Secor calls landfill sites questionable

By Susan Graves

The choice of at least several of the nine potential landfill sites in Bethlehem for Albany County is puzzling, said Bruce Secor, commissioner of public works.

The ANSWERS Watershed Landfill Siting Report, prepared by Malcolm Pirnie, Inc., a consulting firm on Washington Avenue Extension in Albany, describes a total of 15 potential landfill sites in Albany County. Secor, who has yet to fully evaluate the 148-page report released last week, said, "I'm not sure how they made that list," which includes Bethlehem sites zoned AA Residential, wetlands and areas with development currently under way or planned, he said.

"One site is adjacent to Chadwick Square," he said, while another near the Dowerskill is a main trunk for the Bethlehem sewer line. "I have serious concerns about all of these," he said.

The sites in Bethlehem identified in the report as B-1 through B-9 (see accompanying map) include: a 530-acre parcel one mile from the town park between Wemple Road, Elm Avenue and Feura Bush Road; 190 acres between Waldenmaier Road, Conrail and Owens Corning Fiberglas; 330 acres east of Feura Bush near the Bethlehem/New Scotland border; 480 acres between the Selkirk rail yard and Rupert Road east of Bridge Road; 280 acres between Route 396, Selkirk rail yards and South Albany Road; 395 acres between Beaver Dam Road, Conrail and the the Vlomankill; 200 acres between the Vlomankill and Conrail; 190 acres between Beaver Dam Road, Cottage Lane and Conrail; and 225 acres south of Beaver Dam Road, east of the Thruway and north of Route 396.

Three potential sites in Coeymans and three in Guelderland are also identified in the report.

Willard A. Bruce, director of planning for the City of Albany, said out of courtesy to property owners in the selected areas, "We've agreed as representatives not to discuss specific sites" until property owners are notified. About 200 property owners of the 15 sites are being notified by mail this week. He said ANSWERS, the Albany's regional waste disposal system, is hoping to have a permanent landfill within the next four to five years.

"There are sites (in Bethlehem) that have less impact than others, but I see impact in all," said Supervisor Ken Ringler. He sent a letter to residents who would be affected by the landfill sitings assuring them the town has not agreed to any location in Bethlehem "for the siting of such a facility."

Those residents and the public will have an opportunity to attend an informational meeting about the potential sites at a meeting on Monday, July 1, at 7:30 p.m. at Bethlehem Central High School. Bruce said he along with George Nealon, Al-

BC colleagues praise Fuller for longtime board service

By Susan Graves

Even though Sheila Fuller is looking forward to her new job as a member of the town council, she will leave her longtime post as Bethlehem Central School District president with a lump in her throat. Fuller, who could legally serve on both boards, which meet on alternate Wednesdays, chose to resign the school post when she was selected by the 54-member Republican Town Committee on May 30 to fill the term of Democrat Robert Burns, who resigned last month.

"It's getting tougher, the closer it gets," she said, about her plans to officially resign at the July 10 district meeting. "The school district will always be very special, no doubt about it, just as the people always will be," she said. During that meeting, she said she'll stay for the vote on the next president, "And then I'll leave."

Fuller's association with the district

goes back to 1971 when her children were in elementary school and she became involved with the Hamagrael PTA. In those early years, she said, people began encouraging her to run for a board seat. In 1978, she took that advice and ran and won, starting her 13-year career, eight of which were as board president.

Her decision to make a commitment to the board, she said, was in part because at the time, "There was a great deal of emphasis on buildings and buses." Fuller said she ran because she "felt more emphasis should be on basics," and that the people should have a voice through representation on the board.

"I don't think there is anyone more knowledgeable about both the district and the community," said Superintendent Leslie Loomis of Fuller. "She has a real understanding, respect and admiration for the people and the school community." In turn, he said, she has "won nearly universal respect from all groups."

"She always been a person who's been strongly committed to education — particularly to student-centered education," said J. Briggs McAndrews,

Police make DWI arrests

Bethlehem police recently arrested four motorists for misdemeanor driving while intoxicated.

John D. Hoffman, 19, of 3 Hancock Drive, Glenmont was arrested for DWI Saturday, May 25, after police responded to an accident at 165 Wemple Road, police said.

Timothy Burr Flint, 22, of 416 Kenwood Ave., Delmar was arrested for DWI and for felony aggravated unlicensed operation on Sunday, June 2, after being stopped for a traffic violation on Elsmere and Kenwood avenues, police said.

Brenda Lee Brush, 27, of Westerlo was arrested for DWI Thursday, June 6, on Route 9W near Bender Lane after being stopped for failing to dim her headlights.

Thomas McMay, 54, of Sand Creek Road, Colonie was arrested for DWI Saturday, May 25, on Route 32 near Elm Avenue after being stopped for speeding.

Delmar boy injured in motorcycle accident

A Delmar teenager was injured in an accident last week when he was thrown from the motorcycle he was driving.

Eli Z. Abry, 16, of 40 Alden Court, Delmar, failed to negotiate a slight curve on Route 32 near Murray Avenue on Monday, June 3, and hit a guardrail support, ac-ording to police. The motorcycle fell over and slid approximately 250 feet after leaving the paved portion of the road. Abry, thrown from the bike, was wearing a helmet at the time of the accident, police said.

Abry, ticketed for operating a motorcycle without a motorcycle license, was taken to Albany Medical Center Hospital for minor injuries. He was treated and released the same day, according to a hospital spokesman.

VCS budget vote caps tough process

By Robert Webster Jr.

Voorheesville residents will have the final say on the Voorheesville Central School District's 1991-92 proposed budget today (Wednesday), when the annual vote will be held from 2 to 9:30 p.m. in the high school foyer.

With Gov. Mario Cuomo's veto of nearly $500 million in school aid, the Voorheesville district stands to lose over $700,000 in state aid, a loss that will bring about a 12 to 13 percent tax rate increase for residents.

"The handwriting was on the wall Feb. 1," said Voorheesville board of education President C. James Coffin at a budget hearing last Wednesday. "This budget process would be difficult."

Superintendent Alan McCartney said the district's $10.4 million proposal is a "no growth budget" that is less than one percent over the current $10,305,087 budget.

The tax rate increase, down from 16 percent because the Town of Guilderland's recent assessment will generate more money for the district, is due to the loss of revenue the district faces. In addition, the district lost more than $100,000 in state aid through cuts made earlier this year, according to McCartney. Although expenditures were reduced to cover the loss, money from the district's fund balance had to be used, reducing the amount of revenue available from the fund balance for the 1991-92 budget. Thus $935,000 in expenditures were cut from the proposed budget.

"We will still meet the nationwide standards of excellence," Coffin said, "But we must continue to ask ourselves what do we want our children to have, and how do we give it to them?"

The process will not become any easier in the future, Coffin added: creating a budget for next year looks to be as difficult a process as this year's has been.

"We bit the bullet and made substantial cuts to offer a great program," he said. "To continue making cuts would be detrimental to Voorheesville and the district. I hope the community realizes this and bites the proverbial bullet to vote yes."

One of the greater cutbacks, said McCartney, was the elimination of 11.6 full-time employee positions. The reduction in staff would lead to larger classrooms, he said, but they would still be under the Capital District average, which is around 16 students.

In addition to staffing cuts, the budget is also calling for the elimination of summer school, and would only offer driver education courses on a tuition basis during the summer.

Field trips, some bus runs, expenditures for materials and supplies and some electives at the high school level are all items that have fallen to the budget ax, said McCartney, but they are necessary to try and strike a balance between the tax rate and services.

"We've got a problem, we're a community, and we have to come together to make this work," he said. "We must come together to answer the problem and provide for our children."

Board member David Teuten's term expires this year, and with his decision not to seek re-election, only three candidates remain. Running for the seat are Joseph Cotazino, Peter Murphy and William Parmalee.

Clerk, supervisor lock horns

By Debi Boucher

The battle raged on at New Scotland Town Hall last week, with Supervisor Herbert Reilly and Clerk Edita Probst once again locking horns over the issue of a recently-installed computer system that Reilly says won't work without Probst's cooperation.

At the town board's June 5 meeting, Reilly asked for a resolution requiring Probst to turn over monthly vouchers to his account clerk in order that the amounts scheduled for payment be entered onto monthly statements as encumbered funds. The monthly statements generated by the computer could then be used to ensure prior to the board's approval of bill payments that those payments would not cause negative balances in town accounts, Reilly said.

Probst objected to the concept, saying unapproved payments could not be marked as encumbered funds, but Councilman John Sgarlata disagreed, saying it is common accounting practice. "You can encumber monies that have been appropriated as they come in," he said. "By encumbering them, you're taking them off line," so the same monies are not spent twice.

Probst said she had earlier expressed willingness to work with Reilly's account clerk, Patricia McVee, on the new computer system. "You have gone behind my back," she accused Reilly at the meeting, prompting Councilman Craig Shufelt to suggest the matter be discussed in private. Sgarlata offered to meet with Probst and McVee in private, a suggestion complicated by Shufelt's request to be involved in the meeting. "I'll back out," said Sgarlata. "I don't want this to turn into a dinner party."

Reilly, who withdrew his resolution at the meeting, said Monday that Sgarlata had arranged a tentative meeting with Probst and McVee for later this week.

Probst also indicated she would like a computer terminal in her office, and said she would not tolerate having her responsibilities infringed upon. Said Sgarlata, "We're not trying to usurp your office, but we have to be a part of it." He said McVee's handling of the vouchers "would be in addition to what you do."

As town clerk, Probst uses the vouchers, once they have been approved for payment, to write monthly financial abstracts which are presented to the board at the time it votes to pay the bills. Reilly said Monday that Probst would still be able to type up the abstracts herself using the vouchers, although the work would be redun-

Firm sues for Clarksville bills

By Debi Boucher

New Scotland's beleaguered Clarksville Water District has yielded a new problem for the town: a lawsuit over unpaid bills by the contractor who constructed the water tank.

Frederick Riester

Memphis Construction, Inc., of Memphis in Onondaga County has filed suit for unpaid bills, according to Town Attorney Frederick Riester, who informed the town board of the legal action at its June 5 meeting. Riester had warned the board back in early February that the firm had filed a notice of intent, a preliminary action to filing a lawsuit, over unpaid bills totaling more than $140,000. At an executive session held Feb. 6, the board gave Riester authority to negotiate with both Memphis Construction and Laberge Engineering and Consulting Group, Ltd. of Colonie, the principal firm on the project, to settle potential legal disputes. Although Laberge has taken no action, Riester said at the time that firm might also take legal action to resolve unpaid bills. The town owes Laberge approximately $75,000 for work on the water district.

The bills had been held pending a full audit performed by the Latham accounting firm Williams, Matt and Rutnik late last year; the audit, required by the federal Farmers Home Administration, the project's primary source of funding, revealed the water district to be $173,600 over its $2.2 million budget, much of it in engineering fees.

