There's a new house in town that is going to have a hot time of it. It's a new training facility for the Town of Bethlehem's five fire departments, designed to approximate fires in typical homes in the town.

The facility, in use for over two weeks, is a one-story addition to the town's training tower on Center Lane off Kenwood Ave., near the Delmar Bypass. It has a pitched roof, a maze of rooms, a roof ventilation area and a chimney with a fire place, said Elsmere Fire Department Chief Tom Rudolph.

"It gives us the ability to train more with a setup typical in a Bethlehem residential building," he said.

On July 28, the Elsmere Fire Department held a public demonstration of the new facility. The building was set on fire and extinguish by the fire company. Lt. Peter Merrill narrated for the public during the drill. Following the demonstration there was a question period.

The features of the new "designed like a home" addition will serve important training functions. The pitched roof will allow the firefighters to practice walking on a pitched roof, Rudolph said. The maze of rooms will increase the firefighter's familiarity with local homes. And the chimney and fireplace are used to practice fighting that type of fire.

The roof ventilation area allows firefighters to practice techniques for ventilating homes that are on fire, he said. The roof of a burning building is cut open and ventilated to decrease the spread of the fire by letting smoke and gases escape. The new addition has two holes in the roof that are covered and cut open at drills, he said. The

Stickley fills vacant seat on town board

By Patricia Mitchell

As expected, Blanche Stickley of Clarksville, a Republican candidate for the New Scotland Town Board in this fall's election, has been appointed to the vacant seat caused by the death of Kenneth Tice, a Democrat. The Republicans now hold a 4-1 majority on the town board.

Over the protests of Councilman Herbert Reilly, the Democratic candidate for supervisor, and in the opening shot of this fall's election, Stickley was appointed Friday to fill out the remainder of Tice's town board term, which ends Dec. 31.

Tice, 69, died July 22 of heart failure. He was seeking reelection to the town board this fall on the Democratic slate, a seat he held since 1975.

Both Blanche Stickley and her husband Richard Stickley, who is chairman of the planning board and a member of the zoning board of appeals, said there will be no problem with their town positions because Richard Stickley plans to announce at Wednesday's (tonight's) town board meeting that he will probably resign at the end of the year.

"No one can replace Ken," Blanche Stickley said on Saturday. While she was pleased to be appointed to the board, she said she regretted the circumstances.

Reilly, however, said the appointment at Friday's meeting was "tacky" and just allows Stickley to "stand on (his) grave." Reilly said the move was not necessary and serves no useful purpose. He added that in his 10 years on the board it was the most despicable action the board took.

Stickley was nominated to the board by Allyn Moak, and seconded by Wyman Osterhaut, who is also seeking reelection this fall. Reilly said he had no names to nominate to the seat. If he did, he wouldn't put one up because he has no desire to toss out Tice's nameplate, he said as he slammed the plate on board. He pointed out that when Town Councilman George Hotaling died about six years ago, the seat was left open until the election.

Stickley's nomination passed 3-1, with Reilly dissenting.

Reilly's objection is to be expected, Stickley said, because he

Roads studied in North Bethlehem, Gunderland

By Tom McPheeters

A comprehensive study of the road network in North Bethlehem and southern Gunderland could shed new light both on development in North Bethlehem and Gunderland's proposed "southern corridor."

The study is being commissioned by County Engineer Paul Cooney, who said Friday that he would like to see results by mid October.

That timetable, which even Cooney calls "a little ambitious," could mean a delay for Brookhill Village in North Bethlehem, which is before the town board for a zone change to permit residential and commercial developments. One feature of that project, encouraged by the town, is an extension of School House Rd. south from Krumkill Rd. so that it connects with Blessing Rd. However, Cooney said the county is looking at moving the existing School House-Krumkill intersection, which has problems with sight lines, further west.

This would mean the proposed Brookhill road would have to be moved also, so the county is asking Bethlehem to hold up approval until that issue is resolved, Cooney said.

The county's study, Cooney said, is "a reaction to zoning." Major developments are proposed for both Bethlehem and New Scotland, and it is not unreasonable to expect more traffic in the area. In addition, Gunderland is discussing a new "southern corridor" designed to relieve pressure on Rt. 20.

The new road, which was the subject of a well-attended public hearing two weeks ago, would connect Johnson Rd. and School House Rd. and then link with Rt. 20 near Stuyvesant Plaza. Such a road, said Cooney, probably would not simply reroute local traffic.

"Our feeling, or gut reaction, is that it's going to increase traffic," he said. "But you can't just guess."

Cooney is currently accepting proposals from engineering firms for the study, and said money from the county's highway bond issue is budgeted for the project. However, he said, if the proposals come in too high, the county may ask the towns to pick up some of the cost.

The study will concentrate on County Rt. 204, which is School House Rd., Russell Rd. and Krumkill Rd. County workers have already started making traffic counts, and will prepare a sign inventory and study the physical layouts of the roads. The consultants will study land use plans in the three towns and make projections based on the zoning and development proposals.

"We're looking down the road 10 years or more," Cooney said.

Funds sought for study

Bethlehem will formally ask the D&H Railroad to pick up the estimated $4,000 cost of an analysis of the Rockefeller Rd. bridge, which the town closed July 24.

"We're going to ask them to pay that cost, and I expect they're going to give us a hard time on it," said Supervisor J. Robert Hendrick Friday.

The bridge, built in 1914, was closed after town officials met with a state consultant, who said that there is evident joint failure that could lead to a collapse of the structure at any time. The engineering firm of Byrd, Tallamy, MacDonald and Lewis would do a computer analysis of the bridge to determine exactly how much danger exists.

Hendrick said it is possible that the bridge could be reopened with a three-ton load limit if the study shows that is warranted.

Rockefeller Rd. runs between Delaware Ave. at the Normanskill Bridge to Kenwood Ave. It is a town road, and the town is responsible for the surface of the bridge, although the structure is owned by the railroad. In the past, Hendrick said, the town has not had much success in getting the railroad to maintain the bridge structure.

Cuomo signs water bill

The newly created Albany Municipal Finance Authority will now have to pay taxes to other municipalities and school districts under a bill signed into law last month by Governor Mario Cuomo.

The new law rescinded the authority's tax exempt status. The water authority will pay taxes in Towns of Bethlehem and Coeymans, as well as in the Bethlehem Central and Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Central School Districts.

"I am very happy that this action has occurred," said William Schwartz, superintendent of the RCS School District. "It's in the best interest of the kids, and the school district." Rodger Lewis, RCS business administrator, said loss of the funds "could have had a substantial impact" on the district. Schwartz expressed his appreciation of the legislators' efforts in passing the bill.

covering is made up of the same material used in shingled roofs.

"Like anything else," said Rudolph, "the more you work on it the better you get." Without the proper training facilities there is the risk of someone getting hurt and the training gives firefighters practice on safe ways of completing firefighting tasks, he said.

The addition was designed by Ned Costigan, a member of the Elsmere Fire Department who is an engineer. He said funding for the building came from a $35,000 state grant sponsored last year by Sen. Howard Nolan and the project will use most of the grant money, said Rudolph.

The training facilities are also used to train new department volunteers, Rudolph said, adding that the area departments are always in need of more volunteer firefighters. Each department hold frequent drills, he said.

The O.D. Heck/Eleanor Roosevelt Developmental Disabilities Services Office in Albany is looking for young men and women to share a hobby, sport or talent with a developmentally disabled child or adolescent during the summer.

If you have time to volunteer on a regular basis call 453-1755. Schedules are arranged on an individual basis. Training will be provided.

Four Bethlehem Central High School students will attend the National Music Camp in Interlochen, Michigan this summer. Attending the camp will be Keith Lenden, Michael Moran, Patrick Tully and Meg Bragle.

Lenden, Moran and Tully received scholarships from the camp. Bragle received scholarships from the Village Stage, the Empire State Youth Orchestra and the Tawansantha Award from the Daughters of the American Revolution.

Five Rivers to tiptoe through the flowers

An outdoor study of wildflowers will be held on Thursday, Aug. 13 at 9:30 a.m. at Five Rivers Environmental Education Center, Game Farm Rd., Delmar. The study will focus on the natural history of plants of roadsides and lawns.

