Hendrick to step down

By Mark Stuart

After eight years in Bethlehem town government, including the last four years as town supervisor, J. Robert Hendrick will step down from public office when his term of office is completed at the end of the year.

The announcement opens a possible three-way race within the Bethlehem Republican Party for November's town elections between Town Councilman Sue Ann Ritchko, Albany County Legislator W. Gordon Morris and Bethlehem Planning Chairman Kenneth Ringle.

Democratic Committee Chairman Art Brown commented that his party has not yet selected a candidate for the supervisor's office let alone the five other offices that are open for election this year. "Even if we had the strongest possible team of candidates, we wouldn't break it on the day he steps down," Brown said, adding that he holds a great deal of respect for Hendrick, calling him "a very fine gentleman and a fine administrator."

Citing family obligations, Hendrick's announcement to step down ends months of speculation. "It is time that I retire to have more time to spend with my family," Hendrick said. "My wife Kay and I have postponed many plans since I retired from service to the state of New York. We have gladly done so because the people of Bethlehem provided us a wonderful and much appreciated opportunity."

Hendrick began his public service career in 1942 with the state Department of Labor and retired from the state 37 years later in 1979 as deputy chief budget examiner of the state Division of the Budget.

Hendrick entered town government in 1981 when he was appointed councilman to fill the town board vacancy caused by the sudden death of Ed Mocker. He was elected to a four-year term as councilman in November of

Bethlehem decisions due tonight Budget numbers debated

By Sal Prividera Jr.

New teaching positions, a new guidance position and the purchase of a district-wide administrative computer system were among the budget items considered by the Bethlehem Central Board of Education last Wednesday.

The work session was the "first round" of decisions on the 1989-90 operating budget. Board President Sheila Fuller said the board will make its final decisions and adopt the spending plan at tonight's (Wednesday) meeting. The meeting is set to begin at 7 p.m. at the district offices. The budget will go before voters on May 3.

The board approved the inclusion of two and one-half new elementary teaching positions and a district-wide administrative computer system, but could not reach a consensus on a proposed guidance position.

Based on the administration's original proposal, the district's fundamental operating budget would have increased to $24,807,518. The fundamental operating budget is considered by the district to be the minimum amount of funding necessary to continue the educational program at existing levels. According to the fundamental budget, preliminary tax rates for Bethlehem residents would increase by 7.3 percent or $14.04 per $1,000 of assessed valuation to $206.16 per $1,000. The tax rate for New Scotland residents would jump 18.8 percent or $51.71 per $1,000 to $326.10 per $1,000.

If the board adopted all of the administration's priority one budget additions, the Bethlehem tax rate would rise another 2.1

BFI burn plant in future?

By Mark Stuart

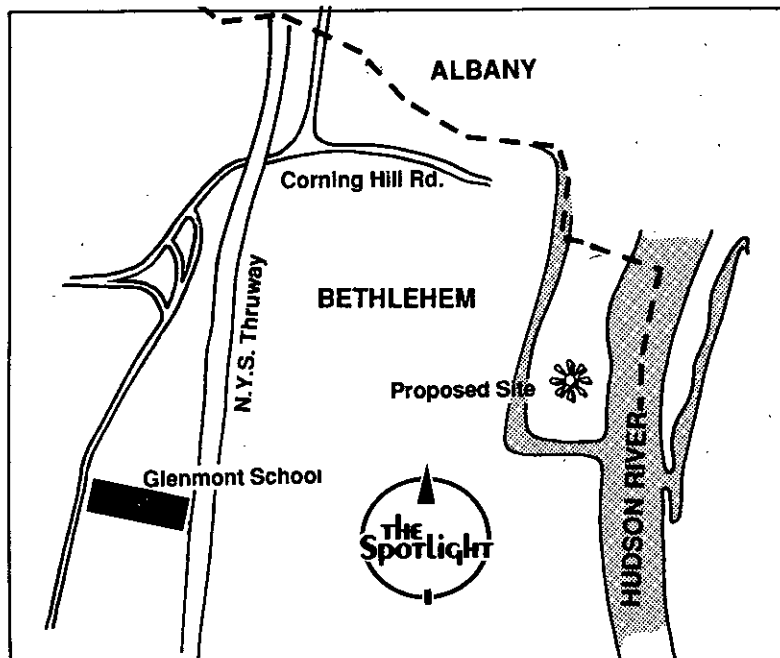

Browning-Ferris Industries of Long Island is expected to announce their plans for a major solid waste disposal facility at a press conference this morning (Wednesday) at 11 a.m. in the Thruway House in Albany.

The proposed site of the plant is on the southern end of Cabbage Island near the Port of Albany where the Normanskill Creek empties into the Hudson River. Though the plant is located in the Town of Bethlehem, there is no access to the property except through the City of Albany.

Attempts to contact BFI representatives for information on size and capacity on Tuesday were unsuccessful.

Town officials have not been presented with any plans for the plant. Councilman Dennis Corri-

Troop 259 off to U.K.

By Lyn Stapf

Like many people, members of Voorheesville Girl Scout Troop 259 have spent the winter looking forward to the warm beaches of summer. Yet, unlike most, the beach that dances in their minds is Brighton Beach in England, just one of many spots the scouts and their leaders will visit during a two-week summer holiday in England.

In addition to dreaming, the girls, all students at Clayton A. Bouton Junior-Senior High, have also spent a good portion of the fall and winter raising funds for their vacation.

Although they have shopped well for air fare and their lodging at the Baden-Powell International Scout Center in London is a real deal at $1,200 for an eight-day stay for eight travelers, the total estimated cost of the once in a lifetime trip is about $1,300 per girl — and that's a lot of fund-raising.

So far, the girls have put considerable effort into selling Girl Scout cookies, Florida oranges and grapefruits, and Christmas trees.

This week they completed the first of four scheduled bottle drives. They successfully garnered a trailer full of empties to be cashed in at a local recycling plant. Three other bottle collections have been scheduled for May 13, June 17 and July 15 at the Grand Union parking lot, from 9 a.m. until 1 p.m.

On Friday, May 5, the Girl Scouts will serve pasta at the Voorheesville Legion Hall. The complete spaghetti dinner will be cooked by Chef Mike Michele of Voorheesville. On Saturday, June 3, the scouts will be washing cars for fun and profit again in the Grand Union Parking Lot.

This summer the girls plan to finish work on their Silver and Gold Awards, Girl Scouting's highest honors. The scouts also look forward to joining with members of the Therapeutic Riding Academy in coordinating food sales at the upcoming Special Olympics.

The England excursion will be the second trip for Leaders Bonnie Foster and Robin Shufelt and several of the girls who two years ago flew to Mexico for a stay at "Our Cabana," an International Girl Scout Center. Since that time the make-up of the troop has changed a bit, but the enthusiasm of the girls looking forward to an international adventure has remained the same.

Foster, who planned the Girl Scout's trip during a December trip to England, recently reviewed the itinerary of the July 25 through Aug. 9 trip. The visit will include activities with Girl Guides and Boy Scouts in England, and visits to Buckingham Palace for the changing of the guard, Big Ben, and, of course, Brighton Beach, where they are looking forward to writing their own memoirs.

BTR proposal will go to planning board

By Mark Stuart

A question of whether the Bethlehem Town Board is automatically obligated to refer a completed zoning change application for Bethlehem Village to the planning board was the center of the latest dispute in the controversial BTR Realty plan for a Planned Development District on New Scotland Rd.

At Wednesday's town board meeting, Councilman Robert Burns tried in vain to convince the board that the application should be tabled until a town-wide master plan is developed. The board voted 3-1 in favor of accepting the recommendation made by Town Attorney Bernard Kaplowitz that the board had no choice but to pass the zoning change application to the planning board. Councilman Sue Ann Ritchko abstained from voting because of her position with Price Chopper, one of the potential commercial tenants in the development. Burns voted against the measure.

A question of what alternative the town board has in referring the application to the board was raised after BTR Realty made their presentation on March 8. Supervisor J. Robert Hendrick asked Kaplowitz to define what "shall" the planing board based on the project's merits or drawbacks. The decision also removed any question of whether a super majority, or three-quarters vote, would be needed for planning board referral. The Slingerlands Homeowners Association has said to the planning board, but rather on whether to accept Kaplowitz's recommendation regarding the word "shall." "We voted on the process, not the project," Hendrick said.

After the board approved referral to the planning board, Brian J. Danforth, vice president of the Slingerlands Homeowners Association, said "We believe that what they did tonight was illegal."

On March 8 the Slingerlands Homeowners Association contended that the application for a Planned Development District was inappropriate because there are no conditions for a PDD in the zoning code. Only conditions for a Planned Residential District and a Planned Commercial District are listed. The BTR application was reworked to differentiate what would be part of the Residential district and what would be part of the Commercial district. After Wednesday's vote, Danforth issued a release stating that the application should not be accepted on the grounds that two new separate applications are now needed for the two districts.

Burns said, "The timing is so off, I think we should just table the proposal. . . . The proposal is just the wrong proposal at the wrong time in the wrong place."

Kaplowitz said that in his opinion the town board has the responsibility to pass the application on to the planning board and that "the planning board is where the battle lines are drawn."

"There's nothing to say that the planning board can't decide that the project is premature," Hendrick responded.

Councilman Fred Webster said the role of the board was to review the thoroughness of the application and not to judge what was contained in it. "We have to stop and ask ourselves: are we prejudging this?" Webster said.

Councilman Dennis Corrigan said plainly, "I think we have no choice in passing it on."

Burns spoke at length about his opposition to the rezoning proposal and the definition of the word "shall." He issued a statement on his opposition to the zoning change and asked that the board table the application until a master plan is prepared. "After careful study of BTR's application and presentation to the Town (Turn to Page 10)

"We voted on the process, not the project."
— J. Robert Hendrick implies in Section 128-6 (B) of the zoning code, which states that "The Town Board shall refer the application to the Planning Board."

In a memo to the town board Kaplowitz stated, "Since 'shall' is interpreted most often by the Courts to mean the action to be taken is mandatory, and leaves no room for discretion, I suggest you really don't have an alternative once the application is complete."

The decision essentially eliminated a board vote on referral to that since 20 percent of the adjacent landowners oppose the project, a super majority is needed in every vote taken in the zoning change procedure as required by Section 265 of the town law.

Kaplowitz and Hendrick both said the super majority applies only when the zoning change itself is voted on. "A super majority is needed only at the time you vote on the project," Hendrick said. He added that when the board voted, it wasn't voting on whether to refer the application

Segenberger declines bid for second term

By Sal Prividera Jr.

