Spotlight editor resigns

Tom McPheeters will be missed

After serving for the past 10 years as editor-in-chief of The Spotlight Newspapers, Thomas S. McPheeters has resigned.

In accepting, "with very great regret," the resignation, which became effective April 28, Richard A. Ahlstrom, publisher of the Spotlight Newspapers throughout McPheeters' tenure, said that he will assume the editorship as well. (See accompanying article, page 3, for other staff announcements.)

McPheeters, a resident of Delmar, said that he wants time to do some independent writing and to consider other interests. An article based on an interview with him is published on page 3.

He became editor in October 1980, having been named almost immediately after Mr. Ahlstrom's purchase of The Spotlight from Nathaniel A. Boynton.

Together, they have built the newspaper substantially in circulation, advertising, community service, and in broader recognition.

The weekly circulation has virtually doubled, column inches devoted to community news and commentary have increased more than five-fold in the 10 years.

Meanwhile, a new newspaper, The Colonie Spotlight, was planned and launched, and this week is observing the

Enjoyed community

The most rewarding part of editing a weekly newspaper, says Tom McPheeters as he looks back over a decade with the Spotlight Newspapers, is being involved in a small community on an intimate basis.

In that capacity, he reflects, he has relished most "the opportunity to play a role in how the community develops and in what issues are important to it."

"There aren't many such opportunities available in life," he adds, in attributing the allure of such advantages to his having remained at his post for 10 years minus five months, and involving himself in the affairs of Bethlehem, New Scotland, and Colonie.

"This is really what I wanted to do when I started out in newspapers, and it has been a valued, significant aspect of my life. But now—as someone said just recently in a very similar situation—the time has come for the paper and me to go our separate ways. I need time to think about what I'm going to decide to do next, and I'm fortunate enough to be so situated that I can do just that."

Tom looks on the next few to several months as "a second sabbatical leave." The first one, in the 1970s took him to South America, "but I skipped what should have been the second, several years ago."

Bethlehem won't rush solid waste ordinance

By Bob Hagyard

Given their opposition to American Ref-Fuel and the proposed construction-and-debris landfill off Wemple Road, Bethlehem officials will go slow on rewriting the town's solid waste ordinance.

Only the mandatory-recycling portion of the revised law will be the subject of a public hearing May 23, 7:30 p.m. before the town board. Regulations for landfills and other solid waste disposal facilities will wait pending further study of possible air discharge and materials resource recovery standards the town may wish to enact.

Two weeks ago, Supervisor Kenneth Ringler promised that Bethlehem would not become "the solid-waste capital of the Northeast," reacting to the Wemple Road application for a landfill permit from the state Department of Environmental Conservation. Last Wednesday, Delmar attorney Michael Smith discussed the nuts and

Engineer presses county on Johnston Rd. bridge

By Mike Larabee

Albany County wants to reopen the Johnston Road bridge by the winter of 1991, two years earlier than the best-case 1993 target cited a month ago.

But the county plan is partially contingent on state Department of Transportation approval of a complicated federal funding transfer, County Engineer Paul Cooney said.

According to Cooney, the county wants to substitute another span on the federal government's funding schedule. That way, federal highway money, which would likely have arrived for Johnston Road under yet-to-be-enacted 1993 legislation, would not be lost if Albany County bond funds are used now.

Cooney said it may be possible that money slated for the Johnston Road structure could be used on some other county first anniversary of its successful publication.

Within the last six years alone, The Spotlight has received 27 awards from the New York State Press Association for outstanding achievement in several categories of news and features. Three first-place awards, five second-place awards, nine for third place, and 10 honorable mentions have cited the newspaper for excellence. Noting the paper's six honors for 1989, as announced recently, Mr. Ahlstrom credited the editor's, guidance of his staff for the recognition accorded by other publishers and editors.

In all, 46 full-time and part-time reporters, editors, correspondents, and high school contributors have been working under the editor's direction this year, a total that is six times the size of the editorial department in 1980.

"Tom McPheeters has done an outstanding job in developing The Spotlight from a small magazine-style weekly newspaper into the Capital District's foremost weekly publication," said Mr. Ahlstrom at a luncheon for Spotlight staff members held at the Steuben Athletic Club in the editor's honor.

"In supervising our growth, he led the transition from typewriter to computer to networked computer systems with laser output.

"His honesty, integrity, ethics, and professional judgment are outstanding. Tom's legacy will form the basis for continued improvement in the Spotlight newspapers.

Rewards

His travels also have taken him to Germany—during a three-year stretch with the Army. Earlier, he studied at both Reed College in Oregon and Ohio State University. After that he joined the daily Journal in Lorain, Ohio, as the paper's city hall reporter, and came to New York State in 1973 to join the Times-Record in Troy. It was from there that he came in October 1980 to edit The Spotlight. "Home town" for him originally was St. Louis.

The sabbatical will, among other happy prospects, give him more time to be with daughter Amy, now 3 years old. An editor's hours have shortchanged him in this respect. A son, Sam, is a junior at Eugene Lang College in New York City, an affiliate of the New School for Social Research. Tom and his wife Darlene make their home in Delmar.

A reprieve from the editor's chair also is calculated to permit more time for the physical activities that share Tom's enthusiasms: Skiing, swimming, running, and by all means, tennis. And camping—the family is looking forward to some extended time this summer at their camp in Grafton, Rensselaer County.

Spotlight birthday

With a year's successful publishing behind it, The Colonie Spotlight today observes its first anniversary and begins its second year.

"We are more than pleased by the response which the paper has received from residents and businesses throughout the year," said the publisher, Richard A. Ahlstrom. "There has been a warm reception consistently, and we are confident that The Colonie Spotlight has indeed lived up to both our hopes and those of the readers.

"Circulation has stabilized at almost exactly the point where it had been projected for this time. Advertising has grown steadily, and is at a satisfying level, both from the standpoint of adequate financial return and the shopping utility of residents. News coverage also has increased from its standing start, and healthily reflects the activities and interest of the people of Colonie."

In the "Point of View" column published in the anniversary issue, Gary D. Smith, chairman of the Albany-Colonie Regional Chamber of Commerce, and Philip J. Pearson, chairman of the Latham Area Chamber of Commerce, extended their congratulations and commendations on the paper's achievements in providing information directed to the concerns of the people of Colonie.

"We thank the people of Colonie for their instrumental role in making our venture a complete success, and promise there will be no letup in our efforts to bring you the best," stated an editorial in the anniversary issue.

bridge. Cooney said federal government officials have agreed to the plan but added that state DOT approval is necessary because they coordinate national highway money allocations.

"It's still a big 'if,'" he said, adding he cannot predict when DOT will reply to the proposal.

As Cooney sees it, rebuilding the bridge without waiting for federal money will save the county in the long run. A 1987 state estimate put the price tag at $1.5 million. Cooney thinks Albany County can do it for $700,000 to $800,000 if the project is combined with other improvements scheduled for Johnston Road.

He argued that the six-mile detour around Johnston Road costs taxpayers 30 cents a mile in gas and car maintenance. That's a total $2.6 million each year the bridge is closed.

Whether or not the state approves the federal schedule transfer, Cooney said, the project cannot wait. The bridge project is critical, he said, because traffic on Johnston Road is expected to double over the next 10 years in conjunction with new development and the proposed realignment of Rapp Road and extension of the Crossgates Mall ring road.

Cooney has asked the county for permission to begin work on the project regardless of DOT's reaction. "We have to go ahead," he said.

Commonly called the Johnston Road bridge, the span crosses the Normanskill where New Scotland's Normanskill Road becomes Johnston Road in the town of Guilderland. It has been closed since December when a biannual state inspection revealed structural deterioration.

Cooney said the repair has been on the federal target list as part of the Highway Bridge Rehabilitation and Repair Act since 1983, but that money from that act has dried up. He said funds for the project will probably not reappear before 1993 under a new transportation act.

bolts of local regulation:

"You can say that before someone constructs a solid waste facility, they must have a (town) permit," Smith said. "But before you can say, 'you must have a permit,' you must ask, on what basis? If you claim the authority to deny a permit, you must have standards .... As long as what we are saying is more stringent than the state standards, it's worth looking at."

The delay will permit town officials to work up a court-proof set of environmental standards.

Recycling

Under the recycling measure, the subject of the upcoming hearing, town waste collectors will furnish each customer a recycling bin, capacity 14 to 40 gallons, for separate disposal of newsprint, glass, metal cans, plastic containers, corrugated cardboard, office paper and other recyclables.

Residents using the town's Rupert Road transfer station would also separate recyclable materials.

At a special town board meeting April 18, Public Works Commissioner Bruce Secor described a co-mingling recycling system by which recyclables would be dumped together into a shredder, then separated.

Permits would be available through the office of the town highway superintendent, who would be empowered to write regulations and suspend permits. Commercial haulers under the system would be required to file a recycling plan noting whether customers or the hauler will separate the recyclables.

The supervisor would be empowered to revoke the permit of a "persistent violator" or a permit holder "unable or unwilling to comply" with the law after a public hearing.

Solid waste standards

Under certain circumstances a town may enforce stricter regulatory standards than those set by a state agency — such as the Department of Environmental Conservation, the agency now reviewing the BFI/Ref-Fuel.

That, said Smith, is the result of the latest round of Matter of Bri-Mar Corp. v. Town of Knox, which arose when the rural hilltown prohibited aboveground discharges of sewage in the town even though state law allows such discharges in limited cases. Bri-Mar, which wanted to triple the size of a trailer park, did obtain such a permit; the town board denied the request to expand, citing the no-discharge law.

Round 1, before state Supreme Court in September 1987, went to the town; Round 2, before the state Supreme Court Appellate Division in December 1988, reversed the ruling. The state Court of Appeals then reversed the appellate ruling in September 1989.

An additional precedent for local control of land use was set in the Frew Run Gravel Products v. Town of Carroll three years ago. In that case, the state Court of Appeals held that a town may enact a local law forbidding an unwanted use — in this case, mining — from a particular land-use zone. And enact that legislation despite the state Environmental Conservation Law, which specifically "supersedes" all other state and local laws relating to the extractive mining industry.

Daring to make a difference

(DARE) and instructing officer Michael F. McMillen have a half-year's work under their belts trying to prove Bennett wrong.

"You'll go out and arrest one drug dealer today, tomorrow there are two more to take his place," said Detective James Corbett, who directs DARE as head of Bethlehem's youth bureau.

Conventional enforcement has been criticized because it concentrates on reducing supply instead of demand. DARE was created in 1983 by the Los Angeles Police Department in an effort to prevent kids from ever starting to use drugs, McMillen said. He said DARE aims at what are considered the true causes of drug abuse among young people — peer pressure and low self-esteem.

"Sure, I believe you should go out and arrest every drug dealer you can," McMillen said. "But the biggest problem with law enforcement is dollars, and the drug dealers have more money than any government agency in the world."

DARE quietly, and inexpensively, takes on the problem from another direction — the potential user of the future. But in the absence of flashy interdiction armies, confiscated narcotics, and handcuffed suspects, how do you know DARE is working?

"You don't," said McMillen. "It's not a short term answer."

"All you can do is give the kids the information and let them grow up."

Karen Boggs, coordinator of DARE as sixth grade guidance counselor at the Bethlehem Middle School, agrees.

"Whenever you're talking about education, you're talking about long-term prevention," she said. "You're talking about changing attitudes."

Boggs said so far the program has been very successful.