For more information, call 453-1806.

Voorheesville to vote

Voorheesville Central School District voters will be going to the polls today (Wednesday) to vote on a proposed $6.802 million austerity budget.

Voting will take place from 2 to 9:30 p.m. at Clayton A. Bouton Junior-Senior High School.

This will be the third budget and the second austerity budget put before voters. The earlier budget proposals were defeated in May and June.

The proposed austerity budget, which is equal in total dollar amount to the contingency budget the district has been operating under since July 1, includes expenditures for contingency items and non-contingency library books and student supplies. District officials said the outcome of the budget vote will have affect on the tax rates for 1987-88. If the proposed austerity budget is passed, parents will not be requested to purchase school supplies.

Earlier propositions approved for the purchase of school buses, student transportation, extra-curricular and after-school programs and teacher supplies will not be affected by the vote.

Helderberg Sun undercuts Spotlight

This is the final article in a series of five articles tracing the history of The Spotlight from its inception in 1955 to its conversion in 1976 from a free-distribution advertising shopper to a full-fledged paid-subscription weekly newspaper. A second series, outlining its development up to the present day, will begin next week. That series draws upon excerpts from an autobiographical collection of newspaper vignettes and anecdotes compiled by a local resident, Nat Boynton, a former editor-publisher of The Spotlight, which will be published in book form this fall.

By Nat Boynton

The Helderberg Sun, first of the zoned editions launched by Hearst's Capital Newspapers to eradicate local weekly newspapers in the Albany area, made its debut in the spring of 1974. The strategy was simple — eliminating print competition would create a monopoly that would force advertisers to pay whatever rates the giant imposed.

The initial geographic thrust was Bethlehem and New Scotland along with the Town of Guilderland, Albany's western neighbor. The target area embraced the entire scope of Spotlight territory plus a substantial portion of the precincts covered by the Allamont Enterprise, Albany County's most venerable (95 years) weekly newspaper. The Enterprise, last of the oldtime broadsheet "hot press" papers, covered Guilderland and the rural "Hilltowns" rising into the Catskills south and west of the Albany metropolis.

Under the concept dictated by Robert Danzig, publisher of the Capital Newspapers, the big high-speed presses on Albany-Shaker Rd. printed the Sun tabloids during unprofitable downtime between the last run of the Sunday Times-Union and the first run of Monday morning's editions. The new paper, bright in a color format, was chock full of scout news, church notices, club items and all the tidbits the city dailies had no room for and the little weeklies thrived on. In each community the Sun appointed a correspondent to write a weekly column integrating club and personal items, usually a homemaker with children and thus tuned to neighborhood organizations and activities.

Each week the Sun appeared as an insert in Monday afternoon's Knickerbocker News and Tuesday's

"If this substantial community, a sophisticated upper-income suburb, had no editorial vehicle of substance, no community channel of its own, why not create one?"

Times-Union. Copies were also stacked in supermarket checkouts, drugstores and newsstands free for the taking. The press run was 11,000, but there was no one to challenge Hearst sales reps proclaiming a 20,000 circulation to prospective advertisers.

To his dismay Bob King, publisher of The Spotlight, realized that Danzig had turned his high-powered Albany sales staff loose in Delmar with instructions to sweep the area clean. The clients who had given The Spotlight its life blood through the years buckled under the onslaught, anesthetized by the sales pitch of three times the circulation for half the cost. King was distributing 6,000 Spotlights with an ad rate of $3 per column inch. The Sun was promising 20,000 copies and $1.50 an inch. Who could fault a one-outlet family store, no matter how loyal to hometown institutions, for signing with the invader?

Up to this time the small independent stores and businesses in Bethlehem and New Scotland had concentrated their advertising in The Spotlight, grateful for the opportunity to avoid the high rates of the Albany papers that were based on the large metropolitan coverage Delmar merchants did not need or want. Now, with the advent of the Albany tabloid insert, local advertisers had a second vehicle, and a far less costly one at that.

By the spring of 1975 Danzig's pilot Sun had become so successful it had spawned two more Suns, which in turn eventually led to a total of five. The small independent papers in Colonie, Cohoes, Rotterdam and East Greenbush were also being wounded by the predator.

By this time, a year after the Helderberg Sun had appeared on the horizon, The Spotlight had been reduced to a shell of its old self. Several times that spring, during rehabilitative absences of the embattled publisher, the Fullers and King's two part-timers in the office were forced to put out 16-page issues, a technical violation of the postal permit that required a minimum of 24. The costs of printing, paper, postage and payroll far surpassed the meager advertising revenue. The paper was sinking deeper into the red each week, and the end was near.

Compounding King's troubles was the death of LeVere Fuller, who had for many years filled the role of editor King had shunned. This departure left the task of putting out the paper in the hands of two Fuller sisters and young Jim, the only son in a sea of daughters. Jim took photos and wrote captions along with his other chores in the business. But Missy (Suzanne) and Annie Fuller were meticulously trained professionals in addition to possessing a high degree of native intelligence, hence the product, while thin, was not only articulate but devoid of grammatical and typographical errors. If it was even more rapid than the Sun, it was far cleaner in appearance than its hastily slapped-together rival.

At that, the Sun had a bright, professional appearance, along with the advantage of being able to use color, however sparingly. Its charter called for strictly "happy news"—community items, personal items, human interest feature articles, local photos of children, students and community volunteers. It was expertly edited by Grace O'Connor, one of the top writers on the Times-Union who was an experienced and highly regarded professional.

During these crises in the life of Robert G. King, I had been living in Slingerlands, far too busy with a consuming number of assignments and commitments as a free-lance writer to take even passing notice of either The Spotlight or the Helderberg Sun. As a career newspaperman who had been temporarily diverted to corporate travail, a form of journalistic prostitution frowned upon by the purists in the brotherhood, I had little reason to give either publication more than a passing glance. Like many newspaper readers, I instinctively discarded all inserts on contact, cursing the arrogance of publishers adding such trash to the daily junk mail, hence I had never read a Sun. I looked at The Spotlight only when someone in the family pointed out an item of interest, such as daughter Betsy's bright teenage countenance in a full-page cover photo of the chairman of Bethlehem Central High School's Wind Ensemble posing with the music director publicizing the upcoming fundraiser to finance an orchestra trip to Toronto.

I had also joined a group of neighbors in another of those classic Slingerlands zoning controversies that embroil homeowners battling land developers threatening their lifestyle. As the designated PR man for the neighborhood association plotting ways to sabotage this intrusion, my job was publicity. It was quickly apparent that the Albany papers had diluted their coverage of our townships, that the charter of the Sun outlawed any reference to controversy or political jousting, and that The Spotlight was, for all practical purposes, comatose.

But wait! If this substantial community, a sophisticated upper-income suburb, had no editorial vehicle of substance, no communications channel of its own, why not create one? Could The Spotlight be revived, upgraded to a bonafide news medium? If it had no editor, would it be interested in acquiring one? If not, would there be a chance, however remote, to buy the paper?

And if all else fails, is the time ripe for a scarred old editor to start a new paper, a hard-hitting newspaper, to give Bethlehem and New Scotland the quality coverage they deserve?

NEXT WEEK: Resuscitation and transformation of a community newspaper.

Gift shop opens in Voorheesville

By Lyn Staff

For Voorheesville resident Nancy Cozy, the grand opening of her gift shop, Country Corners, on Monday, Aug. 10, will mark the beginning of an interesting and exciting enterprise which a year ago was not even thought of by the young homemaker.

Cozy, who moved from Albany last October with her husband Rick and their children, Stephen, four, and Jennifer, six, came back to the area where her family lives "because of the school system."

Although quite satisfied with the move, she was a bit surprised to find no shop in the area where one could run to buy a last minute gift, or something interesting to brighten up the house. Finding it inconvenient to travel either into Guilderland or Delmar to pick up such items, Cozy became convinced that Voorheesville "needed something."

As the mother of two young children, she also felt that she needed something — a diversion from the everyday routine that might even provide a little extra income without forcing her to leave her children to go back to work.