Mark Segenberger, president of the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Board of Education, has decided not to run for re-election this May.

Segenberger said his decision not to run for another three-year term was based on family considerations. He has two children, ages eight and 11, who "require a great deal of time" and his wife is expecting their third child in June. He said he also spends time working with a Cub Scout Troop and a soccer league.

"I also have a large extended family in the area that I would like to be able to spend more time with," he added.

Segenberger has been president of the board since July 1987, when then President Anthony Williams stepped down. His term expires in June.

Additionally, the seats held by veteran board members Wayne

Mark Segenberger

Furman and Steven Berletic are up for election this year. According to administration officials both men will be seeking re-election.

Segenberger said he has "no regrets. . . I enjoyed working with the board, the administrators and teaching staff." He said his time on the board was rewarding and that he learned a great deal about the operation of a school district.

For the year prior to his election as board president, Segenberger headed the facilities and enrollment committee charged with studying overcrowding in the district. The committee's recommendations later became the basis for the district's twice-debated facilities bond issue.

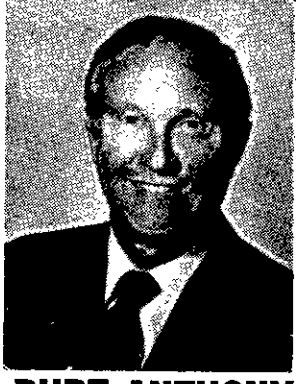

The Feura Bush resident, who is a senior landscape architect for the state Department of Transportation and co-founder of the Feura Bush Neighborhood Association, said he may consider running for the board again when his children are older.

Petitions for board of education seats are available daily at the district offices. To be eligible to serve on the school board, a person must be a district resident and file a petition signed by 25 district residents. Petitions are due at the district offices by April 10 at 4:30 p.m.

Supervisor's announcement

1981. On Feb. 1, 1985, he was appointed supervisor by the town board to fill the unexpired term of Thomas Corrigan. He was elected supervisor in November 1985 and was re-elected in 1987.

In his statement, Hendrick declined to state some of his accomplishments as supervisor, but did praise the work of town employees. "At the time of my actual retirement, I'll have more to say about what we've accomplished, what will confront Bethlehem in the years ahead and those who have provided such important help to our past efforts," he said. "I've been fortunate to work with town employees who are very talented, creative and conscientious. Whatever I have accomplished is due in large part to their hard work."

Hendrick will leave behind a legacy of planning changes that include the formation of a three-person full-time planning department. Several studies, including the Vollmer Traffic Study and the Rt. 9W Corridor Study, will remain as valuable tools for growth and planning for several years.

Sue Ann Ritchko

Shying away from a conventional political role, Hendrick has used a great deal of his previous Capital knowledge to work with state agencies. Foremost in that category may be his work with the state Department of Transportation, including the signalization of the Delmar Bypass and Elm Ave. and the lowering of the speed limit along Rt. 9W in Glenmont.

Kenneth Ringler

November elections

All three potential supervisor candidates praised the work of Hendrick.

"I think it's wonderful that he's announcing at this time; it gives the people ample time to assess the candidates," Morris said. Morris added he had "no comment" on his intentions to run for supervisor.

W. Gordon Morris

"I'm very disappointed that the Town of Bethlehem will be losing such a fine public servant at the end of this year," said Ringler. "At this point in time, I will explore my options but I do expect to announce shortly that I will seek the nomination of the Bethlehem Republican Party."

"I regret the circumstances do not allow Bob Hendrick to run again for town supervisor. . . . I will miss him and his sharp concise analysis of problems and issues facing the town," Ritchko said. She released a prepared statement that read "My commitment to seek this office will continue, if the process receives a primary challenge. I will be a full-time candidate and, if elected, I pledge to be a full-time supervisor, actively involved in the community."

Ritchko, who is currently employed by the Golub Corporation as vice president of marketing for Price Chopper, could not be reached for comment Tuesday morning to clarify if future "full-time" plans would mean leaving her current position at Price Chopper.

Bethlehem works on future directions

By Sal Prividera Jr.

The Bethlehem Central School District has a plan to get its facilities ready for the next century and is now focusing on a plan to get its students ready to face the challenges of the year 2000.

The educational planning process, involving both staff and community members, has produced a draft of major educational directions for the future educational directions in Bethlehem. The draft was compiled from the input of staff and community members through 24 group interviews held in the district since December.

The areas identified as "central areas for future initiative" were: educating students to think effectively and solve complex problems; engaging teachers and students in a more active and unified teaching and learning process; educating students who are sensible and responsible individuals capable of realizing their own potential, and establishing a partnership between school and community.

Superintendent Leslie Loomis said work in the four central areas will allow Bethlehem to "do an even better job of preparing our students for the future."

Loomis drew a parallel between the educational planning process and the recent facilities planning process. He said the education planning process is "of equal importance" to the facilities issue. Loomis admitted the identified areas are items expected from a school district and said the district is doing a good job, but "the future calls for a different type of education." He said the process will provide students with "the kind of intellectual building blocks necessary for the 21st century." According to Loomis, "The basic premise is that by identifying particular improvements that need to be and can be made; we will provide students with the optimal preparation for life in the 21st century." He said the goal is to become one of the exemplary school districts in the nation.

The district's staff members will offer input on the draft proposal this Friday, and sessions for obtaining community input have been scheduled for Wednesday, April 12, and Thursday, April 13, at the Educational Services Center, beginning at 7 p.m. Following the meetings, a final draft will be composed by the project steering committee for presentation to the board of education during May.

Educating students

In the area of education students to think effectively, the goal is to teach students to be more creative thinkers. Loomis said the district has "a lot of students capable of mastering facts and skills but, as staff and concerned community members pointed out, 'Bethlehem Central students (are not) as effective or as original thinkers as they can be.'"

Loomis said students would learn how to make difficult decisions, and then be able to support the decision and articulate it both verbally and in writing.

Other goals in the area of student learning would be to: emphasize the teaching of thinking and problem solving techniques; streamline the curriculum to stress in-depth work on the most important content of a subject area rather than provide superficial coverage of excessive content; and encourage interdisciplinary approaches to secondary education. The draft statement also recommends expanding the availability and use of computers, as well as promoting the learning of math, science and foreign language.

Teaching and learning

The focus of work to provide a more active and unified teaching and learning process would result in more students reaching their full potential by being better served.

Bob Hendrick's term

Bethlehem Supervisor J. Robert Hendrick has decided not to seek another term, a decision that had been rumored for some time. Characteristically, he announced it on his time schedule and pledged to serve out the remainder of his term, which runs through the end of the year.

Mr. Hendrick has had, essentially, two full two-year terms to do his job. He has done it quietly, thoughtfully and well. His hallmark has been management, with an emphasis on more effective use of the town's budget and fiscal practices. He has also presided over a major shift in Bethlehem's attitude toward planning, with the addition of a full-time planning staff and a commitment to long-range planning that transcends the day-to-day concern over zoning and development.

Mr. Hendrick's pledge to complete his term

Astigmatic planning

Being nibbled to death by ducks is a homely, graphic expression that may ring true in the ears of many a taxpayer over a period of time. What we have particularly in mind is the effect of some short-term planning practices of the Bethlehem Central School District board and administrators.

A year ago, the school board went before the district's voters with a proposition, approval of which was needed before seven school buses could be acquired at a cost of $374,700. Because of this manner of arranging the purchase, the cost would be added atop the normal annual operating budget and tax bills. Despite some reservation by individual board members, the proposition was approved.

Last month, residents overwhelmingly approved an $11.6 million capital budget for improving the schools' facilities.

Going, going . . .

What better way to close out March than by taking in the fund-raising auction arranged by Bethlehem Opportunities Unlimited, and scheduled for Friday evening at Bethlehem Central High School?

The cause — additional support for B.O.U.'s effective work in providing more recreational opportunities for the town's youth — is worthwhile, to say the least.

A fine romance

Out there in the twilight dusk of sunset or dawn, one of the least romantic though vividly spectacular of all the fabled rites of spring is taking place — right now.

For the next few weeks, until about mid-May, the rotund, pop-eyed little male woodcock will be taking his place on what he has proclaimed as his calling ground, sending forth his mating cries. Then he takes off in a circling, spiraling flight, wings trilling as he goes, reaching a crescendo as he soars to the zenith of his effort. This is followed by a swift plummeting back to earth at the calling ground, where — he hopes — he is to be joined by a female woodcock. When that happy event occurs, the mating is swift and decisive: the female departs, never to return, her thoughts now only on nesting in a thicket not too far distant.

He, having staked out his territory for mating, will contrive to employ it successfully again during the season. No larger than a bob-white quail, he likely fancies himself as irresistible, easily overlooking the strange appearance he makes with his squat body, long beak, eyes near the top of his head (which give him binocular vision; he sees in two directions at once), and his cryptic mottled brown-and-tan camouflage.

Careful! on Saturday

We do understand that boys no longer dip pigtales into inkwells, that the art of curving a spitball is a casualty of encroaching civilization, that the cry of "Chaw raw beef" seldom is heard in the land, and that few little girls now take their dolls and dishes and go home. Times do change, but we hope that ancient and honored custom will continue to hold sway on Saturday, with salt in sugar-bowls, bogus news announcements, little signs plastered to adults' backs, giggling calls on behalf of Price Albert, and all the other bits of tomfoolery that the young mind can contrive.

As for how the trickery started, we like best the one that begins with Proserpina filling her skirt with daffodils. . . .

Editorials

reverses a familiar Republican tactic of allowing the new supervisor a period of incumbency before having to face the voters. Deciding not to play that game enhances his image as a non-political public servant.

Now the real games begin. Bethlehem's Republican voters apparently will have a rare opportunity to select their candidate from a large field. We would hope that the remarkably disciplined and effective Republican Committee can handle this competition in an open manner. And we can hope that the Democrats will find a candidate who will make it an interesting contest in November.

And earlier this month, the board brought out another school bus purchase proposition. This one is for $279,000, which makes each bus come in at around $50,000. The route will be the same: go before the voters, receive the expected okay, and then another tack-on to the taxpayers' bills.

The Spotlight has urged previously that, in the matter of extensive and expensive roofing repairs, such items be anticipated and made part of the annual basic budget for BC schools. A realistically stated total of the true cost of operating the system ought to result. So with the purchase of buses, which one would assume should come as no huge surprise to the management and board. The effect would be more businesslike, and eliminate any of the needless suggestion of disingenuousness or of disarray.

The event itself seems certain to offer pleasant, even exciting, diversion for all who attend. And for all those lucky persons who'll carry home "just the thing" for that empty space, or who gain one of the larger trophies, the night will possess a real touch of magic.