With the blessing of the town board, Riester will tackle the lawsuit under the auspices of his newly formed law firm, Iseman, Cunningham, Riester & Hyde. After 22 years with the Albany law firm DeGraff, Foy, Holt-Harris & Mealy, of which he became a partner in 1975, Riester struck out on his own with three other DeGraff, Foy colleagues effective June 1.

Astown attorney, Riester is paid approximately $11,000 for his services, which he defines as dispensing legal advice to town officials as needed, drafting ordinances for the town board's consideration and handling Bond Anticipation Notes and other funding issues. Litigation, he explained, "is an entirely different animal" that typically takes a great deal of time and effort. Thus lawsuits, along with the creation of water districts, are typically outside the realm of a town attorney's duties, and are handled separately. Under town law, Riester explained, the town has the option to hire anyone to represent it in a legal case, including the town attorney. In court matters, Riester said, he always acts under the name of his law partnership, which he likened to a marriage.

Riester said Friday that he has met with Laberge in an attempt to figure out the Memphis bills but had not been in contact with anyone from Memphis. Bradford Olin, executive vice president with Memphis, declined comment on Monday, citing the pending litigation. Riester explained that he had worked through Laberge since the firm was the town's representative on the project. "I can't tell whether Memphis's quantities are good, bad or indifferent," he said. "Laberge was there, so they should know."

The town's primary dispute over the construction bills concerned the firm's method of billing, Riester said: there was some uncertainty over whether certain items should have been billed by quantity or by the job. In addition, the town had submitted a "punch list" of work that required completion or repairs that had not been taken care of. Riester said at the board meeting that such a punch list, outstanding or not, was no basis for non-payment of bills.

Riester said he hopes to resolve the Memphis suit as quickly as possible in light of recent developments with the water district. At the same town board meeting, Kevin Phelan, associate hydrogeologist with Dunn Geoscience Engineering Co., the Colonie-based firm that has been working to resolve the water problems caused by nitrate contamination at the wellfield, reported that a wellfield management plan has now been completed. The plan now awaits comment from the state and county health departments and from FmHA. If all the necessary approvals come through without delay, Phelan said "we could be running water sometime this summer."

RCS board adopts new program

By Regina Bulman

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Board of Education has endorsed a new program designed to encourage middle school pupils to seek advice and assistance with problems.

To encourage student-teacher bonding and dispel myths and misinformation that often circulate among students, the board at a recent meeting embraced a new program to encourage children to ask when they need to seek advice on health-related questions.

The program, suggested by physical education teacher Bonnie O'Connor, was initiated in the middle school to help pupils who had questions about sex, pregnancy and other important subjects but were either afraid to ask or didn't know who to ask.

Plans for the program include interested teachers and staff volunteering to make themselves available to students with questions or concerns. Adults who participate in the program would place a special sticker on the door to their room indicating they are available to listen.

At a board meeting late last month, two new policies regarding high school band concerts and interscholastic sports teams were also adopted.

The board agreed to begin charging a small admission fee at the high school's four music concerts beginning with the fall performance in October.

Scott Andrews, music department coordinator, made a written request and music teacher Brent Wheat personally appealed to the board to allow a charge of 50 cents for students and $1 for adults at senior high concerts.

"This modest charge would be made for us to raise revenue, alleviate the problem of having to sell candy bars or light bulbs and free us up to teach music, which is what we should be doing," said Wheat.

Wheat said revenue from the admission charges would be used to offset the cost of the bands' trips to Empire State Plaza and other musical events. He said the department would also like to be able to offer a music scholarship to students pursuing careers in music.

Board members questioned whether such a charge would discourage attendance at concerts, but Wheat said small admission charges are successful in other districts.

The board also approved a new policy for the district's athletic handbook regarding quitting an athletic team. Under the new guidelines, students who quit a team without permission from a coach cannot participate in any sport during the next two sports seasons.

According to Athletic Director Stuart Nock, the policy is meant to teach students responsibility and commitment.

"This is not an attempt to penalize kids who have had a bad experience, made a bad choice or find they just don't enjoy being on the team. It's meant for the kids who quit in a huff because they feel they haven't had enough playing time," said Nock.

"We just want to teach the kids responsibility, loyalty and stick-to-itiveness as they would also need to show at any job they would have."

The new policy guidelines will be included in the official student handbook and will be distributed to all students participating in interscholastic sports.

Older graduates find college rewarding

By Debi Boucher

Not all college graduates are young and untried. Two Delmar residents who graduated last month from the College of Saint Rose in Albany have amassed lifetimes of experience to which their new degrees are merely the icing on the cake.

Kenneth D. Mosher, who earned his degree in business management after attending Saint Rose part time since 1980, said he has no plans to use his degree professionally. "I'm old enough to retire," he said with a chuckle, explaining his reasons for pursuing a degree were "just personal."

What triggered his decade-long college career, he said, was a political science course he took at Saint Rose. The interest Mosher found in that subject, however, was overshadowed by a subsequent course in business ethics, a topic he notes is emphasized in schools today.

Mosher, who lives on Royal Boulevard with his wife, Anne, has been involved in local Little League, Red Cross, Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts. An employee of General Electric in Schenectady, he earned much of his course credits while working nights and attending classes during the day. "It was a lot of fun," he says of his college experience. The Moshers' four children, three daughters and a son, came home to attend their father's graduation from as far away as Boston and Virginia, he said.

Another Delmar resident, Marjorie O'Brien of Preston Road, graduated from Saint Rose this year after a career as a registered nurse and time out to raise a family of five. "It took me 30 years to get my degree," she quipped, but those years were full ones, between working fulltime at Good Samaritan Nursing Home in Delmar, raising children and serving 10 years on the Bethlehem Central School District Board of Education. She was also a Girl Scout leader for 10 years, and has spent nearly the same number of years as a town Republican committeeperson.

Having begun her college career after becoming a nurse, she returned to college at Saint Rose in 1981, and an internship with the state legislature back then led to her present full-time position as a legislative research analyst. With degree in hand, she is now eager to begin graduate work in educational administration, which will dovetail nicely with her work covering the education and higher education committees in the legislature.

O'Brien doesn't plan to take any time off before diving into graduate studies. "Why waste time?" she said. Pronouncing her continuing education "extremely worthwhile," she said schooling is something she thrives on. "Once you get the hang of it, once you get into it, it's addictive," she said.

Feura Bush pays lasting tribute to veterans

By Susan Graves

Once again Feura Bush has a veterans memorial. Charley Houghtaling, who spearheaded the effort, said the project "snow-balled" once it got going.

"This spring, Charley went right at it, and now it's done," said retired Army Sgt. Maj. Bill Bailey, commander of the Voorheesville American Legion Post. But Houghtaling insists his job was easy: "If I ask, they're there to help."

The old tribute to veterans is a wooden sign with the names of World War II dead. The new memorial is dedicated to all veterans from the Revolutionary War to the present.

The memorial, located on the grounds of the Jerusalem Reformed Church on Route 9W, will be officially dedicated in a special ceremony on Saturday, June 15, at 1 p.m.

Retired Air Force Master Sgt. John Loucks, Feura Bush Neighborhood Association treasurer, said one of the nicest parts of the project came as a surprise. "Almost everything was donated," he said. When Houghtaling went to pick up the bronze plaque from Century Monument Co. in Rensselaer he was told, "Your share is zero," he said. "It's been like that," since the idea for a monument first came up, said Houghtaling. The church agreed to provide the land for the monument, and businesses, organizations and individuals took it from there. GE Plastics in Selkirk donated the 28-foot-high flag pole, money was collected in a glass jar at Houghtaling's market and many offered their services to make the monument a reality. Peter K. Frueh lent his equipment for excavating work at the site. "It was a real community effort," Houghtaling said. He said he's especially pleased the project was completed this year since it complements an overall sprucing up in town. "I'm glad we did it this year because of the new bridge, road work and new sidewalks." One thing that still is needed for the monument, a large stone with the bronze plaque, is lighting, Loucks said.

Town officials and many veterans groups will attend the dedication ceremony along with representatives of the New Scotland, Voorheesville and Onesquethaw fire departments. U.S. Rep. Michael McNulty will be the guest speaker. Representatives from the Gold Star Mothers will also lay a wreath donated by Danker Florist.

Raise the Flag — and fly it!

Three-quarters of a century ago, President Woodrow Wilson gave voice to what is perhaps the best patriotic tribute to the American Flag.

In a Flag Day address in 1915, the President reminded the nation that:

"The things that the Flag stands for were created by the experiences of a great people. Everything that it stands for was written by their lives.

"The Flag is the embodiment, not of sentiment, but of history. It represents the experiences made by men and women, the experiences of those who do and live under that Flag."

America will observe, with reverent respect, Flag Day again on Friday of this week. It behooves all citizens to fly Old Glory on that day (as at other appropriate times) and also to see that it is honored properly by adherence to the code of Flag etiquette which even every youngster knows.

Why is June 14 designated as Flag Day? It is the anniversary of the formal adoption of the Stars and Stripes in 1777 by the Continental Congress.

The late unlamented

The sad part about the demise of the Democratic Party's scheme to redistrict Albany County solely to its own benefit is just that even today hacks can be found to admire such a travesty and declare it to be art.

Regardless of whatever County Executive Coyne's motives might have been, he has performed a notable service for his constituents, both today's and those of another day.

Additional time gained for scrutiny of the intricacies of redistricting is a real plus.

When the full light of publicity was switched on, the stealthy players stood frozen in place like intruders in the night. Now they will have a second chance — either to compound the misdemeanor or to "see the light" and redeem themselves. May the light shine upon them.

A legendary man of many legends

Millions of us became acquainted with Paul Muni, Jean Hersholt, Lionel Barrymore, or Robert Young as the "role models" for the kindly, rumpled codgers who dispensed recovery pills, uttered sage sayings, and prescribed the milk of human kindness.

But as models they were also shadows. Sometimes the real thing comes along, as well — black bag carriers we've known like Ira Le Fevre, Anna Perkins, Marge Smith, and the late John Fayette Mosher and Robert Faust. Such as they have ministered to whole generations of us.

Towering among them for decades has been that giant of a physician, Frank C. Maxon, whose earliest acquaintance with the practice of medicine in this area goes back some 58 years. It was with pleasure that we heard the introduction and the citation when Albany Medical College, his alma mater, conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Science on him last month. The words of Dean Anthony Tartaglia in presenting Dr. Maxon for the honor perhaps say it all best:

"A masterful diagnostician, superb teacher, extraordinary character, excellent clinician — one of the old school who firmly believed that to diagnose a patient you must go to the patient, and you have to depend on your eyes, ears, and hands to reach a conclusion.

"He is a physician who loves the field of medicine and has loved being a doctor... but he has been more than a doctor to his pa-

Editorials

Our national anthem celebrates the survival of the Flag in one war; it has been memorialized in countless ways in every conflict that this country has known, down to the "War in the Gulf."

One of these paeans came in a stirring patriotic song of the Union troops in the Civil War.

George F. Root wrote:

"Beneath the starry Flag

We shall breathe the air again

Of the free land in our own beloved home."