It wasn't until the former bank teller read an article in the January Spotlight business supplement about Service Corps of Retired Executives (SCORE) that she decided owning her own business might provide a solution to both quandries.

After contacting SCORE, which steered her in the right direction, and seeking advice from members of the Helderberg Business and Professional Women, Cozy decided to open the gift shop offering quality handmade goods in the newly renovated store at 34 So. Main Street.

After deciding on a location, stocking the shop became the next order of business. Although she is the first to admit that she herself is not "crafty," Cozy was quick to say that she is an expert at buying handcrafted items as her well-decorated house will attest. She soon discovered finding craftspeople interested in providing her with goods to sell was no major problem. Her first ad for artisans which ran in local papers brought over 100 replies, harvesting 50 avidly interested suppliers. Although many of the talented artisans are from the immediate area, some are from as far away as Clifton Park and Saratoga.

"I even have one woman who will be travelling to the Amish country bringing back handcrafted items including dolls, rugs, quilts and furniture," Cozy said.

With the backing of a virtual army of craftspeople, Country Corners will offer a wide selection of handmade items from dolls to sweaters, stuffed animals to furniture, silk flowers to fabric albums with a large supply of baby items, home decorations and wooden toys. There will also a year 'round Christmas corner.

According to Cozy many of the crafters will not only accept special orders but offer a variety of unique services as well, including stenciling walls and providing flowers for weddings. In an effort to advertise their specialities, Cozy plans to have a community crafters' board.

Although she is well aware of the numerous craft fairs and bazaars which dot the area, Cozy doesn't fear the competition, pointing out such events are scattered and seasonal and her business will operate year 'round. To draw customers, she also plans on keeping prices reasonable and will be open on weekdays, Saturdays and possibly even an evening or two if business dictates. She said she would like to offer craft classes once she gets settled if space and time permit.

Although she has a good number of suppliers at this point, Cozy said she is always looking for something "new and different" and welcomes calls from interested crafters at the store, 765-2325.

During the time following the grand opening she plans on being open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Monday through Friday, and from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. on Saturday. Soon after, though, her weekday hours will change with the store open 10 a.m. to 2 p.m., and 4 p.m. to 6 p.m.

Cozy invites everyone to stop by and take advantage of the grand opening festivities.

Youth employee guidelines set

By Sal Prividera

Guidelines for the temporary summer youth employment program in the Village of Voorheesville were established last week by Mayor Edward Clark.

Clark told the Voorheesville Village Board last Tuesday that the new guidelines would avoid misunderstandings about the program. Under the new guidelines, summer youth temporary employees must be residents of the village and will be paid only for time worked. Also, there can only be one summer youth temporary employee per family under the newly established guidelines. Children of full-time village employees are still eligible for the program, said Clark. There will be no exceptions to these rules, the mayor added.

Summer youth employees must

be high school students age 16 or over and will only be employed for two years. However, these requirements will be flexible depending on the needs of the village, said Clark.

The program gives village youth seven weeks of employment in the village only. "I want kids to understand it's not a lifetime commitment," said Clark. The mayor wants the rules to be available to the young people before they begin working for the village.

All temporary youth employees will receive a copy of the new guidelines with their next pay check.

In other business, the board of trustees:

- Created a one year, part-time position to assist the village clerk, treasurer, the codes enforcement officer and department of public works with general office duties.

- Set a Sept. 16 hearing date for meeting with the New Scotland Town Board to discuss a petition to annex 14 acres of property into the village. The property, behind the old salt shed area on Voorheesville Ave., is owned by Mary Regina Gary.

- Received notification that effective July 1 tipping fees for waste removal increased to $20 per ton from $6 per ton.

- Approved the sale of a 1951 Mack fire truck that was replaced by the village's new fire truck.

- Extended the deadline for water bill payment to Sept. 30.

Teuten receives Conservative backing

David Teuten, Voorheesville Central school board clerk, is expecting to receive the Democratic Party endorsement for the New Scotland Town Board, party officials said.

Teuten received the Conservative Party endorsement Thursday night, he said. He is expecting to receive the Democrats' endorsement at their caucus Monday to fill the open candidacy caused by the death of Kenneth Tice, who died on July 22, party members said.

Democratic Party Chairman Thomas Dolin could not be reached for comment.

This fall's election will be pivotal and will probably see some hard campaigning. With Republican Town Supervisor Stephen Wallace deciding not to run for reelection this fall, the Democrats have their best chance in years to gain the supervisor's position.

However, the choice to find another candidate for Tice is critical, since he was a top vote-getter. One of two Democrats on the five-member town board, Tice held the seat since 1975 and was seeking reelection this fall. The Democrats need to hang onto their two seats, but the appointment Friday of Blanche Stickley, a Republican town council candidate, to the board to fill out the remainder of Tice's term could shift the balance of power to favor the Republicans more.

Teuten is in his second year of his second five-year term on the school board. He is an analyst in planning and budget administration for the state Department of Public Service. A 14-year resident of Voorheesville, Teuten lives on Bedford Ct.

DON'T FORGET

Chairman Stickley

Top planner will probably resign at year's end

By Patricia Mitchell

Richard Stickley comes into a local coffee shop slightly out of breath from being a few minutes late. Apologizing, he says, "Well, it's a busy life."

It is a busy life for Stickley, now in his 20th year on the New Scotland Planning Board, the last four of those years as chairman. He also sits on the zoning board of appeals. After 31 years, he is a life member of the Onesquethaw Fire Company, captain of the fire police and a former ambulance driver. He is in his second year as commander of the Fort Cralo American Legion Post in Rensselaer, and plays in the post's Yankee Doodle Band. With a special type of blood, he donates it for newborn babies who are underweight. He is also a member of the Albany Society of Engineers, and in between, he helps out his elderly parents living in Rensselaer.

Stickley's future and the future of the planning board may be in question as he intends at Wednesday's (tonight's) town board meeting to announce that he probably will be stepping down at the end of the year. He talked to Supervisor Stephen Wallace earlier in the summer, before his wife Blanche was endorsed for a town board candidate and appointed to fill the vacant seat caused by the death of Kenneth Tice, he said Saturday, that 20 years on the planning board was enough, but he was asked to stay until Wallace completes his term.

Blanche Stickley was appointed to the vacant seat Friday. Even though the town board has tried not to interfere in planning board business, the appointment of Blanche Stickley, a Republican candidate in the November election, has been protested by the remaining Democrat and supervisor candidate Herbert Reilly, and at a special meeting Friday, he called for Richard Stickley's resignation. The resolution did not receive a second and was not discussed.

The Stickleys said, however, that they do not expect the fact that they are married to cause a conflict with their town duties.

Stickley's move comes at a time when the planning board is expected to get busier. Faced with an expected wave of new development and growth, the planning board will soon be hiring a part-time planner to update the zoning ordinance. Issues such as the length of cul-de-sac roads, industrial zones next to railroad tracks, encouraging businesses and strengthening enforcement policies have all been discussed.

Those issues may be overshadowed by a 350 to 400-unit development planned for 109 acres on the east side of Hilton Rd., on part of the former Tall Timbers Country Club that is expected to be proposed soon. It is the largest development ever proposed for New Scotland, and at a recent planning board meeting Stickley was cautious about carefully planning that development and how it will affect the future of the town.

Stickley, 58, now works as a part-time bus driver for Bethlehem Central School District, driving mostly special education children to Altamont and Niskayuna. He retired a few years ago after 38 years with the New York Telephone Co. in Albany.

He doesn't think he has crammed too much into his life, rather he sees it as a blessing that he can.

As planning board chairman, Stickley is a key figure in the town, shaping and planning its future. When he was appointed to the board, Stickley said he was approached but he had no idea his name would be nominated. He said he was appointed to get representation from Clarksville on the board.

"I was glad to try," Stickley said in a recent interview.

He and Blanche, his wife of 38 years, moved to Clarksville about 35 years ago. They first lived within the hamlet, and soon after that they built their ranch home on South Rd. in Clarksville.

The hamlet has changed since the Stickleys moved there. June's Place used to be an old hotel, he said. Next to the post office was Katie Smith's Grill, there was a blacksmith's shop and a gas station across from the trailer park, and a hardware store and a drug store have come and gone.