It's a matter of: everyone can be a winner this time!

Looking at Rt. 9W

Editor, The Spotlight:

The Rt. 9W Corridor Study shows several major road changes in the Selkirk area but no alternate proposals. I believe these proposals need closer examination. The following are comments on the study's roadway improvement recommendations 16 through 19, which deal with the proposals for a northern and southern bypass around Selkirk.

Proposal No. 16 would signalize the intersection of Rt. 9W and Rt. 55. Rt. 55 would cross Rt. 9W and proceed east. A traffic signal would be installed when warranted.

This is bound to be a serious and potential hazardous situation.

There would be three approaches to the light that would all be down grade. Heavy trucks, school buses, and normal traffic starting and stopping would be a problem and this would be especially bad in winter.

Proposal No. 17 for a north-eastern bypass around Selkirk would create a new route that would enter the Becker Elementary School grounds. The school property was purchased and then built here because it was central and safe for the children. This area also provided room for expansion which is now being considered.

Surely, the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk School Board, administration and district members should strongly oppose any encroachment on this property.

Also, nearly all of the proposal route No. 17 is within A-Residential zoning. It appears that the problem is to be transferred from nonzoned areas to an A-zoned area.

Proposal No. 18 would provide a new connection to the Selkirk interchange of the Thruway. However, if the proposed north-

Voorheesville bond endorsed

Editor, The Spotlight:

Recently the members of the Voorheesville School Board conducted two public information meetings to present and discuss the proposed $8.9 million bond issue. Residents attending the meeting had an opportunity to see firsthand the current condition of both the elementary and high schools. Each building tour was followed by a detailed discussion of all aspects of the bond issue.

After attending both meetings, it is my opinion that the package which has been put together by the board of education does an excellent job of meeting the current maintenance and program needs of the school district. The proposal includes funds for much needed renovation work, removal of asbestos, compliance with fire codes and the addition of needed space at the high school.

Changing: an intimate story

How and when — and why — does a writer's germ of an idea become a compelling urge to dare endure the prolonged labor pangs of creativeness, to persist despite all blocks and discouragements and emotional turmoil?

I received some persuasive clues just the other weekend during an extended conversation with a writer who also delivered some insights as to how an unknown is transformed into a published author.

I knew Virginia Harrison quite a few years ago. (Incidentally, this is the last time I will refer to her by her given name, for she's always been known as just "V V.") And that's the way her name appears in her book, Changing Habits. It has just been published by Doubleday.

The habits are those of nuns, specifically those of the Society of the Sacred Heart. And the "changing" is that which has occurred to the order and its members in nearly two decades. Vatican II decreed a basic shift in form and function. The changes that flowed from this hardly could have been fully anticipated, as Changing Habits makes abundantly clear.

V V Harrison was in our area to meet with members of the order who reside and/or teach at The Doane Stuart School, just off Route 9W and just across the Bethlehem/Albany boundary. The school, of course, formerly was the Kenwood Academy operated by the society; now it is co-educational and ecumenical.

With some of the nuns, she was renewing acquaintance, for they were teachers and administrators at a school she attended, Eden Hall, in a Philadelphia suburb. Like the former Kenwood, the school changed — it has closed, along with 15 others from among the 35 throughout the country.

In addition to educating girls, Kenwood also was the site of the novitiate for the newly received nuns-to-be from much of the world. Here, young women came for their earliest preparation for life within the severity of a largely cloistered existence. Now those quarters are occupied, instead, by religious retired from their earlier rigorous duties.

V V had entered Eden Hall hating every hour of the lonely, Spartan discipline. She left greatly impressed by the "powerful images" of women she came to see as "close to perfection" — though also as "very normal people."

V. V. Harrison

She anticipated another 200 years or so of the same selfless dedication within the ranks of an ancient order devoted to service to God and to good works. Instead, within a few years of her leaving school, almost everything has changed. Nuns who remained in the society were in secular clothing; they held jobs, drove cars, adopted a variety of the most common secular customs. And many more left the order for other careers, including marriage. Confusion, chaos, disappointment, defection: these are some of the words applied to the process.

Uncertain at first as to the ultimate significance, V V Harrison found herself immersed in contemplation of how something that had been such an inspiration to her could change so drastically, so quickly. Some of her meetings with former nuns she had known so warmly were disillusioning. She began to write her thoughts, organized them (first as her personal recollections of her three school years) into chapters — and sent them off, hopefully and almost blindly to a book-publisher's editor, who likewise was an alumna of a Sacred Heart school. A year passed before there was more than a four-line acknowledgement.

At last, pressed for an actual response, the editor indicated interest in a potential book, offered an advance, but told V V that her next step should be to obtain an agent to negotiate the terms of the agreement already reached. There went 10 percent of the "advance," which (it turned out) would be paid over a considerable period of time. A 75-page draft turned up missing; a secretary had just filed it away.

V V, who looks back with wry amusement on the days when she doubted her skills as researcher, interviewer, or historian, visited a dozen of the Sacred Heart schools, interviewed 50 or more women (most of whom were "generous" with their assistance, while others declined to talk), and wrote and wrote some 100,000 words. She labored over the portion of the book that's pure history; rewrote perhaps a third of the book to meet her own standards and her editor's. And nearly four years after the first query went out to a publisher, the book emerged. The publisher, however, was a different one, because the editor changed jobs (just before publication) and took the book along.

Among the most difficult hurdles for the author was settling on her function as an "impartial observer," and reconciling the role of an outsider looking in. This, she came to realize, "is both the blessing and curse of the writer."

from Boston on weekends in a BMW. On the whole, they would prefer Vermont."

The confessed sports maniac says for the record: "I like baseball, I like basketball, I like hockey, and in descending order tennis, football, soccer, ping-pong, volleyball, badminton, la crosse, boxing, wrestling, Arena Football, roller derby, and golf."

"At any given moment, this machine can grab something like 300 alternatives out of thin air: news and news feeds, televangelists, 50 shopping services all flogging the same necklace, sitcom reruns, exercise shows, movies — and sports. The movie list in my Satellite TV Week runs to 500 every seven days — but many never get listed. Most interstellar abundance never gets listed, but you develop a feel for what's lurking out there among spacenuts, spacebolts, and assorted flying saucers: Everything! (If you are driven to watch MacNeil-Lehrer at six, seven, eight, and nine, you can do it.)"

Along with a lot of other cheery nonsense, Mr. Hall reports that he is making progress toward his ultimate goal: so that he can watch sports and other programming, he wants to cut out sleep entirely, "or at least to restrict it to 50 naps a day, during commercials."

He "wanders not only in space (as he dials) but in time" . . . He dreams of finding a channel that will, for example, "find the young Babe Ruth pitching at Fenway," or one that will give results as they should have been (the Red Sox beating the Mets in the 1986 Series); or one that will project into the future: "The dish will grind itself into a new position, blurt some new science-fiction noises, and suddenly we are watching the seventh game of next October's World Series."

I mentioned at the outset that the Hall article might prove to be instructive as well as diverting. In these times, as I see it, when we all are caught in the Cable TV trap, why isn't a dish the answer for a lot of people? It's not feasible for many homes, but for lots of others it could be. If they can do it in New Hampshire, what's to hold Albany County back?

Support for bond urged

This week's contributor is president of the Voorheesville School Board, which is asking voter approval for a major bond issue on April 12.

Point of View

By Joseph A. Fernandez

On April 12, the Voorheesville School District community will be asked to decide upon a $8.9 million bond issue to finance asbestos removal and building improvements proposed for the two schools. A positive vote is vitally important to the future development of the educational program of the school district. I am writing in support of the entire bonding proposal.

During the past several weeks, public information meetings have been held at both school buildings in an effort to generate community support for the bond issue. The meetings have been well attended and, given the projected impact that the bond issue will have on the tax levy, the public response has been, not surprisingly, reserved and mixed.

People in the community realize that some capital improvements are required to correct deficiencies. Nonetheless, there are some feelings of dissatisfaction. A number of the people in the community believe the board of education should have separated the capital improvement proposals so that voters would not be forced to vote yes or no for the entire bond issue.

... in supporting public schools
we are investing in the growth and vitality of our community and economy.

As a nine-year member of the school board and its current president, this type of feeling and reaction to the bond proposal is very understandable. Most people are willing to accept the fact that asbestos needs to be removed and fire code deficiencies must be corrected. But some people are troubled by the lack of choice regarding the remaining one-third of the bond issue, which provides for instructional program improvements in both buildings, while others may be reluctant to vote for the proposal because of the general impact upon their tax levies.

Given the above situation, the successful passage of the bond issue or the annual school budget for that matter, requires more than the support of parents of children attending the school system. There needs to be an acceptance and recognition by the entire community that the buildings designed and constructed 30 to 60 years ago need basic repairs and renovation in order to be compatible to the instructional demands of the 1990s. The building improvements that have been planned are coordinated with the overall instructional program in mind. Consequently, the board does not believe that the bond issue should be separately voted upon.

Those of us who serve on school boards or as school administrators are sensitive to the spiraling costs of education. There are many reasons for these increases, and we also know they are not easily avoided. Every board recognizes this fact and each member seriously tries to balance the costs of educational improvements with a concern for the district taxpayer. However, this process becomes harder each and every year. Increasingly, it seems more and more people view the public school system as a heavy tax burden and question the need for the annual budget increases and/or special bond programs for capital improvements.

The realities are that salaries are negotiable and not static; transportation and health insurance costs increased greater than the rate of inflation, and science labs and classrooms designed during the fifties are not suited to the instructional needs of the 1990s.

A majority in the community needs to make the connection that in supporting public schools we are investing in the growth and vitality of our community and economy. If support for our public schools is a tax burden, it is one that must be met. Without this recognition, many school districts will face uphill battles to overcome negative reactions to budget increases. Today, many school boards struggle to meet the challenge of funding quality education in the competitive environment that exists in many parts of the state. While I do not intend to argue against the current system of public school finance, the impact of the existing system does put an unequal burden on some communities. The state aid program, with its complexity of formulas and growing relationship of personal

About his favorite dish

One week several months ago there appeared on this page a little paean to a poet named Donald Hall, who lives up New Hampshire way. He is, in fact, described in the current issue of Yankee magazine as the "author of dozens of books of poetry, criticism, and essays; editor of many anthologies; winner of the 1988 National Book Critics Circle prize for poetry — and maniacal sports fan."

The reason Yankee was mentioning these qualities is that in its March issue Mr. Hall has written an amusing (and maybe instructive) article, "Why I Love My Dish."

