GE asks for nod on ash dump

By Mike Larabee

GE Plastics in Selkirk has asked the state Department of Environmental Conservation (EnCon) for permission to landfill incinerator ash at their Bethlehem plant.

Under the proposal, ash from the facility's on-site industrial trash incinerator — where office paper, cardboard, wooden pallets, scrap plastic, and similar materials are burned — would be disposed of in a new 20,000-cubic-yard landfill in the northwest corner of the Norly Avenue plant property, according to Michael Joyce, manager of environmental and support operations at the GE Selkirk. Ash from the incinerator is considered non-hazardous by state standards, EnCon's Region 4 permits officer William Clarke said.

Ash residue from the non-hazardous incinerator and as well as a second incinerator at the plant, which burns hazardous material, is currently trucked to dis-

Priest bids parish goodbye

By Susan Graves

The Rev. Geoffrey Burke said tearful goodbyes to tearful parishioners of St. Thomas Church in Delmar last Sunday. "It was very difficult," he said, "I said goodbye to the parish."

The associate pastor said he will miss the ongoing interaction with the people of the parish on a day-to-day basis the most. "And I'll miss being involved in the school," he said.

Father Burke said he still chokes up when he thinks of leaving, and many of the parishioners are at a loss for words. "None of us can talk. We're all very emotional," said Richard Switzer, president of the parish council.

Switzer said he has never known anyone that so many people respected so highly.

He said Father Burke's main strengths were his work with youth and his relationship with Rev. James Daley, St. Thomas pastor.

Airport plan in the running

By Patricia Dumas

The future owner/management status of the Albany County Airport could be determined within the next few months, now that county officials have been presented with financing details of three competing offers.

The Capital Region Airport Development Corporation on Monday announced the financing details of its proposal, which was presented in outline form last month. The offer from the not-for-profit corporation of business leaders is being considered by the county along with offers from a British American-Lockheed partnership and from the Capital District Transportation Authority. ## Officials aim for November vote on Bethlehem community center

By Mike Larabee

A proposal for construction of a $6 million community center at the Elm Avenue Town Park will likely go before voters this November, Bethlehem Town Supervisor Kenneth Ringler said Tuesday.

Last week, the four-year old Bethlehem Community Center Committee recommended the construction of a 45,600 square-foot facility southeast of the park's pool complex.

The center would house a child care facility, a swimming pool, a gymnasium, and club meeting, aerobics, and arts and crafts rooms. In addition, the building would have senior services and youth

Seminar puts cops under the gun

By Mike Larabee

Once, in New York City, a police officer was shot after a suspect was told to raise his hands while standing in a dark apartment doorway. The man had hidden a pistol on a nail just above the jamb.

Last week about 30 local police officers, including four from the Bethlehem

Police Department, played out that and other difficult scenarios during a "Shoot—Don't shoot" training seminar sponsored by the Conrail Police at the Selkirk Conrail rail yards.

The police went through a four-hour "street survival" lecture on procedural

Waste forum draws full house

A Bethlehem Work on Waste forum in the town hall auditorium entitled "Will Bethlehem Become a Regional Trash Capital" drew a standing-room-only crowd Monday night.

Bethlehem Work on Waste is a volunteer citizen's organization formed to oppose American Ref-Fuel's proposal to site a waste-to-energy garbage incinerator along the town's Hudson River shoreline. According to spokesperson Liz McCoy, Work on Waste advocates intensive refuse reduction, reuse, and recycling and the construction of a small-scale landfill exclusively for Bethlehem use.

employment facilities, and other office spaces.

The committee proposed financing the project through general obligation bonds.

According to committee projections, after revenue generated from the pool, day care and other center functions is included, the facility would cost about $71,800 a year to operate. The town would likely contract with a private firm to run the day care facility.

One reason the pool was included in the proposal is it would augment operation costs by drawing memberships and revenue to the center, according to the committee's community center study.

The second phase of the project — a $5.2 million performance auditorium — was tabled.

"We just feel at this time it's too expensive," said David Austin, committee chairman and administrator of the town Parks and Recreation Department. "The committee is not convinced that we could fill a 1,200 seat theater every Friday and Saturday night."

According to Austin, the Elm park plan ultimately was selected over a more costly proposal to build a new town hall and install the community center in the existing Delaware Avenue building.

"I think in the end the committee feels pretty good about what's being proposed," Austin said. "I don't think there's one member who's not happy about the plan and the location."

Ringler said that although he still reserves final endorsement of the plan, he is very enthusiastic about it. In particular, he applauded the proposal's emphasis on a multi-purpose facility.

"Whenever you're going to spend $6 million of taxpayer's money, you need something that will be usable by the majority of the community," he said.

Ringler said he strongly supports a town-wide vote to decide the issue.

FLOOR PLAN - COMMUNITY CENTER

The floor plan of the $6 million community center proposed for Elm Avenue Park.

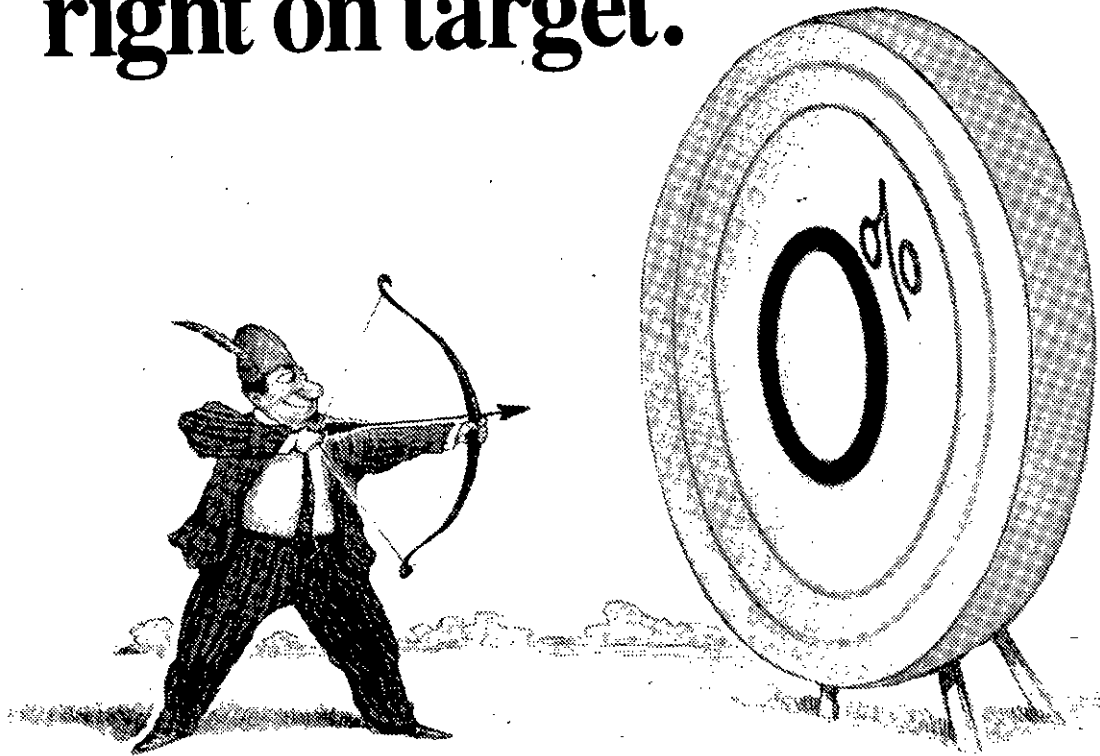

"Some might consider this a luxury. As such we ought to let the taxpayers make the final decision," said Ringler. "There are certain things I think the town board has an obligation to do."

According to Ringler, the board would have to approve a measure putting a community center referendum on the November ballot at least 60 days prior to the election. A majority of residents favor a town community center according to a 1987-88 committee survey.

The committee proposal was completed by The Saratoga Associates of Saratoga Springs.

techniques for entering potentially dangerous or suspicious settings. Then they were taken — guns loaded with blanks — through a rigorous course of eight mock police scenarios including two car stops, a burglary investigation, a confrontation involving a hostage, a domestic dispute, and one case where a photographer jumps out of a dark building, camera held high.

The police had no knowledge of the character of the scenarios beforehand. With the exception of the photographer, all ultimately involved a suspect who was armed.

According to Investigator David Crabtree, a Selkirk Conrail policeman and resident of Bethlehem who helped conduct the seminar, almost none of the officers get through the course without making at least one mistake, and most made many. "They shoot the photographer, they shoot the instructors," he said.

The training is designed to remind police of the dangers associated with their jobs and to help them improve their self-protection skills, said Crabtree.

"About 99.9 percent of the time this would not happen, but it's that other time," said Crabtree. "You can get so complacent on the job. This really makes you think."

The crucial message of the seminar — cover. After the first scenario, involving a routine search of a suspect already in custody, the officers went through a mock traffic stop of a stolen vehicle. Also fairly routine, except a man with a shotgun was crouching in the trunk of the vehicle. The moment the police stepped away from the protection of their front car door, the man jumped out and fired. At least two were so shocked they leapt backwards, off their feet.

"It happens to everyone," said region-wide Conrail Police Superintendent Albert Blevins. "The key is cover."

Arthur Dunn, a Lancaster, Penn. resident who conducts about four shoot—don't shoot training sessions each year in the Northeast, said that the course isn't completely fair to the participants. Not only are some of the scenarios virtual no-win situations, but the officers have to contend with the added tactics of their instructors.

"We're playing with their minds a little bit," Dunn said. For one thing, he said, the routine search at the beginning is intentionally the easiest and tends to lower their guard slightly. The police guns are loaded with caps while the instructors use booming theatrical rounds. In addition, the officers are outfitted with thick eye protection and a bullet-proof vest.

"When they put that on, it gives them something to wonder about," he said. "The guys are saying to themselves, 'What the heck is all this for?'"

Bethlehem Lt. Frederick J. Holligan said the goal of the seminar was heightened awareness.

"You can go through so many situations without anything happening to you, then all of a sudden — bingo," Holligan said.

Bethlehem officer Vincent O. Rinaldi, who made it through some of the most difficult scenarios unscathed but eventually shot the photographer, said for him the session reinforced the importance of "cover and concealment."

"Any of these can happen in real life," Rinaldi said. "You've only got seconds to react. You don't have a lot of time sometimes to set up things."

Bethlehem Sgt. Paul Roberts and officers Bruce W. Oliver and Robert Markel also attended the Conrail course.

Conrail police are an independent police agency with more than 500 officers in the general Northeast. All Conrail officers go through the state police training for the particular state in which they serve.

Waste

Alan Funk of the Hempstead Long Island Citizen's Committee for Civic Action, a group that unsuccessfully fought Ref-Fuel's Hempstead incinerator, said his town's decision to construct the plant amounted to a selection between "the lesser of two evils."