"I think the greatest impression on the kids is that a police officer from our local police department was concerned enough about them to be spending two days a week in the school for a semester," Boggs said.

"Mike obviously cares an awful lot about the kids and the program, and I think that's what the kids were picking up."

Last semester, McMillen spent every Tuesday and Wednesday teaching a pilot DARE program to 325 sixth-grade students at the Bethlehem Middle School. This Spring, over 100 more are going through the program with him at St. Thomas School in Delmar and A.W. Becker School in Selkirk.

"Traditionally the drug education programs deal specifically with drugs, questions and answers about drugs, the legal implications of drugs," said Corbett.

"One of the real strong features that makes DARE unique is that we say yes, there are drugs out there, you know that there are drugs out there. Here are the kinds of decisions you have to make."

Unlike the straight-ahead tactics of the more traditional programs, DARE is about abstract ideas. Central to DARE are decisions and consequences, and how to deal with pressures, Corbett said — lessons that apply to more than just drugs.

"In their own little groups, kids have to make the decisions," he said. "There's no way you can really go in there and find out does DARE work or doesn't it. But somewhere along the line it has to have some kind of effect."

At the end of the program last semester 325 Bethlehem middle school students took an oath to think before they used drugs.

"You can't ask a kid never to use drugs, never to use alcohol — that's unrealistic," he said.

BC budget vote today

Bethlehem School District residents go to the polls today (Wednesday) to vote on the proposed $27,527,961 budget for 1990-91. The budget is up 9.86 percent from this year's $25,055,973 figure.

A $201,000 bond issue to finance the purchase of one eight-passenger, two 59-passenger and two 30-passenger school buses is also on the ballot.

During the vote, three school board members will be picked from a field of five.

Board President Sheila Fuller and Vice President Pamela Williams are seeking reelection, while newcomers Nancy Fenster, Dan Stein and Peter Trent are vying for the seat vacated by two-term board member Velma Cousins.

The elections and budget vote will be held from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. at the middle school. All district residents age 18 and older are eligible to vote.

Ritchko accepts post

Sue Ann Ritchko, former two-term Bethlehem town councilwoman and Delmar resident, was sworn into her new position with the U.S. Department of Agriculture in Washington, D.C.

Ritchko will serve as administrator of the USDA's Human Nutrition Information Service. The agency measures food consumption and dietary levels of Americans and develops materials to aid the public in meeting dietary needs.

"It is a privilege to serve in the George Bush Administration and the U.S. Department of Agriculture," Ritchko said during a phone conversation this week, "and I am very pleased to have obtained the appointment from the White House."

From 1974 until last year, Ritchko was vice president of consumer services for the Golub Corp., which operates Price Chopper Supermarkets in five states. In that position, she was responsible for the chain's food and nutrition programs, customer information and public relations. Prior to that, she served as spokesperson with the U.S. Food and Drug Administration for all food and drug issues in eastern New York.

A Republican, Ritchko was elected to a four-year term in the Albany County Legislature, serving from 1979 to 1983. Declining to seek reelection, she was appointed councilwoman upon the death of Edward Mocker. When Mocker's term expired in 1985, she won a full four-year term in her own right.

Last year, Ritchko unsuccessfully challenged Kenneth Ringler in a primary for the town supervisor nomination on the GOP line. Ringler subsequently won the November election without ballot opposition.

"Sue Ann Ritchko has been a dedicated public servant in the town of Bethlehem, and she certainly will be missed," Ringler said this week. "I offer her my best wishes in her new endeavor."

Ritchko, who recently purchased a condominium in Silver Spring, Md., says she will commute weekends to her Carson Road home in Delmar.

Fair campaign practice?

Residents of the Bethlehem Central School District received in their mailboxes one day last week an eight-page "newsletter" from the Board of Education and its administration. In two colors, a dozen and a half photos, several graphs and charts, numerous check-marked summary arguments, and countless exclamation marks, the slick publication presents the case for approval of the $27.5 million budget for the district's 1990-91 operations.

The case is persuasive, almost overwhelming in its presentation. In editors' traditional role of "Yes-but" experts, we do feel moved to question this as overkill — and not necessarily well and fairly conceived. The district is thus spending everyone's tax dollars to argue its case; those residents who may have doubts are not represented in this rather expensive sales pitch. Is a mailing piece whose headlines read: "We are achieving!" "We are meeting future needs!" "We are providing quality education at a fair price!" a justifiable expenditure on the eve of the voting?

Without question, BC's voters will approve the $27.5 million, along with the other proposed spending. But we'd like to hear a considered response from the board on this one little item.

Good, and faithful

Who has more years of public service than anyone else you know? The answer almost certainly is Neal Moylan, the Delmar resident who's retiring from two key posts in the Town of Bethlehem government — the public information officer and member of the planning board.

Thomas E. Dewey was Governor of New York when Neal joined the State Commerce Department, fresh out of a career in broadcasting and the Army Air Corps, where he'd been captain on WWII duty overseas. That was in 1947, and the jobs he held in Commerce over more than a quarter-century included six years as the Commissioner. His tenure was notable for achievement in attracting industry to the state (including our immediate area), spurring job development, and promoting international commerce, focusing on U.S. exports. He was instrumental in boosting the tourist industry, and along the way he even was coordinator of the State's effort in bringing movie-makers to New York.

From that successful career, he turned easily to private commercial interests, and most recently to assisting the good-government cause in his home town. An "activist" before the word was coined, he has been a leading figure in almost countless causes ranging from the scouts to seniors.

We can be glad that even in stepping down Neal will remain with the Industrial Development Agency, a community-based program that exists because of the initiative he took as Commerce Commissioner in creating the major thrust to stimulate industrial growth.

All the people he served so effectively and faithfully will wish to join in these expressions of thanks and good wishes. Well done!

Toward new horizons

Many people have known Sue Ann Ritchko as an effective spokesperson, a tireless and outspoken champion of what she believes in, and an expert advocate on behalf of consumers. It is in this latter role that her special energies and knowledge are to be put to good use in her appointment to a key position at the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

Unfortunately for Bethlehem and this region, this latest recognition of her abilities seems destined to refocus her attention to the nation's capital and away from local causes. That will be our loss.

Mrs. Ritchko was a most useful member of the Town Board, from which she retired only four months ago after a disappointing effort to win her party's nomination for Supervisor. Before that, she was for several years among the frustrated minority in the County Legislature. Throughout, she was skilled in her professional work for the Golub interests. Other beneficial organizations, such as the Albany Institute of History and Art (where she's been an officer) have known her touch.

By extending her horizons in this newest challenge, Mrs. Ritchko guarantees that the people of the entire nation will be able to share her expertise. We wish her much success.

Now that April's gone

If every basement, attic, spare room, and garage in Bethlehem hasn't been emptied of a year's debris, it can only be that some residents haven't returned from Florida.

The town's annual April practice of inviting all householders to dispose of accumulated trash and other discards from days gone by was, as usual, a monstrous success. Who can say that the mounds of lawn cuttings were greater or fewer than the lean-tos constructed of bedsteads which clearly have seen better days (and nights), Aunt Sophie's once-splendid end tables, and TVs that in their time played host to Lucy and Buffalo Bob.

Altogether, some major depressions in the landfill are less hollow now that May's come. And there's a lot more breathing space around just about every home in town. As an aside, in noting with thanks the perseverance of the highway crews in carting off our yesterdays, it seems timely enough to repeat a suggestion made here a year ago: Why not stagger the pickup schedule by areas, so that the roadsides need be somewhat less unsightly throughout the whole month?

It's May again

March winds, April showers, May flowers. That's the sequence of song and history.

But if you've not noticed, those winds and showers do have a sneaky habit of cheating, and passing over the line into May, which figures to be the year's loveliest month.

And along with the rains come, every so often, one of life's many little mysteries: the emergence of earthworms on sidewalks and roads in great profusion. What lures them there? Which of all of nature's impulses draw them out?

Perhaps the answers are known to biologists and other smart folk. But whatever the cause, it's beyond the ken of mere editorial essayists. And it's another intimation of the magnitude and majesty — as well as the mystery — in the grand plan of things.

John A. Cole

By John A. Cole

In most suburban and rural areas, the school district is the central theme which binds us together, providing our community identity. In 1985, my wife, three children, and I had the privilege of choosing Voorheesville as our home town. We found a community rightfully proud of its school. The citizens in our community have worked hard to develop and maintain an affordable, quality district. These factors provide an excellent education for our children and preserve property values. Voorheesville is a community with a strong identity and its citizens love to work and play together.

These past years have not always been easy. Our community has diverse needs and viewpoints. Defining a common approach to achieving our goals is difficult. This past year there has been a coming together, bringing our school district into a time of cooperative development.

As our district deals with the decade of the '90's and the turn of a new century, its school board members need to be representatives of the community population. I have always been employed in the private sector, concerned with, contributing to, and enjoying living in our community. Although I am not a professional educator, my private business background and experience can be a valuable addition to our school board.

What faces a school board member is not taught, but learned through experience. I served three years on the Holland Patent Central school board in central New York. My experience included building upgrades and renovations for efficient space utilization, asbestos removal, and energy conservation. While the Regents Action Plan was being introduced and implemented, I worked on four budgets and on the team negotiating contracts with the teachers and the non instructional staff.

Edward Lukomski

By Edward Lukomski

During the past several years my involvement in the community has afforded me the opportunity to gain a perspective from parents, teachers, school administrators, school board members, and the community at large regarding their feelings, desires, and attitudes concerning the school district. While previously serving as co-president of the PTSA, the treasurer of the Kid's Club, member of the school budget committee, and currently serving on the Town of

New Scotland's site selection committee, I have come to appreciate the balance that is needed in ensuring that the educational needs of the students are met while remaining responsible to the taxpayers of the school district. I am educationally progressive, but fiscally conservative—two qualities which need not be mutually exclusive. I strongly feel that being creative in educational programming first entails maximizing the input and use of all available resources

Can't you see it now—Will Shakespeare sitting there, rubbing his brow in order to make his word processor speed up just a bit and deliver precisely the right word that he's groping for.

He's only recently added a couple of e's to his name because it will look more graceful on the playbill at the Globe. And he's thinking of changing his first name, or perhaps just using initials, such as W.H., because he hates it when people—especially his mother-in-law—call him Willie. His friend, the Earl of Oxford, who keeps sending him plot outlines and even bits of dialogue every fortnight, has strongly advised against any further change.

The parchment on the escriptoire in front of him is blank save for the notation he has made in the upper left corner: Oth. III-iii (7)

He adds a curlicue to the numerals, draws a slash across the 7 in the continental style, then dips the quill and pens in "Iago." After writing a line, he pauses, leans back, and gazes out the mullioned window, focusing on a wren.

A minute or so later, he grasps the pen again, and slowly begins to write:

"Who steals my wallet steals garbage, but . . ."

Involuntarily he recoils in disgust: That's not right! Try, try again. He wads up the foolscap, and prepares to start afresh on a clean sheet. He returns to the window. Minutes pass before the pen moves once more:

"Who steal my purse steals trash, but. . . That's it! Just the right note."

As you may have gathered from earlier references within this column, your Uncle Dudley fearlessly stands foursquare with Will in his careful selection of that precise word for the contents of a purse, or any such container. Stray bits of paper (even including negotiable ones) are trash and not garbage. Never garbage.

Manufacturers of waste-disposal bags use the right terms

It takes a lot of nerve, these days, to hold firm to this distinction, for every yuppie on the air and in the general press likes to speak of "garbage" generically. To them, you empty your wastebasket, you're throwing out garbage. To unthinking computer users, the expression is, "Garbage in, garbage out." The intended reference is to incorrect data.

