9W: problems but few answers

Corridor workshop draws 100

By Mark Stuart

Bethlehem residents learned why the Rt. 9W Corridor traffic and development problems won't be easily solved Thursday night before being given a chance themselves to help contribute to some of the solutions.

More than 100 people took part in the Bethlehem Rt. 9W Corridor study informational workshop which residents reiterated several points concerning traffic, development and environmental preservation.

The workshop was conducted by four members of the consulting firm of Buckhurst Fish Hutton Katz, the firm compiling the corridor study. Those attending the meeting were broken up into four groups and asked their views on roadway aesthetics, land use, traffic and site development standards.

Prior to the group discussions, an update was given on what information has been collected so far. Ernie Hutton, one of the firm's four principals, explained that the problem in evaluating the future of Rt. 9W was that the road serves three types of traffic, regional traffic, commuter traffic to Albany and local community service traffic. "It is a corridor that that is trying to serve a number of functions, but none of them extremely well," Hutton said.

David Hopkins presented figures reflecting approved construction or building under construction in the entire town of Bethlehem. He pointed out that all zones within the corridor are examples of cumulative zoning, meaning that commercial and residential interests are often situated next to one another, often resulting in conflicting traffic, safety and development plans.

Hopkins pointed to Beckers Corners as an example of a Commercial "CC" zone that has more residential structures than commercial.

Traffic consultant Georges Jacquemart explained the problem of Rt. 9W access due to the lack of a hierarchy of roadways. He said the hierarchy of roads concept is based upon the idea that residential roads should lead to collector roads that lead in turn to the larger arterial roads. He said

NEW SCOTLAND

Budget, taxes up

Cathi Anne M. Cameron

Faced with increased costs for solid waste, bridge repairs and equipment, as well as employee raises, Supervisor Herbert Reilly has proposed a 7.5 percent increase in the 1989 New Scotland town budget.

The budget will go from this year's $2,050,000 total to some $2,340,000 in 1989 and calls for a property tax increase of 62 cents per $1,000 of assessed valuation for town residents, and $2.66 per $1,000 for residents of the Village of Voorheesville. The village rate increase was larger, Reilly said, because of bridge repairs and sales tax revenues for which the village shares equal responsibility.

While larger revenues from increased property assessments and sales tax revenues will keep the tax increase to a minimum, several factors have contributed to the additional taxes that town residents will be paying. Foremost among them is the rise in costs for New Scotland's participation in ANSWERS, which handles the town's solid waste, from $40,000 in 1988 to $126,000 in 1989.

Reilly explained that the town's previous administration budgeted

High school souvenir mug divides principal, students

By Sal Prividera Jr.

The Bethlehem Central High School senior class and the school principal are having "philosophical differences" over what kind of drinking containers are appropriate to use as mementos of the school.

Principal Jon Hunter has told both the junior and senior classes to use alternative prom favors in place of the traditional champagne-type glasses.

In addition, Hunter has vetoed plastic mugs inscribed with "Class of '89" and the names of all of the senior class that the senior class had planned to sell to raise money, said Daniel Stein, student council senior class representative. The mugs were to be sold as a fund raiser for the class and the DECA Club, which is a business club.

Hunter has said the class can not use the planned mugs because they look like beer mugs. He said it was a "philosophical difference" between the seniors and himself. "I'm concerned the school be careful about what it is putting its name and logo on, especially when it's connected with chemical and alcohol abuse."

The principal said the district would be sending a "mixed

Conference targets elementary age children

Targeting elementary-aged children, several local groups will cosponsor a conference that will focus on drug and alcohol use prevention strategies for parents.

The "Home is Where the Start is" conference will be held on Wednesday, Oct. 19, at the Bethlehem Middle School on Kenwood Ave. The program will run from 4 to 8:30 p.m.

The Albany County Substance Abuse Prevention Network, including Bethlehem Opportunities Unlimited, Bethlehem Central Schools and the Bethlehem Networks Project, is sponsoring the event.

Holly Billings, president of BOU, said this is the first substance abuse prevention program in the area that has looked at elementary school children. Two earlier conferences addressed adolescent issues for parents. More and more research is showing prevention of substance use and abuse is more effective than intervention, she said.

"It's a better place to start. You basically have a healthy group of kids," Billings said.

The program will help parents communicate better to help their children deal with stress as they become adolescents, she said.

Patricia O'Gorman, Ph.D., of East Greenbush, will be the keynote speaker, discussing building self-esteem in children and the importance of self-parenting as part of prevention. She is a licensed psychologist with over 18 years of experience working with children of alcoholics and dependent families and is director of the Counseling Center for Addictive Families in East Greenbush.

She is an internationally known lecturer on parenting, self-parenting, prevention and children of alcoholics. She has co-

Large tax hike seen

By Sal Prividera Jr.

Albany County taxpayers will bear a 29 percent county tax increase under the 1988-89 budget proposal announced last week by County Executive James Coyne.

The $240.5 million budget includes increases for the operation of the county jail and sheriff's department, increases in social services spending and road maintenance, said Jack Sullivan, county budget director. The budget also includes a "bare bones" budget for the operation of the county airport.

Sullivan said that the tax increase would be about 79 cents per $1,000 of assessed valuation for properties assessed at their full value, which would bring the tax rate to $3.51 per $1,000. Most municipalities in the county, including Bethlehem and New Scotland, assess at a fraction of full value, which means that the actual tax rates differ from town to town.

"One of the most dramatic increases" was the $1.8 million increase for the operation of the county jail system and the county sheriff's department, Sullivan said.

Social Services spending was increased by over $2.5 million under the proposed budget, while a $2.8 million increase was proposed for county salaries. Non-union workers will receive a pay increase of 6 percent up to a $2,000 maximum, Sullivan said. The $2.8 million also includes union salary increases, which are in the process of being negotiated, he said.

The county will spend an additional $2.1 million on maintenance and repair of county roads and bridges, which Sullivan called "a significant increase." The figure does not include the costs of a $40 million capital projects bond issue proposal for highway projects expected to go before county legislators next year. The debt, if the bond issue were approved, would be serviced in subsequent budgets, he said.

The county airport was given a "bare bones budget . . . pending the sale of the airport," Sullivan said. The airport spending plan includes no improvements or equipment purchases. Negotiations for the sale are continuing between the county and CDTA, he said. The $9,235 million airport operating budget allow the county to cover expenses including debt service, employee salaries and benefits. "If, come January first the county still owns the airport, we will certainly continue to meet expenses," he said.

Sullivan said a decrease of $3.9 million in the carry-over surplus from last year's budget contributed to the tax hike. The surplus amount applied to this year's budget is $8.9 million.

Will Corsi victory end legal battle?

By Sal Prividera Jr.

The legal battle over the appointment of Louis Corsi as a sergeant in the Bethlehem Police Department may be over following a strongly worded court decision allowing Corsi to keep his rank.

Corsi was appointed to the post last December on the recommendation of Chief Paul Currie, after scoring third on a civil service examination. At that time the top two scorers, Officer Cindy Reed-Kerr (first) and Officer Marvin Koonz (second), protested the promotion. The top three scorers on the test are eligible for promotion consideration.

State Supreme Court Justice William F. McDermott found the Albany County Civil Service Commission's decertification of Corsi after the promotion to be "arbitrary (and) capricious."

With Corsi remaining a sergeant, the only likely appeal would be started by Koonz in his role as union president. Reed-Kerr is waiting to see the results of a second sergeants examination before deciding on her course of action. Additionally, Corsi may file a suit against the union for its lack of support of him.

Corsi had been decertified by the commission following...

complaint by Koonz, who is president of the Bethlehem Police Union. The commission found Corsi did meet the department's continuous time-in-service requirement of three years. Corsi had been a member of the department for 23 months and was told at the time of the exam that he was qualified because of his service as an Albany County sheriff's deputy.

Jeffery Honeywell, Corsi's lawyer, referring to McDermott's issuance of an estoppel.

The estoppel order will bar any further action against Corsi's promotion based on a different fact or claim.

Reed-Kerr, a nine-year veteran of the force and the department's only woman officer, had claimed

Any appeal of the decision would likely come from the local police union through its parent union, the Security and Law Enforcement Employees, Council 82.

Koonz could not be reached for comment on the position he will take on the decision.

Reed-Kerr said she is "waiting to see what happens with the new the current list. The department may have as many as four sergeant positions open in the next year because of retirements.

McDermott also blasted Council 82 in his decision: "The respondents, the Security and Law Enforcement Employees Council 82, represented by one Mr. Gardner, as general counsel, took it upon themselves to ascertain whether or not the petitioner met the requirements it is claimed he is now lacking. Mr. Gardner apparently could be the instigator in this whole matter and it makes his posture in this matter very questionable as he is promoting one other individual for Mr. Corsi's position."

Honeywell said there is still the issue of the union leaving "Lou out to dry and whether or not it should have been more protective." While a decision has not been made about pursuing the matter, Honeywell said Corsi is "consulting with his attorney concerning that issue."

"There is nothing I can do," said Reed-Keer. "An appeal is definitely in order as justice has not been served."

A restraining order was issued to allow Corsi to continue serving as a sergeant while the case was being decided.

McDermott found Corsi "was imminently qualified to take the examination" even if his service as a deputy sheriff did not count, since Corsi had served over 23 months with the Town of Coeymans Police Department. McDermott said in his decision the civil service law Section 58, which caused Corsi to be decertified, did not say the service had to be continuous.

"The decision is much more favorable than we expected," said sexual discrimination when the promotion was made and subsequently filed a suit to force the town to explain why she was passed over despite her service and test score. The case was put on hold by state Supreme Court Justice Warren Travers pending a decision in the Corsi case. With McDermott's decision, she said, her case "is no longer."

"There is nothing I can do (about the decision)," Reed-Keer said Saturday, adding she was "surprised and disappointed."

"An appeal is definitely in order as justice has not been served."

test." The police department held a civil service sergeants exam in June with the time requirement reduced to 24 months. She said the results are expected to be back to the department by the end of the month.

The new list will again allow the town to choose from the top three candidates and will supercede

Were practice test questions the real thing? RCS says no

By Sal Prividera Jr.

The Educational Testing Service is reopening its investigation of whether Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk students were given unfair help on an advance placement exam last May, despite the district's own investigation that concluded that no wrongdoing took place.

The test company is investigating the Advanced Placement Biology examination after receiving a report from the Averill Park Central School District about a student at RCS having a test question prior to the exam, said RCS Superintendent William Schwartz. The testing company had closed the investigation once and gave the district three options, which the district found unacceptable, he said. Schwartz said Friday he had been told through the New York State School Boards Association the company had reopened the investigation.

The testing service had found through its initial investigation that the test may have been administered improperly, giving RCS students an unfair advantage.

The district and the 14 students involved had the option of having an estimated score based on the objective portion of the test, retaking the exam, or having their test fee refunded, Schwartz said. He said the company had conducted its first investigation only in its own out-of-state offices.

Advance placement examinations are taken by high school students for college credit based on how high the student scores on the test. The AP Biology exam is also used by RCS as the final exam for the course.

Schwartz said the investigation came after an RCS student shared study material with a student from Averill Park. RCS students had studied the same topic areas for the general essay section of the test as the ones that actually appeared on the test. One of the study questions was exactly the same as a test question.

The test is delivered to the school sealed and no one is supposed to have access to it until the day of the exam.

Schwartz said the RCS biology teacher and a group of teachers from other districts regularly meet before the school year to discuss likely topics for the exam. The group also develops a battery of questions to help students prepare for the test.

"We can produce documentation that the questions were written well in advance," Schwartz said. "The point is, it was the luck of the draw. Our kids should not be punished for something they did not do."

The school district conducted its own investigation of the incident and found the exams had been sealed in the high school principal's safe. The tests were opened by the exam proctor, who was not the biology teacher, on the day of the exam, and then sealed after the test and returned, Schwartz said.

For safer sidewalks

We find encouraging some statements made at a recent Bethlehem Town Board session. In discussions bearing on approval of a new development (Dowerskill Village), Planning Board Chairman Ken Ringler proposed that the board establish a policy on sidewalks in the town, and the thought was picked up by some other board members.

By way of explanation of the lack of a policy, the board was reminded that traditionally the town has avoided decisions on sidewalks. Contributing reasons: the resultant responsibility for maintenance and a feeling by some that the community would be taking on a more settled, less pastoral, appearance.

With these rationalizations, we have little patience. Increasingly, many residents like to walk for exercise and simple pleasure. And many others must depend on walking, either short distances or longer, in lieu of other available transportation. Only too frequently, they find that sidewalks are missing, or are in poor and dangerous condition. We would like to return to this important subject later, including the suggestion at the board meeting that the sidewalk policy incorporate recommendations on bicycle paths. That latter is an excellent idea.

Stench on the bench

It's been said before, but as the 1988 election bears down on us, we'll say it again: The interests of the public at large are not served by the hand-in-glove, behind-the-scenes parceling out by the political bosses in the two major parties of the nominations for State Supreme Court judgeships.

In a judicial district that embraces several counties, judges who will sit for many years are put on the ballot in a take-it-or-leave-it arrogance perpetrated year after year by today's bosses just as their predecessors did. Voters have no opportunity to pass upon the qualifications, credentials,

EDITORIALS

For now, however, a few comments about sidewalk and curbing maintenance on the town's busiest streets, which happen to be along Delaware Avenue and several bisecting side streets. The topic should be of much concern to merchants, for easy access to their businesses is compromised.

Many sidewalks are in very poor repair, and this is further complicated by the fact that they are often at roadbed level, rather than being elevated (in the interests of safety) behind a curb. And in countless instances the curbing, where it has existed, is in a sadly deteriorated state that is unsightly and hazardous. Such conditions can even raise a question in the minds of visitors as to the town's commitment to reasonable upkeep of its basic facilities.

In our editorial last week about the proposed highway bond issue, we chastised State authorities for their delinquency in keeping up with highway and bridge maintenance. Some of Bethlehem's thoroughfares, which are not the State's responsibility, can be considered susceptible to a similar comment.

or even very basic fitness of the future judges. The rank-and-file cannot participate in the initial selecting of the candidates, or comment on them at any significant time. And when the judges-to-be have been duly certified as the nominees, don't look for the opportunity to make a choice, because the favored ones will appear on all tickets. The deal is made, the rewards to the good and faithful (political) servants are assured, and the public be damned.