"We had a choice between polluting our air or polluting our water," Funk said. "We chose to pollute our air." Funk said landfills can no longer be sited in Long Island towns because of the threat to municipal water supplies.

Other panelists included Mel Brown, a Washington County activist who was part of a movement that blocked construction of an upstate Ref-Fuel plant; Bruce Secor, chairperson of the Bethlehem Solid Waste Task Force; and Anne Tibbits, a resident of a rural New York town that recycles 70 percent of its waste.

Glenmont resident Dave Thomas spoke out in favor of the plant. Thomas said he's heard nothing that convinces him the incinerator would be unsafe.

"I'm two miles from this site," said Thomas. "I want my elected officials to know I'm for this facility."

The next Bethlehem Work on Waste meeting is Thursday, July 12, in the Bethlehem Public Library.

Airport

of those two proposals have been stalled because they involve use of airport revenues for payments to the county, and the Federal Aviation Authority has ruled that unacceptable.

The business corporation claims its proposal is "consistent with current FAA policies," and that both the FAA and the state Department of Transportation have reviewed its plan. All airport revenues would be used solely for operation, maintenance and development of the airport, according to Victor J. Riley, Jr., chairman of KeyCorp Bank and one of the business group's incorporators.

Under the plan announced Monday, the corporation would:

- Pay $30 million when a lease agreement is signed.
- Spend $5 million for improvements to the present terminal to update it while a new terminal is under construction.
- Spend at least $75 million for construction of a new terminal.

Riley said location of the new terminal would be determined "after further analysis and consultation with local governments and airlines while improvements to the present terminal are under way." The corporation plans to consult with representatives of government and finance from the Albany, Schenectady, Saratoga and Rensselaer counties.

According to Harold L. Joyce, majority leader of the county legislature, the FAA objections have provided the county with a side-effect benefit — tapping into expert consultant data without taxpayer expense. Faced with revising their plans to overcome FAA objections, the competitors have consulted nationally-recognized financial and legal experts. All of the resulting facts and figures will be available to the county when it weighs its options on the airport's future.

The selection process will take time, but a decision before October would tie in with the target date for completion of the generic environmental impact statement being prepared for lands surrounding the airport.

Any sale or lease plan for the airport will have to be authorized by the county legislature on advice of its Mass Transit Committee. County legislator James Darbyshire of Colonie this month introduced a resolution aimed at making sure legislators will have posal facilities in western New York. Joyce said the plan to dispose of the non-hazardous ash on-site is part of an ongoing effort by GE Selkirk to take responsibility for company waste production.

"The proposal is in line with our philosophy of self-sufficiency in terms of our waste handling capability," Joyce said. He added that no material would be brought in to the proposed ash dump from outside facilities.

The landfill would have a projected life of 13 years, Joyce said.

A discussion of the application and the coordination of lead agency status under the State Environmental Quality Review (SEQR) process is scheduled for tonight's (Wednesday) town board meeting.

According to Clarke, EnCon intends to seek lead agency status in the environmental review process. Bethlehem Town Supervisor Kenneth Ringler said that as a permitting agency, the town can also ask to be lead agency. GE plastic will have to acquire a landfill permit from the town before it can go forward with the plan, he said.

EnCon Commissioner Thomas C. Jorling resolves disputes over

SEQR lead agency status.

Lead agency will be designated once EnCon rules GE's May application is complete. After that, an environmental impact scoping session on the issue would be held, followed by either a positive SEQR declaration — a potential significant environmental impact — or negative declaration — a negligible effect requiring no comprehensive environmental impact study.

Clarke said it was too early to speculate on which version would likely occur in this case, but he said, the proposed landfill "is relatively small and is on an industrial site, and there are some plusses to having it on-site."

He said that EnCon's primary concern on ash landfill proposals — the possibility of leakage into the surrounding environment — is mitigated somewhat in this instance because the proposed site sits on "a fairly thick deposit of clay."

GE Selkirk manufactures the trademark resins Noryl, Gelyol, Cycloy and Prevex, which have a number of applications in industry and the manufacture of electrical, medical and consumer goods.

Protecting the flag

That the proposed "flag burning" constitutional amendment lost out in the House of Representatives was welcomed by many Americans (as it was to the editors of The Spotlight). And just as it was a disappointment to many others.

While it is true that some individuals have taken irreconcilable positions that tax their opponents with disloyalty on the one hand or zealotry on another, this regrettable issue is in fact a classic example of how conscientious people can reach differing conclusions.

For example, while we deplore flag burning, we also believe that altering the Bill of Rights for this transient emotional spasm is not justified. Respect for the American flag and for "the country for which it stands" cannot be taught or protected by mere "shalt not" language. Let's work harder, better on teaching this nation's ideals, we say—and the essentials of true patriotism.

Thus our view is in partial conflict with that of our Congressman, Mike McNulty, who cast his vote for the amendment. His conclusion was reached through the full play of thoughtful deliberation, analysis, and conscience. In so doing, he expressed his "utmost respect" for those who adopt a dissenting position.

Most of his constituents will return that respect. Those whom we all are likely to hold in low esteem are the exhibitionists who see defiling the national emblem as a prank, and those super-patriots who would equate dissent and disloyalty.

It's that time again

The Farmers' markets are open. Though the season is still young for most mouthwatering fresh produce, we can expect to find some scallions, onions, rhubarb, and perhaps a few ripe local tomatoes (if you're early). More to come, as the sunny weeks pass. And then of course there's the supply of home preserves: strawberry jams, peach, plum. And wildflower honey.

These tempting morsels we'll find among banks of plants and herbs, ranging from basil or dill or parsley to pansies, phlox, and primrose. Perhaps we'll choose among the gay bouquets of spring flowers, the roses, the cosmos, or delphiniums. And finish off with a little knotted jacket for the latest baby somewhere in the family. We're all indebted to the churches, other organizations, and municipalities that make available the open spaces for these grand gatherings of folk who come refreshingly from the native spots where good and plain things happen.

Big straws, important wind

This is an editorial directed toward the 3,300 households in Bethlehem that have received copies of a survey from Town offices, namely the Land Use Advisory Management Committee (LUMAC). In other words, the "master planners."

By the luck of the draw, you were picked to take part in a random sampling of beliefs among town residents on a short list of long consequence. What's your opinion on such items as zoning, land-use policy, traffic planning, environmental protection, preserving "community character"?

By making sure to turn your completed survey form back to LUMAC, you will not only be putting in your very important—and wanted—two cents' worth, but you'll be adding to the validity of the survey through ensuring there's an adequate cross-section of town-wide views on these crucial questions.

And LUMAC promises to tell us all about the results.

The plane's at the gate

To be privatized—or not to be? Therein is the curious crux of a currently controversial question: Who should take over, under what kind of auspices, further development of what has been public property for the last six decades?

County Executive Coyne favors "privatization" of the county's airport, along with his arena. Among those who have their doubts is another influential member of the county's majority party, its legislative leader, Mr. Joyce. He's intrigued, he says, by the potential of government ownership combined with "some form of business" operating the airport. This clash of titans is indeed fascinating to behold as the reel unwinds.

Will Joyce rejoice, or will we deal in a coin of another realm?

Keeping 'the Fourth'

Two decades ago Congress, pandering to the public's desire for holiday satiation, carved a series of three-day weekends from what had been strictly patriotic observances.

The one such national celebration they couldn't touch was the nation's birthday. It remains an immovable feast, and so this year it falls mid-week. Let's try to keep the true significance of "The Fourth" in mind as we renew our dedication to goals that patriots of 1776 stated so eloquently.

'Buz' Palmer

The Capital District's business and social-service communities have lost an outstanding senior member in the passing of Edward DeLancey Palmer. Over a period approaching a half-century, he brought his acumen and humanitarian concerns equally to organizations of our area.

In the real estate industry, he was a prominent leader, having assumed the management of a business founded by his father. From banks to hospitals, from his parish to his service club, he readily accepted civic duty and responsibility, and discharged it with charm and diplomacy. He established a standard by which many fellow-citizens would be proud to be able to be judged.

North St. project held 'outrage' against area

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am a resident of Hudson Avenue in Delmar, and I am writing as an individual to express my opinion regarding the proposed senior citizen housing project for North St.

In public statements, and in letters such as appeared in last week's Spotlight, supporters of this project have resorted to an obvious cheap shot by implying that opponents are against senior citizens, low-income people, social services, and probably apple pie, too. Before the citizens of Bethlehem begin to imagine ogres and trolls guarding the railroad crossings at Hudson Avenue, I would like to describe the situation honestly as I see it.

My prime objection has nothing to do with the nature of the intended occupants of the building. I am concerned with issues of architecture, scale, environment, planning, preservation and neighborhood character.

Vox Pop

The Hudson Avenue neighborhood is an old, established area of more than 150 homes, ranging from old, renovated farmhouses and beautifully restored Victorians to a variety of well-kept homes in various styles representing a century of gradual, limited development.

These houses are spread out in a narrow band along the D&H tracks and a few short side streets. Behind these houses are woods, wetlands, and fields, home to a valuable diversity of plants and animals. North St. is a quiet, shady road, and the proposed site is on the edge of beautiful, rolling fields

Widespread support made grads' party a success

Editor, The Spotlight:

The graduation party held for the Bethlehem Central Class of 1990 was a great success. Approximately 170 graduates attended from midnight to 5 a.m.

The party was made possible because of the generosity of Blanchard Post 1040 of the American Legion, which not only donated the hall and money, but also much time, including that of several members who assisted us throughout the night.

Special thanks also go to Bethlehem Opportunities Unlimited and the Albany County Stop DWI for outstanding financial contributions, and to Michael Lofrumento of Mickey's Sporting World, who donated souvenir "BC Class of '90" T-shirts for everyone.

The generosity of our all-night Delmar volunteers was very much appreciated. These were junior class parents; town, school board, and community members, and Ken Ringler and Bill Collins, who served soft drinks all night.

Many thanks to all senior parents who volunteered many hours on the various committees, and to the school administration for its support. Coaches John Furey and John DeMeo did an outstanding job as MC's.

This celebration could not have been held without the tremendous support of the town. Contributions of services, money, and gifts were received from approximately 114 individuals, organizations, and businesses.

A humble, healing gift

You're familiar with the oft-told tale of the little juggler whose only gift that he could bring to the altar to honor his Lord was his own special skill. A gift compounded, too, of devotion and adoration.

Each of us, I suspect, has been affected by some such deed of pure love and innocent tribute, without artifice or expectation of reward. About as conniving as a baby's smile, perhaps.

I received a gift of that sort the other day, and in justice to the giver — who is mute — I'd like to spare a few words to relate the circumstances.