Or, as he wrote in another lyrical and exalted passage:

"We'll rally round the Flag; we'll rally once again, Shouting the battle cry of Freedom."

Such sentiment deserves the whole-hearted and fervent observance by all Americans — especially on the day set aside this week.

So's your old man

After the personalized tees are given, the monogrammed T-shirts are tried on, the latest cassettes are heard, the truth remains that dear old Dad already has been given his most precious gifts, long since. His gifts were delivered even more sentimentally than those of the coming weekend will be. They were moving, squirming, squinting, mouing in a way that delightedly could be deemed a smile. They were of the special brand of humanity known as babies.

But each one of that special brand is very distinctive, one of a kind, to be treasured then and always. Each was an enrichment of his life and each brought the most fundamental meaning to "Father's Day." Particular honors of course go to the mothers, but the old man has won and cherished the privilege of being called Father.

tients. He was, and is, their friend.

"When the time has come throughout his career for Dr. Maxon to pass along the knowledge he has gained, Dr. Maxon's love for his profession turned into a heartfelt duty to preserve and enhance that profession. His love for telling stories — many of which may now almost be called legends — resulted in his using anecdotes and humor to bring complex medical lectures alive for hundreds of students."

Or, as the degree citation expressed it, he has "entertained countless colleagues, students, and patients with his stories, and taught many of them life's lessons through those tales."

Dr. Maxon was a student at Albany Medical College in the 1930s when he contracted tuberculosis, which delayed his completing his studies there, but his experience left him with a deep interest in pulmonary disease — and an equally deep compassion for persons afflicted with any disease. This special interest led to his concentration on pulmonary disease with many resultant responsibilities and distinctions.

"Above all," the dean's script concluded, "throughout his career Dr. Maxon has served as an example for countless colleagues and students... and has enriched the lives of all with whom he came in contact."

Dr. Maxon's neighbors in our town are pleased to share the reflected honor of his presence among us.

We must not condone under-age drinking

Editor, The Spotlight:

The forum sponsored by BOU entitled "Peers, Parties, and Police" has generated a number of letters to this paper. At this time of year when so many events are cause for celebration, it is pertinent to address the concerns surrounding the issue of under-age consumption of alcohol.

BOU continues to sponsor chemical-free activities for our young people. Our children need our support and encouragement to attend. We as parents should not condone any action on the part of our offspring that could put them in jeopardy. Under-age drinking is harmful to their health and is against the law.

The school district, the town government, and community organizations such as BOU strive to educate people about the consequences of drug abuse and provide alternative activities for our youth.

Parents must also join in this effort. We must show that we care for our children by talking to them, knowing where they are, who they are with, and what they are doing. We must encourage their participation at events such as the after-graduation party for high school seniors and Teen Night at Del Lanes.

Vox Pop

The community put forth a tremendous effort in renovating "The Pit" at the Middle School. Dr. Loomis noted its reopening as an example of school/community partnership in the implementation of "Future Directions."

It was open after school for the month of May for Middle School students. It will also be open two nights a week during the summer again for Middle School students. How about two nights a week for high school students? It would be a shame for all the "Pit Crew's" mighty effort to sit idle.

Delmar Mary Berry

Editor's note: As described in the June 5 Point of View, the New York State Council on Alcoholism and Other Drug Addictions (NYSCADA) is sponsoring a public event on Friday evening of this week ("Raise the Flag to Stop Teenage Drinking") that will be the kick-off for a campaign with that goal. It will be held at Peter D. Kiernan Plaza, Albany, and information about it can be obtained from 436-1077.

Other letters on pages 8, 9, 10

Words for the week

Aspirant: A person who aspires after honors, high position, etc. Correctly, individuals believed to be seeking public office are only aspirants until they become the candidates designated by their party.

Assiduous: Done with constant and careful attention. Diligent, persevering. A suitable synonym is "busy."

The Spotlight family extends condolences to our colleague, Don Haskins, and his daughter and sons on the death of Mrs. Elizabeth (Beth) Haskins on June 4.

A resident of Troy, she was a native of Waterford who graduated from Wellesley College with further studies in education at the former New York State College for Teachers in Albany. She taught social studies in schools in Rensselaer and Columbia counties before her retirement. She was active in affairs of Wellesley alumnae, retired teachers' organizations, and in golf and boating.

Her sons are Alan, David, and John Haskins, and her daughter is Julie Anne Bailey. Her husband, Donald W. Haskins, Jr., a member of The Spotlight's editorial staff, retired as editorial page editor of the Times Union.

A memorial service was held June 8 at the First United Church of Waterford, formerly the Waterford Presbyterian Church, where she had been a member. Memorial contributions are being made to St. Peter's Hospice of Rensselaer County, 8 North Lake Avenue, Troy 12180.

Uncle Dudley

'The Best of Anonymous'

You're familiar with those columnists like Art Buchwald and Russell Baker who go on vacation and leave behind some old pieces that have been pulled out of the cabinet and labeled as "The Best of Buchwald," etc.

Uncle Dudley rejects that easy way out. But even when he's not on vacation he occasionally feels the need to restore the little gray cells away from the typing machine. Just as the best thing about someone's good idea is the opportunity to steal it, there's no reason at all not to fill up space with someone else's brainchild.

Therefore, this week Uncle Dudley is privileged to bring you selections from the works of three other writers (whose identity will mostly be protected by anonymity).

A glossary of medical terms from the late 18th century, compared with terminology for the same conditions 200 years later. (This is from a historical novel set in the 18th century.)

And "Why 99.9 percent accuracy just won't cut it!" (This one traces back to a company called QCI International in Red Bluff, California.)

99.9 % accuracy

So what about zero defects? Isn't that asking a bit much? Not according to Jeff Dewar, of QCI International. Here's what we'd have to live with if we accepted 99.9 percent accuracy; he has figured out:

- One hour of unsafe drinking water every month.
- Two unsafe landings every day at the busiest airport.
- 50 babies dropped at birth by doctors every day.

- 500 incorrect surgical operations every week.
- 16,000 lost pieces of mail every hour.
- 20,000 incorrect drug prescriptions every year.
- 22,000 checks deducted from the wrong bank accounts every hour.

Suddenly, zero defects seems like a worthwhile pursuit!

Postwar: The Powell and the glory

Is General Colin Powell a future Democratic presidential candidate?

In the June 10 issue of "New York" magazine, the political writer Joe Klein would have you believe that the general is a determinedly available aspirant for the nomination (presumably in 1996).

Klein's brief article actually is a discussion of the newly published book by Bob Woodward that is attracting a great deal of attention: "The Commanders." Klein then devotes most of his review to Powell's ready accessibility to Woodward for interviews and quotes. "He wanted his story told. And his story may be of more than passing significance to the future of the republic. This guy is a master politician."

The writer makes a strong point of contrasting Powell with Secretary Cheney. "Powell is a leader, not a staff guy. He runs on instinct more than intellect (though he's no dummy). He's a dynamic presence, not just another suit."

Further, Klein insists, "Powell's political sense is manifest throughout." He was in favor of "containment" of Saddam Hussein (opposing the use of force to drive him from Kuwait) and made this clear to Cheney (and to Woodward). "But he never quite confronts the President." Having lost the argument, the general then did "what the Democrats should have done after the vote in Congress — everything he could to assure total victory."

Woodward suspects that the current and short-term Powell policy will mimic that of Dwight D. Eisenhower after World War II and up until 1952. He recalls that Ike "took great pains to float above the political fray . . . He expressed no interest in higher office. His views on most issues were not known. And yet both parties courted him assiduously . . ."

"Colin Powell is registered currently as an independent. But his body language is all Democrat . . . He was a fervent Lyndon Johnson supporter in 1964. He lets Woodward know he was upset by the Willie Horton case in the 1988 campaign. He disapproves of Olive North. And . . . he favored sanctions in the Gulf.

"He will serve two more years as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs. He will be free to seek new employment in 1993. He is enough of a politician (unlike, say, Norman Schwarzkopf) never to breathe a word of his ambitions, but Democrats would do well to consider this book a calling card, perhaps even a billet-doux."

Poems for life

During June and July, Spotlight staff writer Michael Larabee will be on leave to pursue personal writing projects in poetry, fiction, and non-fiction. He is an alumnus of Voorheesville Central Schools who graduated in 1990 from State University of New York at Albany with a B.A. in political science. He received SUNYA's Shields McIlwaine Award in 1989 for the best poem by an undergraduate. The selections in this Point of View column are excerpted, with permission, from "The Politics of Levitation," a published collection of 22 of his poems to date.

Dark Smart

I feel a phase coming on,
not like from a book
but an orchestra
of believing in light
and magic and love,
among the grip of reddened muscles,
pink and new, without hair or skin, the twisted fibers of tendons and nerves
bruising like roots
beneath raining sheets of blood—curtains
cascading down
to thick organ music
behind the top-hatted

I refuse to wonder about infinity,
pray to the moon, be mythologized, but nevertheless am kept
the way we all are kept,
in cement and wood,
streetlights and showers,
lands that collapse inward
despite the impression of resistance gliding like a skater into frame.

Tokens

Then
in a leap of faith
without a net
I officially went into a phase.
Courage, like smoke,
revolved in pairs that day.

The Pharmacy

In the pharmacy, there was a woman navigating the aisles in a shopping cart, rounding toothpaste Cape Horns, exploring shampoo inlets and hygiene gulfs — until,
like some vitamin-crazed Magellan,
she circumnavigated the magazine rack and dropped from the edge of the world.

A poem for life w/out metaphor

It is supposed to be long enough to knot everything with an exotic gesture and appropriate flower. It should be everything, no more no less than voyages that are each other to each other coupled in the cotton hug of mystery and recognition, bodies uncoiling at long last into death's reverential applause.

But for us, people will not search for signs of our hands, or dig trenches for the clay eyes of the past from a future turned thin as a wrist or a shin, and will not fall with the contraband lightness of every terminal envelope that is falling today.

We do not carry sealed messages,
or open our eyes under water, will never be segmented insects
encased in asphalt or caked in glass.
We are not America, or less than America, or sleepers under sheets, or fluids in tubes or gauze or narrative soldiers tripping through oversized fatigues, and you are neither a hungry child or a machine,
and I am not a fist, or the weight of a hoof,
or an anvil, or a knife, or a screw.

Pain is not a metaphor, death is not a name.
We are not mirrors but remain each other to each other calling a face a face and smearing it with paint, witnessing the world circle lightly downward like a tired marble inside an endless black funnel:
continually dying, too young to die,
continually dying, too young to die,
continually dying.

The Man Who Resembled a Fish

A man who resembled a fish wanted to resemble a cup of blood because he thought he resembled a plastic bottle of yellow/brown mustard. A woman who walked like a stapler loved the man who resembled a fish. She loved the way his ribs were like gills and his backbone like a silver fin. She lived up a street she thought was like a river, though it really resembled a long run of looseleaf paper. If the man had known he resembled a fish and not a bottle of mustard, he would have been much more afraid to go to the fish market. Such is the way everything is sometimes everywhere.