That's what you'll find on the ballot in November, just as was the case every year in the memorable past. As for the future...

Helping the victimized

The Spotlight's short series, in the two preceding issues, on the unfortunate subject of domestic violence, had several good purposes, which we can hope they served well. Among these was the information about the trained preparedness of the Bethlehem police when called upon to intervene in such cases, as they are every four or five days.

Articles of this nature may not find much favor with some readers, but on the other hand they undoubtedly bring some comfort to others, who may find in them a greater sense that they're not alone in trying to handle a bad situation.

The role of the police, though dreaded by most families, can be extremely vital in some cases where protection is needed. The conciliation and mediation function is strongly suggested by data indicating that only about one out of four cases with police on hand reach the town court.

Of even greater potential importance is the service of the articles in bringing to the attention of many people the uncomfortable facts and, additionally, what to do about them.

There are ways in which the community at large can be of assistance to victims of violence.

Albany County lacks a shelter specifically designated for victims of domestic violence. The majority are sheltered through programs sponsored by Unity House in Troy and the Schenectady YWCA.

A safe house available to residents in this county would tend to lessen disruption of employment and school attendance and the transportation problems in reaching services and courts. It would create accessibility to necessary advocacy and counseling resources and reduce isolation from the support offered by family and friends. Uncomplicated opportunity to reach a safe shelter can make it less likely that people would remain in a violent situation if they know that help toward a violence-free future is within a relatively easy reach.

The Junior League of Albany, working with the social service agency Equinox, has committed volunteer time, services, and funds to acquire a home to shelter victims and their children. Interested persons can help ensure that the project is achieved by volunteering their time or services, and by making tax-deductible contributions toward the purchase of the shelter and its renovation and furnishings.

The ins and outs of the national pastime

Editor, The Spotlight:

The annual culmination of our national sport of baseball is about to begin with the World Series. However, even with all the media hype and rich, cultural heritage about the game, there are many of our citizens who have different concepts of what happens on our nation's baseball diamonds.

Years ago, I heard the following interpretation of the game which most closely resembles my wife's concept of our national pastime. I call it Pat's View of Baseball.

Baseball has two sides: one out in the field and one in.

Each man that is on the side that is in goes out when he is out and then the other side comes in.

Then the next man goes in until he is out.

Vox Pop

When three men are out, the side that was out comes in — and the side that was in goes out and tries to get those coming in — out — if they are not in.

Sometimes you get men out who are in.

When both sides are in and out nine times, including the no outs, then certainly the game is over.

After I listened to that view, I sat back in my chair, gently pushed the remote TV button for the latest football game and did not ask any more questions.

Burkhard's record of leadership saluted

Editor, The Spotlight:

I would like to comment on the Spotlight article entitled "New Leadership for Democrats" in the Oct. 5 issue.

Bethlehem Democrats were fortunate in having two people with the talent and experience to lead us. However, we had a problem in that they wanted to lead us at the same time. When such a situation occurs, an election is necessary and sometimes when feelings get aroused things are said which are soon regretted. The selection of a chairman was neither hostile, as the Spotlight termed it, or a takeover, as Bill Burkhard put it. What it amounted to was a choice between two qualified and capable men for the chance to continue the progress the Democrats in Bethlehem have made.

Bill Burkhard's loss of the chairmanship does not in any way reflect on his term as our leader. On the contrary, Bill did an excellent job. We had our first victory in a town election, put money in the bank, brought a major presidential candidate to town for our annual fundraiser, filled every spot on the Democratic Committee and continued to increase the ranks of Democrats and Independents in Bethlehem. Bill Burkhard leaves behind a solid record of leadership and

The great American hug

The first signs began to appear back in the early '70s with those bumper stickers, "Have You Hugged Your Kid Today?" I guess that the question was a well-intentioned effort to psych parents up to the task of demonstrating a bit more affection. In time, though, I thought they reached the same ho-hum stage of the more recent yellow diamonds for your rear window, "Baby on Board."

In any event, we later began to see, "Hugs Are Better Than Drugs," with which few people would quarrel, though there's not necessarily a cause-and-effect involved there. I thought that a frustrated poet got carried away on that one. We've had other bumper stickers along the same line, forgettable enough that I won't trouble you with exact language.

But clearly hugs and hugging are a major element in today's American scene. The trend goes a lot farther than printed slogans.

People come in your door and wait to be hugged (and probably kissed, too). You encounter someone in a hotel lobby, and hug. The tv commercials of an evening are filled with people hugging. And the game shows have everyone hugging every few seconds. Hugging has become one of the major indoor sports. Perhaps one of these days before too long we will be having hugging endurance contests for the sake of the Guinness people. How long do you think that one hug could last (no holds barred, as they say)?

But actually indoor hugging is only part of it. Look at any tv sport — baseball, football, whatever. A player does some feat that's a bit outstanding and he gets hugged. A pitcher wins a game and his catcher hugs him. Then the rest of the team hugs him. In one-on-one sports, the vanquished hugs the victor, or vice versa.

Hugs and hugging are a major element in today's American scene.

And in politics, anything goes. We all were exposed to the mass family-style hug at the summer's conventions. In the debates, a debater receives more hugs if he's still on his feet at the closing bell. When the next President is inaugurated, will the Chief Justice hug him after the swearing-in?

I've already seen some commentaries on this hugging business, so I'm not the only dour skeptic who raises an eyebrow at such antics. As Emerson would have said, where will it all end?

The late, great columnist Barney Fowler would have started this next paragraph with the word: Switching. But I'll just quietly change topics because I have a timely thought in mind.

This week marks the anniversary of the passing of Bing Crosby. When Bing died (most appropriately, on the golf course) in October 1977, Phil Harris observed, rather extravagantly, "God just made his first mistake."

In my own experience, Bing was a very decent, unassuming, down-to-earth fellow who deserved all the adulation that he received. But you don't hear much about Bing these days, and the radio stations that play the golden oldies seem to have all but forgotten that wonderful voice.

The thing that burns me is that Elvis Presley, who had died several weeks earlier, remains a big item in the press (to say nothing of those checkout counter tabloids) and on the air. The contrast between how well each of these two singers is remembered surprises and distresses me. Bing gave so much to real American music for 50 years. The other fellow was a flash in the pan of dubious origins, and his hold on people confounds me. Who has any explanation, other than that I must be an old fuddy-duddy!

CONSTANT READER

On walking and cycling

I found a great article in a magazine that we see only too seldom, Vermont Life. In the autumn issue, there's a dandy piece entitled "Walking Rediscovered." In it, you'd find lots of meaty stuff about meandering through the Green Mountain State.

Says the article, "Vermont is rediscovering Thoreau's tonic. Inn-to-inn walks have sprung up around the state." As an example, we are offered the Old Bennington Walking Tour, which seems attractive indeed.

And some specific examples of inns that cater to walkers (I like the term better than the more ambitious "hikers" or "climbers.") There's the Old Cutter Inn, in East Burke, way up in what's called the Northeast Kingdom (which is closer to Canada and New Hampshire than to almost anything else you could think of). It's truly rated as a bargain at $30 to $42 a night. And one of the best attractive features is the fact that without quibbling they'll accept kids and pets. Lake Willoughby, near St. Johnsbury, is not far distant. The phone number is (802) 626-5151.

Other likely places that are hospitable to walkers, and a variety of routes and attractions are provided in a companion-piece to the main article. The writer, incidentally, is a free-lancer who was known to me professionally some years ago. It was a personal pleasure to catch up in this way.

She quotes Ralph Waldo Emerson on the subject of what a walker needs: "Endurance, plain clothes, old shoes, and eye for nature, good humor, vast curiosity, good speech, good silence, and nothing too much."

Vermont Life is a quarterly that sells for $2.50 if you find it on a magazine rack, or $9 by annual subscription from the publisher at 61 Elm Street, Montpelier, Vt., 05602.

* * * * *

A magazine that is new to me came to light the other day, though it's apparently in its second or third year of publication. The magazine is Hippocrates, which sounds like something intended to educate physicians, and in fact one of its principal purposes is for MDs to place in their waiting rooms as an alternative to 1985 Reader's Digest and September 1987 issues of People. (Actually, you can subscribe at an annual rate of $24, though one of those insert cards is offering it at half price.) Hippocrates is published from Sausalito out in the Bay area of California. (And I have recently found it, coincidentally, on some local magazine racks in drug stores. Coulson's, etc.)

Hippocrates basically is dedicated to health, and it seems to me that the editors achieve their goal with a clearer-eyed view than do most periodicals in the health field. It was the September-October issue that I was reading.

I like it, at least partially because it advocates exercise limited (if you wish) to six hours a month, noting that in the same period of time you might well be spending five hours just waiting at traffic lights. The six hours would be accumulated at the rate of 90 minutes a week, broken down into reasonable outbursts of about a half-hour every other day.

I was also taken by the magazine's advocacy of free-ranging chickens, and if you don't know what that means (I didn't), I recommend that you find Hippocrates.

If you're a cyclist or a passive cyclist, you'll want to note these observations in Hippocrates: Cycling is one-tenth as likely to cause injury or death as driving a car. You're even safer on a bike than crossing the street. In 1986, the number of pedestrians killed in the U.S. was 6,700.

In that same year, about 1,000 cyclists were killed in collision with cars (and seven times as many injured). More than half of these were children under 15 — and nearly two-thirds of the fatalities would have been averted if the riders had been wearing helmets. A large share (42 percent) of cycling collisions occurred between 6 in the evening and 6 in the morning.

Words for the week

Dour — The controversial thing about this word, which basically means stern or harsh, is that it more often is used to mean gloomy or sullen. Also, note that it has a couple of pronunciations, the more common "dower" but the less familiar "dooer" is preferred.

Fuddy-duddy — This isn't just a careless expression out of nowhere; it's been around for a long time to mean one who is old-fashioned, or pompous, or unimaginative, or too concerned about trifles. Take your pick. From Scotland, we learn that fuddy is a short-tailed animal, so keep that in mind too when you're tempted to use the expression.

County leadership

The contributor of this Point of View is a Republican member from Bethlehem of the Albany County Legislature.

By James C. Ross

POINT OF VIEW

The final word in your recent editorial, "County Leadership," provides an appropriate lead-in for this response. As you perceptively pointed out, a number of important county matters are neglected or delayed and it is time to "... demand some leadership."

Albany County not only lacks leadership, it also suffers from the absence of management ability in the County Executive and the County Legislature. This dual loss is causing considerable chaos in the oversight and conduct of county affairs.

First, let's take a closer look at what we have lost by not having a leader or a manager in our county government. Leaders inspire people. Leaders are visionaries. They know what should be done and know what can be done with the resources available. Finally and most importantly, leaders delegate, usually to a manager, to get the work done. Managers direct people. Managers are practical. They know precisely what must be done and organize what must be done, effectively and efficiently.

It is evident that Mr. Coyne, the county executive, is not a leader. His single attempt at leadership, calling for construction of the civic center, failed. He failed because he had no idea what could be done with the resources available. Unfortunately, the architect, the construction manager, and everyone associated with this ill-fated project failed also.

Certainly the Albany County Democratic organization never wanted anyone with leadership ability to be the county executive. In the event that they made a mistake and ended up with a leader as the county executive, they took the extra precaution of carefully curtailing the authority of the county executive when they wrote the Albany County charter.

The little leadership that the Democratic organization permitted to exist outside the political circle was carefully placed in the Albany County Legislature and limited to the majority leader and the Finance Committee chair. Here the political leaders see leadership in a narrow context: control.

Control is what counts and delegation is curtailed. In this milieu, Harold Joyce, vice chair of the Albany County Democratic organization, is a superb political leader. When Mr. Joyce was chosen to be majority leader of the Albany County Legislature he made sure he had total control by assuming also the chairs of the Finance Committee and the Civic Center Committee when that committee was created.

However, taking control of these committees rather than delegating to able deputies may be the majority leader's ultimate failure because he is now too busy to lead or to manage. Without a leader or a manager, the Albany County Legislature is mired in minutiae. It is using its time doing very little. If the Legislature goes on simply spending more and more time on less and less it will soon be doing nothing about anything.

Let's look at some of the important matters being ignored by the County Legislature, beginning with county roads and solid waste, which your editorial addressed. A look at the record, The Journal of the Albany County Legislature, proves that important matters are being neglected.

• County Roads and Bridges: Two years have passed since Bob Hoffmeister and I introduced a resolution urging the county and Conrail to come to an agreement and repair the closed Jericho bridge. While the county and Conrail are blaming and pointing fingers at each other, nothing is being done. Continued public pressure must be exerted. If we can spend county funds to pave the streets in the City of Albany, we should be able to use county funds to reconstruct this county bridge.

• Solid Waste: If solid waste management falls under the jurisdiction of either the County Improvements Committee or the Conservation Committee, we know there is little likelihood that this issue will be addressed by the county. Neither of these committees met in 1987 or in 1988, ample proof that nothing is being done by the county regarding solid waste.

• Albany County Airport: Nine months have passed since Mr. Coyne proposed selling the Albany County Airport. The Legislature's Mass Transit Committee has oversight over the airport. Selling the airport was never discussed by this committee. Since the committee meetings are open to the public, the committee is bypassed and discussions take place behind closed doors. As the Sept. 28 Spotlight editorial pointed out, Mr. Coyne needs some quick cash to cover the civic center deficit.

• Albany County Jail: Since the Penal Committee is another committee that did not meet in 1987 and only twice in 1988 to discuss bond resolutions for future jail expansions, we should not be surprised to learn there is trouble at the county jail. If no one is paying attention to the needs of the guards, you can be certain that the needs of the inmates are also being ignored.

The list can continue and includes unresolved negotiation between the county and the personnel in Social Services, Health, Public Works, and civilians at the jail. No one is paying attention to the needs of county employees and the citizens of the county. Without a leader, a manager, and oversight by the County Legislature this sad situation will continue. The solution was clearly stated in your editorial, "This is the time for citizens, local officials, and legislators to raise their voices and demand some leadership."

Committee grateful for leadership

Editor, The Spotlight:

The article on the new leadership for the Democrats in your Oct. 5 issue would leave one to believe, the Bethlehem Democratic Committee itself is in some disarray. Nothing is further from the truth.