Having just been released from out-patient surgery, bearing visible evidence on my face of a wound, I soon found a quiet couch and promptly fell asleep, finishing off the narcotic effect laid on effectively by a person I'd barely seen.

So that the affairs of the household could proceed, the door was closed behind me. Outside it, a vigil was maintained by the smallest and youngest member of the family. Eventually, he began to whimper, then to complain more urgently. After awhile, then, he was admitted and cried at the bedside until I urged him to jump up. Promptly he nestled beside me, close as could be, and for the next half-hour licked my hand ceaselessly, fervently.

Something was seriously amiss, Gordie realized, and he responded with his loving care in the best way that a doughty little terrier could imagine. Dogs' spittle, as is well known, contains emollients that control their own healing processes. While I can hardly attest that Gordie directly altered my own healing, his loving spirit surely contributed mightily to lifting mine, and in a major way. He still tries his best to be close by in case his ministrations are needed. But the huge white patch that alarmed him is now gone, so his world seems better and less urgent. His humble but magnificent gift was all he had to bring. I've washed the hand, but the gift will be with me always.

Thanks to having had two older sisters, and being the baby of the family (with all that implies), your Uncle Dudley became an uncle in fact at the age of 12. And that, you may be sure, was quite some years ago. Years counted in decades.

So you can imagine how thrilled I was last week to open the mail and find there a letter that began like this:

"It is my great pleasure to inform you that you have been nominated for inclusion in 'Who's Who Among Rising Young Americans.'"

Whether or not I ever was rising, I passed out of the "young" state way back when. I wonder what list I'm on for this come-on.

It turned out, upon inspection, that this "Who's Who" has absolutely no connection with the A.N. Marquis Company of Illinois, the publishers of the real "Who's Who in America" (and certain derivatives), which everyone means when they refer to "Who's Who."

This particular publishing outfit has located itself in a prestige address (Princeton, New Jersey). It's a piece with a variety of other "Who's Who" such as the one that has been annotating the careers of college students for so many years. A mighty poor investment, in this uncle's personal view, when you're presented with the opportunity to purchase the printed evidence of having "risen," or whatever. The genuine "Who's Who in America," incidentally, now sells to its biographers and other interested persons at a price up in the hundreds of dollars (unless you happen to be a library).

CONSTANT READER

Out of the country

There's a totally new magazine about — one that I suspect may be of considerable interest to many of Constant Reader's readers. It's called simply Countryside, though the fuller title, visible in subdued type on the cover links it to the magazine Country Living. And thereby hangs a bit of a tale, for these periodicals are products of the Hearst Corporation. In the last dozen years or so, Hearst has had remarkable success in introducing new magazines, of which Country Living is one. This first issue of Countryside is dated "Summer 1990," by the way.

Volume I, Number 1 declares its intention to be "published biannually," which literally means every two years, but I believe that the actual intent is to publish twice a year at first, with the schedule to be determined later depending on the outcome of subscription appeals and single-copy sales. The per-issue price is $1.95, but the subscription return-card offers six issues for $5.99. There's a fail-safe clause for both you and Hearst here, for the card urges (warns?) you to "send no money" with the expectation that you'd be billed later. But Hearst's practice is to avoid having to return a lot of li'l bitsy checks (in case they decide to kill the whole thing) through that "send no money" disclaimer. In case you do decide to send your name/address/etc (no money), you write to Countryside at P.O. Box 7021, Red Oak, Iowa, 51591.

Now as to the contents. This is a slick magazine, make no mistake about it — well worth far more than the asking price if you're into this category of publication at all. High-quality copy and art throughout. Good writers. Varied subject-matter. Appealing photos, played large enough to be readily visible and effective. Virtually none of those terribly reduced teensy prints that some editors are so fond of. On the contrary, in one pictorial feature on "the most prestigious farm show in the world" (staged in Ontario), you'll find seven and a half pages of close-up studies of cows, sheep, hens, and pigs — but only a half-page of explanatory text.

'We don't inherit land from parents, we're borrowing it from our children'

I was agreeably surprised to find, among the two-dozen editorial items, about five that highlight one aspect or another of the Hudson Valley and its environs. This concentration surely is enough to catch the attention of potential readers in our area, but the perspective does seem a bit disjointed for a national magazine's contents.

Not that the rest of the nation and the world aren't given due attention, for they are. You'd find, for example, several pages on the dairy farms of Devon, England, with numerous recipes for such delicacies as herb dumplings, lazy creamed carrots, and black current ice cream. There are high-minded features on the Land Trust, the Nature Conservancy, and on the nation's commitment to plant 10 billion trees in the coming decade.

I particularly liked a piece by an environmental writer with the text that "Rural living is no escape from environmental problems; rather it is a chance to do something about them" and a fine piece on walking sticks. But in the 144 pages (lots and lots of gorgeous, high-powered advertising) you'll surely discover plenty of good reading — and looking. If the editors wanted to produce, in part, a coffee-table book for country houses, they produced it, all right, but there's much more meat in this issue. Some of the contents are directed toward the individual headed for the hills, either in act or imagination, but again the scope is broader. If you can find a copy of Countryside, pick it up. You'd almost surely like it. And I predict that those "biannual" issues will continue to emerge without serious question.

*****

But wait! What's this — another magazine called Countryside? The one published out in Waterloo, Wisconsin — and ever since 1917? The one calling itself "The great granddad of back-to-the-land and simple living magazines"? Can't you just see the possibility of a name infringement suit here, or perhaps a healthy out-of-court settlement? Or a change of name for the newcomer? Remember a dozen years ago, when Bob Guccione was starting up a mod "science" magazine that he was going to call Nova, but was hung up by PBS on the strength of its long-running series? And he ended up changing its name, at the very last hour, to Omni? Interesting possibilities here.

Your health — and nutrition

The contributor of this Point of View guest column is Administrator of the Human Nutrition Information Service of the U.S. Department of Agriculture. She is a former member of the Albany County Legislature and the Bethlehem Town Board, and was vice president for consumer and community service of the Golub Corporation.

By Sue Ann Ritchko

What should you eat to stay healthy?

Point of View

The life expectancy, average body size, and general good health of the American people seem to indicate that most diets are adequate. Foods we have to choose from are varied, plentiful, and wholesome.

Even so, hardly a day goes by without someone trying to tell us what we should eat or should not. Newspapers, magazines, books, radio, and television give us lots of advice.

As Administrator of the Human Nutrition Information Service, I am responsible for managing all education programs aimed at promoting healthy diets for Americans.

Some of the confusion that I mentioned exists because we don't know enough about nutrition to identify an "ideal diet" for each individual. People differ — and their food needs differ depending on age, sex, body size, physical activity, and other conditions such as pregnancy or illness. Research seeks more information about the amounts of essential nutrients people need and diet's role in certain chronic diseases.

Sue Ann Ritchko

'Disappearance data' help show the potential of the U.S. food supply for meeting energy and nutrient requirements of the nation.

As part of the National Nutrition Monitoring System (NNMS), we in the Department of Agriculture's Human Nutrition Information Service conduct a program of research to provide information the dietary status of Americans and on trends in the consumption of foods and nutrients. As part of the NNMS, the Department of Agriculture monitors food and nutrient consumption at three levels.

"Disappearance" data accumulated by the department show the potential of the U.S. food supply for meeting the population's energy and nutrient level and actual ingestion). The estimates are used for the study of the demand for food and also for showing long-term trends in nutrient levels and food sources of nutrients.

Data collected from households are used to answer questions about the food use and expenditures by households in the population as a whole, and differences by location, income, and the like. Data from these surveys serve as the basis for the Food Stamp Program allotment.

The kinds and amounts of foods actually eaten at home and away from home by individual household members are reported in large national surveys every 10 years and in smaller "continuing" surveys in between.

Data collected from individuals tell us about food patterns and eating practices of men, women, and children of different ages and how their diets relate to certain nutritional recommendations.

Agencies charged with the safety of our foods use the data to estimate intakes of additives, contaminants, and toxic substances.

which were farmed until recent years.

Delmar is quickly losing every vestige of its once-rural character to the ubiquitous developers.

Our neighborhood is the last such spread of land within walking distance of the center of town. When this land is gone, the central core of Delmar is almost solid suburban sprawl.

The proposed project is a two-story building with 50 apartments plus communal rooms and a parking lot. De Paul management tells us to look to their project in Half-moon to see what the North St. project would look like. (Except that at Halfmoon, the bare-bones construction required by H.U.D. was upgraded with State grants, which are no longer available.) Those who have visited (or seen pictures of) this project readily agree that the structure resembles nothing so much as the kind of cut-rate motel that one sees on the main strip of Anywhere, USA.

Vox Pop

I, for one, would object just as vehemently (or more) if this same building were being proposed as luxury yuppie housing. It is a monstrous piece of urban roadside architecture that would profoundly degrade the character and value of the homes of hundreds of long-time residents (and, need I add, voters.)

Add to this an increasing traffic burden on a neighborhood already served by only two inadequate intersections, and questions about the intentions of a developer who also owns 80+ acres of adjacent land, and you have a proposal that is wholly inappropriate, destructive, and an outrage against the existing residents.

I agree with the well-intentioned but ill-advised proponents of this project—low-income seniors do indeed need appropriate housing. But our neighborhood is a small gem in central Delmar, and needs to be preserved, not ruthlessly urbanized.

I invite you to form your own opinion. Take a walk down North Street to the beginning of the open fields. Now stand there and try to picture a Motel Six.

'Initiative' is termed problem, no solution

Editor, The Spotlight:

I read with great interest the Point of View column by State Senator Howard Nolan in your June 6 issue. Mr. Nolan raises some valid points regarding the probability of certain legislation to ever see light of day on the Senate or Assembly floor, only to "die" in committee or on the active legislation calendar. It is indeed a deprivation to the voters when important bills are laid by the wayside because of a reluctance on the part of lawmakers to commit to a "yea" or "nay" and suffer the potential political embarrassment that follows.

But the "limited initiative" proposed by Governor Cuomo and endorsed by Mr. Nolan is hardly a remedy to the situation, and only complicates the process by introducing petitions into the already overly-bureaucratic system. By modifying the process, it would create tedious legislative petition challenges and an added fiscal burden on the State Board of Elections. One needs only think back to the annual petitioning fiascoes that have plagued Albany County in years past, let alone in the 61 other counties in the state to see that petitions can create more problems than solutions.

The problem isn't the system, but rather the politicians in the system. We need lawmakers with unwavering commitment who accept the fact that making hard decisions may place them in politically compromising positions. They knew that would happen when they ran for office; why should they cover once they take their oath of office? Furthermore, we need to ask whether such legislation is simply making life easier for incumbent lawmakers, while further burdening taxpayers.

There is one mechanism already in place for resolving the problem of weak legislators. It's called the general election.

