Burn plant vote to give direction to waste plan

By Susan Wheeler

On June 18, Bethlehem residents will decide whether the town's future solid waste management plan will include an incinerator on Cabbage Island.

A townwide special referendum, authorized under Town Law Section 81, will be held Thursday, June 18, from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at all of the town's 27 polling places. The intent of the referendum is to give the town a binding direction, or a mission, in its solid waste management plan, according to Assistant Town Attorney Michael Smith.

Town board members approved the special election on the recommendation of the Solid Waste Task Force.

The task force, under the guidance of Chairman Bruce Secor, Bethlehem's commissioner of public works, suggested the board set the referendum to determine if residents support the construction of a privately constructed, owned and operated regional waste-to-energy facility on Cabbage Island, located in Bethlehem at the Port of Albany.

According to Smith, a "no" vote means the town will not pursue incineration as part of its solid waste management plan.

A "yes" vote authorizes the town to site an incinerator on Cabbage Island as part of its plan, and Bethlehem would have to consider incineration as part of its solid waste management plan.

The referendum language was refined to include Cabbage Island as the specific site for the incinerator. "It was Mr. Secor's and the Solid Waste Task Force's feeling that Cabbage Island is the most appropriate, and probably the only appropriate place, in town to construct an incinerator," Smith said.

Some residents expressed concerns that a "yes" vote means the town must site

Incineration forum Thursday

By Susan Graves

The Spotlight is sponsoring a forum on incineration on Thursday, June 4, from 7:30 to 9:30 p.m. at Bethlehem Central High School auditorium.

Dick Ahlstrom, publisher of The Spotlight, will be the program moderator. "This is an opportunity to hear both sides for and against incineration. It's one of the most critical issues facing the town in this decade, and in order to vote knowledgeably, everyone should become as informed as possible," said Ahlstrom.

Over the past several weeks, the paper has given extensive coverage to the solid waste crisis and has printed more than 24 letters from readers on the issue.

Bruce Secor, head of the town's Solid Waste Task Force, will open the program on Thursday with a brief introduction. Secor's remarks will be followed by an overview of the state Solid Waste Management Plan by Jeff Schmitt, section supervisor from the Bureau of Resource Recovery of the department of Environmental Conservation.

A debate on the Energy Answers proposal will follow. (See related story Page 1). Patrick Mahoney, president of the Energy Answers Corporation will speak for the proposal and Betsy Lyons, spokesperson of Bethlehem Work on Waste, will speak against it. Lyons and Mahoney each have 20 minutes to presents their views.

Panel participants will have 15 minutes for questions and responses, and the audience will have 45 minutes to question the panelists.

There will be a special referendum on a proposition to allow incineration in Bethlehem on Thursday, June 18, from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the 27 regular district polling places.

No absentee or military ballots will be allowed.

The proposition reads:

"Shall the Town of Bethlehem, as part of its waste management plan, provide for the disposition of garbage, rubbish and other solid waste matter collected or generated within the town by the disposition of such solid waste at a regional waste-to-energy incinerator plant to be privately constructed, owned and operated within the town of Bethlehem on Cabbage Island."

Homestead meeting tonight

Town chamber lobbies for 'no' from board

By Michael DeMasi

Hoping for a large turnout by supporters, representatives of the Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce and Albany County Farm Bureau plan to lobby against the Homestead Act tonight at the school board's public hearing.

Tom McCarroll, chairman of the governmental affairs committee for the chamber, said he will present a letter to the seven members of the board, urging them to vote "No" on homestead.

"I want to make sure they're very clear on the position of the business community."

The chamber hopes to drive this point home by convincing as many of its nearly 500 members as possible to attend the meeting.

"We put out the call," he said. If the turnout is significant, he added, "It's going to be overwhelming to them."

The Homestead Act, which has already been adopted by the town, is designed to

Board waits for input before making decision

By Michael DeMasi

Ironically, the only Bethlehem Central school board member to say he is firmly opposed to the Homestead Act won't be able to vote on the measure when the board convenes next week.

Dennis Stevens, who recently won a three-year term on the board, won't officially assume his seat until July 1 and therefore cannot vote on the act when the board casts its ballots on June 10.

"I don't see my inability to vote on homestead as a major factor," said Stevens. "The board will take their time and look at the issue and vote accordingly."

Stevens' unique position came about as a result of state Education Law. According to school board attorney Roger Fritts, because Stevens was appointed by the board in August 1991 to fill the seat vacated by Sheila Fuller, Stevens could only serve until May 6, the day school board elections were held.

On July 1, Stevens will assume the seat

Elm Avenue Park pool to open

The Elm Avenue Park pool complex will open on Saturday, June 13, and will remain open daily through Labor Day. Non-residents will also be allowed to swim if accompanied by a resident. Hours are 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. on weekdays, and 10 a.m. to 8 p.m. on weekends and holidays.

Pool I.D. cards are required for all residents ages seven and up.

Cards may be obtained or validated at the town Parks and Recreation office from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m., Monday through Friday, or Saturdays from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m. until July 25.

To avoid a wait once the pool is open, obtain or validate your card early. Proof of residency is required to swim at the pool.

New library video shows SEMASS

Energy Answers Corporation of Albany recently donated a video and a collection of articles on solid waste management to the Bethlehem Public Library.

Energy Answers is the company whose proposed solid waste management plan for the town of Bethlehem includes a regional waste-to-energy facility.

The 15-minute video describes the company's SEMASS Resource Recovery Facility in Rochester, Mass. The articles, which are in the library's vertical file, focus on resource recovery and solid waste management.

In addition, EAC has scheduled a free tour of its SEMASS facility for Tuesday, June 16. Buses will leave the Delaware Avenue park and ride lot, across from Delaware Plaza, at 8:30 a.m. They will return at approximately 5:30 p.m. Lunch will be served at SEMASS.

Members of EAC's Albany staff will be on the bus to answer questions about the company's proposal and technology.

The SEMASS facility serves communities throughout southeastern Massachusetts and on Cape Cod. The 18,000-ton-per-day resource recovery facility uses the technology proposed for Bethlehem's Cabbage Island.

If residents are unable to tour the facility in Rochester or view the library materials, they may call EAC to borrow a copy of the video.

For tour registration and information, call 434-1227.

Saint Rose slates activities for alumni

Town issues reminder on sprinkler rules

Town Public Works Commissioner Bruce Secor has issued his "yearly reminder" that Bethlehem has a municipal water system and not an irrigation system.

"Each year, conservation measures are put in place to both conserve water and also to spread the hydraulic load on our water system to 'off peak hours'," he said in a recent letter to the town board.

Town water restrictions prohibit lawn sprinkling between the hours of 10 a.m. and 8 p.m., Secor said. The restrictions are in place year-round.

The justification for the policy is twofold, he said.

"It makes little sense to pour water on a lawn at high noon and see it evaporate and secondly, to help balance hydraulic demands on our water system," he said. "It is important to have periods during the day when we can refill tanks and even out water flows."

By prohibiting lawn sprinkling until after 8 p.m., it allows sprinkling to occur after the evening peak hours.

Grievance board faced with 1,200 complaints

By Susan Wheeler

More than a quarter of all Bethlehem property owners who filed a grievance form have requested a hearing with the board of assessment review.

According to Assessor Brian Lastra, the board, which has seen about 30 land owners a day, has set about 300 hearings.

Lastra

The hearings, being held in Town Hall from 9 a.m. to noon, are set to run through Friday.

The total number of land owners who filed a grievance form reached about 1,100, Lastra said, and some of the owners filed forms on more than one parcel. Of the town's 11,300 properties, the assessments for 1,200 have been called into question through grievance proceedings.

Forms were due at the assessor's office Monday, June 1.

Though the number of grievances received is about what the assessor's office anticipated, Lastra said he is never happy if more than one parcel is grieved.

Most of the grievances filed were for residential properties, while few farm assessments were questioned, Lastra said.

The board of assessment review will mail decisions to property owners at the end of June.

If property owners of one, two or three-family homes or condominiums are dissatisfied with the review results, they can take further action. The Small Claims Assessment Review is for those who have filed a written complaint about their property assessment and are not requesting a reduction greater than the amount sought in the written complaint.

Small Claims Assessment Review petitions are available at the Albany County Clerk's office and cost $25. They must be filed by July 31, no later than 30 days after the town's revised tax rolls are due, set for July 1.

Farmers' markets boost homegrown economy

By Susan Graves

This summer you can just grow away — or let the members of the Capital District Farmers' Market Association do the walking, weeding, bending and tending of your favorite garden goodies.

Norma Walley, an association member since its inception about 10 years ago, said all members are required to produce all that they sell. "We make it, bake it or grow it," she said.

The founder of the association, Annette VanAuken, a flower grower, is a strong advocate of regulating farmers' markets. "I think it's very unfair to consumers," to sell food at farmers' markets that has been bought at retail of wholesale houses.

Right now, most markets are unregulated and "basically someone could hang out a shingle" and set up shop, she said.

This year, association members are offering their wares at the First United Methodist Church parking lot on Kenwood Avenue in Delmar on Tuesdays from 3 to 5

Secor takes talents beyond town

Public works chief chosen national APWA president

By Susan Wheeler

Bethlehem Commissioner of Public Works Bruce Secor, who Supervisor Ken Ringler says is as close to being indispensable as one person can be, shares his talents on the state and national levels.

Secor, who's been with the town 14 years and public works commissioner since the position was created in 1981, recently was elected president of the American Public Works Association (APWA) state chapter.

The national APWA, with a membership of 25,000-plus, was created to offer those in public works training as well as the chance to share ideas and experiences. The Chicago-based association was formed in 1937 by the consolidation of the American Society of Municipal Engineers and the International Association of Public Works Officials.

The state chapter, which works directly with the national association, also serves as a liaison with local branches.

Secor, who was elected president during the annual meeting at the Albany Marriott at the end of April, has served as chairman of the APWA's Capital District branch. He even helped found the local branch in 1983.

The organization encourages member participation, as well as high professional standards.

"The interaction between the people is an excellent benefit. I always learn something," said Secor, 43. "It's a very good resource of information, ideas and news."

Bethlehem Public Works Commissioner Bruce Secor

"By exchanging ideas and providing increased training for those in the field, it saves the taxpayers money."

Members often "get a feel" for statewide and national issues in the public works field during APWA meetings. Discussions often lead to local interpretations of state laws and solutions to common problems, such as solid waste management.

"Sometimes the casual conversations are the most beneficial, but our wives go crazy while we talk business all night," Secor said.

After the meetings, Secor brings ideas back to Bethlehem and puts them to work with the cooperation of other department heads, including the superintendent of highways. "That's why it all works, it's a cooperative effort," he said.

Secor has also served as an APWA guest seminar leader at the national level and was presented with a service award from the Capital District branch in 1987.

Although Secor often works 80-hour weeks, he enjoys spending time with his wife, Suzanne, and children, Elizabeth and Paul. The Delmar resident's hobbies include tennis, scuba diving and hiking, but now he spends most of his time working to solve the town's solid waste problems.

"Now solid waste management is my pastime," he said.

p.m. and at the St. Thomas Church parking lot. The market at St. Thomas is opening June 26, from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. The association recently opened a market at Holy Cross Church on Western Avenue in Albany that runs from 3 to 6 p.m.

We make it, bake it or grow it.

Norma Walley

In Colonie, the market operates at St. Ambrose Church in Latham on Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m.

Walley, whose specialties are jellies and baked goods made from wild berries, said working the markets is time consuming. "I probably give it 30 hours a week." But the rewards she reaps are more than worth her effort. "I love people contact," said Walley, whose grandfather was a farmer. "I want to share the skills I learned as a child."

Walley said cut flowers are a

"hot item" at the markets, along with crafts. "Crafts are the backbone of the markets," she said.

John Caswell, a farmer who has been with the association for the last two years, said there is a real demand for homegrown produce and customers are guaranteed that when they buy at an association sponsored market.

"In our organization, the farmer has to grow what he sells," said Caswell. Furthermore, the goods are all inspected to assure quality.

One popular vendor at some of the markets is Geurtze's chicken barbecue, originally started by John Geurtze and now operated by his daughters Gretchen Burton and Elisa Hostetter.

"It's sort of like a hobby handed down," said Burton, adding she always sells out. The half-chickens sell for $3.75 each and are available weekly at the First United Methodist Church market, but not the St. Ambrose market. "It's a little early to get everything ready and get going," she explained.

Burton hauls her barbecue pit on a 16-foot dual axle trailer, where she cooks her chicken over a bed of charcoal and bastes it with a Cornell university sauce. Many people take advantage of having their dinner prepared for them by complimenting it with fresh vegetables from other vendors.

Many customers, Burton said, order ahead for the servings from 5 to 6 p.m. "A lot plan their meals around us," she said. Burton said she averages from 200 to 224 half-chickens sold at the farmers markets she participates in, so calling ahead ensures a chicken will be waiting. For more information on ordering ahead, call 439-7760.