The decision made by the committee to chose new leadership in no way reflects on Mr. Burkhard's dedication, commitment, hard work and many accomplishments. In fact, electing Arthur Brown hands the baton, as in relay races, to him with the task of moving the Democratic party in Bethlehem even further in its successes.

We honor Bill Burkhard, as we welcome Art Brown's vitality. The committee has coalesced behind and with Art, supporting his leadership enthusiastically and without reservation to get on with our work.

We hope Democrats, Independents and other supportive folks will join us in wishing Art Brown well in his efforts and in thanking Bill Burkhard for his years of work as he continues on the committee.

Editor, The Spotlight:

I have been a member of the local business community for a few years now. Like most of the area's establishments, I depend wholly on the support of residents of the immediate area.

It's delightful to observe the strict enforcement of controlled growth, the adherence to authentic guidelines, and above all the active involvement of the public in most of the Town Board's decisions.

Of course, in operating in such a controlled environment there are some shortcomings. There is a specific market and the returns are nominal — but they are offset by the gratifying feeling in doing business within a pleasant climate.

My only recommendation would be to have a little more exposure through The Spotlight. Even though we're a rather small number, there is constant change in both number and type of business. You could help in identifying these and in directly promoting them.

We could use your individual approach that you give to so many other areas of concern. Most of us are dedicated to our work and our clientele, and in return we help provide the town with a healthy tax base without its having to resort to undesirable growth. A little acknowledgement would give a great morale boost to our commitment.

Parents encourage support for schools

Editor, The Spotlight:

"Being the Best... What else is there?"

L. Iacocca

The Bethlehem Central School District has always promoted the concept of providing the best education in the Tri-City area. When we moved here five years ago, the decision of where to settle and raise our three children was based on this fact. But, I'm afraid we finally realized how drastically this concept has gone astray, after an in-depth tour of Glenmont Elementary School last week. We have been to the school many times for meetings, programs, etc., and two items in particular really stand out.

First, the conditions in which our children try to learn and our teachers and staff try to teach are appalling. Here are a few observations from our tour that we should all think about:

• How many of your children must do their homework in the foyer of your home? (At Glenmont, students are being taught at desks set up in the corridors.)

• How many professionals meet with clients in the corporate bathroom? (At Glenmont, our teachers' work stations are in closets, and even the girls' locker room.)

• How many families have to clean out the dining room after every meal to bring in the family room furniture? (At Glenmont, the cafeteria is used continuously every day as a gymnasium, orchestra room, day care center and lunch room if something else is not scheduled.)

• How many professionals have a portable desk they push around with them all day? (At Glenmont, our art teachers shift from classroom to classroom with their materials on a mail cart.)

These items are just a few of the ridiculous situations that exist at Glenmont and at the other schools in the district as well. Our children certainly deserve better than this.

Our second observation concerns the attitude of our Glenmont faculty and staff. Through all the hassles, disruptions, inadequacies and uncertainties of which closet you'll be shoved into next, they have demonstrated an unsurpassed dedication and positive attitude toward our children. The professionals we have entrusted with an extremely important part of our children's lives deserve better than what they have as well.

It's time for the Bethlehem Central School Board to face the issues and the challenge of bringing our school back to being "the best." First, an appropriate size bond issue must be made available to get our children and teachers out of the closets and into more efficient, up-to-date additions and renovated facilities. Second, the board must fervently support this bond issue and assure everyone in our school district of its necessity and importance. Yes, it will certainly cost more, but what's the price for being the best — when being the best is what it's all about?

Rare opportunity to set school goals

Editor, The Spotlight:

By all accounts much has changed in the Town of Bethlehem in recent years. We've had unprecedented growth. The town is actively pursuing an effort to accommodate the town's resources to the growth.

In June the Bethlehem Central School Board agreed to seek voter approval for a bond issue to add to three elementary schools in town. This decision came in response to an increasing pupil population that requires additional classroom space.

In the next few weeks, building committees from each of the three schools have been invited to submit thoughts, suggestions and requests for specific adjustments to their facilities. The board will then review the architect's designs and determine what will be included in the bond issue.

It's a rare opportunity, indeed, to impact upon education in Bethlehem for the next few decades. It's a rare opportunity to do the job adequately so that an increasing pupil population will have a quality education in a quality environment.

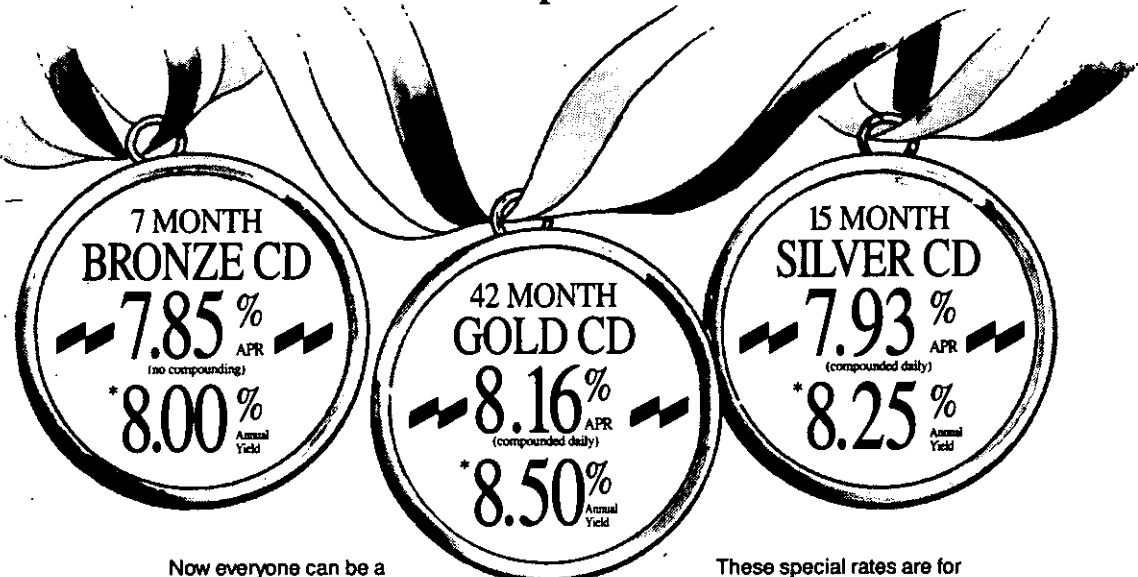

However, as we approach this chance to address this need "once and for all" it is with some concern and trepidation.

As Ann Kohler stated in her letter last week, there is some question as to whether sufficient classroom space will be constructed. There is a great amount of planning riding on the peak year projection — a projection which the Enrollment and Facilities Task Force cautions doesn't provide a margin of error.

Additionally, there is a concern that core facilities may not be modified adequately to meet this growth. History demonstrates that modifications in this district have included having teachers work out of closets, children working in hallways, a basketball hoop placed in a cafeteria and every available square inch of space used for storage. Now that we have a chance to physically address the situation with new construction, will the board be willing to not only improve our core facilities to accommodate our present needs but to improve them for the projected future growth?

There will be a desire on the part of the board to keep the bond issue low enough to sell it to voters. But how low can we go and still call ourselves a quality system? Yes, much has changed in Bethlehem and there is a real possibility that for the very first time a bond issue may be defeated because it is not large enough to meet our needs. As Ann Kohler said in her letter, "let's not be pennywise and pound foolish."

Mothers sometimes need a time out

Editor, The Spotlight:

You are a woman. You have held a job outside the home or perhaps not. Your career has changed now to full-time mother. It's an important and dramatic change in your life. No longer do you have conversations and interactions during the day with other adults. It's a 24-hour demanding job, perhaps not all physically but mentally, too. Do you need an outlet? We all do.

So come and join us — Mother's Time Out. We meet Mondays from 10 to 11:30 a.m. at the Delmar Reformed Church. Child care is provided through a system of each mother taking a turn in one of the three nurseries. Programs are planned for the mothers by the mothers who have volunteered to be hostesses for the month. It's a great way to meet others in the same current career. It may take you a few visits to feel comfortable, but please don't hesitate to join. It is a great informal but organized support group for mothers of preschool children and a great way to make new friends.

I know this because Mother's Time Out has been an asset to my life. I've made new friends and feel a little relief is always there knowing that on Monday mornings someone else will help me care for my children allowing me some adult conversation and learning experience.

Highway trust fund advocate speaks up

Editor, The Spotlight:

Politicians in New York, with rare exceptions like 102nd District Assemblyman John Faso, seem to have only two solutions to any problem: Tax and spend or borrow and spend.

Mr. Faso's Point of View in the Oct. 5 issue was right on the money: the $3 Billion Highway Bond Issue, if passed, will cost the taxpayers, with interest, a total of five thousand million dollars. Big bucks, even in Delmar!

The state Republicans get support from rich bankers and bond houses, and the Democrats get largesse from labor unions willing to cover the state with concrete and asphalt. We the taxpayers get stuck with the long-term debt while the politicians build civic centers and highways to the poorhouse.

A dedicated highway trust fund would supply money for road repair and perhaps more importantly take away from the politicians the slush fund they use to hand out patronage and keep themselves in power. With over a billion-dollar deficit, New York state government is not much more than a fiscal disaster waiting for the next recession to make it turn belly up.

Dangerous condition on Delaware Ave.

Editor, The Spotlight:

Recently at about 3 p.m. on Delaware Ave., on my way toward Delmar I stopped at the traffic light at Elsmere and Delaware Avenue. I was in the inside lane, and a car with out-of-state license plates in front of me stayed in the inside lane after the light changed. When we came to merging traffic, a car with horn blowing forced this car in front of me to hit the curb and drive into the store parking lot.

The lady driver was well in shock. Please, can't we alert drivers to this condition.

Anti-busing group to meet with board

By Sal Prividera Jr.

A parents' group concerned about Bethlehem Central's plan to bus kindergarten students to the Clarksville Elementary School while additions are being built at three other elementary schools will meet with the board Oct. 19.

Ross Prinzo of Glenmont, representing a group of 100 parents, appeared at the school board's meeting Wednesday to request a meeting to discuss alternatives to the Clarksville plan.

Prinzo said the group had "respect for the difficulty of the decision... but at the same time it does not coincide with the needs we have."

In July, the board approved the plan to bus kindergarten students from the Glenmont and Hamagrael Elementary Schools during the 1989-90 and 1990-91 school years to Clarksville while additions are being built to the Glenmont, Hamagrael and Slingerlands schools.

The group meet twice in September and formed a steering committee that drafted a letter to the board of education requesting the meeting. The letter also included a number of alternatives to busing the kindergartners to Clarksville. The alternatives include relocation of the kindergarten classes to the middle school; reconsideration of a kindergarten center in the high school; relocation of the affected kindergarten classes to space in town hall; and using the district administrative offices for kindergarten by relocating the administrative personnel.

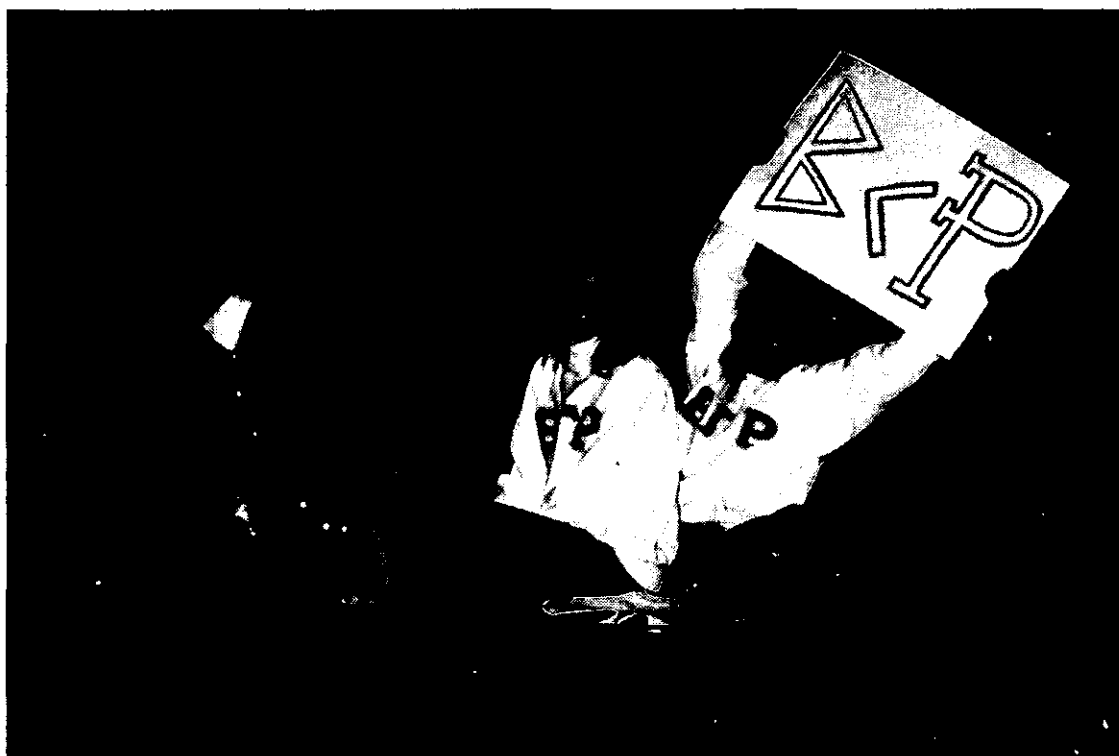

The parents did not offer any specifics on any of the alternatives. When asked by the board for details, Prinzo said the group thought it would be "presumptuous" for the group to give the group advice.

The letter, signed by Concerned Parents of the 1989-90 Kindergarten Class, concludes with: "Finally, it is important to underscore our desire not to address this issue in a confrontational environment. We believe the alternatives attached provide for the needs of the entire community while comforting parents legitimately concerned for the safety and emotional well-being of their very young children about to commence their formal education."

The group's steering committee may meet with district administrators to further discuss the options prior to the board meeting.

In other business, the board approved the extension for filing the district's asbestos management plan with the state Department of Education. The extension, if approved by the education department, will give the district until May 1989 to file the management plan.