BOTANICAL PESTICIDES

Timely Tips from Joe Huth
(former Cooperative Extension Agent for Albany County)

More and more Horticulturalists are looking for ways to control pests without using chemical pesticides. Many old botanical materials are being retested and may soon be on the market.

One of these is the seed of the Neem tree from India. That will be marketed under the name of Margosan. This has been used for hundreds of years and is effective both as a repellent and as stomach poison.

Another botanical insecticide that may be available in the future is Lemonene. As the name suggests, this is made from citrus peels.

Several botanical insecticides have been used for years and are readily available. These include Pyrethrins from an African Daisy tobacco dust, Rotenone from the roots of the Cube plant and others.

A non chemical insecticide that is actually the spores of a bacterial disease, Bacillus Thuringiensis, that will kill caterpillars. This is sold as Dipel or B.T. and is very effective against Gypsy Moths, Caterpillars, cabbage worms and most other caterpillars. Although fatal to these caterpillars, it is safe for most good insects and animals.

Next week, we will consider two other alternatives—Horticultural oils and Horticultural Soaps.

'Let's take our time on the floating zone'

Editor, The Spotlight:

I attended the June 19 Town of Bethlehem Planning Board meeting. The first issue on the agenda was discussion of implementation of a Senior Citizen Zone, the so-called "floating zone." This proposed zone is designed to allow high-density, moderately priced senior citizen housing to be built in Bethlehem.

On the surface, this is a wonderful idea. Our population is getting older and it would be nice if older citizens could stay in the town in moderately priced housing until necessity dictates they leave. Unfortunately, the "floating zone" could require that existing low-density, single-family residential areas be down-zoned to high-density (10 units per acre) areas allowing in-residence commercial use as well.

All this is disturbing enough since this zone could be placed anywhere in the town—but what concerns me most is the pace at which this proposal is being handled.

The Town Board is composed of elected officials who are supposed to represent the thinking of the residents and act accordingly. When uncertain about what we think, they should request our help. The town board has done exactly that by forming the Land Use Management Advisory Committee (LUMAC). LUMAC randomly sent a "Town Planning Survey (Bethlehem's Future Directions)" to residents recently. The survey is thorough, well thought-out, and well-written. It should supply LUMAC and both boards with invaluable information.

Unfortunately, neither is going to be able to use the survey to decide on the "floating zone." The Town Board will be presented with the Planning Board's proposal before results of the survey are tabulated. What's the hurry? It is conceivable that residents of Bethlehem do not want this zone. Perhaps they would like the housing of seniors to be handled differently.

I ask myself why the town bothered with LUMAC or the survey since decisions are being made without LUMAC's input. I don't have a good answer. Apparently, the only way residents will be accurately represented is if we all attend every Town Board meeting. Why not wait until the vote is in from all surveyed residents to decide if and how zoning should change? What do the residents want to happen to our town? Let's wait and find out before we act.

Selectivity, realism control home sales

Editor, The Spotlight:

We in the real estate industry are greatly concerned about the public perception of doom and gloom for either buying or selling a home in the Northeast—especially in the Capital Region.

Buyers do have more time to be selective—that's okay!

Sellers are more realistic in pricing their home and are more responsive to marketing conditions—that's okay!

Mortgage rates are at a great affordable level and hovering around 10 percent—that's okay!

Within the Capital Region we are fortunate enough not to experience the great real estate swings that occur in other areas. Yes, our market is in a more moderate mode, but this gives everyone enough time to do things the right way. Our highs may not be as high as other areas, but our lows are definitely not as low.

So relax—decide what's good for you, and don't judge the market by the doom and gloom of other areas.

Editor, The Spotlight:

In June 3 Sunday edition of the TU I read a review of the Capitol House Restaurant (formerly Chez Rene) that made me seethe. Chef Donald and his wife Sondra came to our table and asked about the food and service and if there was anything special we needed.

Disregard Vinod Chhabra's review; it was cruel and dead wrong. Besides, I've heard a rumor that Mr. Chhabra only enjoys Indian food. I think he owes the Capitol House an apology and a rewrite.

WORLD'S MOST PREVALENT DISEASE

What is the world's most prevalent disease? If your answer is the common cold—you're wrong! Tooth decay is the most universal disease in the world. Only a minute fraction of the world's people are free of it. Only 2 percent of the American population has been spared. Earliest cavities show up right after primary teeth erupt. The average 13-year-old already has at least five cavities in permanent teeth. Girls seem to get more cavities than boys; but then, girls get their teeth sooner.

A cavity is a hole in a tooth caused by decay which is produced by the combination of plaque and acid. It doesn't take a few days for trouble to develop. Tooth decay can start in less than 15 minutes after eating. All that is needed are three ingredients; a tooth, bacteria (in dental plaque) and sugar. When the bacteria and sugar meet, acid is formed. When the acid and tooth meet, the acid starts etching a hole in the tooth.

Today's diets, high in refined sugars and carbohydrates, are conducive to decay. But careful and PROMPT oral hygiene procedures after eating will reduce, if not eliminate, the decay producing activity of the modern diet.

Ambulance service's vital skill, dedication

Editor, The Spotlight:

Recently, a 10-year-old boy from our community was tragically injured and lost his leg as a result of attempting to "hitch a ride" on a railroad train passing through our village. The events following the accident were widely reported in the media and the young men who reported the accident and attended to the injured boy until help arrived were justifiably well praised.

In addition to being proud of them, we should be proud of and grateful for the presence of our very skilled Voorheesville area ambulance service volunteers. Tracy Deschenes, a member of the ambulance service, was nearby and the first medically trained person to reach the injured boy. Her skill in dealing with the situation and calling for the appropriate specialized assistance from a neighboring community was critical to saving the boy's life.

That a highly trained ambulance service member was quickly available in a situation such as this is a measure of the value of the ambulance service to our community. The thousands of training and duty hours committed yearly by our volunteer neighbors in order to provide us with this protection is greatly appreciated. Their dedication and service are high on the list of what makes Voorheesville a great place to live.

Other communities are similarly gifted but we have been reminded of the importance of the ambulance service and it is an appropriate time to publicly recognize it. On behalf of all the people of Voorheesville: To all the members of the Voorheesville Area Ambulance Service—Thank you.

Help for a stray: a caution to owners

Editor, The Spotlight:

An incident that happened on June 22 might interest Delmar dog-owners. I noticed a young black dog running back and forth across Delaware Ave. following those attending the high school graduation.

Because of the heavy traffic, I felt it was probable the dog would be hit if not secured away from the road. I caught the dog, brought it to my house, and called the Bethlehem police to see if anyone had reported a missing dog. As it happened, someone had reported losing a black dog. Unfortunately, the dog owner could not be reached, and I was unable to keep the dog over the weekend.

I called the police back and explained that I could not hold the dog, but would bring it to the station so it could be placed in an animal shelter. I was told not to bring it to the station since the dog warden does not work on weekends. When I asked what I should do, I was told I could take it to the shelter in Menands or turn it loose. A friend, who was here at the time, could not believe the police would tell someone to turn a dog loose. Therefore, he called the police back to be sure that was the policy for stray dogs and he too was told if the dog couldn't be taken to the shelter, to turn it loose.

Instead, the dog was taken to the high school and tied where those leaving the graduation could see him. I'm glad to say that twenty minutes later he was not there.

Whether he is with his owner or was taken by someone who wanted a nice dog I will never know.

However, I think the dog-owners of Bethlehem should be made aware of how stray or lost dogs are handled by the Town—and should hope that if their pet ever strays from home, that this doesn't happen over a weekend.

'Intolerable' traffic tie-ups loom ahead

By Renée Hunter

"Cruising down the highway," particularly on the Northway, won't be possible 10 years from now if traffic projections made by the Capital District Transportation Committee are accurate.

In about 10 years, commuters on the Northway between exits 2 and 8 could find themselves crawling at speeds of 30 to 35 miles an hour during morning and afternoon rush hours, according to John Poorman, staff director of the CDTC.

Studies done by the committee show that traffic on the Northway has increased 25 to 30 percent since 1980.

For every 30 percent increase in traffic, Poorman estimates there is a 70 percent increase in congestion. This pattern is showing up all over the area, resulting in larger traffic tie-ups at several intersections, including New Scotland Avenue.

Despite these jams, the Capital District hasn't had the traffic problems other areas around the state have because of the investments in roads that were made in the 1960s and 70s. "We did our homework," Poorman said.

However, Poorman told committee members last Thursday that with the increase in the number of vehicles on the road and increased development, the whole traffic picture may change. Currently, there are 85 cars on the road for every 100 people over age 16. In 1980 that figure was 54 and it is projected to increase to 95 by the year 2000.

Unless existing traffic is rerouted and alternative methods of transportation such as carpools and park-and-rides become more popular, the Northway is just one of several roads that will be on its way to resembling a parking lot within the next 10 years.

Poorman told the committee several roads have been studied and the current and projected amount of delay at intersections have been measured. For the study, any delay over 60 seconds was determined intolerable. The various intersections that had such delays were ranked in order of severity both in the time delays and the amount of money the delays would cost drivers.

Current areas with "intolerable" traffic tie-ups include the Northway, New Karner Road, Interstate 90, Sand Creek Road, Watervliet-Shaker Road, Albany-Shaker Road, and Routes 2, 7, and 5.

Other roads that are expected to have severe problems in 2000 include Route 9, Everett Road, and Interstate 787.

The CDTC is made up of area elected and appointed officials who are developing a 10-year action plan to be released in September. The plan will identify what transit and highway improvements can be made in the Capital District and will help ensure that federal funds will reach the areas most in need of help.

EnCon may lead Ref-Fuel study

By Mike Larabee

If the Bethlehem Board of Appeals wants to direct the environmental review of American Ref-Fuel's proposed trash incinerator, they will have to arm wrestle with the state for the right to do so, Donald DeAngelis, zoning board attorney, said last week.

According to DeAngelis, the state Department of Environmental Conservation has indicated it wants to lead the lengthy State Environmental Quality Review (SEQR) investigation into the Ref-Fuel application.

"The preliminary discussion has been to the effect that EnCon would be willing and did want to be lead agency," DeAngelis told the board at last week's meeting.

American Ref-Fuel is a venture of two billion-dollar corporations, Air Products and Chemicals, Inc. and Browning-Ferris Industries, who have applied for a zoning variance with the town. Critics of their proposed $200 million regional waste-to-energy refuse burning facility have charged that stack emissions and waste ash would represent a threat to the environment and that the plant's 1,275-ton-per-day capacity would thwart recycling efforts and other waste-stream reduction initiatives.

Any agency that must ultimately approve a project permit has the right to apply for SEQR lead agency status. Board of Appeals Chairman Charles B. Fritts said the zoning board "would have to arm wrestle" with the state for that right if the board decides it wants to be lead agency. DeAngelis concurred.

