Bethlehem reval advised

Town's attorney says more challenges likely

By Mark Stuart

The Bethlehem Town Board will meet with the state Equalization and Assessment Department tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in Town Hall to discuss how the town should conduct a town-wide revaluation.

The board was advised by attorney Daniel Santola last Wednesday that there were few options other than revaluation in light of a recent court case that found Bethlehem's methodology of assessment unconstitutional. That case involved the owners of Adams Station, who challenged their 1989 assessment based on recent court decisions prohibiting market-value based assessments.

Santola said a second "welcome stranger" case involving Capital District Partners, owners of Glenmont Plaza at the corner of Feura Bush Road and Route 9W, is still pending in the courts and that the outcome of that case may give a clearer indication as to what the town can or can not do.

Santola said Capital District Partners had asked for a summary judgment, which was recently denied because the court needed more facts. A summary judgment is requested when a plaintiff feels that enough facts are present to bypass a jury trial.

Santola said Capital District Partners have the option of pursuing a jury trial or renewing their motion for a summary judgment.

"They started out essentially with the same argument as the Adams Station case," Santola said "However, the particular facts of their case were not resolved at the time they made their motion."

Santola told the town board that if it doesn't rectify the problems found by the court in the Adams Station decision, further, more serious problems are bound to arise.

"If we don't, someone is going to take the town to court next time, but not to state Supreme Court, but to federal court. . . and the town can be sanctioned by the court," Santola said. He gave two reasons for not appealing, the first being recent case law defining "welcome, stranger" practices as unconstitutional. Second, any appeal would stall the revaluation process, thereby increasing the probability of punitive action in federal court.

Santola said the town needs to adopt a new assessment methodology for Adams Station by comparing the complex with similar complexes in the town. By using the new methodology, the town would have to reval the entire town to make the assessment process equal.

Once the state Supreme Court found the Adams Station assessment to be unequal, a Pandora's Box was opened for other residents who may wish to claim inequity, Santola said.

Santola said the reason for the recent court decisions is because not until 1974 did the courts become involved in assess-

SLINGERLANDS

Post office selects new site

By Mark Stuart

Six months after withdrawing plans for a post office at the intersection of New Scotland Road and Kenwood Avenue, the U.S. Postal Service is planning to relocate the Slingerlands Post Office to the corner of New Scotland Road and La-Grange Road.

As was the case in the previous post office site, the town wants a voice in the review process despite a law exempting the federal project from local review.

Jeff Seria, real estate specialist for the Postal Service will be unavailable for comment until March 2, according to a recorded telephone message.

Town Supervisor Kenneth J. Ringler said he will include discussion of the post office on the agenda for the Feb. 28 town board meeting. He said he wants any new use to comply with the zoning code and said he will discuss how the town can have a say in reviewing the project. The post office site is located in an AA and A-Residential zone.

Under federal government sovereignty, the town has no legal right of review in certain federal projects. The town did review a previous proposal because the project included an existing commercial use on the site.

Plans for the new Slingerlands Post Office call for a 5,200 square-foot building with a 30,000-square foot parking lot situated on a 60,000 square foot parcel. The building will accommodate 16 employees.

Voorheesville's mission to Russia

By Bob Hagyard

"With the anxiousness of Russia to establish contacts with the outside world, the timing is perfect."

That's Robert Streifer on the upcoming trip to the Soviet Union he will take with five other Voorheesville Central School District officials.

Streifer, language arts chairman at Clayton A. Bouton High School, and the other five will follow up on a visit to Leningrad last fall by Arthur Willis, high school social studies chairman and district humanities committee chairman. At that time, Willis established contact with Soviet educational officials willing to set up a student-faculty exchange program between the district and Leningrad School 80, an elite secondary school specializing in English-language instruction.

The district will pick up $4,000 of the total cost under a resolution adopted by the board of education at its Feb. 12 meeting. The $4,000 would cover most of the costs to send Streifer, Willis, VCS Superintendent Dr. Alan McCartney and VCHS Principal O. Peter Griffin, the district announced at a press conference last week.

Two board members, C. James Coffin and Thomas Thorpe, will accompany the four at their own expense. Dr. Custer Quick, superintendent of the Albany-Schenectady-Schoharie BOCES district, will round out the party under BOCES auspices.

On March 18, the group will board a Finnair flight at Kennedy Airport and jet to Helsinki, Finland, then board a connecting flight to Leningrad. After a day's rest they will spend five to six days in meetings and "colloquiums" with Soviet educational officials in Leningrad, then return to the Capital District on March 28.

Target date for an exchange program is "a year from ments. Furthermore, the building boom of the '80s placed a renewed interest in the issue of assessment based on market value prices of recently sold homes. "What was OK in 1910, 1920 and 1930 is not OK now," Santola said.

Councilman Fred Webster asked whether zoning has an effect on the assessment value of undeveloped land. Santola said it did and added that agricultural land located in a residential zone could be assessed at higher assessment based on potential development. Supervisor Kenneth Ringler noted that such a practice serves to promote development of agricultural land and hinted at the need for additional agricultural zones in the zoning code.

The question of revaluation is the result of a Jan. 10 decision by state Supreme Court Judge Joseph Torraca that in 1989 the town assessed 37 lots in the Adams Station apartment complex based solely on the purchase price or construction costs. The owners of Adams Station — JF Associates — argued that they had been assessed unfairly and compared their assessment to other apartment complexes in town, such as Meadowbrook Apartments in North Bethlehem.

The court specifically ruled: "In assessing only those properties which were sold or had new construction for the year 1989, without considering the current actual values of other similar properties in the community, (the town) engaged in a practice of selective assessment. This activity was in violation of the Equal Protection provision of the state and federal constitutions."

The court did not order the town to conduct a town-wide revaluation, but only ordered the reassessment of Adams Station and refund of any taxes in excess of the old assessment.

The new post office will require curb cut approval from the state Department of Transportation.

It would replace the current post office at the Toll Gate building in Slingerlands. Because of space problems, the post office has been seeking to relocate for some time and in 1987 unveiled plans for a new post office on the property of Anthony and Fulvia Pizzitola located at the intersection of New Scotland Road and Kenwood Avenue. The Postal Service withdrew its plans for that project last year.

The new post office is located adjacent to the proposed Bethlehem Village Planned Development District, which is currently awaiting review by the planning board. Both projects are located in an area that will be included in a moratorium if Bethlehem agrees to participate in Albany County's Krumkill Area generic environmental impact study.

In reviewing the Kenwood

Avenue proposal in November 1988, then-Planning Board attorney John T. Mitchell advised the board that it had jurisdiction since a mixed use existed on the property. "In general, under the Supremacy Clause of the United States Constitution, the federal government and its agencies are not subject to local municipal zonnow," said Willis last week, "though we're shooting for the fall."

McCartney, Streifer and Willis emphasized the need to deal with Soviet officials on the terms to which they are accustomed: carefully matching its officials by function to Soviet counterparts. Those officials, said McCartney, include Andrei T. Ibragimov, vice chairman of the Soviet Friendship Societies; Elvira Zuyeva, assistant professor at the Hertsen Teacher Training Institute of the University of Leningrad; and Ludmilla H. Shulyakova, principal of School 80.

The (common means of ingress and egress for Hoagy's Restaurant and the proposed post office and) proposed reduction in the number of parking spaces of the (restaurant) cause the same to be in possible non-compliance with the zoning ordinance of the town of Bethlehem."

As it turns out, other — not many — American schools have traveled this path before. Years ago, Scotia-Glenville officials set up a computer link between their high school and a comparable institution in Moscow through Albany-Schenectady-Schoharie BOCES. A VC/School 80 link will be discussed in Leningrad next month.

Also to be discussed are the terms of the student/faculty exchange: for six weeks, one half year, or one full year. And the form: VCS officials are investigating the state Education Department's peace partnership program through which, under the direction of Maria Ramirez, other New York State districts have set up intercultural programs with schools in France and Spain. Grant money is available from a number of corporations, notably Nabisco and Coca-Cola, for new intercultural exchanges involving new technological ties abroad. And McCartney's office has uncovered two grant programs through a close reading of the Federal Register that officials will explore.

Coyne seeks revenue, advises sales tax hike

By Patricia Dumas

To help finance the climbing costs of running its government, Albany County should look toward privatization and more state money for mandated programs. And an increase in the sales tax would be helpful too.

That's the advice County Executive James J. Coyne handed out in a State of the County address last week that underscored proposals he made last year.

Coyne delivered his annual message to the county legislators at their second meeting of the year. Usually, the message is given in January, but this year's timing allowed the county executive to point with pride to the recent successful opening of The Knickerbocker Arena, the project that he first proposed in a State of the County message some years ago.

"Privatization is the wave of the future for local government and necessary for them to survive," Coyne told the legislators.

He also said that "like any chief elected county official, I believe that future mandates should be absorbed by state government and not the local property taxpayer."

Mandated programs, revenue losses, and increased spending for county needs contributed to a budget gap this year, Coyne noted, but he did not specifically mention that his 1990 budget had proposed to take care of the gap by using $17 million in anticipated revenues from a lease/sale plan for the county airport that failed to materialize.

The county legislature handled that crisis by cutting back on non-mandated programs and by increasing the county property tax levy.

Coyne said, "Between foregone state revenues and mandated increases in the local share of services, Albany County entered this year facing a $7.5 million loss."

He referred to expenditures required for road and bridge repairs and said, "Our projected gap climbed to almost $17 million — even before we considered normal increases in the cost of running a 3,100-employee administration. To no one's surprise, deep cuts were made in non-mandated services and the tax levy — as the county's fundamental revenue source was increased."

Coyne said he is "encouraged" by Gov. Mario Cuomo's proposal for an office of mandate review which would work at identifying, easing, or repealing mandated programs without compromising goals.

He also said he supports proposals endorsed by the New York State Association of Counties to generate income for counties. The proposals would give counties the option of raising the sales tax by one cent for their own use, would allow the state to distribute payments in lieu of sales tax on interstate mail order sales, and would give local governments the option of imposing and collecting fees on new development.

The current sales tax in Albany County is seven cents, with four cents going to the state treasury and three cents going to the county, which is obligated to share it with the local governments. The legislation being pushed by the Association of Counties would allow Albany County to increase the tax to eight percent, and to keep all the proceeds from the extra one cent for the county treasury.

"It could nearly eliminate the county property tax — perhaps we could then offer a rebate to property owners in Albany County," Coyne said. "This should be our long-term goal and would be a first in the United States."

The county executive said he is "excited and encouraged by the likelihood of other innovative means of generating non-property tax revenue for the county."

"Specifically," he said, "I mean the potential lease arrangements to operate the county airport and the Knickerbocker Arena. For a lease arrangement, privatization takes the form of private sector operations, but the county retains ownership. The county receives back its investment with profit — at no risk."

He said it would be in the county's interest to lease the airport even though it has started to be a profitable operation because future profits must remain in the airport fund and any future losses would require more taxpayer support.

He urged the legislators to approve a lease arrangement being considered by the Federal Aviation Administration that would permit British American-Lockheed to operate the airport, giving the county $30 million up front and 40 yearly lease payments totaling $70 million.