Superintendent Leslie Loomis said the district's asbestos consultant, Professional Services Industries, Inc., recommended filing for the deferral. He said the district's management plan is expected to be completed by November and will be considered with the construction project bond issue.

High school group seeks active role for parents

By Bill Dixon

As the new school year finds its way through the first weeks of autumn, familiar signs of a reawakened Bethlehem Central High School begin to show themselves. There are jammed parking lots, revised regulations, and a broken auditorium accompanied by renewed construction.

Amidst the confusion come questions about the high school and what it has to offer. There are concerns of both students and their parents about the kind and quality of the curriculum, as well as the various athletic and extra-curricular activities. Though the anxious pace of the first few days usually doesn't last, sometimes the interest does.

Parents of high school-age students have a way to get answers to their questions and express their concerns, an organization whose goals are to "promote communication, understanding, and effectual cooperation between parents, teachers, students, (high school) administration, the Board of Education, and the community." The group is called the Bethlehem Central Community Organization, but the name isn't to everyone's liking.

"I don't think the current name really says what we are," says Peter Trent, the newly elected president of the BCCO. Trent went on to say that a name change could be in the organization's future, a move that would denote a stronger emphasis on parent participation. Trent, a Delmar resident for the past three years, was elected head of the BCCO last spring in what he describes as "a very low-keyed" election.

"Right now I think we have a very good opportunity to have a voice in the community regarding curriculum and the way the school is run," says Trent. "Although we don't have a very large membership, we also don't have a very active one. I think we also have to grow and change that way."

Change comes easily to the BCCO. The group was started in 1981, when the Bethlehem Parent Teacher Association decided to break with the national PTA. The split, according to Trent, had little to do with political or ideological issues, and was mainly a result of the BPTA's difficulty with paying membership dues to the national organization (chronically low budgets are noted weaknesses among organizations with small memberships). Since then the organization has had four presidents and sponsored numerous programs aimed at improving the quality of life at the high school.

"Our main thing is to stick up for the kids," says Mary Berry, who served as BCCO president for two years and now serves as those who come into daily contact with the school and are affected by its changes. As there is never any set agenda for the meetings, spontaneity is usually allowed to plot the course for the discussion. Issues that have been addressed during the meetings run the gamut from drug abuse to problems with student parking to the administration of SATs.

This is a program that Trent hopes to continue this year. Also on Trent's agenda is the resumption of the so-called the organization's vice-president. She describes the group as a kind of umbrella organization for parents and others interested in the high school, but not as an organization focused on any "special interest," such as music or sports. Among the programs with which Berry has been involved with in previous years has been a series of monthly breakfast meetings between students, parents, administrators, school board members, community leaders, and members of the local business community.

"Our main thing is to stick up for the kids," says Mary Berry, former BCCO president.

The purpose of the breakfasts is to encourage dialogue among "shadow program", which, according to Berry, "affords students the opportunity to be with someone whose job is of interest to them." The program has been something of a success, and both the BCCO and the school district are looking forward to its continuing.

"Anything we can do to help the BCCO build their membership is, I think, vitally important to the overall success of the high school," says Bethlehem Central Superintendent Leslie Loomis. "I would say that it is certainly a significant force for quality education at the high school."

Loomis calls upon the organization to help with a variety of school projects. Such requests have yielded a relationship that he described as a "a linkage of collaboration."

For example, the group has co-sponsored the open house held at the high school every year to familiarize parents with the school's administration and faculty. In previous years, the BCCO has set up a table with coffee and pastry after the event to encourage parents to sign up for membership. Loomis also selected members of the organization to serve on a committee that helped to interview candidates for the principal's position that became open last spring. Trent was one of the BCCO members to serve on that committee.

"I was involved in screening some of the eight candidates for principal," he said. "We're very excited about the vitality and vision of Jon Hunter. I think we have a fine new principal. There has been a genuine interest by Dr. Loomis and Dr. Hunter in having our input about things that are going on," Trent said.

The organization has also promised continued sponsorship of its annual student dance held at the high school to help raise money for its activities. The dances have been successful before in gaining some publicity for the group, giving it some degree of visibility among the students. Another focus of the organization in the past has been support for the recommended school budget — support Loomis helped to solicit last spring.

"Obviously what our high school needs is a more active alliance with the parents. We in the school do everything possible to be an active member in that partnership," said Loomis. One of his main objectives, he said, is "to see more parents actively involved in the life of the school, at both the middle school and high school levels. Particularly the high school."

The open house is scheduled for Tuesday, Oct. 18, at the high school. The BCCO will have a table there to sign up interested parents and answer any questions there might be about the group.

Road study delays Krumkill Rd. development

By Mark Stuart

The Bethlehem Planning Board has tabled an application for the 89-lot Krumkill Manor development in North Bethlehem pending further information on the recently published county traffic study of the Krumkill Rd. area and a proposed geriatric care center.

The board will decide on the best roadway configuration within the development based on the possibility of future development behind Krumkill Manor and the effect of any new roads planned by the county.

The final draft of the county highway study was released Monday and the planning board met Tuesday night. Only board consultant Alva Worth had seen the study.

Although the board has put the plans on hold, Bethlehem Public Works Commissioner Bruce Secor said the new roads proposed in the county study should not affect the inner roadways of Krumkill Manor.

Another recent development in the Krumkill Manor proposal was word that a geriatric care center may be built on Krumkill Rd. According to Planning Board Chairman Ken Ringler, the geriatric care center would be located on Krumkill Rd. and would require a zoning change from Residential "A" to a Planned Residential District. Ringler said no application for the facility has been submitted.

Work has begun on an Albany County Association for Retarded Citizens facility on the corner of Krumkill Rd. and Blessing Rd. The Krumkill Manor development and the ARC home will share the cost and use of a sewage pumphouse.

Soil tests and slope tests are currently being conducted and no information was available to the board on those tests. The Krumkill Manor development is being proposed by the owners of the land, RHD Construction Company.

In another matter, the board discussed traffic safety of a preliminary plan for the proposed 59-lot Brookside Meadows development on Wemple Rd. and Windham Hill Rd. in Glenmont.

The land is zoned Residential "AA" and located along the banks of the Dowerskill. The developer plans to regrade the land and fill some of the lower areas, according to Surveyor Lindsay Boutelle. The plans include putting a drainage system in place of the existing surface tributaries. The Dowerskill will be unaffected, according to Boutelle. The owner of the proposed development owns land on both sides of the Dowerskill at the site. Water and sewer service is available at the site, according to Boutelle.

The average lot size would be approximately 14,000 square feet, Boutelle said.

The entrance to the development would be Somerset Dr. and located north of Windham Hill Rd. Two plans were discussed regarding the distance from Windham Hill Rd. to Somerset Dr.

The board discussed traffic sight distance and the location of Somerset Dr. to Windham Hill Rd. and a high point in Wemple Rd. Assistant Town Planner Melanie Schmidt presented the board with a drawing showing the approximate topography of Wemple Rd. and the location of the development's proposed intersection. The board consensus was to locate Somerset Dr. 100 feet from the high point of Wemple Rd. and 310 feet from Windham Hill Rd., although the board took no official action on the matter.

The board approved a request to revise a lot line of lot 27 on Frances Ln. off of School House Rd. in North Bethlehem.

Boutelle made the request in order to increase the lot size from 9,020 square feet to 9,781 square feet. The revised lot line will take away some of the land on lot 29. The request was made so that the proposed home will not exceed the 15 percent lot occupancy limitation.

The board tabled a request from Dale Richter to remove trees from the front of the Glenmont Square Shopping Center. Richter had asked that trees be removed from the front of his photo store saying that the trees blocked his store sign from clear view.

Garage change okayed by board

The Bethlehem Board of Appeals Wednesday gave informal approval to four variance applications, including a modification for a special exception variance to allow the construction of a two car garage and an attached two car garage at 7 Paterson Dr. in Glenmont.

Vincent Riemma was granted the variance modification because the original plans for an under-building garage couldn't be carried out due to the slope of the land. He will return at the board's next meeting to request a modification to a previous special exception to build four car garages at 9, 13 and 15 Tice Lane. Those buildings were also given a previous variance to construct an under-building garage.

The board informally granted approval to James and Karyn Connolly for a variance to construct a screened porch and bi-level deck at 74 Fairlawn Ave., Selkirk. The variance was required because the addition exceeded the allowable lot occupancy.

The board informally granted a modification to a previous variance and an extension of time for William and Patricia McMullen to relocate a 36-foot by 55-foot building at the corner of Beaver Dam Rd. and Rt. 144 in Selkirk.

A front yard setback variance was granted to Huntington Associates for a newly constructed home at 35 Stockbridge Rd., Slingerlands. Due to an engineering error, the garage to the building was built too close to the roadway.

The board presented final resolution approval to Joseph A. Tannatta to convert the use of 405A Schoolhouse Rd. in North Bethlehem from an apartment building to a nursery school and day care center.

The next meeting of the Bethlehem Board of Appeals will be Oct. 19.

Rt. 9 study

currently several rural residential roads lead to Rt. 9W that carry very little traffic and therefore do not merit special access ramps or signalization. For that reason, access to and from Rt. 9W has become increasingly dangerous, he said.

Jacquemart also said that commercial development is difficult along Rt. 9W because of the many turns and rises in the southern half of the town. Those constraints limit the amount of truck traffic the road can safely accommodate, he said.

Numerous points were raised by the four groups during their discussions. There was a steady balance between the four groups of residents, business interests, town board, zoning, planning members and neighborhood associations. Some of the points that were generally made by all of the groups were:

- Impose limits on the amount of truck traffic and lower the speed limit.

- Preserve green space and wetlands. One group suggested setting impact fees for development to help buy lands to be preserved. Another group said it didn't want Rt. 9W to become "another Wolf Rd."

- Limit industrial growth to clean, light industry. One group discussed the possibility of creating new zone classifications for commercial interests.

- Restrict signage and require deeper setback distances for businesses.

- Respect the rights of the locality and consider the interests of residents living along the corridor now when decisions are made in the study.

- Look at alternate traffic possibilities, such as specialized roadways for trucks to and from the Thruway, factories and the Conrail Selkirk Yards.

Dr. Leslie Loomis, superintendent of Bethlehem Central Schools, was unable to attend the meeting, but did send a letter asking that the study consider lowering the speed limit, limiting truck traffic and limiting commercial growth along the corridor. The school district tentatively plans to build an addition on to its Glenmont School which may be occupied as early as the fall of 1991.

The next public meeting on the Corridor Study is scheduled for Oct. 25 when an interim report will be delivered. The meeting will be open to the public, but the public will not be allowed to take part in the discussion.

In December, there will be a second interim report presented to the planning board specifying the goals and objectives established in the study based on public records and information collected at Thursday night's meeting. That information will be discussed in mid-December with the public at a second workshop.

The first draft report is due in January and will be delivered to the planning board. The final Corridor study report is due at the end of January.

Clarksville water costs pared for rebid

By Cathi Anne M. Cameron

The proposed Clarksville water district figured prominently in the New Scotland Town Board meeting Wednesday night.

In a letter to Town Supervisor Herbert Reilly, Ronald Laberge of Laberge Engineering discussed several plan revisions which would address the Farmer's Home Administration (FmHA) concerns on cost overruns in the five-year-old project.

The town obtained a grant from the FmHA to finance the water district, and when unexpectedly high bids were received for the project, the administration suggested the town undertake cost-saving measures. Laberge introduced several, which included the possibility of a less expensive pumping station, modification of planned landscaping and tree removal, alteration of site grading costs and other revised or eliminated services.

The board had already decided that new bids for the Clarksville water district would be solicited. Notices for the re-bidding will be placed in several local publications and with the Eastern Contractors Association starting Oct. 14. The bids will be opened Nov. 30, and the town will then consider Laberge's cost-saving recommendations.

Reilly is also arranging a meeting for residents in the Unionville area who are interested in pursuing a public water system.

Several issues regarding the Orchard Park development also were discussed. The board has decided that the undeveloped lots, which have become overgrown, do not have to be maintained, as the town has no zoning or building statute that could be used to enforce a clean up. Trees proposed for the cul-de-sac were not recommended, as they would interfere with plowing and snow storage, but the "resolution of beautification" request for a green space buffer zone has been given to the planning board for review. Peter Van Zetten, town highway supervisor, will examine existing drainage problems.

No response has been received yet from the state Department of Transportation (DOT) to a letter from the board regarding the safety of the railroad bridge walkway entering Voorheesville.

A young woman was injured by a car in the walkway, and the board would like to raise the sidewalks or obtain other safety measures from the DOT. It was noted that engineers had recently been seen taking measurements at the site.

In other action, the board:

- Approved "housekeeping measures" for the town's zoning code concerning businesses conducted in the home. The new definitions will limit in-home occupations in residential zones to "consulting specialties" such as medicine, clergy and law.

- Received a letter from the Northeast Pipeline Project of Algonquin Gas Transmission Company explaining that they may be contacting some New Scotland residents to acquire property to run a gas pipeline through the area.

- Received a proposed franchise agreement from Lee Haele of Haele TV Inc. which would provide cable television service to areas of New Scotland not reached by the current franchisee, Adams-Russell Cable Services. Haele said he would offer a similar channel selection, and a system that would not require the use of a company-owned converter box.

- Passed a resolution allowing New Scotland to enter into an agreement with the City of Albany for a grant in the name of all ANSWERS plant users. This would allow New Scotland to receive 75 percent funding for all "Local Reuse and Recovery programs" such as recycling, collection and processing.

- Reappointed Planning Board Chairman Robert Hampston to the Zoning Board of Appeals. The board also requested resumes for a seven-year term on the Planning Board, running from Oct. 8, 1988,

Coeymans man charged with pot possession

A 20-year-old Coeymans man was charged with possession of marijuana and several traffic violations following a car chase Sunday morning, Bethlehem police said.

Police said the man was observed traveling a high speed on Rt. 32 by an officer. When the officer tried to stop the car, the driver increased his speed and unsafely passed several vehicles, police said. The man also disobeyed a one-way sign on Tierney Ave. during the chase before being apprehended on Mosher Rd., police said.

Police found a bag of marijuana in the possession of the man and two bags of marijuana in the car.