PTA sale netted $5,000 for playground fund

Editor, The Spotlight:

On behalf of the Slingerlands PTA, I would like to express our appreciations for all the support that the Slingerlands School families contributed to make our June 1 garage sale a wonderful success. It took a great deal of time and effort by all parents, children, and staff to run this event.

In addition, the committee devoted countless hours and weeks of preparation in planning. I would especially like to praise the chairmen for the outstanding leadership and organization they displayed. We are grateful for support from our Police Department, Principal David Murphy, for the use of the Slingerlands School and its custodial staff who aided us in many ways. We also thank the merchants, especially Slingerlands Sportscards, Curtis Lumber, Dunkin' Donuts, and Yonder Farms, who provided us with transportation, advertising, and products.

But above all we thank the patrons who helped us raise approximately $5,000 for our playground fund. All year we have looked to the Slingerlands School families for their support and had hoped that the community would help us with this project.

We believe that this new playground will benefit everyone in the Slingerlands School neighborhood. When it is built it will belong to the community, not the school alone. We will continue to reach out to the community for assistance until we attain our final goal and our playground is a reality! Thank you for your continued support!

Contributions may be made in care of the Slingerlands PTA/Playground Project, 25 Union Avenue, Delmar.

Anonymous budgeters

Editor, The Spotlight:

Please add two names and another attribute to Al Abrams' enjoyable Point of View column. When I asked C. Mark Lawton (of the Carey administration) why he wasn't listed as a Budget Director, he quoted Paul Appleby (Harriman's) on the key attribute for civil servants: "A passion for anonymity." He also noted that Michael Finnerty (Cuomo's) who was also missing, must share this passion for anonymity.

A little girl blossoms in 'a wonderful school'

Editor, The Spotlight:

This school year is quickly winding down, and I find myself looking back at the wonderful year our daughter, a kindergartener, has just experienced.

We were one of the fortunate families who were transferred to Clarksville elementary school. These children were welcomed with open arms, and progressed in the environment provided to them by Mrs. Cheryl MacCulloch, principal, and her wonderful staff.

The children always felt they were an important part of the school. We are excited and looking forward to our daughter's future years at Slingerlands elementary school, but at the same time we feel saddened to be leaving that wonderful school "out in the country."

Could teacher-pupil ratio be cut in V'ville?

Editor, The Spotlight:

The time has come again to cast our vote on the school budget. This year (as I predicted last year and several years prior) the proposed tax bite has grown. The newspaper reports originally stated about 23 percent. Much work was done and the expected increase was reported to be approximately 18 to 19 percent. After much more work and publicity, we finally received the blue notice in the mail May 31 stipulating the proposed increase at 14 percent. The blue notice lists 21 specific cuts out of the proposed budget which collectively account for the reductions. Nevertheless, the bottom line still requires a whopping increase of 14 percent over last year.

I for one feel that a selling job has been attempted in order for us to swallow the 14 percent and keep quiet. Other school districts have been able to hold the increase to 4, 5, and 6 percent and then apologize to taxpayers for not being able to do more. Remember that the new teacher salary contract provides for over 8 percent increase each year for three years. This provides increases as usual during recession times when business and industry, as well as state and local governments, are tightening belts to cope with the current fiscal crisis.

done to reduce this budget and again we taxpayers are being asked to dig deeper in order to perpetuate a lavish lifestyle of the educational community.

In reading the budget as presented in the blue mailing, I did notice some interesting figures: Teachers' salaries and benefits amount to approximately 50 percent of the total budget. It should be noted that we have 1,176 students, some of whom attend BOCES, and 93 teachers and professionals. This does not count teacher aides and substitutes.

We have fewer than 13 students per teacher. Suppose we followed state guidelines and provided one teacher for 20 students. This would require only 59 teachers, or a reduction of 36 percent. Now, if we reduce the proposed salaries and benefits by 36 percent we save over $1.8 million. Maybe we could start by shooting for only half of what is proposed here! These are real savings from real situations.

I urge taxpayers to get out and vote on Wednesday, June 12, and vote down this budget. We should send a firm and meaningful message to the board that we expect a good amount of soul-searching and realistic calculating in order to present a palatable package the next time around.

OVERCOMING DENTURE "GAGGING"

The most common problem with new dentures is gagging. The presence of this foreign body (the denture) causes an increased flow of saliva which may cause a person to gag. A lozenge sucked continuously for the first few days will increase the rate of swallowing and thus get rid of the extra saliva. Within a few days, the body will gradually adjust to the new dentures.

The upper denture is held in place by adhesion and cohesion (suction). The back of the palate must be covered (sealed) for the denture to fit properly. Unfortunately, some patients have difficulty adjusting to the back end of the denture. They gag, feel uncomfortable and often plead with the dentist to shorten the denture. Occasionally, there is little the dentist can do. If he were to shorten the denture, the seal would be lost and the denture would no longer fit. Sometimes a few days or weeks are needed for the wearer to adjust to the new environment. It might help to know that the full upper denture is almost always successful.

Remedy is necessary at a key intersection

Editor, The Spotlight:

Two recent crashes, including one involving an 11-year-old pedestrian, have underscored the fact that the intersection of Elsmere and Delaware Avenues is one of the busiest and most dangerous in Bethlehem.

Because of so many potentially lethal combinations of vehicles hurrying along Delaware, or turning for the residential areas, while pedestrians are also seeking to cross, the best solution would seem to be a period (to be activated by pedestrians) in which all vehicles must stop.

The geographic realities of Delmar mean that the railroad tracks force much traffic into a few key intersections. This situation will only worsen as the area continues to grow. The authorities should act before the intersection starts making the "Capital District's Worst" lists for crashes and injuries.

How a judge's poem spoke for forgiveness

Editor, The Spotlight,

I enjoyed the articles about Memorial Day, found in the May 22 Spotlight. The subject is something of a hobby of mine. As a native New Yorker, of course I support the claim of Waterloo, N.Y., to be the place where the first Decoration Day was observed. In 1866. This is the 125th anniversary year.

Let me point out another aspect of Decoration Day that your articles did not address. In the spring of 1867, the women of Columbus, Mississippi, decorated the graves of those fallen in the late war: blue as well as their own grey. Francis Miles Finch, a well-educated and literate judge of Ithaca, N.Y., heard of this incident. He wrote a poem, of which a contemporary said that "All the orations and sermons and appeals for the restoration of kindly feeling between the two sections have been exceeded in real effect upon the national heart, by this simple poem."

So a judge sitting in his cool, quiet library "high above Cayuga's waters" wrote a poem in 1867. The year before, a mob in New Orleans rioted against the Yankee-led police and were sternly repressed by a general from Albany. That same year a general from Memphis was busy forming the Ku Klux Klan. A year later, the President of the United States would be impeached, for his softness in "punishing" the South.

Four incidents: of which three were vindictive, violent, and rejected the verdict of history. . . attempted to overturn what had already happened. But one incident sought to reconcile, to accept, to forgive, to restate once again in poetic meter what Lincoln had said in his first inaugural: "Suppose you go to war. You cannot fight always."

Loss of Driver Ed blow to safety

Editor, The Spotlight:

It has been called to my attention that in the Bethlehem school budget Driver Education has been removed from the curriculum.

Daily we read of reckless driving, DWI, and needless death of teens, especially in the summer. We have in Bethlehem High School a dedicated Driver Education teacher, John Nyilis, who teaches young people not only to drive but safely with responsibility.

Students trained by Mr. Nyilis today are responsible drivers with knowledge to handle the vehicle entrusted to them. I realize that all students cannot have this opportunity because of time and availability; however, if one student can be saved, the expenditure is worthwhile.

I hope the Board of Education and the high school will do everything possible to give this opportunity once again to students.

Editor's note: The course being eliminated, which has been offered during the school year, is one of the victims of the pared-down budget for the coming year. The course is to be available this summer as part of the Continuing Education program, but at a fee of $190.

'Pit' trial leads to summer hours

Editor, The Spotlight:

From May 8 through May 31, the Bethlehem Central Middle School "Pit" was open to Middle School students every afternoon after school, from 2:18 until 4 p.m. A marvelous experiment, made possible by the time and efforts of many people, demonstrated that the time is right, once again, for the Pit.

Thanks to the school administration for the openness and flexibility to give it a try. Many thanks to all those who volunteered, to provide adequate supervision of unknown numbers of kids. Many thanks to the Leadership club, for staffing the snack bar, giving us all the popcorn we needed. Special thanks to all the kids who helped with clean up every day, recognizing it as their own place, and feeling responsible for it. (Mopping up after the storm wasn't much fun, either!)

The next experiment will be with summer evening hours. Starting July 10, the Pit will be open 7 to 10 p.m. on Wednesday and Saturday evenings, for current Middle School students. There will be a $2 admission charge to cover costs of supervision. It would be unrealistic to expect this to be trouble-free;

we are optimistic that difficulties can be worked out. We look forward to the support and cooperation of the community.

Matters of Opinion

Burglary victim warns of need for caution

Editor, The Spotlight:

I was recently the victim of a burglary and I hope that by telling my story I will prevent it happening to others. I live in one of the nice sections of our town, and one day recently I was gardening in my backyard for most of the day, within 50 feet of the house.

The garage doors and most of the driveway were out of my line of vision and one of those doors was open. During the day, someone entered my home through the garage door, stole silver and jewelry and left by the front door.

I have a security system and am meticulous about arming it when I leave the house, but I didn't think I had to do so when I was in my own backyard! Because I have the system, I felt safe in keeping silver in the dining room and jewelry in the bedroom—the first places a thief would look.

These thieves obviously knew exactly what they came for. The police have been helpful, but I've been told by responsible sources that there are so many burglaries in our town that it is virtually impossible to follow up on them.

Since this happened, I have heard of several similar incidents in Loudonville, Latham, and Albany, as well as another, three blocks from me, a week later, where someone was in the yard and burglars entered an unlocked door on the other side of the house. I've also been told of thefts where someone comes to the door and keeps the homeowner occupied while a confederate enters another door.

It is a terrible experience to have one's home and privacy violated and to lose valuable things that can never be replaced because of their monetary or sentimental value. I hope my experience will prompt Spotlight readers to keep all doors locked at all times, whether they are inside or out.

Bush energy strategy 'a giant wrong step'

Editor, The Spotlight:

Congress should immediately reject President Bush's proposed national energy strategy. It is an insult to the American people and a giant step in the wrong direction. His national plan would be extremely destructive to the environment, perpetuate this nation's heavy dependence on foreign oil, further restrict public participation in energy planning, and retard economic development.

Mr. Bush has ignored common sense and public opinion with his call for hundreds of new atomic power plants and increased oil drilling off the coasts of the U.S., especially the fragile northeast shore of Alaska.