Although he has in the past pointed out the potential profit from the civic center (Knickerbocker Arena) operation, Coyne in this year's message said that "a small annual operating profit is anticipated" and said the county could make more money by leasing the facility.

"If it were to make a million dollars per year it would take 20 years to earn $20 million. A lease offer would guarantee the county $20 million immediately," Coyne said.

The county executive reminded the legislators that his proposals for privatization have attracted international attention. He said he has been invited to attend an international privatization congress to be held in Canada in May and to participate in an airport privatization conference in April sponsored by the Reason Foundation, a California-based privatization research group.

"These are opportunities to share the wealth of experience and knowledge with others from around the world," Coyne said.

GOP legislators to rebut 'State of the County'

By Patricia Dumas

The Albany County Legislature's Republican minority has announced that it will issue a "State Of The County Concerns" message this month to focus on what it sees as major oversights in the Democrat-controlled legislature's program.

Minority Leader Robert G. Prentiss of Colonie said he will hold a press conference to discuss the minority program.

He also said he appointed Kenneth S. MacAffer Jr., another Colonie legislator, deputy minority leader. That post was vacated by Prentiss when he was recently elected minority leader to succeed W. Gordon Morris Jr. of Delmar. Morris decided to step down as the party's legislative leader.

Prentiss and MacAffer are outspoken legislators, frequently taking the floor to denounce legislation promoted by the county's Democrats. During its long legislative debate history, the county civic center, for instance, was termed by Prentiss, "Coyne's Castle" and also as "The Knickerbocker Arena. MacAffer referred to it as "The Please Palace on Pearl Street."

MacAffer, a lawyer, has been a legislator for 17 years and is a past minority leader. He is village attorney of Menands and is on the bill drafting commission of the New York State legislature. His legal background and party loyalty, Prentiss said, "will be a valuable asset to the minority party in its announced goal of attaining legislative leadership in 1991."

Asked to comment on County Executive James J. Coyne's State Of The County message last week, Prentiss called it "a Valentine's Day Massacre of the taxpayers."

He said Coyne "is a political yuppie who wants to do everything now without worrying about future consequences."

The Republican minority in its coming message, Prentiss said, will address concerns of high taxes, lack of fire and safety code enforcement in public buildings, drug abuse, poor roads, and the need for airport modernization.

Lawson Lake nixed as zoo site

By Susan Graves

Lawson Lake won't be the site of the area's first major zoo even though County Executive James Coyne offered to provide space there for it.

"We were very grateful for his very generous offer," said Rachel Baum, president and co-founder of the Capital District Zoological Society, but the Lawson Lake area has several drawbacks.

Baum, a Slingerlands resident, toured the area recently with public works department officials and discovered poor accessibility, the terrain, and sewerage and water problems would make the site unacceptable.

"It's unfortunate because it's a very beautiful piece of land," Baum said. Lawson Lake is about 17 miles from Albany off of County Road 109 in the southwest corner of New Scotland and partially in the town of Coeymans.

In order to get there, several county roads have to be used, which Baum said presents a problem of accessibility. "It's important that it's easily accessible to a highway," she said.

Zoological Society co-founder and vice president Marsha Malanga of North Greenbush said at this time "there is nothing seriously being looked at" in the area as a possible zoo site, but that the society was "aiming for the Capital Region" for a zoo.

"It (Lawson Lake) had three of four negatives as far as a zoo is concerned," she said.

Malanga said finding an appropriate site might be "the point that takes more time than anything else."

Baum said an ideal zoo location would have about 200 acres. "Ninety acres is the minimum, but we'd prefer 200," she said. She said the society has invited proposals from city and county managers from an eight-county region. "But we've not made a decision," as to a specific preference for a site, she said.

The zoo Baum and Malanga envision would be governed by the society and funded through corporate and individual donations.

Baum said the majority of zoos are run by societies with some that have participation from municipalities.

The "final product," Baum figures, will cost about $35 million, but she said a zoo could open sections at a time. She said the group would like to open with an exhibit of New York State animals.

For now much of the society's work is in the planning stages. After the Jan. 24 meeting at the Holiday Inn in Latham, Baum said many of the more than 200 people who attended are now working on committees.

She said she was stunned by the number of zoo aficionados who showed up. "It was a zoo."

Committees are working on several considerations in addition to the zoo site. One area is the society's statement of philosophy.

Out of proportion

The proposal to increase Albany County's sales tax by one-third (by one cent on a dollar's purchases, or by $100 on a $10,000 car) is not likely to win wide acclaim, even though its proponent estimates that this would "nearly" eliminate the property tax levied for county purposes.

The sales tax idea, a proposal from the New York State Association of Counties that would require legislative action, was the nub of the "State of the County" presentation by County Executive Coyne. In our view voting another tax just like that is not the best answer to the county's fiscal problems. Deserving of first attention are, rather, the steps that county officials can take to reduce the outgo in order to close the gap.

Implicit in that critical review, in fact, should be a sharp scrutiny of past deeds as well as existing practices. How did we get this way? Reductions in aid from above bear on the answer, but that can be used as an easy out, a ready-made excuse for bum management. Canny acceptance of changing requirements, and flexible effective adapting in the interest of solvency should have foreclosed most of the shortfall.

Dr. Coyne had other pink pills in his bag, however, but they're so tired as to be barely worth noting: leasing the airport and the "civic center" to produce other funds painlessly.

We were sorry to see that a significant portion of this report was devoted to explaining away that injudicious remark to a reporter (it's on tape) about how he'd lied to county legislators on the ultimate cost for the civic center. "Blown out of proportion" is now one of his excuses.

Let's make it a little easier

A letter on this page last week outlined how Bethlehem residents can recycle household waste, thus doing their bit for the environment. As the writer noted, once the system is set up, it takes only a few extra minutes per day.

Recycling is the wave of the future—or the past, as our favorite uncle noted last week. Nevertheless, any serious effort by the town to get residents to recycle must offer something better than a 20-minute drive on back roads to the recycling center.

The Rupert Road landfill is just too difficult to reach to make recycling much of a reality right now. And we can't see much reason for asking people to drive there (if they can find it). What happened to the Waldenmaier property that the town purchased several years ago as a transfer station site? The property is centrally located on Rt. 32 just south of the town park, has a serviceable building and plenty of land.

Asking town residents to separate, wash and sort all sorts of easily disposable items is one thing, but scenic drives to out-of-the-way spots, while arguably good for the soul, are not part of one's civic duty.

Buckling down

Word from the countinghouse in our Capitol now suggests that the State's deficit is going to be worse than already estimated. What to do? This kind of bookkeeping is calculated to be an embarrassment to the Governor—but it's even more embarrassing to all those citizens who Barney Fowler delighted in terming "the guy in the barrel."

Creation of new forms of taxation are prominently put forward, with variations such as "delaying" a scheduled tax cut (which might be just another tax increase, after all).

We've asked in the past: Aren't highly touted

(and appropriately rewarded) managers supposed to be able to anticipate alterations in the fiscal climate? And then make necessary, timely adjustments? It's difficult not to notice that projections of revenues seem to be revised downward consistently. Why should this be such a surprise to the experts we have hired to manage the public's business?

The obvious solution is tightening at the buckle. That would induce some discomfort for many who are accustomed to comfortable ways and complacent thinking. But it's worth trying, really trying.

Aiding the bluebird

What better warrant of spring's approach than the special presentation this past holiday weekend, at the Five Rivers Center, on "Bringing back the bluebird."

Recognizing that "the hand of man" is culpable in the bluebirds' struggle for existence, the lecturers focused on the positive side of human intervention, including the popular activity of providing nest boxes peculiarily suited to them.

But winter's not all gone either: two sessions of the winter family program were held this week, and coming up Saturday morning will be an outing known as snowshoeing at Partridge Run, a 5,500-acre preserve on a mountain top in the Helderbergs, with 40 miles of trails and such denizens as bears, bobcats, and otters.

Ref-Fuel burned up, rebuts allegations

Editor, The Spotlight:

Since my company announced plans to build a waste-to-energy incinerator last year, we've spoken to many Bethlehem residents and answered lots of questions. Most people understand the need for our project; some people support it, some don't. Unfortunately, those who oppose the project often state opinions as if they were facts. A case in point is the Feb. 7 letter "Incineration costs, hazards enumerated."

The letter makes unequivocal statements about public health and trash incinerators. Yet no source is quoted, no study is mentioned. In fact, most engineers and scientists believe that modern waste-to-energy plants provide an environmentally sound method of disposal for those wastes that cannot, for whatever reason, be recycled. Researchers at Cornell's Waste Management Institute support waste-to-energy as a safe method of waste disposal. Trained professionals within health and environmental agencies at the state and federal level also support waste-to-energy. To check further, call the solid waste divisions of the state Department of Environmental Conservation or the federal Environmental Protection Agency for information.

Not only can waste-to-energy plants provide safe waste disposal, the fact is that living near American Ref-Fuels's Hempstead plant on Long Island is safer than drinking water from many public water systems. The cancer risk of living near the Hempstead plant, according to analysis of its emissions, is one in 20 million. Public drinking-water systems can carry a cancer risk 800 times greater (40 in one million) according to Science magazine (though not all systems do).

The Feb. 7 letter also contains misinformation on the relative costs of different methods of disposal. A study of the four-county Capital Region conducted last year by the Environmental Facilities Corporation concluded that a regional waste-to-energy facility would be cheaper than a regional landfill. Recycling 50 percent of our waste, while a necessary part of the waste solution, will also be expensive.

A second letter in the Feb. 14 Spotlight expresses concern about the importation of trash from other communities in the region. The writer declares that Bethlehem should address only its own needs and "not provide an easy solution to the crisis facing other communities." This is a strange attitude indeed for a resident of a community that today exports virtually all its waste. Bethlehem sends its waste to Albany where most of it is incinerated. The lesson here is that individual communities within a

Good police work receives praise

Editor, The Spotlight:

Our home on Van Wies Point was burglarized, damaged and several items taken early this year.

We wish to thank the Bethlehem Police Department, and especially officers Demarest, Cox, and Bowdish for their superior work in apprehending the burglars and recovering most of our possessions.

We also thank our good neighbor Jessica for her vigilance and involvement. Her observations and quick thinking kept the incident relatively minor and greatly aided the police.

It's a good feeling to have such good neighbors and dedicated police department. Our thanks to all.

Little Orphant Andy

I know Andy Rooney, Senator. Andy Rooney is a friend of mine. And Andy Rooney is not what they're saying about him. No way. Andy Rooney is a victim of the new American intolerance. Our country is experiencing a spasm of intolerant unwillingness to permit plain speaking. If a person is so unfortunate as to let an evident truth escape from his (her) lips, that unluckily indiscreet individual becomes a hunted hare, pursued by the jackals of intolerance, baying as they go, "Thou shalt not! Thou shalt not!"