"Clarksville is very slow to change," he said.

Back in 1967, Willis MacIntosh was town supervisor, and Robert Husband and Peter Ten Eyck were members of the planning board. Stickley said the board made much less complicated decisions, and there were fewer and less stricter regulations on development from the state and the county. Water and sewers were also considered more of a luxury than a necessity.

"Twenty years ago, (water and sewers) were a less strict requirement. There has been tremendous change. The problems didn't seem as severe," he said. "I could see (the work) increasing as time goes on."

Complaints and public concern also increased as the planning board became busier. Stickley remembered a subdivision proposed in back of New Salem that neighbors objected to. The board ordered several changes to be made in the subdivision, but they couldn't deny it because all regulations and uses had been met. "There are certain laws that we have to go by," he said.

The fourth section of Heldervale also caused a lot of concern a few years ago, Stickley said. The planning board has even gone to court a few times because of decisions, and he remembered the Checker Flag Car Sales on Rt. 85 in New Scotland when Alfred Cook won a state Supreme Court decision about seven years ago that allowed him to operate the lot where a fence company is now.

Every case that comes before the planning board is very important to the applicant, and sometimes neighbors, no matter how minor it may seem, Stickley said. The public has to be involved in the decision process, and he said he has seen it done several ways.

"Some of this public concern is handled very diplomatically. Some of this is a lot of screaming. Sometimes a group will come in with a lot of exuberance, but without facts that won't hold up in a court of law," he said.

Presiding over the twice-monthly planning board meetings, Stickley is surrounded by the seven other members, with the zoning attorney and board consultant. He uses his quiet voice to make sure all facts on issues are brought up, to allow each board member to ask necessary questions, and for any residents present also have their chance. If a session becomes too unruly, and someone doesn't get their chance, Stickley will first speak to those present and if he has to, resort to a gavel to keep order.

He sees his job on the planning board as putting together the town to make sure it is all compatible — such as not having big trucks driving through residential areas. Development in the town will have to be done in an orderly fashion, Stickley said, using all the resources that are available.

As the planning board handles more development, their job becomes more sophisticated, Stickley said. "You cannot stop change, you can control it."

Interest in the planning board also increases, he said, and as more people move into New Scotland, the less they want it to change from its rural character. "That goes on and on constantly," he said.

While all residents want to keep as much residential areas in the town as possible, Stickley said taxes would be awfully high without development.

One problem that stands in the way of development, he said, is the lack of public water. While some areas have water districts, Stickley said he feels those districts could be combined. The next problem, however, will be sewage; Stickley said the limestone in the soil throughout much of the town is not good for drainage.

For the future, Stickley said the town's water commission is looking at ways to develop more public water. The public should also be included in on this process, he said.

"You have to have a good water supply," Stickley said.

The planning board is also considering a request to increase the industrial district in Feura Bush on the Bethlehem town line, and may eventually make a recommendation to the town board. "The town needs businesses in there," Stickley said.

A native of Rensselaer, Stickley served about 14 months in the Navy at the end of World War II, first in the Atlantic and then in the Pacific, on ships that brought troops home from the war. He said, though, he considers the people he helped to bring home the real veterans of the war.

He retired several years ago from the New York Telephone Co., where he worked as a central office foreman of a crew that maintained equipment in the switching office. After 34 years, modern technology took over and he joined a special service group that took care of special data lines and circuits, similar to those used by the state lottery.

The Stickleys have two children. Their son, Richard, is in the Navy based at New Orleans serving on a submarine. Their daughter, Caroline, now lives in Rotterdam with her husband, and is teaching English in the Middlebury School. District while she works on her master's degree at the College of St. Rose.

is the the lone Democrat on the board and he has to take some kind of stand. She said Reilly would have done the same thing (appointed a Democratic board member) if the situation was reversed.

This fall's election, with Republican Town Supervisor Stephen Wallace not seeking reelection after 14 years, could be a pivotal one. The Republicans are seeking to maintain their majority on the town board and control of town hall. The Democrats have their best chance in years to capture the supervisor's race; but, with Tice's seat now gone to a Republican, there is a possibility that a Democratic supervisor will be working with a Republican town board.

In her race for town board, Stickley will have the benefit of name recognition now that she is serving. Stickley said she thinks her appointment will help her election chances. Her appointment will also be an asset, she said, to communication with the Clarksville area.

The appointment will not affect the supervisor's race, Reilly said, but if he is elected, there is a possibility that he will be working with a Republican board.

Reilly said he plans to sit off to the side at future meeting of the town board.

Reilly called for Richard Stickley's resignation from town duties. Richard Stickley said he plans to announce at Wednesday's (tonight's) town board meeting that he will probably be leaving his position at the end of the year.

Stickley said Saturday that he told Wallace earlier in the summer, before Blanche Stickley received the endorsement or appointment, that he thought 20 years on the planning board was enough, but Wallace asked him to stay until the end of the year.

A native of New Scotland and a graduate of Voorheesville High School, Blanche Stickley previously served as a manager for the New York Telephone Company in the department that handled records for tax and the public service commission.

Stickley is secretary of the New Scotland Republican Committee, serves on the board of Child's Hospital and volunteers in the hospital's gift shop. She is also a member of St. Stephen's Episcopal Church in Elsmere.

She was a PTA president, a volunteer at Clarksville Elementary School, and a Girl Scout leader and organizer.

The Stickleys have two children. Their son Richard is in the Navy, based in New Orleans. Their daughter Caroline is a teacher and resides in Rotterdam.

Karian joins Sawchuk

Sonya Karian of Glenmont has joined the staff of Pamela Sawchuk Associates, a public relations agency, as a graphic artist in the production department. She was formerly a graphic and paste-up artist at Comptype in Albany and is a graduate of the Junior College of Albany.

Ordinance changes considered

By Patricia Mitchell

Some changes may be in the works for New Scotland's zoning ordinance.

The planning board will ask the town board to consider strengthening zoning enforcement and for input on the length of cul-de-sac roads. The requests are expected to be considered at the town board's next meeting Wednesday (today) at 8 p.m.

There is a gap in the enforcement provision of the ordinance because it has nothing that forbids outside storage of materials, zoning attorney John Bailey told the planning board last week. While there is not a tidal wave of problems, he said, there are some properties in the town that are "not being maintained very well," and the town wants them cleaned up. The town board could consider a resolution strengthening enforcement of outside storage of materials at least for residential areas, he said.

Board member John Loucks said the enforcement could include how many unlicensed motor vehicles are permissible.

In another request to the town board, planning board Chairman Richard Stickley said the planners are being "inundated" with requests for longer roads than allowed under the zoning ordinance. The zoning ordinance limits cul-de-sacs to 500 feet in length on streets with at least six but not more than 15 homes, and while the planning board can grant variances for longer lengths, the planners said there are some bad feelings from the town board when variances are granted to developers, and that part of the code could be out of date.

The planners can recommend changes, but the town board has the authority to change the ordinance.

In a related matter, Voorheesville developer Peter Baltis said without preliminary approval from the planning board on a subdivision he is proposing on Swift Rd., he cannot commit himself to funding the extension of the water district. He said he has been put off the last time because his subdivision includes a 1200-foot cul-de-sac. The town board has approved extension of the water district to include Baltis' Swift Estates and Swift Rd. Inc.'s Scotland Hills subdivisions, with the developers paying for the extension and the upgrade of the water system.

About a month ago, Baltis appeared before the planning board asking for preliminary approval on his subdivision, but he said he was asked to come back because the building inspector was absent. Appearing at the July 14, meeting, Baltis was again asked to come back when a new cul-de-sac requirement is worked out.

"I have nothing up to now," Baltis said.

Ronald LaBerge Jr. of LaBerge Engineering, representing Swift Rd. Inc. said that the developers and the town are working on the extension of the district. He asked the planners for final approval of Scotland Hills, and a public hearing was set for Tuesday, Aug. 11, at 7:30 p.m.

In other business at last Tuesday's meeting, the planning board:

- Approved a modification on a previously approved subdivision. James Coffin received approval in 1981 for five lots on Rt. 85 on old Town of Bethlehem water district property across the front. He received permission to take 50 feet off the back of three of his lots to make it easier designing the rest of the property he owns in back. The land borders on wetlands, and he needed to leave a border around it, but it would have been difficult to design without taking the 50 feet off the back of the three lots.