VanAuken said it's a very exciting time to be involved in agriculture, given many new developments and growing techniques. "Americans are rediscovering the excitement of fresh foods," she said, and for the New York state economy, "Agriculture is one of the brightest stars on the horizon."

Garbage expert examines incineration pros and cons

By Eric Bryant

Five years ago, Dr. Curtis Travis of Oak Ridge, Tenn., wrote and edited a book called Municipal Waste Incineration.

With 15 years in the field of municipal waste management risk assessment, Travis modestly calls himself a specialist in the "business of garbage."

Travis, who currently works at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory and is editor of the Journal of Risk Analysis, is pragmatic about the questions of incineration. So pragmatic, in fact, that he would rather give the pros and cons of both sides than choose one to defend.

"You have an X and Y side for each argument, obviously each side has its own points and merits," he said in a recent phone interview.

"There is no doubt that pollutants come out of incinerators, things like dioxins, mercury, furans. The question is whether these things are of the concentration that will affect the health of a local population."

Travis' answer to that question is a qualified "probably not."

All studies show the concentration of pollutants is very high near the emissions stack. However, he said, tests one-half mile outside the stack show pollutants diluted to the point that they cannot be measured beyond the normal trace levels of the same toxic chemicals.

According to the national laboratory's tests, "Dioxin outside one-half mile drops below the background level." This level is linked to a one-in-10,000 risk of cancer due to the toxin, and, if the trace level of the chemical is factored out, a one-in-one-million chance of cancer due to the toxin. Travis said there are always naturally occurring trace levels of toxic chemicals floating as particulates in the air.

primarily because there are more of them.

Found in household batteries, fungicides, thermostats and appliances, mercury does pose a prob-

You have an X and Y side for each argument, obviously each side has its own points and merits.

Curtis Travis

"When it comes to incineration there are two arguments. One side says 'It's the safest thing we have and unless you're standing on top of the stack, the health risk is minimal.' The other says, 'Incineration naturally gives out all kinds of pollutants and with the way the world is going, we don't need any more of those pollutants.'"

One risk often listed by incineration researchers is the threat of mercury emissions. Mercury, which is a vapor when released by incineration stacks, has been shown to be a causal factor in the incidence of cancer.

Travis said the incinerators do give off some mercury emissions but a recent study done by his staff at the Oak Ridge National Laboratory came to the conclusion that municipal waste incineration plants were not a major source of the element.

"We've recently completed a study which shows coal-fired power plants are probably the major source of mercury, making up about 19 percent of the total. Waste incineration was about five percent of the total."

The scientist did note that coal-fired plants pose a greater risk lematic situation, Travis said, because of its peculiar chemical makeup. Since it is the only element which is liquid at room temperature, some mercury can pass through the normal filtering process which is set up to collect solid particulates.

Newer incinerators, with their state-of-the-art filtering systems, have had trouble containing mercury emissions even though other harmful particulate emissions have been greatly reduced.

The scientist said the addition of activated carbon filters have proved to be the best container of mercury emissions. But no decision has been made on whether current mercury levels pose a real health threat, even though continued strict regulations are necessary.

Travis also gives an either/or answer to the question of which waste disposal methods are best.

"Of course, this is the million dollar question. We found that if we put the stuff in the ground, we could get ground water contamination. So, we decided to burn it. The problem with that is it doesn't all burn and some of it goes into the air. We have two scenarios.

RCS budget shows 7.4 % hike

By Michele Bintz

About 80 residents, administrators and teachers were present at the recent open hearing when William Schwartz, superintendent of schools, presented the proposed Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk school budget.

Also at the meeting, Wayne Fuhrman, board president, introduced the eight candidates running for three board of education seats.

According to Schwartz, the current budget proposal of $19,963,038 reflects a 7.4 percent increase over the 1991-92 budget.

The total to be spent on direct instruction from pre-kindergarten through 12th-grade is $8,903,675. This includes teacher salaries and benefits, textbooks, equipment, supplies and materials.

The total to be spent on indirect instructional costs is $11,059,363. This includes operation and maintenance, transportation, debt service, BOCES (occupational and special education) and non-instructional support staff (teacher aides).

One area of concern at the hearing was the amount of money — over $3.5 million — to be spent on occupational, special and remedial education. This amount represents a $2 million increase over the 1991-92 budget.

About 300 students in the district have learning and/or physical disabilities, some more severe than others, said Dr. Maurice Satin, board vice president.

"Remember, the state mandates that these students are entitled to the same quality of education that any other student is entitled to in this district."

According to Roger Lewis, district business administrator, "About two thirds of the dollars spent on outside education of the disabled student is returned to the district in the form of aid. But it is still a dollars out first situation."

Nancy Andress, district director of instructional services and special programs, reported that the district transports about 85 students with more severe disabilities to non-public facilities. She cited lack of space, staff and funds as the reasons the district can not provide in-house education to children with severe disabilities.

The district will also send 65 students to vocational training classes at BOCES during the '92-93 school year, Satin said.

Another item on the agenda was a special proposition to purchase new buses. According to Lewis, the $260,000 proposal is for two 65-passenger buses, one 25-passenger bus and five eight-passenger suburban vans.

He reminded the audience that state law requires buses over 10 years of age to be replaced. The new vehicles will be eligible for 90 percent state aid reimbursement which will appear as revenue in future budgets.

If the budget is passed this year, Coeymans residents will see a 17.67 percent increase, or $46.05 per thousand. In New Baltimore, the increase would be 15.65 percent, or $37.86 per thousand. New Scotland residents would see a 6.31 percent increase, or $25.47 per thousand.

The budget vote is set for Wednesday, June 10, from 7 a.m. to 9 p.m. at the senior high school on Route 9W in Ravena. Voters will also choose three of eight candidates seeking three-year board of education seats.

Residents can meet the candidates on Tuesday, June 9, at 7:30 p.m. at Becker Elementary School, Route 9W, Selkirk. Child care will be provided.

Matters of Opinion

On the way to the forum . . .

All sides on the issue of Bethlehem's proposed waste-to-energy incinerator plant surely are in agreement on one point:

An informed vote is a citizen's basic responsibility. Numbers are the bottom line, but both the pros and the cons will be more satisfied with the outcome if we can conclude that reason rather than prejudice, fact rather than emotion, were the decisive elements.

Facts will have the spotlight at tomorrow night's (Thursday) forum at BCHS, where position statements by the Solid Waste Task Force, Encon's Bureau of Resource Recovery, Energy Answers Corporation, and Bethlehem Work on Waste will be presented. Q-

What a difference a date makes

Four months ago, the Bethlehem Central Board of Education passed a resolution stating its intent to adopt the "Homestead provision" if the Town Board went along. Superintendent Leslie Loomis announced that a public hearing on the property-tax measure was tentatively scheduled for July 1.

Two months ago, the Town Board voted 3-to-2 to go along with Homestead after Dr. Loomis and two board members spoke ardently on its behalf at a Town Board hearing. "We urge the board to enact the Homestead provisions so the Board of Education can provide a small measure of relief to assist those taxpayers most in need," stated the superintendent. "Don't deny us the right to protect small homeowners who are being hurt the most," said William Collins, a school trustee.

At that time, Dr. Loomis was quoted to this effect: "We do not expect taxes to increase beyond the 6 percent range."

Since then, Bethlehem's response to the school board's efforts has proved to be rather different from what the board apparently foresaw. "Small homeowners" appear apathetic about the 75-cents-a-week by which typically, their taxes might be mitigated by Homestead. On the other hand, other categories of property owners — amounting to nearly one-quarter of all assessments in the town — turn out to be those "who are being hurt the most."

It subsequently developed that the anticipation of 6 percent was justified only by prematurely counting on Homestead as an accomplished fact. Actually, the increase should have been calculated and described as 8.5 percent — at best, a careless use of figures.

And the big catch is that — because of either bad arithmetic by the board's calculators or a distressing lack of candor — the tax rate for Bethlehem's businesses would un-and-A exchanges with these authorities will round out the program.

The Spotlight Newspapers are privileged to be able to sponsor this forum, for which the moderator will be the publisher and editor, Richard A. Ahlstrom.

The two-hour forum is to begin at 7:30 p.m. Those who come can be assured of going away better informed, and satisfied that they have done their part — along with several hundred other Bethlehem residents — to accept the duty of being a fully informed participant in the June 18 referendum.

expectedly shoot up to 12 percent. So would the rate for most farms and for open land. There is now general recognition that this latter development would translate into an invitation for development of the undeveloped portions of the town.

Superintendent Loomis recently is quoted to the effect that Board of Education adoption of Homestead is by no means a foregone conclusion despite the previous declarations and oratory. Board members Harvith and Collins (who went before the Town Board with their appeal for action) now say they are undecided what to do.

There's a particularly interesting angle: A once-and-future board member, Dennis Stevens, has come out foursquare against Homestead because "adoption would radically change life in the district . . ."

But Mr. Stevens right now is off the board. His service as an appointed member legally ended with the election of his successor on May 6. His own new term as an elected member doesn't begin until July 1.

July 1 — that rings a bell; remember, it was to be the date for the school board's public hearing on Homestead (board vote to occur sometime subsequently).

Hold the phone! Superintendent Loomis has announced that the hearing has been moved up a month (to tonight, June 3). The board's vote then would take place in June, while the dissident Mr. Stevens is without a vote.

Meanwhile, his lame-duck predecessor, George Sussman, retains his seat and its vote. Right up to the eve of the hearing, he said he hadn't made up his mind. His decision will be closely watched, for if he votes "yes" on Homestead it could be construed as a reason behind the shift in the schedule for the board's voting.

Pure coincidence, no doubt — but what a difference a date can make.

Words for the week

Coalesce: To unite or merge into a single body, group, or mass.

Apostrophe: Words addressed to a person or thing, whether absent or present, generally in an exclamatory digression in a speech or literary writing.

Fearsome: Causing fear; dreadful, horrible. Or: the exact opposite — frightened, timid.

Luxation: Out of joint; dislocated.

Baccalaureate: The degree of bachelor of arts, of science, etc. Also, an address or sermon delivered to a graduating class at commencement. Derived from Latin meaning young nobleman seeking to become a knight; also, a staff-bearer, shepherd.

Chestnut: An old, stale joke or phrase; cliché. Also, a very familiar story, piece of music, etc., that is too often repeated. Also, the hard callus on the inner side of a horse's leg.

Impact on area found minimal at SEMASS

Editor, The Spotlight:

Having a deep concern about the landfill and proposed incineration issues in the Town of Bethlehem, we availed ourselves of the no-charge trip offered by the Energy Answers Corporation to visit the SEMASS trash incineration plant in Rochester, Mass.

The plant operation met our every objection necessary to convince us of its viability for our town. As a final question, we asked the Rochester commissioner of conservation if they were good neighbors, and would she recommend them for our town?

Vox Pop

Her response was, "They are excellent neighbors; no odors, no littered streets entering the plant, and anyone 300 yards or more from the plant would not be detrimentally affected by its presence."

We the undersigned believe that with today's technology, trash incineration is the optimum choice to resolve our trash problems.

We urge its approval on June 18.

'Look beyond slick PR' in considering burn plant

Editor, the Spotlight:

A recent issue of The Spotlight had advertisements from Energy Answers Corporation that wants to build a mass-burn regional incinerator in Bethlehem. These advertisements offered free trips to its SEMASS plant with a free lunch and free videos; they stated that incineration will eliminate the need for a regional landfill. Let us look beyond the slick PR and consider the following:

- Regional incinerators need regional landfills. A 1,500 tons/day incinerator generates 500 tons/day of ash, which is often toxic. This must be landfilled with waste such as appliances that cannot be burned and waste generated when the plant is closed for repairs or maintenance.

- The local chapter of Physicians for Social Responsibility has opposed construction of incinerators because they emit lead and mercury which adversely affect our health and especially the health of children.

- Ontario has five solid-waste incinerators, one of which was constructed by a principal of Energy Answers. In April 1991, the ministry of environment banned new construction of solid-waste incinerators because, "Incineration is an environmental sleight-of-hand which gives the illusion of making waste disappear when in fact it reappears in different and more hazardous forms."

On June 18, reject the free lunch.

188 are vaccinated for rabies at clinic

Editor, The Spotlight:

As a result of The Spotlight's excellent article on May 13 highlighting Albany county Health Department's Rabies Immunization Clinic, 188 animals were vaccinated at the May 16 clinic.

Our next rabies clinic will be held on June 6 at Dr. Becker's Camp Nassau, Veeder Road, Gunderland.

Anyone with questions should please contact this department at 447-4625.

Your Opinion Matters

With an eye to last words

People who know your Uncle Dudley well are aware of his weakness for reading the obituary pages. When the paper arrives, he looks first for the Mets' game result (in season) and then the obits.

