CLAWS wants info on dump site access

Resident files FOI request

By Susan Graves

At least one Bethlehem resident and members of the Citizens Lobby for Alternative Waste Solutions (CLAWS) want access to information regarding nine potential landfill sites they say is being withheld by ANSWERS.

Michael Waldenmaier of Bethlehem said he has been trying for several weeks to find out which landowners have granted access to sites being considered for a county landfill by ANSWERS.

Waldenmaier, whose family has property on or near several possible sites, said when public meetings were held last month, ANSWERS spokesmen said the names of landowners who granted access would be made public. "We have property on sites 3 and 4," and are close to B-2, he said. (See accompanying map for site locations)

"Nealon (Albany Commissioner of Public Works George Nealon) had said at the meeting at Becker School the information would be public as to what landowners would give access," he said.

Waldenmaier said he was told the information would be first sent out to landowners and then be made available to the public. He said he went to the office of Willard Bruce, director of planning for the City of Albany, in mid-July and was told to come back on July 31. When he returned, however, he said Bruce told him the information would not be made public because "there might be repercussions to owners who would give access." Efforts to reach Bruce Monday were unsuccessful.

Nealon on Monday said he does plan to release information to the public, but not until ANSWERS finishes reviewing materials it has amassed so far.

"The people can take a look at this, but we have to get through the (review) process first," he said. "When we get to the end of the process, all steps and information will be available."

Waldenmaier, meanwhile, said he has filed a Freedom of Information request to attempt to get information now.

But Nealon said ANSWERS is still going through transcripts and written documents. "We've got to swallow this part first," he said.

"I'm concerned more about the whole town, not just my father's site," Waldenmaier said. "We're wondering if the meetings (there have been two public meetings on the potential sites) were just to pacify us."

BC teacher retires after 41 years

By Robert Webster Jr.

After facing more than 3,000 pupils, encompassing two and a half generations, in 41 years of teaching, "Uncle Al" Restifo decided it was time for a change.

When Bethlehem Central School District announced its acceptance of a new retirement plan from the state a few months back, Restifo, who has been with the district for 40 years, was one of the first teachers to sign up.

"I had told myself that the next year was going to be my last, but when this offer came along, it was just too good to pass up," he said.

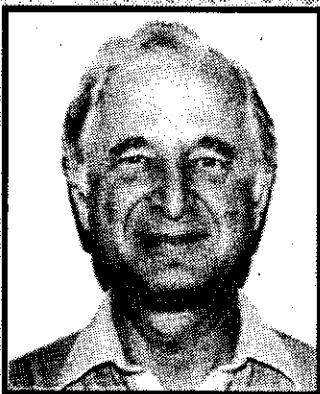

Born June 14, 1928, in the Arbor Hill section of Albany, Restifo moved to the Tri-Village area in 1931, and lived in Elsmere, Clarksville and Feura Bush before settling in Delmar.

Restifo holds the distinction of being the first BC teacher to have gone through the entire system from kindergarten through 12th grade and then be hired to teach in the district.

"I started off in Elsmere Grade School in 1932, two years after the district was centralized, and I finished up with honors and a Regents diploma in 1945," said Restifo.

While attending Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute and Siena College and working toward a bachelor's degree in chemistry, with minors in English, philosophy, math and physics, Restifo said he didn't really have an idea of what he wanted to do when he finished his schooling.

"Uncle" Al Restifo

"fresh-faced and with a master's in elementary education" in 1950 and was sent immediately into a classroom.

"That was a tough year," Restifo said of his first year in the Albany Public School District. "It was extremely tough, but it taught me a lot. Ever since that first year, I have loved

Board OKs emergency VCS budget

By Susan Wheeler

The Voorheesville Central School District Board of Education Monday night approved a $10,199,138 contingency budget, which carries an approximately 9.5 percent tax rate increase.

In accordance with New York State Education Department opinion on contingency budget requirements, Counsel No. 213, the budget provides for salaries and divides ordinary contingent expenses into three categories: legal expenses, authorized expenditures and items necessary to maintain the educational program, preserve property and assure the health and safety of students and staff, according to Superintendent Alan McCartney. Other "ordinary contingent expenses" include instructional supplies for teachers; salaries for essential non-instructional personnel; fuel, water, light and power; expenditures for retirement,

Bethlehem police make DWI arrests

Bethlehem police recently arrested two motorists on misdemeanor charges of driving while intoxicated.

Vincent J. Darrigo, 28, of 65 First St., Castleton, was arrested for DWI Wednesday, July 31, at 8:14 p.m. after he was stopped for a traffic violation while driving westbound on Delaware Avenue near town hall, police said.

Ricky John Wiesmaier, 21, of 11 Dale St., Voorheesville, was arrested for DWI Friday, July 26, at 7:27 p.m. after he was stopped for failing to keep right, speeding and reckless driving on New Scotland Road near Carstead Drive, police said.

Wiesmaier, travelling westbound, attempted to pass a vehicle on the double yellow line. An oncoming vehicle prevented him from passing. As he attempted to pull back into the lane, his vehicle made contact with the rear of the vehicle he tried to pass. His Chevrolet left the roadway, slid an estimated 75 feet across a private front lawn and stopped in a wooded area.

The Delmar Fire Department Rescue Squad took Wiesmaier to Albany Medical Center Hospital after the accident for minor head injuries, police said.

He was treated and released the same day, according to a hospital spokeswoman.

Fallen tree causes outage

Some 500 Elsmere residents lost their electricity for about an hour Friday afternoon when a fallen tree limb caused a transformer outage, according to Nicholas Lyman, public relations director for Niagara Mohawk Power Corporation.

Lyman said power was restored to the 490 customers at 4:53 p.m. after the problem with the circuit was corrected.

According to Elsmere Fire Department Assistant Chief Richard Webster, his department's firefighters responded to the call at 3:51 p.m. He said the tree, "probably just a weak one," fell on a high-tension wire on Elsworth Place between Snowden and Bedell avenues. When the wires touched the circuit shorted out, causing a power outage from Delaware Plaza up to CVS pharmacy on Delaware Avenue, he said.

While NiMo crews cut the tree off the wires, four fire police directed traffic, Webster said.

There were no injuries, he said, and the company returned to the station shortly before 6 p.m.

New Scotland wins $15K grant

By Debi Boucher

The Town of New Scotland has won a $15,000 grant from the New York City-based J.M. Kaplan Fund to help pay for completion of its new zoning ordinance, still in the draft stage, and implementation of its new master plan, which is 90 percent complete.

The news came on the heels of the town's decision to continue work on the zoning ordinance without the help of consultants from C.T. Male Associates of Latham, the engineering firm that drafted both documents and is also working on a new set of subdivision regulations for the town.

Following the last workshop between the town board, planning board and C.T. Male representatives John Montagne and Kate Frank, the town board held a special meeting on July 29 to assess progress on the zoning ordinance and re-evaluate the goals of the master plan, which is intended to be a guideline for the ordinance.

The meeting drew a crowd of residents with varying opinions on the degree and nature of planning needed by the town. The master plan, launched in 1987, was drafted last year following a series of public meetings held throughout the town to garner input from residents.

Although it incorporated that input, the plan was also a product of geological studies and other technical data designed to show which areas of town could support growth, and how much.

The July 29 meeting triggered renewal of longstanding arguments between those who favor zoning to protect land not deemed able to support a high degree development and those who feel landowners should be able to do with their land what they please.

Aside from the philosophical disagreements, which some officials say can't be resolved — "You're not going to reach a consensus," said planning board member Robert Hampston — there has been conflict over the escalating costs of the project.

Supervisor Herbert Reilly said the total would approach $50,000 — between $12,000 and $14,000 over budget.

Reilly, who announced the town's application for the grant several months ago, said at the time he was hoping the $15,000 could be used to cover the excess cost.

What pushed the project over budget, Reilly said, were the often lengthy work sessions between the two boards and the two consultants.

The boards began meeting in January to go over the zoning ordinance page by page, mainly because the town board must approve the document. The master plan must be approved by the planning board, but the zoning ordinance is the town board's responsibility. A planning board spokesman said they wanted to be sure councilmen understood the zoning document fully before having to vote on it.

The contract between C.T. Male and the town, meanwhile, provided a limit on consultants' time, Reilly said. Anything over a certain number of hours was billed separately.

Montagne was at a planning board subdivision regulation work session held Tuesday, July 30. Reilly said later it had been agreed he would attend that session. The subdivision regulations are less complex than the zoning ordinance itself, he said, and should take less time to complete.

Planning Board Chairman Raymond MacKay said he estimated the board is "only two or three meetings away from wrapping up the subdivision regulations."

The next subdivision regulation work session has not been set, he said, pending a meeting scheduled between the planning board and town board at 7 p.m. on Tuesday, Aug. 20. "The specifics of where we're going will unfold at that meeting," he said.

2 die in Route 9W crash

By Susan Wheeler

An Albany teenager and his friend died Thursday after their car veered off the left shoulder of Route 9W in Selkirk following a police chase.

Kenneth Curless, 16, of 342 Washington Ave., Albany, and Robert LaBelle, 20, of Martin Hill Road, Ravena, both died as a result of multiple internal injuries received in the early morning accident, according to State Police Maj. John Mainello, commander of Troop G, Loudonville.