The man was also charged with reckless endangerment and ticketed for travel the wrong way on a one-way street, driving without headlights, speeding, passing through a red light, failure to comply with a police officer, reckless driving, passing on the right, unlicensed operation, and failure to signal for a turn.

The man was remanded to Albany County Jail, police said.

through Oct. 7, 1995. Annick Belleville is the current board member.

Finally, two work sessions were set to draft the 1989 budget. They will take place on Oct. 12 and 18 at 7 p.m. Budget hearings will be held after the preliminary budget is drafted.

Richard Switzer
Glenmont man
receives award

Richard M. Switzer of Glenmont has been chosen by the state Head Injury Association, Inc., to receive the 1988 Thomas G. Gilbert Memorial Award in recognition of his distinguished services to persons with head injuries in the state.

Switzer is deputy commissioner of the Office of Vocational Rehabilitation of the state Education Department. He previously served as assistant commissioner for that office and as headmaster of the Human Resources School in Albertson.

As a special and vocational education consultant, he has worked with school districts in the state to design programs, buildings and transportation systems to accommodate handicapped students. Switzer is a past member of the President's Committee on Employment of the Handicapped, of which he was assistant to the chairman.

He received a Citation of Merit from SUNY College at Oswego for outstanding work in the field of education and the Al Felemt Award for Outstanding Achievement in the field of rehabilitation from the United Cerebral Palsy Association of the state. Active in many professional organizations he has taken leadership roles as a member of the board of various rehabilitation organizations.

He received a bachelor's degree from Oswego Teacher's College and a master's degree in education from Syracuse University.

Memorial society elects Philips, Estey

The Albany Area Memorial Society recently elected Alice A. Philips of Delmar as its new president, and Charles Estey of Delmar as treasurer.

Robert Lestrangle of Delmar was also elected to serve on the board of directors.

Galesi, Michaels looking at deal

By Cathi Anne M. Cameron

While he describes their relationship to the Tall Timbers property and Galesi Group Real Estate at present as that of a "concerned neighbor", John Michaels and the Michaels Group may be far more than that soon.

According to New Scotland Supervisor Herbert Reilly, Michaels, the builder/developer of large home and townhouse developments, is currently in negotiations with the Galesi Group, the present owners of the controversial Tall Timbers property.

Michaels, who has built developments including Salem Hills in Voorheesville, Governor's Square in East Greenbush, Mill Creek and Knox Woods in Clifton Park, and several others in the Capital District, currently owns a parcel of land adjacent to the Tall Timbers site.

John Michaels, executive vice president of the Michaels Group, confirmed last week that his company is interested in developments at the Tall Timbers site, but would not speak further on record about his company's involvement. Galesi representatives could not be reached for comment.

The Michaels parcel is located on Font Grove Road, on a site commonly known as "Dr. Little's" property, according to Reilly.

Should Michaels acquire the additional land, the company would have a sizeable property to develop. Whether it would be an outright purchase or whether Michaels would be the builder in collaboration with Galesi is not yet clear.

As large developments are often built in phases, it is conceivable that the first phase of any development could be built within the five years that William M. Larned and Sons, Inc. has permission to mine on its portion of the Tall Timbers site. The developers would then be ready to build a second phase on the Larned section of the property, just as the mining is scheduled to finish. Mining can be helpful to a developer, because after the mining is finished, the surface area needs less preparation of the ground before initial construction.

One barrier to the development of such a large tract is the necessity for a sewage treatment facility, which Reilly made clear would have to be built by the developer. To be effective, such a facility must be placed on a fast-moving body of water. In this case, the only access to a suitable source — the Normanskill — is through property already owned. Apparently, negotiations are underway to obtain that access from local property owners.

According to Reilly, the sooner the various negotiations are completed, the better. "It certainly would be a bigger package, including water and sewer and roads," he said. "It would help the town to know, to be able to plan better, because we can see what we will have to build in the future — we could make sense out of the whole package at once."

At this point, however, any expectations are extremely preliminary, as even the initial sewer and other permits can take over a year to obtain.

Currently, Michaels is developing Hampton Place, a 156-unit condominium development in North Greenbush. The company has built almost 2,000 units of new housing in the area since 1981.

□ New Scotland budget

the same amount for this past year that they had for 1987, even though tipping fees from 1987 to 1988 had increased. When ANSWERS fees rose again this year — substantially more than last year due to the solid waste crisis — the town was left with an $86,000 difference to make up in 1989.

Bridge repairs also figure largely in the budget. Since the Thruway bridge collapse in 1987, all local bridges have been evaluated by the state Department of Transportation, among them the Cass Hill and Wolf Hill bridges.

Because bridge repair prices were becoming prohibitive for Albany County, the county did a good deal of research on local bridges, and found documents dating back to the 1800's declaring that the Cass Hill and Wolf Hill bridges belong to the town of New Scotland, not to Albany County. Therefore, the town, not the county, is responsible for all future repairs. In 1989, $40,000 has been budgeted for town-wide bridge repairs.

Plank Road and Onesquethaw Creek bridges are slated for changes. And money has been earmarked to connect Onesquethaw Creek Road with Feura Bush Road, at the Willow Road end. That will allow residents to exit directly onto Feura Bush Road. The old Onesquethaw Creek Road bridge, damaged by the one of the town's trucks and currently serviced by a temporary bridge, will be replaced with a walkway.

A backhoe proved expensive for the town as well. Due to a bookkeeping error, the machine, budgeted for and ordered in 1987, was not paid for in that fiscal year. The budget for that year therefore showed an "unexpended balance", or leftover funds of $30,219. Because that showed up as money not used, that amount of funds was eliminated from the 1988 budget as a cost-saving measure. In April of this year, when the town board realized that it had yet to pay for the backhoe, it had to take the $30,219 from money already planned for 1988 expenses. Adding the unexpected $30,219 machinery payment to the budget reduction of 30,219 made unavailable to spend in 1988, the town was out a total of $60,438. A similar situation occurred with a riding mower purchased in 1987 from the same Pennsylvania company.

Other expenses included a rise in health insurance costs. While $54,500 was budgeted for employee health insurance this year, the actual costs will amount to $90,254, Reilly said. In 1989, this will be changed by switching from Empire Blue Cross and Blue Shield to the less-expensive Capital District Physician's Health Plan. In addition, salaries and benefits for all town employees were increased five percent to match the cost of living.

Plank Rd. residents face bridge dilemma

Some New Scotland residents are crossing a bridge over troubled waters and have petitioned the town and the county to repair the 100-year old bridge on Plank Rd.

The Plank Rd. bridge, located off Flat Rock Rd. just east of Clarksville, has been closed for a year because it has a two-ton weight limit, below federal guidelines for bridges. An Albany County-maintained bridge, the county and the town are attempting to come to a solution on reopening it and that could mean reopening the bridge as a walkway with a parking area on Flat Rock Rd.

Nineteen residents have petitioned the town and the county to meet with them and discuss the options. They charge an August meeting between town and county officials was held without their knowledge where the options were discussed and they are urging the bridge be reopened to standard limits but that Plank Rd. not be paved.

A meeting has been scheduled for Thursday at 7:30 p.m. with Plank Rd. residents at the Clarksville Community Center. Town and county officials including the highway superintendent, county engineer and a representative from the county attorney's office will discuss the options for the three families who live on the road.

If the county reinforces the Plank Road bridge, the town will have to build a road for the bridge, at a cost of $55,000. Drawbacks would include weight limitations that would prevent any vehicles other than passenger cars from using the bridge. Even vans may not be allowed.

To build a new, state-of-the-art bridge would cost the county approximately $350,000 — over $116,000 per family — so solutions to the problem will be sought at the Thursday meeting.

Other options include building a new one-lane wooden deck bridge, similar to the one now crossing the Onesquethaw, estimated to cost about $55,000, but it would only allow vehicles weighing up to three tons, and Town Supervisor Herbert Reilly said the road would also have to be upgraded.

Albany County is reluctant to spend $350,000 on a new bridge, Reilly said, pointing out that the bridge is not a top priority — actually the 29th priority on the third list of bridges that need work in the county.

"It's just plain economics," Reilly said of the alternatives, adding that all county residents have to make concessions because bridge and road work repair funds are limited. "Our highway budget is very tight."

However, Albany County officials seem to favor a proposal that would make the bridge a walkway to the other side, with an area for several cars to park on Flat Rock Rd., Reilly said.

After an Aug. 1 meeting, Albany County is willing to pave and fix the bridge as a walkway with barricades at each end, with a parking area across the bridge. Reilly said he would like living on a dead end street and he doesn't see a problem with walking. However, he said he can understand it would be a problem for residents who commute to the Albany area to loop three miles around on a temporary shale road leading to County Rt. 301. The shale road was constructed until the bridge was fixed or replaced.

"It is an inconvenience," Reilly said.

Residents are opposed to the plan to provide a walkway across the Plank Rd. bridge. Property values will decline, it will be an inconvenience to drive three miles around to where the bridge meets Flat Rock Rd., and it would be difficult to provide emergency services such as police, fire and ambulance protection, plus sanitary services, snow removal, and oil deliveries, said Plank Rd. resident Gaetano DeGennaro in an August letter to state Assemblyman Richard Connors.

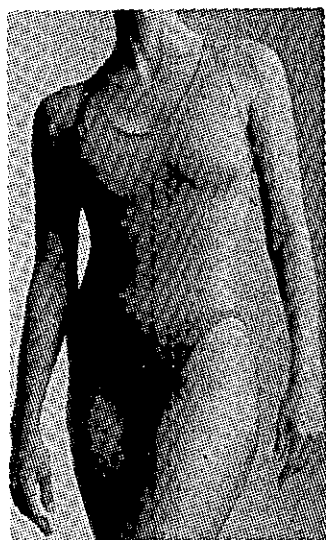

In the year that the bridge has been closed, children walk across the closed bridge to the school bus, residents have to carry their trash and garbage across the bridge to Flat Rock Rd. to be picked up, and during last winter's snowstorms, there were times when residents could not get out or emergency vehicles could get in if needed, DeGennaro said.

In addition, DeGennaro's wife, Marion, and their son had a head-on collision in February with another resident of Plank Rd., Joan McCooey, and her son, on a blind curve on the shale road. Both women were pregnant at the time, DeGennaro said, and all four were taken to the hospital for treatment.

THE YOUTH NETWORK

The Bethlehem Networks Project is the name of a substance abuse prevention project funded by New York State through a block grant from the Federal Government and by the Bethlehem Central School District. The project was developed through brainstorming by several community people, including representatives of the Bethlehem Central schools, Bethlehem Opportunities Unlimited, the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce and the Bethlehem Zephyrs. The activities of the project are designed to reach the adults who have influence, both obvious and subtle, on the youth in our town.

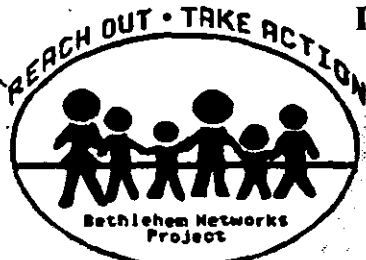

To accomplish this goal, the Network will provide information to the community, help to establish an integrated town-wide "positive influence network" theme and train adults to provide consistent messages to youth of all ages about not using and abusing substances. Already, a number of specific projects are under way:

Our logo, developed through a contest, is being used and seen town-wide. A six-hour training program to be given free to representatives of various local organizations is being scheduled for this fall. Recommended policies for businesses and other organizations in the town regarding the use of alcohol, drugs and cigarettes have been developed and are being presented through group and individual contacts. Youth advisory groups have been formed at each school level. A resource booklet for parents and students will be ready for distribution soon. And this weekly column will give us an opportunity to keep you informed about these and many other projects, as well as allow numerous community groups to let the public know about the work they are doing for our young people.

If you would like to participate as an individual or as a group representative, please call me at 439-7740, or write me at the Bethlehem Networks Project, 355 Delaware Ave., Delmar 12054. Also, if you have specific topics you would like to see discussed in this column, please let me know.

Hard Choices.

Your mother, father, older relatives and friends. As the elderly meet the challenge of living independent, productive lives, they often look to you for help, love, and your ability to provide them security.

You may be faced with hard choices: "How can I help my mother live her own life?" "Our parents' finances are fine now - but what if they need care in the future?" "Dad just needs someone to check up on him and I'm out of town a lot."

With Senior Care Connection, you can reach the right decisions about the hard choices. We address these questions daily, and offer help by arranging services, maneuvering through the bureaucracy, and maintaining personal contact with your loved ones.

For a brochure on Senior Care Connection, or to set up an appointment, call us today at (518) 272-1777 and receive an up-to-date report on long-term care insurance.

To the rescue

Bethlehem fire fighters in drill

Emergency medical personnel and firefighters from Bethlehem including the Bethlehem ambulance squad, the Delmar Fire Department, Selkirk Fire Department, Ravena ambulance squad and Bethlehem Police Department spent Saturday morning practicing a mass casualty drill involving an overturned bus. Some 20 local teens arrived early and were assigned various injuries to act out as "crash victims." The "victims" were placed in the bus and told what their injuries were, by Ray Lindstruth, a Bethlehem Police Officer. The teens acted the parts right down to using fake blood to simulate cuts. Members of the Selkirk Fire Department, top left and right, cut through the top of the bus to perform rescue operations. After the firemen gained access to the bus, the "victims" were carried out and taken to a triage area for treatment, bottom left. Kristin Bleyman, bottom right, waits patiently to be taken from the bus by ambulance crew member Jerry Hallenbeck to receive treatment for her "injuries." Approximately 40 medical and fire personnel took part in the two hour drill according to Bethlehem Ambulance Capt. Herbert Parisi, who set the drill up. On the cover: Kenny Layman, right, continues to act his part as he is loaded on to a stretcher as Selkirk Assistant Chief Thomas Docous Jr., left, and Delmar Assistant Chief Paul Woodin supervise the move. Sal Prividera Jr. photos

Asbestos extensions sought

Today (Wednesday) is the deadline for school districts to file their asbestos management plan or their application for an extension with the state Education Department.

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Central School District expects to file their management plan required under the federal Asbestos Hazard Emergency Response Act (AHERA). The Bethlehem Central School District has approved filing for the extension through May 1989, but expects to have its plan completed by November. The Voorheesville Central School District was expected to decide to file for an extension at last night's (Tuesday) meeting. The district expects to have its plan complete by late in the year.