The recent candidate for President, Mr. Dukakis, had a favored expression for something he didn't care for: "That's a lot of garbage."

I am pleased to see that The Spotlight, which is so kind as to publish Uncle Dudley's musings, seems to have exorcised "garbage" from its lexicon, except on those relatively rare occasions when reference is made to the leftover scrambled eggs, grapefruit rinds, coffee grounds, and similar sundries that go down the Disposall or into the basket under the sink (or maybe to the compost heap).

I'd like to award a suitable plaque to the manufacturers of refuse bags. You'll please observe that the cartons which hold the black or white bags are very descriptive in their identification of what you're purchasing at the supermarket.

You want a big black bag for yard cuttings or the mail-order catalogs that don't rightly go with newspapers for recycling, or wastebaskets' contents in general? The bag you want is in a carton plainly labeled "Trash bags." Not garbage—trash! But perhaps you want the smaller, white bags that will neatly collect the grapefruit and the leavings from the baby's dish. The bags you need for this exclusive purpose are in cartons labeled "Garbage bags." Not trash—garbage! Those in the business know their products.

I even like the current magazine ads by an outfit called American Energy (which actually has to do with waste disposal). The headline on the ad says: "You'll have a lot more energy if we take out your trash."

Why all this fuss about a couple of words? I guess that some people might say that I'm fussy. And prefer to get things right. Thanks for listening.

CONSTANT READER

When brilliance goes awry

There fell into my hands a copy of the current (May-June) issue of Harvard Magazine, the first "that I've seen for many months. It's almost always pleasant to renew acquaintance with such a worthy friend, and this issue didn't disappoint me, even though I lack a Harvard degree or even a Harvard T-shirt.

This is a bimonthly magazine, and each single issue is priced at $4.50, though I doubt that you're likely to spot it on your local newsstand, even at Coulson's. You might subscribe for $27.50, the regular price, but then a blow-in card offers a discount down to $20. The address is: 7 Ware Street, Cambridge, MA. 02138. Just plain people are eligible to subscribe.

A big chunk of this issue (some 16 pages) is given over to a report by Harvard's president, Derek Bok. If you're interested in "What's Wrong with Our Universities?" (the title of his paper) you would find a lot of meat here. He intimates that part of the problem, and maybe the heart of the matter, lies with the questions asked by the critics. A question of his own is: "Are our universities doing all they might to help the country address its formidable array of problems—lagging competitiveness, poverty, inadequate public education, environmental hazards, and many more?"

The article that I read most eagerly and profitably, however, is called "The Worm That Ate Internet." It's about how the young Cornell graduate student (newly arrived from Harvard) became so bored that he devised the computer program that created havoc in systems all over the nation, with grave implications indeed. Much of the article revolves around not the young man, Robert T. Morris, but his father, the chief scientist at the National Computer Security Center, a division of the supersecret National Security Agency.

"As with any kind of fraud, the mind of the criminal is somewhat more imaginative than the internal controls. You are always building a defense against the last war."

—From Harvard Magazine

The son, an extraordinarily brilliant person, got into computer trouble as a teenager by breaking into several computers at Bell Labs, where he held summer jobs. As a Harvard undergraduate, he gave a lecture on computer security to his father's colleagues at "the puzzle palace" at Fort Meade.

I'm afraid I must conclude that some of the well-known Harvard outlook comes through in some of the article's language (written by an alumnus): "Did he find Ithaca too small and isolated after Cambridge? Did he have fewer privileges as a Cornell graduate student than as a Harvard undergraduate? Was he just bored?"

What was it that he did to earn himself a felony conviction that may land him in prison? (He is to be sentenced this week.) Late in 1988, he transmitted an experimental program designed to enter as many computers as possible. The program was launched on Internet, a network funded by the federal government that linked more than 60,000 computers nationwide.

But in doing so he made "a dreadful mistake—rather than moving slowly through the network, gaining access to one machine at a time and copying itself occasionally to another, the program was running wild." On the plus side, it was designed so that it could neither steal nor destroy existing data.

The jurors who convicted him are apparently agreed that he should not go to jail. This attitude contrasts interestingly with some quoted views of five scientists and other academicians: "Not funny. He should have realized what the consequences were. . . If it's not made clear that there are dire consequences, it'll just happen again. . . Perhaps a reasonably stiff sentence would be a powerful deterrent."

Points of View

Physical inactivity is associated with a number of debilitating medical conditions, as is widely recognized not only in this country but also around the world.

These conditions include coronary artery disease (disease of the arteries of the heart), high blood pressure, non-insulin dependent diabetes mellitus, and osteoporosis (the brittle bones of "old age").

Coronary artery disease is the leading cause of death in the United States, where it accounts for about one and one-half million heart attacks, and over 520,000 deaths every year. About 400,000 Americans are victims annually of sudden death due primarily to underlying atherosclerotic diseases. High blood pressure, which occurs in about 58 million of us, is the leading risk factor for coronary artery disease. It is also associated with other serious diseases such as those affecting the kidneys, eyes, and brain.

Cerebrovascular disease (stroke) alone accounts for over 150,000 deaths each year and is the third leading cause of death in our country.

Nearly six million Americans suffer from non-insulin dependent diabetes, and osteoporosis is responsible for an estimate 1.3 million fractures (broken bones) each year. About one out of four of all women over the age of 60 have spinal compression fractures. And about one out of six women sustain hip fractures during their lifetime.

Exercise appears to be especially effective in improving health status in six important disease areas

As you can see, the numbers are staggering, and a tremendous number of people are exposed to at least one of these diseases that could be ameliorated by physical activity.

The evidence is now in. We know that exercise keeps people fit for life. It promotes leanness, increases the blood level of HDL-cholesterol (the "good" kind), lowers blood pressure and LDL-cholesterol (the "bad" one), improves glucose tolerance, and wards off osteoporosis.

Exercise also keeps people strong, cheerful, mobile, and independent. In a very real sense, physical activity keeps people vital. Studies show that men who are active on a regular basis have a lower overall mortality than those who are physically inactive.

And exercise appears to be especially effective in improving the health status in these six disease areas: coronary artery disease, hypertension, non-insulin dependent diabetes, osteoporosis, obesity, and diminished psychological well-being.

Evidence from studies shows a consistent association between physical activity, especially the kind that causes aerobic (or oxygen-debt) exercise, and a reduced incidence of coronary artery disease.

Similar benefits have been reported in older men (even of age 75) and are presumed in women (on the basis of extrapolation from the data for males).

A dramatic decrease in the risk of stroke and heart attack has been experienced over the last 15 years. About half of this decrease is presumed to be due to the more aggressive treatment of hypertension during this period, and the other half is attributed to behavior modification. Those lifestyle changes have included smoking cessation and regular aerobic, weight-bearing exercise.

This physical activity is obviously helpful in improving caloric balance (weight control) and in preventing obesity, in reducing the risk of developing high blood pressure and non-insulin dependent diabetes, and in reducing bone loss, especially in the older age groups.

Perhaps most important from the data on physical activity that have accumulated over the last five years, is this fact: we should not stop exercising as we get older. And, further, that vigorous activity prevents many of the debilitating and incapacitating medical conditions of old age such as hip fracture. Indeed, it seems as if our bodies don't wear out. Rather, unless we do use them, they "rust out."

It is vital to point out, however, that before one embarks on a vigorous regular exercise program, one should work up to it gradually and receive counseling by a physician.

prior to requesting specific line item increases in the budget.

During the past eight years, I have served as the executive director of the Albany County Association for Retarded Citizens—a facility providing educational and vocational services for mentally retarded people on a daily basis, employing over 200 staff members, and having an annual operating budget in excess of $7 million. As a Vooheesville school board member, I will be able to draw upon my experiences in budgeting and fiscal management, curriculum development, and staffing, along with capital construction and project financing.

The combination of possessing a master's degree in education and a permanent teaching certification in New York State along with overseeing the operation of a large educational and vocational facility in Slingerlands, has provided me with the experience necessary in assessing and addressing the needs of the students, the desires of the teachers, the responsibilities of the school board, and the wishes of the community.

I encourage you to vote on May 16, and to select the two most qualified candidates to represent you on the Vooheesville school board.

Most of us care deeply about the education of our children. We want our children to be happy, healthy, well-educated, and prepared to live in the 21st century.

We need creative educational programs that challenge and excite our students. We need the enthusiastic support of our community. We must provide an environment for learning where students will flourish both academically and socially. Our children need good teachers to instruct them, and they need first-rate books and equipment.

How can we reach these goals? Our school district has a limited industrial base as a source of tax revenue. Because state and federal funding patterns have shifted in recent years, our residents have been forced to assume a greater share of educational expense. By generating community enthusiasm for our educational programs, we could encourage our citizens to advocate for increased state and federal support for education. The Vooheesville school board should work with the New York State Association of School Boards to encourage the state and federal governments to increase their prominence in financing public education. The district must seek to expand on its recent attempts to take advantage of available funding and support from both public and private sectors. We must manage our existing resources in ways that enhance productivity and performance. We must constantly compare our spending to our state goals. We must spend with a clear sense of long-range implications.

The responsibility of the school board is to seek ways to achieve a balance between good educational programs and careful management of financial and other resources. We must provide our children with a legacy on which they can always draw, one which can grow readily and never be depleted. That legacy is a strong education.

I've had a lifelong commitment to and involvement in education. As a member of the Vooheesville school board, I would continue to advocate for strong educational programs while being sensitive to our community's school-tax concerns. Please vote on May 16 and please cast one of your two school boards votes for me.

Writing a campaign statement as incumbent has its drawbacks. I don't have the luxury of stating "they" haven't done this or that, or enough, or done it the right way. I know I dare not make promises to deliver on specifics because issues are often complex and most things I want for our students costs money—more money! Everything is relative and balance must be achieved. I've also learned the difficult lesson—that sometimes on some issues I am wrong, at least ill-informed.

Since my son, Jacob, entered kindergarten eight years ago, I have been involved with our schools to question, to learn, and to offer my support. I have volunteered as a classroom helper, been a member and president of the PTSA, worked on numerous committees such as the elementary school advisory committee and super teams, and served for the last five years on the school board. I am involved and encourage others to be involved because I believe parental and community participation of successful public schools. I view my role as representative but also facilitative for all the "stake-holders" (Adam Urbanski's term to include students, parents, school staff, and community members) to participate in the consideration of major issues.

I began my first term believing it was necessary to answer a few important questions.

How can we:

- Assure the highest quality programs and services for all students?
- Address the unique gifts and needs of each student?
- Create a secure, supportive, nurturing yet challenging learning environment?
- Encourage and support our faculty and staff so that the best professional services are available to our students?

Mark Sengenberger

By Mark Sengenberger

I am the past president of the RCS Board of Education. I did not run for re-election last year because my wife was having difficulties with her pregnancy and I felt it important to be home with her and our new baby. With my wife's support and the encouragement of valued friends, I am now seeking election again.

I hope to continue working on many of the important issues that I emphasized during my board tenure, including:

Encouraging a team approach among school board members, administrators, teachers, and the community. This improves communications, encourages cooperative goal setting, and provides for increased accountability.

Providing a school environment that welcomes and promotes parent participation. This includes providing written updated curriculum at all grade levels so that parents can know what their children are being taught.