According to Trooper Peter Rodriguez, a Cumberland Farms convenience store in Greenville reported that at approximately 4:30 a.m. two individuals stole beer from the store. A convenience store employee identified the car and license plate number as that of the car in which Curless and LaBelle fled, he said.

They were spotted travelling northbound on Route 9W at 5:50 a.m. by a trooper parked near the Route 9W Selkirk State Police station, Mainello said.

Trooper Joseph Dodd followed the vehicle at a low speed to confirm the plate number and make of the vehicle, Mainello said. Once he identified the car, a gold four-door 1982 Chrysler New Yorker Fifth Avenue, he turned on his emergency lights and pursued Curless and LaBelle. The two refused to pull over for the trooper, he said.

The six-minute chase remained at low speeds of approximately 35 mph for the first four to five minutes, Mainello said. It ended when the vehicle rapidly accelerated, failed to negotiate a curve in the road and swerved off the left shoulder of Route 9W, hitting two utility poles, he said.

Mainello said from the position in which Curless and LaBelle were found, it appears Curless, who received his driver's permit earlier this year, was driving.

The two led Dodd from Route 9W to Jericho Road then onto Hague Boulevard, Mainello said. When they re-entered on Route 9W, they rapidly accelerated, drove past other northbound vehicles, crossing the double yellow line on the road. During the chase, the two threw beer cans out of the car window, he said.

When Dodd noticed the curve in the road, "he backed right off," according to Mainello. He observed the vehicle strike the utility poles, he said.

Police accident reconstruction experts are examining the vehicle, skid marks and the crash scene, he said. The maximum speed of the car has not yet been determined, he said, but will be estimated from the accident reconstruction. The results of a toxicology report, expected in several weeks, will confirm whether the two had been drinking alcoholic beverages, he said.

The accident occurred north of the Capital Cities Imported Cars dealership, Mainello said. Curless was pronounced dead at the scene of the accident and LaBelle died late Thursday at Albany Medical Center Hospital, Rodriguez said. Curless' autopsy, performed by Albany County Coroner Paul Marra, revealed that he died from a lacerated heart, he said.

According to the Aug. 2 LaBelle autopsy report, performed by Albany County Coroner Timothy Cavanaugh, he died from multiple traumatic injuries, Rodriguez said.

Rodriguez said the 1982 Chrysler belonged to Curless' guardian, Ravena-Selkirk-Coeymans school teacher Harold Becker.

Local families soon won't have to travel far to get fitted for quality athletic shoes.

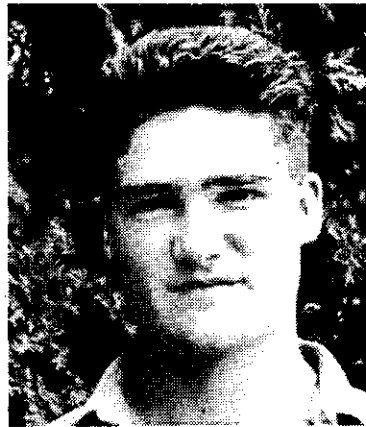

Waddingham's Footwear, a new athletic footwear and apparel store, is scheduled to open next month in Glenmont Plaza on Route 9W, according to 22-year-old owner John Waddingham. He signed the lease July 21 and getting his merchandise ready for the store's opening. "We're going to carry big names," the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk varsity letterman and 1987 graduate said of the store, which will be located next to First American Bank of New York in the plaza. "We're shooting to open anytime in September."

Along with Waddingham's Footwear's grand opening, the plaza will see the addition of a Chinese food take-out restaurant, also scheduled to open next month. West Wok Chinese Take-Out, owned by Eddie Sze, owner of two area East Wok Chinese Take-Out restaurants, will offer lunch and dinner seven days a week from 11 a.m. to 10 p.m., according to Anthony Stapleton of Calmon Dolgin Affiliates of Garden City, N.Y., plaza managing agents. He said Sze expects the take-out restaurant, located next to CVS pharmacy, will be open for business by Sept. 15.

New businesses are attracted to Glenmont Plaza, which has been in operation since last fall, because it is "a very strong shopping center," he said. Sze told Stapleton he was interested in Glenmont Plaza because it is a "growing area" in a good location, he said.

Waddingham, a former South Bethlehem resident who is looking to move to the New Scotland area with his wife, Karen, said he chose Glenmont Plaza to allow area residents the opportunity to shop for "quality athletic footwear" closer to home. Customers "won't have to run 15 or 20 minutes from home to go shopping for athletic shoes."

Waddingham said in addition to knowing the area well, "There's a lot of opportunity there."

Waddingham's Footwear will carry cross-trainers, basketball, baseball and running sneakers, he said. "We'll have quite a few styles for everyone, men, women and children, to choose from. It'll be a complete store."

After managing the Footlocker, an athletic shoe store, in Wilton Mall near Saratoga Springs, Waddingham decided to set out on his own. He said a comprehensive training program through Footlocker provided him with experience, and managing put him in touch with athletic footwear and apparel distributors. He has an associate's degree in business administration from the Community College of the Finger Lakes.

Plans for the store are well under way. "We've hit our goals so far," Waddingham said. "It's extremely exciting, spectacular."

Public meeting set on Spawn Hollow landfill

Bethlehem Supervisor Ken Ringler has scheduled a second public meeting on the Spawn Hollow Road landfill for residents of South Bethlehem at 7 p.m. on Thursday, Aug. 8, at the Selkirk Fire Company No. 3 Firehouse, Route 396, South Bethlehem.

At the meeting, Ringler will discuss the town's negotiations with Glenmont resident Harlen W. Metz Jr., who owns the landfill, and the state Department of Environmental Conservation.

The 3.5-acre South Bethlehem construction and demolition debris landfill, the subject of two town lawsuits, is the site of several recent fires. The town's most recent lawsuit, served April 8, aims to properly close the landfill. It states the landfill is a "public nuisance" in that it is seen as a threat to the surrounding area because of the potential for fire and odors. Area residents have complained of health side effects from the odor and fumes from the smoldering.

The town seeks to close the site in accordance with stricter regulations than those outlined on Metz's permit, which expires in April 1992.

EnCon issued a summary abatement order to Metz July 12. It demands that Metz begin procedures to close the landfill immediately.

Award-winning Vermonters to open Bethlehem restaurant

By Susan Graves

The restaurant just south of Albany over the Bethlehem town line at 55 Delaware Ave. has new managers, and is getting a new look and a new ambiance.

The restaurant, which formerly housed Ponderosa and Servidos, is called Sweetwaters Bistro and is expected to open later this month, according to two partners in the franchise, Jerry Vaughan and Tom DeMartino. The franchise is leased from Claim Your Steaks, Inc.

Vaughan and DeMartino, both chefs who together have about 50 years experience in the business, are planning a full-service restaurant. They currently own and run the Back Home Cafe in Rutland, Vt. They also own the Back Home Bakery and DeMartino Pasta Company in Rutland.

The Rutland eatery is a winner of last year's Taste of Vermont Award for Aunt Clem's chocolate cake, Vaughan and DeMartino said.

Sweetwaters' menu will feature 70 items, including homemade pasta and bakery items, foreign and domestic wines and beer, seafood and traditional restaurant fare.

"We'll definitely cater to all aspects of the community" and its preferences, Vaughan said. "All baking will be done on the premises," and some specialties will be available for take-out. "Consistency is our hallmark," he said.

Tom DeMartino and Jerry Vaughan take a break from work on Sweetwaters Bistro, a new full-service restaurant on Delaware Avenue in Bethlehem. The partners are hoping to complete renovations and open later this month. They also own the Back Home Cafe, an award-winning restaurant in Rutland, Vt.

Elaine McLain

The restaurant will be open seven days a week and include a sandwich and lighter fare menu throughout the day. Sweetwaters will offer six to eight specials daily.

DeMartino said he is relocating to help manage the restaurant, and that "we're a hands-on operation; we'll go back and forth" between Rutland and Bethlehem.

Vaughan and DeMartino, natives of Queens, settled in Rutland 13 years ago. "Skiing brought us here," Vaughan said. He and DeMartino said they want to develop Sweetwaters as a "destination" restaurant for patrons from throughout the Capital District.

In addition to work being done on the inside of the building, which includes a redesigned side entrance, a new bar with 18 bar stools and lounge area, and coat room, additional shrubbery and flowers have been planted.

And although the opening is still undetermined, "we've already booked a party of 60," for a fall event, DeMartino said. Sweetwaters will cater special functions and will be able to accommodate up to 225 diners.

Plans include luncheon specials for $3.99 and a lunch club card, which can be redeemed for a free lunch.

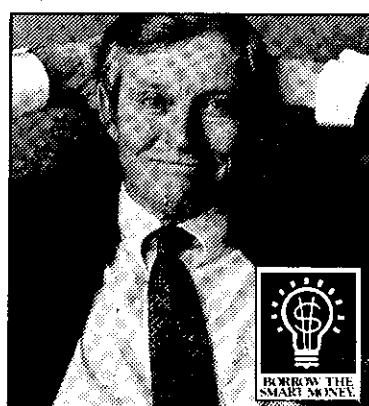

Both Vaughan and DeMartino are eager to open in Bethlehem and said they have received encouragement from town officials. "It's a real friendly atmosphere," DeMartino said.