Just what it is that the gainsayers would deny depends on the immediate circumstance. That which is speakable has passed beyond the blasphemous, the willful lie told to create havoc. Now it is dangerous to utter a hypothesis, to frame a question as to "why?" Worst of all, it is impermissible to state a self-evident truism.

In Andy Rooney's case he is being made to pay for bluntness of expression from a questioning mind. His columns, published in many newspapers nationwide, and his little, funny diatribes on Sunday evenings' telly, are calculated to prick our collective smugness, our soft and easy assumptions, our convenient conventions. With that turn of mind, and with the iconoclastic reputation that he's earned in nearly a half-century of a special kind of journalism, he has made himself into a ready target for organized groups who may be offended.

In at least one of the remarks for which he's now being made to bleed, Andy spoke with injudicious

CONSTANT READER

Could Rudy ruin Mario?

For those New Yorkers who are interested in the political future of Mario Cuomo, there's a moderately informative piece in New York Magazine's issue of Feb. 19.

It's by their political writer, Joe Klein, and it manifestly is about Rudolph Giuliani and the prospect that maybe, just possibly, he'd be willing to run for Governor this year. But the main figure in any speculation about the governorship necessarily must revolve around the incumbent.

Let's assume that Governor Cuomo is going to be a candidate for re-election. That's a mighty safe bet, though if he's truly serious about seeking the presidency in 1992, there's something to be said for allowing himself adequate time to prepare while out of office for more than a year before the primary campaigning begins.

Joe Klein takes the view that running against Mr. Cuomo would be "a political kamikaze mission." He notes that in Washington Democrats are "suddenly re-smitten with Cuomo," and that no one else seems interested in running (as a Democrat).

The questions, problems, and options confronting the Governor as of now include these:

- If he can defeat a hard-slugging opponent (such as Giuliani presumably would be) this "might enable Cuomo to prove several things to the skeptical national press — that he has nothing to candor. There he ran up against one of the holy "Thou shalt not's."

In another of the remarks attributed to him, the issue is not his accuracy of expression, but rather the basic question of: did he actually say it? By opening his mouth to a stranger with an open telephone line and an inexperienced pencil, he opened a trapdoor and plunged through into the jackals' nest. I believe that he was entrapped. (That he should have known better than to fall into the trap is beside the point here. The point is that he was had, viciously and deliberately so.)

He's up against the wall without even a blindfold

Andy Rooney says he didn't say, wouldn't have said, the damnable remarks for which he's being damned. Without even the grace of a blindfold, he's up against the wall and the firing squad has loosed its volley. Andy now remarks that he doesn't know if he's been destroyed; in any event, he's been severely wounded. And what's been hurt along with him is the ability of anyone to voice an opinion that some sensitive pressure group may take exception to.

Another hurting — and alarming — feature is the readiness of Andy's employer, itself one of the major sources of information and opinion in the country, to credit the faceless accusers rather than believe the veracity of its distinguished colleague.

In this respect, principal blame clearly rests on the executive who disbelieves Andy (for the record) and exacts an unwarranted penalty. But we must wonder where the pressure to fine him ($200,000 worth) originated. Is there substance to the supposition of many that Andy is being made to pay for his dereliction in supporting a strike by colleagues many months ago? Is this, then, the other horn of Andy's dilemma? If so, shame on the CBS hierarchy, but save some shame to be applied also to the weak-kneed responses of producer Don Hewitt and Andy's "60 Minutes" associates. Cheers for Walter Cronkite, who was unremitting in his testimony for Andy's character.

The "media" hasn't been very up-front in this tempest. The revered New York Times spewed out the most twisted editorial comment you're ever likely to find. Who is speaking up for freedom of speech and freedom of the press? Pretty hard to find laudable instances. A public official remarked to Andy, face to face, that as much as he likes and admires Andy, he's left with a nagging feeling that, for better or worse, here's a sad example of "the media" feeling the cutting edge that many of the press's practitioners like to apply to those in public life. He intimates that there's substance to the lines that Hamlet was caused to utter:

"Tis sport to have the engineer Hoist with his own petard."

Of this I am not quite so certain.

'hide' and that he has gained enough maturity to keep his cool under pressure."

- "If he runs well (in such a rough contest) and wins, the

"For the next decade we're going to be bombarded by politicians hoping to gain transcendence on the cheap by summoning their 'vision' of the year 2000 — and they should be made to pay. Literally: a millennial rhetoric tax is needed. It should be graduated, and confiscatory ($5,000 for each presidential hopeful, with a double fine for those who profess to see a 'new spirituality' on the horizon.)"

— Joe Klein,

Democratic nomination may be his by a clever sleight of hand: the first, most important primary will have taken place on his home turf."

About that matter of keeping cool, however, the writer has a question mark: Would Giuliani be "willing to test Cuomo's volcanic temper and try to get under his skin?" What then?

Other pertinent observations, and some impertinent, too:

- Are the national Republicans ready to put up $10 million for a fighting candidate, as scuttlebutt has it?

- Other than Giuliani, do the Republicans have anyone with plausible credentials? Do the names of Bill Green and Roy Goodman bring Kevin and Megan running to the polls intent on ousting Mario? Not hardly, as the saying has it. (Mr. Klein fails to mention Sol Wachtler.)

- Cuomo "has never had to face a tough, prosecutorial challenger, someone willing to turn over every rock and and law client in his past. Someone willing to say, New York's a mess — why haven't you done more?" Is there "someone willing to make 1990 painful enough for Cuomo that he'll shy away from national politics again in 1992?" The stake here is rather high for the Republicans, too, in that, as Mr. Klein asks, "Who knows what Mario Cuomo might do to George Bush in a one-on-one-debate?"

- Is Cuomo hoping for a Giuliani to beat up on? Mr. Klein thinks that the answer is in whether the Governor wants to run in '92 and that "he sort of does." And if he chooses to run, "a tough, high-profile race might do him some good. Against a weak opponent,

Amnesty in Albany

The contributor of this Point of View, a resident of Altamont, is an emeritus professor at the State University at Albany and a former writer for The Knickerbocker News.

By William E. Rowley

Point of View

Amnesty International is coming to be less of an abstraction in the Capital District — not just that worthy, Nobel Peace Prize-winning cause to which to make a tax-deductible contribution of Dec. 31; that far-off global organization whose reports of human rights abuses are so respectfully noted in the press.

A hundred or so active volunteers here, out of nearly a thousand members, made it visible in 1989. You've seen them at tables at fairs and festivals or a shopping center soliciting signatures on petitions and letters in behalf of some of the 25,000 prisoners of conscience in distant lands; bringing out hundreds of supporters last May to a rally on the Capitol steps to help defeat again the death penalty in New York State; and, a month later, to protest the Chinese massacre in Tiananmen Square.

Going into its third year, Amnesty's fledgling Albany (and vicinity) Group 361 promises to be more visible in 1990.

Many around Albany have been joining (contributing to) Amnesty International since its founding in 1961 — by British lawyer Peter Benenson, who was outraged to read that a Portuguese student was arrested for making toast to liberty. Now more than a half-million people around the world have joined. A Capital District group was started five years ago, but languished until a poet and state worker, Thomas C. Nattell, and another government worker Kay Guerri, revived it as Group 361 in 1987.

If you went to one of its monthly meetings at Albany Public Library, you might find the members a rather mild, methodical group of activists, signing and addressing stacks of Xeroxed letters as they listen to reports of a dozen committees. They call themselves "Freedom Writers." Last year they sent out thousands of letters — sometimes "urgent action" telegrams — to government officials in some 150 countries targeted by Amnesty for human rights abuses. Some of the letters are individually written; most are written and Xeroxed by group leaders, so that at a small committee meeting a dozen members can send out 200 of them. It's part of Amnesty's grapeshot strategy: to pressure with hundreds of letters an official in, say, China or South Africa, to stop the torture of execution of one individual prisoner, to get him or her a fair trial if not clemency or release.

Amnesty's 'grapeshot strategy' of blizzards of letters to officials in China, Latin America, and elsewhere has been proved to be effective . . .

And it works. Last year, as Amnesty International U.S.A. estimates, 150 prisoners of conscience were released. They don't come out on television like Nelson Mandela, but some write back as did one from the Dominican Republic:

"When the first two hundred letters came, the guards gave me back my clothes. Then the next two hundred letters came, and the prison doctor came to see me. When the next pile of letters arrived, the director got in touch with his superiors. The letters kept coming and coming: three thousand of them. The president was informed and the president called the prison and told them to let me go."

This year Group 361 has a prisoner of its own to focus on Jiao Zhijin, a salesman in Liaoning Province in China. He was arrested last June, as Amnesty's huge network of informants said, for his involvement in last spring's pro-democracy movement. Letters are now deluging the governor of the province asking fair treatment of him and that details of his trial be made public. If it's established that he is a prisoner of conscience, the letters will get stronger.

The "actions" of Amnesty volunteers are not glamorous; you don't get much of an ego-trip signing letters, lobbying legislators, going to a rally. They are a diverse group: serious high school and college students; young working people; older veterans of the 1960s activism.

Examples: Tom Roberts, 21 of Delmar, who was inspired by Prof. Helen Staley to run the student group at Junior College of Albany and who has now dropped out, temporarily, from the University at Albany to spend most of his time organizing college groups in the Northeast (seven now going in the Capital District); Hyman Kuritz, also of Delmar, retired professor of history and education at the university, coordinator of the group's anti-death penalty work; Ivan Gerling, a State Health Department biology researcher who started Amnesty work in his native country of Denmark and is now chair of the group's China committee and its overall council; area coordinators Kay Guerri and Elissa Schutz, sister of a murder victim, who is eloquent against the death penalty.

Thanks to businesses for soccer support

Editor, The Spotlight:

The Bethlehem Soccer Club will be hosting an indoor soccer tournament through March 18. As with any undertaking, much time, energy, support, and determination go into it for its success.

We feel it is important that we recognize the businesses who responded so well. Their generosity will benefit not only the Bethlehem soccer travel teams but also the intra-club program. Answers are sought for Selkirk firemen

Editor, The Spotlight:

I would like to know why the Selkirk Fire Department is taking so long to have a mutual aid plan with our surrounding fire companies. I understand it is very hard to get a crew to man the trucks during the day. Don't you think a mutual aid plan would be more efficient?

I also understand that someone would like to have the Selkirk rescue truck (R46) respond to traffic accidents, instead of the Bethlehem ambulance (R49). Why would this be advantageous?

I also would like to see a clarification of the definition of the district chief's car. It is my understanding that when the "Jaws of Life" broke down, two firemen had to drive a personal vehicle to Syracuse in order to have the tool repaired. The fire company then had to pay mileage on the vehicle. I had thought this was one purpose of having a district chief's car.

Who makes the departmental decisions for the Glenmont, South Bethlehem and Selkirk fire houses? Is it the district chief or the Board of Commissioners?

Connie Mack team seeks more support

Once again baseball season is approaching. The Bethlehem Connie Mack team under the direction of John Sodergren is kicking off our second season. Last year we wrote to community businesses seeking support and you came through for us. Again we are asking for that much-needed support.