Establishing high expectations for academic achievement. This includes providing challenging opportunities for all students; from those with learning disabilities to those identified as gifted and talented. Work must continue to protect teacher and student contact time.

Providing in-service training and continuing education opportunities for administrators and teachers to assure that they are always well prepared to lead and teach.

Continuing the search for creative solutions to satisfy the real need for additional classroom space and improved library facilities. I support the fifth grade to move to the junior high as a necessary, stop-gap measure. However, it is not an appropriate long-term solution for a district facing growing residential and commercial development.

The RCS Board of Education is challenged to deliver high quality education to our students. Limited financial resources, the intense social stresses on the family, the educational demands of a world economy, and increasing area growth all necessitate that we meet this challenge by creatively using the resources of our community.

I look forward to the opportunity to once again serve the RCS community.

I have been a resident of the RCS school district for over 20 years. Two of my three sons have completed their education at RCS and the third is a sophomore. I have played an active role in school activities and the RCS Sports Association, providing equipment and material for school operations and functions.

At present, my position is facilities planner for the New York State Department of Correctional Services, preparing budgets for eight state correctional facilities. Prior to becoming a facilities planner with the Department of Correctional Services, I served for 30 years as an electrical engineer with the Office of General Services, designing electrical systems and space analysis for many state agencies.

I anticipate that this engineering experience will be beneficial to the Board of Education, and look forward to the support of the RCS School District voters on May 16.

ments for this development located north of Orchard Street. The comments, notably those of the Bethlehem Citizens for Responsible Planning, resulted from long hours of careful analysis and public testimony. Residents are vitally concerned with this project. The responses to these comments and analysis arrogantly ignore their pertinent question and avoid many of the important issues raised. This FEIS does a disservice to Bethlehem's taxpayers, particularly in regard to the fiscal impact on schools and taxes. Residents of the town who, in good faith, rely on the process of public hearing and comment, have good reason for disillusion.

Vox Pop

specific questions on the methodologies used. Instead of responding to these questions, the "respondents" simply restated the source of their methodology (1980 census data) and repeated the same conclusions. That was exactly what was being challenged! The "response" did not deal with our strong arguments for alternative methods of reaching credible conclusions. For instance, different "multipliers" generate different data bases in projecting the number of school-age children coming from new developments. Next year 138 new students will be on the school rolls. They can't all be due to the fertility of Bethlehem mothers! Are accurate multipliers being used? Aren't

For example, in analyzing the fiscal impact on schools, we raised residents justified in questioning figures that become the basis for projecting school enrollment and expenditures, especially since school taxes will be rising by 9.86 percent?

Similarly, alternative "adjustment ratios," whereby costs per pupil are modified by the addition of new students, will yield a wide range of figures. In analyzing these costs per pupil, the FEIS claims a benefit of $19,903 from school taxes. Our analysis maintains that there will be a deficit of at least $85,000 for additional expenditures. Of the current $2,471,998 school budget increase, approximately $700,000 is due to rising enrollment. But the FEIS fails to respond to these important cost discrepancies. One is simply referred to another chart or a methodology already identified.

The same tactics were used in responding to comments on the tremendous increase in traffic anticipated from the many developments to border Orchard Street, including Delmar Village. Superficial and evasive answers were given to troubling questions.

And each time this issue is raised, residents are told, although not in official language, of course, "Well, tough luck! Your street runs east and west, so it will have to become a collector road. We'll straighten out the road a little near Fisher Boulevard (no costs are projected) and we'll take some right-of-way to build a bike path."

Most disturbing of all in this FEIS are the statements on the general fiscal impact of the Cedar Ridge development. From pp. 15-16:

"Since the preparation of the DRAFT (DEIS), tax rates and Town/School District budgets have changed. The design of the subdivision will be somewhat changed... (larger lots and fewer homes). Recent court decisions involving assessment... have complicated what should be a relatively clear picture of revenue and expenditures..."

As a result, this FEIS has not recalculated and revised the fiscal impact model presented in the DRAFT and makes no conclusions with respect to fiscal impacts..."

This would appear to be the same evasion that characterized the responses to questions of impact on school and taxes. This is irresponsible.

No FEIS should be accepted as complete unless and until it presents a firm, clear financial picture of revenues and expenditures.

No responsible planning board can fulfill its obligation to taxpayers of this town unless it insists on the completion of its most basic requirement for development—a firm financial foundation. This foundation should be built on the careful study of all challenges to projected figures from concerned citizens. And in all planning decisions the board should remember the needs and concerns of its long-time residents, those who have paid taxes and worked hard to keep Bethlehem attractive. They merit as much consideration as the newcomers. In fact, it would be refreshing if the needs and desire of the present residents were used as a starting point.

PTSA group has designing ideas

The Creative Playground Committee of the Voorheesville PTSA invites the community to a design day workshop on Tuesday, May 8 at 7:30 p.m. at the Voorheesville Elementary School.

An architect from the Robert Leathers Company will be on hand to hear ideas from students, faculty, parents and community members as to what should be included in the playground to be built during the 1990-91 school year.

Students will take part in the planning during the school day.

Still on the subject of the playground a special air band concert will be presented by the elementary school faculty and staff on Friday, May 4 beginning at 7:30 p.m. at the high school. Teacher Dave Burnham will act as master of ceremonies as the group lip syncs to various records. Admission is $2 for adults and $1 for children. Refreshments will be available. All are welcome.

A reminder that the matching fund campaign continues at the Voorheesville Stewart's Shop until May 13. Any money donated to the playground at the shop during that time will be matched by Stewart's.

A correction on last week's column Amilio's Carpets of Voorheesville will continue to donate $1 per yard to the creative playground for carpeting sold to district residents.

Finally the high school band will present a concert in the park at the high school on Saturday, May 12 from 12:30 to 2:30 p.m. All are invited. Proceeds will benefit the creative playground.

Students tuning up

Voorheesville Central School District music students will present spring concerts this month. On Wednesday, May 9 the junior and senior high school bands will present their offering beginning at 7:30 p.m. at the high school.

The junior high band under the direction of Lydia Tobler will play such numbers as "Carolina in the Morning" and "Clarinet Boogie."

The senior high band will play "Festiva," and the stage band will give their renditions of "Buttermilk" and "Top of the World." Both groups are directed by Frank McDermott.

The elementary school concert featuring the grade school bands and choruses will be held on Thursday, May 17, and the junior-senior high school vocal students and choruses will present their concert on Wednesday, May 23. All concerts are free and open to the public.

Library events set

May will be a busy month at the library as Mother's Day and Earth Day are feted. On Monday, May 7, Bridget Ball will present a program entitled "Mothers and Daughters." The singer, guitarist songwriter will focus on the family through the eyes of mothers and daughters. Listening devices and interpretive services will be available for the hearing impaired. The concert is made possible in part by the Upper Hudson Library System.

The following night on Tuesday, May 8, David Diligent, an environmental issues agent for the Cornell Cooperative Extension, will present a program on "Environmental Consumerism." Diligent will speak on the current solid waste crisis and focus on what consumers can do to reduce their garbage and make wise choices for the good of the planet.

On Wednesday, May 9, youngsters and their families are welcome to attend a special Mother's Day Bedtime Story hour beginning at 7 p.m. On Thursday, May 10, a Mother's Day Craft and film program entitled "Posies to Go" will take place at 4 p.m.

That evening at 7 p.m., Peter Luczak and Nancy Parella of Waddell and Reed will present a program on financial planning for those under 40, rescheduled from an earlier date.

Throughout the month, oil paintings of Voorheesville resident Arlene Pafunda will be displayed. After retiring from 25 years of teaching, Pafunda chose "the road not traveled" and joined an oil painting class. This is her premier exhibit.

The library board of directors will meet on Monday, May 6 beginning at 7:30 p.m. at the library. The public is invited.

Plant sale slated

The Heldevue Garden Club will hold its annual plant sale on Saturday, May 12 from 8 a.m. until noon at the Voorheesville Stewart's and from 9 a.m. until 2 p.m. at the Voorheesville Pharmacy. Crafts will also be sold.

Church supper planned

The New Scotland Presbyterian Church will hold its annual roast beef supper on Saturday, May 5 from 4 to 7 p.m. at the church on Route 85. The cost is $7 for adults and $3.50 for children under 12. All are welcome.

Students win art awards

Music in Our Schools month is over, but student winners in the poster contest will remember it for a while to come. Those who took top honors in the art competition were Chris Dutkewitz, first prize; Laura Cotazino, second prize; Maria Mazzeo, third prize; Kristin Person, fourth prize and Megan Longworth, honorable mention.

Special meeting set

There will be a special meeting for parents of sixth grade students on Tuesday, May 8 at the high school beginning at 7:30 p.m. The meeting presented by the guidance department will focus on the junior high curriculum and concentrate on the new Regents guide lines for the age level. All parents of sixth graders are urged to attend this informational meeting. For information, contact the guidance office at 765-3314.

To prepare for junior high, sixth graders from the elementary school will visit Clayton Bouton Junior-Senior High School the week of May 14. Guidance counselor Ellen Sherman is coordinating the program with both schools.

COMMUNITY BETHLEHEM!

Businesses lend a helping hand

Town Supervisor Kenneth J. Ringler Jr. said more Bethlehem businesses have come forth as official business sponsors of Community Bethlehem!

Community Bethlehem! will be a townwide event on Saturday, May 12 encouraging special spring cleanup and beautification, a forum for environmentally related town issues and a community outing to include food and festivities at the park near Slingerlands Volunteer Fire Company on New Scotland Road. The Tour de Trump also will pass there in early afternoon.

"We are very proud to have the business community add their financial support, talents and products to Community Bethlehem!" Ringler said. "To date, we have dozens of community organizations pledging their time and effort toward a more beautiful community, as well as many individuals and families offering to participate. Together with the volunteer organization committee and implementation team, the business support rounds up this effort as a true community venture."

The businesses include: Blackman and Destafano Real Estate, Bryant Asset Protection, Catherine Wagner Minnery Illustration and Designs, Eastern Marketing Specialties, Inc., Owens-Corning, Main Square Shoppes, Brownell Insurance, Delmar Printers, Newsgraphics Printers and Select Environmental Systems. All official sponsors will be featured in the special Community Day! Supplement to be published by The Spotlight, Wednesday, May 9, 1990.

Village budget adopted

The 1990-91 Voorheesville general operating budget was approved unanimously at last week's village board meeting with minor changes.

According to Treasurer Lauren Tedesco, $20,000 had to be budgeted to cover and increase in ANSWERS tipping fees. Tedesco said $18,400 was transferred from the contingency fund to cover the expense. Also, an additional $1,600 in revenues was included from the Town of New Scotland for their participation in the village recreation program.

The total budget is $902,274. The village tax rate remains $1.08 per assessed $1,000.

Candidates to speak

The Voorheesville PTA and New Scotland Kiwanis Club are sponsoring a "Meet the Candidates" forum for Voorheesville School Board candidates Monday, May 7, at 7:30 p.m. in the high school cafeteria.

Incumbent Mary Van Ryn and newcomers Erica Sufrin, John Cole, Peter Murphy, and Edward Lukomski are contending for two school board seats in the May 16 elections. The forum was recently changed from 7 p.m. to 7:30 p.m.

For information, call 765-3313.

Orchard Park petitions village for water

By Mike Larabee

The Orchard Park Neighborhood Association again last week asked the village board of trustees to grant their development temporary emergency water service, and this time they brought a petition of 508 Voorheesville signatures to back them up.