A psychologist would trace several factors in this priority. In the first place, there's history; Dudley's very earliest writing assignments were obituaries gained by nightly calls to every mortician in the city. Now he reads the obits with an eye toward evaluating the stylists who put them together in order to do justice to the departed.

Then, of course, there's the George Burns school of obituary reading: Scan the daily roster to see if your name is there — and if it isn't you're okay for another day. A byproduct is that you do unfortunately come across the names of some auld acquaintances.

His favorite obit page is in The New York Times. (A few years ago — 13 to be exact — Dudley persuaded the editors there to publish two obits of an old friend, the second a week after one he deemed inadequate had appeared.) Actually, not so much the obituaries but the paid notices on that page are the principal attraction. The Times obits on one recent day were for a virtuoso guitarist; an artist "devoted to the power of the found object"; and a

Uncle Dudley

British cookbook writer. In a lengthy farewell for an English political reporter, Peter Jenkins, the following appeared: "Mr. Jenkins had been a smoker and though he gave up the habit in recent years, he would sometimes become short of breath after chasing politicians up and down stairs and along the corridors of the House of Commons. He was admitted to the hospital five days ago, a day after writing his last column, and died today, a hospital spokeswoman said, of complications caused by fibrosing alveolitis, which is a scarring of the air passage to the lungs."

But it's down in the small print of the paid notices that you can come much closer to finding how people "go on ahead." Here you will find references to the "Dearest man in the world"; "Beloved husband/devoted father/loving grandfather"; "loving husband and best friend"; "beloved, interesting, gentle, and accomplished uncle"; "a person of impeccable taste and thoughtfulness"; "sorry to bid farewell to our brother-in-law, dear friend, and outstanding personality," and never-ending and touching expressions of regard and respect and regret. (It is noticeable that persons who have died of AIDS complications invariably receive the most lofty sentiments as to their caring and compassionate qualities.)

All this leads up to one little notice that has quickly become my favorite. It appeared a couple of weeks ago and memorialized a Mr. Friedman, apparently a man of considerable accomplishment and benevolent inclinations. After all the necessary data were recorded, three more words appeared at the very end, without explanation or comment:

Pasta is noodles.

Can't you imagine, as Uncle Dudley appreciatively does, the background of this irreverent apostrophe to a gentleman's life? Was "Pasta is noodles!" such an insistent contention of his own that the person who wrote and placed the notice couldn't resist giving Mr. Friedman one final shot at it? Or, perhaps, did that individual — having failed to persuade Mr. Friedman of the point during his lifetime — seize the opportunity to have the very last word?

Somewhere, there's a great little yarn waiting to be written.

Temptingly toothsome tables nearby

For me, the highlight of the June issue of the magazine calling itself "Conde Nast Traveler" was a very agreeable piece by Mimi Sheraton that features a review of nine eating places downstream from us in the Hudson Valley. There, she notes, "the most exciting menus offer contemporary American cookery . . . based on local products whenever possible and prepared in lusty innovations that recall authentic American dishes and flavors." Three of the "classic inns that refresh a tradition of hearty fare," as she says, warrant a three-star rating (to be interpreted as "a traveler's must"). Four others are two-star places ("very good, with culinary high spots").

The ones closest to us are the Cafe Tamayo in Saugerties and the Beekman 1766 Tavern in Rhinebeck. Both earn three stars. Phrases like these occur: "Tomato broth so irresistible that I sopped up every drop, even though it took four slices of wonderfully rough-textured bread" and "A luscious corn and sweet potato pudding brightened by sauteed apples, onions, and a refreshing belt of cider vinegar." That's what I call flavorful writing about food!

The DePuy Canal House in High Falls is a two-star restaurant, for Mimi "One of the most entertainingly bizarre dining places in New York State, if not in the entire country." I was taken by this reference: "A refreshing green salad that gets an amusing lift from a flurry of popcorn — an idea whose time may be just around the corner." Meanwhile, I say, let's experiment.

Four of the restaurants are part of the Culinary Institute of America at Hyde Park, including three-star American Bounty, "by far the best of the school's restaurants." ("Watching the golden, honey-glazed duck rotate on the rotisserie, I ordered some, and with garlic potatoes and peppered cabbage it tasted every bit as good as it looked.")

Rounding out her roster are a pair a bit more remote: Hudson House at Cold Spring and Xavier's at Piermont. Her tale of happiness includes prices, phone numbers (all in 914), and the times that the establishments are serving.

Her joy at finding such food reminded me of something I'd recently read in the new book "The End of Time," in which Richard Clurman relates the disaster that Time, Inc., brought upon itself by becoming part of Steve Ross's Time Warner. As the deal was being brought to a conclusion, one director warned caution: "It's not over until the fat lady sings" — forgetting that Warner's directors included Beverly (Bubbles) Sills, who joined in the general laughter that followed.

Elsewhere in this issue is a catchy little piece on the Beaverkill Valley Inn 100 miles northwest of New York City; an admirably unpretentious place owned by Laurance Rockefeller, a "testament to preservation and fly-fishing — an unusual combination of small-scale resort, private retreat, and wilderness cabin." The overnight rate is $330 for a double room, but that includes meals.

Our pewter river

The Hudson River valley imparts a sense of discovery almost as much today as it did to its first explorer, Giovanni da Verrazano, in 1524 and then, in 1609, to Henry Hudson, who made that darkly dramatic waterway his own. Even now, many who have heard of the eerily beautiful silver-gold light celebrated by the painters of the Hudson River School . . . are unprepared for the shadowy, sylvan splendors. Follow that wide pewter river banked by heavily wooded slopes and you'll come to a land of apple orchards and dairy farms set in a gently rolling Brueghel-like landscape . . . — Mimi Sheraton.

You may want to read up on new hotels in downtown New York; the negatives for taking pets on plane trips; the shortcomings of B&B guidebooks; the future for West Point; or a note on a new portable product to purify water instantly.

And these are only a sampling among short articles. Longer ones abound, such as a dozen-page spread on Provincetown and another on Ischia, "Italy's most romantic island."

"Conde Nast Traveler" is a fine magazine for anyone interested in quitting familiar streets for a while. Its motto is "Truth in travel," and it seems to deliver effectively.

Democrats' rank & file votes—for democracy

The contributor of this Point of View is resident partner in Albany of the law firm of Duker and Barrett. Until recently he was director of the Government Law Center of Albany Law School. He is a resident of Delmar.

By George F. Carpinello

You can imagine my surprise. Here was the chairman of the Albany County Democratic Party, Harold Joyce, asking me to serve on a task force that would undertake a total reexamination of the governance and operation of the Albany County Democratic Party. Why was he asking me? After all, I had long been known among "regulars" as an "insurgent" and had only recently been considering running in a primary against the party's nominee for County Executive, Bob Lyman. Was this the party's attempt to create just the appearance that the task force would be a representative body? What other kinds of people would be on this committee? Was Harold Joyce serious about reforming the party? Intrigued, I agreed to serve on the task force.

Point of View

My questions were answered at the very first meeting. Yes, said Harold, this was to be a fundamental review of the Albany County Democratic Party, from top to bottom. There were no sacred cows and there were to be no assumptions as to what the chairman wanted or did not want.

Included as members on the committee were a wide range of people. Some, like Paul O'Brien, have had long years of service with the party. Others, like Martha Pofit, vice president with the Hospital Association of New York, and May D'Agostino, a well-respected attorney, had independent reputations in the community not associated with the Democratic Party. Moreover, the chair of the task force was a no-nonsense guy named Mike Hickey, head of Albany Financial Planners, who let the committee know at the very first meeting that this was going to be a hard-working group and that we would be spending several long evenings over the next four months debating the future of the party.

Task force hearings discovered strong desire for greater voice in party decisions and deliberative county committee meetings

At that first meeting, a number of members expressed their belief that the governance of the party and the party's bylaws needed major reform. Even the so-called "regulars" on the task force concurred in this view. I went home heartened and somewhat surprised.

When asked what subcommittee I wanted to serve on, I told Mike that my first choice was to serve on the subcommittee rewriting the party bylaws. As a lawyer, I thought that my skills could be used best in that capacity. Mike had different ideas. He wanted me to serve as the chair of the subcommittee that would hold a series of almost a dozen meetings around the county seeking public input on the Democratic Party. In the end, I was glad I agreed to Mike's request. It gave me an opportunity to meet a vast number of the rank-and-file of the party and to get a good understanding of what people on the street were thinking.

What we heard at the meetings was very enlightening. As expected, our first meeting, held in the Sixth Ward in the downtown neighborhoods of Albany, brought out a large "insurgent" contingent. It was very critical of the way the party was governed and the conduct of Democratic "regulars" during primary campaigns. I was familiar with the complaints because I was a victim of some of that conduct as a Democratic committeeperson and candidate in the Sixth Ward in the early 1980s.

The next meeting, held in Cohoes, I expected to be a fairly tame one with most Democratic committeepersons expressing contentment with the status quo. What we found, however, was a strong desire for a larger executive committee, a greater voice in party decisions, and a demand for truly deliberative county committee meetings instead of the five-minute pro forma meetings that had long been expected during the reign of the late Mayor and County Chairman Erastus Corning, 2nd.

That desire for great "democracy" was expressed at almost all the remaining meetings. People were also grateful that Harold Joyce had set up the task force, that the views of the rank-and-file were being solicited, and that some change would come about. They also expressed frustration over the way the party has been portrayed in the press, and the beating the party had taken over the Jim Coyne affair.

Many constituencies

The meetings also revealed the large number of different constituencies represented by the Democratic Party. The press and the vast majority of voters in Albany County still view the party as a monolith controlled by the county chairman and a small handful of advisers. Yet, there are as many different factions and viewpoints in the local Democratic Party as there are in the national party. Even in the minority community, we found strong disagreements on both policy and personalities within the county committee. Alliances between these various groups are constantly coalescing and evaporating, depending upon the particular issue or campaign. I began to have a greater appreciation for the incredible skills needed by a county chairman, especially in this county, to keep these various groups generally united and working toward a common goal.

It would be impossible to do justice to the entire task force report in this short space. But reference to just a few of the recommendations will demonstrate, I think, that both the party chairman and the task force are serious about fundamental change.

Candidate review

First, the executive committee will be significantly expanded to 36 members, including 26 chosen from election districts in all the municipalities throughout the county. A new candidate-review committee and process will be established, whereby candidates for major offices will be interviewed and recommendations made to the party for endorsement. The procedure for selecting ward leaders and town chairpersons has been formalized and preference has been established for committeepersons and ward leaders residing in their respective districts and wards. A significantly expanded Code of Ethics includes a number of new provisions that will put the party on record as prohibiting the use of any party or governmental office for private gain; prohibit the violations of any person's electoral rights or privileges; deny discrimination on any basis in the political process; and provide an enforcement mechanism to remove party officials who might violate the Code of Ethics.

Policy development

In addition, the committee recommended a number of changes that would increase the efficiency of the party and make its operations more like those of an efficient business enterprise. New committees were recommended to help train new committeepersons, campaign workers, and other interested party volunteers.

A handbook will be developed as an information guide for com-

Multiple viewpoints, factions contradict 'monolith' tradition mitteepersons; a professional staff was recommended for a new and expanded county headquarters; and a policy committee was proposed to do research and policy development on issues of concern to the greater community.

All in all, the recommendations — if adopted and implemented — would convert the Albany County Democratic Committee into one of the most democratically run committees, not only in New York State, but in the entire United States.

Six months ago, I would have thought that the chances for such implementation in Albany County would be nil. After listening to scores of committee people testify at our public meetings, and talking individually with a number of Democratic Party leaders, I no longer feel that way. Just believing that this change can happen has left me in a state of utter amazement.

Waste-to-energy plant is termed town's answer

Editor, The Spotlight:

On June 18, residents of Bethlehem will decide the direction to be taken for the disposal of municipal waste in the area for many years to come. As I have been a town resident since 1950, am a local business owner, and intend to be so for many years to come, I am vitally interested in the future of waste disposal in our area.

I have studied the proposal for a waste to energy resource recovery facility on Cabbage Island and took the opportunity to tour SEMASS, the waste-to-energy facility in Rochester, Mass. I have reviewed data on landfills, and am convinced that landfills are "time bombs" waiting under a layer of plastic and clay to explode on future generations. I don't believe in shipping our trash to somewhere else at exorbitant cost, over which we have no control. It is now time to deal with the municipal waste problem.

I believe that the solution to our municipal waste problem is a waste-to-energy resource-recovery facility, as proposed by Energy Answers Corporation. Not only will it address our waste-disposal problems, it will eliminate the need for a regional landfill that very well could be located in our town. Bonuses will be the production of electricity and additional revenue for our town.

I urge you to become informed. Take the opportunity to tour SEMASS and see for yourself this efficient facility. Put forth the effort so that you can make an informed decision on June 18. Your decision should be "Yes."

Correcting an impression about building's owner

Editor, The Spotlight:

Last Tuesday I presented a slide lecture at the Bethlehem Public Library on the architecture of old Delmar. I also discussed the renovation of 500 Kenwood Avenue, for which I was the architect.