Fire District sets vote for property

The Selkirk Fire District wants to purchase the Defelias pizza store on Maple Avenue in Selkirk. The property is approximately one quarter acre in size and is located at the corner of Maple and Sunset avenues adjacent to the fire station. While there are no immediate plans, the land would be used to expand the present fire station to further fulfill the needs of the community.

A public vote on the request will be held Monday, Aug. 12, from 6 to 9 p.m. at Fire Station 1, 126 Maple Ave., Selkirk. The $79,000 purchase would not increase taxes, according to Charles Wickham Jr. of the Selkirk Fire Company, since funds would come from this year's budget.

'Lunch bunch' keeps seniors active

By Allison Bennett

Just because you might have had your 90 birthday doesn't mean that you are relegated to your rocking chair in some dingy corner and forgotten — at least not in the Town of Bethlehem!

A group of from 12 to 18 Bethlehem residents, ranging in age from 80 to 100, can be found every Tuesday noon at the Delmar Presbyterian Church come rain or shine, enjoying a delicious hot lunch and an entertaining program. The church is their "home base," although they are often invited to the schools, the Five Rivers complex, the Henry Hudson Park or even to a volunteer's home to go fishing in a backyard pond.

The "lunch bunch" program is sponsored by the Town of Bethlehem Senior Services as part of its outreach program. The Tuesday program provides the homebound elderly of the community with a hot meal and entertainment once a week in a sheltered, accessible atmosphere.

They are brought to the program door-to-door via Bethlehem Senior Services vans, and they must make a reservation for their lunch each week to facilitate proper planning. A small donation is collected to cover the cost of the paper products used at the meal. The food is provided by churches and community organizations within the town of a rotating basis. The program has 14 sponsors.

Senior Services has an amazing number of volunteers, a total of 357 in all. Volunteers drive the vans or are helpers on vans, set up tables and chairs, serve food and clean up and provide company, companionship and entertainment. There are many other ways the volunteers give their time to assist seniors, and there is always room for more volunteers.

In order to qualify for the lunch program a senior must be homebound—that is not able to get out on his or her own or socialize in a large group setting. They must be able to function alone without more than limited supervision and have a client intake form on file in the Senior Services office at town hall.

There is also a Monday lunch program for "younger" seniors held at town hall each week. The number of participants in the programs must be limited so that it does not get so large as to be a burden to the sponsors who provide the food. However, there is a waiting list and those eligible are welcome to put their name on the list.

Prior to his work in Louisville, Goldenberg was at Bradley University, in Illinois, where he served as director of the center for orientation, advisement and retention.

He also has teaching experience and has published many articles, papers and a novel.

As dean of Russell Sage College, Goldenberg will also be responsible for the quality of academic and student life and the coordination of institutional resources.

Deputies arrest three drivers

Albany County Sheriff's Department deputies recently arrested three motorists for misdemeanor driving while intoxicated (DWI).

On Friday, Aug. 2, at 4:30 a.m., Kyle Koch, 23, of Voorheesville was arrested for DWI after he was involved in a car accident on Krumkill Road in New Scotland. He was released on traffic tickets and is due in New Scotland Town Court Aug. 15.

On Sunday, Aug. 4, at about 1:40 a.m., John Ryan, 30, of Feura

Bush was arrested for DWI after being stopped on Route 32 in New Scotland for having only one brake light. He was released on traffic tickets and is due in New Scotland Town Court Aug. 15.

On Thursday, July 25, Joan Watrous, 51, of Vestal was arrested for DWI after being stopped on Route 443 in Bethlehem for failure to keep right. She was released on traffic tickets and is due in Bethlehem Town Court later this month.

Five Rivers to hold guided walk

The group will also be looking for animal tracks and traces.

A wildflower walk will be on Thursday, Aug. 8, at 8:30 a.m.

Go quietly, please

Four weeks ago, The Spotlight expressed the view that, following his indictment, County Executive Coyne should be placed on unpaid leave until either the end of his term of office or until the legal cloud over his head is cleared away, if that occurs during 1991.

Mr. Coyne is still collecting pay checks from the public treasury. This is inappropriate for at least two reasons: His ability to perform all the functions of his office clearly has been diminished, and the distraction of having to participate in preparing his defense (a necessary priority for him) surely reduces his interest in investing time in discharging his responsibility. Further, though his innocence of the several charges must be presumed

'No charges were filed'

Not infrequently a newspaper reader comes across this tag line to an account of an accident:

"No charges were filed."

Such was the case with the report of a small child who was struck and fatally injured by a truck last week. It seemingly appeared that the child, on her bicycle, rode into the road under circumstances that made it difficult or impossible for the driver to stop in time. A few days earlier, three small tots were struck, under similar conditions, on a principal thoroughfare in Albany.

Prudence would seem to indicate that

Equality in representation

Demands by the Albany NAACP that legislative redistricting take place forthwith, so that three districts would be drawn so as to contain populations dominated by minorities, might well have an echo in some suburban communities.

In order to maintain safe districts for some Democratic office-holders and candidates, suburbs bordering the city of Albany are sliced away and added to city-dominated districts without regard to common interests. One result is alienation on the part of

The Dog Star made me do it

Once upon a time they were known as dog days, honoring Sirius, The Dog Star, which rises and sets with the sun in this season. (Sirius, by the way, derives from a Greek word that means "scorcher." Those Greeks once again did have a word for it, as legend constantly reminds us.)

Within our own time, clever newspaper writers have described August as "the silly season." This is the season of marathon dances, flagpole-sitters, pennant-race collapses, and all manner of unlikely events. Some of the latter are manufactured by press agents but a considerable portion are the product of bored reporters.

This is also the season when candidates, until perhaps proven otherwise, impropriety is evident in a public official's remaining on hand while under indictment for alleged offenses having to do with his office.

When the County Legislature meets next Monday after a month's lapse, it should take action to remedy this undesirable deadlock. Probably the Democratic colleagues of Mr. Coyne's would not initiate such action. But if the Republican minority could summon the strength to do so, such a resolution would at the very least obligate the Democrats to take a position on the matter.

when severe injury or death results from an accident, the investigating officers should not be acting as judge and jury in refraining from making formal complaint.

Surely some form of charge could be written up in such circumstances so that a court could dispassionately, with the benefit of complete information, make the judgment of non-culpability on a driver's part and formally assess probable blame (or absence of it) against either party. Such a role is what our courts are expected to fill, and we suggest that justice would be better served if no driver were immediately released by police in accidents such as described here.

residents affected by the partition, fostering diminished involvement in voting and other civic activity. Such citizens are, in effect, disenfranchised.

True equality of apportionment and representation strongly seems to obligate the courts which oversee such matters to take into consideration all the ingredients of equality. Thus, consanguinity of geographic, economic, political, and social elements would be given weight in districting just as much as mere numbers of population are employed at present.

desperate for a little attention (favorable, preferably), commit deeds which, under happier circumstances, they would never think of doing or saying.

One of these is the challenge to debate opponents on "issues." The ink is barely dry on the press release before the opponent loftily snubs the opportunity. Ordinarily, the challenger is the hopeful "out," and the "Get lost, kid" opponent is an incumbent or other occupant of the catbird seat.

One such challenge and rejection has occurred in primaries within our region, and here it is only the first week of August. Look for more such non-confrontations, along with other non-stories of the silly season.

Words for the week

Loath: Unwilling; reluctant (usually followed by "to." This can be a tricky word, because with the addition of an "e," the adjective becomes a verb and then it means to feel intense dislike, disgust, or hatred for; to abhor or detest.

Poignant: Sharp or pungent to the smell, or keenly affecting the other senses. Also, sharply painful to the feelings. In common usage, it is most likely to convey the sense of emotionally touching or moving; also, evoking compassion or pity, etc.

Avert: To keep from happening; ward off; prevent. It is related to averse (reluctant; opposed to). The latter word sometimes is confused with adverse (unfavorable; harmful). In similar vein is advert (to call attention to); and that can lead to animadvert (to comment on, especially with disapproval).

'I cut built-in deficit, managed well': Reilly

Editor, The Spotlight:

Regarding the letters published in The Spotlight last week, I would like to make the following points:

1) I started my term as Supervisor three and a half years ago with a budget that was grossly underfunded and that left me with built-in deficits.

2) This deficit was reduced by a considerable amount through the careful management of our programs.

3) The board cut the 1991 budget to its bare minimum last fall.

4) The country is in a financial crisis and it has had a ripple effect on all branches of local government — "supply side economics" of the '80s didn't work.

5) The lack of leadership charged is a self-fulfilling prophecy contrived by the leadership of the Republican Party. They have controlled the board and attorney position and consistently oppose progress.

Vox Pop

6) I campaigned on the theme of "Your Voice in Town Hall." The Republican view of leadership would be for the Supervisor to roll over, play dead, and sell the people short.

7) Being called the lone dissenter on a number of major votes is a compliment, especially since it comes from people who can find nothing good in what I do because I fly the colors of the people and the Democratic Party.