Orchard Park residents, whose homes and methane contaminated wells lie near the intersection of routes 85A and 155, are hoping the petition will persuade the board to break their long-standing policy of no new water taps to anyone outside Voorheesville lines.

According to Joseph Cotazino, president of the association, the signatures demonstrate villagers' support for the hook-up. Cotazino said one argument used in the past to deny the hook-up is that the majority of village residents oppose it.

But Voorheesville Mayor Edward F. Clark said the denial of similar requests by Orchard Park residents over the last three years has not been based on public opinion.

"Every single time we've been asked, we've given as a reason for not doing it the problems it would cause our water system," Clark said. "To my knowledge, we never said it's because it's unpopular. I might have said it's unpopular, but I didn't say that was the reason."

"We have several good reasons that make us hesitate."

Foremost among them, Clark said, is that with a substantial percentage of Voorheesville still undeveloped, the village's water system is nearing capacity. On one or two days during the summer they reach their maximum pumping limit, he said. What happens if there's a major fire? he asked. What about village growth and development?

"We take the position that our supply is limited and our first responsibility is to our current users," said Clark.

Cotazino said that, if necessary, he would try to persuade the town of New Scotland to help fund improvements to the village pumping facility in order to hook-up 67 Orchard Park development homes. But he does not deny he is asking Voorheesville to make a sacrifice on Orchard Park's behalf.

"Anyone who said to us as we were walking the petition 'We still have 45 percent of the village left to develop,'" he said. "We said to them, 'Can't you please develop 30 percent and consider Orchard Park to be 15 percent of that 45 percent for now?'"

The variable in all this is the word "temporary." In exchange for the emergency hook-up, the town of New Scotland will let Voorheesville tap into a proposed water district centered on wells in the Galesi Group's Hilton Road development. But no one has said for certain — to Clark and the village trustee's satisfaction — when, or even if, Tall Timbers' water will be available.

"The Tall Timber property has an abundance of water on it," Cotazino said. "Whether it's Galesi that has to develop it or whether it's the town of New Scotland, someday that water's going to be developed."

"Overall, my question about that is, where is it?" said Clark.

"I need something substantial to indicate that it is a viable source of water in the near future. And again, I'm only one vote."

"You can't simply say that if you ever get one you'll let me use it. I would have to know what the likelihood is."

Trustee Edward Donohue wanted to know what happens if for some reason Tall Timbers' water never went on-line. "Once they're on there's no way they're going to be taken off," he said after last week's meeting.

"I can't say for everybody that if the village ran into problems, yeah I'd turn my tap off," said Cotazino. "For myself, if it meant helping them out at a later date? Yes, I think I would."

While presenting the petition, Cotazino commended village residents' for "putting politics aside" and thinking on a "person to person" level.

"The opinions of the people of Voorheesville are important to us obviously," Clark replied. "But we're going to put politics aside too. We're going to do what's best for the Voorheesville water system, not necessarily what is popular."

The preamble to the petition reads: "We the undersigned .... have no objection to .... providing an emergency temporary water hook-up to the residents of the Orchard Park subdivision."

The trustees felt it was appropriate to telephone random petition signees to see how the issue was presented to them. They were concerned that the question was represented as a can't lose proposition for Voorheesville, they said.

"It's like asking people if they want to let other people live," said trustee Richard Langford.

Clark said last weekend that most of the people he contacted turned out to be unaware of the village's water limitations.

"Generally what I found was that they were just sympathetic to the plight of the people over in Orchard Park as they perceive it," Clark said.

"They had no idea of any of the limitations of our system. They simply were looking at one side of the equation and they were looking at it through the eyes of the people of Orchard Park."

Cotazino said the petition was "not presented as a one-sided thing."

"If they want I'll even help them call people on that petition and they can tell you how we presented this," he said.

Four vie for RCS school board seats

By Rachel King

Next Wednesday, voters in the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk School District will elect three new school board members.

Vying for the vacancies are William B. Craft of Selkirk, Maryanne Kustyn of Feura Bush, Barry Jones of Ravena and Mark Sengenberger of Feura Bush.

Craft, facility planner with the state Department of Correctional Services, feels that his perspective outside education would be an asset. As facility planner he oversees budgets to make sure money is appropriated for specific projects.

And, as an engineer with a background in building design, he is particularly concerned with the issue of classroom space.

Craft terms the rejection of the school expansion bond issue as "unfortunate." He feels that there is a need for improvements in the libraries, improvements in athletic facilities and other specific changes, and would like to see the bond issue "resolved, the sooner the better."

Maryanne Kustyn says a general concern for education is her motivation. In the past, that concern led her to volunteer as an English tutor to Livingston Junior High students as part of Project Live, designed to help students having difficulty in school.

She is a computer programmer/analyst with the state Division for Youth with experience in accounting and inventory control. She now has a child entering elementary school.

Kustyn stresses communication as a way of resolving problems.

A member of a family with a strong union background, she says, "I can work as a liaison to the teachers." The board must gain "an understanding of what (the teachers) want" and take their views into consideration while making decisions, she said, since the teachers have the first-hand knowledge of the students' classroom experience.

She would like to see regular meetings between the board and faculty members.

The issue of space is responsible for Barry Jones's desire to run. As a parent, he was concerned about the district's decision to move fifth grade students to the junior high to create space in the elementary schools. Dismissing as "uninformative" the parent meetings he attended, he considered sending his children to private schools, then decided to continue sending them to the local public schools at their request.

He still wanted to "do something," and that was "the next best thing, which is to get involved."

A fundamental problem, according to Jones, is the lack of communication between administration and faculty. A lack of teacher influence in decision-making has created a situation which he claims is "sort of a dictatorship."

Jones' professional experience, he says, "directly relates to school." He is a building manager with the state Dormitory Authority, which builds college dormitories, gymnasiums and hospitals. His duties include managing and projecting 17 budgets, as well as managing people. In addition he is involved with the maintenance of the Authority's buildings. The normal tasks of running a state facility, he says, "can be compared to the running of a school."

Finally, he believes that he can best contribute to the board by not allowing himself to be unduly "influenced by other people." He said that in the past he has "seen good people go to the school board, and back down." Instead, he says, he will "go with what (he) believe(s)" out of concern for "the well-being of the children."

Mark Sengenberger is the only candidate with past experience on the board. He served three years, two as board president.

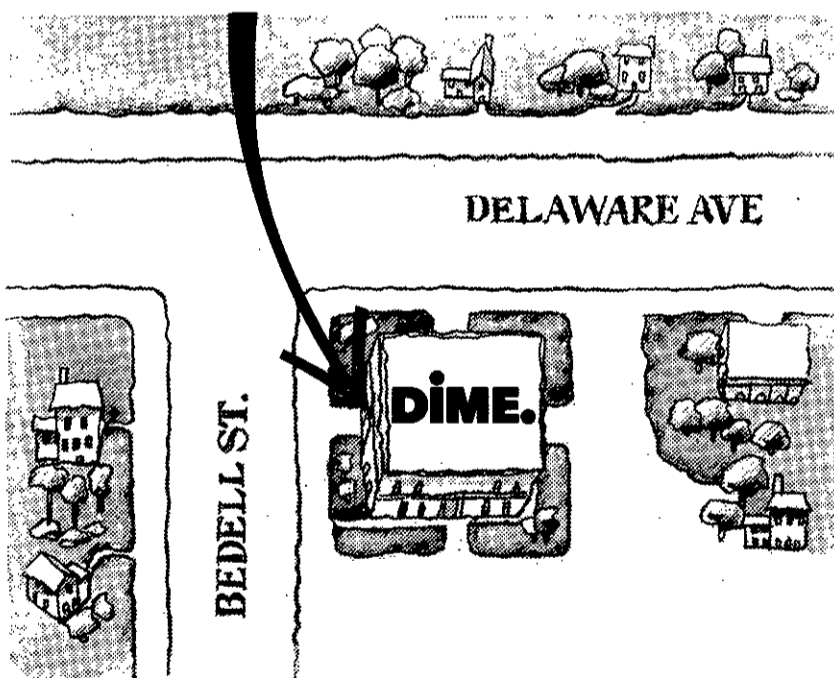

He described his experience as "very positive." Long active in community affairs, he was involved in the formation of the Hudson Park and Feura Bush neighborhood associations. Sengenberger said he became interested in serving on the school board because he felt that education was "one of the most important areas in which (he) could spend (his) time."

Yet there remains "unfinished business" dating to the time of his tenure. The district, for example, is reviewing and updating curriculum and has addressed faculty issues. Sengenberger believes that the faculty and the administration have a "good relationship" and he wishes to encourage teacher involvement in decision-making.

Among the decisions: how to resolve what Sengenberger describes as the "acute" problem of classroom space. He says that the short-term solution of moving fifth grade students to the middle school has not ended the crisis. Claiming that it is "a credit to the staff" that the schools have been able to cope with their space problems thus far, he believes that now "the board has an obligation to present the severity of the problem" to the voters.

Grade shifts highlight RCS budget

By Bob Hagyard

"Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk has a mission: to develop basic knowledge and promote learning as a lifelong process. And that's what drives our budget."

That was William Schwartz, RCS superintendent, explaining what drove the district's 1990-91 preliminary budget 9.86 percent above this year's $16,020,513 package. Next Monday, the school board will consider adoption of the $17.6 million budget for the May 16 annual election ballot.

Enrollment is expected to rise 8 percent in grades K-4, Schwartz said. Two bond issues to create more classroom space were defeated by voters last year.

Passage of the budget, Schwartz said, means juggling elementary level classes as follows:

- All fifth grade classes will be housed in the junior high school building.
- A.W. Becker Elementary in Selkirk will house kindergarten through grade four classes for students from the northern portion of the district.
- Ravena Elementary will house grades pre-kindergarten and one only.
- Pieter B. Coeymans Elementary will house students in grades two through four.

"We are budgeting an 8 percent increase in transportation costs," Schwartz said, "although that might be offset by less travel for some children."

At the elementary level, the district would add one guidance position. This district will also phase in a "developmental" approach to learning, as recommended by a district task force that studied the issue of "at-risk" children, the superintendent said. The developmental advances will be phased in over the next two to three years, he said.

Under "staff development," the budget package provides for training in team teaching techniques.

Schwartz would like to see more interdisciplinary courses taught in the RCS schools and the proposed budget will include a larger figure for curriculum development as a result. Pointing to less-than-spectacular standardized test scores in math and science, he also hopes the faculty will develop "a more hands-on approach" in teaching these subjects.

Schwartz also looks to a new approach to administration-faculty relations.

"The schools are not engaging teachers in decision-making," he said, pointing out that the problem is common to public schools nearly everywhere. "There is a trust element here. We are looking at more collaboration. The 'factory' model of organization doesn't work any more, and we are looking at an approach along the Effective Schools model," Schwartz said, referring to a shared decision-making model adopted by a number of area schools.

Debt service in 1990-91 will total

$728,200, about 4 percent of the proposed package.

The school board vote on the package will take place during next Monday's regularly scheduled meeting, which will begin at 7:30 p.m. Voters would then consider the budget at the annual district election is scheduled for May 16, from 2 to 9 p.m. at the senior high school cafeteria.

District voters will also choose three school board members (see related story Page 12) and consider two bond issue propositions.

Under Proposition 1, totaling $325,000, the district would purchase four 60-passenger buses, two 20-passenger buses and two eight-passenger suburban units. The vehicles would be eligible for state aid up to 90 percent of the purchase cost. The aid money would be receivable during the 1991-92 school year.