In describing the attitude of the residents who came out to support our efforts to re-use the structure, I mentioned the neighbors' concern about the deteriorating condition of the building and that some had been following a story in the Times Union describing the current owner's difficulties with the discovery of waste illegally stored in another of his buildings.

Unfortunately, I did not know that the owner had been absolved of blame in the incident, in which his tenant was apparently charged.

I deeply regret any offense that may have been given. It was certainly not my intention to harm anyone but only to create a background for the renovation of the building.

Your Opinion Matters

'Refuse capital' could sacrifice quality of life

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am writing to address a number of issues that come to mind as the debate over the June 18 referendum continues.

1. Some seem lulled by the mistaken idea that if we accept an incinerator, South Bethlehem will not get a landfill. This is a naive approach. Do you really trust the same politicians who gave you the Homestead Act following re-evaluation?

And what if no one else wants to take the toxic ash "our" incinerator would produce and we had to keep it "at home"? Where would the toxic ash be landfilled? Delmar? Slingerlands? South Bethlehem would once again be the target, for the same reasons it was in the first place. The best defense is to ensure that we do not become a dumping ground for either an incinerator or a regional landfill.

2. Most of us live in Bethlehem for the quality of life here. As a refuse capital, that would no longer be the case. According to a local Realtor, at the very proposal of an incinerator, property values drop by 12 to 20 percent. Imagine the drop in value once the thing is up and running! Try balancing that realty loss against a $60-per-person tax incentive, if ANSWERS promises are made good.

3. Why should we want to import 20 to 30 times the amount of trash we ourselves produce? And, since the entire Capital District does not produce enough solid waste to support one of the three proposed incinerators, where does the waste come from? Is it shipped by train or barge from New York City and environs?

4. Perhaps most important is that the Hudson Valley is out of compliance for federal air quality standards, and the Center for Disease Control cites the Capital District as one of the worst in the country for respiratory ailments, including asthma. Yet, knowing that our air is unfit, our town fathers are encouraging another polluter to move in.

5. Personally, I have reasons to oppose the incinerator. After a few years of working in the area of Albany's ANSWERS waste-burner and living under VA and Albany Med's incinerators, I went from robust health to suddenly being diagnosed with asthma and my family and I suffered myriad respiratory problems. All three of my family developed lesions, thankfully thus far benign. Since moving to Glenmont five years ago, our incidence of respiratory problems and work absences have decreased significantly. While I cannot say the incinerators were

Absentee ballot bar irks voter

Editor, The Spotlight:

We were very annoyed when we were informed that we cannot cast an absentee ballot in the June 18 voting regarding the incinerator matter in our town.

We will be away that day—and were told the Town Board voted against allowing absentee ballots.

This is an important issue that will affect will of us, and we feel that we should have been able to vote and make our wishes count.

Jean and Morton Adell entirely responsible, the decline in my family's health and subsequent relief on moving to Glenmont certainly does seem too coincidental.

6. No one knows the long-term health impact these incinerators have. Only now are we realizing the deleterious effect ANSWERS in downtown Albany has had, and yet that was "state-of-the-art" 10 years ago. Now, the creators of that literally stinking abomination want us to accept their latest "state-of-the-art" incinerator. Are we to become the latest ANSWERS experiment?

Isn't our children's health worth more than $60?

Glenmont Barbara Burt

Small landfill may fit town's waste needs

Editor, The Spotlight:

In the May 20 Spotlight, a letter from Mr. Brian Bagley indicated his support for the proposed waste incinerator, one reason being that an incinerator to burn trash would not require a landfill. This is not true.

The incineration process leaves a substantial amount of ash and residue which must be transported to a landfill. Very often this ash contains high levels of toxic materials not burned. So while our town may or may not site a landfill to dispose of this ash, if an incinerator is built, there will be a landfill nearby.

Choosing a landfill to solve our waste problem may pose a greater threat to the next generation and the environment than a small, well-constructed, and well-managed landfill for the use of our town that is combined with a good recycling program.

SEMASS visitor calls plant potential benefit

Editor, The Spotlight:

I recently had the opportunity to tour SEMASS, the waste-to-energy plant in Rochester, Mass. I hesitate to call it an incinerator, in that it doesn't "burn" trash and garbage, but recycles it into other items such as metallics, solids, and electricity.

From only one visit to this facility I can find no fault or reason for not siting a similar plant on Cabbage Island in Bethlehem. The benefits from such a facility seem to far outweigh any other suggested means of dealing with our ongoing waste problems.

I will be voting "yes" June 18.

Matters of Opinion

'Worst scenario' drawn by incinerator skeptic

Editor, The Spotlight:

It is my understanding that you have a proposal for an incinerator for your area. That proposal is being put forth by Energy Answers Corporation of New York. That same corporation plus numerous subsidiaries connected with them also gave us a proposal here in Carver, Mass., which resulted in the SEMASS incinerator project.

I don't have all the particulars about your proposal so I cannot comment on each aspect and tell you where the pitfalls lie. My information is based on what happened to us!

First, incinerator proponents like to place the incinerator on the edge of one town so the noise and odor problems affect another town which has very little influence on clearing up those noise and odor problems. The "host" town does little complaining because they get income.

I would be very wary of any proposal situated at the edge of the town it's in. Put it squarely in the center of the town that is foolish enough to desire such a project. They reap the benefits, let them reap the pitfalls!

Usually the landfill (or ashfill, as it is called) is located in another town some distance from the incinerator project itself. This creates another block of problems. Ideally, the ashfill should be in the town with the incinerator. Let them get the poisonous leachate and ash.

In our situation we have a district committee overseeing the landfill. These appointed officials have a close working situation with SEMASS officials and have proceeded to "give away" the benefits originally promised our town. Those benefits we voted on!

The incinerator has been a disaster to local neighbors. Noise and odor problems continue unabated. State officials have cited SEMASS several times. My opinion is state officials are reluctant to initiate much action because so many towns use SEMASS. In 1993 a solution is proposed. That solution is EXPANSION!

When we voted to allow the landfill in our town it was for a few local communities. It has turned into a "all the world!" Trucks labor through our town, destroying our roads, and leave their trash here to pollute us forever. No one can adequately supervise or pick over tons of waste to be sure no hazardous waste is contained. You can naively believe it is so, but it isn't.

We have violations of the site assignment at the landfill. Leachate levels are not maintained, ash is placed over trash, and unshredded trash bypasses the plant when it is shut down.

This is a heavy tonnage violation at the landfill.

Beware of what you are doing. You may find yourself in a David and Goliath situation as we have.

A few points to ponder are:

1. No matter what you voted on, spell out, dictate, contract, legislate, or whatever, it can all be taken away. I speak from our experience here.

2. Noise and odor near the incinerator are a severe problem. No action offers any relief. Talk to SEMASS neighbors, those who do not benefit from the plant.

3. All lined landfills leak! Therefore, you will eventually pollute your water supply. Make sure the new ash landfill is not near an old landfill or you will be blamed for most of the problems!

4. You will not be allowed to supervise much. It is too dangerous for anyone except incinerator officials to be present. You must rely on their capabilities to be sure the flow of waste is monitored carefully and all hazardous waste removed.

5. Air-pollution equipment is inadequate. Mercury and dioxins still escape and pollute land in the area. State officials do monitor but once every nine months on an appointment basis. No surprises here!

6. Don't forget to address water drawdown. Millions of gallons a year disappear as steam. Make sure your aquifer is capable of withstanding such a 24-hour disappearance of water.

All in all, why would you want such a project in your area? Money will never restore any polluted area. You will lose all control. Remember some plants go bankrupt, then what would you have left?

If you have a trash problem, then solve it, but should you solve it for the world as we foolishly did? Trash will come in from hundreds of miles away, quite often under the guise of "spot market" shipments!

I wish someone had written a letter like this to me. Believe me, we wouldn't be in such a mess here.

In our state, SEMASS engineers do all the studies on landfill life, water drawdown, pollution, etc. The state accepts those calculations with no outside independent contracts. Get the money and hire your own engineers to be sure of what facts need to be addressed.

Carver, Mass. Claire DeLoid

Editor's note: Mrs. DeLoid's letter was forwarded to The Spotlight by a member of Bethlehem Work on Waste. Her residence in Carver is approximately seven miles from SEMASS. A differing view of the effect of SEMASS on the community was expressed by the chairman of Rochester (Mass.) Conservation Commission, Georgia D. Chamberlain, in a letter published in The Spotlight issue of May 20.

Referendum

the waste-to-energy incinerator on Cabbage Island as proposed by the Energy Answers Corporation (EAC). The Albany-based company gave the task force an integrated plan that includes siting a regional 1,000 ton per day resource recovery facility on an approximately 10-acre parcel on Cabbage Island.

The proposition's language does not address the EAC proposal. It allows the town to pursue the best solid waste management option that includes incineration, Smith said. Because EAC has put forth a proposal, it will be analyzed by the town.

The EAC proposal must first be determined to be environmentally sound and economically feasible, according to Smith. Next, the proposal would have to be approved by the state Department of Environmental Conservation.

"A 'yes' vote is binding, but it does not require the town to take a fiscally and environmentally unsound proposal," Smith said. "EAC is a suitor — it wants to do business with the town. The town remains capable of not accepting or rejecting any particular plan."

Because the Capital District is facing proposals for burn plants from two other companies, there is concern that more than one plant will win EnCon approval and be built. Delmar resident Liz McCoy, a member of Bethlehem Work On Waste and the task force, said the referendum will determine if residents support incineration in the town, but ignores other issues, such as burn plant proposals put forth by American Ref-Fuel and Ogden Projects Inc.

"Only one issue is being presented to the voters," McCoy said. "The issue is 'Do you support incineration?' But the real issue is, 'You may support incineration, but how many will you support in the Capital District?'"

Although a "yes" vote binds the town to pursue incineration, it is not obligated to site an incinerator if EnCon approves any other proposals.

"Bethlehem will not pursue incineration if there is an incinerator sited in the Capital District," Smith said.

The task force stated last March that if Green Island hosts a waste-to-energy plant, Bethlehem should not. According to a task force report, the group views "the EAC proposal as a competing plan which may have a superior technology and is worthy of full review."

It is the responsibility of Bethlehem, EnCon and other involved communities to choose the best competing plan for the region, the report stated.

Supervisor Ken Ringler does not believe in the proliferation of incineration plants in the region. "If there is a regional waste-to-energy facility sited (in the Capital District), I will do everything in my power to avoid one being sited in Bethlehem."

"I believe incineration is a necessary part of the solid waste management solution, but I certainly do not want an incinerator on every street corner."

In addition, because the state encourages a regional approach to solid waste management, it is "almost certain that EnCon will not site more than one incinerator in the area," Smith said.

There are controls within Bethlehem to prevent the siting of unwanted facilities. According to Secor, the controls include the current zoning law, the permitting process and the proposed local law, "Permitting of Solid Waste Management Facilities."

These legal obstacles were in place when American Ref-Fuel considered constructing a burn plant in Bethlehem. Before the company chose Green Island as a site for its incinerator, it had proposed to build on Cabbage Island.

According to Ringler, he identified the legal obstacles to Ref-Fuel officials, noting it would be to the company's advantage to get past state environmental requirements before going through town siting proceedings. Ref-Fuel later proposed a site in Green Island.

Smith said residents criticized town officials for not considering the proposal. They said an incinerator not only would have benefited the town economically, but also would have been part of the solid waste management solution.

"Some said, 'Why not consider such a resource?' and these were not casual, infrequent comments," Smith said.

The June 18 referendum is part of the evolutionary process in trying to find a solution to the town's solid waste management crisis, Smith said. "Some residents complained the town booted American Ref-Fuel out. If we get a good turnout for the vote, then we'll get the feel of the community."

"Supervisor Ringler and the town board feel on an issue as sensitive as this, if we could create a legal referendum, the preferable option is to get the sense of the town."

Smith noted the referendum may be influenced by residents'

Bike rodeo to remind riders of safety rules of the road

Town cyclists are oiling their chains and inflating their tires, to prepare for the 16th annual Bike Rodeo at the Town Hall on Saturday, June 6, from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m.

Registration for new bikes will be held, and riders will have the opportunity to demonstrate their knowledge of bicycle safety and rules of the road on the special course in the north-end parking area and driveway.

Some participants will win new bicycles and helmets. Complimentary drinks will be provided by McDonald's.

The rodeo is sponsored each year by the town of Bethlehem Parks and Recreation Department and the Bethlehem Police Department Youth Bureau.

Supporting organizations and merchants include: K-Marts of Glenmont, Owens Corning of Delmar, Bethlehem Elks, Bethlehem Reserve Police, Bethlehem Lions Club, Delmar Kiwanis, Nathaniel Adams Blanchard Post, Bethlehem Police Officers, Albany County traffic safety department and the town of Bethlehem senior services and town clerk's offices.