- Approved a special use permit for Christian Music Ministries of Feura Bush to build on seven acres on Copeland Hill Rd. near Meads Corners. The permit was requested by William Wormer, who said he and his wife own 46 acres. They will lease the land to the group while they own the building, Wormer said.

The next meeting of the planning board is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. Tuesday, Aug. 11. Besides the Scotland Hills subdivision, two other public hearings on the agenda are for a special use permit for Mountain View Evangelical Church to build on Rt. 155, and for a two-family house on Rt. 85, just west of New Salem.

Madelon Pound's adventures on the way to West Virginia

EDITOR'S NOTE: This epilogue to Madelon Pound's journey by horse-drawn buggy from New Scotland to her nephew's home in West Virginia was written on her return home. Her last report, published June 24, brought her, her horse Black Beauty ("B.B.") and her dog Bonnie to a triumphant family reunion at Sleepy Creek, W. Va. From here B.B. and she would eventually go different directions — the horse to pasture in Tennessee and the owner back home to New Scotland. But first, more adventures were in store for the travelers.

By Madelon Paterson Pound

On the 27th and last day of our journey we triumphantly trotted into Mountain Morning lane with bells on and a broom attached to the rigging signifying "mission Accomplished." We had travelled over 520 miles averaging 24 miles a day through beautiful country and meeting interesting people. It was time to go home to be one-third of a celebration given by my son and his family at the site of his spacious fields and pond. The other recipients of such an honor were my newly-born grandson, son of Scott and Dona Heezer Herzog, and the graduation from high school of my granddaughter Lynne.

Before leaving B.B. in West Virginia I must tell you that we experienced the only trauma in all those days of so-called danger to life and limb on the road. My nephew had hauled a one-horse trailer from Tennessee. It was a neat vehicle, as black and shiny as B.B., with even a fan for his comfort. His comfort? He stepped in docilely enough but when his halter was tied down, the rear gate shut and the wheels gathered momentum he revolted with all of his horse power. Even though his father was a race-horse, this kind of motion and speed was not his thing. He kicked, lurched, bit and ended up in the position of a backwards somersault.

Okay for us humans but fearful for a horse. We opened the gate expecting broken legs and bloody gashes but somehow B.B. disentangled himself and, still green-eyed with terror, started nervously grazing on the hillside. The next day we thought that B.B. was "fit to be tied" while my niece tried to sedate him. He wasn't. We were — and the Tennesseans went off with an empty trailer.

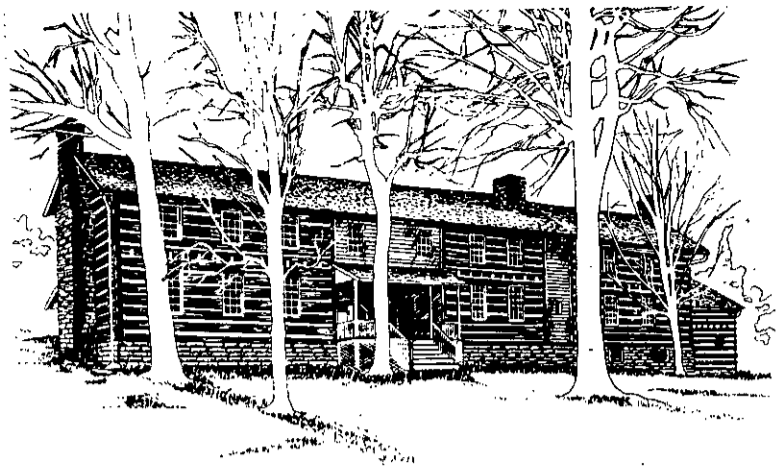

How The Tail of the Horse Broke the Shaft of the Buggy and Led Me to a Tale Entitled "From Texas to Tennessee", written by an Amish adventurer.

After the New Scotland celebration I returned to find that B.B. had recovered and needed exercise. Harnessed and ready to go, I asked a boy to hold him for a few minutes. A phone call later I found that B.B.

had sat down and in regaining his footage had broken one of the buggy shafts. Nevertheless a make-shaft repair job enabled me to drive B.B. one more time along the country roads of wonderful, wild West Virginia.

The next day B.B. stepped gingerly into a spacious stall. With a few kind words, without ropes or sedatives, he soon settled down to the 12-hour, 680-mile trip to Cottonwood. As did I. The driver of the goose-neck trailer, Bob Macintosh, was so interesting that dozing seemed unnecessary. The Shenandoah Valley and the Blue Ridge Mountains would have been easier than the Poconos and the Appalachians, and glimpsing the rural roads from time to time made me long to be on my journey again. But home and family were calling and there was the broken shaft.

Thirty miles away from Cottonwood there are two brothers. One is a saddle and harness maker and the other a carriage blacksmith, like my Grandfather Paterson. As Truman repaired the shaft we talked of my journey and he told me that his father had taken a similar journey and would like to talk to me — except that he was now on his way to Indiana. However there was one copy left of "Texas to Tennessee in 1983." How interesting to read of Mr. Borntage's route along the roads with some of his family, including a two-year-old granddaughter. They travelled 970 miles, driving 29 days, averaging 33 miles a day. We travelled 528 miles, driving 22 days, averaging 24 miles a day. They had two teams of horses — Sandy and Dandy and Lady and Ribbon. We had one horse and I know from my experience in Lancaster County, Pa., that B.B., even though he tried, could not keep up with an Amish team.

How A Lost Shaft Led to a Gentleman's Restroom in a Restored Stage Coach Inn.

I was ready to leave the sleek, black stranger from the north with his new-found friends. The four-footed ones had led him through the fields to the ponds and the two-footed ones had become acquainted with his grooming and harnessing. However, I was encouraged to take one last drive. It seemed that there was an annual fair about 20 miles away. Why not? My nephew loaded the buggy on an open trailer for his wife to pull behind her car and we asked B.B. to step into a comfortably-sized trailer. No trauma this time, but in transporting the buggy the shaft became loose of its tie-downs and was lost.

What use is a buggy without a shaft? Nonetheless we continued on our way. The organizers of the Wynnewood Fair had advertised horse and buggy rides so we expected some fellow drivers to be there, but due to a tooth extraction Mr. MacFarlane couldn't attend. However his wife, a charming woman reminding us that southern hospitality is still being practiced, told us of a shaft that we might use. We would find it she said, up on yonder hill, back of the inn and a bit to the left, on the wall of the men's restroom.

While my nephew unloaded our shaftless buggy my niece and I made our way to the men's room. Amid startled but polite glances we lifted the shaft from the wall, being thankful that it was not nailed down. Thankfully, too, the ball and clamp arrangement was the same as on my grandfather's buggy and we proceeded to give children rides up and down the road accompanied by the Nashville Sound. B.B. was once more trotting down Memory Lane.

This same road had been an Indian trail. Following the trail on horseback in 1776, a hunter and explorer, Issac Bledsoe from southwest Virginia, was afraid to dismount for fear of being trampled to death by the hundreds of buffaloes that had come to lick sulphur from the nearby spring. He later returned, built a stockaded fort to protect himself and his family more from the Indians than the buffalo, and cleared the land. He made fields from woodlands as did the Bailiwick Ranch owners near Catskill and Shiver Youth Hostel family in Pennsylvania (only they cleared the land of junked cars.) The Woodland Indians had lived in a fortified village near Bledsoes' Lick, complete with earthen parapets, walls and mounds. After nine years they succeeded in killing Isaac, by lying in ambush as he worked in his field. He is remembered by the historical association that has restored the near-by stagecoach inn and mineral springs resort. The native Indians are remembered by their principal ceremonial mound, still visible from State Highway 25.