An intelligent national energy plan would call for giant increases in energy efficiencies, mass transit, and sharp reductions in energy imports. Congress should demand much higher fuel efficiencies for autos and light trucks sold in the U.S.; at least double the required efficiencies of electrical equipment and appliances such as air conditioners, motors, lighting, freezers, refrigerators, and water heaters; and make a massive research and development commitment to safe renewable domestic energy sources, especially solar and wind power.

Instead of wasting hundreds of billions of dollars on warplanes, missiles, submarines, and space stations, we should invest in usable transportation, including a high-speed national rail network, and light rail systems and subway for the auto-choked metropolitan areas. Energy efficiency, conservation, and solar and wind power should be the cornerstones of both national and state energy policies. Such planning would provide millions of desperately needed high paying jobs, reindustrialize the nation with environmentally safe manufacturing jobs, reduce pollution and the power of large corporations, increase national security, reduce the giant trade deficit, make people more energy self-sufficient, and provide the nation with a long-overdue positive national goal.

Village tightens recycling law

By Susan Wheeler

A new law in the Village of Voorheesville allows village officials to establish rules and regulations concerning solid waste disposal, according to Mayor Edward Clark.

Local Law No. 2 of 1991 was unanimously approved by the board of trustees at last month's regular meeting. The solid waste management law states that anyone guilty of violating the village's recycling rules and regulations will be charged, Clark said. Illegal dumpers will face a minimum $50 fine. The maximum fine, resulting from multiple violations, is defined in the law, and would be interpreted by the judge presiding over the case, he said. The village currently has rules on recycling newspapers, yard waste, metals, plastics, tires and waste oil.

According to Clark, the law is needed because the village has had a "real problem" with commercial operators leaving tires for the village to recycle. He said they are collecting enough tires for a community of about 120,000 residents. The village has about 3,000 residents. "We have almost 40 times too many tires," he said. "We have to pay to get rid of them, and it's expensive — about $1.50 per tire." Clark also cited the expense in terms of man-hours.

Solid waste disposal fees total approximately $220,000 of the village's 1991-92 $894,304 budget, according to Clark. Solid waste is becoming the biggest problem communities face, he said. "The price of solid waste disposal is becoming exorbitant."

Village tipping fees at AN-SWERS, Albany's waste disposal system, total $110,000 annually, while newspaper pickup for recycling costs $18,000 and other recyclables, such as tires and plastics, total about $10,000, Clark said.

Regular weekly garbage pickup costs the village about $45,000 and yard waste is another $22,000, he said. With the added cost of man-hours, including an additional crew member and equipment cost, solid waste removal is "in the area of 20 percent of the budget," he said. Yard waste removal takes two to three days work a week during the height of the season, he said.

In order to have a better idea of what community members understand village recycling to be, Clark said that Kathy Macri, village recycling coordinator, has put together a survey. Local Boy Scout troops will bring the survey to about 100 of the village's 300 households, according to Macri.

The Scouts will question residents on what they know about village recycling, including what materials they think they can recycle, the cost of solid waste management and the importance of recycling. Residents will be asked what they are willing to do to make village recycling viable. After the survey, which is slated to begin within the next three weeks, Boy Scouts will answer any questions residents may have concerning recycling, she said.

In addition, Macri is working on an informational flyer for residents on solid waste management. Its contents will include such information as how to prepare recyclables, what is recyclable and where recycling locations are in the town and village.

Bethlehem Central students focus on "three Rs"

By Susan Graves

A group of Bethlehem Central students worked hard this year to make the district more aware of the importance of recycling. Topping off their efforts was the development of a program to serve as a catalyst and provide information to facilitate the integration of the three Rs in the district. BC's Reduce Our Trash (ROT) also selected a logo to underscore the need to honor the three Rs: reduce, reuse and recycle.

The students, under the guidance of Bethlehem Recycling Coordinator Sharon Fisher and Betsy Lyons of Bethlehem Work On Waste, focused on a number of areas to make implementation as easy as possible.

Steve Bradt surveyed the middle and elementary schools to determine what was being done this year. He credited teachers and school leaders for generating interest in the three Rs. Bradt, a junior, conducted a second survey to find out how and if paper products were recycled. Some of the schools (Clarksville, Hamagrael and Slingerlands), he discovered, have arranged to have comingled waste paper picked up. "The company provides a dumpster and picks up comingled paper on a weekly basis," he said. Bradt also said at some schools individuals go the extra mile. At Hamagrael, for example, he said Principal Joseph Schaefer "takes bottles and cans to a recycling center," he said. And at the middle school, teacher Jeanette Rice started a recycling program on her own.

Reduce, reuse and recycle are the three new Rs in schools these days, as students at Bethlehem Central High School are learning. Steve Bradt, from left, Terri Valenti, Benjamin Vigoda, who designed the award

Terri Valenti, a senior, said her responsibility this year was collecting educational materials. Part of her job entailed checking what different grade levels were doing. She also wrote to districts that had programs to collect sample activities for Bethlehem schools.

Another student in the group, senior Margaret Meixner, helped put together a visual display "to get people to think about how much is wasted."

She said the report should help the three R effort. "It's good there's going to be something at least people can go by."

Fisher said the students gathered the information and "wrote and rewrote" it. "We just went over it again," she said.

Bethlehem Recycling Corner

By Sharon Fisher, town recycling coordinator

Care must be taken when preparing metal containers for recycling. Cans are acceptable, but other metal objects sometimes appear mixed in with the recyclable containers.

All cans must be rinsed clean. But since most cans have contained a food substance, they need to be cleaned with soap, water and a brush. A brush will prevent accidental cuts from the sharp edges of an opened can. A good way to clean cans is in a dishwasher with the loose lids being placed in the silverware tray.

Paper labels must be removed. That is easily accomplished by running a knife or finger up the can label in an area that is not glued. Paint-labeled cans such as coffee, juice, tomato sauce and cookie tins are acceptable even though those labels cannot be removed.

To save space and contain the sharp lids, insert the removed lids(s) inside the clean can and step on it.

Aluminum dishes from packaged foods and aluminum foil are acceptable, but they too must be cleaned. Soaking in warm soapy water or using a dishwasher will work.

Not acceptable to metal can recycling are items which are usually considered scrap metal. Coffee pots, pizza pans, bakeware, tools, toaster, wire coat hangers, pipes and waffle irons are not acceptable. These items belong in the scrap metal pile at the Rupert Road Transfer Station in South Bethlehem.

Also not acceptable are aerosol cans, paint cans and propane cylinders. When the contents of aerosol cans have been emptied, the container must be thrown in the regular trash. Small amounts of paint remaining in a can, should be dried out and when hardened disposed of in the regular trash. The lid of the paint can must be left off so the hauler will know that there is no liquid remaining. Propane cylinders (the hand held ones) can be refilled from larger tanks by using a special adapter or when entirely empty thrown in the regular trash. Larger propane gas tanks must be handled differently. Never throw the larger ones in the trash.

Volunteers sought for concert series

The city of Albany is looking for volunteers to assist with the 1991 series of "Alive at Five" concerts.

Volunteers 18 years of age or older are needed to help with refreshments, pedestrian traffic flow and other light duties.

Kiernan Plaza (Fleet/Norstar Bank) on Broadway.

National recording artist Elvin Bishop will appear for an "R & B" night on June 20. The series of six Thursday night concerts will be held from June 13 to July 25 (excluding July 4) and will feature "Country," "Worldbeat" "Cajun" and "Nostalgia" nights.

Anyone interested in volunteering should contact the city's volunteer office, at 434-5125.

'Flag' campaign targets teenagers' alcohol use

"Unlawful, unsafe, and unhealthy teen-age alcohol use" is the target of a statewide campaign that will be launched on Friday, June 14, by the New York State Council on Alcoholism and Other Drug Addictions (NYSCADA).

Former U.S. Senator Harold E. Hughes of Iowa will be honored as the recipient of the First Volunteer Achievement Award at a "Raise the Flag to Stop Teen Drinking Gala" on that day (Flag Day) at the Peter D. Kiernan Plaza, Albany. A reception and flag-raising ceremony will be held at 6:30 p.m. followed by dinner at 7:30. Vincent O'Leary, SUNYA president emeritus, will officiate at the ceremony. Lieut. Gov. Stan Lundine will be among the speakers.

"This is to be a major education and outreach campaign," said Rena P. Button, of Delmar, executive director of NYSCADA. "Our goal is to enlist 'Partners Against Teen Drinking' in every community in New York."

Information about the event is available from NYSCADA at 436-1077.

Parade to honor troops

By Susan Wheeler

"A warm Bethlehem welcome" to returning Desert Storm troops is planned for Independence Day, according to Supervisor Ken Ringler. The July Fourth activities will include a parade followed by the annual picnic in the town park.

The parade, scheduled to kick off at 11 a.m. at the middle school on Kenwood Avenue, will travel to town hall, via Kenwood and Delaware avenues. Desert Storm military personnel, as well as all other veterans, are invited to participate in the parade designed to honor Desert Storm troops, Ringler said. Banners will identify the different wars so that veterans can line up as a group.

The Bethlehem Police Department will be responsible for the parade route under the supervision of Sgt. Joe Sleurs, according to Ringler. Sleurs is currently securing antique cars in which Desert Storm military personnel will ride during the parade. He said antique cars are needed for the event; anyone willing to lend one may call him at 439-9973.

The Adamsville Ancient Fife and Drum Corps is also scheduled to march in the parade. Local fire department members, in uniform, will act as an honor guard along the parade route, Ringler said.

At town hall, a brief ceremony will be conducted, Ringler said, and Desert Storm troops will be acknowledged.

The action will then move to the Elm Avenue Town Park, where festivities are set from noon to about 3 p.m., according to Ringler. There will be a chicken barbecue by John Geurtze, and the Slingerlands Fire Department will sell hot dogs, hamburgers and beverages. Families are also welcome to pack their own picnic baskets.

assistant superintendent.

"She has a very excellent ability to listen and hear what the people in the community were saying. She has a very good pulse on what the community wanted and what could be expected in terms of support," he said. Fuller said she believes the ability to listen is a must for a good board member. "After 13 years, I'm still a good listener," she said, and her advice to a prospective board member is to "come on with an open mind and be a very good listener."

Fuller said a would-be board member should also expect to spend a lot of time on school district work. "It's very tough, the time commitment is very difficult," she said. As president even more time is needed since most nights when there are no meetings, the phone never stops ringing, she said.

And all of that time is totally off the clock, since board members receive no financial compensation. Further, many issues board members grapple with are highly charged. "The most difficult time was during the first year when teachers were "working to rule and picketing board meetings," she said.

One strategy during negotiations, she said, was to write the board president. Fuller said she saw a need to personally respond to every letter. Once that word got out, Fuller's mailman did double duty. "At first, there were only about 20 letters," but then the deluge of mail began.

Another red flag is redistricting: "Mention the word and there's an immediate reaction to it."

But despite the difficult issues, Fuller said she has tried to give a fair hearing to all sides. "If nothing else, I've given everyone a fair chance, I've tried to do what's best for the majority."

Fuller said she'll follow the same principles when she assumes her town board responsibilities. "I've always lived by whatever decision (after listening), I reach is one I'll be able to live by."