Board passes parking ban

After a public hearing last Wednesday, the Bethlehem Town Board passed an ordinance prohibiting parking in front of the Elm Avenue Park.

The ordinance, which prohibits parking on both sides of the street in front of the park, becomes effective this weekend. The no parking signs were posted Monday.

The board set the public hearing on a recommendation from the Traffic Safety Committee.

In other news from the May 27 meeting, the board appointed Marjory C. O'Brien to the town of Bethlehem Board of Appeals. O'Brien lives on Preston Road, Delmar.

Board wants inspection of Swift Estates road

By Eric Bryant

Concern over ongoing excavation at the Swift Estates work site has led the New Scotland Town Board to call for an inspection of the proposed subdivision's infrastructure.

The board recently authorized a resolution asking developer Peter Baltis to set up an inspection schedule with the town's engineer, C.T. Male Associates. The resolution also called for a fee structure to be set up so the town would be reimbursed for the inspection work.

According to town building inspector Paul Cantlin, there is a large amount of dirt being moved to construct a road which will serve as access to the nine-lot subdivision. Since much of the property is hilly and several portions are quite wet, Cantlin said he was concerned the town was not properly overseeing the construction of a road it would eventually have to take over.

A previous resolution forwarded by board member Dick Decker would have forced Baltis to stop work immediately and set up an inspection schedule. Only Decker and Supervisor Herb Reilly voted for the measure, however, and a second resolution dropped the provision that Baltis be forced to stop all work at the site.

Baltis later said he welcomed the inspection and called it just a routine condition of building developments in any town.

The Swift Estates project was given final approval in October 1991 after several years of struggling through the planning process. In August of last year, Baltis claimed the board was treating him differently because of his ethnic heritage.

In other business:

- The board tentatively awarded the bid for well work at the Clarksville Water District to A.B. Company Multitrades of Cambridge. The company came in with a bid of $58,341. The only other bid, $102,000, came from an Albany company.

Reilly said the bids and the company were investigated by engineering consultants and found to be satisfactory. Town attorney John Biscone was authorized to obtain the necessary financing through a bond anticipation note for the project following FmHA approval.

- The board also approved a $90,000 bond anticipation note to pay the remainder of revaluation data collection costs. The note is for three years at 4.75 percent interest.

Saint Rose schedules career workshops

The College of Saint Rose in Albany will sponsor two career boosting workshops on Saturday, June 6, at Hubbard Hall, 266 Western Ave. in Albany.

The 9 a.m. to noon session will focus on career planning, and the afternoon workshop, from 1 to 4 p.m., will discuss the job search process.

Both sessions are designed to help people choose and plan a career path by examining educational opportunities and long and short term goals.

The cost is $15 per workshop, or $25 for both.

For information, call 454-5143.

Slides show African trip

Those with a taste for adventure will want to "visit" Zimbabwe when Robin Potter presents a slide show and lecture on her latest Earthwatch expedition at the Voorheesville Public Library on Tuesday, June 9, at 7:30 p.m.

Last summer, Robin and her husband Nelson studied the mammals of Goshio Nature Reserve, a small park in Central Zimbabwe, and traveled through the country. They also took a five-day safari by canoe down the Zambezi River, visited Victoria Falls and toured Huange, Zimbabwe's largest national park.

Potter is a field rep for Earthwatch, a national volunteer organization which gives the public the opportunity to assist university and museum faculty on research expeditions.

Also this week, another storytelling workshop with Chris Holder is set for Saturday, June 6, from 2 to 4 p.m. Senior citizens and youngsters, age 10 and up, are invited to spin original stories with the help of a "prop" they bring from home.

The stories will be performed on Saturday, June 13, at 2 p.m. for friends and family.

To register, call the reference desk at 765-2791.

The Friends of the Library will meet on Monday, June 8, at 7:30 p.m. Guest speaker Tom Smith will discuss some of the literary luminaries he has met as associate director of the New York State Writer's Institute and as the host of the of The Book Show, a weekly radio program on WAMC. The program is open to the public.

Voorheesville

Story hours for Friday, June 5, will center on tales about whales, while the theme for the following week will be "Good Morning!" Sessions are held every Monday at 10:30 a.m., Tuesday at 10 a.m., Wednesday at 4 p.m. and Friday at 10:30 a.m. and 1:30 p.m. No registration is needed.

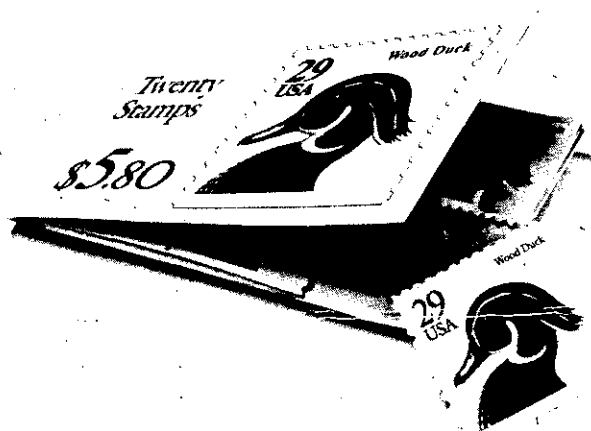

Wemp Barn is site for summer workshops

The Wemp Barn, an 18th-century Dutch barn in the town of New Scotland, will be the site for cultural and environmental workshops for children during July and August.

The sessions are for children in kindergarten through sixth-grade and will run from July 20 to 31 and August 3 to 14. The workshops are being sponsored by the Onesquethaw Preservation and Conservation Association.

To register, call 768-2215.

District to honor former teacher

The public is invited to a reception to be held at the Voorheesville Elementary School library on Thursday, June 4, at 3:15 p.m.

At the reception, administration and staff will honor Lucinda (Cindi) Wright, who recently retired after 50 years of teaching second-graders in the Voorheesville School District.

June 1 to 5 has been designated as "Cindi Wright Week." Wright donated her retirement incentive check to the elementary school library to purchase 238 books and a 21-volume encyclopedia for student use.

For information about the reception, call 765-2382.

School district to offer summer driver ed course

A summer driver education course will be held at the Clayton A. Bouton Junior Senior High School from Wednesday, July 1, through Thursday, August 13. Applicants must register by Wednesday, June 3.

Voorheesville school district students will have first priority for registration. There will be a charge of $145 for the course. A $50 non-refundable deposit is due by June 3, and the balance must be paid by June 15.

Students must be 16 years of age by July 1. To receive credit, they must attend all classes and complete 24 hours in the car and 24 hours of classroom work.

For information, call the guidance office at 765-5529.

Juniors to take college board exams

Juniors from the high school will take their College Board Scholastic Aptitude Tests (SAT) on Saturday, June 6.

Students must arrive at the test center of their choice at 8 a.m. with an admission ticket and proof of identification.

For information, contact the guidance office 765-5529.

Elementary school slates annual field day events

Voorheesville Elementary School will hold its annual field day on Monday, June 8, from 9:30 a.m. to 2:30 p.m.

Students should bring a bag lunch and wear casual clothes.

Games planned for the day include the obstacle course and relay and sack races. The faculty will also challenge the pupils in the annual tug-of-war event.

Also planned is a lottery, where children whose names are drawn out of a hat will throw wet sponges at faculty members. At the end of the day, certificates will be distributed to all pupils.

Nominees sought for Extra Mile Awards

Nominations are being accepted for the Extra Mile Awards. The award honors people or organizations who have given extra time, effort, or spirit to make an outstanding contribution to the Voorheesville Central School District.

Applications should be accompanied by endorsements from two people, and must be received at the superintendent's office by Wednesday, June 3. For information, call 765-3313.

Bethlehem Recycling Corner

By Sharon Fisher, town recycling coordinator

More than two million gallons of used oil are disposed of improperly each year by do-it-yourselfers in New York State.

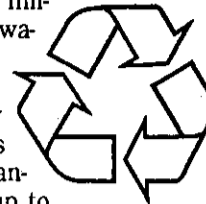

Because as little as one gallon of oil can pollute up to a million gallons of drinking water, it's important to dispose of used oil properly.

State law says that any service station which sells at least 500 gallons of oil annually must take back up to five gallons of used oil per day from an individual at no charge. A store which fits into this category will have a sign posted.

There are 15 service stations in the town of Bethlehem which will accept used oil. Call the waste oil recycling hotline at 439-0963 for information.

In addition to preserving the environment, recycling used oil can save energy. Used motor oil can be re-refined, saving 75 percent of the energy necessary to process crude petroleum. In New York State, this energy savings is equivalent to the energy used to heat 4,000 homes each year, and would reduce petroleum imports by as much as five million barrels annually.

CIBRO petroleum will begin reprocessing waste oil for use as industrial fuels. Their long range plan is to use re-refined waste oil as a lubricant.

Motorists can also recycle antifreeze and vehicle batteries.

Antifreeze can be recycled at Delmar Auto Radiator, 90 Adams St., Delmar, at a charge of 50 cents per gallon.

Lead-acid batteries, which are prohibited from landfills and incinerators, can be brought to K-Mart. The store will pay $1 for each vehicle battery brought to the store.

Remember, plastic motor oil containers are not recyclable because residues of oil can contaminate all other recyclable.

Keep Local Control Over Our Waste.

There are several regional solid waste options being considered in the Capital Region—including fourteen possible landfill sites, a mass burn facility in Green Island, a mass burn plant in the Port within the City of Albany, and Energy Answers Corporation's integrated solid waste proposal which includes a waste to energy facility in the Port within the Town of Bethlehem. Any of these projects would certainly have an impact on the residents of the Town of Bethlehem. However, only EAC's proposal will give the Town of Bethlehem local control. Only EAC's proposal will give the Town direct economic benefit. And only EAC's proposal is from a local company whose staff lives and works right here in the Capital Region. Energy Answers Corporation wants the right solid waste solution for our region. If you have questions, give us a call at 434-1227. And please, vote YES on June 18.

CHOICES to help keep kids in school

Over the past few months, the RCS district has formed a partnership with Career and Home Opportunities Integrated with Community Education and Services (CHOICES) of Ravena to develop strategies to keep more students in school.

CHOICES students who are working toward their General Equivalency Diploma (GED) have met with faculty, staff and students at the high school to talk about why they left school and what could be done to help keep other students from dropping out.

Grange to serve baked ham supper

The Bethlehem Grange will serve a family-style baked ham supper on Saturday, June 6, from 4 to 7 p.m. at the Beckers Corner Grange, Route 396, Selkirk.

A craft and bake sale display is also planned.

Cost is $7 for adults, and $3.50 for children 5 to 12. Large groups should call 767-2770 or 767-3342 for seating arrangements.

Ravena library to offer summer reading program

The Ravena Free Library's summer reading program, "New York is Reading Country," will begin when the school year ends. Children will participate in weekly activities such as films, puppet show and crafts.

Middle school pupils can volunteer to become "book buddies" to younger, pre-reading members. Call 756-2053 for information.

The annual library book sale is scheduled for Saturday, June 6, at the Main Street location. The sale is sponsored by Friends of the Ravena Free Library.

'Birds eliminated from sectionals

By Greg Sullivan

Voorheesville's girls varsity softball season came to a close Thursday, May 28 with a heart-breaking loss to Hoosic Falls in the first round of the Class CC sectionals.

The Ladybirds, seeded sixth out of six teams, entered the sectionals with a 12-8 record, a respectable showing in the competitive Colonial Council.

However, key injuries hurt their chances to advance in the single elimination tournament.

Voorheesville apparently suffered from early game jitters as they went scoreless in the top half of the first inning and then allowed Hoosic Falls to explode for five runs in the bottom of the first to take an early 5-0 lead.

The Ladybirds hung tough, though, and came back with six runs of their own in the second.

Hoosic Falls, in veteran fashion, was not shaken by Voorheesville's second inning onslaught as they went on to reclaim the lead 11-6. Then, it was once again Voorheesville's turn as they closed to within one with three innings to play.

The game came to a climax in the sixth inning as the Ladybirds clawed back to a 14-14 tie. It wasn't until Hoosic Falls' Elizabeth Johnson stroked a two-run single in the bottom of the sixth that the game decidedly swung in favor of Hoosic Falls. It seemed to break the spirit of the stubborn Voorheesville offense as they came up empty in their last at bat of the game and surrendered the victory, 16-14.

Eagle lady laxers finish season 2-4

By Emily Church

The Bethlehem girls lacrosse team finished the season with a win over Columbia on Thursday, May 21, 12-8, and a loss to Albany Academy on Tuesday, May 26, 12-6. The Eagles finished the season 2-4.

Melissa Mann was the goal-keeper for both games, and played extremely well against Albany Academy, said coach Nancy McKenna said.

Tory McKenna scored eight of the 12 goals in the Columbia game. Karena Zornow scored three and Jessica Greggo scored one goal. McKenna scored four at the Academy game, and Sara Clash and Janice Gallagher each scored one goal.