The team was reorganized last year under the direction of Manager John Sodergren, a Bethlehem teacher and coach, and Al Greenhaugh. The team itself is "our boys," many who started in Tri Village Little League, Babe Ruth, Mickey Mantle, and earned their way, through hard work, to the Connie Mack team.

Though team members change, 80 percent remain constant to the team. They have won titles and championships in all leagues. In Babe Ruth (District 5 Champions, State Qualifier), Mickey Mantle (Division Championship) (Upper New York State Championship) and last year the Bethlehem Connie Mack team were the League Champions in the Eastern New York Region (12 wins — 2 losses) and went on to Syracuse to play in the state championship.

Last year we started from the bottom. With your support we were able to purchase uniforms and equipment, maintain the fields, pay insurance costs and umpire fees. This year similar costs need to be met. Although each player pays a registration fee, money is needed for updating uniforms and equipment, paying umpires, insurance, and tournament fees and maintaining fields.

The players, coaches, and families thank those who helped for their continued support and once again are looking forward to playing ball and perhaps even again bringing "home" yet another championship.

Please make your checks payable to: Bethlehem Connie Mack, C/O John Sodergren, 22 Sheffield Drive, Delmar 12054.

Views On[®] Dental Health

Dr. Geoffrey B. Edmunds D.D.S.

WHY DENTAL FLOSS?

Dental plaque is the primary cause to tooth decay and gum disease. A tooth brush can help remove plaque from visible surfaces but cannot remove it from between the teeth and beneath the gum line. Unwaxed floss is most often recommended to remove plaque from these hidden areas. Here's how to use it:

Cut off about 18 inches of floss and wrap the ends around the middle fingers, leaving about 2 inches between the hands. Guide it with thumbs for the top teeth and index fingers for lowers. Pass the floss gently between two teeth, sliding several times to the gum and back along the side of one tooth. Repeat the scrapping on the side of the adjacent tooth and move on until all teeth are flossed.

A word of caution: Always control the floss. Try never to snap the floss suddenly between two teeth as the gums may be sensitive. Use a gentle, sawing motion. If gums bleed, you may be flossing too hard, or they may be in poor health. It makes good sense to have your dentist or hygienist demonstrate the flossing method to you. It will help insure the future health of your teeth and gums.

he'd have to better his 1988 record of 65 percent or be deemed as "slipping."

•If Guiliani runs — and especially if he has strong national Republican support — Cuomo immediately turns the campaign into a referendum on Bush. This is nice in two ways: He can campaign as the underdog, and the focus is shifted from his record as governor to national issues.

"Cuomo loves it when a campaign goes cosmic — the death penalty, abortion, and assault rifles are a lot easier to talk about than what he's done for mentally ill homeless."

So where does Rudolph Guiliani fit in? "Without the big money — and the ability to browbeat Cuomo with six months' worth of negative TV ads — it seems unlikely that Guiliani will risk the run."

All active in other, more political causes, they abide, in their Amnesty work, by the international organization's principles of strict independence from "all governments, political factions, ideologies, economic interests, and religious creeds." Last summer when the big Trump bicycle race started from the State Capitol, some Amnesty people, as individuals, joined others from the Social Justice Center to picket in protest against Donald Trump's full-page advertisements calling for the death penalty.

The anti-death penalty committee is gearing up now for the annual campaign to persuade state legislators to sustain Governor Cuomo's annual veto of the death penalty bill. Penalty. A delegation of Scotia-Glenville High School students has volunteered to drum up help from other high school groups.

This spring another Group 361 campaign will be under way to stop the "refoulment," or forcible return, of refugees to persecution, imprisonment, or execution in their homelands.

While the number of the group's active volunteers is growing, they can use still more hands. Anyone interested can call Ivan Gerling at 271-1762 or write Amnesty International, Group 361, Box 8574, Albany 12208. region can't pretend they exist in isolation of their neighbors.

It is important to be involved and I respect the commitment of concerned citizens. But it's not enough to offer an opinion that reduction, reuse, and recycling alone will solve the waste disposal crisis. In fact, the country with the most success with these techniques — Japan — also operates 400 waste-to-energy plants. We need all these methods.

If the Capital Region doesn't recycle more aggressively and site new waste-disposal facilities such as American Ref-Fuel's, we're guaranteed to see an increase in illegal "side-of-the-road" dumping (reported in The Spotlight), and uncontrolled backyard burning (widely reported in the media). Disposal costs will continue to rise and the problem will grow. It makes sense to take trash that would otherwise be buried and turn it into electricity — in this case enough to power 25,000 homes. The company stands ready to discuss its plans with interested parties.

George Ward, a storyteller and songwriter from Ballston Spa, will entertain with tales and songs about New York State.

This year's Parents As Reading Partners program (PARP) will run through the month of March and wind up on April 5. This year's theme is, "New York: A State of Minds." The hard working co-chairpersons of this year's event are Donna Crisafulli and Debbie Moon.

Math for the family

One hundred and eight parents and children enthusiastically participated in "Family Math," a program held on the evening of March 9 at Ravena Elementary School. "Parents are very interested in mathematics as a challenge in our schools," commented principal Diane Wilfoile. "Family Math" is a wonderful way to involve them.

The program was presented by Nancy Zobel, coordinator of gifted and talented programs for the Ithaca City School District. "Family Math" brought parents and children together to work on problem-solving skills through a "hands on" approach. Using concrete objects such as beans, coins, toothpicks, and string, parents helped children understand the meaning of numbers and spatial concepts.

Would a $250 Balance For Free Checking Tie Your Banker Up In Knots?

Why get bent out of shape over a checking account? Yet some banks do, requiring as much as $1,000 daily balance for "free" checking.

At Trustco, we don't ask you to tie up a small fortune for checking. In fact, we offer it free with just a $250 average available monthly balance. That includes free checking, a free first order of checks, a high rate of interest, and no charges, even if your balance falls below $250 for a few days.

If, in comparison, your bank's "free" checking seems a little twisted, call on Trustco. Just say you want a NOW account, and we'll arrange to transfer your account, absolutely free.

Is there a better way to straighten things out?

Plan to slow down building approved by town board

By Mark Stuart

Seven months after it was originally presented to the planning board, the Bethlehem Town Board unanimously approved a two-year moratorium on residential development.

Before last Wednesday's vote, Councilman Bob Burns expressed a concern that controls on commercial and industrial development are excluded during the master plan process. Supervisor Kenneth J. Ringler and Burns agreed to meet with members of the planning department to discuss drafting a proposal limiting commercial and industrial growth.

The Interim Development Limitations Act was drafted in June by then-Planning Board Chairman Ringler along with the Interim Development Density Act, which was approved by the town board in November and increased minimum lot size requirements. Both laws are designed to alleviate pressure on the planning board from developers while the Land Use Management Advisory Committee drafts a master plan.

At a Jan. 24 public hearing on the Interim Development Limitations Act, some citizens said the law did not go far enough to protect against development. One resident suggested a full moratorium on all building permits while another suggested the inclusion of commercial and industrial development.

But a lawyer for several developers said the moratorium should be relaxed to allow a minimum of 30 lots per development.

The moratorium puts a 25-lot limit on planning board approval of residential lots or dwelling units through the subdivision or site plan review. In addition to industrial and commercial development, the Route 9W Corridor, Planned Residential Districts and senior housing projects are exempt from the moratorium.

In other business, the board agreed to the concept of the Krumkill Area generic environmental impact study as proposed by Albany County, although it made no firm commitment to the study, which has already received financial commitments from the towns of New Scotland and Guilderland.

Albany County Engineer Paul Cooney made a presentation to the board on the history of the study and the area it would cover. He also explained some of the traffic problems which will affect the three towns if the Krumkill area is developed.

Ringler said he would like more information on cost sharing. The study is expected to cost $200,000 and will determine the cumulative impact of development in the Krumkill Road area. As currently proposed, the three towns and the county will pay $50,000 apiece for the study. Those costs would be reimbursed from developers through mitigation fees.

Park use fees are increased

The Bethlehem Town Board last week adopted new usage fees for the Elm Avenue Park pool.

Daily pool rates will increase by 25 cents to $1.50 for adults (ages 14 to 64) and $1 for children (ages 7 to 13). Fees for non-resident guests are double the resident rate.

Family pass rates increased by $10 to $70; husband and wife season passes increased by $10 to $60. Both the individual adult pass and the individual child pass increased $5 to $35 and $25 respectively.

In other business, the board authorized the town supervisor to sign a "hold harmless" agreement that would allow town employees to begin site work at the new South Bethlehem Park prior to the closing between the landowner and the town. Also:

- William Cook of Bethlehem was appointed probationary police officer at a salary of $22,891 effective March 4. Cook has a bachelor's degree in criminal justice from the University of New Haven. He currently is employed by the Albany County Sheriff's Department.

- The board accepted the resignation of Isabel Glastetter as part-time telecommunicator, effective Feb. 15. Police Chief Paul Currie said 23 applicants have applied for the job.

- The board also accepted the resignation of Sheila Fuller as director of Youth Employment Service, effective Feb. 15. Fuller serves as president of the Bethlehem Central Board of Education.

- The board agreed to lower the speed limit on Elm Avenue between Peel Street and Jericho Road to 35 mph. The change is based upon a request from local residents and a recommendation from the Bethlehem Traffic Safety Committee.

- Guilderland Printing was awarded an annual bid to print the Bethlehem Report for $5,067 in 1990.

The next regular town board will be Feb. 28 at 7:30 p.m.

New Salem subdivision wins town plat approval

By Bob Hagyard

Despite protests from the Town of Bethlehem and hamlet residents, New Scotland Planning Board members last week gave final plat plan approval to Mountainview Estates, a seven-lot subdivision near New Salem.

Approval was granted on 10 conditions:

- All sheds and trailers on the 57-acre site, the former Countryman dairy farm, must go, although one barn may stay up.

- A 12-foot right-of-way on the southern edge of the property may not be used by construction equipment entering and leaving the site.

- J.J. Cramer, the developer, must pay $200 per lot in park fees to the town.

- Protective covenants must be written into lot deeds to safeguard easements.

- Inspections by the town building department may be back-charged to the developer.

- Erosion control measures must be undertaken during construction as required by the building department.

- Water well and sewage disposal plan approval must be obtained from the county health department.

- Because of local traffic considerations, the developer may not operate his construction business from the Mountainview site. J.J. Cramer's contracting operation currently operates from locations in Colonie and Ravena.

- No building permits may be issued until state Department of Transportation signs are installed warning Rt. 85 motorists of the Mountainview Estates entrance.

- A copy of a letter by Bruce Secor, Town of Bethlehem commissioner of public works, must be forwarded to the county health department.

Secor's letter, addressed to planning Chairman Robert Hampston, warned of possible dire consequences to the Bethlehem water wells between the Mountainview site and Rt. 85. Hampston read the letter into the hearing record. The three wells, drilled in 1941, serve as the backup to the Vly Creek Reservoir, Bethlehem's principal water supply.

Bethlehem needs the wells in times of drought, such as 1978-79, when the town was sued by several New Salem residents for allegedly drawing down the local water table and depleting the residents' wells, Secor wrote.