"Really do your homework, and vote your conscience," is her golden rule for board members.

Pam Williams, school board vice president, said Fuller exemplifies fair play in her work for the district. "I have found her terrific to work with," she said, "She's a tremendous asset to the district. She's incredibly honest, you always know where she's coming from. She's going to be sorely missed."

"She has excellent judgment and cuts right to the heart of the most complicated issues," Loomis said. "She functions in a very classy kind of way. Our board has been able to conduct very difficult business in a respectful, courteous way," he said.

Fuller said her favorite part of the board presidency was presiding at graduation. "The most rewarding experience is graduation. The president of the board hands out the diplomas and is a speaker at graduation," she said. Fuller said she hopes her legacy of signing every single diploma continues. After 13 years in a district, the students deserve a personal touch.

Loomis said Fuller leaves "a legacy of high quality. . . her leaving is going to create a big hole" on the board."

Supervisor Ken Ringler said Fuller will be formally appointed at tonight's (June 12) town board meeting at 7:30 p.m. in town hall. "She's an excellent candidate who's shown her dedication to community service. She's highly capable."

BC board seeks replacement

The Bethlehem Central Board of Education is seeking applicants to fill the vacancy created when Sheila Fuller resigns July 10. Fuller is resigning as president of the Board of Education to fill the unexpired town board seat created when Democrat Robert Burns resigned. She will pursue her candidacy as the Republican nominee for a seat on the Bethlehem Town board in November.

The newly appointed school board member would serve until the next school district election in May 1992. Letters of interest and resumes should be sent by June 28 to: Pamela Williams, vice president, Board of Education, Bethlehem Central School District, 90 Adams Place, Delmar 12054.

bany commissioner of public works, and a representative from Pirnie will be at the meeting.

Ringler also told residents that they should use their own discretion as to whether they allow ANSWERS officials to conduct site testing on their property. "As I understand it, they are interested in accessing your site to determine if it will meet the criteria for a landfill. It is strictly your decision as to whether or not you wish to permit this access to your property," he said.

Bruce told the affected residents in a letter that "The Planning Unit does not wish to invest a large amount of time or money investigating a site it cannot obtain access to for testing and cannot acquire."

According to Ringler the ANSWERS unit does not have the power of eminent domain, which could force residents to sell their land or property for the public good. He said about 125 people are affected by the potential site designations. "Numerous attempts have been made by the Planning Unit to obtain condemnation powers under the Eminent Domain Procedure Law with no success to date," the identification report states.

Bruce said ideally the planning unit would like to narrow the choices "down to one preferred site with willing sellers."

Ringler said Bethelhem is continuing to explore its options in relation to solid waste solutions. One of those options could be to withdraw from the ANSWERS group. "Ours is an ongoing process of looking at all our options," he said. A new county landfill would serve the needs of 14 municipalities including the cities of Schenectady and Rensselaer.

Secor said he is planning an in-depth review of the siting report along with a review of the ANSWERS Wastehed Generic Environmental Impact Statement/Solid Waste Management Plan. His job will be to report back to the town board. "I'm just getting into this," and he expects it will take some time to read through the more than 2,000 pages of information from the GEIS/SWM. "It will take a while to wade through this," he said.

Delmar woman elected LWV director

Barbara Bartoletti of Delmar was recently elected a director of the New York State League of Women Voters at the league convention held in Saratoga Springs.

Bartoletti serves as the legislative action director for the state league's lobbying efforts in Albany. She is also a member of the Albany County League of Women Voters.

Bartoletti is currently president of the board of the Council of Community Services, a human services planning agency serving five counties in the Capital District and funded largely by United Way of Northeast New York. She is also a member of the board of the Tri-Village Little League and a manager of a major league Little League team.

help to keep the Flag flying proudly, and they help to serve America's great mission to preserve the blessings of Liberty for our posterity."

According to Delmar resident Alexander J. Woehle, who nominated Morano for the award, he saw the message, which reminds readers of the ideals the flag represents, under the glass at the customer service counter. He said he asked for a copy, then sent it off to the National Flag Foundation with a recommendation that Morano receive the award. He said he was glad to see that "somebody knows the right thing to do" in honoring the flag and promoting patriotism.

Morano said he was notified a couple of weeks ago about being a New Constellation Award recipient. He said he was surprised by the news since he had no idea he was nominated. "I thought it was great."

"Hello, Remember Me?" has been attracting attention since it was first displayed in an act of support for the troops involved in Desert Storm. Customers have asked Morano for copies of the message to take home, he said. Although no one in the store remembers where it came from, store employees "thought it was just a good idea to display it," he said.

The award, a certificate, is currently hanging in the back office, according to Morano. When there

Lockheed to manage airport

By Debi Boucher

Albany County Airport will have new management within the next month, now that the county legislature's Mass Transit Committee has selected Lockheed Air Terminal Inc. of Burbank, Calif., to run the facility.

At a press conference Thursday, Special Projects Manager Michael Polovina said the firm would be hired at a $500,000 per year fixed fee for a five-year period, a contract that would be "subject to further negotiations" with regard to performance incentive fees. The additional fees cannot yet be negotiated, he said, until a financial analysis has been done to determine airport revenues, and new leases negotiated with the airlines.

The committee's vote was unanimous following Lockheed's recommendation by a selection committee.

The county legislature was expected to vote on the management firm at its Monday night session, as well as on three other airport contracts recommended by the Mass Transit Committee. Also selected was a consultant to oversee plans for the long-anticipated airport expansion, and a financial consultant to analyze the airport's fiscal condition and potential.

Burns & McDonnell, of Kansas City, Mo., was selected from a field of five firms to develop a master plan and "schematic design" for airport expansion, expected to cost $135 million, and oversee implementation of the plan once it is finalized. The company will be awarded a $1,289,000 contract, plus an allowance for expenses.

Aviation Planning, of Cincinnati, Ohio, will be paid $164,500 plus a $30,500 allowance and $75,000 "general advisory" fee to develop a financial plan for the airport.

In negotiating new leases with the airlines, Polovina said, "The county and Lockheed management will be at the head of the table, and the financial consultants will be right next to us."

Polovina said Lockheed was chosen for its personnel and "diversity of skills" evident at other airports the firm manages, including Stewart International Airport in Newark and airports in Ohio, California and Long Island. County officials visited those facilities, as well as facilities run by Johnson Controls Inc, the other bidder, in recent weeks.

Russell C. Widmar, vice president of airport services for Lockheed, said he was "thrilled" his firm had been selected. Lockheed had been in partnership with British American, Ltd., of Latham, in competition for a lease management-development contract.

Widmar said he didn't foresee any problems in taking over management of the facility. Albany County Airport, he said, "has its set of problems different from anybody else's, just like any other airport: I don't anticipate any surprises at this point." With Widmar was Robert Dolan, vice president for Lockheed's northeast region, who is currently based in Newburgh.

Assistant County Attorney Patrick Jeffers said most current airport employees would probably be offered jobs by Lockheed.

The final contract recommended by the committee in relation to the airport development was setting aside $50,000 for Interair Development, which would earn $200 an hour on an as-needed basis to provide assistance to the project management team, comprised of a member of the county attorney's office and the office of special projects. The firm was one of several to work on a report released earlier this year analyzing the two management-development proposals then under consideration; the consultants' report recommended the county retain control of the airport rather than lease it, prompting the county's recent actions.

Eagles fall short of all but one season goal

By Michael Kagan

It's amazing the disappointment success can lead to.

The Bethlehem Central Eagles baseball team compiled a record of 17-6, or a winning percentage of 73.9. They won the Suburban Council Gold Division for the sixth straight year, went to sectionals for the fifth straight year, and won both the Oneonta and Schenectady tournaments - achievements all but a select few area high school teams dream of achieving. Yet, the Eagle's 1991 season was clearly some sort of a disappointment to many of those who followed the team and many members of the team.

Bethlehem baseball teams' accomplishments had been steadily increasing since 1987 when the Eagles were 15-7 and the Section II runner up. They were sectional semi-finalists in 1988 and 1989, going 16-8 and 18-3 respectively. Then last year, the Eagles won the section and became the Central New York Champions, going to the state finals and posting a 21-4 record.

The expectations for the 1991 squad were no less than to win just about everything. At the beginning of the season, Coach Ken Hodge announced his six main goals for his team. The first four were to win 20 games, win another Gold Division crown, repeat as sectional champions, and return to the state finals, but this time win.

Hodge did say before the season began that his major objective was to win the gold again, which was the only one of his team goals that was met.

Overall, there was no huge weakness to the 1991 Eagles. The offense averaged five and a half runs per seven innings during the regular season, and the pitching gave up only a fraction over three runs per outing, including four shutouts. Hodge had said that the major key to success for the team and the area that needed the most work was how quickly pitchers, who had previously only played junior varsity or freshman ball, behind senior ace Scott Fapt (8-2 regular season) were adapted to the varsity level. Those pitchers, Mike Aylward, Mike Hallisey, Josh Lanni, Dave Miles, and Matt

Shortell, were a combined 9-3, including a no hitter by Shortell on Friday, May 10 against Scotia.

If there was any weakness at all to the Eagles, it was their tendency to get into losing ruts. The first one came in mid-April at the start of the Suburban Council season. It had few consequences, as BC lost only two in a row and recovered to win 11 straight.

But Bethlehem lost its final three Suburban Council games. Although the team won its two games in the Schenectady Tour-namment, it never fully got out of that rut. The Eagles lost their next game, which was the first round of the sectional tournament, 8-1, and ended their season by losing four of their last six.

Fish may have summed up the season best, saying, "It was just a disappointing season. We accomplished a lot, and I just really don't have anything else to say."

Michelob New York State Open comes to Albany area

Northeastern New York area golfers will have a shot at entering the $65,000 Michelob New York State Open when the regional qualifier is held Monday, June 17, at Sagamore Hotel's golf course in Bolton Landing.

New York State affiliated professional and amateur golfers with handicaps of 10 or less are eligible for the qualifier.

Approximately 100 of the top golfers from the six regional qualifying rounds, and 40 exempt players, will earn entry to the 14th annual tournament, which will be held July 23 through 25 at the Concord Resort's course in the Catskills.

A prize of $10,000 and the Governor's Cup is awarded to the winner of the state open. Second prize is $6,500, and third prize is $4,000. The remaining top 20 finishers earn from $3,000 to $850.

Lawrence Group hosts annual run in Schenectady's Central Park

The 1991 Lawrence Run For Independence, sponsored by the Lawrence Group, will take place Wednesday, June 26, at Central Park in Schenectady.

Over 400 participants from the Capital Region and surrounding areas are expected to compete in either of four races: the 10K Challenge, 10K Wheelchair Challenge, 2 mile Fun Run, or 2 mile Wheelchair Race. All proceeds from this TAC-sanctioned event benefit Lawrence Center Independence House, New York's first and only transitional housing facility for mentally alert, physically-challenged adults. This is the tenth annual run to benefit Lawrence Center.