Wynnewood was named for the builder in 1828 and conveyed to the state of Tennessee 143 years later by a grandson, George Winchester Wynne. Andrew Jackson often visited here, attracted not so much by the medicinal qualities of the mineral waters as by the race course. He usually brought a favorite thoroughbred to run against one of Wynne's horses. The Inn is an imposing structure made of native oak, walnut and ash logs, some of them 32 feet long — the largest still surviving log building to be erected in the state of Tennessee. The rooms are tastefully and authentically furnished and made me think how interesting it would have been to save the Reid Hotel on the former plank road at the corner of New Scotland's Rt. 85 and 85A. It may not be too late to save some of New Scotland's heritage. Even though the rest room was not completely authentic we were happy that it had been decorated with just the right era of buggy shafts.

The next day we drove to Lafayette where a woman from Texas had recently settled. Out of a falling-down barn with spectacular beams, even larger than Wynne's, she dredged a shaft that fit the measurements of our Paterson Buggy.

Assured and pleased that Grandpa Pats' buggy will be enjoyed by his great-grandson and family and having travelled over 3,000 miles by land — I flew home.

Tarkelson polishes area tennis players

By Linda Ann Burtis

Credentials for teaching tennis at the Voorheesville recreation program are the standard ones - a good knowledge of the game, along with an ability to instruct children and adults. But the teacher that the village hired this year for its popular summertime program was far from standard.

Amy Tarkelson, who was ranked 83 in the world three years ago, is just completing six weeks as Voorheesville's head instructor, coaching more than 60 children and adults at the local courts behind the village hall.

The 24-year-old Tarkelson, a player since the age of 10, is a newcomer to the Albany area, by way of Rod Laver's tennis camp in Florida. Among her triumphs is a win over Helena Sukova, runner-up to Martina Navratilova at last year's U.S. Open. The young woman has played at many of the great watering holes of the sport, including the courts at the Italian Open and on the grass at Wimbledon.

Many great players go on to become great teaching pros. And regular folks can take lessons from them. For a price. But for six glorious weeks this past June and July, Tarkelson's expertise came free of charge to Voorheesville residents. She taught little lads who arrived on the first day incapable of hitting a ball on the strings of their rackets. She taught women with hard-hitting forehands that backhands could also be a weapon.

Most of her students had no idea that they were going to learn from a world class player. And their modest teacher rarely let on. She simply went about her business of teaching tennis basics to beginners - forehands, backhands, match play and scoring. With the help of her two assistants, John Meacham and Chris Stevens, Tarkelson studied hitting styles and passed on advice.

Advice that she has learned from the best. When she was the number one singles and doubles player for Wakefield High School in Fairfax, VA, the nationally ranked Tarkelson began working with Graham Stillwell, a former top tennis player in the world. She drilled hard with the demanding coach and her game consistently improved. When the Schenectady resident was 16 years old she toured Europe as a member of a United States national team.

"It's hard, being a junior. You grow up quick. You learn how to make airline reservations by yourself. You are housed with people you don't know well for weeks at a time," Tarkelson explained, referring to those early years. "Everything is second to tennis. We ate dinner at 9 or 10 o'clock at night. I didn't go to parties or sleep overs. You miss out on a lot. You don't have that many friends."

She remembers that she burned out at 16. "I did terribly in tournaments and I didn't want to practice." The episode passed, with the young player recognizing that she had been playing for her mother's approval, rather than for her own pleasure. "I had a real tennis mom. She is very competitive."

In 1981 Tarkelson enrolled at the University of South Carolina on a tennis scholarship. She played third or sixth singles at a time when USC finished sixth in the nation. After two years, tired of morale problems with the team, she decided it was time to go on the circuit.

Capitaland Racquet and Health Club's newest pro immediately did well when pitted against the best women in the world. She climbed in her rankings, playing the European tournaments and Virginia Slims events.

But it was a short-lived career. She had to pull out of the U.S. Open because of a foot injury. Shortly after, Tarkelson broke her foot and then re-injured it. Married in 1984, she and her husband, Kent, assistant golf pro at the Albany Country Club, have already lived in Colorado, Oklahoma, and Florida.

Her goals are different now. She is playing area tournaments, attempting to be ranked number one in the Eastern Tennis Association women's category. "I would also like to get some good junior programs going," she added.

That bodes well for tennis players in Voorheesville. Because, if they'll have her, Tarkelson promises to be back.

Area athletes bring home medals

Summer is at its halfway mark. The first weekend of August was, in keeping with tradition, marked by the Empire State Games. This year athletes from the Bethlehem, Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk and Voorheesville school districts all turned in solid performances for the Adirondack Region.

Wrestlers were among the most successful of area athletes in competition. Chris Saba, in his second consecutive trip to the games, sliced through competition to win the gold medal. Jeff Genovesi, a Voorheesville graduate and standout wrestler at school, earned a silver medal. Jerry Baranska, who competed in the open division, and his brother Tim Baranska, a scholastic division competitor, each left Syracuse with silver medals. Tim also placed fifth in freestyle competition. Mike Mosley of Delmar won a bronze medal. Shannon Cowles participated in wrestling, but failed to make the medal round.

In track and field events, all the glitter belonged to local women. Kelly Ross won the silver medal for a 5'6" high jump. She brushed against the bar on three attempts at 5'8", a jump that would have been her personal best. Connie Pogue placed fourth in the 200-meter dash, and Kathy Saba placed sixth in the 10-kilometer run. Michele Kirker, John Dacatur, Harold Folmsbee and David Herrington all participated but failed to win medals.

Lynette Stracke, a varsity soccer player at Bethlehem Central, came home with a bronze medal hanging from her neck in her third consecutive year of play on the girls soccer team. Eric Drometer played on the boys soccer team, which failed to win a medal.

Todd Wright, a bulky 6'8", 230-pound senior at Bethlehem Central, became the first Bethlehem youth to be a member of the boys scholastic basketball team. The team won one game and lost two, including one loss to the eventual champion. Wright saw limited playing time because the Adirondack coach substituted frequently to give all players equal playing time. In the final game, Wright grabbed a rebound following a missed foul shot with less than 30 seconds remaining and was fouled after coming down with the rebound. He hit the first end of a one-and-one to secure the victory. In that final game, the Adirondack squad came back from a 24-point deficit at halftime.

The area was best represented by local athletes in the swimming events. In the masters division, Jim Poole, who competed in the 35-39 age group, won a gold medal in the 400-meter intermediate and a bronze medal in the 200-meter intermediate. Ken Lyons, who competed in the 45-49 age group, placed third in the 50-meter backstroke and fifth in the 50- and 100-meter freestyle races. MaryLou Shultz set Empire State Game records for the 45-49 age group while winning the gold medal in the 100-meter freestyle and 400-meter intermediate. She won silver medals in the 50-meter fly and 200-meter freestyle events and a bronze medal in the 400-meter freestyle.

Voorheesville swimmers did well in competition. In the open division, Kevin Tyrell won two bronze medals as part of relay teams. In the scholastic division, Angela Washburn won a silver in the 400-meter freestyle, and Cathy Jo Dedrick placed sixth in the 100- and 200-meter backstroke. Erin Kate Martelle and Seth Rose both competed in the games as part of the swim team.

Among the Delmar swimmers who won medals was Justin Baird, who won bronze in the 200-meter freestyle for the second consecutive year. Baird also placed fifth in the 400- and 1,500-meter freestyle events. Chris Drew placed seventh in the 50-meter freestyle and seventh in the 100-meter free style. Patrick Fish placed eighth in the 200-meter butterfly. Jennifer Mosley placed in the 100-meter freestyle. Lisa Ogawa, Susan and Kristen Mallery and Christopher Nolan also competed in the games.

Chris Saba, a student at Bethlehem Central High School and a member of the Adirondack Region Greco-Roman Wrestling Team, won a gold medal at the Empire State Games in Syracuse. Saba won all 6 matches at the 132 pound weight class with pins or major decisions and defeated Jeff LaMountain in the finals.

Little League play ends

By John Bellizzi III

And so ends another Little League season. After several weeks of successful post-season play, the 1987 Tri-Village Little League 12-year old All-Star team, coached by John Black and Don Comtois, was eliminated last Tuesday from their double-elimination tournament competition.

The Tri-Village team lost Tuesday to Colonie in the semifinal round of the District Major League All-Star Tournament. The final score after seven innings of play was 3-1.