Further, the letter stated, Robert Kerker, the driller for the developer reported drilled three dry holes on the Mountainview property.

Bethlehem owns land within a 100-foot radius of its wells, the planners were told by developer representative Robert Stapf. He added that the Mountainview plan respects a 200-foot cone of influence around the town wells, and that in any case, surface water from the site drains away from the town property.

Noting that Secor is a licensed professional engineer, board member Raymond Loucks expressed "concerned about any legal entanglement with Bethlehem over water in the area."

But Samuel Stein of the board appeared less impressed by the commissioner's letter. "I haven't seen anything in this that would lead us to deny approval," he said. And board counsel John Bailey summed up the prevailing view at the board table: "We've just been notified that the water supply of 26,000 people may be in jeopardy, which is laughable."

Secor was notified of the proposal 13 months ago, said board member William Childs, who then wondered why Secor waited until last week to question the final plans.

Secor was not present to respond.

Local residents who voiced water and traffic concerns to the board included Denise Stark, Diane and Dennis Mullen, Margaret and David Atkins, and Donald Miller.

The Rt. 85 entrance lies about 200 feet east of New Salem Reformed Church. Between the two is the crest of a hill that limits sight distance to 225 feet, according to a state DOT engineer quoted by chairman Hampston. The current speed limit, 40 mph, is normally disregarded, said hamlet residents.

Clarksville water to flow soon

By Bob Hagyard

Clarksville residents are eagerly awaiting two minor but important details to be ironed out before the water can be turned on.

This week and next, Town of New Scotland highway crews will install pressure reducing valves in the downhill (east) portion of the hamlet — that is, about 80 percent of the homes to be served. The system will be turned on by this time next month, said Highway Superintendent Michael Hotaling.

Water meters will come later, so residents will draw a few weeks' worth of free water, said Supervisor Herbert Reilly. The reason: Up to now, the town has used different brands of water meters in each of the three water districts now in service. Last Feb. 7, the town decided to standardize on one brand — Emerick Controls — beginning with the completion of the Clarksville district waterworks. The meters are now on order.

Water pressure at homes near the Clarksville water tank on Stove Pipe Road has been measured at 20 pounds per square inch, at 120 psi — beyond fire hose level — at the east end of the district.

Recycling contract awarded

By Bob Hagyard

Metals Unlimited, a small, private recycling firm whose work has earned letters of commendation from state environmental officials, has been awarded a contract to handle "white goods" for the Town of New Scotland.

The firm will soon set up a crusher at the town's transfer station on Upper Flat Rock Road to handle bulky metal items, such as refrigerators, washers and dryers, and junked automobiles. Under the contract, the town would pay the firm $10 to $15 per ton if the town generates at least the equivalent of 100 cars worth of metal trash. If the firm receives less than that amount, the per-ton handling fee would rise accordingly.

Until now, handling white goods was the responsibility of the town highway department. Highway Superintendent Michael Hotaling spoke in favor of the deal with Metals Unlimited at last week's town board meeting: "It's far less expensive."

Board approval was unanimous.

The crushed metal, said spokesperson Cynthia Munoz, would be shipped to Montreal, then loaded on ships headed for Korea.

"And come back as Hyundais," the supervisor joked.

"That's where the market for used metal is," said Munoz.

Several weeks ago, the town received state Department of Environmental Conservation approval to store white metal at the transfer station for bailing.

The board also:

- Formally requested that EnConserve as lead review agency for Niagara Mohawk Power Corp.'s request to construct a transmission line from the transformer station on New Scotland South Road. The New Scotland portion of the line would run about 2,000 feet southeast to the Bethlehem town boundary.

- Scheduled a March 5 special meeting to audit the town's 1989 accounts, review the 1988 audit, set up a procedure to prevent duplicate payment of bills, and perhaps set rates for the Clarksville Water District.

- Set Dec. 31, 1991, as the last day of the term of the town marriage officer. The position is held under protest by Edita Probst, whose current term as town clerk expires on the same day.

- Approved four amendments to the town zoning ordinance. One eliminated the requirement that a planning board member also serve on the zoning board of appeals.

Another permitted the town building inspector to write appearance tickets citing violators and a third revised the fee schedule for engineering reviews and permit applications. A fourth changed the maximum height to 35 feet for accessory buildings on lots with three or more acres. The amendments were discussed at brief public hearings earlier that evening.

- Agreed, 4-0, to cooperate with the county on installation of the proposed Onesquethaw Creek Road bridge. The county, which has jurisdiction over bridges, would build the bridge, and the town would redesign the approaches after consulting with local residents. Councilman John Sgarlata abstained.

- Agreed to contribute $2,453 in town funds to assist the Bethlehem Central school summer recreation program at the Clarksville Elementary School. The contribution was recommended by the town's recreation commission last month.

- Approved purchase by the historical commission of a bronze marker for the Bender melon farm site off Rt. 85 near Town Hall, and appointed Marsha Baker to a seat on the commission.

- Learned that Martha Slingerland, the newly appointed registrar of vital statistics, has appointed Marilyn Holmberg deputy registrar. Holmberg also serves as receiver of taxes.

- Learned that Bethlehem will charge New Scotland $2.19 per 1,000 gallons for water furnished to the Swift Road, Helderale and Feura Bush water districts during 1990, a 9-cent rate increase from 1989.

- Learned that the state Department of Transportation has approved a 45 mph speed limit for New Scotland South Road. The secondary road, a county highway, has no set limit — that is, the 55 mph limit applies.

For incumbents only?

Four incumbents may be the only candidates listed on the Village of Voorheesville election ballot at next month's annual election.

As this issue went to press, one candidate petition — for the Village Party slate — had been returned to Village Hall. The slate lists five-year Mayor Ed Clark, eight-year trustee Dan Reh, six-year trustee Susan Rockmore and Village Justice Kenneth Connolly. All will seek four-year terms.

Under state law, the petition deadline this year was 5 p.m. Tuesday (yesterday).

Polls on March 20 will open at noon and close at 9 p.m. at the fire house on Altamont Road.

VCS raises senior exemption schedule

Senior citizens who own homes in the Voorheesville Central School District must file before March 1 to qualify for partial tax exemptions.

Eligibility limits were recently raised for more than 65 homeowners who live in the three-town area covered by the district lines. The minimum income level for persons seeking a 50 percent abatement was raised from $10,500 to $12,025 while those seeking a 20 percent abatement must have incomes between $15,026 and $15,625 (the previous limits: $13,001 to $13,500). Senior homeowners with income levels in between can qualify for exemption levels on a sliding scale.

To qualify, senior homeowners must file with their town assessor, not with the school system. Town of New Scotland homeowners in the district can contact their assessor's office at 765-3355; Town of Guilderland homeowners, at 356-1980; Town of Berne homeowners, at 872-1448.

Bus proposition would add six vehicles to V'ville fleet

By Bob Hagyard

Two weeks from today, March 7, Voorheesville Central School District residents will consider two school bus propositions at a special referendum.

Proposition 1 would permit the purchase of four 60-passenger buses and two 20-passenger vans before the end of the current school year. By purchasing them now, district officials say, Voorheesville would collect $91,260 in state transportation aid next school year and $93,600 the year after that, paying off 78 percent of the $230,000 bond issue the district would float.

Passage of Proposition 2 would qualify VCS for $25,000 in state aid for the June 1989 emergency purchase of a bus, an action justified at the time as necessary to the safety and welfare of district children after state inspectors yanked one bus off the road.

Four full-size buses are needed now to replace four vehicles in the current fleet and bring several contract routes in-house, say district officials.

The full-size buses to be replaced, Nos. 46, 47, 49 and 50, were purchased between 1979 and 1981. Odometer readings range between 94,113 and 107,833 miles. All are in poor condition, according to Anthony Cashara, assistant superintendent for business.

For more than a decade, contract carriers have fulfilled some of the district's more difficult transportation obligations, those to private-school children and to BOCES/handicapped pupils. At its Feb. 5 school board meeting, board member James Coffin cited "irresponsible private carriers" as the reason for including the two suburban vans in the proposition.

Coffin did not elaborate. Superintendent Dr. Alan McCartney confirmed that the central office did have "problems with one carrier," but would not elaborate on that, either.

Polls on March 7 will open at 2 and close at 9:30 p.m. at the high school.

How BC won its 18th straight swim title

By Nat Boynton

In the record books it goes in as the 19th BC sectional swim title in 20 years, the last 18 in a row.

What the books don't tell you is how it happened and why this 1990 crown, achieved by the narrowest of margins (90-88) was the most meaningful and most glorious in all that long string over two decades.

Year after year Bethlehem teams devastated the sectional meet like a cleaning crew sweeping up everything, leaving only the wallpaper and the light bulbs. But this year it was to be Troy's turn. Despite BC's narrow edge when the two unbeaten powers collided head-on two weeks ago, the Eagles were an underdog. A dual meet is one thing. It's quite another when there is quality interference from 10 other Class A teams.

At RPI last weekend chessboard moves by the two rival coaches became even more significant, Troy's gracious Jack Fitzpatrick with three dominant power swimmers and a good supporting cast, BC's Ken Neff with only one surefire winner and a bevy of smooth-cheeked youngsters who have been growing up in a hurry.

As Saturday's showdown unfolded, the tension grew tighter with each event as the Eagles clung to a nervous lead over the Trojans, far in front of everybody else. With two events to go it was 75-61 BC, but Troy had superstar Sean Maxwell on the blocks for the breaststroke (9 sure points) and an unbeatable free relay foursome in the wings (18 points). The outlook for BC was bleak — their top racer (Pat Fish) was through for the day, their best breaststroker (Jan Salsberg) was seeded fifth (4 points), and having used their frontliners to win the medley relay, they could expect a sixth (6 points) or fifth at most (8) in the free relay.

It didn't take a math whiz to compute $61+27=88$ for Troy, leaving BC needing 13 to tie, 14 to win. Salsberg had to get at least a third place (6), and the inexperienced relay quartet had to make fifth or better. A big order.

Maxwell, a triple winner that afternoon, won the breast in a breeze. Salsberg, a sophomore swimming the race of his young life, trimmed 2 full seconds off his qualifying time and finished a surprising second in 1:04.99, depriving Tom Bendl of Niskayuna and Scott Bowden of Guilderville of expected placings.

And when Jeremy Goldman, Jim Davis, Josh Pierce and Dave Cleary solidified the vital fifth place in the day's climactic race, the Eagles had saved another by the thinnest of margins — 2 points. Cleary, a sophomore winding up the most productive day of his embryonic career, swam the anchor as if the sheriff was chasing him in a power boat. His split was clocked unofficially in 50.1.

Salsberg's feat was the last of several unkind blows dealt to Fitzpatrick, who three times has come so close to dethroning BC but now has seen another frustrating year evaporate. "Salsberg in the breast had a great swim, seeded fifth and finishing second," he said.

For his part Salsberg, who had one of his best splits in Bethlehem's winning medley relay, said his top thrill was "the surprises we pulled." He deferred the bouquets to "swimmers like Fish and Cleary, and our divers."