Defeat sports funding, Voorheesville is urged

Editor, The Spotlight:

On Aug. 7, a proposition seeking approval for funding the Voorheesville Central School District's interscholastic program will be presented to voters. That same proposition was defeated on July 17, along with the base budget, propositions seeking approval for the purchase of two school buses and a car, and propositions to purchase library books and instructional equipment.

The cost of the interscholastic sports program would be $69,040. That amount would have covered purchase of library books and instructional equipment (defeated Propositions 5 and 6) with almost $10,000 left over. That $69,040 would have purchased a needed school bus and car (defeated Proposition 2) with $13,000 left over; or would have purchased a needed 60-passenger bus (defeated Proposition 3) with $14,000 to spare.

Incidentally, had the bus expenditures passed they would have been offset by the State's reimbursement to the district of that expense. In any event, bus purchases will still be necessary in the near future when the Department of Transportation takes some

Just another 'Little House' story

The time was late April, 1972. You'll recall that there was a war on but President Nixon's Vietnamization would take care of that. "Watergate" was a hotel, and George McGovern was rapidly becoming the Democrats' man of destiny, New Hampshire having dampened Ed Muskie's prospects.

And I was arriving in Minneapolis on business. At the Minneapolis/St. Paul Airport, I was met by a friend, Ray Stevenson, and his wife.

I climbed into the rear seat of his Continental and we took off for downtown. Ray was driving in his customary sedate manner, but occasionally he'd turn his head toward me slightly to comment on some landmark or on our mutual interest.

Because Ray's voice was rather hoarsely indistinct due to a tracheotomy, his wife sometimes spoke up to clarify what he had been saying. The translation was useful.

At one point, I thought I heard Ray saying something like, "We'd take you out to the house, but they're moving it to New York tomorrow."

"Um," I said in response, that seeming to be suitably noncommittal.

Mrs. Stevenson turned her head once more. "You heard right. The house is to be moved tomorrow. To New York City."

"The house" was hardly just any old house. It had been designed by Frank Lloyd Wright in 1912, and constructed over the next couple of years. Mr. Wright's client was Francis W. Little, a prominent citizen (or "community leader," as we now say.)

Eventually the cast changed over the course of the next six decades, and Mr. Little's daughter — who had married Ray Stevenson, himself a substantial citizen, inherited the large, impressive, unique — and hard to maintain — residence.

In recent years, the Stevensons had moved out of it, to occupy a gatehouse kind of arrangement where the cost of living was easier. Even so, the taxes and other bills for its upkeep continued to arrive in unappetizing amounts. The Stevensons finally decided that the best way out was to pull the plug on the place and have it torn down.

Tear down a Wright house! Architects, esthetes, preservationists of all descriptions emerged from the woodwork as the word began to get around. And someone even came up with the best solution to forestall such an act of desecration. I'm unclear on all the particulars, but arrangements were made for the Metropolitan Museum of Art to acquire the house. The Met would rescue the property, though what form it feasibly could take was another matter. But, anyway, that's why the Wright/Little/Stevenson house was headed to Fifth Avenue the next day.

The move did get underway then, but you can imagine the endless detail in identifying each single piece so that ultimately it could be reconstructed. In fact, years passed before piecing together the financing and the structure itself could be completed. Only in 1980 was "the Little House" finally made accessible to the public, in the Metropolitan's new American Wing. Only the magnificent living room exists now, elegantly furnished in Wright style, as you undoubtedly noted if you have visited the museum in the past decade. As for your Uncle Dudley, the setting invariably recalls Ray Stevenson's throwaway line on April 24, 1972.

Why do I recall that date so precisely, you ask. Good question. The next day I received a not-to-be-forgotten call. The first grandchild, a youngster to be named Susannah, had made her appearance. So I left Minneapolis ahead of schedule and returned home — by way of St. Louis. Wasn't that a good-enough cause to remember the date and the occasion?

Did history begin just yesterday?

You can get a sense of history in "American Heritage," the magazine that emerges eight times a year endeavoring to tell us about — that's right — the nation's historic inheritance.

Unfortunately, a principal "sense of history" that the magazine now offers is in a reminder of what it used to be — and also what many nostalgic readers long for it to be again. The disparities between now and then are brought home poignantly by the promotions for a "35-year cumulative index" of the publication, 1954-89.

Citizens with the advantage of more than 35 years in the aging process will recall when "American Heritage" was a substantial periodical, in hard-cover, and with contents impressive enough to match the unusual physical format. Issues from those days are still treasured by people fortunate enough to possess a set or even just a few copies.

"American Heritage" today is a mixed bag. I recall having written a rather disappointed review of an issue a couple of years ago. There are two or three major problems, and they're inter-related.

The magazine has experienced some very difficult times over the years. Part of the problem has been the tunnel vision of some of the succession of editors, few of whom have even approached the stature of the founders (Bruce Catton comes to mind among the latter).

Within the very recent past, "American Heritage" was salvaged from one of its brinkings by the Forbes publishing family. Today you will find Malcolm, Jr., as chairman of this magazine, and Timothy as its president. I recall that at one time a Forbes was contributing to an issue or two — on a subject that appealed to him personally. I'm not certain that queasy episode has completely passed, and the peril of inappropriate commenting of editorial matter remains an unhappy image if not an immediate threat to the editor's independent judgment.

The present editorial chieftain, in a traditional "editor's letter," mentions that he graduated from college at the end of the 1960s — so, naturally enough, the principal article is on the 1970s. This, one can gather, is the editor's idea of history. The article, "How the Seventies Changed America," runs on for eight pages. (It happens to begin opposite a full-page advertisement for Forbes Wagon Creek Ranch.)

I also question the judgment of 11 pages on a man described by a total of three writers as "the father of rock and roll." One of the writers, by the way, is the Civil War historian Shelby Foote.

The cover story, "The Media and the Military," was surprisingly involving for me. The writer, Peter Andrews, begins with a longish recollection of General William T. Sherman and the press (Mr. Andrews is writing a book about Sherman), but deals with Generals Pershing, Marshall, and Eisenhower briefly on his way to Vietnam, Grenada, Panama, and finally to the Persian Gulf. The latter receives much more extensive treatment, including a degrading of Norman Schwarzkopf.

"The dust had hardly settled in the desert when negative stories about the general began to circulate. He is an attention-grabber who thinks he planned Desert Storm all by himself. He is loath to give credit to his field commanders and quick to relieve any staff officer who disagrees with him." (Mr. Andrews fails to make clear whether these are his views or whether he is merely paraphrasing scuttlebutt.) He adds:

"A joke going around the planning staff in Riyadh a few weeks back ran: 'Who is the second-most-hated man in the Middle East?' (Answer): 'Saddam Hussein.'"

The '70s reappear in a nine-page reminiscence about "the last flight of refugees out of Da Nang." Even stranger is the seven-page memoir about a writer's father, a Jersey City politician.

If you happen to be one of those who go through life despising Douglas MacArthur, you will delight in a scurrilous piece based on his love letters to his first wife. Having read "Uncle Dudley's" recent bit about a Frank Lloyd Wright house, I was persuaded to read one here about a Wright home in Springfield, Illinois. I didn't get much out of it.

Altogether, you are free to gather, I wasn't sure why I'd spent $4.50 for this issue. (For the eight issues annually, the subscription cost is $27.)

FAS, preventable disease, can be curbed by law

The contributor of this Point of View is a member of the New York State Senate representing Albany County

By Howard C. Nolan, Jr.

As a society, we must have the vision today to responsibly respond to tomorrow's problems — whether those problems are homelessness, AIDS, or substance abuse.

Point of View

And in this spirit, a new law seeks to prevent increasing occurrences of Fetal Alcohol Syndrome (FAS) among children. This tragic disease is caused by women drinking alcohol during pregnancy. As the third-worst cause of birth defects, it occurs in about 1- to 3-per-1,000 births.

Unlike some other conditions that threaten the lives of infants, FAS is one that can be averted. We know that it is not a disease that randomly affects children, seemingly without cause. Rather, it is one that can be prevented by a better social policy which effectively educates women — particularly pregnant women about the risks of consuming alcohol.

This better social policy is a new law (Chapter 57), which I supported; it will take effect by next April. Simply stated, its purpose is to try to prevent FAS in children by warning and informing pregnant women about the risks of consuming alcoholic beverages.

This law requires the New York State Liquor Authority to distribute signs and posters reading "Warning: Drinking alcoholic beverages during pregnancy can cause birth defects" to all licensed liquor establishments. In turn, these establishments are responsible for displaying the signs where alcohol is sold; failure to comply can result in a $100 fine.

Although the law will not convince every pregnant woman in a bar, restaurant, or liquor store to refrain from drinking alcohol, I am convinced that it will ultimately prove beneficial in curbing FAS. For example, the words "birth defects" on the mandated signs may go far in discouraging a pregnant woman from drinking by helping her to understand the clear health risk alcohol poses to her child. The warning may also prompt a pregnant woman to realize that while she experiences the immediate effects of alcohol temporarily, her unborn child could experience the long-term effects of alcohol permanently.

In addition, the law will help to alert many more women — not just those who are pregnant — to the threat of FAS. Consequently, greater numbers of women will know — before and if they decide to become pregnant — that alcohol consumption poses a risk to unborn children. And knowing about FAS ahead of time will help to ensure that fewer are born with the disorder.