The management plan is the culmination of testing results and recommendations for handling asbestos materials in school buildings. Districts will have the option to remove, encapsulate or enclose any asbestos that is found. The AHERA regulations also require a monitoring program of any asbestos left in school buildings.

Districts that do not comply with the filing deadline potentially face penalties of up to $15,000 per day, said Paul Reed, an Environmental Protection Agency compliance officer. "We don't anticipate that kind of thing," he said.

Reed said the full penalty was a "worst case scenario" and would only be in effect if the district had no intention of obeying the AHERA law. However, any fines imposed would be returned to the school district to be used to comply with AHERA up to the district's total cost, he said. Any excess charge would have to be paid by the district and any excess fine monies would be put into an asbestos fund.

GE dedicates plant with its partner

General Electric Plastics and Huntsman Chemical Corp. have dedicated a new manufacturing facility at GE's Selkirk plant that the two corporations will operate under a joint venture agreement.

The $60 million plant was dedicated at ceremonies Tuesday although commissioning of the plant began earlier this year.

The facility will produce polystyrene and modified polyphenylene oxide products used in automobile instrument panels, computer and business machine housings and other electrical appliances.

GE Plastics, based in Pittsfield, Mass., and Huntsman Chemical, a Salt Lake City, Utah, corporation, are equal owners of the venture and GE has full responsibility for running the new plant. About 40 people are employed at it.

Since its start-up, the plant has manufactured general purpose polystyrene and high-impact polystyrene that will be sold to GE Plastics. The plant is also expected to produce polystyrene products that Huntsman Chemical will market.

The joint venture agreement is described by GE officials as a "unique marriage" between customer and supplier. Huntsman Chemical has been the primary supplier of polystyrene for NORYL resin, a GE product manufactured at Selkirk.

"Huntsman Chemical and GE Plastics are an excellent team because our combined resources and experiences gives both companies the ability to extend product lines, enhance quality and increase sales volume," said Barry Gibbs, manager of the GE Plastics operation at Selkirk, in a press release.

Ronald Rasband, president and chief operating officer of Huntsman Chemical, said, "The barriers of the old buyer-seller relationship between our companies have been torn down. We have reached the ultimate destination of the supplier and customer relationship."

Chemical; Bill Westendorf, vice president and general manager of GE Plastics' manufacturing division; John Huntsman, founder of Huntsman Chemical; and Glen Hiner, senior vice president of GE Plastics.

Stewarts' window broken

Bethlehem police are looking for a young woman who broke a plate glass window at the Stewarts Ice Cream store on Delaware Ave. Police said a store employee reported Thursday a woman walked up to the door and when she discovered the store was closed she kicked the window. After the window broke, the woman drove off, police said.

Glenmont home robbed

Bethlehem police are investigating the theft of a television and a microwave oven from a Retreat House, Rd. in Glenmont on Friday.

The home was entered through a side door, police said. The only items taken were the television and the oven worth a total of $900.

Clarksville teen charged with DWI

A 16-year-old Clarksville man was charged with driving while intoxicated early Sunday morning after he was involved in a one-car crash, Bethlehem police said.

Police said the teen went off the right side of Elm Ave. and struck a mailbox. He then crossed the road and struck a mailbox and a tree before the car stopped, police said.

Police said they found him intoxicated and uninjured. The teen was arrested for DWI after failing a pre-screening device test. Two passengers in the car received minor injuries during the crash.

Program to focus on displaced homemaker

The Albany Displaced Homemaker Center will begin a four-week work re-entry program on Tuesday, Oct. 14.

The program is designed to assist women who need to return to the paid work force. The program consists of career assessment and planning, speakers provide information on training, educational and career opportunities, a therapist works with the group on issues of self confidence, assertiveness, problem solving and decision making. There are field trips to employment sites and each participant has an opportunity to earn one college credit from Hudson Valley Community College with a course in practical communications.

The six-week, four days a week, six hours a day program is free of charge and is opened to all displaced homemakers. For information call the center at 434-3103, or go to 315 Hamilton St., Albany.

New corporate sponsor for Glenmont Job Corps

The Singer Company Education Division, the Glenmont Job Corps Center's corporate sponsor, was recently acquired in a financial buy-out by Integrated Resources, Inc.

Notification from corporate offices in Rochester indicate that no changes in the existing program are planned for the immediate future, and activities at the Glenmont site will simply continue consistently with current operations.

Integrated Resources, Inc., is an established, publicly-held organization with about 20 years of experience in the areas of investments, life insurance programs and professional money management services. In securing the Singer Education Division, now to be known as Career Systems Development Corporation, it takes on a highly acclaimed educational assessment and enhancement program centered around ultimate career placement assistance. The education division concept was developed by Singer in the late 1960's.

Programs run by the Career Systems Development Corporation are funded by grants from the U.S. Department of Labor.

RCS bond issue to voters

By Sal Prividera Jr.

Next Wednesday, voters in the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Central School District will decide on a $9.5 million 20-year bond issue to pay for additions to the Becker and Coeymans Elementary Schools.

Voting will be at the senior high school from 1 to 9 p.m.

The bond issue will also fund gym and library additions to the senior high school. Architects and engineers fees and fees for a clerk of the works are included in the bond amount as well as approximately $200,000 for equipment and contingencies.

Identical additions will be built at the two elementary schools and will include 13 classrooms, one physical education station, one music room, one art room, one combination music and art room, and an elevator.

If the bond issue is passed, construction could begin in 1989 and the buildings occupied by the 1990-90 school year. Once the construction is completed, the Ravena Elementary School would no longer be used for classes because of deficiencies in the building.

School district residents in the Town of Bethlehem would have a tax rate increase of $12.44 per $1,000 of assessed valuation in the first year, which would decrease to $4.34 per $1,000 in the final year of the bond. New Scotland residents would pay $17.76 per $1,000 in the first year decreasing to $6.64 per $1,000.

Coeymans residents will pay $14.19 per $1,000 in the first year, while New Baltimore residents can expect to pay $11.90 per $1,000.

The tax figures are estimated using an interest rate of 7.5 percent, said Rodger Lewis, district business administrator. State aid will cover approximately 52 percent of the project costs, he said.

Lewis estimated the cost to the taxpayer based on average assessments will be approximately $60 in the first year for taxpayers in all three towns.

Slingerlands man on board of directors

Robert W. Johnson III of Slingerlands has been elected to the Eddy Memorial Geriatric Center's board of directors.

Johnson is a principal in the Troy law firm of McIsaac, McIsaac & Johnson. He is a member of the Estate Planning Council of Northeastern New York and the Rensselaer County Chamber of Commerce.

Eddy Memorial Geriatric Center, a member of the The Eddy family of services, provides a broad range of residential and community-based health care services to residents of the Capital Region.

Receives certificate of recognition

Heather Constantine of Feura Bush was honored recently with a certificate of recognition from Bellevue Hospital in Schenectady.

A nursing student at Russell Sage College, Troy, she was one of four runners-up for nursing achievement awards established by the Bellevue Hospital board of directors and by Grace G. Jorgensen, M.D., president of the hospital's board.

Walsh awarded car from Mary Kay

Kathleen Walsh of Delmar has been awarded one of Mary Kay Cosmetics, Inc.'s, most sought after prizes — the free use of a pink Buick Century.

Walsh, an independent sales director for Mary Kay, was awarded the car in recognition of her leadership and sales achievements with the Dallas-based cosmetic company. She led her sales unit to exceed specified sales during a six-month qualification period.

Receives alumni award

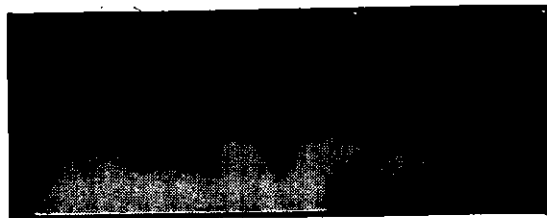

Wayne Fry of Mosher Rd., Delmar, was chosen to receive Philadelphia College of Textiles and Science's Alumni Association's 50 year medal in appreciation of his leadership, dedication and years of professional and community service.

He received the award on May 15 while commemorating the golden anniversary of his 1938 graduation from the college.

He was honored at a special reunion reception and participated in the commencement exercises.

Troopers graduate

Among the recent graduates of the New York State Police Academy were Daniel B. Hart and Raymond Marrero, both of Slingerlands, and Willie J. Johnson Jr. of Selkirk.

message... We are teaching about the perils of chemical use and turn around and put our name on something that can be used for it."

Stein said the juniors and seniors are not going to fight over the champagne glass prom favors because they did not "think was much we could do."

But, he said, the seniors are planning to try to keep the mugs by circulating a petition among the 305 members of the class and by encouraging parents to call members of the board of education.

Stein also maintains the souvenir glasses and mugs would not see much use. Last year's proms had champagne glasses for favors and he said after talking to classmates "none of them have used them to drink out of... They are are sitting in their rooms collecting dust."

Hunter told the seniors they could have mugs without handles. The students and Hunter have differing opinions about what having a handle on the mugs means. Hunter contends the handle is what makes the mug identifiable as a "beer mug."

"The handle implies that it's a beer mug. Put that in front of someone and ask them what it's used for. They will say that's a mug, a beer drinking mug," Hunter said.

Stein has a different view: "The only difference I know is one you spill in your lap and one you don't." He said students who want to drink "will do so, directly from the bottles or from paper cups if necessary."

Both sides agree that it is up to the individual what beverages the mug is used to consume.

Hunter said denying the glasses and mugs is a "difficult stance to take. We know (substance abuse) is a community and school issue; we're trying to do one small piece of our job in this big issue."

The students are also upset about not being consulted by Hunter when the decision was made after the principal had said he would consult with them. Hunter said he will be meeting with student groups to discuss alternatives for a cup, which "doesn't promote the use of alcohol, yet be something for class pride and class spirit."

Conference targets youngsters

Participants will also have the chance to attend workshops on decision making, teaching children about drugs and alcohol, communication and stress for dual career families, accepting your children, values and spirituality, children and television, fathers and fatherhood, grandparents and other resources, as well as a children's panel. Each workshop will be given twice.

Registration will be held from 3:15 to 4 p.m. on the day of the conference, followed by O'Gorman's presentation from 4 to 5 p.m. The workshop sessions will be held from 5:15 to 6:15 p.m., and 7:30 to 8:30 p.m., with dinner from 6:30 to 7:15 p.m. Cost of the conference will be $3 per person and $5 per couple with dinner included.

The conference is funded by a grant from the state Department of Substance Abuse through BOU. Billings also said she was "really appreciative" that Bethlehem Central was hosting the conference by opening up the middle school and providing dinner for participants.

The Albany County Substance Abuse Prevention Program, a program of the Albany County Department of Mental Hygiene, provides education, training and consultation to community groups, parents and school districts. The "Home is Where the Start is" committee is made up of parents representing community action groups within the county.

RCS hands Voorheesville third shutout

By Mark Stuart

For four quarters on Saturday, two football teams met on a cold, wet field on Rt. 9W in South Bethlehem. One team fought to stay alive in the Colonial Conference race. The other fought for pride.

In the end, the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Indians would emerge with their hopes intact for finishing in the top half of the conference, but at the expense of the winless Voorheesville team that continued to struggle for respectability.

The final score was 14-0. It was the third game in a row the Blackbirds had failed to get on the board. Not since Sept. 17 has Voorheesville been able to score (when a touchdown was scored against the undefeated conference leading Watervliet Cannoneers). Over their last three games, the Blackbirds have been outscored 58-0.

The Indians, on the other hand, have pulled themselves together after a 6-0 loss to Lansingburgh on September 24 to post wins against Cohoes and Voorheesville. RCS running back Bob O'Neill ran for a combined 412 yards and five touchdowns in those wins.

Saturday's game began with a scoreless first half, something both teams have become accustomed to lately. But in the second half, RCS opened up with a simple handoff up the middle to O'Neill who converted it into a 66-yard touchdown run. The score after the missed 2-point extra point try was 6-0.

Voorheesville fought hard to make a comeback, but RCS Head Coach Gary VanDerzee welcomed Voorheesville tight end Craig Lapinsky to Indian turf with double coverage and keyed his defensive line on running back Ray Augustine. Needless to say, Voorheesville punter Harold Gosling got a lot of playing time.

RCS shut the door on the Blackbirds when O'Neill capped a 10 play, 62-yard drive with a two-yard touchdown run. He would follow that up with a successful two-point conversion run to make it 14-0.

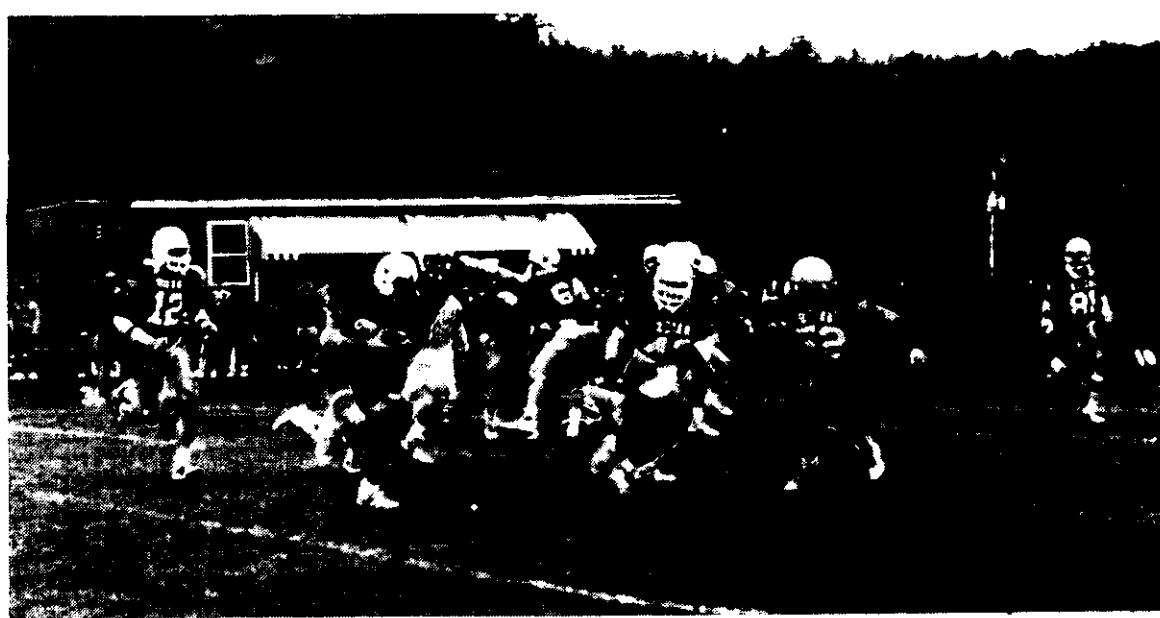

O'Neill finished up with 154 yards on 25 carries for two touchdowns and a two-point conversion. Teammate running back A.J. Nunziato had 10 carries for 34 yards. Coupled with 24 yards in passing, the Indians had 204 total yards while the Blackbirds had only 33 yards rushing and 27 yards passing for a total of 60 yards.