For the second time in two weeks Andy Sattinger and Joe Schneider caused severe devastation to Troy's hopes. It wasn't a 1-2 punch like the dual meet, but it caused just as much havoc.

Sattinger, the senior who will close a brilliant scholastic career at the state meet next month, was in fourth place with three dives remaining. He moved into third place before his final dive, then finished second (to defending champion Joe Lyons of Albany High) with a magnificent score on a difficult launch. And freshman Joe Schneider, figured for eighth place, vaulted into fifth, displacing two Troy divers.

By that juncture the suspicion was growing that adrenalin was flowing in Bethlehem's young team, given only an outside chance to derail Troy and Shaker. They had pulled off a surprise theft of the opening relay for 18 quick points. They had yielded only one point to Troy when Cleary got an unexpected third place in the 200 free behind Shaker ace Dan Houlihan and Troy's talented Darren Murray. When Josh Pierce unexpectedly nudged Troy's Dan Schultz out of eighth place in Friday's qualifying heats, BC had put an unprecedented three swimmers in the IM finals.

The importance of the two relays was obvious when the form charts based on Friday's preliminaries showed BC could expect to be up by only 3 points overall in the individual events. Given Troy's strength in the relays, BC would come up short.

Neff, apparently willing to concede the opening relay to Troy, made his major move when he saw Fitzpatrick loading heavy ammunition into the free relay. Neff then switched his best guns to go for the win in the medley, where BC second-stringers had been seeded fifth behind top-seeded Burnt Hills. That meant breaking up his regular 4x100 quartet.

"We knew we could win either relay, so it was a question as to which to go for," Fitzpatrick explained later. "We figured Shen and Burnt Hills had a good chance to beat BC in the medley, but when we showed our hand, it didn't turn out that way."

Neff kept Salsberg in the breast split, but went with his best backstroker (Craig Mattox), his ace 'flyer (Fish) and his senior captain, Drew Patrick. They won going away in 1:44.52, three full seconds ahead of Burnt Hills. Troy was sixth, but moved up to fifth when judges disqualified Shenendehowa for a one-handed touch in the breaststroke split.

In quick order, Cleary's 200 and a 2-7-8 by Fish, Pierce and Mattox in the IM gave BC good position — temporarily. Maxwell predictably rewrote his own sectional record in the IM. Fish, who had lost to a 2:05 by New Hartford two weeks earlier, turned on his afterburners and qualified for the state meet with a sparkling 2:03.56. Pierce's presence not only added bonus points for BC, but kept Schultz out of the swim.

Fish had a sterling afternoon. After his winning relay and vital place IM, he won the fly in 53.44. He will swim all three in the state meet.

There were other BC heroes who rose to new and unexpected heights. Patrick climbed from eighth to fifth in the 50 and from sixth to fifth in the 100 free. Cleary preserved his second place in the 500 in full knowledge he would have to anchor the critical free relay 20 minutes hence.

Such things represent only a few small points in the overall scoring, but in a dogfight this close, their impact can determine whether the Class A trophy goes to a Delaware Avenue address or one on Burdette Avenue.

In the aftermath Neff maintained his policy of not being available to reporters, but Fitzpatrick, in the torment of his Peace group invites coalition to USSR

Unlicensed driver caught after chase

A 26-year-old Rensselaer man was arrested at a farmhouse for aggravated unlicensed operation of a motor vehicle after fleeing police the night of Feb. 12.

Bethlehem police attempted to stop the car, heading west on Feura Bush Road, when it failed to dim its lights for an oncoming police cruiser near the intersection of West Bayberry Road. When the cruiser turned on its flashers, the vehicle turned into the farm across from the Brightonwood Road intersection and the driver was seen to leave the car and run across the west side of the residence and out of sight. Two passengers in the car attempted to flee as well but were stopped by police.

When K-9 units from Bethlehem and Albany police arrived, the driver surrendered, according to police.

The driver later told police he fled the car because he was on parole for an undisclosed offense and because his driver's license had been revoked in 1985. Released on $100 cash bail, he was scheduled to reappear in Town Court tonight (Wednesday).

The driver refused to submit to a chemical test, police said.

most heart-rending defeat, was typically generous with praise for the foe. "Neff's kids came through for him, no question," he said Sunday. "His divers finished higher than I thought they would. I knew what Fish could do, but Salsberg and Cleary hurt us, and Schultz got touched out of the IM (by 2/10ths of a second)."

Fitzpatrick loses several key seniors, notably Maxwell and David LaBlanc, but expects to have more depth and balance next season. Despite BC losing only two front-liners (Patrick and Sattinger) from this year's surprising squad, Fitzpatrick sees a more balanced league ahead, with Shaker, Burnt Hills, Guilderville and Shenendehowa all expected to be stronger.

A few footnotes: Sectional winners go automatically to the state meet in Syracuse March 9-10, guaranteeing a trip for BC's Fish, Mattox, Sattinger and Patrick in the medley relay. Sattinger qualified on points in diving, and Cleary's 2:03 in the 200 free earned him a ticket.

A beautifully crafted Burnt Hills banner, the painstaking needlework of a swimmer's grandmother, disappeared from poolside Friday night. RPI authorities said a group from the college used the pool the evening between Friday's preliminaries and Saturday's finals. Other school banners that were taken down overnight were returned the next morning.

None of the area's three daily newspapers covered the finals, although the Troy Record and Albany Times-Union sent photographers from the wrestling sectionals at the field house. The only reporters present were Mary Frawley of The Colonie Spotlight (for Shaker) and this typist (for BC).

G-V a 'respectable' 4th at RPI

By Josh Vink

The Guilderville Boys Swim Team went to RPI last Friday and Saturday with one goal — swim hard. And swim hard is exactly what they did.

They finished a very respectable fourth place out of nine schools, one place behind Shaker, which had 51, and behind Bethlehem at 90 and Troy at 88. They beat Shenendehowa by 1 and Burnt Hills by 12.

Individually, Guilderville did not have a champion, but had five people in the finals, swimming in seven different events. In these events they had 2 second places, one third place, five fourth places and one fifth place.

Scott Bowden was the first Guilderville placer. He made it to the finals in the 200 IM (Individual Medley) and placed fourth behind Tom Beadnell, Pat Fish (Bethlehem) and champion Sean Maxwell from Troy. Scott's time was 2:09.00. Scott also swam in the 100 breaststroke. He was seeded third and made it to the finals. There he took fourth in 1:05.17. The champion in the 100 breast was again Maxwell.

Freshman Stephen Czisa swam two events also, the 200 IM and the 100 fly. He did not reach the finals on either attempt, but swam personal bests and still has three years left.

Sophomore David Washburn was the closest individual swimmer to a championship, reaching the finals in the 100 backstroke and placing second with a time of 58.37. Dave also swam the 100 butterfly and reached the finals, placing third.

Another freshman, Seth "Snake" Rose, swam the 200 free and the 500 free during the course of the two days and did well. Despite not making the finals in the 200 free he swam his best time and did place fourth in the 500 free with a time of 5:22.61.

Junior Joe Tyrell picked up two places in his events, the 50 free and 100 free. In the 50 he made it to the finals and won a fifth place with a time of :23.47. In the 100 free, Joe swam hard to take a fourth place in the finals in :50.70.

The last individual swimmer was Brian Brown; despite not placing in both the 50 free and the 100 free, he did swim personal bests and will be around for three more years.

In the team relay, the 400 free relay, the team of Tyrell, Bowden, Washburn and Rose made it to the finals and placed a very good second with a time of 3:26.80.

Guilderville finished the season at 7-7-1.

Birds face Cobleskill in Sectional first round

By Dennis Sullivan

After a grueling 19-game schedule that began Thanksgiving weekend, Voorheesville has finished its boys' hoop season with a 9-7 record in the Colonial Council (10-9 overall) situating them fourth in the league standings.

That is essentially where Blackbird coach Skip Carrk had placed his young team in a pre-season interview. And hardly a shameful finish, considering that six of those games were played against the strong squads of Watervliet, Schalmont and Academy. At least the Birds were able to come away with a split with Academy.

Tonight at 7:30 at the State University at Cobleskill, the Birds will face Cobleskill High School in the Class CC first round. Cobleskill also finished with a .500-plus season (7-6 record in the Tri-Valley league, won by undefeated Broadalbin-Perth) making them a suitable match for the Birds.

But tonight will not be the first time these two teams will have seen each other as Voorheesville lost to Cobleskill, 67-48, at home on Dec. 21.

For some fans, that 19-point spread might seem a portent of things to come. But any such judgment would rest on shaky foundations.

Indeed, Cobleskill took a 16-4 lead over the Birds in the first quarter of that contest and they are a strong team. But halfway through that quarter, Todd Rockmore left the game with a sprained ankle. Then in the third quarter the Birds lost senior co-captain Mike Haaf for the game.

Moreover, the Birds were bothered by the least of presses at that point. They had less than an iota of cohesiveness holding them together and their play was still very scattered and uneven.

Such is not the case today. The Birds can move through the toughest of presses at will, as they demonstrated against Watervliet last week. They've also developed a sense of cohesiveness as the

Voorheesville reserve Erin Sullivan drives to basket versus Waterford. Dennis Sullivan

Strong finish for BC basketball

Wins 4 of last 6 for 7-12 record

By Michael Kagan

The Bethlehem Central boys basketball team is 3-1 since Mr. Genesee (A.K.A. Alex Hackman) made his first appearance Feb. 7 before the game at Shaker High School.

Regardless of the significance of one of the team's starting players unofficially changing his name and wearing an old beer company hat in the locker room, Mr. Genesee and the rest of the finally flying Eagles won two more games last week to close out the regular season with a 5-5 gold division record (7-12 overall), giving them one more win than they had during the 1988-89 season. They blew out Mohonasen at home Tuesday, 77-55, and then outlasted a tough Burnt Hills team on the road, 69-68.

And with Sectionals starting this week, it was a good time for the Eagles to break out of their mid-season slump. Yesterday (Tuesday), BC traveled to Albany for its first Sectional game. Coach Jack Moser said he was "cautiously optimistic" going into the first round.

Mohonasen, which previously had beaten BC, 61-60, after taking a 14 point lead in the first quarter, again won the opening period, but this time by only three. They could very easily have been losing after the quarter, since the Eagles hit only one of eight two point attempts.

In the second quarter, Bethlehem seemed to get its collective shot back and put together an 11-1 run. BC finally went on top to stay with 7:06 remaining in the period as Sean McDermott sank two foul shots. The Eagles never looked back, as they came out in the third quarter and had a 21-10 party, including an 18-4 run. They won the second half, 43-27.

Scott Hodge's play has taken some of the pressure off high-scoring teammate Sean McDermott, according to Bethlehem coach Jack Moser. Bob Hagyard

Scott Hodge led the way with 20 points, while Hackman added 14 points and five rebounds. McDermott followed with 13 points, 10 rebounds and five assists. John Hansen put in 12 points and pulled down eight rebounds. Scott Fish, who had seven rebounds and two assists, Steve Calhoun and Kevin Keparutis all had four points, while Craig Christian, Chris Black and Ira Rotenberg all had two points in limited service. Eric McCaughin grabbed 10 rebounds.