Finally, we can expect the law to increase the public's awareness about problems caused by alcohol. Most people know that alcohol consumption can inflict a variety of health problems; those who abuse alcohol are often plagued with medical problems ranging from stomach ulcers to liver damage. But few of us really consider that alcohol abuse can hurt anyone beyond the person actually lifting the glass.

Such a law will help many people to understand that alcohol abuse is dangerous to more than one person; just as a drunk driver can injure or kill an innocent bystander, alcohol abuse can hurt an unborn child. It can lead to mental and physical defects that affect them not only as children but for their entire lives. And the saddest part is that the mother could have prevented it by acting more responsibly.

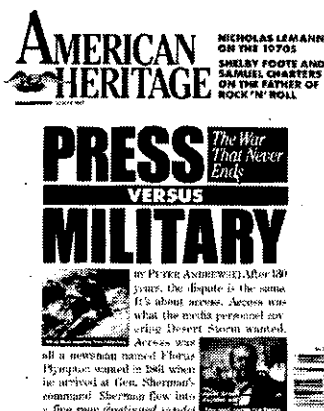

Thus, I believe the effort to increase public awareness inherent in display of warning signs in all licensed liquor establishments will prove beneficial to the health of all New Yorkers. The more information we have about the ill effects of alcohol abuse, the better off we'll all be.

I predict that this new law will achieve its FAS public-awareness goals, based on the apparent success of a similar 1985 law in New York City. A state wide survey by the State Department of Alcoholism and Alcohol Abuse revealed that New York City women were twice as aware of the risks associated with drinking during pregnancy than were women outside of the city.

Clearly, the new regulation, like its New York city antecedent, holds great potential for successfully educating more women, protecting more children, and eventually preventing incidences of FAS.

If it works as intended, then we can look forward ultimately to a future blessed with greater numbers of healthy children — a future brightened with young people who are not impaired by diseases and defects that could have been prevented by a better social policy.

Thus, I urge all adults, men and women, to consider the magnitude of this new law now — and take an important step toward ensuring a better life for our children tomorrow.

Matters of Opinion

Selkirk Fire District land purchase backed

Editor, The Spotlight:

As many residents of Bethlehem know by now, C.A.R.E., or Citizens Against Rising Expenditures, was formed in late 1990 to watch over local government spending practices, and to keep taxpayers informed as to any proposals that affect them within the community.

The Selkirk Fire District has proposed a referendum to be held Monday, Aug. 12, from 6 p.m. through 9 p.m. at the Selkirk No. 1 Firehouse in Selkirk, for the purpose of deciding if a parcel of land (formerly Ed's Variety Store) should be purchased by the Fire District for $79,000.

We urge voters of the Selkirk Fire District to cast their ballots on this proposal, as it is very important that they voice their opinions as to the relevance and necessity of this somewhat large expenditure of public funds. I wish that the Board of Fire Commissioners could have opened all three firehouses for voting.

Even though the land to be purchased lies in Selkirk, the entire fire district will be paying the bill through property taxes. It amazes me that the board sees fit to continue with its practice of making it more, rather than less, difficult for the population at large to vote on any referendum.

C.A.R.E. feels that expenditure for additional property adjacent to the firehouse in Selkirk is justified, and we support the purchase. Land is scarce, and rarely does property come up for sale next door to a firehouse. Undoubtedly, as our community grows, there will eventually be the need for additional space to house fire protection equipment. We do not want to be in a position whereby taxpayers would have to pay a premium price to obtain land to expand.

of our buses off the road for failure to meet safety standards.

Our school district's voters have twice defeated the school budget. Because of the loss of State revenue, the district is faced with having to pay more out-of-pocket for our schools and their programs. The school board, budget committee, and superintendent's office have been thorough and conscientious in their spending reductions. The fact is that it will cost us more to run our school district even with significant reductions in program and expense.

Our voters seem to have rejected the educational aspects of our budget. Instead, transportation (a convenience) has been funded, and reconsideration of the interscholastic sports budget (a non-instructional component) is pending. Prioritization of non-instructional aspects of the budget at the expense of basic educational costs is a travesty.

The editors of The Spotlight welcome letters on all matters of local interest. Writers are encouraged to keep their letters as brief as possible, and letters will be edited for taste, style, fairness and accuracy.

The interscholastic sports proposition should be defeated on Aug. 7. That sort of expenditure should follow, not precede, the funding of instructional components of the program. Our children can participate in gym and in intramural sports without any additional athletic funding. Non-school-related activities are available to our youngsters. In other words, there are all sorts of places that kids may engage in competitive sports. They learn to read and write in school.

We should be funding reading, writing, mathematics, science, social studies, and so on. Those are the essentials. When we've made good our commitment to educate our children, then we can start to allocate money for non-instructional purposes. The interscholastic sports proposition should be defeated at this time. It can be reconsidered at a time when our primary educational and instructional obligations have been met.

7 — Senior music awards and updating of music award plaques.

This summer, with the cooperation of the BC school board, the Summer Music Program became a BMA project, and added a "Meet the Instruments" program in addition to private and ensemble lessons. A total of 119 students participated in the four-week summer program.

The funding for all BMA projects is raised from our patron and advertisement donations, which raised over $4,000 last year.

This summer and fall we will again be seeking patrons to help fund our program. One may become a patron for as little as $15. Any business or individual wishing to support BMA and its projects may call 439-0016 or 439-2071 for more information.

We thank the community and the school district for its continued support of music in our schools, one of our finest assets!

Extension sets August programs

Cornell Cooperative Extension of Voorheesville has scheduled several programs this month.

Views On Dental Health

Dr. Virginia Plaisted, D.D.S.

PROTECTING PRIMARY TEETH

By the time your child is five or six, all of his primary teeth will have formed. Then the process begins of acquiring the permanent teeth that can last a lifetime with good dental care.

As the primary teeth gradually loosen and fall out, they are soon replaced with permanent teeth. But what about a primary molar tooth that is lost well ahead of its time, long before the permanent tooth is ready to replace it? This can be caused by accident or disease or decay.

If that space remains vacant for a long time, the teeth on either side of it will try to fill the space. This will throw them out of line and may cause the permanent teeth to come in crooked.

To protect your child's permanent teeth, any primary molar tooth lost ahead of time should be replaced by a space maintainer until the permanent tooth is ready to erupt. If this should happen to your child, see your dentist for treatment.

Prepared as a public service to promote better dental health. From the offices of:

RCS board nixes retirement plan

By Regina Bulman

Teachers and other staff in the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Central School District will not be given the choice of early retirement — an option handed down from the state to school districts early this summer.

During executive sessions at its last meeting, the RCS Board of Education decided not to adopt a measure that would allow certain employees to retire early and collect benefits.

According to RCS Superintendent William Schwartz, the board decided the early retirement proposal would not be cost-effective for the district.

Before recessing for the summer, state legislators adopted a measure that would give school districts across the state the option of offering an early retirement measure for employees who have been in the system for 30 years or who are at least 55 years of age. Under the plan, the employee could receive up to three years of retirement credit and collect approximate six percent more in retirement benefits.

An RCS teacher and representative of the teacher's association appealed to the board at its last meeting to approve the incentive, saying teachers who have worked 30 years and devoted their career to RCS kids should be given the choice of early retirement benefits.

But according to Schwartz, the decision to take no action on the proposal was both economic and personal.

"As watchdogs of the taxpayers, the board could not in good conscience approve this measure," said Schwartz. "We also did not want to encourage the high quality, long-time employees to leave the district. Their wisdom is worth more than money."

Schwartz estimates not more than a dozen RCS staff members would have been eligible for the program.

Bethlehem Recycling Corner

By Sharon Fisher, town recycling coordinator

Plastic bags are leakproof, airtight, durable, moldable, lightweight, retain and resist heat and cold and can be transparent. But plastic is manufactured using petroleum, a non-renewable resource, and is not degradable or biodegradable!

Left to the elements, plastic may break up into small pieces but it will never become a part of the soil the way paper will. Some plastic bags are printed with ink containing cadmium, a toxic heavy metal. Bread wrappers should never be turned inside out because some are printed with ink containing lead, another toxic element.

Shopping bags make up a very large portion of the waste stream. Although new habits take time to learn, carrying reusable totes will prevent bag accumulation in the home.

Clean, small plastic bags can be used for sandwiches, but wax paper or reusable containers are better alternatives. Larger bags could line waste baskets, but paper bags or no bag could be substituted.

If the department store, drug store and grocery store plastic bags accumulate, recycle them in the green bins located in the front of the Grand Union. The bags must be clean and dry.

Plastic bags for garbage and lawn refuse are not yet recyclable.

A money-saving tip for those who use the Rupert Road Transfer Station is to empty trash from bags onto the conveyor belt. This can be easily accomplished if the waste is in a separate bag from the "dry" trash. The 30-gallon plastic bag can then be used again for the next visit to Rupert Road.

Some reminders: yard waste will not be accepted if it is in a plastic bag, newspapers should be in brown paper bags only, and non-recyclables should be placed curbside in plastic bags. A bin is provided by haulers for recyclables so they can be contained loose.

All performances are free and open to the public. Bring a lawn chair or blanket. If it rains, the show will be held indoors as scheduled.