The dish in question is a satellite dish antenna. (It replaced the old sap house on the Hall family farm.) At length, he rhapsodizes about his gadget. "Satellite dishes," he explains, "have become the real thing of the countryside, as indigenous to New England as stone walls, yard sales, green shutters, and junkers. If you drive past a handsome clapboard house with a picket fence and no TV aerial, you know that its owners drive up income and property values, is aggravating the problems faced by suburban/rural school districts and its citizens.

While most boards are sensitive to these facts and do their best to balance the equation, it is impossible to make improvements in physical facilities without additional tax levies. The proposals made by the Voorheesville School Board for instructional classroom additions, enlargements of the spaces in the cafeteria, music and art areas represent choices from a much larger mix of proposals. All are related to the needs of current program and, hopefully, will continue to meet the instructional needs for the next decade. Many of the other programmatic space improvements in the elementary school stem from the recommendations made by the Facilities Planning Advisory Committee and input of the faculty. While we have not supported all of the capital proposals presented by this committee, those that we have supported are necessary to improve the instructional program at both schools. We think they are important to the educational programs and will help the administration and faculty to prepare the students for the future.

In closing, the board and the administration believe the entire proposal is justifiable in its entirety. We ask the community to make a decision that is in the long-term interests of the students. Vote yes on the bond proposal April 12.

eastern bypass route proceeds south one quarter mile to the bridge at Rt. 396 to Rt. 144, no added bridge or exchange is needed.

Proposal No. 19 is for a southerly bypass around Selkirk. This would come in to Rt. 396 at the bridge, thence to Rt. 144 and the interchange.

This bypass should come from the present roadway along the Conrail Selkirk Yards from the Jericho Bridge area and cross Rt. 396 in the area of the Mosher Bridge and thence to the bridge at Rt. 396 to Rt. 144.

All the demand for new truck routes, etc., is mainly because of the area at the Jericho Bridge, which is a major point for the unloading of the auto shipments and container trucks. The roadway is already in place, and the repair or expansion of this roadway should be considered.

Also, a note of special interest to all the Selkirk and adjacent land owners is in proposal No. 19: "A new overpass would have to be built over the railroad tracks. This improvement could be installed through an assessment district including all of Selkirk, plus contributions from adjacent land owners."

The above quote is quite disturbing and most surely should never come to pass.

It appears that the Rt. 9W Corridor Study is actually a new route for trucks from the Conrail Yards to the Selkirk Thruway entrance. If this is necessary, why not consider an alternate route?

BCRP pays attention to development

Editor, The Spotlight:

Bethlehem Citizens for Responsible Planning wants to bring another significant project to the attention of all citizens.

On April 4, at 7:30 p.m. there will be an important public hearing on another residential development in the Slingerlands area. The Cedar Ridge development consists of 128 single-family houses on 90 acres of land, straddling Fisher Blvd. in the area of Orchard Street. You should focus your attention on the following key issues:

- The cumulative impacts of Cedar Ridge and all of the other residential proposals now being considered.
- Impacts of increased traffic on local streets and intersections.
- The impact of the improved Fisher Blvd. on the environment, on property values, and on the status and cost of its intersection with New Scotland Rd.
- Impact of more school-age children on our school system.
- The fiscal impact of the project on town and school taxes.
- Impact of increased drainage into local streams.
- Impact on the visual environment and habitat surrounding the Five Rivers Environmental Education Center.
- Impact on a structure eligible for the Historic Register.

The draft environmental impact statement is available at the Bethlehem Public Library and Bethlehem Town Hall. We hope you will read it carefully, ask questions to test the basis and conclusions of the developer's statements, and formulate your recommendations concerning the density of the project, the preservation of green space, historic preservation as well as the other issues mentioned above.

While some areas of town are now benefiting from good planning, and a moratorium and all areas will benefit from our future master plan, there are projects, like Cedar Ridge, that are marching along prior to a hard look at planning in the area. BCRP urges all citizens to express their concern for the project and to let the planning board know that planning and preservation should come first.

Concern for community reviewed

Editor, The Spotlight:

When the BTR Development Company of Maryland presented their scaled down proposal at the March 8 meeting of the town board, it was offered as an indication of the developer's responsiveness to the concerns of the community. The obvious question is: where was their concern regarding community opinion before they publicly announced their mega-complex? The developer apparently feels that we are naive enough to believe they did not anticipate an adverse reaction when they initially proposed the project in November. BTR did not become a successful national corporation by investing funds in projects that fail to be approved. Considering the connection that their major tenant, Price Chopper, has with town government, it is implausible that BTR was surprised or unprepared for this community reaction. In all likelihood, BTR has played out the same scenario in many places with essentially the same players, i.e. the developer, citizens groups, and local government. In fact, if the developer did not have an alternative plan from the very beginning, they would be very inept indeed. It is clear from the way this process was orchestrated that the developer is not inept.

BTR and Price Chopper are acutely aware of the need for another supermarket in Bethlehem and of the citizen support that would automatically be generated by any plan to build one. As a result, they offer to provide a market, but they expect that the town accept the following conditions:

- That they be allowed to disregard current town zoning to enable them to build in a residential area because they feel profit will be greatest there.
- That we allow them to build additional commercial space to increase profitability, even though there is very little demonstrated need or local support for additional retail stores, banks, or fast food restaurants. On the contrary, there is considerable vacant retail space in Bethlehem now.

Vox Pop

- That we approve the rezoning of four times the amount of land needed for a commercial development of this size.
- That we accept their refusal to rule out eventual expansion of the commercial component of the development.
- That we rezone an additional 13 acres to enable them to build town houses, also to increase profitability.
- That we accept the additional traffic that will be generated by this project and bear the cost of road improvements that will be made necessary by this additional traffic.
- That we disregard the concerns of residents regarding the effect this project will have on the quality of life and property values in the village.

Apparently some residents are willing to submit to this ultimatum from the developers. As one would expect, this willingness is generally related to the distance that individuals live from the potential adverse affects of the development. There are many, however, who realize that this issue has wider implications for the town. Bethlehem is the only suburban area that has somehow avoided the sprawling commercial and multi-family residential development that has afflicted Colonie, Latham, Clifton Park, and most recently Guilderland. One can only speculate on the reasons for this. I choose to believe that it is because Bethlehem is a special place. The town has traditionally been unwilling to accept the sales pitches of slick developers. When I was growing up in Bethlehem, the most tangible evidence of this was that, much to the disappointment of the town's teens, Tollgate was the only ice cream parlor in town. This is not to disparage Tollgate, which was a popular hangout in those days. However, most of us longed for the proliferation of Carrols and MacDonald's burger stands, and for the dozens of gaudy neon-lit ice cream and fast food places that seemed to be invading every community but ours. Fortunately, teenagers did not have a voice in town government at the time. Twenty years later, we are still reaping the benefits of this conservative approach to development.

Another characteristic of Bethlehem is that residents tend to be extremely supportive of commercial enterprises that are perceived as responsive to the needs of the town. Residents will forego all of the sales gimmicks meant to entice them to spend their money elsewhere in favor of a trusted and established local business. Developers would do well to keep this in mind and begin asking — What are we willing to do for the Town of Bethlehem? instead of — What is the Town of Bethlehem willing to do for us?

Thruway exit opposed

Editor, The Spotlight:

We totally object to the plan to have an exit and entrance to the Thruway from Wemple Road.

It would disturb the peace of present residents and future residents of many developments to come.

There is an exit and entrance to the Thruway at Selkirk that can be reached many ways without traveling Wemple Road and causing ultimate congestion and disturbance of the peace.

Wemple Road could be extended to the Delmar Bypass, and residents could reach the Selkirk Thruway exit and entrance from Elm Avenue. This would divide the Delmar traffic and Glenmont traffic headed toward the Thruway and take traffic away from 9W.

tions mandate that all school districts remove or encapsulate ceilings containing asbestos. Encapsulation of the ceilings would cost nearly two-thirds as much as removing them, and the district would most likely have to spend additional funds in the future to remove or reencapsulate the ceilings. Removal of the ceilings is the most logical choice under the current circumstances and regulations.

Proposed renovations at the elementary school include upgrading the lavatories and locker rooms, repointing the exterior stonework, installation of a new fire alarm system, and the construction of a new and safer bus loading area behind the school. In addition, the library will be relocated, lockers replaced, the gymnasiums and auditorium upgraded, and the art, science and computer rooms will be refurbished. After touring the building, it is difficult to take exception with any of these much needed renovations.

Major renovations at the high school are proposed to install two new boilers and replace pipes throughout the building. I believe the plan to bypass all pipes in the concrete floor slabs is an excellent one. We have already experienced the inconvenience and expense of having to repair such pipes under floor tiles containing asbestos.

The bond issue also includes funds to upgrade science rooms, the library, auditorium, locker rooms and computer room at the high school, as well as replacing corridor lockers. Additions will be made to the cafeteria and music areas. Four classrooms and a corridor will also be constructed. Plans also include construction of the Buckley Room. Community funds previously raised will be used to equip the Buckley Room.

Again, after touring the high school, I could find no fault with any of the proposed renovations. As for the additions, I believe the board members have selected only those additions which appear to be needed at this time. They have also shown foresight by proposing the four additional classrooms in a location which will lend itself to further additions in the future if needed.

The high quality of the Voorheesville Central School District was one of the main features that attracted my wife Wendy and I to Voorheesville 14 years ago. We have two children who have experienced and will continue to receive an excellent education in our two schools. However, many of the proposed renovations are long overdue, and greatly needed, if our schools are to provide the types of settings we feel are appropriate for a school district of our fine stature.

I encourage all residents of the Voorheesville Central School District to vote in favor of the proposed bond issue on April 12. As was so aptly pointed out by Board President Joseph Fernandez, it is up to us to provide adequate facilities for the education of today's children, just as past generations provided the same for us.

What are true goals of BC school leaders?

Editor, The Spotlight:

I was surprised and somewhat dismayed when I received the most recent quarterly issue of the Bethlehem schools' newsletter. The first page understandably was topped by a report of the favorable vote on the bond issue proposal. But the bottom half of that first page was devoted to text and photo about a BCHS student-athlete receiving an athletic scholarship to an athletic-focused university.

To me, that seemed out of keeping with the presumed purpose of a school district's newsletter. It has nothing whatsoever to do with the purposes or attainments of the schools, or of academic achievements or standings of the pupils. The placement, dimensions, and tone of the article in question gave what I trust was an erroneous impression of what BC schools are really all about. At the very least, I found it a matter of questionable judgment on the part of the school officials who approve the content of this tax-paid educational bulletin. That is true, no matter how a fine young man the scholarship recipient is.