Pre-registered packet pick-up and race day registration is from 4:45 to 5:50 p.m. The 10K wheelchair challenge and 2 mile wheelchair race start at 5:59 p.m. The 10K challenge and 2 mile race start at 6 p.m. Skip Parson's Riverboat Jazz Band will be entertaining by the awards ceremony stage from 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. The awards ceremony and raffle drawing is at 7:30 p.m.

Town's Mickey Mantle team begins season with 7 wins

By Michael Kagan

It's already two weeks into the season and the defending champion North Atlantic Regional Mickey Mantle Bethlehem baseball team has picked up just about where it left off, winning its first seven games.

The "Blue Eagles," as they are called for their blue uniforms, were 29-5 last season in making it all the way to the World Series, and have four returning players; Mike Aylward, Mike Gambelunge, Josh Lanni, and Dave Miles.

Bethlehem won its season opener, a non-league game, at Latham on Memorial Day, Monday, May 27, 14-4. Ben Comtois was the winning pitcher, going five innings and allowing just one run. Mike Pelletier blasted a home run, Mike Futia had four hits, and Brian Mullan collected three.

The Blue Eagles played their first league and first home game against Southern Rennselaer on Saturday, June 1, winning 9-2. Aylward pitched a complete game for the victory, allowing four hits and striking out nine. Pelletier went downtown again, this time a three run blast. Mike Breslin added a two run single.

Miles led Bethlehem to a 12-0 home victory the next day over Columbia County, pitching six innings and taking a no hitter into the sixth. He allowed only one hit. Aylward collected three hits and three RBI, while Gambelunge, Lanni and Kory Snyder each had two RBI.

Bethlehem last week triumphed 6-2 at Rotterdam on a six hit, 10 strikeout complete game performance from Aylward, who also helped himself with three RBI on three hits, including a triple.

Bethlehem traveled to Guilderville Friday, June 7, for a nail-biter and won 4-3 in eight innings. Lanni pitched the whole game, except for the last out of the seventh inning. At that point, with the game tied at three, Bethlehem Coach Jesse Braverman brought in Miles, a southpaw, to pitch to a powerful left handed batter. Bethlehem scored the go-ahead run in the top of the eighth when a Futia hit brought home Marc Manella. Lanni came on to pitch a scoreless halfinning, earning a save for seven and two-thirds innings of work, while Miles earned a win for one third of an inning. Bethlehem had tied the game at three in the fifth inning on a three-run home off Lanni's bat.

The Blue Eagles hosted Clifton Park Saturday, winning 13-4. Miles (3-0) got the win, allowing no earned runs over six innings and giving up six hits. Gambelunge and Lanni each had two RBI.

Bethlehem finished off its first two weeks in dramatic fashion on Sunday, overcoming a 3-0 deficit at home against Lansingburgh in the bottom of the seventh. Josh Formica reached and scored on errors for the first Bethlehem run, and Gambelunge ended the contest with a three-run slam. Comtois (2-0) pitched every inning but the sixth, allowing three hits for the win. Aylward (2-0) pitched the sixth inning.

Today, Bethlehem will be at Burnt Hills at 6 p.m. and will travel to play undefeated South Colonie on Friday. The team will host Latham Saturday, June 15, at 3 p.m., and Guilderville Sunday at 1 p.m.

Museum sponsors Father's Day cruise

The Junior Museum will sponsor a Father's Day cruise, featuring a champagne and all-you-can-eat buffet brunch, on Sunday, June 16, from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The cost will be $25 for adults and $8 for children under 12.

Coyne holds up redistricting

By Debi Boucher

Albany County Executive James J. Coyne has refused to approve the new district lines passed by the county legislature at its May 28 special session, and may counter with an alternative plan.

"I plan to hold it for a couple more weeks so we can get more input from the public," he said Friday. Saying he had concerns about the new districts with regard to racial and neighborhood issues, Coyne indicated he would either submit an alternative plan to the legislature or make specific recommendations for change.

Coyne, who lost the Democratic party's support for re-election this year, said he has 30 days by law to review the new district lines, drawn in response to 1990 census data.

Coyne's review will likely effectively kill the redistricting for this year's elections, since the first day for candidates to get petitions signed is Monday, June 17. All 39 district seats, which hold four-year terms, will be on the ballot this fall.

County Attorney William Conboy said the new districts would have take effect by that date in order to be legal. Conboy also said the county executive has no legal right to submit an alternative plan. "All he has the right to do under the statute is to make objections," he said, conceding that an alternative plan could be construed as an objection. Had the plan passed by a two-thirds majority, he said, there would have been no need for Coyne's approval.

Minority Leader Robert Prentiss (R-Colonie) introduced a resolution to withdraw the redistricting plan at Monday's legislative session. Under his proposal, legislators would run this year under existing district lines, and a special election would be held next year once new lines were in place, in order to allow more time for community input to the plan. The resolution was referred to the Redistricting commission.

Conboy said the plan proposed by Prentiss would not be legal, since the county charter sets the time frame for terms of office. "The resolution is certainly less than legitimate on its face," he said.

Prentiss said he based his resolution on a June 4 letter from Coyne to legislative Chairman Charles Cahill, which a copy of was received by Prentiss. Noting that it is "rare for Jim Coyne and myself to agree on anything," Prentiss said he supports the county executive's position on redistricting.

Coyne said he met Thursday with representatives of the Albany chapter of the NAACP, which was critical of the redistricting proposal at a public hearing held May 23. NAACP representative Gail Bowden, one of more than a dozen citizens and organization leaders to speak at that meeting in opposition of the redistricting, charged extending city districts into suburban areas would dilute the minority vote.

Republican leaders claimed the new districts were manipulated to compensate for reduced populations in traditionally Democratic urban areas; districts in the cities of Albany, Watervliet and Cohoes were extended into the suburban towns of Colonie and Bethlehem.

In his letter to Cahill, Coyne charged the new district lines were drawn with "an indiscriminate disregard for neighborhood and municipal boundaries, and a lack of sensitivity to patterns of settlement and commonality of interests."

Coyne also took issue with some of the odd shape configurations that emerged as a result of the redistricting—a point widely criticized in Republican circles. Prentiss said the new lines made his district resemble a submarine, with his home contained in a periscope. One district in Guilderland "has 87 sides," Coyne said.

Coyne said he will announce today (Wednesday, June 12) whether or not he would run for re-election. "If I ran I certainly would go on a Democratic primary," he said, but added he would be "open to other lines."

In a Democratic Party primary, Coyne would face Robert Lyman, chairman of the Capital District Transportation Authority, who won the backing of the Albany County Democratic Party. Should he decide not to run, he said, "I will be watching that office very carefully in the next four years. If somebody thinks they can do a better job, that's great. But if they stumble and fall, I won't be very far."

Coyne's chief liability may be a grand jury investigation that has been going on nearly three years. "That looms big," he conceded. "It's a heavy weight on my shoulders." But he said there had been "an outpouring of support in the last few days" from those who said they would back his candidacy despite the investigation. But, he said, "I don't know if I would want to put any of those people on the spot" by asking them to publicly back him.

Coyne last week resigned from the county's Industrial Development Agency over criticism of his use of IDA funds to finance several trips. All of them had to do with IDA business, he said, including the new hockey training facility in Colonie and his attempts to have the winter Olympic games held in Albany. One trip, to Washington, D.C., had to do with airport privatization; Coyne said if the privatization had gone through, the firms involved would have wanted to use IDA bonds to finance the airport expansion.

"For $6,300, we brought back about $20 to $25 million to the county," he said.

Although the IDA is run with private funds, Coyne said, the agency basically "has been an extension of this office," and he felt it appropriate to use the IDA funds. Saying he felt the criticism was political, he commented, "I don't need the aggravation."

Risk factors warning flags for teens

Here are 10 individual risk factors for substance abuse (five will be listed this week, and five next week). When two risk factors exist, there is approximately four times the risk of problem behavior. When four risk factors are present, the risk of alcohol or other drug abuse is 10 times greater.

1. Family history of alcoholism.
2. Poor and inconsistent family management practices: Families where parents fail to set clear expectations for behavior, where they fail to monitor their children, and where their disciplinary practices are excessively severe and inconsistent.

3. Anti-social behavior and hyperactivity: Boys, especially 5 to 7 years old, whose aggressive behavior is combined with withdrawal or isolation (e.g., who do not play well with other children), or is combined with hyperactivity, are at greater risk.

4. Parental drug use and positive attitudes toward drugs: Families where parents use illegal drugs for recreation, or are heavy users of alcohol (but are not necessarily alcoholic).

5. Academic failure: Beginning in 4th, 5th and 6th grade. In early elementary school, social adjustment is more important than academic performance.

Starlite looks to banner season

By Elizabeth Macdonald

The crowd behind the scenes at the Starlite Music Theater is more optimistic this year than any other year, according to general manager Bob Belber, who said the theater already boasts the highest ticket sales ever for this time in the season.

And things can only get better. Belber expects 10 to 15 sellouts this year, a prospect he said appeals to the big-name acts appearing at the theater this year.

"Acts who have traditionally appeared in the amphitheater setting are looking at potential with the economy where it is," said Belber. Performers, he said, are realizing they can either sell 3,000 to 5,000 of the seats in one of the large amphitheaters, or they can fill the 2,972 seats of Starlite's theater-in-the-round.

Belber said the Starlite's seating offers an intimacy with performers that few people would be able to experience in larger amphitheater settings. "If there's one quality that we have it's that we're intimate," he said, noting that the most remote seat at the Starlite is 54 feet from the stage. Nineteen rows fill it to capacity, and there are no poles or other obstructions to block any patron's view of the act.

The Starlite benefits from the relationship it has with a number of other theaters in the Northeast, said Belber, who five years ago co-founded an organization known as the Northeast Theater Association.

"It's a loose association — not a formed entity," Belber said of the conglomeration of theaters which jelled because of mutual efforts toward the same goals. The smaller theaters in the region have discovered that together they can go after some of the big acts, he said.

Last year, for instance, the Starlite and other theaters bombarded Diana Ross's agent with $800,000 worth of offers for engagements in a week and a half. Working together, the smaller venues convinced Ross to accept the bulk offer consisting of a succession of dates at their theaters rather than a limited number of shows in the huge arenas.

"We had more power," said Belber. The trend continues this year: The Starlite will host the duo of only four dates the duo will play in the North-

Mom, apple pie and industry highlight historic organization's current tour series

By Elizabeth Macdonald

Breweries, Americana, and family-run businesses add up to a full schedule of tours and special events for the Hudson Mohawk Industrial Gateway in Troy.

"We're doing a series on America this year — hot dogs, apple pie, baseball and mom," said Trudy Merchant, Gateway tour director. The Gateway is offering tours beginning with Fritz Helmbold, Inc. Meat Processing, on Aug. 21, and a Gateway tour of J. deBeer & Son baseball manufacturers, on Sept. 25.