Defensively, RCS was penalized eight times for 70 yards, while Voorheesville gave up only five yards all day on a single penalty.

Voorheesville turned the ball over two times in the first half and RCS lost the ball on two fumbles and an interception.

Both coaches said they were pleased with their team's performance. "Once we stopped hurting ourselves like we did in the first half, we did well. The kids have really come together as a team," said VanDerzee.

Voorheesville Head Coach Dave Burnham said he felt his team made a "substantial" improvement over the previous two shutouts and expects the team to do well against Mohonasen (2-2) at 1:30 p.m. Saturday in Voorheesville.

Voorheesville running back Ray Augustine is pursued by RCS's George White (12) and Chris Mogul (42) in third quarter action Saturday.

Mark Stuart

"The kids aren't down, they felt they played a good game against a stronger team," Burnham said.

Burnham commended the performance of Augustine and running back Ryan Brennan. He also was pleased with the performances of defensive ends Craig Schreivogl and Jim Hooks, who were moved to the position after Burnham introduced his new two-way platooning "realignment" that has eliminated the number of players required to play both ways.

Meanwhile, VanDerzee will probably continue his conservative running game when they go up against Albany Academy (4-1) on Saturday at 1:30 p.m.

Sectional upset rocks Voorheesville girls

By Rick Leach

Going into the first round of play in the Class C Section II tournament against Cobleskill last Tuesday, the Voorheesville girls' varsity tennis team had every reason to be confident.

They were the top seed, the defending champions and they had just breezed through a relatively easy regular season in the Colonial Council. They also had defeated the Red Devils earlier in the season. However, as is often the case in sports, nothing is guaranteed. The Ladybirds were stunned in a 3-2 loss that sent them packing without reaching the finals, a feat they had accomplished for the past three seasons.

The key to the Voorheesville downfall were the singles matches, where the Ladybirds dropped all three in straight sets. The number one singles match was the hardest to swallow. Michelle Petre lost in three straight sets despite fighting back to 6-4 in the final set.

Number two Courtney Langford and number three Jen Toritto also were defeated.

The only Voorheesville wins of the day came from the number one doubles team of Kris Flanders and Denise Hoagland and number two doubles team of Tricia Carmody and Dee Gobielle.

The heartbreaking defeat leaves the Ladybirds with hopes of doing better in this week's Individual Sectional tournament. Petre and Hoagland, quarterfinalists in last year's tournament, will be playing again and be the top hope for Coach Tom Kurkjian's troops. Flanders and Toritto will team up for doubles and Langford and Gobielle will head into singles competition.

In the first round of play, Gobielle will face Saratoga's Jenny Whalen, the two-time defending Section II Class C singles champion.

THE HEATING SYSTEM OF TOMORROW CAN BE YOURS TODAY

ELPAN® electric and VANPAN® hot water baseboard heating systems are the most advanced heating systems in the world. They are the only ones that use the unique HEAT-ENCLOSURE® concept.

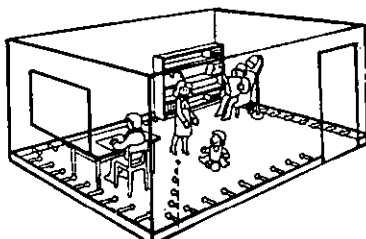

They enclose each room with uniform, homogenized, radiant heat to provide the ULTIMATE in comfort.

HEAT-ENCLOSURE® uses either electric or hot water radiant baseboard heaters only 1" wide by 5" high in place of the customary wooden baseboards on all four walls of a room to surround the room with a uniform low temperature source of radiant heat which results in completely UNIFORM temperature in the living area.

The RADIANT BASEBOARD's were developed in Denmark in the early 1970's and have been used in thousands of homes in Europe for over ten years. They have been proven in both laboratory tests and actual use to be the most ATTRACTIVE, COMFORTABLE, HEALTHY, ENERGY SAVING heating systems available for heating homes and buildings.

The HEAT-ENCLOSURE® radiant heat envelopes the body in draft free homogenized heat and ensures the same temperature at the feet and head levels for the utmost COMFORT.

The radiant heat, which is light and pleasant, is strongest at floor level and diminishes upwards on the walls. This makes ELPAN® or VANPAN® perfect for rooms with cathedral ceilings since only the living area is heated.

The heat blanket created under the ceiling by other systems is eliminated with HEAT-ENCLOSURE®. Because the room is heated uniformly 30-40% ENERGY SAVINGS can be obtained over other systems.

Installed and tested in hundreds of American homes, ELPAN® and VANPAN® are now available for installation in YOUR home.

HEAT-ENCLOSURE® is the greatest breakthrough in heating comfort since central heating.

It gives:

"GREATER COMFORT WITH LOWER ENERGY CONSUMPTION"

Eagles hold off, scare Albany High

Crowd treated to 0-0 heartstopper

By John Bellizzi III

After slaughtering Bishop Maginn 39-0 the week before to keep their league record unblemished at 2-0, Big Ten football powerhouse Albany High was expected to dominate their non-league contest against Bethlehem Central Friday night.

The outstanding defense of the defending Gold Division champions rose to the occasion and shut out the Eagles. Unfortunately, Albany reciprocated with the same degree of frugality. In other words, the teams played to a scoreless tie.

The 0-0 tie brings Bethlehem's record for the to 2-2-1, but doesn't affect their 1-2 Suburban Council record. The Eagles are currently in second place behind 3-1 Burnt Hills in the four-team Gold Division.

The Eagles almost pulled off a last-minute victory in the final seconds of the game. Two complete passes from quarterback Dave Sodergren at midfield sparked a tremendous BC drive that moved the ball close to field goal range.

A 30-yard field goal looked like a sure thing for BC's Lance Sprinkle, but a holding penalty complicated things for the Eagles. With 26 seconds left in the game, Sprinkle's 41-yard field goal attempt was slightly wide, dashing Bethlehem's final hopes of victory.

The field goal attempt was not the first scoring drive that didn't deliver Friday night. Sodergren intercepted an Albany pass late in the first half to give the Eagles possession on Albany's 24. Following a 10-yard holding penalty, the Eagles came back with a with successful gains by running backs Sprinkle, Pete Bragaw, and Bo Acquario; as well as an 18-yard pass from Sodergren to Scott Hodge. Just as the Eagles got inside the Albany 10-yard line, Sodergren was intercepted by Albany, abruptly ending the scoring drive.

In addition to BC's outstanding defensive play, Pete Coccozza's punts were key in holding Albany scoreless. Coccozza launched several punts that were good for 45 to 50 yards, often going out of bounds or downed yards from the goal line.

With two consecutive non-league games behind them, the Eagles will face Suburban Council foe Guilderland away on Friday night. The Dutchmen will be looking to avenge last year's 35-7 trouncing by BC.

Mayer, Ryan shine in BC's winless week

By Shannon Perkins

The Bethlehem girls' field hockey team started off last week with an upsetting 3-1 loss to Saratoga and ended it with a discouraging 2-0 loss to Niskayuna.

Sascha Mayer scored BC's only goal against Saratoga as she dodged the defensive line for an unassisted shot on goal. Kerry Fitzpatrick played an outstanding defensive game as both a fullback and goalie.

On Friday, the girls lost to Niskayuna in a terrible 2-0 upset. The girls had trouble getting the ball in the net, and coupled with the problem of having to adjust to Niskayuna's choppy field, were unable to score. Kelly Ryan turned in one of her best games of the season at fullback.

Today, Wednesday, the girls are scheduled to travel to Columbia. They expect a tough game, but seem confident that they have the better skills to beat the Blue Devils.

BC will finish out the week with a game against Scotia at home.

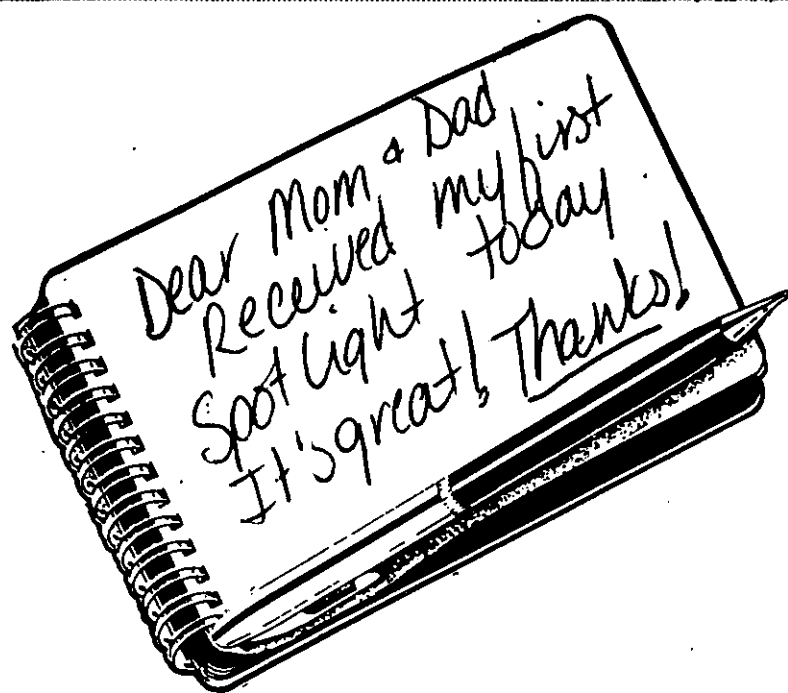

Bethlehem girls settle for 3-way tie for first

By Kevin Schoonover

The Lady Eagles Tennis Team ended the season in a three-way tie for first in the Gold Division. They placed in the top two in the Section Two Finals this week. They started the team sectionals by beating Linton 9-0. The Eagle team then shutout Guilderland 9-0 before meeting Saratoga in the finals.

The Individual Section II Finals begin today. BC will send Kristen Jones as the first singles player.

She is seeded second to a girl she lost a close match to earlier this year. The second singles player will be the winner of a BC playoff between Robin Richards, Valarie Maider, and Gretchen Reed. The first doubles team is made up of both co-captains, Julie Hart, and Megan Mitchell, who are seeded third. The second doubles team is Sue Shayagani and Heather Syrett, who are seeded fifth. The finals start today, with the semifinals on Tuesday, Oct. 18, and the finals next Wednesday.

Undefeated streak ends at 7

By Matt Hladun

They say nothing lasts forever, and the Voorheesville boys' varsity soccer team found this out the hard way by losing two streaks in one game, but still holding on to first place by a half-game in a tight Colonial Council.

They faced Waterford last Monday in a game they knew they couldn't take lightly. They entered with a 6-0-1 undefeated record and had yet to be scored on. Unfortunately, both streaks came to an end as the Birds lost to the Fordians 1-0.

Coach Bob Crandall said he felt his team controlled the game and actually played better than their opponents. But as usual, they couldn't put the ball in the net and they eventually paid the price.

With about fifteen minutes left in regulation, Waterford's Tim Williams headed a corner kick past Voorheesville goalie Kevin Davis, on a play in which Davis admitted he should have come out to get the ball.

Nevertheless, it happened no matter who was at fault, and it was the end of the scoreless streak and unbeaten streak.

Soccer

Wednesday, Coach Crandall said he had hoped for a complete turn around against a weak Watervliet team, but it didn't happen.

Crandall said it was the weakest performance he has witnessed by one of his teams in about four or five seasons. Whether it was a lack of concentration, a letdown from Monday's game, or because they were looking ahead to their next game, they just didn't play like a first place team should.

Voorheesville was able to shoot 10 to 12 shots even before Watervliet crossed midfield. But when the Cannoneers finally crossed midfield, they surprised the fans, the Birds and Davis, as they put a shot over Davis to take a 1-0 lead.

Crandall sat his starting forwards down, talked to them, and sent them out with ten minutes to go in the first half. For the last ten minutes, it was all Voorheesville, as they scored three goals in that time span. One by Joe Colburn, the other two by Colin Breeze and Yuki Takase.

In the second half, most of the playing time was devoted to Crandall's reserves. They were again sluggish in the second half and only put one goal in on a shot by Takase, his second of the game.

On Friday, they faced Schalmont for the third time this season, in what would be a usual tough match-up between the Blackbirds and the Sabers, and it was time to get themselves together.

The Birds controlled the first half, and played an even second half. But like their second game against Schalmont, it was Voorheesville who was able to score. With 6:35 left in the second overtime period, Colin Breeze scored off a pass by Brian Tracey, giving Voorheesville a 1-0 victory.

With four league games left on the schedule, its time for the Blackbirds to play the best soccer they possibly can. With an 8-1-1 record, Crandall said he wants his team to take every game as though it were a championship game.

BC golfers improve as Sectionals approach

By Shannon Perkins

The Bethlehem golf team began the week with a strong showing in the Suburban Council Golf Tournament by taking second place behind Shenendehowa.

Matt Young led BC by placing third in the individual standings with an 81 followed by Matt Ahern, 86, John Hanson, 89 and Brad Hall, 90.

On Tuesday, the Eagles travelled to Sycamore Greens in Ravena to take on Mohonasen and Columbia. Although the course was not as difficult as most, the team set a school record and swept both schools, 12-0. Young shot a two-under-par 33 followed by Ahern, 36, Mike Gertsberg, 36, John Hanson, 39, Brad Thomas, 40 and Brad Hall, 41.