"It was a game that anybody could have won and nobody deserved to lose," said Black. "The two teams were very competitive and evenly matched. If we could play that game over, I don't think I'd change a thing."

Josh Lanni was the losing pitcher, giving up five hits. Tri-Village scattered four hits during the game's seven innings. Dave Miles' double was the only extra base hit for the team. Lanni, Mike Futia and Josh Formica all had hits.

Making up the rosters of the All-Star team were Miles, Futia and John Schaller from league co-champion Spotlight; Lanni, Mike Gambelunghe and Adam Carpenter from Main Care; the other co-champion and chap of the City and County and Tri-Village Round Robin tournaments, Ed Luberda, Jim Gavin and Marc Mannella representing General Electric; Andrew Black, Ben Comtois and Adam Perry of Professional Kitchen Design; Price-Greenleaf's Mike Aylward and Formica from Starwood.

Developers installing lifts

Main Square at Delmar developers will be installing wheelchair lifts to provide access to the second floor of the shopping center for handicapped customers. No handicapped permit will be required to use the self-operated wheelchair lifts.

Good sports receive honors

Sportsmanship awards were presented to players on teams in the Tri-Village Little League during closing day ceremonies July 12.

The awards, which are not most valuable player awards, were presented to the players who, in the judgment of the team's coaching staff, best exhibited the qualities and attitudes of good sportsmanship.

Winners from the Tee Ball league were Mark Gilmore, Shearson Lehman Brothers; Kyle Flynn, Bueneau's Opticians; Kelly Roberts, Blanchard Post 1040; Matt Kelly, Messina & Cahill; Guy DeGennaro, Klersy Building; Jeff Harren, Friedman's Flyers; David Austin, Designing Woman; Joe Rossi, Bethlehem Auto Laundry, and Katie Kreuger, Manufacturers Hanover. The coaches of delmar Car Wash elected not to present a single award because they felt it would be too difficult to pick just one outstanding sportsman from their team.

In the Junior league: Ian Costello of State Farm Insurance; Ryan Murray, Pratt-Vail Associates; Michael Esmond, Owens-Corning; Kelly Kreuger, Hal Morgan's Sunoco; Michael Green, McDonald's; Brian Rice, Empire Blue Cross/Blue shield; James McGaughan, Concord Tree Service; Matthew Quackenbush, Cape Cod Pool & Fence; and Leigh Stevens from Bryan Asset Protection Agency.

Award recipients in the Intermediate League were Lori Frazier from Hoogy's Village Corner; Seth Bathrick, Stewart's; Tim Ryan, Farm Family; Aaron Tannatta, Roberts Real Estate; Ty Yacono, Davies Office Refurbishing; Michael Rosenthal, Peter J. Verardi Electrical Contracting; Jared Beck, Keystone Builders; and Josh Willey of Handy Andy.

In the Majors, awards were given to Ryan Green of Professional Kitchen Design; Scott Lobel, Starwood Enterprises; Mike Laiosa, Main-Care; Chris Ryan, General Electric; Jon Scholes, Spotlight; and John Noonan from Price-Greenleaf.

Kramer honored

Steven J. Kramer of Glenmont was awarded the Benjamin Hale Scholarship at the close of his first year at Hobart College in Geneva.

Business update

New Delaware Ave. stores open

By Sal Prividera

Several new business have come to Delmar and some will be moving as the Delaware Plaza replaces business that have left and as renovations to the former Delmar Athletic Club are completed.

Since last fall four businesses have left the Delaware Plaza: Sherry's, Alfred's, Plaza Casuals and Baskin Robbins. Two of the stores, Sherry's and Plaza Casuals, went out of business, Alfred's consolidated and Baskin Robbins did not renew its lease.

The departing stores have been replaced by four new companies, Payless Shoe Source, Job Lot, Fantastic Sam's and the Golden Krust Bakery. However, there is still vacant space left at the plaza as Payless Shoe Source did not use the entire space that was occupied by Sherry's, said Joanne Bucci of HMC Associates, managers of Delaware Plaza.

With the exception of the bakery, these stores specialize in discount price products. However, this is not a new trend in the type of business at the plaza said Bucci. She said the owners and management "look for a good tenant mix."

There are "a couple of prospects" interested in the plaza's vacant space, but Bucci would not disclose the names or types of businesses interested.

Other than cosmetic work, said Bucci, there are no major plans for the Delaware Plaza.

The Delaware Plaza will soon have another space to fill when Dinapoli Opticians moves from the plaza to the Delmar Court Complex, formerly the Delmar Athletic Club that closed last summer.

The building, at 266 Delaware Ave., next to Friendly's, will be a combination of retail stores and offices, said Walter B. Lotz Jr. of Realty Assets.

In addition to Dinapoli, the Total Look, a beauty shop, will occupy the building said Lotz. One additional retail space in the Delmar Court Complex has not been leased. There will be up to eight offices in the building, including Pratt-Vail Associates, an accounting firm, Sentron Associates, a mass mailing firm, and Realty Assets. A law firm has looked at establishing offices in the building, he said.

Realty Assets took ownership of the building last October and has been renovating the building for one month.

"It took us awhile to determine the exact marketing of the building," Lotz said of eight-month time lapse.

He expects Dinapoli and the Total Look to open by mid-August and by October for the building to be "totally in service."

Fryer appointed

Gary G. Fryer of Slingerlands has been appointed by Gov. Mario Cuomo as his counselor and press secretary.

Fryer has worked in the Governor's press office since 1983 and will be the the administration's chief spokesman and advisor to the Governor. He holds a bachelor's degree in communications from Seton Hall University.

Delmar man promoted

Norman J. Morand II of Delmar was recently promoted by the Capital Region office of Coopers and Lybrand, an international accounting and management firm. Morand, a graduate of Siena College, holds a Bachelor's of business administration degree. He is a member of the American Institute of Certified Public Accountants and the New York State Society of Certified Public Accountants.

A craft shop was high on the request list for the projected 21-store shopping area. Many residents also favored a grocery store at the site.

While some of the orders, such as the deli and craft shop, will be filled, the requested fabric shop and grocery store will not be included in the shopping center because of the limited amount of storage and display space in the colonial-style stores, according to Michael Jerominek, Main Square's marketing representative.

Smith said residents listed video stores, banks and realty offices as businesses they did not wish to see included in the Main Square project. Smith said the developers will soon announce some of the stores that have signed leases.

Fabric store, deli wanted

Delmar residents want to have a fabric store included in Main Square at Delmar, a 21-store Delaware Avenue shopping center currently under construction. The project's developers, Thomas W. Corrigan, Dennis Corrigan and James Breen, solicited the opinions of residents with an advertisement published last winter.

The 68 residents who responded to the survey listed a delicatessen as the second most desired business, according to Main Square spokesman Lorraine Smith.

Castle For Sale

We recently heard about a castle for sale in Connecticut, large and luxurious, complete with a 26-foot marble foyer and a hotle-size kitchen. Price, including the surrounding 225 acres: a mere $4.5 million. Somewhere there is a prospective buyer looking for a property like that.

Now we don't get many listings for oversize castles around here. But we have learned that there is a prospective buyer for every property we do show, and it is our job to match them up. Advertising brings in customers but it is the qualifying interview that separates the lookers from the live prospects.

Face to face, we find out what that person really wants in a home — what kind of space, what kind of lifestyle — and what resources he or she has to buy it. Then, and only then, can we show the prospect a likely property. The prospect we bring to YOUR house is prequalified and, to some extent, pre-sold.

Your home is your castle. You'll get royal treatment when you list with...

League starts victims' shelter

The Junior League of Albany has begun a two year project, with a $20,000 grant, to establish a shelter for victims of domestic violence in Albany County. The project began due to the lack of an appropriate facility in Albany with services to meet victims' needs.

Currently, Albany area victims must go to neighboring counties for protection causing decreased access to employment, schools, legal and social services.

An advisory council has been formed to seek the donation of a building or the funds to purchase or renovate a building. The council includes Albany Mayor Thomas Whalen, Bishop Howard Hubbard, Price Chopper Supermarkets and news anchorwoman Bonita Zahn.

A shelter will offer Albany families emergency protection and a means to stop the abuse. The League has asked Equinox, Inc., an established non-profit agency, to assume eventually responsibility for running the shelter and its services.