The Burnt Hills game was certainly more thrilling. The Eagles, who had been humiliated by the Spartans in Bethlehem, 71-46, the last time they played, were able to stay with Burnt Hills the whole way. Burnt Hills squeezed out a two-point lead at the end of the first quarter, but Bethlehem tied it at 38 at the half. The Eagles were again able to win the third quarter by one point, which turned out to be the difference in the game. In fact, the game was so close the whole way that the lead changed 16 times, including eight times in the fourth quarter, when Burnt Hills missed the potential winning shot at the buzzer.

Against the Spartans, Hodge again led the team, this time with 24 points. McDermott followed with 18 points, 13 rebounds, including seven in the second half, and five assists. Hansen again reached double figures with ten points and also had five rebounds, while his "Beef Brother" Keparutis pulled down seven rebounds in the first half (10 over the whole game) and put in four points. Scott Fish had six points and Eric McCaughin had five points and nine rebounds in limited playing time. Hackman had two points and two assists. It was the first time BC has won when fewer than four players reached double figures.

"I think we really started to play well," Coach Moser said. "We're gaining confidence every game. Our man-to-man defense is starting to come around. Scotty Hodge has played outstanding and that has taken a lot of pressure off Sean (McDermott). John Hansen is playing great. McDermott I thought had his best all-round game (against Burnt Hills)... He's very unselfish. We're just playing much better as a team."

Hodge agreed that "right now the guys are so confident that when we go out we know can always win." Hansen added, "We're really playing excellent. We're passing the ball and getting open shots and hitting them. Scott Hodge is playing real well."

All of the team's last three wins have been against teams that beat them, previously, sometimes badly. Hodge and Hansen both said that if Bethlehem got the chance to play many of the other teams that beat them again, the outcomes would be much different.

"We were really down then," Hodge explained. "If we were playing the way we are now, I think we could have beaten a lot of those teams." Hansen continued: "If you just look at our past score against Burnt Hills, we lost by 25, and against Shaker (who beat them 93-60 and then lost to them two weeks ago, 77-75) too — just that says a lot about the way we've been playing."

The fact that the Eagles are finally on a roll, winning four of their last six games and playing extremely well in all of their last four is especially amazing since this was started while coming off a seven game losing streak. "It's a credit to the team," said Moser. "We were really floundering for a while. . . but they (the players) stayed with each other. There was no bickering, and no complaining. They just worked real hard in practice. . . They worked their way out of the slump."

Moser was hoping to avoid a repeat of last year's Sectionals. "We got a good draw in the seedings," he said. "We played in Albany High last year in the Sectionals." Last year the Eagles lost to Albany, which went on to play Shenendehowa in the finals.

Moser said Albany is "an up and down team. They're very small, I think their biggest guy is six two. They're quick and scrappy. . . If they're shooting well, they're tough to beat. If they're shooting off, they're an average team." Hodge said, "I think we can beat Albany. We're a lot bigger than they are inside. We've got to contain their quick guards. We need to keep the ball in our hands."

If the Eagles get past Albany, they will travel on Friday to Troy High to play the winner of Amsterdam and Columbia. Columbia is one of the teams that beat BC during the mid-season losing streak. If they win again on Friday, they will go to the Glens Falls Civic Center next Tuesday for the semi-finals.

Lady Eagles to host 'A' sectional opener

By Shannon Perkins

The Bethlehem girls basketball team started the week off on the right foot with a 48-38 win against Mohonasen.

Anita Kaplan, the team's star center, scored 41 of her team's 48 points. Kassie Jeram added another 5, with the team's only sophomore, Lyn Doody, scoring the final two points. Despite their slow start, Coach Bill Warner was pleased with the team's performance. He was especially pleased with the defense's strong effort.

On Friday, the girls played their last home game of the season, excluding Sectionals. Kaplan led the scoring effort, with 43 points and 25 rebounds. Chrystal Fournier had nine points, with Kelly Ryan contributing another six. Kassie Jeram and Lyn Doody added two points apiece to make the score 62-31. Burnt Hills had a strong defense, but the Lady Eagles were able to overcome their opponent with strong offensive tactics.

The girls are excited about their first sectional game on Friday at home. Their record in the Suburban Council stands at 14-1, while their overall record is 14-6. They are optimistic about their chances at the title. Although Bethlehem is one of the better teams in the section, this area is very strong in girls basketball. The Lady Eagles remain confident, practicing during the winter break. Game time Friday is 7:30 p.m.

Student killed in New Salem crash

A 21-year-old Siena College student died Sunday afternoon after the pickup truck she was driving skidded on the ice on Rt. 85 in New Salem.

Jeannette C. Jancola of English-town, N.J., was rushed by Voorheesville ambulance to Albany Medical Center Hospital, where she was pronounced dead at 4:46 p.m.

At the scene, Albany County Sheriff's Deputy Charles Rudolph and Sgt. Thomas Russo freed Jancola from the wreckage, assisted by Delmar paramedics and members of the New Salem and Slingerlands fire departments.

Tow truck driver nabbed for DWI, drugs

A self-employed Delmar tow truck operator was arrested early last Wednesday morning on drunk driving and cocaine possession charges.

According to Bethlehem police, Jack J. Frazier, 38, of 8 McMillen Place was driving his tow truck south on Russell Road when the vehicle flipped over at the corner of Monroe Avenue. The driver was administered field sobriety and pre-screening device tests, which he allegedly failed. He was then searched and 20 grams of cocaine was found in a plastic bag in a cigarette case found in a jacket pocket.

He subsequently consented to a blood test at Albany Medical Center Hospital, police said.

Frazier was arraigned for misdemeanor driving while intoxicated, driving while ability impaired by drugs, and criminal possession of a controlled substance, seventh degree, and issued tickets returnable March 6 in Bethlehem Town Court.

Birds at Cobleskill

season progressed such that they now play like a team. Hence a contest might be in store tonight.

Todd Rockmore will be out again, this time with the broken ankle he suffered at Lansingburgh. However, sophomore Erin Sullivan has come off the bench in Rockmore's stead and provided the Birds with a new kind of energy and cohesiveness.

Senior Kevin Jarvis has been hot inside and out having led his team with 37, 18 and 17 points in the last three outings.

Point guard Rich Adams is a stronger, more certain player than in December and Eric Logan, who shares that spot, has been deadly with three-pointers.

Sophomore Steven Lapinski has gained confidence as was evident in the Birds 56-47 win over Waterford last Friday in their final regular-season game. Lapinski scored 14 points and made for himself all the room he needed to maneuver to the basket.

Mike Haaf has also become an offensive threat, as was evident against Ravena the second time around when Haaf scored a season-high 19 points. Bill Stone and Jeff Freyer have also exhibited renewed confidence, each player now able to reel off 10 points in a given night.

But Cobleskill has made progress as well and still remains strong. Unless Jarvis, Lapinski, Sullivan and Haaf can combine for at least 62 points tonight, the Birds will have a hard time staying in contention. Adams/Logan in the back court and Stone/Freyer/Gianatasio underneath will have to add another solid 20 points to make victory a reality.

Such a victory will enable the Birds to meet Spa Catholic at Burnt Hills on Friday at 7 pm. Otherwise, Cobleskill.

If the current sophomore and junior classes are expected to provide some rays of hope for future Blackbird teams, what's to be said of the Blackbird freshmen, who have accumulated a 17-3 record this season under coach Bill Logan? With a final-game win against Waterford last Tuesday, the frosh Birds clinched the Colonial Council title outright.

Gregg Sullivan and Kevin Meade have been a large part of the freshmen team's success this year, averaging 15 and 13 points. Kevin Relyea has also been a welcome addition to the team, offering strong efforts on the boards.

"This year has far exceeded everyone's expectations," said coach Logan.

VC sends 6 to state qualifiers

By Kevin Taylor

The Voorheesville wrestling team was represented by six wrestlers at the State Qualifying Meet at RPI last Saturday. The best talent in Section II was there to show their stuff, but for the Blackbirds only the heavyweights could make a showing.

For the Blackbirds, Darren Ascone went at 91, replacing Martin Hotaling, Eric Dommermuth went at 98, Timmy Reeth at 145, Paul Novak at 177, Chad Hotaling at 215, and Dave Bartholomew at 250. Chris Dommermuth was supposed to go for the 'Birds at 167 but was ill on Saturday.

Ascone drew the third seed at 91, but was promptly eliminated from the tournament by Bill Schrempf of South Glens Falls, who pinned him early in the second period. At 98, Dommermuth got a little bit of sweet revenge when he beat Nick Rose of Mechanicville, 13-2. Rose has beaten Dommermuth by pin in a match earlier in the season. Dommermuth then was opposed by Larry Fontain, from Queensbury, and was pinned after putting up a strong fight. Fontain went on to be the champion at the 98 pound weight class.

Tim Reeth was the second seed at 145, and was coming off a strong performance in the Class C Tournament last week and was hoping to keep the wins rolling. However, Reeth lost a heart-breaker to Ryan Johnson of Ballston Spa, 3-2.

The day was already going pretty badly for the Blackbirds and it seemed that it couldn't get any worse. But in the 177 class, Paul Novak, a senior wrestling in his last tournament, went up against Paul Benaquista from Mohonasen. Late in the third period, Benaquista was awarded two points on a controversial call and won the match, 4-3, as a majority of the fans at RPI booed loudly.

The lone Blackbird hero was 215 pound Chad Hotaling. Hotaling drew fourth seed and came out smoking. He quickly reached the semi-finals with early pins of Bill Harrington of Cambridge (1:15) and Gabe Orenge of Amsterdam (2:31). Hotaling seemed in good shape as he had effectively conserved energy in those matches.

In the semi-finals, Hotaling wrestled against Jamie Huntington of Whitehall. He fought evenly with Huntington, the first seed, for about two periods, but early in the third, Hotaling seemed to tire and Huntington took control of the match, pinning him late in the third period. Hotaling was awarded third place by forfeit when his opponent, Jesse Bruchac of Saratoga, was unable to wrestle due to an injury he sustained in his last match.

Dave Bartholomew turned a few heads with his impressive performance at 250. Bartholomew, who was only 3-9 the whole season against lesser competition, turned it up a notch in the tournament. He felled Gus Breault from Whitehall at 2:33, and then went up against Bill Tooley, the first seed from Scotia. Bartholomew got an early takedown which seemed to shock Tooley, who eventually recovered to pin Bartholomew midway through the second period. Tooley went on to be the 250 pound champion.

The wrestling banquet for the Blackbirds will be at the Tom Sawyer Motor Inn on March 27. For more information, or to make a reservation, contact Barbara Vink.

Matthew Boynton (left) and Chris Peckham discovered $37.75 in coins stashed in a money bag left in a wooded ravine off Delaware Avenue east of the Delaware and Hudson Railway overpass. They turned in their find to Bethlehem police last week, who kept the bag as the starting point of an investigation, then returned the coins to the youngsters Saturday. With them is Sgt. James Kerr, who said: "It's a safe bet the money is the proceeds of some illegal transaction."

