of Town GOP Boss, Bernard Kaplowitz, is not a pretty sight when viewed by voters at face value.

Because Bethlehem's residents will likely be subjected ad nauseam to the alleged "Hahn deficiency with computers," allow me to present some of the facts.

Some eight years ago, the town had to contract with Key Bank for computer support since the town-owned system could not handle the work demanded by my office. The person signing those contracts was none other than then-Supervisor Thomas V. Corrigan. Yes, the same Thomas V. Corrigan who, in the Spotlight article, insinuated that my opponent ranks supreme because he "favors the use of the town's already-installed computer..." It's tough to say no to Bernie Kaplowitz, isn't it, Tom?

Then, during the June 10th Town Board meeting, during discussions about my long-standing request for much-needed additional help, Town Supervisor Robert Hendrick publicly acknowledged that, due to software complexities, it has been difficult to put the tax department on the town's computer system. That statement alone confirms the situation that I have been forced to defend ever since my opponents began setting me up for defeat two months ago.

Let there be no mistake about it. Between now and the September 15 Republican Primary Election, there will be only one truthful reason why my 24 years of service to the people of this town is being challenged. And, the "people on the streets" have known it for months.

Last year I had the courage (and exercised my constitutional right) to support the best Bethlehem candidate, Gary Swan, in the Assembly Republican Primary, which also involved Bernard Kaplowitz as a candidate (who came in last place). I resisted pleas from both Mr. Corrigan and Mr. Kaplowitz to drop my support for Gary.

So far as what we have heard, and what we will hear in months ahead from my opponents, let me apply a computer term: GI-GO (Garbage In - Garbage Out).

Accessibility, please

Editor, The Spotlight:

As a Delmar resident, I have used the Slingerlands post office for several years. The reason for this is that I have a handicap and cannot possibly use the steps of the Delmar post office. Of course I am able to get into and out of the Slingerlands post office.

Now we are told that a new Slingerlands post office is in the planning stage. I appeal to you, being the voice of the people, to use your newspaper and your influence in the designing of this new building. Is it too much to ask that it be built as easily accessible as is the present post office?

Many thanks

Editor, The Spotlight:

The Food Pantries for the Capital District, a network of 28 food pantries that provide emergency food assistance to needy residents of Albany County, is very grateful for the contributions of food and money donated June 5th and 6th. The Grand Union Supermarket in Delmar cooperated by providing space at its entrances and exits for enthusiastic volunteers to invite the shoppers to support these food pantries. Our town can be proud of the generous response of its citizens to these Food Drives in addition to the contributions they are making through their own churches and places of work. Many thanks to all those who earned the "I Gave Food Today" badges to ease the hunger of their less fortunate neighbors.

Not taken for granted

Editor, The Spotlight:

Often we take for granted things like service, institutions and most of all people.

This was a reaction that occurred to me recently as a result of delayed success in locating a book.

Over a period of several years, I've been attempting to obtain a rare book for research. I've gone through local, state and federal libraries, and even written and called Congressmen Stratton and Martin for their intercession with the Library of Congress.

About a month ago, I mentioned my problem (which I'd just about abandoned) to Mrs. Karen Levi-Lausa of the Bethlehem Public Library, in charge of Interlibrary Loan and reserves. As a result of her professional background and skilled handling of my request, I'll now have access to this book here in Delmar.

It occurs to me that those who afford us the opportunity for taking things for granted deserve mention.

Alley healthful

Editor, The Spotlight:

Thank you Ken Ringler (owner of Del Lanes) for turning your business establishment into a safe, wholesome and fun teen center each Friday night. You appear to have succeeded where the town officials and educational professionals have failed. I applaud your decision to ban not only drugs and alcohol, but also cigarettes. This makes the bowling alley a more healthful environment than the schools! Perhaps we should be paying bowling alley taxes instead of school taxes!

Time warp

Editor, The Spotlight

In contending the Twenty First Century does not arrive until 2001, your shy correspondent last week forgets that it takes 12 months to become one year old. The Twentieth Century's 99th year expires at 11:59:59 on Dec. 31, 1999, thus becoming 100 years old with the next tick. Thus begins the Twenty First. When the year 2000 ends on Dec. 31, the new century is one year old.

Any year ending in zero is the incubating first year of any decade. Having run its course, it becomes a "1" — like a baby, one year old. On Jan. 1, 1981, the decade of the Eighties was a year old; the Nineties begins at midnight Jan. 1, 1990.

Let's hope, for his or her sake, your anonymous informant joins with all other inhabitants of this planet at midnight Dec. 31, 1999, to celebrate the birth of the new century. If he or she waits another year, as indicated, the welcoming party might be a little tame by comparison. Not enough believers.

In a letter headlined "Many thanks" from Barbara Haight in the June 10 issue, the names of two of the people thanked were misspelled. They are Judy and Gerald Dievendorf.

Kenwood plans fun

This year's Kenwood Carnival will be held Friday, June 19, from 5 to 8 p.m., at the Kenwood Child Development Center, Rt. 9W. The Carnival is the major fund raising event for the school, which serves more than 250 children. The free event will feature food, drinks, games and prizes. All are welcome.

For information call 465-0404.

10th anniversary

The Albany Area Retired Teachers Association will celebrate its tenth anniversary on Thursday, June 18, with a noon luncheon at the Century House in Latham.

For reservations call 783-5453.

New Tri-Village Area Directory available

The 1987-88 edition of the Tri-Village Area Directory was released last week. More than 300 volunteers have already begun delivery of 5,800 copies to area residents and businesses.

The directory, now in its 56th year, includes a revised area map and data collected from community households. The information supplied by area residents may include the names of husband and wife, principal occupation, adult children living at home, telephone number and address.

The current issue has a red cover. A shortage of volunteers may slow delivery in some areas.

The directory was first compiled in 1931 as a community service project of the First United Methodist Church. The first edition was created under the leadership of the late Mrs. Alton C. Rowe Sr. The book originally sold for $3.50. The current suggested price is $5.00.

Children's concept of selves examined

The Bethlehem Channel at the Bethlehem Public Library will produce a program on self-concept in young children with Dr. Paul Centi on Wednesday, June 24, at 10:30 a.m. The program is planned to allow for audience participation. Parents and others with questions about children's self-concept are invited to participate in the discussion.

Centi is a professor of psychology and director of the counseling center at Siena College. He is also the author of Up With the Positive, Out With the Negative.

The first part of the program will be used to define what self-concept is, how it is acquired and how parents can help their children form the appropriate self-image.

To attend the free program call the library at 439-9314 or the Bethlehem Channel studio at 439-8111.