Orchard Park group lobbies state for environmental bill

By Debi Boucher

New Scotland's Orchard Park Neighborhood Association is seeing some of the fruits of its political activism, with the state Legislature's passage of a bill designed to bring state agencies into strict compliance with environmental laws.

The group has been working with the bill's co-sponsors, Assemblyman Maurice Hinchey (D-Saugerties) and Assemblyman Richard Brodsky (D-Westchester), since last fall, according to association President Joseph Cotazino. Last week it solicited support from the New Scotland Town Board and the Village of Voorheesville Board of Trustees, asking them to urge Gov. Mario Cuomo to sign the bill.

The Assembly version, A.432-A, was unanimously passed June 24, according to a June 25 letter from Brodsky to the Orchard Park Neighborhood Association. The Senate version, S.1451-A, was unanimously passed June 18, the letter noted.

Cuomo received the bill July 15 and had until Thursday, July 26 to sign it, according to Louise Hayes, research associate for the Oversight, Analysis and Investigation Committee. But the bill was recalled Thursday by its Senate sponsor, Sen. John B. Daly, after Cuomo's counsel office notified sponsors of objections by state agencies, Hayes said.

"We're willing to listen to what those objections are," said Hayes, explaining that if the committee decides to resubmit the bill unaltered, Cuomo will have another 10 days to sign it, but if it is amended, it will have to be revoted in the assembly and senate. She said Monday the committee had not yet decided whether to resubmit the bill or revise it.

"We think this is a good piece of legislation," said Cotazino.

The group's involvement stemmed from the alleged sodium contamination from the Route 155 state Department of Transportation (DOT) highway maintenance facility nearly two years ago of the aquifer from which wells in the newer section of the Orchard Park subdivision draw their water.

Although DOT has admitted contaminating the lower aquifer, affecting six homes on Route 155 which are not part of Orchard Park, it has denied causing salt contamination of the lower aquifer, Cotazino said.

But he contends that although a study done on the Orchard Park area wells by the state Department of Environmental Conservation "did not conclusively prove" that the lower aquifer was contaminated by DOT salt, it did not prove DOT innocent, either. "This is a perfect example of a state agency getting away with murder," he said.

The neighborhood association is considering legal action against DOT, he said, and may team up with the six Route 155 homeowners to do so.

Those six homeowners filed amended claims in April after refusing to sign payment vouchers from DOT, Cotazino said. The homeowners' original claims asked the state to pay for reverse osmosis systems which would have provided only two gallons of drinking water per day, according to Cotazino, plus the cost of bottled water for one house. In response, he said, DOT offered $998 to five of the six homeowners and $1,700 to the homeowner who filed for bottled water as well.

The Orchard Park case is included in the resulting report, "Failed Promises: New York State Agencies' Environmental Record," released in March.

The new legislation strengthens a 1988 bill that required state

The neighborhood association has gotten involved in state politics in order to help "prevent another Orchard Park, or another Route 155, from happening," according to President Joseph Cotazino.

But the residents balked at signing documents exonerating the state from further responsibility, he said, and filed amended claims asking for the $5,000 maximum that can be awarded under the claims process. In May, DOT withdrew its payment offer, meaning the homeowners will have to take the agency to court with their claims, which they intend to do, Cotazino said. "These people are very determined," he said, "and so is Orchard Park."

Cotazino said the Orchard Park group had been cooperating with Brodsky and Hinchey, co-chairmen of both the Environmental Conservation and Oversight, Analysis & Investigation committees, since learning last fall of an inquiry launched by the two lawmakers on state agency abuses of environmental laws.

agencies to perform environmental audits. The most significant additions on the new legislation are a requirement for the agencies to develop plans for remedying their environmental violations and provisions for them to provide information to help lawmakers determine funding priorities, according to Hayes.

Cotazino said the 1988 bill "was not adequate," since it limited EnCon's policing authority over other agencies.

The new bill "is aimed at correcting many of the problems we found" in the investigation leading to the "Failed Promises" report, Brodsky said in a letter to Cuomo asking him to sign the bill.

According to the June 28 letter, the bill addresses three major problems identified in the study: agencies not acting to remedy their environmental violations, funding for remedial projects not ensuring priority projects are acted upon first, and the lack of information available to lawmakers and the public for oversight and enforcement.

According to Cotazino, DOT has not been receptive to Orchard Park's complaints. "You don't have the amount of salt that we do in Orchard Park from natural sources," he said. "The sodium contamination is unbelievable, and it's just getting worse, it's not getting better."

The new bill should make state agencies more accountable, he said, and help make up for what he sees as inaction on the part of some local lawmakers. "I just think that our legislative leaders are not doing enough to force the issue."

The neighborhood association has become activist in its policies, Cotazino said. "The Orchard Park Neighborhood Association's goal has always been to get water to the Town of New Scotland," he said, "but we've also taken the stance that if there is anything we can do to address abuses in other parts of the state," it would be worth taking action "to prevent another Orchard Park, or another Route 155, from happening."

"We would like to see, based on the survey, which are in and which are out," he said in reference to the sites, which are being considered for a landfill for the county. Pulice said CLAWS had been assured "we could see" the list of landowners.

Pulice said that if CLAWS can determine those landowners who did not allow access to their property, it will help to eliminate sites. Recently three sites in Guilderland were removed from the list of potential areas for a county landfill, but Pulice said those sites were

Historical group offers volunteer training

A volunteer education guild is currently being formed by the Rensselaer County Historical Society to serve a growing school-age audience. The guild will begin training in September to be ready for the museum's full slate of school programming in October.

Several programs for volunteers are currently being offered at the Rensselaer County Historical Society, located on Second Street in Troy. Teaching opportunities include leading students on architectural scavenger hunts, giving tours of the Hart-Cluett Mansion, or donning reproductions of 1855-era costumes and portraying members of the Hart household, including servants and family members.

never "seriously in contention," and that the decision to remove them was political.

Bethlehem Supervisor Ken Ringler agrees the removal of Guilderland sites was probably political in nature. "I never thought politics would enter into it, but I saw what went on with the Democratic County Legislature in Guilderland. It certainly makes me wonder," he said. "It seems totally improper Mayor Whalen (Mayor Thomas Whalen) would notify the county legislators of this decision without even contacting the supervisor (Kevin Moss)."

Nealon said Guilderland sites were dropped off the list because of negative information supplied by Watervliet and the state.

Paul S. Murphy, Watervliet general manager, said the city had written a letter to ANSWERS objecting to one Guilderland site because it was adjacent to a primary stream that "feeds our reservoir," which is located in Guilderland.

B-1 through B-9 are the potential county landfill sites in Bethlehem identified in the Albany ANSWERS Wasteshed Report.

Definitely worth the trip!

teaching."

The move to Bethlehem came in 1951, when Restifo heard that positions had opened up in his old district. "I had an awe of the system," he related. "I really wanted to teach here, because I had always loved Delmar and I had fond memories of excellent teachers and wonderful times."

But Bethlehem almost didn't get Restifo. "After that first year, I was a little insecure," he said, "and I wondered what I could possibly offer to this outstanding district. But there was a part of me that really wanted to work here."

Restifo said he called then Superintendent Hamilton Bookhout, who had approached Restifo in his high school days about tutoring some of his classmates, to apply for a position at Clarksville Elementary.

"He asked me, 'Do you want the job?' and I said that I was interested in the position and he asked me again if I wanted the job and when I said yes he told me it was mine. He was a little unorthodox, but he got the job done."

After 14 years at Clarksville teaching sixth grade and another four teaching fifth grade, Restifo moved on to the middle school. There he settled in for a year-long stint as a sixth-grade math and science teacher, with his final assignment, teaching sixth-grade math, lasting 21 years.

"Good teachers are a necessary element in any good school district," Restifo said. "Teachers have always been important in Bethlehem and the staff in the schools has always been excellent."

Where the excellence in teachers hasn't changed over the years, according to Restifo, the students that he has encountered over the years have.

"It was a different world when I was in school and first started teaching," he said. "It was narrower. Times were more secure and everyone knew everybody else. Students today move every three years, they know about events all around the globe and they are just forced to grow up faster."

"The students today see conflicting values presented at home, in school and in the media, and the environment has changed," he added. "It is tougher today for kids to grow socially, emotionally and spiritually. They are still good kids, but their future is filled with uncertainties and that can be frightening. But where the world was narrower, these kids have a better grasp of social problems and other peoples, and that is definitely better."

Staying in contact with the students he looks out for shouldn't be too hard, as Restifo as always been active as a religious education teacher and youth group coordinator at Church of St. Thomas the Apostle and he said he will substitute over the course of the year.

When asked if the fact that he wouldn't be returning with the students in September had hit him yet, Restifo said that "It will, because retirement is a process. It's not so bad now, but when the fall comes, it will drive home the fact that I won't be there."

Now that he will have some extra time on his hands, Restifo said that he would like to start spending some more time with his seven children and nine grandchildren. He would also like to develop a mentor program coupling senior citizens and school age children, possibly through the district.

"We need a social unity, because each group has a great deal to offer to the other," he said. "Parents, the schools and the students need to work together."

One goal Restifo said he has for his retirement is to serve on the district's board of education at some point. "To serve on the board is one way to thank the community for the fine education I received and the wonderful 40 years I've had as a teacher."