Under Prop 2, the district would spend a maximum $55,000 to replace the electrical transformer at the high school.

Views On Dental Health

Dr. Thomas H. Abele, D.M.D.

FLUORIDE'S FIRST BIG TEST

In 1945, New York's State health department conducted one of the first and most rigorously controlled research projects in medical history. Teams of dentists examined the teeth of thousands of school children in the Hudson River cities of Newburgh and Kingston which both had fluoride-free water. In both towns, they found the same high incidence of tooth decay. Then on May 2, 1945 a small feeder machine was turned on in Newburgh's filtration plant; from that moment on, Newburgh's water contained 1.2 parts of fluoride per million.

Over the next ten years, doctors and dentists repeatedly checked the children medically and dentally. When the decade ended, they had found only one difference. In Newburgh, children between six and ten—who had been drinking fluoridated water all their lives—had 60% fewer decayed, missing or filled teeth than youngsters from the same age group in Kingston.

Today, fluoridation is accepted and endorsed as a major public health measure in preventing tooth decay by virtually every scientific and health organization in the country.

Daily Grind closes

The Daily Grind recently vacated its Main Square location after a Town Court justice ruled in favor of plaza ownership on an issue of rent payments, according to David Bacon, attorney for the coffee-specialty-shop proprietor, Lee Cohen.

Bacon said Daily Grind left voluntarily following Justice Roger M. Fritts' ruling, which effectively gave Main Square owners James Breen, Thomas Corrigan, and Dennis Corrigan the power to evict the business.

Bacon said the Fritts decision leaves open the possibility of a Daily Grind countersuit on the grounds Main Square does not contain the number of retail stores that were promised when the lease was signed.

"Our position is that the lease was signed with the understanding that it was to be a shopping center with retail specialty stores," said Bacon. "Why should they be paying retail rent if it wasn't going to be retail center?"

"We had a lease with them, we said they did not comply with the lease, and the court agreed," said Dennis Corrigan. He declined to comment further because of possible future litigation.

The shop opened in 1987.

The retail business has been amalgamated in the original Daily Grind on Lark Street in Albany, and the cafe has been relocated into expanded quarters there.

Track Eagles win first meets of the season

By Michael Kagan

The Bethlehem Central track teams enjoyed their first wins of the season last week.

For the boys' team it was the best week in more than a year, a homewin versus Shaker last Tuesday, 93-78, and a fifth-place finish out of 14 teams in the annual Albany Academy Invitational Saturday. During the Shaker meet, they also lost a close one to Mohonasen, 95-85.

VC netters down 'Ford

By Kevin Taylor

Just as the Voorheesville tennis team had taken the punishment in their first match against Academy, they handed it out to Waterford last Friday.

The Blackbirds evened their league record at 1-1 with a 6-1 domination of the visiting Fordians. Coach Thomas Kurkjian tried different combinations in the lineup, putting junior Matt Hladun into the No. 1 position, dropping Tom Kurkjian to No. 2, and moving sophomore Kevin Relyea from No. 4 to No. 3 while demoting Aaron Luczak to No. 4. Sophomore Brian Goldstein replaced Dave Lancor at No. 5. Hladun defeated Jeff Giroux, 6-4, 6-3, in a match that was not that close. Tommy Kurkjian overpowered Dave Sunkes at No. 2, 6-2, 6-0. Relyea came out looking strong, winning the first set easily at 6-2. It appeared that Relyea tired midway through the second set but managed to hang on for a 7-5 win. Aaron Luczak needed three sets to dispose of Mike Hurst, 7-5, 5-7, 6-2. At No. 5, Goldstein lost his singles debut to Ed Stanley, 6-4, 6-2.

Kurkjian was surprised by the play of the doubles team of senior Ben Schwartz and sophomore Chris Cass, who played in place of Schwartz' normal partner, fellow senior Ryan Brennan, who was not in attendance for Friday's match. Cass and Schwartz didn't render a single game to their opponents enroute to a 6-0, 6-0 victory. The Blackbirds won the second doubles match by forfeit.

The Blackbirds look forward to keep their streak alive this week as they host Cohoes today (Wednesday), then travel to Ravena on Monday before returning home for matches against Schalmont on Tuesday and a rematch with Academy next Wednesday.

Versus Shaker, BC got off to a good start in the 3200-meter relay, the first event, by winning in a time of 8:53.2. The team was Matt Dugan (2:12.6 split), Justin Hilson (2:16.3), Kevin Freeman (2:18.2), and Ken Watson (2:08.1). Craig Christian won the 100-meter dash in 11.1 and the 200-meter dash in 23.2. Garry Hurd won the 3200-meter run easily with a time of 10:38.0. The star 1600 relay team of Watson, Eric Horowitz, Dugan, and Christian also won again with 3:43.3. In the field events, Dan Dunn soared 11 feet, 6 inches in the pole vault to win and Scott Willi jumped 6-0, also adding a win.

BC defeated Mohonasen by 10 points in the field events, but could not hang on to the lead when the running events were added in.

On Saturday, with 92-plus degree temperatures and a burning and bright sun, good performances were much easier for the Eagles to get than shade or cold water. BC lost only to the much larger Big 10 teams and scored 45 points in finishing fifth. CBA finished fourth with 61 and Red Hook High came in sixth and had 34.

Garry Hurd led Bethlehem by blowing every one away for a 3200-meter win in 10:25.6. The second place time was almost 15 seconds slower at 10:40.3. Christian came in second by inches in both the 100-meter dash (10.9) and the 200-meter dash (22.6). In both races, the winner had the same time Christian did. Watson, running the 1600-meter run for the first time this year, finished second in 4:46.1.

Dunn tied for third in the pole vault, going 11-6. The 3200- and 1600-meter relay teams also turned in good performances.

Meanwhile, the girls' track team scored its first victory in a one-on-one home meet last Thursday against Mohonasen, 88-60. Kathy Saba led the team, winning the 800-meter run in 2:27.1 and the 3000, in which she was the only runner, in 13:18.3. The 3200-meter relay of Stacey Rosenblum, Danielle Hecht, Sara Clash and Kelly Walsh won with a time of 11:03.2. Clash also won the 1500 in 5:42.1 while the 400 relay of Drozd, Sodergren, Simone Brewer, and Meghan Beyer also won in :57.0. Jen Fisk ran a 65.9 400-meter dash to win and Brewer won the 200 meter dash in 29.1. The 1600-meter relay of Fisk, Hecht, Gisotti and McGrath won in 4:55.2. Beyer won the shot put, putting 296 1/2. Meghan Connelly won both the long and triple jumps with 13-10 and 31-4. Drozd won the high jump, going 4-4 in the air.

BC will renovate fields one at a time

By Bob Hagyard

Renovation work on the junior varsity field at Bethlehem Central High School will begin immediately under a revised work schedule, according to Superintendent Leslie R. Loomis.

Work is expected to be completed by July, Loomis said, and will give youth baseball leagues beyond the Little League level a second field on which to play. At present, the baseball diamond at the middle school is the only playable field. It is used by school teams at the varsity, jayvee, freshman and modified levels as well as four youth leagues, creating scheduling problems.

Funding for the renovation work will be covered under the $11.6 million school reconstruction bond issue approved by district voters in February 1989. The work will kick off a three-year renovation of all fields at the high school.

"We would renovate the (jayvee) infield and outfield," said Loomis, "then use it as an 'outlet' all-purpose field. Then we would renovate all the other fields in rotation, going towards Delaware Avenue, as the jayvee field gets used as an auxiliary field."

Total cost for the renovation work will be $347,997, said Bruce Houghton, district supervisor of buildings and grounds.

Neal Moylan calls it quits

Neal L. Moylan had decided to take it easy.

Moylan, 73, former state commissioner of commerce and a familiar sight at the public information window at Bethlehem Town Hall, has given up his duties as town public information officer as well as his planning board seat. His resignation, accepted by the town board last week, takes effect after Friday.

A diabetic, Moylan found it "difficult to get to Town Hall" in recent months due to illness. His successor will be appointed by the town board.

As public information officer, he edited the Bethlehem Report, the town newsletter. He took the job in 1983 after Cissy Stasiuk had resigned the position, one year after his own retirement as vice president for marketing and corporate affairs at Key Bank, N.A.

"I enjoyed the work, enjoyed working with the staff at Town Hall, a pleasant, friendly group," Moylan said at his Kensington Court residence. Membership on the planning board, he went on, "put me in touch with many people in the town. We had several interesting discussions, where people didn't agree. And many interesting applications."

An unabashed proponent of development in the town, he listed the approval of Delmar Village as the town's major regulatory accomplishment during his time in office. The 1988 rejection of a proposed psychiatric center on Rt. 9W, on the other hand, was the worst setback.

"I regretted that one," he said. "It could have meant some money investment, taxes and jobs — just the things you want to bring into a town. Why I wanted to be on the planning board in the first place." Moylan will continue to serve on the town's Industrial Development Agency.

Bethlehem Babe Ruth opens 1990 season

Bethlehem Babe Ruth opened its season last Thursday with two games. While Houghtaling's Market was beating GE Selkirk, 9-4, at Bethlehem Middle School, the Yankees were beating the Mets, 8-4, at the Ravena Village Park.

Chris Pearson was the winning pitcher for Houghtaling's while Chris Ryan of GE Selkirk had the only extra base hit of the game, a double. Dan Gallagher powered the Yankees with a three-run homer in helping Eric Powell to his first victory of the season.

On Friday night in an inter-division game JJ. Phillips beat the Ravens Twins, 5-1, with John Meade getting his first win of the year. Glover of the Twins had a pair of singles. The game at Bethlehem between Ted Danz and Owens-Corning was called because of darkness.

On Saturday, Davies Office Refurbishing whitewashed

Houghtaling's Market, 13-0.

Garver was the winning pitcher while Macaluso went 3 for 4 for the winners. No report was filed by the managers of PIA or BFI in the other Saturday game.

Standings as of April 29 are North: Houghtaling's 1-1, Owens-Corning 0-0, Ted Danz 0-0, GE Selkirk 0-1. Central: JJ. Phillips 1-0, Davies 1-0, BFI n/a, PIA n/a. South: Yankees 1-0, Mets 0-1, Twins 0-1.

Dolfin signups

Registration for the Delmar Dolfin Swim Club summer program will take place Tuesday, May 8, and Wednesday, May 9, from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. at the high school pool, during the town's competitive swim hours. The summer season begins with practice on May 8 and culminates the weekend of Aug. 10 with an invitational swim meet at Elm Avenue Park. On Saturday, June 9, the Dolfin will host the annual out-of-shape swim meet at the high school pool, which last year drew some 200 swimmers.

The Delmar Dolfin Swim Club is affiliated with U.S. Swimming, the national federation which governs amateur swimming, and is dedicated to promoting competitive swimming among local youth. The club offers a safe, supportive environment for coaching and instruction, development in technique and endurance, and competition in a variety of contexts. Dolfin membership is open to residents of the Town of Bethlehem who are older than 6 and younger than 18, and who are able to swim 25 yards. Participation also requires registration in the Town of Bethlehem competitive swimming program and payment of the town fees.

Additional information will be available during registration hours, or by calling 439-7704 or 439-4116.

Car theft solved, Albany man arrested

Bethlehem police arrested an Albany man last week for the December theft of an automobile from the parking lot of Bethlehem Terrace apartments.