CAUSES OF TMJ SYNDROME

Many jaw problems are the result of a condition known as TMJ SYNDROME (temporomandibular joint syndrome). Symptoms include aches and pains in or near the joint (just in front of the ears), muscle spasms, headaches, stiff neck, and popping or clicking when opening and closing the mouth.

What causes this problem? In most cases it is a combination of two factors: a bad bite and stress. The bad bite may be caused by a high filling, a twisted or tilted tooth, a missing tooth, an undererupted or overerupted tooth, or a poor arrangement of several or all teeth when you close them together.

As the jaw deviates from a symmetrical arrangement, the muscles and ligaments on one side of the joint may be overly stretched, and they tend to compensate by contracting. A struggle is set up between the teeth and their desired closure position, and the ball-socket ar-rangment of the lower to upper jaw. This struggle may induce muscle spasm, leading to pain. Often times, your dentist can help you solve this problem but frequently other members of the health care team are needed such as chiropractors, physical therapists, physicians, and stress management professionals. A team approach is desirable for tough cases.

V'ville knocks off Lansingburgh

By Erin Sullivan

The Voorheesville boys varsity baseball team concluded its season last week in style by upsetting Lansingburgh, last year's Colonial council champions, 7-2, at home.

The win was characterized by strong efforts on the part of the seniors in their last game: pitcher Jack Brennan's five-hitter against the league's best hitting team; Eric Logan's single, double, triple and five RBI; last at bat hits by Mike Gaudio and Mike Angelo, and solid defensive efforts from Tom Giantasio, Ryan Caark and Paul Clauthier.

The win, Voorheesville's second in a row, ended a 3-15 season which included three early season forfeits.

Coach Don McDonald said he was proud of his team. "Everyone got along well and the team played hard baseball during the second half, losing some tough one run games," McDonald said. "Many of the runs scored against us this year were unearned."

Giantasio led the team in hitting with a .362 average, followed by Logan at .302, and junior Greg Sullivan at .294. Next year, the Birds will have to start all over again with only Sullivan, Derek Lewis, Mike Welker and Sean Bruno returning. McDonald will have to rely on a jayvee squad that won only four games. However, on the horizon is a modified team that went 10-4 this season.

Starfish swimmers compete in nationals

Starfish Swim Club finalists in the National Distance Meet are: Seth Rose (Boys 15 to 16-years-old, 5,000 freestyle, second place), Tali Engoltz (Girls 15 to 16-years-old, 5,000 freestyle, third place) and Tommy Roman (Boys 9 to 10-years-old, 1,000 freestyle, ninth place). The times were achieved in the Voorheesville High School Pool and were submitted for national consideration.

SPOTLIGHT ON...

Bethlehem's Kristin Ruso

By Emily Church

Bethlehem sophomore Kristin Ruso emerged from the pack this year to become one of the varsity track team's most important runners.

Ruso joined the track team as a freshman, because, she said, it was something to do.

"I guess I just thought I would try it," she said. After just two races on the jayvee she was moved up to varsity.

Ruso runs cross country, indoor and spring track. John Waldron, her outdoor coach, said this type of conditioning is very important if a runner wants to excel.

This year Ruso began making impressive strides on the indoor team. She competed in the 600-meters at states and ran the 800-meters in 2:22 at nationals in March. In outdoor track this season she broke the school record in the 400-meters with a time of 60.2 seconds.

Waldron said he looks to Ruso to set an example for the younger runners. "She is one of the most dedicated persons on the team," he said. "She always does what is asked, and sets very high goals for herself."

Ruso is looking forward to next year, and hopes to keep improving. "The coaches have helped me a lot," she said.

"Spotlight On . . ." highlights the achievements of local high school athletes.

Couples enter contest for nuptials at the Knick

By Mike Larabee

If it's been your dream to get hitched in the open expanse of a 15,000-seat sports arena, keep an eye open this summer for entry forms to A Touch of Class Marketing Consultants' semi-annual wedding expo.

The Russell Road, Colonie firm will give two couples, drawn from a pool of raffle entrants, free nuptials at the Knickerbocker Arena during its fall wedding show on Nov. 1.

At the show, A Touch of Class's third in two years, the winning couples will each get a $3,000 wedding package with the works — cake, gowns, tuxedos, photography, flowers etc. — as well as the chance to browse through booths and displays of roughly 60 wedding-oriented businesses and more than 100 craftspeople.

"It's very nice, it's very different," said Lanides, president of the four-division A Touch of Class group, which includes A Touch of Class's limousine, valet and automotive service operations as well as its marketing office.

Lanides said past winners of free weddings have been "tickled pink" at their good fortune, which permits them the honor of being married in a special chapel area, complete with red carpet and white fencing, constructed for the occasion at the Knickerbocker Arena in Albany.

"It really saves them money," she said.

The ceremonies are the highlight of the area's largest wedding expo, which brings together in one location a virtual "who's who" of the region's wedding-trade businesses. The difference between the Knick arena show and others in the region, Lanides said, is the scope of services offered by participating vendors.

The Touch of Class show has more to offer than bridal shows that focus primarily on the wedding day itself, according to Lanides. Her firm's approach, she said, has been to widen the definition of the show considerably, opening it up to businesses that cater to a couple's needs from engagement to honeymoon and beyond. "It's a showcase of ideas for planning and gift giving. We have banks there, we have attorneys, we have all kinds of bridal consultants."

"It's an expanded concept of a bridal show," she said. "What makes us unique is that we do such a different type of show with such a larger variety of business that support the whole wedding period."

Lanides said she expects expo attendance to total between 2,000 and 3,000 people. But the event isn't designed to make a profit — A Touch of Class has taken a loss on past shows — so much as give a boost to the reputations of the businesses that participate and wedding trade overall.

"We're into it to move the wedding industry, as well as to bridge the information the businesses have to the bride and her family and the groom and his family."

Lanides said there may be as many as 900 entries for the free wedding giveaway. Entry forms will be placed at locations around the area beginning in July.

Maureen and Ronald Lindell were married at the Knickerbocker Arena last year.

Guidelines give good tips for traditional toasts

By Kathleen Shapiro

May you have many children, and may they grow as mature in taste, and healthy in color, and as sought after as the contents of this glass.

-Irish wedding toast

The tradition of toasting the bride and groom on their wedding day has been around for centuries in one form or another, but there's always room for variation, as a look back at history clearly illustrates.

According to toasting expert Paul Dickson, author of the book Toasts!, some of the earliest examples of people raising their glasses to celebrate a new marriage can be traced back to 17th century Scotland.

In that era, the parents of the happy couple would arrange to meet at a point halfway between their two homes to iron out the final details of the match. If all went smoothly, they would crack open a bottle of whiskey to celebrate the upcoming nuptials.

In another event, which is similar to today's bachelor parties, the male friends of the bride and groom would also gather on middle ground for a race — either on foot or horseback — to the home of the bride. As his prize, the winner would receive a bottle of liquor to be shared with all the members of the group as they toasted the health of the bride.

Although rowdy, both traditions were considerably less painful than another popular practice at the time which called for young men to prove their devotion to a woman by stabbing themselves in the arm, mixing their blood with wine and toasting to the maid in question.

Wedding toasts can be as dramatic as smashing the glass against a wall for good luck, or as simple as a few quiet words of congratulations. No matter what the style, though, there are a few key tips to remember.

Wedding protocol normally calls for two key toasts — the first from the best man to the bridal couple and the second from the groom to his bride. A toast from the bride to her groom is optional.

Toasts from the parents and friends of the couple usually follow throughout the reception.

When proposing a toast, keep in mind the following guidelines:

- Think about what makes the bride and groom special both as individuals and a couple.

- If you could make one wish of happiness for the couple, what would it be?

- Speak to other friends and relatives of the couple to get their thoughts.

- Think about what the main message of the toast should be (love, commitment, relationships, etc.).

- Keep the message brief, usually one to three minutes.

- Touch on a specific experience you've shared with the couple.

- Practice reciting the toast before the wedding so you feel confident when the time arrives.

With a little advance planning, toasting the newlyweds can add to the success of the celebration and be a memorable experience for both the couple and their guests.

Memorable toasts last through the years

Best wishes should come from the heart, and end on an optimistic note. In his book Toasts!, author Paul Dickson has collected some of the more memorable ones used throughout the years:

- Look down you gods, and on this couple drop a blessed crown.

William Shakespeare

- May their joys be as deep as the ocean and their misfortunes as light as the foam.

- May we all live to be present at their Golden Wedding.

- May you grow old on one pillow.

Armenian wedding blessing

- May you live forever, may I never die.

- May your love be as endless as your wedding rings.

- Never above you. Never below you. Always beside you.

Walter Winchell

- May "for better or for worse" be far better than worse.

- May their joys be as bright as the morning, and their sorrows but shadows that fade in the sunlight of love.

- May your troubles all be little ones.

Irish wedding toast

- Grow old with me! The best is yet to be, the last of life for which the first is made.

Robert Browning

- Marriage is a wonderful institution, but who wants to live in an institution.

Groucho Marx

A personalized toast can add extra sparkle to any wedding reception. The key is to do your research, relax and speak from the heart. Messages can be as innovative or traditional as the individual couple.

Elaine McLain

Traditional values are in vogue

Americans are going back to the basics, turning to traditions and advocating classic values. The spendthrift consumers of the last decade have gone the way of the junk bond, turning instead into careful shoppers who now look for genuine quality and lasting value.

This trend is spreading into other aspects of life as well. Weddings, for example, have become simpler and more traditional. The large, ostentatious weddings that became the hallmark of the '80s are seen as extravagant and unnecessary. Nearly-marrieds now prefer a smaller ceremony that cuts to the heart of the matter: gathering an intimate circle of supportive celebrants to ring in the new union.

How to fit in with the return to simple things? Most couples invite the guests they want to share in their new beginning, and consider gifts secondary. But when invited, a gift is expected whether one can attend or not. The right gift for today's traditional brides and grooms will be simple and elegant, yet symbolize the wish for a prosperous future together. A perfect example is a bottle of Cognac. Few things capture the spirit of romance and celebration better than France's premium brandy.

Like an ideal relationship, Cognac is a union of different eaux-de-vie brought together for a lifetime of quality and pleasure. As dictated by centuries of tradition, young Cognacs are aged in oaken casks to gain new strength and finish. Then they are slowly blended together, each step of the process carefully nurtured to ensure a harmonious combination of different qualities. The creation of Cognac, in fact, is taken with such care and seriousness that the master blenders refer to this process an un marriage.

This symbolism makes Cognac a perfect beverage with which to celebrate a wedding, whether it's being served or given as a gift. Cognac is a spirit that speaks of elegance, distinction and romance. It's from France, after all! Toasting the bride and groom with this fine spirit can symbolize the ultimate wish for a wedding: the harmony and maturity that every couple creates together through the years.

Brides must plan ahead

If you're a working woman and a bride-to-be, you've undoubtedly discovered that gown fittings, blood tests and honeymoon arrangements can wreak havoc with an already hectic schedule. How do you cope? By using three techniques familiar to every professional woman: organize the project, delegate responsibilities, and pace yourself so you can focus on things that require your personal attention.

First, spend time with your groom-to-be making important foundational decisions such as a suitable date and the number of wedding guests. Also, decide on a certain wedding style: traditional, Victorian, contemporary or one unique to you.

Next, Devise a countdown calendar of events leading up to your big day. Include all your plans in an easy-to-follow chart form; update it regularly as you get things done. If you have access to a computer, it will be easy to input and update tasks. And while you are doing this, ask recent and even not-so-recent brides for their wedding preparation advice and suggestions.

For additional help, you can always elicit the assistance of a wedding consultant. Because of their contacts, they can save you money, time and effort.

They handle all the nitty-gritty work like renting a hall, hiring a florist, caterer and decorator, ordering paraphernalia such as napkins and match boxes, and best of all, negotiating prices. Once you give them a budget to work with, you're in the clear to spend time on the star of the wedding... you.

Preparing for your wedding and keeping up with your job at the same time can be a challenging juggling act, but by following these organizational bridal tips, you'll have a chance to enjoy the activities leading up to your special day.

Golden memories enrich couples' lives

By Susan Wheeler

In this era of frequent divorces, a couple who stays together for many years deserves special recognition.

After 50 years of marriage, one Delmar couple recently celebrated with a party for family and friends. Joe and Judy Lamprecht, who were wed on April 4, 1942, invited about 60 people to share their golden anniversary with them at Normanside Country Club.

The couple's daughter, Cynthia Wetzell of Minneapolis, wrote a skit about their meeting, courtship and first years of marriage which was performed at the celebration. "Our daughter really surprised us with that skit" Judy said.

Judy met her husband 52 years ago during their years at Syracuse University. She was working on a graduate radio workshop, and Joe was a radio engineer. He helped her out on the program, and she decided to thank him with a home-made dinner at her parents' house.