There's always a silver lining, and I found it in The Spotlight this past week, in the Point of View editorial expression by Mr. J. Briggs McAndrews, the assistant superintendent of schools. His observations on the relative roles of young people and responsible adults were right on the mark. I applaud not only his opinions, but his forthrightness in stating them so clearly.

Mr. McAndrews's column went far in setting my mind at rest as to the true goals and standards of those who are in charge of the district's educational program, and their expectations in behalf of their students. Enough of grand construction plans; let's hear it for character!

percent to 9.4 percent and the New Scotland rate would increase by an additional 2.4 percent to 21.2 percent.

The board asked Superintendent Leslie Loomis to bring $200,000 in potential budget cuts that do not affect program to the board this Wednesday.

The approved elementary teaching positions were one-half of the administration's proposal, which called for four new elementary teaching positions and the equivalent of one full-time special subjects teacher. The recommendation was made based on projected enrollment increases at the elementary level that would drive classroom size over the maximum levels the district tries to maintain.

The board cut $82,500 from the budget proposal with its elementary staffing decision.

Superintendent Leslie Loomis presented a prioritized list of where the new positions were most and least needed as directed to do by the board at the last session. Glenmont was the school seen to be the most in need of an additional teacher. Hamagrael was found to be able to go without the a new position. "I would like to see no more than two (new positions)," said board member Velma Cousins, who added the possibility of only approving one position. "We have to tighten our belts," she said.

The two new elementary positions will be at Glenmont and Slingerlands elementary schools. With the new teachers, the largest class size at Glenmont will be 28 at the grade four level, and the largest Slingerlands class will be 27 in both grades four and five. Without the additional teachers, the largest class at Hamagrael will be fourth grade with 27.

The equivalent of a half-time position for a special subject teacher was also approved.

The board members could not reach a decision on the proposed elementary guidance staffing increase. Loomis recommended the board approve one new position at the elementary level to provide increased services to the students. The position would add $33,000 to the budget.

Gwen Guillet, the current elementary level guidance counselor, said the a second counselor would allow more prevention programs to be conducted and noted the need for crisis intervention. Under the existing conditions, she spends one day per week at each of the five elementary schools. Loomis said there were two "powerful rationales" for having an additional counselor, "the number of children and the severity of need increasing yearly."

Cousins questioned whether the students should receive help from outside agencies rather than the school district. "I wonder if we're not going beyond ourselves," she said. Fuller asked if the need was for a psychologist rather than a guidance counselor. Loomis said the role of the guidance counselor was to make the connection between students, their families and outside help.

"I hope that we never become so complacent, that if our kids are not having problems, then no kids are having problems," said Board Member Marjory O'Brien, who was speaking for the proposal.

The board split during a vote on the issue with member Bernard Harvith abstaining. Harvith requested more information before making his decision.

Other staffing considerations advanced by the board were the addition of a one-fifth position at the high school to continue offering Latin II, a noon hour aide for Glenmont, the reclassification of maintenance and business staff, and additions to the transportation staff.

The board approved inclusion of the purchase of a district-wide administrative computer system. The proposal calls for $78,000 to be placed in the 1989-90 budget to begin a seven-year lease-purchase plan with a final net cost of $594,000. Franz Zwickbauer, assistant superintendent for business, said the computer system would allow the district to move from "the horse and buggy days." The system would allow the district to handle student schedules, in-house attendance and grades, as well as payroll and accounting, he said. Currently, Bethlehem contracts with BOCES for these services.

Additionally, the board:

- Approved the creation of an additional special education class in the district at a cost of $85,150 beyond the funding in the fundamental operating budget.

- Approved $5,000 in funding for the district-wide art program.

- Approved $3,700 for extra-curricular programs, including Act I, Stage 700 and the school newspaper.

- Approved $5,000 in funding to increase lighting in classrooms where it is needed.

- Considered adding a high school lacrosse program at a cost of $6,260.

more actively in the learning process; examining the practices of grouping and its effect on student self-concept; and strengthening the team teaching structure at the middle school. The draft also calls for the development of a structure at the high school to address the fragmentation of students and programs.

Creating responsible individuals

The third identified area of concentration is to promote each student's concept of self-worth and sense of responsibility to the community. In addition to providing students with the skills to develop strong, positive value systems, the draft calls for the goal to be met through development of a plan at each school to promote a sense of community through the efforts of students, staff, parents and community members.

"There is the recognition that this is a tough time for kids and they need a stronger set of values, as their core," Loomis said.

According to the superintendent, the plan would call for a more authentic student government and improvement of behavior within the schools. "I think it's possible throughout the community and within the school to intensify those adult norms that should be more powerful than peer group norms," he said.

Other goals would be to develop a system to recognize students who act responsibly, strengthen guidance services and make better use of community support services.

School and community partnership

The final central area found to be important was the fostering of a partnership between the school district and the community.

Loomis said the young people in Bethlehem are "too isolated" from the community.

The partnership would be established by continuing a shared decision making process similar to the educational planning process, improving cooperation between the district and town government to more effectively deliver services, and developing student programs providing voluntary community service.

Loomis said the district will explore ways for the community to get the maximum benefit from the school facilities through programs such as continuing education or a day care program.

He said the district and community have a "rare opportunity... we are small enough and cohesive enough to serve as a model of educational excellence and community cooperation."

Implementation

Currently, the board of education is considering a $10,000 funding request to allow implementation of the program to begin this fall. If funding is approved, high priority projects would be identified and the work would begin with pilot programs.

Loomis said he expects the project to be "quite firmly in place" by the 1991-92 school year, the same time the district will begin to use its new facilities.

He explained that the work would be ongoing through the decade and would be a challenge the district would not back away from.

Town to define convenience sales Board to vote next week

By Mark Stuart

The Bethlehem Town Board is expected to make its decision on a proposed amendment to a local law prohibiting the sale of certain types of convenience items at gasoline stations at its next regular meeting on April 12.

The original amendment request was presented to the town board on Aug. 29 by Board of Appeals Chairman Charles Fritts and Building Inspector John Flanigan. Citing traffic problems caused by the increased amount of non-automotive products available at filling stations, the Bethlehem Board of Appeals decided to revise the law defining what can or can't be sold. The gas station owners claim that they need the convenience item sales to help keep their businesses profitable because the sale of gasoline alone is not enough to cover operating costs.

Both Fritts and Flanigan agree that there is a need for certain items to be sold for the businesses to remain profitable but say that the amendment is needed because under the current zoning ordinance, no products other than motor related products can be sold. The amendment, they contend, will define what can be sold and will place controls on products that can affect the flow of traffic in and out of a gasoline station.

Representatives of the Gasoline Retailer Association of Northeastern New York (GRANNY) has met with the board of appeals, and a letter from GRANNY Executive Director Ralph Bombardiere has been sent to the board. After the meeting, the board of appeals agreed to rework the original list of allowable products to include newspapers and cartons of cigarettes. A third item, sandwiches, was not allowed although the retailers' association had requested it.

Under the amendment, allowable products will be candy, cigarettes in packs and cartons, coffee, soda, newspapers and individual-sized packaged snack foods.

Prohibited items will be food, beverages, videos, lottery tickets, grocery or delicatessen products, cases of soda and magazines.

In other business, the board heard a request from Town Planner Jeff Lipnicky to amend the zoning code to include special use permit districts. Lipnicky explained that recent judicial decisions regarding the arbitrary use of special use permits by towns has necessitated a reforming of a number of zoning codes in the state.

Under the proposal, special use permits would be allowed only in specific areas. Under current zoning regulations, special use permits may be issued for anywhere in the town as long as they meet the criteria for special use.

Public Works Commissioner Bruce Secor gave an update on the water level situation at the Vly Creek Reservoir. Secor told the board that the reservoir is currently at 55 percent of capacity.

He clarified a point concerning water conservation measures that were included in a March 15 article of The Spotlight. Secor said that the City of Albany could impose limitations only if the town used more than 1.5 million gallons per day. Currently, the town uses an average of 500,000 gallons per day, according to Secor.

He told the board that outdoor water use restrictions that were put into effect in the summer of 1987 are still in effect. Those restrictions prohibit the watering of lawns and shrubs between 10 a.m. and 8 p.m.

Secor said it was too early to determine whether stricter water restrictions would be needed. "We'll know better in 30 or 45 days what we're going to need to do this summer," Secor said.

Regarding another water matter, the board appointed George Wenger as special counsel to research the history of the Helderberg Spring, located on the Helderberg Escarpment near the hamlet of New Salem. In a memo to the board, Secor said that possible illegal connections to the water pipeline leading from the spring, deterioration in water quality and quantity, and encroachments or claims for water connections to the existing spring or pipeline are all reasons for researching the history of the spring through old records, deeds, laws, water board actions, and related legal and municipal actions.

After a public hearing during which no residents spoke, the board adopted an amendment changing a paragraph of the Flood Damage Prevention Chapter in the town law. The amendment was necessary to comply with a state Department of Environmental Conservation requirement over the wording of a paragraph involving flood area districts and insurance coverage.

The board renewed the trailer park permits for Shady Grove West, Breckenridge Village and Shady Grove East. The board also approved a request for a construction trailer at the Normansgate subdivision. The application was filed by Trinity Construction.

The board approved a controller's request to refund an $8,621 overpayment from the Environmental Protection Agency for a utilities project grant. The $8,621 is a portion of the received installments on a $360,120 grant. The entire $360,120 grant was decreased to $329,873 because certain portions included in the original application were later declared ineligible for funding by auditors.

BTR plans move ahead

Board, and upon consideration of the extensive amount of input from the citizens of our town, I have concluded that the BTR plan is both untimely and ill-conceived," he wrote.

"The Town Board only recently came to the unanimous conclusion that preparation of the master plan was necessary in order to assist the board in making prudent decisions on the future land use goals of this town. Having committed ourselves to this $125,000 endeavor and having just entrusted the (Land Use Management) Committee with the task of preparing such a plan, it would be irresponsible to seriously consider the BTR rezoning request without the benefit of a

The $125,000 endeavor Burns was referring to was the amount allowed in the 1989 budget for the planning department, which includes the salaries of three full-time employees — a town planner, an assistant planner and a secretary.

BTR Realty is seeking a zoning change for 112 acres of undeveloped AA- and A-Residential land along New Scotland Rd. near the end of the Slingerlands Bypass to a Planned Development District. The Maryland-based firm is seeking to build a mixed use development that is to include 134,500 square feet of commercial space, 64 town homes and 82 single-family homes.