Two arrested for burglarizing cars

Bethlehem police arrested two men for rifling through several parked vehicles along Harrison Avenue early Saturday morning.

The men, ages 21 and 20, were to reappear in Town Court Wednesday (tonight) after arraignment on two charges of petty larceny, three counts of attempted petty larceny and criminal possession of stolen property, fifth degree, all misdemeanors.

From one pickup truck the pair took a power booster, a flashlight, tools and a pair of sneakers, according to police. The two were also observed rifling through three other vehicles, police also said, although nothing was reportedly taken.

The arrest was made shortly after 5 a.m.

How to avoid junk mail (and save the environment)

By Sal Prividera Jr.

Tired of all those free trips, fabulous prizes, pre-approved credit deals, checks that aren't checks you can apply to buy something that ends up costing a bundle? Feeling guilty about deep sixing the seemingly endless pile envelopes and flyers that arrive at your door unsolicited? Feeling even more guilty about sending all this to your already overburdened and probably soon-to-close landfill?

Don't despair. If you are a real person with a real name and not just an occupant, resident, or current resident, you can get rid of the problem without even joining a support group.

F. Joseph Stockbridge, Colonie's environmental services director, has sent information to town homeowners associations about getting rid of "junk mail" to reduce the solid waste stream. He's hoping the homeowners' groups will pass along the info to members, which could help slow the deluge of unwanted paper.

To remove your name from all future mailing lists, which are sold by clearinghouses to multiple companies, simply write to Mail Preference Service C/O Direct Marketing Association, 11 West 42nd St. P.O. Box 3861, New York City 10163-3861.

But, Stockbridge cautioned, make sure to list everyone in the household separately. If you're married, be sure your spouse's first name is on the request.

Stockbridge said to get off existing mailing lists, the request has to be made directly to the company issuing the mailing.

But the U.S. Postal Service apparently has a different perspective on the matter. To the P.O. there is no "junk" mail, only bulk rate mailings, which are important to keep the service in financial good health, according to Latham Postmaster Jim Klahr.

Norman George is the master of horror Edgar Allen Poe in Poe Alone, this week at Siena College in Loudonville.

Poe alive at Siena

He stands at the podium, a haunting figure in black, about to deliver what will be his last lecture to the lyceum. He is Edgar Allen Poe, the master storyteller whose works still enthrall readers and audiences almost 100 years after their creation - so much so that one devoted fan leaves his favorite brandy and a single red rose on his grave each year.

For one evening, Poe, author of The Telltale Heart and The Pit and The Pendulum, lives again in the person of Norman George, a Boston actor and editor whose "Poe Alone" has been called the definitive portrayal of the tragic genius.

George brings Poe to life at Siena College's Foy Theatre Feb. 28 for one night only. Then, quoth the raven, nevermore.

For information on the performance, call the school at 783-2381. Admission is free.

They've still got all their buttons

By Theresa Bobear

Whether you're talking about stamps, coins, baseball cards, rocks, rare books or buttons, certain objects in this world hold a special fascination for some individuals. Their collections might feature the oldest, the brightest and shiniest, or a favorite subject or era, but regardless, every piece in a stamp, coin or button collection holds the key to a story its owner is usually glad to share.

Buttons, in particular, have been making a comeback not only as important punctuation for fashion statements but as the objects of collectors' ambitions. The vital role our buttons play in holding us together at the seams will be celebrated during National Button Week, March 18 through 24.

Locally, the Half Moon Button Club of the Capital District holds meetings at the Bethlehem Public Library and provides button collectors with an opportunity to exchange ideas and trade buttons.

The club, named after Hendrick Hudson's ship, was established in Albany on Feb. 26, 1943, according to Hildy Jaycox, president. She said the group was established through the efforts of Mr. and Mrs. Grover Cleveland of Albany. (Cleveland's father was first cousin of the president.)

She said the group first met at the Albany Institute of History and Art, and club luncheons were held at the Ten Eyck Hotel and the DeWitt Clinton. Membership was limited to 50, and each applicant was required to have a collection of at least 500 buttons.

"Button collecting at that time was one of the top three hobbies in the United States," said Jaycox. "Number one, I believe, was always stamps."

While most of today's buttons are inexpensive, plastic and mass-produced, not too long ago many creative ideas were incorporated with considerable craftsmanship into buttons of many materials.

"Women didn't throw buttons away because buttons were not easy to come by," Jaycox said. "Buttons cost money. If you threw a garment out, you saved the buttons."

During the Civil War era, she said, the buttons were removed from a garment each time it was washed to prevent the shanks, the loop that is used to attach the button to the garment, from being ruined in the ringer.

"A button was an expensive item, a very expensive item," she said. "Years ago a lot of things had to be done by hand."

"I think you would find that the workmanship in the old buttons was far superior to the new buttons," she said. As an example, she pointed to a filigree button in her collection. She said the stone in its Tiffany setting would be pasted in today. She also pointed to a set of antique porcelain buttons, which were all handpainted by factory artists.

For the past seven years, Jaycox has been collecting rare buttons of various sizes, materials, patterns and subjects, entering trays of 25 buttons each in competi-

THE YOUTH NETWORK

Youth and Advertising

This month, the Elementary Youth Network Group took an in-depth look at the effects of advertising and how attitudes and choices are influenced by the advertisements we can't help but see and hear on a daily basis.

Advertisers have an extremely strong influence on our young people. A child will see alcohol consumed an average of 75,000 times on TV before s/he reaches 18 years of age. Billions of dollars are spent each year to convince us to buy certain products and become steady customers. Three of the six most advertised products are: over the counter drugs, alcohol and cigarettes. There is much concern over the effects of such advertising and its pro-use message.

According to a study done by the Bureau of Alcohol, Tobacco and Firearms, adolescents and young adults more heavily exposed to alcohol ads on TV and in magazines are more likely to perceive drinking as attractive, acceptable and rewarding than are those who have been less exposed. In fact, the heavily exposed group in the study was more likely to engage in drinking liquor — 31 percent versus 15 percent — than was the less exposed group.

One of the ways to address the influence of advertising is to teach our children to be "smart" consumers. In an effort to do that, the Elementary Youth Network Group examined many persuasive techniques used by the ad industry. These efforts include songs and slogans, testimonials, name calling, bandwagoning, transfer, card stacking and emotional and subliminal advertising.

Awareness of these methods can dramatically reduce the power the industry has over us. Parents are urged to understand the forms of advertising, view TV commercials, magazine and billboard ads with their children and take advantage of these "teachable moments."

Find out what children think the ad is trying to tell them and what they think about it. It is essential to communicate openly and discuss the messages which may be effecting their attitudes and decisions.

One way "junk" mail cannot be stopped is through the Postal Service. Klahr said the carriers have to deliver bulk rate mailings. "People pay to have them delivered," he said. Residents can refuse the mailings every day, but then the carriers will bring them back to the post office and throw them out, Klahr said. He said it would be easier for the carriers if residents throw the unwanted mail away themselves.

"Forty percent or more of our mail is from bulk rate. . . if we had to depend on first-class mail, we wouldn't survive," Klahr said. He added the cost to the Postal Service was the same if the carrier delivered "one letter or 15." He said bulk rate mailings are more than paying their own way and are "good for the postal service."

Klahr said many non-profit organizations use bulk rate, and noted that in the cases of the elderly, it may be the only mail they get.

Reducing the amount of "junk" mail received by Colonie residents would help the town's efforts by reducing the amount of paper reaching the landfill, Stockbridge said.

On a national basis 20 to 40 percent of the solid waste stream is made up of paper products, he said, adding there were no statistics on how much of that was "junk" mail.

"If the waste is not generated, then we don't have to handle it, collect it or dispose of it. . . it's the best savings I can have," Stockbridge said. "It's a waste that never gets to be a waste." The benefits of the program are two-fold because it shows people how they can have an impact on the problem and gets them involved, he said. "If we don't get the public working on the problem, then we won't solve it. He said it will take public involvement and opinion to change how government and manufacturers operate.

Puppets to perform at Bethlehem Public Library Friday

The hour long performance will feature puppeteer Marilyn Schroeder, who will encourage audience participation during the show.

Free tickets for the program are available in the Children's Room at the library. For information, call 439-9314.

Buttons

tions, attending regional and national conventions for button collectors, and, always, looking for that perfect addition to her button collection. Last year she won first place honors at the New York State Button Society's meeting in Norwich, N.Y.

Jaycox believes button collecting is definitely making a comeback. "They don't take up a lot of room," she said. "People can hang them on the walls."

She said some individuals collect buttons from schools, fraternal organizations, the military, government, police and fire departments, states or royalty.

"It's endless. It's absolutely endless what people will collect," she said. "A lot of what's collected is related to where you live or what you have been exposed to in your life."

Topics featured in Jaycox's collection include birds, fabulous animals, characters from Greek mythology, mammals, women's faces and opera characters. "There are a lot of opera buttons," she said.

All of the buttons in Jaycox's collection are works of art. Most are handmade, and some date back to the 1870s. The materials range from enameled metal, gilded metal, composition, ceramic, pilled wood, silvered metal, brass, vegetable ivory, horn inlaid with pearl, aluminum, pearl with steel inset, china (from the Civil War era) and pewter to Goodyear rubber, colored glass, niello, tin, fabric and black glass with gold. And, of course, Jaycox's collection contains buttons made of celluloid, a material discovered in Albany during the 1880s.

Despite the overabundance of plastic and mass production, some collectible buttons are still being manufactured today. Artists have been creating "studio buttons," which are made specifically for collectors.

In addition to beauty, a collector will look at a button's rarity, age and condition when deciding whether or not to add it to his collection.

Jaycox said a collector always checks the back of the button for rust, which can ruin all the buttons on a tray. She said the age of a button is told by the type of shank and, in many cases, by the back, which may have the name of a manufacturer imprinted on it.

Jaycox said the earlier plastics ruined many antique buttons by causing rust in nearby metal buttons.

Prices of buttons depend on a number of factors, including the condition. "It's only worth what a buyer is willing to pay," she said. "In certain parts of the country some things are in more demand."

For people just starting out as button collectors, she recommends talking with people who are already collectors, going to the library and reading about buttons, and refraining from cleaning collectible buttons until learning how to do it without damaging the button.

The Half Moon Button Club holds meetings at the Bethlehem Public Library at noon on the second Wednesday of the month from April through October.

During the early 1980s, she said, Northeastern Regional Button Society was established in Springfield, Mass., to serve the six New England states and New York. This year group's the regional meeting will be held in June.

The National Button Society will hold its meeting during August in Dallas.

"Each time that you go to one of the meetings or conventions you meet the national button dealers . . . and that's where you find a lot of buttons . . . that are not readily available to you as a collector," she said. "That's how collectors get buttons. They trade or buy or sell from each other."

If you're bullish on buttons, a visit to Tender Buttons on East 62nd Street in New York City might also be in order.

Anyone interested in joining the Half Moon Button Club may call Jaycox at 482-7683.