"It's been a good life," Restifo said, "The Bethlehem community has provided a wonderful life and a place to live for my family and me. I couldn't ask for anything more."

Firms recall child safety seats

Two child safety seat manufacturers are recalling their child safety seats because they have failed to meet the requirements prescribed by the national Highway Traffic Safety Administration's Federal Safety Standard. Owners of any of these seats must contact the manufacturer to receive replacement parts.

Cosco Auto Trac and Cosco Soft Shield (manufactured from Oct. 30, 1989 to June 30, 1990) exceed the 32-inch head excursion limit. As a result, there is an increased risk of injury to a child in a sudden stop or accident. Nine thousand, five hundred and nineteen of these seats have been sold.

Consumers who own one of the 9,519 affected seats that have been sold should contact Cosco at 1-800-544-1108 and the firm will furnish a repair kit consisting of a harness retainer with installation and use instructions. In the meantime, the affected seats should be used until they can be retrofitted.

Evenflo is recalling 14,387 Ultara II child safety seats manufactured between Jan. 15, 1990 and June 16, 1990. Tests conducted by NHTSA indicated that the Ultara II seat allows a child's head to move too far forward in a crash when the seat is used in a front-facing position. Evenflo will provide owners with a new shell and instructions on attaching it to the existing front T-shield. Owners can contact the manufacturer by calling 1-800-837-8926, or by writing to Evenflo, 1801 Commerce Drive, Piqua, Ohio 45356.

For information, call 1-718-746-6003.

CLAWS to meet Thursday

The GROUP will update the membership on the progress of the current drive to eliminate

ANSWERS from the Bethlehem Coeymans waste management formula and issue its comprehensive report refuting ANSWERS' claims as to the viability of their proposed landfill sites.

CLAWS continues to seek the support and assistance from individuals and local groups in their effort to achieve locally determined waste management.

social security and workers compensation; insurance coverage; emergency repairs of school property; maintenance of grounds and facilities; debt service payments for principal and interest; in-service training and travel; and telephone expenses, he said.

The contingency budget, almost two percent less than the 1990-91 budget, will be adjusted to include voter-approved expenditures for student transportation and expenditures for athletics, if approved at today's (Wednesday's) proposition vote, said Anthony Marturano, school business administrator. The athletics vote runs today from 2 to 9:30 p.m. in the high school foyer.

The $74,800 transportation proposition was approved in mid-July and carries a 1.27 percent tax rate increase, he said. It provides for transportation for students in kindergarten through grade eight who live less than two miles from the school and students in grades nine through 12 who live less than three miles from the school. It also allows for the appropriation of funds for field trips at a level that is 40 percent of that provided during the 1990-91 school year.

The $69,040 interscholastic athletic program proposition, if approved, would add 1.18 percent to the tax rate increase, Marturano said. If accepted, he said it will provide for the continuation of participation in interscholastic athletics, as well as league, sectional and state competitions. It would also provide funds for fees, equipment, supplies, materials, officials and transportation. If the proposition is not approved by voters, the district will either have no athletic program, or sports will be funded through private donations, he said. Voters rejected the proposition 637-561 in mid-July.

Practice for fall sports usually begins at the high school in mid-August, Marturano said. "I hope for the students it (the athletics proposition) passes."

Preliminary numbers on the total tax rate increase, including the two propositions, would be about 11 percent, he said. "We figure it may be less."

Voters vetoed four other propositions mid-July. They included:

- Purchase of a 60-passenger school bus and a car, an expenditure of $56,000 and a .2 percent tax rate increase.

- Purchase of a 60-passenger school bus at a cost of $45,400 with a .78 percent tax rate.

Marturano said the district will "make do" with the buses it has unless the Department of Transportation pulls a bus off the road. "We're not optimistic because two buses are in poor condition," he said.

- Purchase of library books at a cost of $10,300 with a .18 percent tax rate.

- Purchase of instructional equipment at a cost of $40,000 with a tax rate impact of .68 percent.

McCartney said these items are not included in the contingency budget, as well as school lunch, breakfast and milk programs and the use of school buildings by outside groups. "There will be no school lunch and breakfast program if it goes into the red," he said.

Lucinda Wright, a 50-year veteran teacher of the Voorheesville Elementary School who retired in June, donated her pension check to the district for the purchase of library books for the elementary school, McCartney said.

The board authorized the use of school facilities to community organizations that draw the majority of their membership from the population of the school district. Permits will be issued by the superintendent if the organization seeking the permit provides written proof of insurance protecting the district against any liability resulting from use of school facilities for no less than $1 million per accident, he said. "I know this is going to sound strange, but we took the charge per square foot per hour of operation," he said. An elementary school classroom costs 45 cents per hour while a high school classroom is 50 cents. Athletic field costs vary depending on the sport. If fields need to be prepped and cleaned up, an extra charge will be applied, he said.

District voters rejected the originally proposed $10.4 million budget, which carried a 14 percent tax rate increase, on June 12 by a vote of 770-523, as well as a $56,000 bus proposition by a 632 to 606 vote.

Local student part of state leadership delegation

Michelle Boehlke, a junior at Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk High School, and her adviser, Alice Lammly, recently returned from Future Homemakers of America's (FHA/HERO) 1991 National Leadership Meeting at the Washington Hilton and Towers.

Boehlke and more than 3,100 student members and advisers met to examine the issues and challenges facing teenagers today.

As the New York State delegation's representative to FHA's Legislative Team, Boehlke took part in a special legislative progress workshop. Techniques learned at the hands-on session trained her to fulfill her role as state communicator to national and state legislators.

Her responsibilities included training members of the New York State delegation in ways to spread the news about state and local project activities to elected officials. A special highlight of the meeting was her visit to Capitol Hill and her meetings with chief education aides of Sen. Al D'Amato and Sen. Patrick Moynihan. As the Legislative Team member from New York state, Boehlke led the state delegation at these meetings.

The thrust of the meeting was to seek support for the Carl D. Perkins Vocational Education and Applied Technology Act, specifically, Title III, Part B, which covers consumer homemaking, Home Economics Education and FHA Youth Leadership activities are particularly supported through these funds.

Through its programs, the FHA/HERO organization helps today's youth prepare for multiple roles as wage earners, community leaders and caring family members. Participation in national projects and chapter activities helps members develop "skills for life" — life planning, goal setting, problem solving, decision making and interpersonal communication — necessary both in the home and work place.

THE YOUTH NETWORK

Video library offers expanded selection

Our video lending library has grown to over 60 titles. Many are ideal for family viewing and discussion, while others are appropriate for young people of certain ages or for adults/parents.

An example of a video for elementary-aged children is our "Sooper Puppy" series, which uses animal puppets to illustrate topics such as alcohol use, drug use, and self-esteem issues. Children can view these alone, but will gain much more from them if viewed with a parent and discussed afterward.

"Time to Think" is a video designed for older elementary/early middle school students, and again is best viewed along with a parent as a discussion starter. The focus of this video is on young people making informed decisions about alcohol and drugs before they are ever in a situation where they are offered or are tempted to try them.

"Why Is It Always Me?" is a video which teaches problem-solving skills and would be ideal for a child who always seems to be the one in trouble. "Criss Cross" is designed for high school students and their parents to watch together. Two experts in the field of chemical dependency role-play the stages a young user of alcohol/drugs can go through, from experimentation on.

We also have many videos designed mostly for parents, which we will highlight in next week's column.

The scene: honky-tonk swing shouting its familiar beat; antique cars buffed for show; brilliant fireworks painting the sky. From the shrill squeals of racing pigs to the elegance of aerial acts, the 1991 Altamont Fair, Aug. 12 through 18, will offer features to tempt the tastes of all fair-goers.

On Monday, Aug. 12, the gates to the fairgrounds in Altamont will open to reveal the treasures of the annual family event. For a single admission price, visitors can stay all day and evening. Enjoy some of the fine eating that is offered, including hot dogs and pancakes, or bring a lunch to eat in the picnic grove.

While at the Altamont Fair there are many programs to take in, and everything is free except for food, rides, games of chance or concession wares.

The Altamont Fair Parade celebrating opening day will step off at 7 p.m. on Monday, Aug. 12. It will form on the track, move through the village, past the park and back in the fairgrounds through the Grand Street gate and end in front of the grandstand.

In previous years, parades had consisted of horses, cows, sheep and other animals parading around the track at a slow pace. This was not successful due to lack of variety. Bands were also missing from the procession. According to Fred Hart, publicity director of the Altamont Fair, "After an hour of slow-moving animals walking in a circle, the audience had not seen anything different." Rained out last year, the parade now consists of the Crescent Temple String Band on a float, fife and drum corps, bagpipe bands and antique cars.

Never before appearing in the Capital District, the Crescent Temple String Band, under the direction of Noble Henry Simon, will provide evening entertainment on Monday, Aug. 12, immediately following the opening ceremonies, at 8 p.m. They will play marching and concert songs. Two or three strutters, costumed in elaborate plumes and feathers, will perform with the band. "They are a true Mummies band," Hart said. The word Mummies comes from the Trenton, N.J. area, and relates to the Philadelphia Big Band style music. While the Crescent Band, "does not originate from Philadelphia," its big band renditions show the appropriateness of the Mummies name.