The project has received opposition from Slingerlands residents centering around their desire to maintain the rural atmosphere within the hamlet.

Area builder's promises disputed

By Mark Stuart

Residents of Westchester Woods spoke out against an extension of that development along Elm Ave. last Tuesday, saying they were told the land would remain undeveloped when they purchased their homes.

Several comments regarding promises of preservation of green space were made at a public hearing of the Bethlehem Planning Board, in which plans for a nine-lot Westchester Woods Extension No. 2 subdivision in an A-Residential Zone were aired. The Klersy Building Corp. is the owner of the land and the applicant for the subdivision.

Residents of Elm Ave. and Huntersfield Rd. attended the meeting to speak against the extension. Most of them were homeowners in Westchester Woods and said that when they purchased their houses, they were told by the Klersy representatives that the land would be preserved and not developed.

Project surveyor Lindsay Boutelle, representing the Klersy Building Corp., said that he had spoken to Corporation President Henry Klersy earlier that day and that Klersy said no such promises were ever made pertaining to permanent green space preservation. According to Planning Board Secretary Alice Cirillo, there is no mention in any of the public hearing minutes of the original Westchester Woods proposal (which was first brought to the planning board in 1971) about "forever wild," only maps that show "Area reserved," which Cirillo said is understood to mean "Area reserved for future development."

In other business, the board held a public hearing to discuss a four-lot subdivision plan in the vicinity of Stratton Place and Kenaware Ave. The land is located in an A-Residential Zone and owned by J. Briggs and Isabelle McAndrews.

Boutelle made the McAndrews' presentation to the board. Neighborhood residents told the board that drainage should be addressed in site plan review and that preservation of green space should be given careful consideration, particularly in light of a possible development on adjacent land.

The board set a May 16 public hearing at 7:30 p.m. to discuss the draft environmental impact statement for the proposed Carriage Hill subdivision. The proposed 123-lot subdivision would be located in an A-Residential and AR-Residential Zone adjacent to Elm Ave. East and Jericho Rd.

The planning board gave conditional approval to two subdivision proposals. Conditional approval was given to Michael Albano for Lion Hill, a three-lot subdivision located in an A-Residential Zone on Rt. 144 in Glenmont. The subdivision is not a part of the Lyon Estate although one of the historical lion statue landmarks is located on Albano's property. Albano has said the statue will remain undisturbed.

Conditional approval was granted to Raymond DuMicich for a proposed one-lot subdivision located in an A-Residential Zone on Wemple Rd. in Glenmont. During a Feb. 21 public hearing, DuMicich said he intends to transfer the land to his son, who plans to build a home there.

David Quadrini requested to segment a 32-lot residential portion of the proposed Brookhill subdivision on Blessing Rd. in North Bethlehem. The proposed Brookhill project includes both a Planned Residential District and a Planned Commercial District. By segmenting the 32-lots, which are located outside of the proposed PRD, Quadrini may be able to develop a smaller portion of the project and thus enable him to possibly move ahead with a smaller scale environmental impact statement.

The Brookhill subdivision has faced a number of delays since being presented to the town three years ago, ranging from an environmental impact study for the zoning change proposal to Albany County's Krumkill Rd. traffic study. As a result of that traffic study, the county is currently trying to get approval from Bethlehem and Guilderland for a three-town generic environmental impact study in the North Bethlehem area, which may further delay the Brookhill project.

Cedar Ridge public hearing set

The Bethlehem Planning Board will hold a public hearing Tuesday at 7:30 p.m. to review the draft environmental impact statement for the proposed 128-unit Cedar Ridge development on Orchard St. and Fisher Blvd.

The proposed 90-acre single-family home development has been criticized by opponents, including the Bethlehem Citizens for Responsible Planning, because of the cumulative impact Cedar Ridge would have if it were approved along with the Delmar Village development located between Delaware Ave. and Orchard St. at the end of Fisher Blvd.

Plans for Delmar Village include 232 apartments and 56 single-family homes.

Town of Bethlehem officials have stated that Fisher Blvd. will become part of a link-up to connect New Scotland Rd. with Delaware Ave. via an extension through the Delmar Village development when and if Delmar Village is approved. That link-up will occur only if Fisher Blvd. is upgraded to handle the anticipated volume of traffic. Currently, Fisher Blvd. is a narrow country road (including a point that is approximately nine feet wide).

BCRP Chairman John Smolinsky and other members of the Bethlehem Citizens for Responsible Planning are expected to address a number of issues involving the project's impact on traffic, schools, town services and proximity to the Five Rivers Environmental Educational Center.

A copy of the draft environmental impact statement is available at the town hall and the Bethlehem Public Library.

Networks to sponsor parenting workshops

Bethlehem Networks Project will hold two parenting workshops on Wednesday, April 5, and Wednesday, April 12, at the Bethlehem Public Library at 7 p.m.

The workshops will be led by Gwen Guillet, an elementary school guidance counselor for the Bethlehem Central School District, and Elizabeth Iseman, coordinator of the Bethlehem Networks Project.

The sessions will deal with the responsibilities of the child, listening and communication skills, and effective family meetings.

The workshops are part of a series of four workshops.

THE YOUTH NETWORK

What is a Comprehensive Substance Abuse Policy?

The purpose of a comprehensive substance abuse policy should be twofold: to create a drug-free environment, and to acknowledge that drug or alcohol dependency is an illness that requires treatment and assistance, not just punishment. Any institution or group can and should have such a policy, but the most common organization to implement one currently is a school district. The Bethlehem Central School District is now in the process of developing a policy statement, with procedures to follow at a later date.

The best school substance abuse policies and procedures are distinguished by two characteristics: they reflect articulately the goals and values of the community served by the educational institution; and they describe explicitly the roles and responsibilities of those charged with carrying out policies, and steps to be taken when they are violated. Comprehensive procedures describe for school personnel in each type of situation they might encounter: which incidents they are required to report, to whom they must be reported, the procedure for making such reports, and the information that must be included; when it is appropriate to refer students or staff to sources of help, and to whom they should be referred; the amount of discretion they may have in handling a situation; and the requirements and limitations of applicable laws and regulations.

These policies and procedures should be developed by representatives of all the different groups working within the school, including administrators, teachers and other support staff. Students should also be included. Following the policy development and approval by the board of education, procedures should be clearly laid out to insure the ongoing evaluation and revision of the policies, etc. Attempts should be made to include community representatives in the planning stages as well as to broaden the impact of the policies on the larger community.

Snowfall causes three crashes

Friday's snowfall was a contributing factor to three automobile accidents on Rt. 9W in Bethlehem.

James Romeo, 39, of Ravena was listed in fair condition Monday at Albany Medical Center Hospital after a one-car crash Friday afternoon. Police said Romeo lost control of his car on Rt. 9W because of poor road conditions and struck a utility pole.

Patricia Whitney, 40, of Latham was treated and released from St. Peter's Hospital for injuries she sustained in a one-car crash Friday afternoon. Police said Whitney lost control on Rt. 9W due to slippery road conditions, crossed the roadway and struck a tree. A passenger in her car, Diane Wilson, was treated and released from Albany Medical Center after the crash.

An early afternoon accident on Rt. 9W reportedly sent two drivers to Albany Medical Center for treatment. Thomas Smith, 41, of Wynantskill was listed in fair condition Monday at Albany Medical Center Hospital. Police said Smith's car was struck by the car driven by Joseph Grose, 19, of Cohoes, when the Grose car crossed the double-yellow line. Grose was reportedly taken to Albany Medical Center for treatment and was ticketed for failure to keep right.

Out with the old?

It's that time of the year. Perhaps it was the Easter Bunny who left those bright yellow packages containing the new phonebooks on everyone's doorstep recently. But it leaves us all with the same question — what do you do with the old ones?

The phone company used to do a pickup, but no longer. The directory looks like newsprint, but the local refuse companies told us they are not on their recycling list. The operator at NYNEX's President's Helpline said, "I guess you throw them in the garbage."

The best suggestion came from the local telephone company business office, who suggests that we save them for any local schools or organizations having paper drives, because they are recyclable under those conditions.

Anyone having a paper drive?

Glenmont man charged with endangerment

Bethlehem police arrested a 17-year-old Glenmont man on two counts of felony reckless endangerment Friday after he allegedly threatened to shoot another person.

Richard Monington was picked up by officers on Bender Lane after he allegedly pointed a gun at another man in a Glenmont apartment and threatened to shoot him.

When Monington was found, he was not in possession of the gun, police said.

The police department's K-9 unit, Officer Wayne LaChappelle and Grando were called to the scene to find the missing weapon. After a 20-minute search in the woods, Grando found the gun. When LaChappelle picked up the gun, it fired narrowly missing the officer and the dog, police said. LaChappelle suffered powder burns to his left hand, but was otherwise unhurt, police said.

Monington was also charged with second-degree criminal possession of a weapon, a misdemeanor, and unlawful possession of marijuana, a violation, police said.

He was remanded to Albany County Jail after the incident.

Albany man charged for sale of drugs

Bethlehem police arrested a 32-year-old Albany man on felony count of third-degree criminal sale of a controlled substance Thursday.

Robert Pulver was arrested on a warrant issued from Albany County Court on charges that he allegedly sold heroin to a police informant in Delmar on two occasions, police said.

BFI proposal

gan, who serves as chairman of the town's Solid Waste Committee, said that presently he has no views for or against the plant. "But I think it makes sense for us to take a look at it," he said. "We are in the driver's seat; we are not going to have this thing forced on us."

Approval for the plant must come from both the Bethlehem Planning Board and the state Department of Environmental Conservation.

Corrigan said the proposed plant, which would be located in a Heavy Industrial Zone, may offer the town a substantial financial boost and improve the net environmental quality in the Capital District. He said Bethlehem would reap the tax benefits of the plant as well as increased revenue from tipping fees, which he estimated may run between $1 and $2 per ton. He also said that under the new air quality standards imposed by the state, which are considered to be the most stringent in the nation, the new plant may be able to take on the waste currently burned at the ANSWERS plant on Sheridan Ave. in Albany with a lower environmental impact.

Concerns and criticism over proximity of the plant to the Hudson River are bound to surface during the planning process. However, the first zero-water discharge resource recovery plant in the United States went on line Dec. 8 in the Town of Babylon, Nassau County. The $84 million burn plant recycles and reuses wastewater from the combustion process. According to the March 1989 DEC newsletter, Waste Line, the Long Island plant is equipped with a dry scrubber for removing acid gas and a fabric filter to remove airborne particles. The Babylon plant is expected to serve 386,000 residents, incinerate 750 tons of waste per day and generate 14 megawatts of electricity.