"They indicated they would fight us for it, if we wanted to," he said.

According to William Clarke, EnCon's Region 4 permits administrator, disputes over SEQR lead agency status are resolved by Thomas Jorling, EnCon commissioner. Clarke said his office feels it is best suited to direct the environmental review process on the Ref-Fuel proposal because of its complicated technical aspects and regional implications.

DeAngelis said "there is some validity to what EnCon is saying." He added that EnCon officials have said the town would be encouraged to participate closely in its environmental review.

Slingerlands woman to head Vanguard

Lorena Abrams of Slingerlands has been elected president of Vanguard, the volunteer support organization of the Albany Symphony Orchestra.

She is a past president of Vanguard, as well as the Albany County League of Voters. She succeeds Anne Brewster of Albany who, at the group's annual meeting turned over a check for $30,000 to Peter Kermani, ASO chairman, to assist in the orchestra's educational concerts.

Priest

"They were like Bing Crosby and Barry Fitzgerald in Going My Way," he said.

Switzer said the two priests worked well together. "They were a good team, they complimented one another beautifully," he said.

Pastor James Daley said Father Burke will be missed. "I guess it's going to be a very difficult change because Father Burke and I worked very well together."

He said Father Burke was responsible for introducing many lay persons into the ministry. "He worked very hard in that," Father Daley said.

Sister Mary Frederick Coyne, principal of St. Thomas School, said, "To say we will miss Father Burke is certainly an understatement of the obvious."

She said his years in the parish have meant growth and development for faculty and students. "He has always had time for all of us for each of us."

In a thank you published in Sunday's newsletter, Switzer's son Brian, said, "There is not a single young person in this parish who will not miss Father Burke."

Father Burke is leaving the parish to become priest personnel director for the Albany diocese. He was appointed to the position by Bishop Howard Hubbard.

Father Burke, 36, first worked at St. Mary's Church in Oneonta after his ordination in 1979. He has been associate pastor at St. Thomas' for six years.

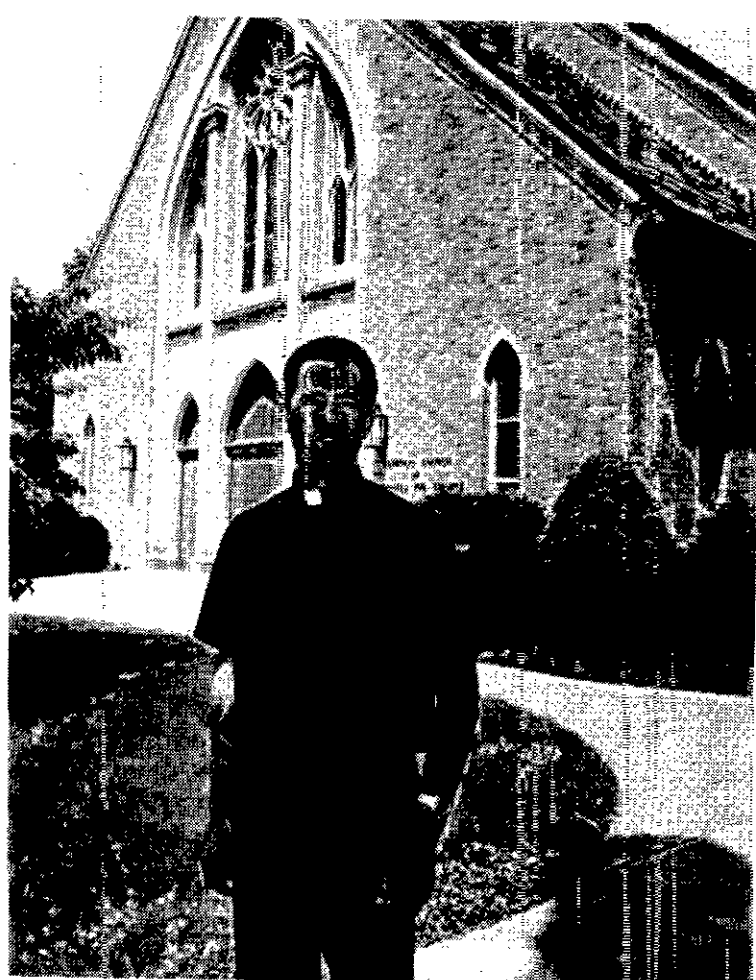

In his new position, which he assumes July 1, he said he will be assisting the bishop with the placement of priests in various parishes throughout the diocese.

Father James Cribbs, who was ordained June 2 will replace Father Burke.

St. Thomas has 2,650 families in its parish.

New Scotland going all out for the records

Edita Probst, New Scotland's manager of records, said the town has received a $12,100 grant to conduct a physical inventory of its records.

Beginning on July 1, Dennis Sullivan, Edward Keigle and Martha Slingerland will begin the process. With Sullivan, town historian, acting as project director, the group will identify and list all the town's records since its inception in what will be the first systematic review of the records of the town.

Usually after an inventory is done, the records that have exceeded the recommended retention period are destroyed. But since no history of the Town of New Scotland has yet been completed many of the files scheduled for disposal will be retained for their archival significance.

Many of the town's records, including its minutes, date back to 1833 and by law such items as the minutes must be retained permanently.

Both Probst and Sullivan recently attended a day-long workshop offered by the State Archives and Records Administration certifying them to conduct a physical inventory. Part of the town's grant also allows for the publication of a brochure listing and describing the records available for use by the public. The brochure itself should serve as a starting point for genealogists and others interested in tracking down information about family members.

The town has also learned that its minutes books have been slated for microfilming by the Albany County Hall of Records under a $92,239 grant from the State Education Department.

Probst said that the town plans to apply for a second grant next year which will include a request to computerize the town's records.

Summer is officially here and to help liven up those lazy, hazy days, the Village of Voorheesville is sponsoring the Concert in the Park series. According to Dan Reh, village trustee who helps coordinate the summer music program, five groups have already made commitments to perform with several other groups soon to be added to the lineup.

Bob Shutter, president of Heldeberg Studios and Goldrush Enterprises will produce the Sunday night programs which will begin on July 8 and run through Sept. 2. The concerts will start at 6:30 p.m. and last approximately 2 hours. All concerts will be held in Hoteling Park across from the First United Methodist Church of Voorheesville, except for the final concert which will take place on the Village Green behind Village Hall.

Groups scheduled to appear are "High Noon," a country rock group with Linda Moorehead; the Steve Bart Band, a rhythm and blues-country group; jazz band, "Moments Notice," "JoJo and the Loners" with Joe, Tom and Mark Kraemer and Jack Toritto, and Goldrush with Shutter. Other groups also expected to perform include folk, blues and bluegrass bands.

Each group and time will be advertised prior to the performance through local newspapers and signs. Any concert cancelled will not be rescheduled.

Voorheesville provides the free concerts for the benefit of local residents and their guests and no soliciting or selling will be allowed, except for guest entertainers who may wish to make their tapes and records available to the audience. All are encouraged to bring their own chairs, blankets and refreshments.

Library summer fun

The Voorheesville Public Library is gearing up for some summer fun as well with the reading club scheduled to begin on July 9, for children in kindergarten through grade three, and on Tuesday, July 10 for those in grades four through six. All students in these grades are welcome to sign-up at the library for the program which meets weekly until the end of August.

For the younger sets spring story hours have ended and summer story hours will begin on Monday, July 9.

During July, oil paintings by Slingerland's artist Ferne Horn will be on display at the library. The works are primarily still lifes and landscapes. Horn has painted with numerous teachers including Rudy Helmo, Leonard Weber and Edwin Becker and has previously exhibited at Bethlehem Public Library and local banks.

Directors to meet

The board of directors of the Voorheesville Public Library will meet on Monday, July 2 at 7:30 p.m. in the board room of the library on School Road. The meeting is open to the public.

Rec program under way

The Summer Recreation Program sponsored by the Village of Voorheesville began this week. All students age 7 and older are welcome to join in the fun in the Tuesday and Thursday morning craft and game programs run by Pat Miller. Evening soccer clinics for students in grades K through 3 and basketball clinics for those in grades 5 through 10 will also be offered. For information, call the village office.

Club accepting applications

The Kiwanis Club of New Scotland is still accepting applications for its Youth Soccer Program which will begin in August. Those students going into grades four through six and residents of the Town of New Scotland or the Voorheesville Central School District are eligible to join. For information, call Peter Douglas at 765-3108 as soon as possible since team shirts must be ordered soon. Baseball players can still register for the baseball clinic to be held by Kiwanis the first two weeks in July. To sign-up for the 8 through 12-year-old session to be held July 2 through 6 or the 13 through 15-year-old session to be held the following week contact either Coach Don McDonald at 1-731-6226 or Richard Suker at 765-4214.

Due to an error in the Kiwanis Newsletter the family picnic originally listed for June 27 was held on June 21. The Kiwanis Club is still interested in hearing from anyone wishing to join the local men's service organization and invites them to call President Jim Coffin at 765-4556 or Vice President Harry Van Wormer at 765-4769 for information.

Summer program

The Town of New Scotland is sponsoring a summer recreation program which will begin on Monday, July 9 and run through Aug. 24 at the Town Park on Swift Road. To prepare for the number of children who will attend, call Laura Munyan at 765-4889 to register.

Second vote a charm for RCS budget

By Cheryl Clary

In the words of superintendent of schools William Schwartz, last Thursday's vote on the 1990-91 budget for the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk school district "shows that this is a community that supports education." The total numbers of votes cast amounted to nearly 500 more district residents turning out for this vote — 1,860 as opposed to the approximately 1,350 who cast ballots last time.

When the budget was first presented this spring, it was defeated by less than 50 votes. "I was worried for a while," Schwartz remarked.

Originally, the spending package proposed by the RCS Board included several items that in the second proposal were divided into 10 separate propositions for voters to consider. The main portion of the budget, which included salaries, benefits and maintenance, passed 1,114 to 729.

The remaining nine propositions all passed by healthy margins: library books, 1,081 to 729; school lunches, 1,117 to 728; equipment, 1,018 to 816; interscholastic sports, 1,023 to 813; transportation, 1,153 to 685; field trips, 977 to 837; co-curricular activities (after-school clubs, student council, etc.), 993 to 827; use of buildings by community groups, 993 to 828; and summer driver education, 996 to 831.

Voting hours were extended on this budget try from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m., rather than the original 2 p.m. to 9 p.m., after several district residents requested longer hours to accommodate shift workers and others who were unable to vote during the shorter hours. Some 600 had voted by lunchtime.

School board member Sarah Hafensteiner was "ecstatic" about the vote. "It was the first significant vote that did my heart good," she said. "We wish we could get more voters, but the differences are 150 to 400 votes (on each proposition), a real positive vote."