The business behind the traditional symbols of American life is only one of the themes the Gateway is showcasing this year. In addition, it is spotlighting family-run businesses in the area. The Gateway will sponsor a trip to the Golub Corporation's Price Chopper warehouse operations on July 17, and to Hannay Hose Reels on Aug. 14.

The Gateway, a nonprofit educational corporation, is concerned with 19th and 20th-century industries and architecture in the communities of Troy, Albany, Schenectady, Waterford, Cohoes, Green Island and Watervliet. Its guided tours and cruises interpret the industrial and architectural history and present-day life of these communities at the confluence of the Hudson and Mohawk rivers.

Teresa Winslow, Gateway's executive director, cites the two missions of the corporation as industrial history and historical preservation. The Hudson Mohawk Gateway originated 19 years ago under the direction of Father Thomas Phelan, a Roman Catholic priest. It developed as an offshoot of the preservation committee of Rensselaer County Historical Society. Winslow said the Gateway came into being when it became obvious that the area needed to have a whole separate entity because of the breadth of the project. The Gateway set out to preserve abandoned historical industrial buildings by reusing them for industrial purposes or adapting them for completely different uses. "Basically to save buildings," said Winslow.

Merchant, who is not originally from the area, got involved with the organization when a Gateway tour director taught a class she was taking at Maria College.

"It's the confluence of those rivers. The whole area has a remarkable history. I don't think there's another place like it. I just didn't picture it," she said. "It's fascinating how all these little communities started. Troy was a worker city, and Cohoes a company town. It's amazing how it all sparked."

The Gateway offers the public a chance to investigate the changing industry scene with a tour titled "Garden Way Gets the Lead Out!" on June 26, followed by tours of Tufflite Plastics on July 24 and Simmons Machine Tool on Oct. 16.

"It's the opportunity for any ordinary Joe to go into these places," said Merchant.

And it's not just "the ordinary Joe" who enjoys the tours. Merchant said the Freihofer's Bakery tour was comprised mostly of senior citizens who didn't get the opportunity to tour the bakery when they were younger, as many schoolchildren regularly do today.

School groups often use the Gateway's special school tour brochure to set up walks, bus rides or cruises that tie into topics being covered in the classroom. Children are also invited to come along on a number of the tours listed in the Gateway's regular brochure.

"Steamer Number 10 would be terrific for children," said Merchant of the July 31 tour of the 100-year-old Albany firehouse that has been converted into a theater. She also recommends the July 10 tour of the 139th Tactical Air Squadron, where the public will be briefed on Arctic and Antarctic operations and have the chance to walk through an LC-130 aircraft used in the ice cap operations.

Other events include a Victorian picnic on the grounds of Troy's Oakwood Cemetery, a know-your-neighborhood tour of Prospect Park and Waterford Flight, a two-and-a-half-hour cruise through a series of five locks between the Hudson and Mohawk rivers.

Some sites specifically forbid any children on tours of their facilities for insurance and safety reasons, she said. For instance, Corcraft, the distribution center for items produced by inmates of the state Department of Correctional Services, has set an age limit for its tour on Sept. 18. Because of some of the machinery used at the Mohawk Paper Mills, no one under age 18 will be allowed on the tour.

But Brown & Moran Brewing Co. specifically stated in a letter to the Gateway that children are invited to join the tour group. If the youngest tourgoers might not be able to taste the wares following the tour, the company believes the children would find the brewing process fascinating. Also along the brewery theme, on October 26, Rick Knight of Holmes & Watson in Troy will give a bus tour of local neighborhood pubs where the working man quenched his thirst in days gone by. "It's an historic pub crawl," said Merchant.

The Gateway plans to host a brewery workers reunion Sept. 28. While everyone is welcome, Merchant said, the afternoon will be especially for brewery workers and their families. "The reunion is to encourage people who work in a specific field to bring whatever artifacts they might have; to listen to stories," she said.

The Gateway offers membership to students and senior citizens for $10, to individuals for $15 and to families for $25. Members receive reduced prices on all tours and cruises except those designated as fund-raisers, and also get discounts on books the Gateway sells on archeology, industry, Troy and the Hudson Mohawk Gateway. According to Merchant, "Money from the memberships goes toward funding educational programs for the kids."

Gateway tours offer an alternative to usual leisure time activities, Merchant said. "They're inexpensive," she added, "usually less than a movie, unless there's another method of transportation involved."

Potential tourgoers must make reservations with the Gateway, as numbers are usually limited and slots sometimes fill quickly. Call 274-5267 for a complete listing of scheduled events or to reserve a spot.

MADD establishes Albany office

Mothers Against Drunk Driving have opened an office at 90 State St., Albany. MADD is a non-profit, tax-exempt corporation established in 1980 whose goals include reduction of the number of deaths and injuries caused by people driving under the influence of alcohol or other drugs, and support and services to victims of drunk or drugged drivers.

The organization felt that it was important to have a presence in the state capitol in order to better monitor legislation. The office in Albany will provide assistance to the nine county chapters in the state and will support the establishment of new chapters as interest grows.

SPOTLIGHT TEENSCENE

By Juliette Braun

Now that school is almost over, three warm, sun-filled months stretch ahead of you. The question is, what will you do? You can go biking and swimming with your friends, but if you feel like doing something new and exciting look into all the great activities provided by your community. These are just a few of the many opportunities available.

If you are an animal lover and feel a need to give something back to the community, Whiskers Animal Benevolent League is looking for volunteers. Whiskers is a not-for-profit shelter for stray, abandoned and abused animals, which strives to provide animal companionship to senior citizens who want to become pet owners but are unable to fully care for the animals. Volunteers are paired with seniors to help with pet care. For information, call 489-0653.

Are you interested in performing jazz music with other area high school and college students? The College of Saint Rose is sponsoring a summer jazz program designed for young people in high school or college. The program, which will teach jazz to as many as 40 musicians, is split into two groups. Practices for high school-level students will be every Tuesday and Thursday from 7 to 9 p.m., and college students will meet Monday and Wednesday from 7 to 9 p.m. For information, call 454-5143.

If you are under 13 years of age and have no idea what to do with your summer, check out Summer Scene, which will feature field trips, arts and crafts, community awareness and more. Lunch will be provided free of charge. The program will be held at Lincoln Park, Delaware and Morton avenues, Albany, and at Rigeifield Park, Ridgefield Street, Albany, from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. Monday through Friday, July 8 through Aug. 16. For information, call 463-4267.

If you have an item exclusively for area teens, send it to TEENSCENE, Spotlight Newspapers, 125 Adams St., Delmar 12054.

east. The show sold out two days after the tickets went on sale.

The early success in ticket sales hasn't come without extensive work on the part of Belber's staff. "A lot of people probably think we must go to warm places in the winter," said Belber, since the theater's season doesn't start until spring. But the general manager has been in meetings since January with people representing acts the Starlite hopes to woo for the season, and collaborating with other

Northeast theaters, working out schedules and deals to entice big-name performers.

The Temptations and the Four Tops will perform July 26, followed by Crystal Gayle and the Desert Rose Band on the July 31. In August, George Carlin will hold stage on the 3rd, Air Supply plays on the 10th and Kenny Rogers on the 13th. Howie Mandel will perform Aug. 18 and Willie Nelson on Sept. 27.

For a complete schedule, call the Starlite box office at 783-9300.

Better mileage tips

Getting your dollar to go that extra mile seems like a pretty good idea, especially during these times. Here are some valuable tips on how you can literally get that extra mile for your dollar.

- Get in tune. Getting a tune-up for a car that's badly out of tune, even a newer car, can increase your fuel mileage by up to 20 percent.

- Get in line. Have your wheel alignment checked and adjusted if necessary. Poorly aligned wheels increase road friction and waste gas.

- Pump it up. Check your tire pressure at least once per month. Underinflated tires significantly hurt fuel economy.

- Don't mix it up. Cars with radial tires get better mileage than those with bias-ply tires. You should not, however, mix the two types.

- Clean up your act. Dirty clogged air filters cause a higher fuel-to-air ratio, decreasing fuel economy. Change filters at the interval recommended in the the owners manual or if they look dirty.

- Make the grade. To improve your gas mileage, use a multigrade motor oil recommended by your car's manufacturer. Choose an energy conserving (EC) oil identified by an Energy Conserving or Energy Conserving II label. An EC-rated multigrade oil can improve your gas mileage 1.5 percent over a typical single grade motor oil. An EC II rating signifies an improvement of 2.7 percent over the single grade oil.

How to keep track of your gas mileage.

Knowing how to calculate your car's fuel efficiency can be helpful in assuring that you're getting the best possible gas mileage. Here's how you can check:

- Write down the number of miles displayed on your odometer when you fill up your car.

- Divide the number of miles you've driven since the last fill-up by the number of gallons you put in. This will give you the miles per gallon (mpg).

Planners give nod to Krumkill Manor

By Susan Wheeler

The Bethlehem Planning Board last week approved the first 25 lots of a 58-lot development called Krumkill Manor, to be located on Blessing and Krumkill roads.

Plans for the subdivision have been in the works for more than five years, according to Joe Scaring, general partner of property owners DPA Associates. The property was originally designed as a 110-lot subdivision until DPA Associates sold a parcel of its land to its neighbors, the Association for Retarded Children on Krumkill Road in Slingerlands, he said.

Scaring said that although DPA Associates sold the land because it would be "good for the community," he would rethink the deal if he had the chance to do it over. He said the group lost money because property value has increased. In addition, the sale of the property caused a change in the subdivision plan as well as the need of the board to make further decisions, he said. "It would have facilitated the matter" if the parcel had not been sold, he said.

Another item which delayed approval was the decision of whether to connect Krumkill and Blessing roads, according to Chairman Martin Barr. He said the board was split on the issue "for a while." The board decided to approve the 25 lots without the connecting road, he said.

The average lot size for the 13 lots off Blessing Road and 12 lots off Krumkill Road is approximately 18,300 square feet, according to Larry Windsor of J. Kenneth Fraser, consulting engineers. He said that although there are "some hurdles to overcome," what remains are technical decisions, such as the size of the sewer piping.

Scaring said no date has been set for construction to begin. Before the work starts, he said he would like to ensure that the plans are in "full compliance with the town's rules and regulations." "We want to start off on the right foot."

Town regulations limit the number of lots to be approved by the board at one time to 25. Prior to the approval of remaining lots, the town requires certificates of occupancy to be issued for the first 25 lots.

In other news:

- The board heard from E. Gray Watkins, an Orchard Street Association partner and the group's attorney, on a proposed subdivision to be located on Orchard Street near Game Farm Road. The design of Orchard Estates' 11 flag lots caused board members to comment that site distance needs to be improved and that lots need more frontage. Barr recommended that Watkins return with an alternate plan in which the road is designed in a cul-de-sac fashion. That plan would allow for 15 lots.

- The board approved the site plan application for the office of Drs. Thomas Decker, Michael Sbuttoni and Vorton Boghosian at 279 Delaware Ave. The applicants applied for approval to extend the front of the building.