On Thursday, the team travelled to Van Patten Country Club to take on the top team in the Blue Division, Shenendehowa. In a close match, the Eagles lost 8-4. Young and Gertsberg both shot 40s.

On Friday, the team finished out the week with an 8-4 win over Guilderland at the Pinehaven Golf Course. Young was the low scorer for BC with a 38.

With three matches left in the season, the team's record stands at 11-4.

Coach Nelson Harrington said "The team has been playing very well at times and they seem to be coming around as Sectionals approach, which should make us a contender for the Class A crown. All the boys on a given day could make the Sectional playoffs."

Voorheesville pacers hampered by illness

By Zack Kendall

At Voorheesville's home meet last Tuesday, the Blackbirds were running below full strength with three runners out with illnesses.

The handicap affected the team greatly as they faced Albany Academy, Schalmont, and Holy Names, all schools perennially strong in cross country. In the end for Voorheesville, Chris Stevens placed first, Bob Sarr second, Derrek Moak third, Joe Genovesi fourth, Stephen Csiza fifth, Darren Ascone sixth, and bringing up the rear were Dave Mistretta and John Wilson.

At Saturday's invitational meet at Saratoga State Park, the Birds had a good showing, with the freshman boys placing well among the 45 schools competing: Stephen Csiza led the Voorheesville runners by placing 15th, Darren Ascone 17th, John Wilson 30th, and Dave Lancor 32nd.

The varsity boys' team placed ninth out of fifteen schools. For Voorheesville, Stevens placed first, covering the 5000-meter course in 18:15. In second was Moak, followed by Sarr, Andy Shearer, Genovesi, Jeff Pierro, and Mistretta. Dorinda Gifford placed 26th in the varsity girls' race.

Ladybirds lose despite Zautner's 52 saves

By Kevin Taylor

The Voorheesville girls' varsity soccer team suffered two critical losses last week in their quest for a sectional bid.

On Tuesday the Ladybirds traveled to Holy Names Academy. The Birds were outplayed and lost 2-0. Coach Richardson was very unhappy with the lack of aggressiveness and sloppy defense the Birds displayed. Goalie Donna Zautner did manage to stop 27 shots and seemed to be the only Blackbird bright spot.

On Thursday the Ladybirds visited Lansingburgh and the game seemed to be an instant replay of Tuesday's game. The Ladybirds lost 4-0 as they couldn't muster up any offense once again and the defense seemed to be non-existent. Once again the only Blackbird bright spot was Zautner who came up with 25 saves. The two losses left the Ladybirds at 4-6 in league and 5-6 overall. The Birds have six games remaining with four on the road. They must win five of them in order for a Sectional bid.

Hawks suffer first loss, 26-14

The unbeaten Bethlehem Hawks hosted a fired up Colonie team and suffered their first defeat of the season by a 26-14 score in Pop Warner football action Saturday.

Shaun Walmsleys two TD's and John Hemstead's 2 point extra point kick were the only points scored by the offense. Chris Lane, Brien Ragone and Kyle Griffin led the team with outstanding line play.

The Falcons traveled to Ballston Spa and lost a heartbreaker 13-6.

The game was a classic defensive battle with three 45-yard plus plays accounting for all three touchdowns. Mike Ryan and Matt Quackenbush's strong play led the defense. Ron Hollis had a 46-yard TD run on a busted forth down punt attempt.

The bright spot of the weekend was provided by the Eagles who scored a 30-0 victory over Cohoes. Jeff Breedon's fumble recovery led a swarming defense. Jason Hood and Dennis O'Shaughnessy also turned in outstanding efforts. Chris Ryan provided gaping holes for the running backs to score five touchdowns.

Saturday marks the final home game for the Hawks and Falcons. The Pee Wees try to even their 2-3 record against East Greenbush, while the Hawks pit their 3-1-1 record against an undefeated Troy team. The Midgets will try to better a 3-2 record against Belmont in Schenectady on Sunday.

5-4 record may be good enough for BC

By Bill Dixon

The Bethlehem boy's soccer team started a series of wins on Oct. 1 with a 3-1 victory over Columbia and seem to enjoy a good thing when they've got it. Almost. Until last Tuesday that is.

Despite having hit the wall last Tuesday in a loss to Queensbury, the Eagles continued on with Thursday's win over Shaker 3-2, and Saturday's win over Saratoga 2-1. The team's record now stands at 5-4, which is strong enough to give the Eagles hopes of entering Sectional championships.

"We're on a roll," said Coach Zachary Assael. "Everyone out there is doing a really good job. We're starting to play more like a team."

With Joe Nathan, Sean McDermott, and Pat Scholes each tallying up one goal for the game, the match saw some very strongly supported efforts upfield. BC was able to exploit some of the severe weaknesses of the Columbia team, most notably its offense. But regardless of how bungled the opposition's efforts may have been, the Eagles' victory was still a "good win", which may be part of the reason why Tuesday's loss to Queensbury seemed so particularly agonizing.

The game looked as if it would end in a tie. With the end of the second half rapidly approaching, the score stood at 1-1 with neither team showing any clear signs of dominance. Then, with less than twenty seconds left on the clock, the Eagles' defense was caught off-guard and Queensbury's front line got a very close shot at the BC goal. It was good.

"It was very frustrating to lose that closely. But it happens" said Assael. "We just let it down for a second, and there it was."

But the Eagles didn't show any signs of letting down the following Thursday as they faced a formidable Shaker team. Shaker took charge of the field early in the game, pressing BC's defense deep into its own backfield. By the end of the first half, Shaker had Bethlehem shut out by two points. This, coupled with the still sour memory of Tuesday's loss, could have been cause for discouragement within the team, but instead served more to instill a needed sense of fire back into the orange ranks.

The second half saw a team brought entirely back together. McDermott and teammate John Evangelista scored Bethlehem's first two goals, tying up game. Then, with less than five minutes left in the fourth quarter, Scholes put one past Shaker to give Bethlehem the edge needed to win the game.

"It was great to see everyone keep it going and not give up. The boys just didn't let it down," said Assael, who himself seemed more than a little impressed by the team's unusual display of bravado.

While the Shaker game had all the elements of the classic comeback story, Saturday's match against Saratoga proved to be somewhat less dramatic. BC took its lead early on and held it. By the end of the first half, the score stood at 2-1 in Bethlehem's favor, McDermott and Scholes having done the honors for the Eagles. The game ended with the score at 2-1 after a more aggressive second half showing by Shaker.

Today, Wednesday, at 4 p.m., the Eagles face Colonie, a game which Assael sees as a pretty even matchup. Although Bethlehem will have to contend with two Spanish exchange students whose reputations precede them, and who both do much to compliment Colonie's offense, BC will have the home field advantage.

"We would really like to prove ourselves", said Assael. "If we play at the level we're capable of, and if we don't get sloppy, we should be able to show these guys something."

Bethlehem splits to post .500 record

By John Bellizzi III

Last Tuesday at Columbia High School, the Bethlehem Central boys' cross country team split a Suburban Council dual meet against two Blue Division hopefuls. After falling to Shenendehowa 22-37 and defeating Columbia 21-35, the Eagles remained at .500, with a 3-3 dual meet record. BC's girls cross country runners, although still not numerous enough to earn team points, continued to turn in impressive individual performances last week as well.

Bethlehem Coach John Nyilis was satisfied with his team's performance against the powerful Plainsmen, who had outrun the Eagles by a much greater margin at the Guilderland Invitational two weeks earlier.

On Tuesday, Shenendehowa finished in first and second place, but Bethlehem's Mike Kimelberg and Chris Engstrom took third and fourth respectively. Brook Tarbell took seventh place and Anthony Scisci, Jason Wilkie and Ken Watson took 11th, 12th and 13th for the Eagles.

Cross Country

Bethlehem easily overcame Columbia in the same race. Kimelberg, Engstrom and Tarbell all crossed the finish line before Columbia's first runner. Scisci finished ahead of Columbia's third runner, and Wilkie and Watson both beat out Columbia's fifth runner. Tom Seagle, normally Bethlehem's fifth runner, dropped out of Tuesday's race due to a hip injury.

In the girls' race, Julie Hammer and Kathy Saba both turned in times under 20:00 for BC, placing third and fourth respectively. Middle Schoolers Kelly Walsh and Annette Cashin also ran well against the older and more experienced competition.

In the junior varsity race, Ryan Lillis and Bob Devine both finished in less than 20:00.

Yesterday, the Eagles were scheduled for a dual meet at Guilderland's Tawasentha Park against Guilderland and Scotia,

Obituaries

K. Jane Brown

K. Jane Brown of Elsmere, a founding member of the Albany Chapter of the National Secretaries Association, now the Professional Secretaries Association, died Friday in the Good Samaritan Home. She was 79.

Brown retired from Zweig & Caldes, where she was a legal secretary, in 1978. She had been a Red Cross volunteer in World War II, and a member of the Third Reformed Church in Albany.

She is survived by a niece, Denise Mason of Latham, and two grand-nieces.

Services were held Monday at the Philip J. Frederick Funeral Home, and burial was in Graceland Cemetery, Albany.

Claude E. Hynds

Claude E. Hynds, a former state official and long-time Delmar resident, died Thursday, Oct. 6. He was 92.

Hynds, a Delmar resident since the 1930's, was acting director of the state Department of Agriculture and Markets' State Food Laboratory until his retirement in 1962.

Hynds was the husband of the late Elizabeth Sperbeck Hynds.

He is survived by his son, Given S. Hynds of Delmar.

Burial was in Seward Center Cemetery in Hyndsville. Contributions may be made to the Cardiology and Surgery Program at St. Peter's Hospital, Albany. Arrangements were by the Applebee Funeral Home in Delmar.

Robert J. Fitzmaurice

Robert J. Fitzmaurice of Ballston Spa, a former school bus driver for Bethlehem Central School District, died Sept. 28.

Fitzmaurice, a former Slingerlands resident, was a member of the Nathaniel Adams Blanchard American Legion Post 1040, the Tri-Valley Chapter of the Holiday Rambler Vehicle Club, and a participant in the Evergreen Dance Club and Helderberg Twirlers Square Dance Club.

He is survived by his wife, Irva Metcalf Fitzmaurice; his daughters, Linda Sano, Kathleen Snyder and Peggy Mitchell; his son, Robert J. Fitzmaurice Jr., and his step-daughter, Kathryn Cravotta. He is also survived by his sister, Mary Rentz; brothers Theodore and Phillip Fitzmaurice; eight grandchildren and several nieces and nephews.

A memorial service was held last Friday at Corpus Christi Catholic Church in Ushers. Arrangements were by Applebee Funeral Home in Delmar.

Louis A. DeBour Sr.

Louis A. DeBour Sr., 81, of Delmar, a native of Surinam, died Sept. 28 in Saint Peter's Hospital, Albany.

Formerly a medical engineer for Kings County Hospital in Brooklyn, DeBour retired in 1979.

He is survived by two sons, Louis DeBour Jr. of Delmar and Henry DeBour of Far Rockaway, a daughter, Diana DeBour of Johnstown, and three grandchildren.

Arrangements were by Meyers Funeral Home in Delmar.

Rosa Elisa Brand

Rosa Elisa Brand, 79, of Selkirk, wife of the late Jerome Brand, died Oct. 4 in St. Peter's Hospital.

She is survived by her three daughters, Dianne Misslinger of Selkirk, Emma Jane Butler of Rotterdam, and Darlene Bray of Jacksonville, Fla.; her son, Carl Nolte of East Brunswick, 11 grandchildren and seven great-grandchildren.

Arrangements were by Meyers Funeral Home in Delmar. Contributions may be made to the American Lung Association.

Terri A. Douglas

Douglas-Bird

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Douglas of Glenmont have announced the engagement of their daughter, Terri A., to Frank F. Bird, son of Constance A. Lavigne of North Adams, Mass., and the late Frederick J. Bird Sr.

A Sept. 1989 wedding is planned.

Mr. and Mrs. Scott L. Janetsy

Tracey Asmus marries

Tracey Lynn Asmus, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Don Asmus of Delmar, and Scott L. Janetsy, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Ethier of Delanson, were married Aug. 20 in Delmar.

Cynthia Leigh Asmus, sister of the bride, was maid of honor. Nicole Ethier served as a bridesmaid. Craig L. Andersen served as best man, and ushers were Ryan W. Asmus and Jaime A. Ethier.

The bride, a graduate of Bethlehem Central High School, is student at the State University at Albany. The bridegroom, a graduate of Duquesne High School, is attending Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University. He is a warrant officer and helicopter pilot with the U.S. Army.

After a wedding trip to Montreal, Canada, the couple will reside at Fort Drum, N.Y.

Lions to conclude light bulb sale

The Bethlehem Lions Club will conclude its 27th annual light bulb sale on Saturday, Oct. 15.

Bulbs will be sold door-to-door in the Tri-Village area. Light Bulb Chairman Dr. Joseph Manzi says sales have been brisk. Proceeds from the sale will be used to support community service projects such as sight and hearing conservation, senior citizens and youth activities.

The Bethlehem Lions Club has sold over 194,000 light bulbs over the past 27 years, lighting up the Tri-Village area with light and community service.

Residents who are not at home when a Lion calls can phone 439-0958 for home delivery.

Del Lanes and Spotlight team for treat cards

Del Lanes and the Spotlight are distributing "Del Lanes Fun Treat Cards," free to parents, for use as Halloween treats. The cards are good for one free game of bowling for any child 12 years of age or younger.

Cards are now available at The Spotlight office at 125 Adams St., Delmar, or at Del Lanes in Elsmere across from Delaware Plaza.

For more information call 439-2224.

Community Corner

"Home is where the start is"

A conference for parents will focus on prevention strategies for parents of elementary age children. The goal is to support parents in raising healthier children who are resistant to alcohol and other drugs.

The conference will feature a speaker and workshop sessions, and is being sponsored by several community groups, including Bethlehem Central Schools, Bethlehem Opportunities Unlimited and Bethlehem Networks Project.

The conference will be held at the Bethlehem Central Middle School on Kenwood Ave., Delmar, on Wednesday, Oct. 19, from 3:15 to 8:30 p.m. Cost for the conference is $3 per person and $5 per couple and dinner is included.

For information call 445-7888.