If country-swing music is more your style, Hank Thompson will play at the fair on Wednesday, Aug. 14, in an afternoon and evening show.

Instead of working for peanuts, one fair act this year races for cookies! The Robinson's Racing Pigs are back. Located in the infield, the swines will sprint Tuesday, Aug. 13, through Sunday, Aug. 18, at 11:30 a.m. and 1:30, 3:30, 5:30 and 7:30 p.m. Don't miss the increasingly popular pigs.

Tigers and lions and ... leopards? The Royal Hanneford three-ring circus is returning with a new show. At the Altamont Fair's free grandstand, they will give two shows per day Tuesday through Sunday. Senor Rai, ringmaster, will introduce acts such as the Flying Candors, The Great Bruno and his cats and a circus seal act.

This year a wedding celebration for Cranberry the Clown and the Snow-a-Ranger will take place on Friday, Aug. 16, at 7 p.m. Cranberry is a permanent attraction at the fair and serves as a walk-around, entertaining children on peak attendance days. Snow-a-Ranger is a tall masked man who goes to northern ski runs and arranges for snow. He, with his snow dancers, put on a snow dance that is said to bring snow every time!

The first known Armed Forces Day scheduled by a fair in New York state will be at the Altamont Fair Sunday, Aug. 18, the last day of the '91 fair. A celebration will take place with the dedication of the new flag pole and veterans' memorial stone and plaque at 12:30 p.m., and a patriotic program by the Serendipity Singers with folk, pop, country and patriotic music from the '40s to the '90s.

At 7:45 p.m. the Serendipity Singers will be back on stage and the Altamont Fair will come to a close with a fireworks show at 8:30 p.m.

Along with the various shows and displays, the fair will have 15 museums, most of which will have a special theme this year. The Farm House Museum will commemorate the 1940s, while the Hayes House Victorian Museum will be set up like a 1910 house with stained glass windows and hand polished oak woodwork. Tours are conducted from opening to closing.

The fair will feature one of the largest Antique Auto Shows and Museums in

No slim pickins on Blossom farm

By Kathleen Shapiro

Just outside the small town of Greenville, located 40 minutes south of Albany, there lies a patch of farmland most flower lovers have visited only in their dreams.

The place is called, appropriately, Blossom Farm — 12 acres of fresh flowers, both cultivated, and wild, just waiting to be picked.

"Many people have flowers of their own growing at home but hate to cut them because they're so beautiful," explained Alain Bouillon, the farm's owner and chief horticulturist.

Not to worry, though. For a modest price, Bouillon will provide flower enthusiasts with a pair of scissors, a bucket, and an invitation to roam the fields and collect as many of his blooms as they can carry.

"We tell people to look around good, and choose what they want," he said. "Some fill their buckets more than others. It depends on their taste."

Lavender, delphiniums, bachelor buttons, daisies—you name it, and it's probably growing at Blossom Farm. Depending on their level of zeal, customers can opt for a 4-quart bucket priced at $8.69, or a 10-quart bucket for $14.99.

"Anyone who buys flowers knows our prices are more than fair," said Bouillon. "You can really put a lot of flowers in those buckets."

Since its grand opening last month, the farm has attracted a mixture of clientele, he said.

"We've had both elderly and young people who like flowers stop in, and a lot of people from the city who want to bring something back," he said. The gardens have also become popular with local restaurants, and families planning summer parties and weddings.

Many customers seem to enjoy visiting the farm purely for its relaxing atmos-

SPOTLIGHT

By Martin P. Kelly

Shakespeare still popular as summer productions

More than 375 years after his death, Shakespeare is still among the most produced playwrights in the country during the summer. The Capital Region is no exception.

In Albany's Washington Park, the parade ground is the outdoor setting for two of the Bard's plays. The Albany Shakespeare Company offers Julius Caesar Thursdays, Saturdays and Tuesdays until the season closes Aug. 18.

It alternates with All's Well That Ends Well, performed on Sundays and Wednesdays. Curtain is at 8 p.m. and the admission is free.

Martin P. Kelly

Shakespeare's best known comedy, Twelfth Night is being offered by Shakespeare & Company at Lenox, Mass. through Aug. 25. This marks the 14th season of open air Shakespearean plays on the hill behind Edith Wharton's former estate.

Performances are each night (except Monday) at 8 p.m. For further info call (413) 637-3353.

Damon Runyon's Guys & Dolls perfect backdrop for Saratoga racing season

Almost 40 years old, the musical Guys & Dolls preserves the Roaring Twenties of Damon Runyon's sportswriting days. His Broadway bookies and "babes" have gained immortality thanks to Frank Loesser's music which captured the rhythm and tone of Runyon's quirky writing style.

The musical is being revived tomorrow (Thursday) through Aug. 25 in a production at the Theatre Barn in New Lebanon.

The fifth production of the season at the Columbia County theater, Guys and Dolls features a cast of New York performers and popular local actors. For further information, call 794-8989.

Television duo end brief summer tour at Starlite Theatre Sunday, Aug. 11

He's a kind of Don Rickles with an altar boy's face and she's a cheery partner who thinks motherhood's the greatest. Together they form the Live With Regis & Kathie Lee show that in a few short years has gained top spot in their time slot in most of the 66 major markets the show plays five days a week. It plays in the area at 9 a.m. on WNYT (Channel 13).

While broadcasting live five days a week from New York, Regis Philbin and Kathie Lee Gifford also find time to work the resort and summer theater circuit on a limited scale. They conclude a brief tour of New England theaters Sunday (Aug. 11) at the Starlite Theater in Latham with singing and snappy patter fans of their show find familiar.

Philbin and Gifford (she's married to Frank Gifford, the former grid Giants' star and ABC "Game of the Week" broadcaster) are an unlikely team which clicks because of their dissimilar personalities.

A veteran New Yorker who gained his first toehold in television on the West Coast, Philbin uses the put-down humor with an intensity that counters Gifford's sunny outlook on life. He complains about life's petty annoyances while she sees the silver lining in every cloud.

Together, they do a morning show that's loosely structured to include interviews with visiting movie stars, talks with chefs and chats with personalities promoting charities, products and philosophies.

For info on Sunday's appearance call 783-9300.

Tom Stoppard's love of wit and words apparent in Berkshire's Real Thing

Fans of mental exercising during the summer can test the wit and wisdom of Englishman Tom Stoppard in his play Real Thing at the Berkshire Theatre Festival in Stockbridge, Mass. through Saturday.

Stoppard who celebrates the cerebral in his plays, uses the play-within-a-play device to consider life, love and infidelity as his onstage playwright carries on a love affair with an actress who works in his play alongside his own wife. Keeping close attention to the dialogue and the program is essential but the payoff can be delightfully rewarding if you do.

the Northeast. In addition to the 14 cars the fair owns, the Mohawk Antique Auto Club furnishes many old cars which are in running condition each year.

New to the Altamont Fair this year will be a Sportsmen's Corner sponsored by the Turnpike Rod and Gun Club. A large wildlife display will feature a two-year old Siberian tiger, Sasha, weighing 450 lbs.

There are many ways to get in without paying admission this year. Monday is free to all until 5 p.m. courtesy of The Sunday Gazette. Tuesday and Friday are The Times Union sponsored Young America Days. Children kindergarten through ninth grade are free all day.

Wednesday, all grangers will be admitted free. Also, if you have a Bilinski product coupon from a grocery store, there will be a $1 discount off the admission price.

phere, said Bouillon.

The farm is open Monday through Saturday from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m., but visitors should call ahead to make sure the fields are in good condition and there are plenty of blooms, said Bouillon.

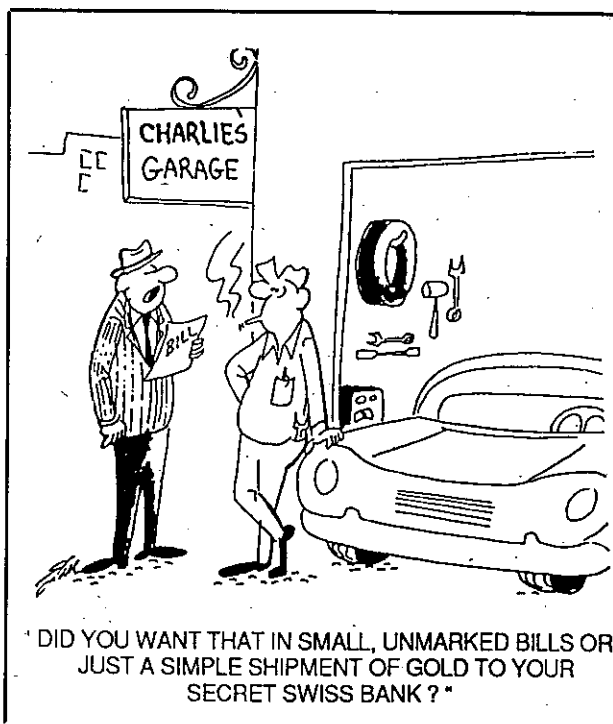

"The only reason we close is if it's too wet, or if the fields have been overpicked," he said.

Visitors should also come prepared with sturdy walking shoes, since the landscape is filled with rocks and dirt that may be tough on the feet.

The farm will remain open until the fields are empty, or through late September, he said.

For information and directions, call Blossom Farm at 966-5722.