Decision near on senior zone draft

A draft document for the proposed Bethlehem floating senior zone has been completed and will likely go to a vote by the town planning board July 17, board Chairman Martin L. Barr said last week.

A vote on the new zoning provision will send the measure to the town board for a public hearing and board vote.

Designed to "encourage the development of moderately priced multiple dwelling units for senior citizens," the provision has been criticized by a group of Hudson Avenue area residents who say it was shaped specifically to accommodate a senior housing development currently proposed for a neighborhood site.

A standing-room-only crowd of more than 50 attended the planning board review of the draft in room 106 of the town hall.

According to Town Planner Jeff Lipnicky, the senior zone proposal offers two development incentives over the planned residential district, the town's current increased-density option:

- The senior zone allows 10 units per acre, whereas the planned residential district permits eight.

- There is "slightly more expedited review process" for the senior zone. A developer would only appear before the town board for the initial zoning change because the planning board would have the power to grant final site approval.

Under the planned residential district, by contrast, developers are required to appear before the town board twice — first for the zone change and then again for final approval.

The discussion was tabled to allow Robert Alessi, legal counsel to the board, time to review the proposal.

Grads give all-night bash high marks

By Renée Hunter

Adrenalin, coffee, comedy, music and prizes helped make Saturday morning one Bethlehem Central High School graduates won't soon forget, thanks to the generosity of parents who organized an all-night bash for the class of 1990.

Graduates rocked away the morning at the Nathaniel Adams Blanchard Post of the American Legion for their last big activity as a class. The all-night graduation party was open to all the graduates, noted Bernice Christian, one of the party's organizers. "While there are several individual parties, only some kids are invited to them and they're not all together. Everyone was invited to this one," she said.

And the students did accept their invitations, with 170 of the 230 graduates attending the party.

"What's good is everyone is here," said student Miriam Weiss.

Britta Wehmann added, "If everyone else was going to go, then we were all going to go."

The graduation party was a success, by the standards of the graduates and the party planners. "It was just out of this world," said Christian. "I can't describe how much fun it was."

"It's really nice and it gives us something to do," said Kirsten Kease. "I think it's the first time something like this that was organized by parents actually worked."

The party's success was attributed to the large turnout and the generosity of the community. Almost everything for the event — from the T-shirts given each student, to the pizza, subs and ice cream — was donated by businesses and individuals in the community. Students paid $10 in advance for the tickets or $15 at the door, and that money was used to fund the door prizes.

Voorheesville counts

Throughout the morning, the party-goers played games ranging from a shooting gallery to "Smack the Pooch," listened to comedian Joe Murray and danced the night away to the Newports.

The big draw of the evening were the door prizes. The large prizes, including the grand prize of $1,000, two compact disc players, a mountain bike, and dorm refrigerator, were awarded at the end of the night, keeping almost all of the students at the party until about 5:30 a.m. Kevin Schoonover was the lucky winner of the big cash prize. Schoonover also scored another win in a drawing for a cash prize of $236.27.

Every hour during the party smaller prizes of gift certificates were awarded, and there were contests for the hula, limbo, and twister. In all, there were about 100 give-aways.

According to Christian there were no problems at the party. "No one was out of line," she said. "It was as successful as it possibly could be." The volunteers, who were parents and town officials, even had a great time — with the help of a little coffee to keep them awake, according to Christian. Some of them didn't want to leave when their shifts were up.

The organizers are hoping this is the first of many parties. "We left enough money for them to start it up next year," said Christian. She hopes that the parents of juniors who were volunteer workers at the party make the event a tradition — a sentiment shared by the students. "I didn't know what to expect," said Tracy Keyes. "I think they should continue to do it."

Christian came up with the idea of having the all-night graduation party after hearing about similar ventures throughout the country. She and Marty Lazarus started making plans for the Bethlehem bash in October and enlisted the help of other parents and community members.

High school commencement 1990

The adult lives of over 600 area youths "commenced" with high school graduation exercises last Friday night. Whether ceremonies took place outdoors, as at Voorheesville and Ravena, or indoors, as at Bethlehem Central, youthful high spirits managed to prevail through the earnest addresses of school officials, student speakers and honored guests alike. Parents and relatives, programs in hand, fanned away the near-tropical humidity as best they could. High-achieving seniors were recognized; at Bethlehem and Voorheesville the Regents scholars recognized exceeded 15 percent, as opposed to 7 percent for the rest of Albany County.

For some, it was their last sight of each other, for the rest a transformation in how they view each other and themselves.

Bob Hagyard / Mike Larabee

BC's select choir, the Choraliers, provided a pleasant break from speeches.

Roll precedes VC's rendition of "Pomp and Circumstance" as seniors join in with underclass musicians for the last time.

Taped messages adorned many a cap at the Bethlehem Central gym Friday night.

Thomas Seagle's tongue-in-cheek senior class address (the school does not recognize a valedictorian or salutatorian) was the highlight of the Bethlehem ceremony.

VC graduates line up for the trek to the podium.

For Joseph Fernandez (left), this year's VC commencement was his last as school board president; for Alan McCartney (right), his first as district superintendent. In back is J. Fredericks Volkwein, main speaker.

Frank McDermott, VC music director for nearly a quarter century, races into position.

After school program consolidates

The After School Activities Program, Inc. (ASAP) will consolidate its program to one site starting with the 1990-91 school year.

All students in the program will be housed at the A.W. Becker School. Students from Pieter B. Coeymans, Ravena Elementary and the RCS Middle School will be bused to Becker upon dismissal. With more students of the same age at one site, the program hopes to better serve the different interests of the various age groups.

This year, ASAP students were introduced to emergency medical care they could use, a mime and a storyteller who told tall tales.

ASAP has openings for the 1990-91 school year. ASAP provides care for children on days that school is open from 3 to 5:30 p.m. plus days off except for CSEA holidays. For an application or information, call 767-3459 and leave a message.

The invocation was given by Rev. Alan Rhodes of the Grace United Methodist Church. Benediction was by Rev. William Callahan of the Riverview Baptist Church.

Key addresses were given by valedictorian Nina DeCocca, and the salutatorian address was given by Joseph Croscup.

Right on the button

Perfect attendance is a notable achievement especially when it's for 6, 8 or even 9 years! Maureen Smith, a ninth-grader, has had perfect attendance for 9 years, and Courtney Tucker has been at school every day for 8 years.

Seven kindergarteners started their school careers off right with perfect attendance. They are Adrienne Davis, Justin Hoose, Courtney Ross, Robert Rutherford, Jessica Seaburg, Craig TeReile and Tara Weddell.

Students take trip

Two fourth grade classes from Hamagrael School in Delmar come on the bus with Gail Dale, teacher and several parents to see the Schoolhouse Museum and Toll Gate Museum at the Bethlehem Historical Association earlier this month. Hostess Mary Elizabeth VanOostenbrugge pointed out the various artifacts and exhibits illustrating the early history of Bethlehem. After the visit, the group left to continue their tour of historical sites in the town.

The schoolhouse museum will be open this summer to the public on Sundays from 2 to 5 p.m.

Legion post to host spaghetti dinner

Retirement means new beginnings for six BC teachers

By Debi Boucher

Bethlehem Central School District is losing half a dozen teachers this year to retirement.

At Glenmont Elementary, health and physical education teacher Paul VanDemark is retiring after more than 30 years of teaching. Principal Don Robillard called VanDemark "the ideal teacher" who has "certainly made an impact on hundreds of kids in the course of his career."

Robillard had no doubt that students would miss VanDemark. "They love him," he said. He's the kind of teacher who makes kids feel comfortable and yet still provides the structure that they need — he mixes firmness and kindness."

VanDemark said his plans were not settled, but would probably include another job of some sort. "Maybe I'll pump gas," he quipped. He will be working for the school district on a consultant basis, conducting at least one workshop for teachers as part of the "Growing Healthy" program he has been working on part-time over the last year.

After 13 years teaching elementary school students, a year at the high school level, and 17 years at the middle school, VanDemark's most recent assignment was as "a jack of all trades," he explained, in which he divided his time between teaching a health and social problems course for high school freshmen, physical education classes at the elementary school, and the "Growing Healthy" training sessions for teachers.

"He's done it all," said Robillard. "He's the kind of teacher you really have a hard time replacing."

Bethlehem Central Middle School last week honored two retirees who have been with the school since it opened 23 years ago. Principal Frederick Burdick characterized science teacher Wayne Robinson and social studies teacher Dick Buyer as "very fine teachers who were committed to the students they worked with." Both teachers have been with the district for 27 years.

Buyer, who began his teaching career in Rensselaer County in 1959, and joined the Bethlehem Central school District nine years later, said he is planning "a lot of sailing," some traveling and some course work at SUNY. A member of the Toastmasters and an avid handball player, Buyer looks forward to an active summer. In the fall, he plans to seek a part-time writing job, calling upon his degree in journalism. "I would like to try something new," said Buyer, who sees retirement as "a new beginning."

Robinson, an eighth grade science teacher, said he would miss interacting with fellow staff members and students, especially "the kids who are well-motivated and cooperative." He said in his nearly three decades of teaching he has noticed changes in the students. "There are more students coming in with problems that seem to interfere with your ability to focus on schoolwork," he said. "It's become harder and harder to motivate students."

His retirement plans include "accelerating my gardening efforts at home," as well as completing "some of the projects we put on the back burner." He said he and his wife are planning a trip to Italy next summer.

Three members of the high school faculty have also announced their retirements: Ida Catalano, Spanish teacher, Frank Keetz, social studies and economics teacher and Mary Richards, English teacher.

Catalano has been with the district for 25 years. Dr. John Hunter, principal, commented, "It's not just the longevity with Ida, it's the exuberance — she's like a young teacher, or a young student with the energy she brings to her classroom." Noting that Catalano was also involved with the Spanish Club, he said, "She's actively involved with students in and out of school."

After 30 years of teaching, Catalano said retiring would not be easy. "I will miss my colleagues," she said, "but most of all I will miss my students." She has scheduled a trip to Italy for early fall to help her with the transition, since for her, "September is going to a very emotional time." Not surprising for a professional Hunter called "the prototype language teacher."

Social studies teacher Frank Keetz, according to Hunter, "is recognized by our staff and kids as being an outstanding teacher."

In addition to teaching, Hunter said, Keetz spent numerous hours developing curriculum and tests. This year, Hunter noted, students selected Keetz as one of the high school teachers to serve as a commencement marshal for the class of 1990's graduation. He also coordinated the student group for the developmentally disabled.

After 38 years of teaching — about half of them in the BC district — Keetz said his retirement plans include some traveling, and a continuation of the research and writing he has been involved with over the years. He has published several books and articles on the subjects of baseball and economics.