BFI has recently undertaken a number of solid waste operations in the area, including the buyout of Donald Wright's residential rubbish removal business in Slingerlands and the opening of a recycling plant in Latham.

Tools stolen from truck

Bethlehem police are investigating the theft of more than $2,000 worth of tools from a locked truck parked at Geno's Auto Service in Elmsmere during the overnight hours last Wednesday.

Police said the tools, including two chain saws, a drill, and a circular saw worth $2,244, were taken from a locked truck.

Items stolen from car

Bethlehem police are investigating the theft of several items from a car parked in front of a business on Delaware Ave. A radar detector and a camera lens worth $379 were taken from the car, police said.

GOP committee members appointed

Bernie Kaplowitz, chairman of the Bethlehem Republican Committee, has announced appointment of twelve new committee members.

"We have attracted a significant number of new volunteers to serve on the Bethlehem Republican Committee," Kaplowitz said. "Our goal is to ensure that we provide for maximum outreach and interaction with all residents of Bethlehem, and I'm delighted to welcome the involvement of new volunteers who will bring fresh ideas and new energy."

Kaplowitz said new members of the Bethlehem Republican Committee are: Diane Grandy, Kenwood Ave., Delmar, district 3; Robert Budliger and Charles Stockdale, both of Groesbeck Place, Delmar, district 4; Robert J. Wiggand, Glenmont Road, Glenmont, district 5; Robin and Patrick Reed, Maple Avenue, Selkirk, district 6; Paul Van Wely, Bender Lane, Delmar, district 13; James L. Clark Jr., Crestwood Lane, Delmar, district 15; Patricia Fritts, Orchard Street, Delmar, district 16; Jeanne Vogel, Heather Lane, Delmar, district 18; Kim Dollard, Shady Grove East, Selkirk, district 21; and James F. Blendell, S. Helderberg Parkway, Slingerlands, district 26.

According to Kaplowitz, Mary Bardwell was recently elected vice president of the committee to succeed Thomas Scherer, and Dorothy Brown was elected secretary of the committee to succeed Kay Becker. Kaplowitz said Scherer and Becker recently retired from their duties and were honored at the Bethlehem Republican Committee's annual dinner for their many years of distinguished service.

"This is a year when voters will decide many important offices in the Town of Bethlehem. We will be working hard to select the best possible candidates and to engage in a clear discussion of the issues," Kaplowitz said. "We're looking forward to a busy year."

Wilderness celebrated

The Five Rivers Environmental Education Center and the State University at Albany Atmospheric Sciences Research Center will sponsor a slide and music presentation, entitled "A Tribute To the Wilderness," on Tuesday, April 4, at 8 p.m.

Watch for yield curve

By David Vigoda, CFA, CFP

Prepare to be initiated into one of the more arcane aspects of investment analysis called yield curve analysis. The yield curve recently inverted, a fact widely considered highly significant. Unfortunately there is wide disagreement on what the significance is. First, however, you need to know what the yield curve is.

On a piece of graph paper draw a vertical and horizontal axis. The first is interest rates (actually yield to maturity), the second is time. The first dot is at 3 months and 5.5 percent. The next dot is at 1 year and 7.0 percent, and another is 7 years and 8.8 percent. Finish the dots at 10 years and 9.0 percent, and 30 years at 9.1 percent. Now connect the dots.

You're looking at the yield curve as it was at the time of the stock market crash in October, 1987. Note that it rises; that is, as the maturities get longer the yields get higher.

This is the normal situation, reflecting the understandable demand of investors to be rewarded with higher yields for tying up money for longer periods of time.

This curve not only rises, it rises steeply, out to about seven years. After about 10 years, however, it barely rises at all. It's reasonable to ask why the curve is shaped the way it is. If we knew that we might be able to figure out how it will change, and we could profit from that information. In plain English: We could make a bundle.

Interest rates fell sharply after the crash, but later went back up — not, however, with comparable adjustments at all maturities. Long-term rates rose less than short-term rates. By last November the 3-month rate was 8.2 percent, the 10-year rate was 9.0 percent, with the 30-year rate only slightly higher: The curve was virtually flat from 7 years on. By mid-December it was almost flat from 2 years on.

Money Talks

David Vigoda

What happened to the demand of investors for higher long-term rates? Something was wrong. The yield curve had to change, but which way? To restore the rising curve, would long-term rates rise or would short-term rates decline? Many said the latter; a few predicted the former. Both were wrong.

The opposite happened, causing the curve to invert:

Short-term rates were higher than long-term. By mid-January the highest yields were at 2 years; by mid-February the rate on 3-month bills was not much lower than on 30-year bonds. Economists agree this is a situation that cannot endure, leaving only two questions: Why is the curve the way it is, and how will it change?

For an answer I went back to the textbooks. Four explanations were offered. One: Banks and insurers are buying equal quantities of short- and long-term bonds, forcing down yields by bidding up prices, but "there is a void" in the middle area. Apparently no one has noticed that higher yields are obtainable by adjusting maturity.

Two: The current curve reflects expectations of future changes. The argument for this is mathematical. Whether the math corresponds to actual experience is an open question. Three: (None.) That is, the inverted curve makes no sense in terms of the normal demand of investors. Four: Long rates are down because long prices are being bid up by investors convinced that long rates will fall even more.

My personal favorite is three because the fact is we don't really know why the curve is inverted. That means we don't know when and how it will shift. In the words of one professional: "... It is, at best, extremely difficult to forecast the future direction of [interest] rates. ... Many would assert that it is impossible."

Sophisticated analysis aside, we can still identify a few facts. We can agree that yields are highest around two-years, that interest rates have been rising, and that inflation has been accelerating. We don't need a main-frame computer to help us conclude that putting new bond money in short-term bonds seems like a good idea these days. And if this trend continues, it makes sense to strengthen our investments and finances, for example, by only buying stocks in solid companies that we can afford to hold long-term. Or by not getting so loaded up in variable rate debt that rising rates will blow us out of the water.

Maybe that homely advice will deter you from getting upset that this discussion about the yield curve inversion didn't enable us to conclude much. Ask any people who know, they'll tell you an inversion is fraught with significance. We just don't know for sure what the significance is. And look on the bright side. Do you have any idea how sophisticated you could sound at your next cocktail party?

Police nab pair for drinking, driving

Bethlehem police arrested two drivers for misdemeanor driving while intoxicated during separate incidents last week.

A 21-year-old Slingerlands man was arrested for DWI early Saturday morning after he was stopped at the intersection of Delaware and Kenwood Aves. for a traffic violation, police said. He was charged after the officer detected the odor of alcohol and he failed a pre-screening device test, police said. He was ticketed for failure to keep right and passing a red light, police said.

A 23-year-old man was arrested for DWI on Delaware Ave. Friday after he was stopped for speeding, police said. He was arrested after failing both pre-screening device and field tests, police said.

Police stop sale of beer to minors

A Bethlehem police officer confiscated beer Saturday from four youths who were under the legal drinking age.

cation when making the sale, police said.

The beer was confiscated when the youths were asked for identification by the officer and found to be under 21. The beer was returned to the store and the purchasers given a refund.

No charges were filed against the cashier. This incident is still under investigation.

RCS programs to improve student success in school

By Sal Prividera Jr.

The work of the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk "At Risk Task Force" has yielded two programs designed to improve student success at both the early stages of learning and in the high school, where failure often leads to dropping out.

The programs called "Better Beginnings and Stronger Completions" were recently presented to the board of education and have received funding in the preliminary 1989-90 budget adopted by the board last week.

At the primary level, pre-kindergarten classes will be established to serve 30 four-year-old students, who meet the criteria for inclusion in the program. The purpose of the class will be to provide the children a better start in education through promoting positive feelings towards education and a sense of competence.

"Pre-kindergarten can help prevent school failure and promote success for those students who enter school at an educational disadvantage," said Ravena Elementary Principal Diane Kilfoile.

To be eligible for the two-and-a-half hour class, children must be age four by December 1 and come from families who meet state financial eligibility requirements or show developmental need. The financial eligibility primarily targets low-income families. The developmental need for the program is determined by an early developmental screening test. Parental involvement is required for participation in the program, Kilfoile said. The financial eligibility criteria will place 80 percent of the students, while 20 percent will be placed for developmental need.

Nancy Andress, district director of special services, said by using the financial criteria, the district could apply for a state grant and if it were awarded the district would receive 89 percent of its costs back.

The second portion of the district's proposal is to institute an in-house alternative education program for high school students.

Candidates for the alternative education program would be students who are at risk of dropping out and who are under persistent stress that interferes with school performance, Andress said. Some may have lost faith in the adult system, he said.

The program will place students in a job to help them develop strategies for gaining employment after graduation, improve their attitude toward school and their feelings of self-worth. Students in the program will still be required to earn enough credits to graduate and learn basic proficiency in reading, writing, math and citizenship.

Andress said the students would be placed in jobs in the Ravena and Selkirk communities through the Job Training Partnership Act. Students may also take BOCES-run vocational courses.

"We really want to pull the kids into the community and jobs seem to be a successful way of doing it," she said.

The district expects to place 20 students in the program next year.

Currently, both programs are receiving funding in the district's operating budget for 1989-90.

Bethlehem's history alive

By Cheryl Clary

If you are new to the Town of Bethlehem, you may have yet to discover the small red school-house museum at Route 144 and Clapper Road that is now home to the Bethlehem Historical Association and was originally the Cedar Hill School. When centralization came to the school district, the town worked with interested citizens to gain permission to convert the building to a museum.

In 1965 the Bethlehem Historical Association was chartered as a membership organization by the New York State Board of Regents to cooperate with the town government and private enterprise in achieving the preservation of historic buildings, monuments and sites as well as providing historical information to the community.

During the summer months, the museum is open on Sundays and welcomes visitors. Periodically, groups of school children are given lecture tours of the town's only museum. Monthly meetings, which are held from September until May, feature a variety of speakers and subjects of interest to the historian. In addition, the membership holds an annual card party and fair to raise funds for the museum's upkeep.

For individuals interested in genealogy, a library of reference material is available. The library contains current historical periodicals and tapes of interviews with longtime area residents, who recall ice harvesting, farming and early life in town. Books about local history are also available.

A tollgate building, the museum's newest acquisition, was moved from its site on Route 9W near Feura Bush Road to the museum property. Moved as a measure to preserve some of the town's history, it will house an exhibit of tools and farm implements.

Anyone who is interested in the topics presented at meetings on the third Thursday of each month is welcome to attend. New members are also welcome. As the town grows members of the Bethlehem Historical Association hope to continue playing a vital role in preserving the town's history for future generations.