The league is looking to community members for volunteer support to help find and ready a building in the two-year time frame.

For information about the shelter project call 439-2550 or 439-0751.

The Junior League has several fund raising events planned for this summer.

Cooperation paid off

Editor, The Spotlight:

Teen Nights at Del Lanes has recently ended its very successful series of supervised fun. Running for eight Friday nights, an average of 94 teenagers per night enjoyed live bands, bowling, video games and wide-screen movies. A joint venture of Ken Ringler (manager of Del Lanes and president of the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce), S.A.D.D. (led by President Beth Whitaker), and Bethlehem Opportunities Unlimited, Teen Nights have demonstrated what can be achieved by cooperation in our community.

Ken Ringler's vision, enthusiasm and commitment to the youth of Bethlehem are really admirable. Many thanks should also go to Leeders Video (the former Video Connection) who donated the two videos to be shown each Friday night and helped with their selection.

B.O.U. would welcome any new ideas for teenagers. Please call.

People vote Sept. 15

Editor, The Spotlight:

Dick Lewis's letter in last week's Spotlight indicates to me that he is either completely out of touch with reality as concerns the political scene in Bethlehem, or, perhaps, more correctly, he is attempting to run interference for Republican Town Chairman Bernard Kaplowitz, hoping to calm the troubled political waters and therein hood-wink the voters Sept. 15.

During the process of securing 370 signatures personally, on my designating petitions, I visited with more than 500 Republican voters, about 10 percent of whom told me they were afraid to sign my petition, due to a real concern that their own political leaders and/or Republican Party might strike back at them, at some later time, for having exercised their democratic right and privilege to support a candidate of their own choice. This is a sad and demeaning commentary anywhere, but it is downright disgusting for people living here, in a supposed free society.

Mr. Lewis would like us to believe that committeemen, charged by a political system with the responsibility of selecting vote-worthy candidates, must themselves become political robots, in the interest of making the chairman's choice of candidates look good. In last year's assembly contest, not only was Mr. Kaplowitz chairman, but expected a committee (all of whom were appointed by him) to anoint him as the candidate. Lewis defines this process as being "...a team player." My term is a more appropriate "rubber stamp committeeman" designation.

Our committee chairman frequently reminds the members that they are representing the voters of their respective election districts, to justify his need to have open voting (not secret balloting) to insure every committeeman votes correctly. But at the most recent committee vote, on May 21, for a candidate for Receiver of Taxes, 80 percent of those members certainly were not representing the will of the people of Bethlehem, but rather the chairman's wishes; and, this fact will be made diamond clear to both Mr. Lewis and all committee members on Primary Day, Sept. 15.

Ken Hahn

Receiver of Taxes

Thank you

Editor, The Spotlight:

I would like to thank the Bethlehem police for being so kind to me when I fell last week.

Such a service is appreciated beyond words.

Edith W. Vanderbilt

Selkirk

Candidate unfaithful

Editor, The Spotlight:

I have never written a letter to the editor before in my life and probably never will again. However, since Mr. Hahn has chosen The Spotlight as his primary battleground, I cannot allow his staged protestations as the victim to go unanswered.

Simply stated, the entire situation can be summed up like this. Ken Hahn is like the guy who divorces his faithful wife of many years, runs off with his new girlfriend and then can't understand why his former wife no longer loves him.

Ken Hahn abandoned and divorced himself from the Bethlehem Republican Party, despite his smokescreen tactics and false charges of bossism, freedom and democracy.

Mr. Hahn claims to be concerned about democracy and fair play, but he has long forgotten one of the most fundamental necessary rules of all democracies; that is, after a discussion of the issues and a vote, the majority rules. If it doesn't, there's not much need for a representative government, is there?

But Mr. Hahn has never been able to understand this and consistently continues to march to his own drum.

And that's all very well. But then you can't expect your former associates, whom you've rejected and abandoned, to stick their necks out and support and work for your candidacy!

Oh, before the editor adds a footnote, I am a law partner of Bernie "Boss" Kaplowitz and very proud of it! Thank you.

State aid at issue

Editor, The Spotlight:

Nearby suburban school districts receive millions of dollars more in state school aid than does Bethlehem! Why did these same school districts, each, receive a higher percent increase over the previous year than Bethlehem? Should Bethlehem (rightly) receive at least an additional $1,000,000 in school aid, would your school taxes be reduced?

"Our" Senator Nolan's Legislative Report mailed to you gives the facts:

School District	1987-8 Funding	Percent Increase Over Previous Year
Bethlehem	$4,082,713	7.27%
Guilderland	$8,540,176	10.79%
South Colonie	$10,509,460	10.40%
North Colonie	$7,462,821	8.71%

The State's Aid Formula is based primarily on Individual State Income Tax Returns (that's why you show your School District Tax Code). The fact that Wolf Road is loaded with high income-producing businesses - and, relatively, Bethlehem has none - receives no consideration under the State Formula. In other words, total capability to pay is not part of the criteria.

Who has done anything to correct this inequity?

Not the School Board. Mr. Ruslander, the new chairman, did not include this in his recently announced objectives. Taxes are important to some of us.

Not the Town Board. One would think they would want to reduce the living costs of the electorate - and that they should have some clout.

Not Senator Nolan. He's too busy selling and renting property in Bethlehem.

Are readers concerned about a bread and butter item?

Enjoyed tour

Editor, The Spotlight:

On July 24, Senior residents of Delmar enjoyed a most enlightening tour of the Niagara Mohawk Steam Plant in Glenmont. The well-qualified NiMoguides patiently and courteously explained the complexities of the operation of producing power at the plant. On behalf of the group, I would like to extend appreciation to Niagara Mohawk for a fascinating and educational tour.

Vote against aid

Editor, The Spotlight:

As the testimony at the Iran/Contra hearings continues to unfold a very ugly picture of our foreign policy; I am concerned that the issues at stake are being lost as people debate the popularity of Oliver North.

We must remember that the lives of Nicaraguan people are threatened by the U.S.-backed contras. There are daily reports of infants and children murdered and maimed by the contras. In six years, the contras have failed to gain popular support in Nicaragua, politically or militarily. The U.S. government has been waging an illegal and immoral war to overthrow a legitimate, popularly elected government, with whom we maintain diplomatic relations.

While many of the witnesses speak of the importance of democracy, they have pursued policies and actions that they alone have determined to be right. The implications of White House officials and the president circumventing congress and breaking the laws of the United States to pursue an immoral, illegal and unpopular policy are frightening. Our very system of government is threatened.

At this point in history, it is imperative that we participate in the democratic process and demand that our representatives vote against any further contra aid or aid to El Salvador. Living in a democracy brings with it a responsibility to participate and remain aware of what our government is doing. If we don't speak now against the U.S. war in Central America, we will be responsible for continued death and repression.

SSI needs support

Editor, The Spotlight:

In Albany County, there are more than 3,800 people aged, disabled or visually impaired people who are supported in whole or in part by a program called Supplemental Security Income (SSI) to which the state and federal governments contribute. Over half of these people are disabled. Included also, are many children who receive support because of disablement.

Many unfortunate folks are trying to "make do" on incomes of $411.91 per month, which is well below the poverty level. Needless to say, anyone who survives on this meager support level must make daily compromises on how much can be apportioned for food, medicine, rent, medical services, heat, light and clothing requirements. In order to address the problem of adequate support the Albany Catholic Diocesan Commission on Aging believes that New York State should increase its monthly base support from the present $71.91. The state has been inconsistent in providing its portion of SSI support which dropped from $76.85 in 1974 to as low as $50.75 in 1976 while the federal portion has increased to keep pace with inflation from $130 in 1974 to $340 in 1987.

Our Commission appeals to your readers to consider the plight of those in this program and to support legislative efforts to improve conditions. Phone calls or letters to your State Senate and Assembly representatives should express your civic and charitable concerns and interest in solutions by asking for an increase in SSI Benefits. Companion bills have been introduced in both Houses of the Legislature-S.5885 and A.6338. Letters can be mailed to the Legislative Office Building, Albany, NY (12247-Senate, 12248-Assembly).