Police said Ve Thanh Nguyen, 27, of Lark Drive, Albany, was arrested Tuesday, April 17, for third-degree grand larceny, a felony, for the alleged theft of a 1988 Honda Accord belonging to a resident of the apartment complex. According to police, the value of the vehicle has been estimated at $18,000.

The car had been recovered previously by Colonie police, according to Bethlehem officers.

Nguyen was arraigned before Town Justice Roger M. Fritts and remanded to Albany County Jail pending County court action.

SAFER meeting scheduled

A Selkirk Association For Every Resident meeting will be held at Selkirk Firehouse No. 1 on May 7 at 7:30 p.m. Everyone is invited.

Arrest made in Days Inn robbery

A New York City man was arrested last weekend on four felony counts in connection with a March 22 robbery at Days Inn on Route 9W at the Bethlehem and Albany border.

According to Bethlehem police, Victor Manuel Quintero, 22, of the Bronx was charged with two counts of second degree assault and one count of second degree robbery and criminal possession of stolen property, all felonies, for the alleged strong-arm theft of over $600 in cash from a Days Inn guest. Quintero was staying at the inn at the time.

Quintero was charged with the second count of felony assault for allegedly kicking an officer while struggling with police. He was also charged with misdemeanor resisting arrest and misdemeanor criminal impersonation, police said.

Quintero was arraigned before Town Justice Roger M. Fritts and remanded to Albany County Jail pending County court action.

Old records added to library collection

The bicentennial commission of the Town of Bethlehem recently announced the addition to the town library of the microfilmed minutes of town board meetings dating back to 1794 when the minutes were first recorded. The original handwritten pages, formerly held in the Albany County Hall of Records, are now available on microfilm through the offices of the executive director of the Albany County Hall of Records and the Bethlehem Town Clerk.

Sheriff's awards night planned for May 4

The Albany County Sheriff's Department will hold its first Corrections/Law Enforcement Awards Night May 4 at the Polish-American Citizens Club, 110 Commerce Ave., Albany.

Tickets may be purchased at the Albany County Court House, county jail, or the Voorheesville substation. The event is open to the public.

Bethlehem orders limits on hunting

By Bob Hagyard

A ban on hunting and hunting devices on Town of Bethlehem property will be limited to municipal parkland.

The town board approved the measure at its April 25 meeting. Prohibited are hunting activities, including the possession of "hunting devices" such as firearms, bows and arrows, and traps at Elm Avenue Park, Henry Hudson Park, and the proposed pocket parks in North Bethlehem and South Bethlehem.

Law enforcement officials and state Department of Environmental Conservation personnel are exempt. The fine will be $100 per first-time offense, up to $250 for repeat offenses.

Two months ago David Austin, administrator of parks and recreation, urged that the ban include all town-owned lands, including the 60-acre property around the highway garage off Elm Avenue South after picking up arrows and shotshells from the Elm Avenue Park playground, fitness trail and soccer fields.

The exemption for EnCon personnel was requested by John Renkavinsky, Region 4 supervisor of natural resources. Renkavinsky, who described the local deer population as "out of control," suggested that a nuisance-control season, a limited post-season gun hunt, may be necessary.

"DEC has offered us no assistance in dealing with the deer problem," Bethlehem Supervisor Kenneth Ringler said last week. A letter to Renkavinsky inquiring about state plans received an ambiguous reply, Ringler said.

Women's organization holds garage sale

Zonta, a professional women's service organization involved in community service and outreach, will hold a large garage sale on Saturday, May 12 from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. The sale will be held at 165 Adams Street, Delmar.

All proceeds from this sale will be returned to the community through organizations such as the Albany Girls Club, Next Step, Arbor House, Visiting Nurses Association, and AMCH Nursing Scholarship Fund.

Speaker to discuss nursing home choices

Betty Price, a community referral nurse from the Veterans Administration Medical Center, will speak to the Caregivers Group of St. Thomas Church in Delmar in the school library on May 3 at 7:30 p.m. She will discuss the choice of a nursing home for a family member — what to look for, how facilities differ and the varying levels of care offered.

Build your business

"Sharpening the Tools That Work" a series of four two hour seminars designed to inform, educate, and support small business executives in the Capital Region, will be held on consecutive Thursdays beginning May 3. The seminars will take place from 7:45 to 9:45 at the Days Inn, Rt. 9W.

Rountable lunch set

James D. Meindl, senior vice president for academic affairs and provost of Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute, will speak at the May 9 Roundtable Luncheon, at 12:30 p.m. in the third floor court room of the Old Federal Building, SUNY Plaza.

Zoners okay Domermuth shed

By Mike Larabee

The New Scotland Zoning Board of Appeals last week granted a temporary variance to Domermuth Petroleum for an eight-by-eight-by-eight foot pump house needed to clean apparent soil and ground water contamination at their North Road property.

Domermuth specializes in cleaning up oil and gas spills of petroleum companies.

According to Richard Hall, permits manager for Domermuth, the state Department of Environmental Conservation mandated the installation of the pump house. The structure will hold pumping equipment as well as carbon filters to remove impurities from ground water.

In December, state inspectors discovered hydrocarbon contamination under a former barn site on the Domermuth lot. After a Jan. 9 meeting, the town planning board referred the matter to the zoning board with the recommendation that it be approved.

The zoning board approved the 12-month variance based on Hall's assurances that the structure would be temporary. Though EnCon has authority over the purification process, he said, he was certain the shed would be dismantled within two years.

Domermuth legally can ask for one 12-month extension after the initial variance term expires.

In other business, the board approved a variance for Dave Ingraham of Clarksville South Road. Ingraham asked permission to construct a 20-by-11-foot solar sun-room addition to his house. Ingraham's non-conforming two-and-one-half-acre lot predates three-acre zoning.

Chiropractic Adjustments Restore Health

The spinal column consists of 24 moveable vertebral bone segments and a pelvic structure made up of a sacrum and two iliac bones. The only place in the human body that is totally encased in bone is the central nervous system (brain and spinal cord). All of the great nerve trunks emit through the openings between the moveable vertebrae. The vital mental impulse within man, is carried by these nerve trunks from the brain to the various organs, muscles and tissues of the body.

For every effect, you must have a cause; that is a fundamental law of physics. If a person is ill, then the condition of disease, regardless of the name applied to it, is in fact an effect for which there must be a cause.

The chiropractic premise is that the cause of dis-ease is due to a malaligned bone called vertebral subluxation, which produces pressure upon nerves and thus interferes with the transmission of vital mental impulse.

The chiropractic objective is to determine the vertebral subluxation that interferes with the transmission of this vital life-force and through proper adjustment by hand, to correct the vertebral subluxation so that the interference is removed, thus permitting the restoration of health.

BC softballers still seek first win

By Michael Kagan

Still searching for its first win, the Bethlehem Central varsity softball team lost three games last week to fall to 0-6.

The Mohonasen Warriors scored in every inning except the seventh to win Monday at home, 12-3. Bethlehem was led at the plate by Brenda Fryer, who had a double and a single to drive in two runs. BC struck out 11 times against Warrior pitcher Debby Jankowski.

After a Wednesday home loss to Scotia, Colonie won on Friday, 11-8. The highlight for BC was freshman Linda Smith's homerun. Smith also had a single.

Coach Ann Medici said the Eagle's play last week showed "improvement." However, she added that "we need to keep our heads in the game the whole time. During the middle innings, especially the fifth and sixth, we start to make a lot of errors. We start missing easy fly balls and throwing to the wrong base... a lot of mental errors."

Colonie scored eight of its 11 runs in the fifth and sixth innings. "Our hitting is fine, our defense is our weakness right now," Medici said.

Since the coach does not use set starting positions, she has no major changes planned to try and get the team rolling, except a few possible lineup changes.

On Monday, BC was home against Burnt Hills and will travel to Shaker today (Wednesday) and then to Niskayuna on Friday. All games begin at 4 p.m.

Medici said it is "hard to tell" how well the Eagles will do in those games and that she and the team will "just take one game at a time."

Baseball Eagles soar in Gold

By John Bellizzi III

More than the temperature was soaring last week as Bethlehem Central High School's varsity baseball team defeated four opponents, including three Gold Division rivals to lift BC to 5-1 in the Suburban Council (8-1 overall).

That record keeps the Eagles well on top of the Gold Division going into this week's attempts to extend their winning streak past the five-game mark that last week's wins over Niskayuna, Burnt Hills, Colonie and Gloversville set.

Last Monday, Alex Hackman pitched a shutout for the Eagles as they shelled Niskayuna, 17-0. Niskayuna managed three hits off Hackman, who between that game and Friday's against Colonie pitched 11 shutout innings last week. Among Bethlehem's hits were a single and a double by Matt Quatraro and two hits and three RBI from Scott Hodge.

A four-run first inning lifted Bethlehem past Burnt Hills in a 6-2 ballgame last week. Jamie Mizener (4-0) went the distance for the win. Craig Weinert starred offensively for Bethlehem, going 2-for-2 with three runs scored and three stolen bases. Quatraro had a triple and two RBI and Hodge had two singles.

Junior Scott Fish earned his first pitching decision of the season as the Eagles shut out Gloversville, 5-0, in a non-league makeup contest last Thursday. Fish, who struck out nine and allowed only five hits, "pitched an excellent game," according to BC coach Ken Hodge.

Andre Cadieux batted in two of Bethlehem's runs with a single and a double. Al Greenhalgh had two hits, Quatraro an RBI triple, and Hodge an RBI double.

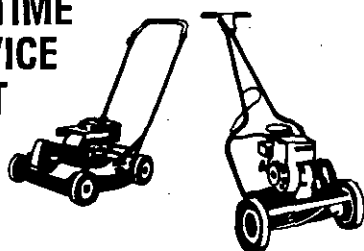

The Eagles rallied from behind to defeat Gold Division opponent Colonie last Friday, 4-3. Bethlehem trailed 3-0 going into the seventh inning. Matt Dennin walked, followed by a single from Weinert. Hodge drew a walk to lead the bases, and Keparutis got the Eagles on the board with a single, scoring Dennin and Weinert. Hodge scored the tying run on a wild pitch and Keparutis came in on another wild pitch to clinch the victory.

Keparutis started on the mound, lasting three innings. Coach Hodge called on Hackman for relief, who shut out the Raiders in the last four innings.

This week's Suburban Council schedule called for a home game Monday against Guilderland and the rest of the week against Blue Division teams: Saratoga this afternoon at East Field, and Shenendehowa at home on Friday. A road non-league game with Oneonta is in store for the Eagles on Saturday.

Run for Women has local ties

By Cathi Anne M. Cameron

More than 2,000 women have a date with Freihofer's this weekend, and it has nothing to do with chocolate chip cookies.

The twelfth annual Freihofer's Run for Women TAC USA five kilometer National Championship and 10 kilometer races get underway this Saturday, May 5, at the Empire State Plaza, with entrants from 35 states, including Capital District residents, elite Olympians and world record holders.

As of the entry deadline April 27, 1645 runners were registered in the five kilometer race, and 455 in the 10 kilometer race. "Barring Joan Benoit or the Governor's wife, I'd say that's it," said Race Administrative Director Jim Burnes.

All joking aside, Burnes pointed out that this is a rare chance to see first-rate athletes in the Capital District.

"These are not just the best college athletes, or semi-pro. These are Olympic and internationally-ranked, record-setting women athletes at the top of their field," he said.

Burnes is especially excited about the possibility of a new world's record being set in Albany for the 5K race.