Voorheesville made move Library setting policy

By Lyn Stapf

A month after moving the library to the spacious new facility on School Rd. the board of trustees of the Voorheesville Public Library is still meeting twice a month to address business associated with the move.

At the March 6 meeting the board welcomed three of the five members of the volunteer steering committee, which coordinated the move to the new building earlier this year. Sue Rockmore, Diane Connolly and Jenny Cillis presented the board with a booklet detailing the three-week move from the former building on Main St. Included in the report were the names of more than 1,200 volunteers who assisted in the move, local businesses and individuals who had donated funds to cover the cost, and details of the project, including the ordering of "We Made the Move" buttons and drafting a system of moving the 35,000 books. Diane Relyea and Lyn Stapf, also steering committee members, were not present.

In discussing the sale of the old building, the board reported that a bid package is being formulated.

A large portion of the meeting was devoted to laying the groundwork on the 1989-90 library budget, which will be voted on in June with the school budget. The board members have given priority to keeping costs to a minimum and maintaining quality service to patrons.

At the second meeting of the month held on March 20, the board set a policy for use of the new library community room. The policy, which is a compilation of the best aspects of room use from the Albany, Troy and Bethlehem public libraries, states that "the building may be used by the public for any civic, cultural or educational use and may not be used for religious, political, money raising or commercial purposes, nor by any partisan group presenting only one side of an issue."

The policy also states that:

- Each group must request use of the facility in writing.
- Programs offered by the library are given first preference of use of space and dates.
- Library equipment will be available for use by those who are properly trained in using such equipment.
- Each group may sign up to use the room or any portion thereof no more than 90 days in advance of the date of use and for no more than once a month.
- All use is up to the discretion of the board.

Copies of the complete policy are available at the library.

Other topics discussed included the budget, upcoming meetings to establish a Friends of the Library group and the posting of flyers in the library.

The next board of trustees meeting will be held on Monday, April 3, at 7:30 p.m.

Holding the line in Voorheesville New village taxes lower

It looks as though tax time will not be all grim for Voorheesville residents.

At the Board of Trustees meeting Tuesday night in Voorheesville, Mayor Ed Clark is expected to announce that the village has had no significant expenses during the past year outside of regular operating costs. And according to Clark, because the village's needs were handled within contingency budget reserves, there will be a small decrease in the village's tax rate for the upcoming fiscal year.

"Last year, tipping expenses (for waste disposal) skyrocketed, and there were health insurance increases that caused us to raise the rate. The year before that it was liability insurance. This year, we didn't have any big surprises," Clark said.

Significant improvements for the upcoming year will include a second well facility on a site to be determined by a hydrologist, and a new loop from the water tank to Salem Hills, which would complete a continuous circuit through the village, and ensure water flow.

Clark said the village will examine water fees to determine if there is adequate funding for the projects at the present rate. "It should be about $60,000 for both projects," Clark said. "That's not a big deal. It shouldn't cause any distress." He added that the new budget is "very much the same" as the current one.

According to Clark, the tentative budget should be available for review by the public soon. A hearing date for the budget will be announced Tuesday night.

Anyone interested in supporting the program or registering a child may call 459-4197.

New master plan for New Scotland

By Cathi Anne M. Cameron

A notice recently went out to about 40 various community and business groups in New Scotland, from the Elks and the school boards to Five Rivers Environmental Education Center, asking them for input on the Comprehensive Land Use Plan, or 'master plan' being developed by the town.

Starting with a series of six public hearings last summer, the New Scotland Planning Board, along with consultants C.T. Male Associates, has been gathering basic data and information to design a new master plan for the town.

"This is really a road map on how to look at things on a long-term basis," said Planning Board Chairman Robert Hampston, adding that "the primary thrust is for a master plan that requires its continuous use."

To ensure its effective use, Hampston said that perhaps a requirement could be included to make the board check all new applications against the master plan for continuity.

Updating the process for the rest of the board, he said that the mapping of New Scotland by C.T. Male was essentially finished, and would be distributed to the town highway department, the planning board and the town board for approval of the designation of roads and other necessary information. Demographic results are also being assembled.

As the statistical information is being compiled, the board is drafting its goals and policies, or where the planning board thinks the town should go with the master plan.

The 10- to 12-page working draft, which should be completed some time in June, will be sent to a variety of groups for comment. "No one is going to be completely happy," said Hampston. "We are expecting comments in both ranges, and it will always bring the opposition out of the woodwork."

One goal the board is firmly in agreement on is attempting to retain the rural residential character of New Scotland. Providing some thrust towards a tax base is also included, but the specifics are not as evident.

'Light industry' seems to be the means the board feels would provide that tax base. Desirable light industry was defined as businesses that would not use appreciable amounts of water, and would not produce a "waste sidestream."

Spaulding and Rogers Manufacturing Incorporated, which produces tattooing equipment in Voorheesville was cited as the type of business the board would like to increase. "Not something with 8,000 trucks coming in and out," said Raymond McKay.

Ann Richards noted that "people seem to want all the industrial zones out. No one wants it where it is right now, but where do you put it?" she asked. As far as rezoning to create an industrial district was concerned, Sam Stein asked: "If we establish goals that say we want to encourage industrial growth, and our first act is to eliminate this other industrial stuff, what message are we giving?"

"Given that right now we have no water and no sewers, do we have anything industrial to worry about?" Annick Belleville asked.

The idea of banning or regulating toxic substances was also discussed, but the question was raised about who would do the policing to determine whether a business was actually producing or handling banned substances.

With all of the questions being bantered about, the idea of a moratorium until the master plan was finished was introduced. The problem of then working under a deadline to create the master plan was considered, with several board members criticizing the "idea of making decisions to the deadline instead of taking the necessary amount of time to make the correct decisions."

Planning Board Attorney John Bailey explained that "in setting up a moratorium, say, for a year and a half, the fear is that on behalf of the town, you could be sued for monetary damages for preventing whatever that venture and investment is during that year and a half. The courts are going to want to know why you did that, and you'd better have a good reason. If you've prevented that guy from a legitimate use of his land, it becomes dangerous."

Protecting the rural nature of the Helderberg escarpment was also discussed as a priority.

Fearing possible development would spoil the highest points of New Scotland's skyline, the board expressed concern that the town could become "Scarsdale on the escarpment". (The large New York suburb is located on a similar tract of land.)

William Childs shared the concern, joking that he could see it "complete with a Motel on the Mountain."

"That's the kind of thing I don't want to see," commented Ann Richards. She said she would like to see the infrastructure of the areas nearest to Albany developed first, while still preserving the "clean and peaceful environment" of New Scotland.

To that end, Hampston intro-tect the area around its town park by making it a critical environmental area, and Hampston said the concept is "definitely something we would want to pursue" for parts of the town. Vegetation control was briefly discussed, and attempts will be made to include language that would regulate logging and stripping of vegetation.

Broadcast towers on the escarpment came under fire, and a ten-year consolidation was proposed which would more strictly limit all towers to one area, and perhaps even to one aerial. "New York City has them all on one aerial on the Empire State Building," said John Loucks. "I don't see why we can't."

The town's commercial hamlets also came under scrutiny. "There are no grocery stores, and no gas stations in most (hamlets) anymore," Richards said. "And what are hamlets if they don't have commercial centers?" An economic development committee was proposed, but Stein commented that "you have to have something to sell first."

Hampston was lightheartedly dubbed "the commissar" for his brusque breakdown of the issues, and he later commented that the process did go "slower than (he'd) like", adding that "there needs to be more thrust and less verbiage (in the draft). The fine tuning comes later when this is all sub-

RCS baseball season begins

By Josh Curley

Warm days, sunny skies and green grass are all signs of the start of spring to us. But, to Ravena baseball coach Gary VanDerzee and his squad, it also marks the beginning of a new season at RCS. Led by several returning players from last year's club, this year's team is prepared to face the rest of the Colonial Council.

Centerfielder Curt VanDerzee is expected lead the Indians offensively, sporting some outstanding figures from last year's fine season. As a junior last year, he led the team in four offensive categories including hits, doubles, average and RBI's.

Rounding out the starting line-up looks like this: catcher Frank Maiorana, first baseman Norm Wilsey, second basemen Frank Marandy or Cameron Smith, Rick Waddingham at shortstop, third basemen Robb Thayer or Brian Burns, and outfielders VanDerzee, Shane Smith, Kevin Hale or Ed Gladney.

Sophomore sensation Julio Colon will lead Ravena defensively from the mound. Colon is coming back from an extremely successful freshman season.

Senior Wilsey will also pitch for the Indians.

Ravena has to work on improving on last year's 5-11 sixth place finish.

Coach VanDerzee said he thinks that with improved pitching and defense the team will have a successful season.

Ravena opens its season in a non-league game against Catskill on Saturday.

Dolphins at Adirondacks

Nine Delmar Dolphins placed in the Adirondack Short Course Championships held March 17-19 at Union College.

Senior swimmer Chris Drew finished first in the 200-yard freestyle and second in the 200-yard backstroke. Pat Fish placed first in the 1650-yard freestyle, third in the 200-yard butterfly and sixth in the 100-yard butterfly.

Representing the senior girls, Kathleen Fish took fifth in the 200-yard butterfly and seventh in the 200-yard breaststroke. Susanne Tietz placed fourth in the 400-yard individual medley and eighth in the 100 and 200-yard breaststroke.

In the 13-14 age group, Sarah Toms finished fourth in the 200-yard backstroke and fifth in the 100-yard backstroke while Anne Byrd took eighth in the 200-yard breaststroke.

In the 11-12 age group, Marc Kanuk placed third in the 100-yard IM, 100-yard backstroke and 100-breaststroke, fourth in the 200-yard IM, and eighth in the 100-yard freestyle. Barbara Toms finished third in the 100 yard backstroke, fourth in the 100 yard breaststroke and seventh in the 200-yard freestyle. Arianne Cohen, in the 8 and under category, placed first in the 50-yard breaststroke, fourth in both the 50 and 100-yard freestyle, sixth in the 100-yard IM and seventh in the 50-yard backstroke. The 400-yard free relay team of Craig Mattox, Pat Fish, David Cleary and Drew took fifth. The same team finished sixth in the 400-yard medley.

Do For Runners." Larry has a bachelor's of science in physical education and has nine years experience in training athletes. Both Charache and Buchter are massage therapists licensed by the state of New York. Their presentation will include a demonstration of range of motion exercises and massage techniques to flush toxins from muscles, increase circulation, reduce chances for injury, and increase running performance.