"I've enjoyed it a lot," Keetz said of his teaching career. "If I had it to do over again, I'd do the same thing."

Hunter is sorry to see the veteran teacher go. "You don't replace Frank Keetz," he said, "you just lose Frank Keetz."

Mary Richards, who has been teaching 33 years, 27 of them at Bethlehem Central High School, said she will miss "sharing what I love and understand with my students." While her plans are "open-ended" at present, she looks forward to traveling and trying her hand at writing, one of her great loves along with literature.

Admiring her "extremely strong background in British literature," Hunter said Richards' students "are always actively involved in writing and reading." He added, "She is a teacher who sets standards for kids, and the kids are always shocked at how they aspire and reach those standards."

In addition to bringing a myriad of interests to her classroom, Hunter said Richards was always willing to coach her students. "It takes a lot of hard work," he said, "but she's a hard worker."

A DREAM HOME THAT BECAME A NIGHTMARE

IT'S THAT-TIME AGAIN, HONEY...

Our home is in need of cosmetic surgery, but it's the same problem — who do we call? Let's get several estimates!!

Which way do we go????

Whew!

That was some job getting all those estimates! Boy, am I confused. Was it the first one that said his siding was thicker, did the last one say his price did include insulation? What about the third one?????

Making the BIG decision.

Well Honey...

I guess the best thing to do is put all the estimates on the table and compare the price, and well take the lowest one — after all, all sidings are the same, right?

WRONG!

Isn't this siding rather wavy?

It also looks uneven. Don't you seal around openings? What, no warranty? How long did you say you were in business? Honey, I think we have a problem. We didn't consider the cost when we were buying the cheap price.

The only solution

HONEY

Kids can do the darndest things, given the opportunity.

Jeanette Koch, director of Bethlehem's Youth Employment Service, said she wants both business people and residents to know that all kinds of help from Bethlehem youth is available. "That's the thing I want to signal in on — job categories" and what youth are capable of.

"Even mothers need to know their kids are able to do a lot of things," she said.

Since she assumed her position in May, she said she has taken 100 job orders and filled 75 slots with youngsters from age 14 to 21.

She said kids can and do do many things in addition to the basic job fare such as mowing lawns or working in an office or in retailing.

Some become part-time companions to the elderly and others to younger children who might need help with an academic subject or perhaps coaching in a sport. "Kids can do house plantings or hamster and fish sit," she said.

"Somebody even called in once for a DJ," she said.

In the summer, on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Thursdays, from 2 to 4 p.m., Koch personally interviews youth at the town parks and recreation office in the Elm Avenue Park to try to determine just what they would like to do. During the school year, she is at the high school two days a month.

"It's easy to register. I see them face-to-face and list jobs they are interested in doing," she said. She Monique Chatterjee, 14, discusses job possibilities with Jeanette Koch in her office at the Elm Avenue Park.

recommends that youth update their files periodically since their interests and abilities change.

She said prospective employers are under no obligation to hire anyone YES refers to them, and that youth have the right to say no to the job order. Koch said working with youth is exciting, and that she enjoys helping them find the perfect job.

YES is funded by the town with a budget of $6,100 which is used toward salaries and brochures. Koch is currently working on a new handbook, which addresses state employment regulations and offers tips on job attitudes, interviewing and resumes.

YES is a free community service designed to help youth find work and to help residents and business people find reliable workers.

The YES staff is available to discuss the program at community, business or private group meetings, she said.

For information, Koch can be contacted at 439-0503.

Blue Eagles within striking distance

By John Bellizzi III

Bethlehem's Blue Eagles defeated Lansingburgh twice last week to rise to 9-1 in the Eastern New York Mickey Mantle League.

The score last Thursday was 12-3 at Lansingburgh. Bethlehem was powered by slugger Matt Quatraro, who was 4-for-5 including his fifth home run of the season. Andre Candieux and Chris Black each contributed two singles and John DiAnni knocked in two runs with a double. Matt Shortell got the win, pitching five shutout innings. In four appearances, Shortell has yet to surrender a run this season.

The Blue Eagles squeaked by Lansingburgh at home on Saturday, with Mark Houston's solo home run in the bottom of the sixth putting Bethlehem ahead for the 3-2 victory. Third baseman Mike Aylward batted in a run with a double and made two outstanding defensive plays. Winning pitcher Josh Lanni (3-0) went the distance.

Bethlehem had a tough contest scheduled for Monday evening against undefeated Burnt Hills (11-0). Friday's opponent will be Sorensco at the East Greenbush Babe Ruth field. Bethlehem will host Brunswick on Saturday.

Audubon picnic honors volunteers

The New York Audubon Society recently held its first picnic to honor volunteers. Volunteers from Altamont, Albany, Delmar Selkirk, Ravena and Catskill gathered for a day of games, hiking, food, fun and relaxation. Grand Union of East Greenbush donated a cake inscribed "Three Cheers for Volunteers" presented personally by Herman Asam, manager, who attended the picnic with his family. Don Formica, owner/operator of McDonald's of Ravena and Delmar donated orange drink and McDonald's gift certificates.

Skeels perfecting his trade at Heritage

Catchers who hit from the left side are a rarity of high value in baseball. The Albany-Colonie Yankees have one in Andy Skeels.

Furthermore, Andy is the only lefthanded-hitting catcher in the history of professional baseball to be born in New Zealand.

People like to say that the mask, chest protector, shinguards and the big mitt are the tools of ignorance, but that doesn't apply to this fun-loving 24-year-old. He's doing nicely in his first year in Double-A ball, especially defensively. He's quick behind the plate, and Eastern League baserunners are learning to respect his arm. He has cut down the best of them trying to steal second, and he has picked off several on lightning throws to first base.

And he's only one year away from a four-year degree at the University of Arkansas. His father holds a Ph.D., speaks seven languages and the family now lives in California. So much for ignorance.

Young Andrew was a star at Oxnard College in California for two years, then was recruited by Arkansas to replace a catcher headed for the professional draft. Let Andy take it from there:

"The guy stayed another year, so I was a backup catcher, played the outfield and did some DH. I was the slowest outfielder in the history of the University of Arkansas, but I could hit. I was studying communications, but, sad to say, I was actually majoring in eligibility. I have one more year to go, and I'd like to go back and finish, but there's no way to fit that into the baseball calendar."

He was drafted in '87 by the Padres, played his rookie year in Spokane and two years in the Class A California League. The Yankees got him last December in a minor league trade, dealing infielder Dean Kelley from the Fort Lauderdale roster to the Padres for this happy prankster.

Getting traded in the minors sends mixed messages to young hopefuls. Is the organization giving up on you, or does somebody else want you? Is there a surplus of guys playing your position? Is some hot-shot draftee jumping ahead of you?

"It was good for me," says Andy, who has been playing well for the A-C Yanks. "I was supposed to be the first in the Padres organization to jump to Double-A in my second year, but it didn't happen because the Double-A manager had a more experienced guy in mind. Anyway, I was stuck behind two of the best catchers in baseball, Santiago and Alomar, so the trade was a big break for me."

Benito Santiago, the San Diego catcher, is regarded as the best in the American League if not in major league baseball. The Padres also had what many experts considered the next-best in Sandy Alomar, but until he was traded to Cleveland last winter, Alomar had to labor in Triple-A. Then last week Santiago suffered a broken arm and is out indefinitely.

At Heritage Park Skeels finds

himself in another competitive position. With the Padres he was stuck behind talented catchers. With A-C he expected to replace Mitch Lyden, an eight-year veteran and a crowd favorite who appeared headed for Triple-A, but when that didn't come about, Skeels found himself a backup. Then the field got crowded when John Ramos, last year's A-C regular, was returned by Columbus.

Until last week, Ramos was sidelined by injury, a situation that gave Skeels playing time, and he has been making the best of it.

"He does everything well," says his manager, Dan Radison. "Swings the bat well, hits line drives. He portrays the typical oldtime catcher, hard-nosed, tough. You can just look at him and tell he's a catcher, the way he's built, the way he handles himself."

Not that he has the build of an Army tank, like Yogi or Ernie Lombardi. Andy Skeels packs only 185 pounds on a 5-11 frame without a square inch of fat. Meanwhile he is the youngest of three A-C catchers, hoping for a chance to get ahead in one of civilization's most demanding professions.

"All I can hope for is to make the most of the opportunities I get," he says. "If I don't fit into the Yankees' plans, maybe somebody else will be interested. I know I can play in the big leagues."

Meanwhile, the dream lives on as his 25th birthday approaches. So do the words of his well-travelled father, whom Andy regards as the smartest man he's ever known.

"He told me that the biggest thing you can learn in life is that there's a lot in life to learn."

Red Sox faithful have their best chance to see some of the organization's most prized recruits this week when the Elmira Pioneers make their only visit of the season to nearby Pittsfield for a New York-Penn League series.

The Pioneers, for more than 20 years Boston's short-season Class A affiliate, will face the embryonic Mets at Wahconah Park Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday. Game time is 7 p.m., but there may be an earlier time on the Fourth holiday.

The Pioneers will play a single game in Oneonta against the O-Yanks Sunday at 6 p.m. Their only other appearance in these parts will be at Oneonta in late July.

We had hoped to give you a rundown of the Red Sox draft, but the information promised by the Fenway front office never came.

Anyway, Sox fans will enjoy the new crop, which has to be good to compete in the NYP. The Geneva Cubs, who play in the same division as the Pioneers, used their top three selections to draft pitchers, and assigned all three to Geneva, which gives you some idea of the caliber the NYP offers.

New Scotland doubles Swift Rd. water coverage

By Bob Hagyard

Two rival developers will have to bury the hatchet for now if they want to sell off lots in their neighboring developments on Swift Road south of Voorheesville.

The New Scotland Town Board voted last Wednesday to include Peter Baltis' Swift Road Estates and Thomas Coyle's Scotland Hills in the Swift Road Water District. The two would split the cost.

That's an additional 36 taps for a district that now handles 33 residences.

Expansion won't happen if Baltis and Coyle go their separate ways. Some current Swift Road users don't want the system shut down and restarted twice to accommodate separate taps, and the five town board members agree with that view. If they don't get the taps, they don't get Albany County Health Department approval for a water system. And without that, the town planning board will withhold final subdivision approval, and nothing will be built.

Plus the two "can save money by joining in now," the town board was told by Eugene Sneringer Jr., attorney for Baltis. Coyle, he added, likewise "wants to market his property now, not fall behind."

Town officials say the water will be there for the 69 taps that will result. The 33 now on line consume 9,500 gallons per day, according to Councilman John Sgarlata. Additional customers will raise consumption to an estimated 17,880 gallons per day, well under the 20,000-gallon maximum the town may purchase from Bethlehem, the source of supply.