"I dated a lot, had gone out a lot, but I always knew 'he' wasn't the right one," Judy said. "When I met Joe, I thought he was kind of nuts."

The night Joe agreed to come for dinner, Judy was supposed to go out with a "hunk, a real hunk." She cancelled the date, and enjoyed the evening with Joe.

Her three sisters were there with their boyfriends. After dinner, when she and Joe turned on the record player and danced in the parlor, she just knew he was "the one."

They married during World War II, and Joe trained with the Army Air Corps. Judy recalled the years during the war as an anxious time, but she often had company. Her friends and their children would visit, and "Kids help you get acquainted," she said.

Just as Joe's unit was prepared to go overseas, the war ended.

After the war, Joe worked for the telephone company. He traveled a lot and the couple and their two children, Cynthia and Jeremy, moved about every two years. "The kids adjusted well to changes, to different schools," she said.

Today Joe drives the van for Bethlehem Senior Services and does some driving for Keeler Motor Car Company. Judy, retired from the state Education Department, is active with the Village Stage. She directs the group and does some singing and performing.

The couple has lived in Delmar for 25 years. Their daughter and son are now 44 and 48, and they have six grandchildren. These days they "keep busy, enjoy friends and enjoy each other."

Although "It's all been fun," some of Judy's favorite memories from her 50 years of marriage involve family vacations to visit her sister, brother-in-law and their four children. The couples enjoyed chatting, sometimes about her brother-in-law's job on the U.S. boarder patrol, while the kids played.

Another local couple who recently marked 50 years of marriage are Ann and Frank Rosch III of Albany. Their six sons, three of whom reside in Colonie, helped them celebrate during a special Mass at St. Patrick's Church in Albany, where they were married on May 16, 1942.

This time, however, Ann found the weather much more agreeable.

One of the their 13 grandchildren, Sean William, celebrated his first communion during the Mass,

Joe and Judy Lamprecht on their wedding day in 1942

Spring is time for anniversaries

The proliferation of springtime weddings produces a seemingly endless number of anniversaries around this time of year.

Every anniversary is special, according to the Rev. Francis DuBois of St. Ambrose Church in Latham.

"Anniversaries are a beautiful testimony and witness to what marriage is and what it can mean. It renews faith in the relationship and what it can really be."

Some years, such as the silver, ruby or golden anniversary are particularly special.

"With the state of marriage the way it is today, the celebrations of such anniversaries are often not seen. They are very, very happy occasions; occasions I wish more people would take advantage of. Society needs to see that stability."

"It's so nice to celebrate with people on these occasions," said Father DuBois, who performs ceremonies for anniversary couples to renew their marriage vows.

"Marriage is work, but enjoyable. These anniversaries say 'It makes it all worthwhile.'"

The Lamprechts celebrate their golden anniversary.

performed by his Uncle Jim, the couple's third son.

After the Mass, the couple celebrated with family and friends at the parish center with wedding cake. Later in the evening, the family, the maid of honor and the best man's widow dined at the University Club.

The Rosches met in second grade at Our Lady of Angels school, and stayed in the same class until they graduated from Albany High School in 1937. They lost touch when she went to work, and he went to Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute.

When Frank was a junior in college, he called Ann. "I was a little surprised to hear from him," she said.

Their first date started a two-year courtship which led to their marriage on a chilly early spring day.

Ann said she has so many favorite memories, especially those from the childhood of her sons, Raymond, Michael, James, Joseph, William and John. One memory, of a more difficult time, was when the first three sons left home, all within a short time of each other.

When her last son was in college, Ann returned to the business world for a while. Although she's now retired, she still works every day around the house. "A housewife never retires."

Frank, who retired about seven years ago from the family construction business, Rosch Brothers, Inc. of Colonie, now spends time golfing. The couple bowls often, and attends parties at the University Club. They also spend time with the family at their Lake Luzerne camp.

First time entertaining newlyweds—keep it simple

Newlyweds tend to "test the waters" in entertaining at home, according to a recent nationwide survey. Most newlyweds invite friends before parents and in-laws, and nearly two-thirds of all newlyweds serve "something simple" the first time they entertain.

Commissioned by Krups North America, Inc., leading manufacturer of small kitchen appliances, the "Bridal Entertaining" survey was designed to determine the "entertaining profile" of newlyweds, with a specific focus on how couples perform in the unfamiliar role of host and hostess.

Murphy's law—"If something can go wrong, it will"—the occasion of a couple's first party. Here are the "Top 5" mishap memories of the survey's respondents:

- Ran out of ice (20 percent).
- Did not have enough of, or the right kind of, serving pieces (18 percent).
- Guests arrived too early (15 percent).
- Got so frazzled, I didn't enjoy myself (14 percent).

Solutions to wedding gift-giving dilemma

Who among us hasn't suffered from "perfection syndrome" when faced with finding a perfectly suitable wedding gift? Information gathered from a survey on wedding gift shopping indicated that the search for the perfect wedding gift is difficult and a source of anxiety for many people.

According to surveys, forty-eight percent find wedding gift shopping somewhat or very difficult. Men in particular are more anxious about shopping for a wedding gift than women. Twenty-six percent of the men compared it with "doing taxes" and 21 percent with a "trip to the dentist." The major concern of 57 percent of all interviewed was buying a gift that pleases both the bride and groom. Fifty-four percent of wedding gift-givers had a fear of giving a "cheap-looking" gift, and 45 percent were concerned with the pressure of giving something having symbolic significance.

A common comment heard from those shopping for a bride and groom is "What should I get them? I'm sure they don't need a toaster!" But often the newlyweds do need a toaster, as well as other small kitchen appliances.

Considering the many pressures facing newlyweds, domestic responsibilities must compete with career demands, leaving little time for meal planning and cooking so and all-in-one-appliance. A West Bend Slow Cooker, is a gift that will allow the bride and groom to enjoy the best of meals, beautifully served, after a long day's work.

A coffeemaker with a timer will insure the availability of coffee first thing in the morning. Another gift idea, is a hot air popcorn popper for their fat free snacking.

Even those couples who already own a complete set of kitchen appliances will appreciate some updated models with the latest features.

Caught in the action...

Bride stands at cake with knife in hand.

Cut to shot of best man with drink.

Bride cuts cake.

Bride looks horrified.

Best man falls face first into cake.

It's moments like these that video cameras are made for.

Thanks to companies like A What's Happenin' Production in Guilderland, you can save the timeless classics of marriage mayhem for your grandchildren to see.

"We capture it as it happens," said Pete Pezzulo, general manager of the 10-year-old video production company.

"We're one of the few that provide a two-camera shoot and we try to make it like a documentary."

When What's Happenin' first started videotaping weddings in 1982, there were only a few other companies in the area that offered the service. But, in 1984, business picked up as the popularity of wedding videos grew.

Today, Pezzulo counts almost 20 similar businesses in the area.

"Because we've been at it so long and acquired so much equipment, we're ahead of the others."

Even though What's Happenin' is more technically advanced than some others in the area, Pezzulo's company tries not to get caught up in "the 90s kind of glitz."

In other words, they don't rely on staging or directing the action to get the perfect look.

"It's their wedding day and we shouldn't be taking up their time with that stuff."

Instead, What's Happenin' tries to capture the typical scenes, as well as the unexpected moments of the day.

"We like to get to the house real early and try to blend in. You can get a lot of commotion like women huddled around a mirror putting makeup on.

"The video comes out better when you get people who don't know they're being taped."

After taping dozens of weddings over the years, Pezzulo said the best moments usually come at the end of the reception, when a close-knit group of family and friends are still partying.

"It's the stuff that happens at the end that's the best," he said. "That's when we get people dancing on tables and doing chicken fights."

Sometimes, of course, embarrassing moments end up on tape that the bride and groom don't want saved for posterity. For instance, there was the time the best man toasted the groom by saying, "I hope this one works out better than the last time."

The bride didn't appreciate the comment about the groom's previous marriage, and What's Happenin' heeded her wishes. It was left on the cutting room floor.

Pezzulo advises the bride and groom to shop around for a video production company, watch a demo tape of each company's work and ask how they intend to put the story together.

"Make sure they don't take away from what your day should be. They should gather information as it happens and not create something that isn't supposed to be there."

You should also try to book six months ahead of time.

A one-camera shoot at What's Happenin' costs $445; a two-camera shoot costs $645. For that price, you get eight hours with the video crew and a master tape. Additional copies cost $12.50 each.

"I wouldn't be in this business if I didn't believe in it," he said. "I think it's probably as valuable, if not more, than photographs because it gives you a feel for the motion."

Bridesmaids can dress in stylish classics

This spring, there's good news in the air for every woman who's ever complained that she's "always a bridesmaid and never a bride."

According to Bride's magazine, 1990s fashions for bridesmaids are tasteful, stylish and prettier than ever. From showstopping evening gowns to updated classics, these dresses were made for celebrating.

Some favorite styles include:

Elegant: Long, body-skimming silhouettes will be making waves at weddings this year. Dresses may be strapless — tied in a soft bow at the bust with delicate lace sleeves or covered with a jacket for the ceremony.

Maids will be dressed in head-turning colors like indigo, aubergine, deep emerald and saffron. And don't forget black; this sophisticated color looks stunning alone, spectacular when contrasted with white or rich jewel tones.

Romantic: Ballerina-inspired styles have full tulle skirts and fitted corset bodices in eyelet or velvet. Or dresses may evoke the '20s, with sheer layers and drop waists, to be worn with long strands of pearls.

Choosing a theme makes your wedding unique

Colors range from palest pastels — seashell pink, morning-sky blue, celery green — to classic navy and white.

Country: Folkloric touches will enhance wedding parties. Watch for colorful embroidery, lace-up bodices, pinafores with full skirts and flouncy white petticoats.

Cotton prints, such as gingham checks and garden florals, grace pretty sundresses for summer weddings. Silhouettes may be short and simple, or float on layers of ruffles.

Flowers and their meanings

Many people believe flowers are a great way to express thoughts and feelings for one another. So, if you ever give or receive a flower as a gift, keep these meanings in mind.

- Violet: Friendship and marriage
- Rose: Think of me
- Ivy: Remembrance
- Red Chrysanthemum: Courage
- Pansy: Long life
- Rue: Regard
- Rosemary: Faithfulness
- Thyme: Hate and love
- Sage: Blushes and joy

- Daffodil: Understanding
- Sweet Marjoram: Love
- Basil: I love you

Eagles advance to Section II tourney

By Joshua Kagan

Five Bethlehem Central tennis players qualified for the Section II tournament by reaching the semifinals of the Suburban Council tournament last week.

Bethlehem's Charles Kawas, the third seed singles player, reached the semifinals by beating Niskayuna's Daryl Bielowski, 6-0, 6-1.

Dave Rosenberg and Brian Staff won their quarterfinal match, 6-1, 6-4. In the semifinals Rosenberg and Staff defeated their Guilderland opponents, 6-1, 5-7, 6-3.

"I'd be very surprised if (Rosenberg and Staff) didn't (qualify for the state tournament)," said coach Tom Straw.

Josh Bloom and Jeremy Bollam won their quarterfinal match, 6-1, 7-5, but lost their semifinal match to the second seeded team from Burnt Hills, 6-4, 6-3.

The top three finishers in the Section II tournament qualify for the state tournament, which will be held June 5-6.

Indians drop two on the diamond

By Kevin Van Derzee

The Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk varsity baseball team traveled to Mechanicville on Tuesday, May 26, and lost 10-5.

On Thursday, May 28, the Indians hosted the Cadets of Albany Academy and lost, 15-3.

Against Mechanicville, the Red Raiders jumped on the board with five runs in the first. The Indians then came back with two runs in the fourth. The Red Raiders then scored five runs in their next three innings. In Ravena's half of the fifth the Indians scored one run as Eric Powell drove in John Carras. However, Mechanicville held on for the win.

Against Academy, the Indians jumped on the board with a run in the first when Mike Burns singled and scored on a wild pitch. The Cadets then scored 10 runs in the first five innings, and five more in the seventh for a final score of 15-3.

The Indians finished 6-12 in the league and 7-15 overall.

viewpoint on addictions

Men — anger and alcohol

From childhood men are trained to be goal-oriented, productive and to do things with a purpose. While men are able to communicate about cars, sports, work and activities, they have little training or experience in communication about personal or intimate matters in their lives.

Unfortunately, some families (especially alcoholic) encourage males to keep feelings hidden and their emotions from showing with the exception of aggression and anger. These men are at high risk for chemical dependency and/or domestic violence.

In a world filled at times with tension and stress people often turn to alcohol or drugs to reduce their level of tension, however, if the stress continues the use of chemicals (alcohol/drugs) may escalate to the point of an abuse or dependency problem. For the high risk male, the potential to develop a substance abuse problem and/or a domestic violence problem continues to grow unchecked until a situation occurs, which demands attention or resolution. The most common situations are: legal involvement, family problems, job jeopardy or health related problems.