"The current record on the roads is 15:19. Lynn Jennings, two-time winner) went through that mark in 15:13 for the first half of a 10K recently. She is very primed, and I think she may do it even faster here," he said.

Burnes added that entrant Patti Sue Plumer has run the 5K in 14:59 indoors, and could challenge Jennings. Defending champion Judi St. Hilaire is scheduled to compete, but according to Burnes, she is committed to a large NIKE Mother's Day race in Washington, and her attendance has not been confirmed.

Several local programs were designed in conjunction with the Run for Women.

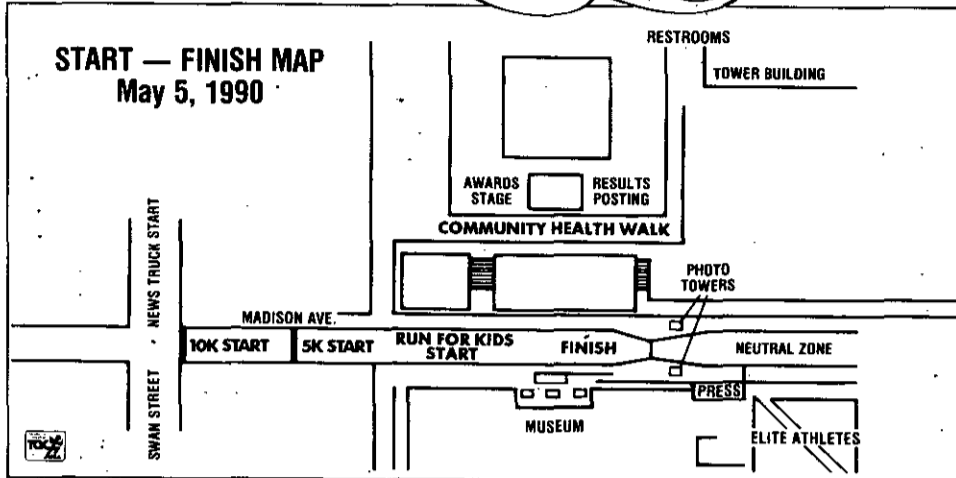

On Friday evening at the Holiday Inn Turf in Colonie, Francie Larrieu-Smith, one of the top distance runners in the world, and Cathy O'Brien, Seoul Olympic medalist, will appear courtesy of Runners World magazine and New Balance athletic wear.

Their presentation on balancing job, home and competition, will be held poolside from 7 to 8 p.m., followed by a question and answer period. The symposium is free of charge and open to the public.

Burnes is also encouraged by the results of a four-week training program sponsored by the Run for Women in conjunction with area schools.

Run for Women

The schedule and routes, starting with the Community Health Walk at 8:30 a.m., and ending with the Run for Kids and awards ceremony.

Nearly 100 schools, including Elmsmere, Latham Ridge, Voorheesville, Latham Road, Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk, Shaker Ridge and Loudonville Christian elementary schools, along with Bethlehem Middle School participated in a four-week physical education training program.

Designed by Cathy Cleary and Sandy Morley of Guiderland's Farnsworth Middle School, in cooperation with Shaker High School Athletic Director Dave Herman (whose wife is a two-time 5K champion), the program started with two to three minutes of activity, working up to a 10 minute program.

"It included fun runs, stretching, chases — a little taste of the sport," Burnes explained. "We had really good feedback from the educators, and the kids seemed very interested. Since we constantly hear how our general fitness is declining, we're thrilled. Anything we can do to help is a step in the right direction."

Burnes noted that Freihofer's is also sponsoring a "Run for Kids" on the same track as the professional race. The event will start at noon with a 50 meter race for children four-years-old and under, and

Moving with Kuperberg Morris at Siena

The Kuperberg Morris Movement Theatre, an internationally-acclaimed movement company with local origins has been in residence at Siena College during the past fine arts season.

Formerly "Not Just Mime," the company has been in residence throughout the academic year. Headed by Rich Kuperberg and Ann Morris of West Sand Lake, they have toured world-wide, including performances in Canada, France, Mexico, Barbados and across the United States. When not touring, they operate the Performing Arts Loft, a movement theatre school in Albany. Classes in corporeal mime, modern dance and comedic movement are offered, as well as mime-dance workshops.

As part of the Arts Education Performances for Schools series, Kuperberg Morris will perform at 10 a.m. May 4 and 11 at Siena's Foy theater.

These shows will feature four repertory works, background on the elements of shape, energy and time, and a question-and-answer session for kindergarten through sixth grade students.

"We want to give people the experience of being moved and intrigued," said Morris. "We want to touch both their minds and their hearts."

She explained that their works do not follow a formal story line, but rather display abstract emotions and images that each audience can experience on its own level.

In addition to the performances, Kuperberg served as a mime-movement instructor in the college's acting program as part of the residency.

The group, which also features Richard Larson and Christy Funch, is funded by the New York State Council on the Arts and the National Endowment for the Arts.

Kuperberg has been in the movement theatre field for 10 years, and founded the Kuperberg Morris group as a duet in 1981. He has trained in Paris with Etienne Decroux and Steve and Corine Wasson, in Montreal with Jean Asselin, Denise Boulanger and George Molnar, and in New York City with Jennifer Muller and the Works, the Joe Limon Company, Sophie Maslow, Bond Street Theater and Avner the Eccentric.

Before joining the company in 1981, Morris served as head of the dance program at the State University of New York at Albany for six years. She has studied in New York with the Limon Company, Muller, Paul Sanasardo, Twyla Tharp, Steve Paxton, Mary Fulkerson and Al Pessio, and in Paris with Decroux and the Wassons.

She was selected as a movement specialist with the National Endowment for the Arts Artist-in-the-Schools program.

Tickets for this week's performances are $5 for adults, $3 for children under 12 and senior citizens, and $2 per person for school groups of 20 or more.

Tickets are available by contacting the Siena box office at 783-2527. Siena students, faculty and staff will be admitted free of charge.

The group, including Christy Funch, Rich Kuperberg, Ann Morris and Richard Larson, will perform May 4 and 11 at Siena's Foy Theater. They also operate the performing Arts Loft in Albany. For information on the performance, call the Siena box office at 783-2527.

Run

will conclude with a mile race for 11 and 12-year-olds.

"Just to get the kids out there — see them cross the finish line," Burnes said. "Every kid gets to wear the number one, and we have pens, cookies and refreshments for all of them."

There will also be mimes, bands and other entertainment throughout the day. Burnes expects upwards of 1,000 kids to enter — three times the amount that started the first Run for Kids three years ago.

"I hope the people registered have a good time, I hope lots of people turn out to see them, and I hope we have a record-setting day all around," Burnes concluded.

For information on the various races and activities, call 273-0267.

Ball concert

Myths About Athletes and Drugs

Myth 1: Athletes are too busy to use drugs.

Athletes use drugs as much, and in some instances more, than others. While athletes may be slightly less inclined to use cigarettes or marijuana, some observers feel they are more likely to use hard liquor, beer and wine.

Myth 2: Only performance counts

Some feel good performance on the part of an athlete is sufficient proof that they're not doing drugs. In fact, such an attitude prevents others from recognizing warning signs and dealing with a drug problem before it becomes an addiction.

Myth 3: Athletes associate with the "good" kids and therefore don't use drugs.

Alcohol and other drug use is prevalent in today's society and athletes are subject to the same (if not more) pressure to use as other kids.

Myth 4: It's OK to drink off-season.

Many a dedicated athlete who would never think of touching a drop of alcohol during his or her season, has no qualms about indulging in alcohol and other drugs off-season. The harmful effects of alcohol and other drugs do not change with the time of year.

Myth 5: Athletes using drugs are no different from other students.

While athletes are the same as the rest of the student population in many ways, there are some critical ways in which they are different. Athletes are given a great deal of status in most schools and serve as role models, especially for younger students. Their behavior may have more of an effect on school environment than the behavior of those who aren't athletes. This special status may also result in athletes being protected from facing the consequences of their actions. Coaches, parents, teachers and administrators might avoid disciplining a student during his or her sport season for fear of ruining that person and the team's chances for success. An athletic booster club might pressure school officials not to suspend a star athlete. Athletes are also special targets for alcohol advertising.

It is because of these myths and the attitudes they promote that the Bethlehem Networks Project sponsored Ryne Duren's presentation last week and will be coordinating alcohol and other drug abuse prevention training for coaches in the future. For more information, call 439-7740.

St. Thomas kicks off a new decade in style

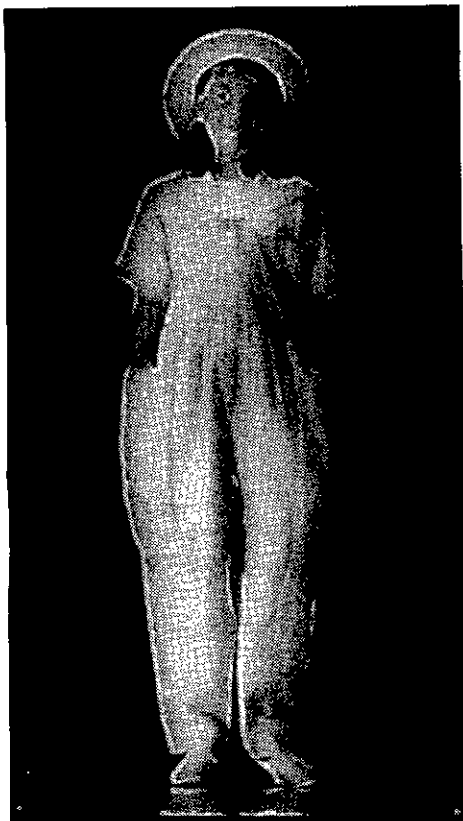

The Church of St. Thomas hosted its annual Fashion Show and Dessert Party last Thursday evening, featuring an array of current fashions for all ages.

Snappy styles for children were provided by Gingersnips of Main Square, and modeled by 14 young St. Thomas parishioners. The latest styles for women came from Town and Tweed of Delmar Plaza, and were ably displayed by a dozen St. Thomas ladies.

Numerous door prizes were awarded, and homemade desserts were enjoyed by all.

Michael Nuttall, 5, plays it cool in a colorful costume.

A cool pastel jumpsuit looks pretty on Liz Walsh, 9.

Emily Reigel turns to show a back view of her sashed jumpsuit.

Turned out in the latest children's fashions from Gingersnips, the young models seemed to enjoy their runway appearances, and were rewarded with hearty applause.

Beth Tougher greets the new decade in flowing white.

Parrot earrings completed Kathy Cykoski's tropical look.

Joseph Chilton Pearce will be at the State Museum this weekend.

Getting inside their heads: development in children

Two programs on the mind and brain development of children, presented by Joseph Chilton Pearce, will be held on May 4 from 9 a.m. to 5 p.m. and May 5 from 7 to 9 p.m., at the New York State Museum.

During the first program, Pearce will share his knowledge of the intellectual mind and brain development of children drawing upon recent research in physics, biology and psychology.

The second program focuses on what kind of learning opportunities, materials, teaching skills and models must be present in home and school environments to insure children the most natural and complete education.

Songfest '90 scheduled in Albany

A "Spring Revival" is being planned for the evening of Friday, May 4, as the Northeast Division of the National Association of Social Workers (NASW) hosts a benefit concert of music and fun honoring those committed to helping children and families.

Festivities will begin at 7 p.m. in Brubacher Hall on the downtown State University at Albany alumni quad, Western Avenue between Partridge and Ontario Streets in Albany.