Airport

ample time to examine whatever plan is recommended. The resolution was bypassed for voting, but Darbyshire says he believes it later will be supported. It would require the legislature to provide for a one month study time before voting on any airport plan. During the study time, a public hearing also would be scheduled so that public comment could be aired on what Darbyshire terms "a transaction that will have far-reaching effects on the people of the Albany County and the residents and businesses of the region."

Commenting on his resolution, Darbyshire said that "a lot of proposals have been flying around for a year. At a certain point there will be a final proposal and under customary procedure, legislators would have only a weekend to look at the plan before voting on it."

The county's move to sell or lease the airport "is not something we can go into willy-nilly," County Executive James J. Coyne pointed out.

Coyne has emphasized that the county's main goal in considering any change in the airport status is three-fold: "to bring in revenue, to create a surplus of funds and to cut property taxes."

"The only reason we started looking into selling the airport is because of the impact of federal and state cutbacks in aid. Money we normally could count on is not there anymore and I don't think that property owners should shoulder the burden," Coyne explained.

Celebrations for all on the Fourth

By Robert Webster Jr.

Looking for something to do with the family? Want an summer activity that has something to offer for every member of your group? The upcoming Independence Day holiday is the perfect reason to get out and enjoy summer with family and friends, and with the variety of activities being held throughout the Capital District, there is definitely something for everyone.

Price Chopper Supermarkets, Armour and the New York State Office of General Services are coming together to co-sponsor one of the Capital District's largest salutes to Independence Day next Wednesday at the Empire State Plaza and West Capitol Park with their Fourth of July Festivities.

The event begins at 2 p.m., culminating in a gigantic fireworks display at 9:15 p.m. In between, there are special performances by many popular performers of the past. Shirley Alston Reeves, former lead singer with the Shirelles, will perform at 7:15 p.m., and The Drifters will take you under the boardwalk at 8:15 p.m. at the plaza. Food and crafts will be offered as well, and everyone is invited.

A nine-foot tall Uncle Sam will be at the entrance to West Park, and he and a life-size "Betsy Ross" will distribute toys to the children as they enter. At the park, magic shows by Mister Doodle, comedy juggling by the Gizmo Guys and performances from the Yiengst Magic Circus will entertain for half-hour intervals from 2:30 to 6 p.m. From 5 to 6 p.m., the River Valley Sweet Adelines will sing and the Yankee Doodle Band will perform from 6 to 7:15 p.m. at the plaza.

The city of Albany is not alone in its celebration of the fourth, however. Troy is holding its own family day as well, on Sunday, July 1 at the Riverfront Park. The program begins at 1 p.m. and finishes up with a fireworks display at 9:30 p.m.

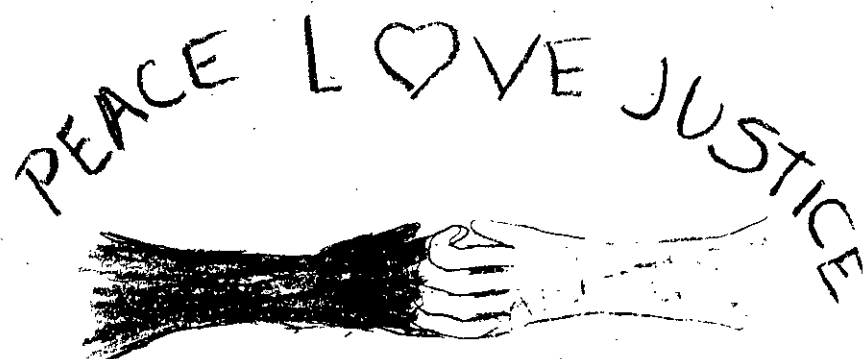

Afternoon entertainment prior to the fireworks will include a musical presentation by the cast of Beatlemania, tie-dye booths, arts and crafts, a water-ski show team called New Horizons, puppet theater and an antique car show display. It is free and open to the public.

Bethlehem Town Hall has its own celebration in store as well when it holds its family day at the Elm Avenue Town Park on July 4. The Women's Republican Club will be holding a chicken barbecue at noon, and the town sponsored activities will run for the entire day.

The town hall will be closed for the Independence Day holiday, as well as all state and national offices. All banks throughout the Capital District will be closed, in addition to the Bethlehem Town Library. All major shopping malls in the area will be open on modified schedules.

Marian Smith created her "What the Flag Means to Me" essay as part of an assignment created by her teacher Margaret Cook of Hamagrael School.

Antshillvania

An invasion of ants in June is nothing new. But when they're over three feet tall, with names like Bryant, Antony and Nantcy, you get a little, well, antsy. But do not fear.

The invasion is the culmination of a week-long children's festival in Feura Bush sponsored by the CMM Ministries Center.

Antshillvania is a musical, based on the story of the prodigal son, starring 82 children from 30 Capital District churches. The children each pay a $25 fee to participate in the Summer Children's festival for the week.

According to Bill Wolmer, Executive Director of the center, in the musical, a young ant leaves the colony, much to the despair of his pair-ants, and the story takes off from there.

"The children have been hard at work all week," Wolmer said. "We have 82 kids and 20 staff members working on the musical, which was written by the California team of Jimmy and Carol Owens. We did the musical back a couple of years ago, and it went over so well that we've wanted to repeat it for a while."

The Friday evening performance, "antennae" and all, begins at 8 p.m. The evening is free of charge. For information, call 768-2818.

Check out Hunter Mt. festival fare

The Hunter Mt. summer festivals, often referred to as the "summer festival capital of the world," are gearing up for yet another season of music, food, and entertainment.

The festival is scheduled to begin this year with the Italian Festival from June 29 to July 1, starring Tony Bennett on July 1, Vic Damone with two shows on June 30 and Anna Maria Alberghetti on June 29.
In addition to the headliners, there will be strolling musicians, a large selection of arts and crafts and Italian food and drink.

An hour-long parade, featuring more than 25 floats, a 36 piece brass band from Germany, the Clydesdale horses, clowns, antique autos, and local and state digni-taries will begin at noon on Thursday,

July 5 to signal the official opening of the 1990 Hunter Mt. Festivals. The second major event is the 16-day German Alps Festival which runs from July 5 to July 22, closed on Mondays. More than 150 entertainers will appear, 60 of whom will be coming directly from Germany, including Tony Marshall and his 36 piece brass band. In addition to the musical entertainment, the festival also offers the M.I.
Hummelfest in Colonel's Hall at the Hunter Mountain Base Lodge.

SPOTLIGHT TEENSCENE

By Juliette Braun

Well, summer is finally here and most of you are probably pretty excited just to be out of school and have time to rest, but there are lots of activities out there for you to participate in once the summer doldrums set in, and things start to get a little boring.

If you like to work out and you are over 16 the YMCA offers basic and advanced aerobic workouts at 5:30 and 5:45 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays, and Fridays. Aquatic sports lovers will enjoy the swimming lessons offered from 10 a.m. to 11 a.m. on Saturdays and Tuesdays from 7:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m. For more information and to learn about the other services offered by the YMCA, call 449-7196.

If you like more competitive sports the Colonie Youth Center in conjunction with the Village of Colonie Youth Council will be sponsoring a series of four-day sports camps throughout the summer. The first of these focuses on soccer and runs from 9 a.m. to noon at Cook Park in Colonie from July 9 through 12. The purpose of these camps is to aid participants in learning the basic skills involved in each sport, as well as to give them a sense of community involvement and teach them the value of cooperation. For information, call 869-8328.

Those who enjoy experiencing new cultures and traditions shouldn't miss the Native American Crafts Festival. The festival should prove especially interesting to young people because it focuses on a culture in which adolescents were considered old enough to become functional participants in the adult world. The festival will provide a unique opportunity to sample native American foods, and purchase Iroquois crafts such as baskets, clothing, lacrosse sticks and art. There will also be a demonstration as artisans displaying traditional methods of basket weaving, needle, bead, and silver work. The festival will take place at the New York State Museum, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m. on July 4 and 5.

Bird lovers will enjoy the fourth program in the teen workshop series "Creature Features." This will take place on July 3, at 7 p.m. and deals with all types of birds. Featured are ducks, geese, cockatoo, horn-billed mynah and jungle fowl. For information, call 474-5801.

Family meetings help summer scheduling

Last week this column discussed the importance of knowing where your children are this summer and planning safe activities for youth. With the change in schedule and vacations summer brings, it is often difficult for parents to keep track of their own activities, never mind the children's. That's where family meetings can help.

Family meetings provide an opportunity for parents and children to work together on everyday matters and difficulties which are a part of living together. Participating in weekly family meetings encourages children to take greater responsibility for their behavior and the quality of family life.

At these meetings family members make plans and decisions together and try to find solutions for resolving family issues. This approach has the advantage of involving all family members (except very young children) in sharing responsibility for making and carrying out decisions. Family trips and recreation, relationships among children, household rules and chores can all be considered and resolved at these meetings. These meetings are not intended, however, for making decisions about family matters which only adults should decide.

Next week a list of guidelines for holding family meetings will be printed.

Read the fine print and get more for your money

As Americans plan their summer vacation, they will be pleased to find that many rental companies are advertising "free unlimited mileage—highly desirable for today's cost-conscious families who want to get out on the open road and go.

Renters must be cautious when choosing a rental company. The big car rental companies may advertise unlimited free mileage, but the offer may carry as many as 10 restrictions that limit the availability or actually drive up the price of the car. That means savings can go right out the window.

By shopping wisely for unlimited free mileage rates, careful consumers can still rent cars economically for upcoming family vacations.

Take the time to read the fine print. Make sure the car rental bargain you choose stays a bargain once you're behind the wheel, pick a car rental company that guarantees unrestricted free mileage. Find a company with no "strings" attached to its unlimited mileage policy.

Keeping costs low is important, but you should also make sure the rental company caters to leisure travelers. Look for a company that offers family-oriented auxiliary equipment, such as child car seats, luggage, bike and ski racks, and has facilities that make traveling with children and lots of luggage as easier.

Finally, if all of this comparison shopping seems confusing, don't be afraid to consult a travel agent. Consumers never pay extra for the valuable, money-saving advice that travel agents provide.

"Make a list of the desirable design features in today's road cars," wrote one automotive journalist, "and it would describe the Saab." Which is why, if you've ever thought about such a list, there's never been a better time to visit your Saab dealer.

Because through July 31st, you can lease a car that inspires quotes like the one above for the cost of driving cars that inspire considerably less.

And for what amounts to a modest monthly fee, you'll be putting yourself behind the wheel of a car of anything but modest virtues.

In a Saab, spirited performance is combined with a superb safety record. One that the Highway Loss Data Institute shows to be the best in its class. Sensuous leather seats are combined with the practicality of fold down rear seats to create a carrying capacity that rivals a station wagon's.