At this point a therapeutic program is needed to assist the man in changing his behavior. Key components are: alcohol/drugs; decrease isolation (group work); identify and express feelings; accept responsibility; explore shame; recognize self-talk; family of origin, attitudes towards women, and examine restricted male roles.

Our clinic has Anger Management Groups which address the issues raised in this article. For additional information please feel free to call.

Christian, Tully sprint to state meet in 200M

By Jared Beck

Bethlehem's Andy Christian and Pat Tully finished one-two in the 200-meters at the state qualifier in Johnstown on Friday, May 29. Both notched times of 22.5, giving each a birth in the state meet on Friday, June 5, in Kingston.

The runners had their work cut out for them heading into the qualifying race. Not only did they have to run against a group of sprinters from other schools, they also had to compete against each other.

Coach Dave Banas said he worked with them before the qualifier on various techniques to improve their speed.

"I told them, 'You got to run the time,'" said Banas. "It was tough going in but I was impressed with how they did."

A survey of members of the American Society of Home Inspectors has yielded a list of the most common problems to stand in the way of home sales. These points should be evaluated by sellers in an effort to facilitate sales, while buyers should check the areas mentioned as a means of preventing potential problems. Chief among these is evidence of water in the basement or crawlspace. This is often corrected by regrading the soil around the foundation or by employing waterproofing methods. The next area most commonly in need of correction is a home's electrical wiring. The electrical service should be sufficient with quality workmanship that meets code requirements.

Buyers should check also for leaky roofs and poorly-maintained or damaged heating/air conditioning systems.

Home sellers and buyers can both profit from our experience at ROBERTS REAL ESTATE. Discuss your needs with one of our professional real estate personnel, so we can help you realize your goals. Our staff knows the entire area and will gladly answer your question regarding any aspect of real estate. Our offices are located at 190 Delaware Ave., Delmar 439-9906 and at 619 New Loudon Rd., Latham (Rt. 9) 785-0981.

Bethlehem police arrest three on DWI charges

Bethlehem police recently arrested three drivers on misdemeanor charges of driving while intoxicated.

Dana R. Stefanik, 21, 302 Second St., Albany, was arrested for DWI Saturday, May 23, at 11:47 p.m. after she was stopped on Route 9W near Corning Hill Road for having only one headlight, police said.

John H. Miner Jr., 25, Deans Mill Road, West Coxsackie, was arrested for DWI Sunday, May 31, at 12:31 a.m. after he was stopped on Route 9W near the Days Inn for failure to keep right and having only one headlight, police said.

Waldemar M. Balbaton, 30, 104 Hawthorne Road, Pittsfield, Mass., was arrested for DWI Sunday, May 31, at 5:12 a.m. after he was stopped at Route 9W and the city of Albany line for failure to keep right, police said.

The subject was returned to the Bethlehem Police Department and refused to take the Breathalyzer test. He was arraigned in Bethlehem Town Court before Justice Peter Bishko and remanded to Albany County Jail in lieu of $100 bail.

Balbaton's state Department of Motor Vehicle refusal hearing was scheduled for Monday, June 1, police said.

Bellevue hosts group for new mothers

Bellevue Hospital, 2210 Troy-Schenectady Road in Schenectady, is hosting a breast-feeding support group on Tuesday, June 9, from 10 to 11 a.m.

The informal group was formed to provide support to new nursing mothers.

To register, call 346-9400.

Phiney to play fiddle

On Sunday, June 14, the Bethlehem Public Library will give Phiney Brugman an opportunity to do what she loves best — play her fiddle.

"Phiney the Phiddler," with friends Bob Cates on the hammered dulcimer and R.P. Hills on keyboards, will entertain from 1 to 4 p.m. at the eighth annual Library-Community Day Celebration. The trio will play traditional tunes from Quebec, New England and New York in their exuberant, toe-tapping style.

Brugman, who lives in the Helderberg area, originally trained on the violin in the classical style at her local public school. "I took violin lessons since the sixth grade and I loved it. I was the only violinist in the school band — they didn't know what to do with me. Then I put it away for 16 years and became a nurse in real life."

In 1987, she rediscovered the stringed instrument while attending the Old Songs Festival in Altamont. "Being originally from Holland, I was not versed in American music, and found traditional fiddle music a revelation." She began playing with a group of amateur musicians, including Robert Cates.

Cates, self-taught on the hammered dulcimer, became her mentor, Brugman said. He recently acquired a high-quality instrument from Pennsylvania which he'll try out at their upcoming performance.

The group's keyboard man is Robert P. Hills. Known as R.P. Hills, he hails from the Schoharie County hamlet of Mineral Springs, and plays a number of musical styles. He occasionally lets a bit of swing or honky-tonk filter through their traditional dance repertoire, Brugman said.

The trio, which has been performing together for about three years, gets together once a week to learn new songs and to enjoy playing.

Brugman favors the French-Canadian dance tunes from Quebec. "The New England or Down East style, with its relatively disciplined fiddle music, relates to my classical training."

She also plays with the Adirondack Fiddlers Association in Lake Luzerne.

Weather permitting, Brugman and her friends will perform outdoors in the library's entrance plaza during the Sunday afternoon event. The trio was well-received when they last played at the library.

All library day events are free and open to the public.

shift the tax burden from homeowners to other types of property owners, including farmers and businessmen.

According to estimates calculated by The Spotlight and supported by Assessor Brian Lastra, should the district adopt the act, it could mean a school tax increase in the 12 percent range for businesses, farmers who own parcels larger than 10 acres, public utilities and vacant land owners.

Sheila Powers, president of the Albany County Farm Bureau, said the bureau sent letters to farmers and non-farmers alike, encouraging them to "go and tell the school board" not to adopt homestead.

If a variety of property owners show up, she said, "It'll show how much disapproval there is in a cross-section of the community."

"I'm hopeful that (the board) will see the argument of voting against it," said Powers, adding that the act poses a risk to open thoughts on another solid waste management issue—the siting of a regional landfill by the ANSWERS Wasteshed Solid Waste Management Planning Unit. ANSWERS last summer identified nine potential landfill sites in Bethlehem and three in the town of Coeymans.

Bethlehem's current contract for waste disposal with the city of Albany does not make it an ANSWERS Wasteshed participant. In fact, the ANSWERS Wasteshed is not yet created, Smith said.

If residents vote yes on June 18, Bethlehem would have maximum leverage in negotiating if it decides to oppose the ANSWERS community.

"We have some serious misgivings about whether we want to participate in the ANSWERS Wasteshed," Smith said. "The possibility of a contract with Energy Answers Corporation is one possible way to avoid participation in the ANSWERS Wasteshed and the siting of a regional landfill in the town of Bethlehem."

Smith stressed that the ANSWERS planning unit has no authority of eminent domain in Bethlehem. Once the unit is formed, it would have authority only over its members.

space in the community and will create a need for more municipal services as more developers move in.

If homestead is adopted, she said, "Farmers won't continue to hold on to their land."

The four-page statement drafted by the chamber of commerce characterizes homestead as a "threat" to the mix of rural property and small businesses that make up Bethlehem.

"It is a wrench in the works of our traditional single tax rate system," the letter states, adding, "Many worthwhile organizations depend on the voluntary support of local businesses for their very survival" and increasing the tax

Giants' star to speak at Ravena school

Drugs and alcohol will be the topic of a drug prevention campaign talk at the Ravena Junior High School on Wednesday, June 10, from 1 to 2 p.m.

burden on businesses, "will make it difficult, if not impossible to maintain the current level of support."

By passing homestead, McCaffrey said, "You're sending a strong signal it's not a healthy environment for the business community. It keeps businesses from looking and expanding and causes some to consider whether it's better to be located in a different area."

Tonight's public hearing starts at 8 p.m.

According to Superintendent Leslie Loomis, the board will vote on the measure Wednesday, June 10, at 8:30 p.m. There will be no time allotted for public comment on the night of the vote.

Drunk Driving program.

As a professional athlete, McCaffrey will speak to students about the dangers of drug and alcohol abuse and drunk/drugged driving, as well as the importance of staying in school.

Anyone interested in learning about these topics is invited to attend. For information, call 457-6040.

being vacated by George Sussman, who decided not to run again. Happy Scherer, who was also elected to the board in the May 6 election, has already been sworn in to fill the seat Stevens held.

So, that leaves the board with three members who are tentatively leaning against adoption of homestead, and four who won't commit to a position.

Besides board president Pam Williams and Peter Trent, who have already indicated they are leaning against adoption, Lynne Lenhardt said she is having "second thoughts" about her initial support of the act.

"Initially when I learned about what homestead was, my reaction was I couldn't understand why a community wouldn't adopt it," Lenhardt said. But, after attending the town board meeting on homestead last March and receiving letters and phone calls from residents, she said she is "tending toward a reversal" of what she initially thought.

Lenhardt stressed, though, she is not ready to commit. "I'm not ready to say absolutely because I want to hear public comment from a cross-section of the community."

When pressed on where they stand on the issue, the members who are non-committal said they weren't ready to give a definitive answer.

"I'm really still on the fence," said George Sussman. "I'd like to see the impact on different groups."

The Homestead Act is designed to help compensate for the shift in taxes that came about as a result of townwide revaluation. According to estimates calculated by The Spotlight and supported by Assessor Brian Lastra, should the school district adopt the act, it could mean a school tax increase in the 12 percent range for businesses, farmers who own parcels larger than 10 acres and vacant land owners.

According to the district, it would also mean a two percent reduction in the school tax increase of 6 percent projected for next year.

The school board will hold a public hearing on homestead tonight, June 3, at 8 p.m. in the district offices on 90 Adams Place.

Shaker show offers simple elegance

By Robert Webster Jr.

The last Shakers may have disappeared from Albany County more than 50 years ago, but their spirit lives on in the simple yet elegant creations featured at the Shaker Heritage Society's Third Annual Antique Show and Sale Saturday, June 6.

The annual celebration of Shaker and Early American furniture and crafts will feature 65 exhibitors from eight states, with offerings ranging from oval boxes and chairs to pottery and quilts.

Although the show serves as a fundraiser for the society's educational programs, it also represents a chance for the society, on Albany-Shaker Road past the airport, to open its doors and let the public know what they have to offer.

"It's a fantastic way to introduce people to the site," said Diane Conroy-LaCivita, the society's executive director. "The antique show has always been very popular."

With volunteers wandering the grounds in Shaker regalia throughout the day, traveling back to a time when goods were hand-made with pride won't be difficult.

The Shaker art of chair taping, which involves the weaving together of strips of cloth or tape, will be a featured demonstration, said Conroy-LaCivita. Visitors will be encouraged to take an active part and get a little hands-on experience in the art, she said.

Members of the society and other crafters will offer additional demonstrations in areas as diverse as oval box making, broom making, herb gardening, quilting and woodworking.

Society members will be offering tours of the grounds throughout the day, Conroy-LaCivita said, which includes an introduction to the society's own orchard, the Shaker cemetery, the 1848 Meeting House and the 1856 milk and herb storage house.

For those who need still more of a "taste" of Shaker heritage, traditional Shaker foods and beverages, with an emphasis on breads and pies, will tempt visitors' tastebuds.

People may want to try to recreate

Shaker recipes at home, and what better way than to use herbs grown in the Shakers' own garden. The society's herbalist, Ralph Weller, will provide tours of the herb gardens throughout the day, and a variety of herbs are for sale.

At the heart of the celebration is the antique show, and a mixture of chairs, oval boxes, tools, pottery, art work, quilts, maps and other personal effects of Shakers will be available for perusal and purchase, she said.

Other booths will feature more contemporary items such as American country furniture, stoneware, books and various plants and flowers.

Individuals can bring personal Shaker items from home, "as long as they are not really large," to have them appraised free of charge by the society's own antique appraiser anytime during the day, said Conroy-LaCivita.

"We have a core group that comes year after year, but we are always looking for new people to introduce to the society," she said. "We wanted to create an event where we can continue to preserve the Shaker traditions."

The show opens with an early-buying preview from 8 to 10 a.m., and continues from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. Cost is $10 for the early preview, $3.50 for regular admission and $3 with any ad for the show. Children under 12 are admitted for free.

Parking is provided at Heritage Park next door to the society.

For information, call the society at 456-7890.

Women race for dough in cookie company classic

By Michael DeMasi

The company that's known for the tasty chocolate chip cookies in small brown boxes is once again giving area women the chance to run off all those calories when it sponsors its annual road race in Albany.

The Freihofer's Run for Women, an early summer ritual for 14 years, will hit the streets Saturday, June 6, at 10:15 a.m. on Madison Avenue near the state museum.

With nearly 2,000 runners pre-registered for the five kilometer race, the event is shaping up to be the biggest ever, said George Regan, director of the race.

"I'm thrilled we've got a field this strong. The race has a reputation around the country and world as being a top notch, highly competitive women's road race."

According to Regan, the race has grown in popularity over the last 10 years as more women have gotten into running.

"I think women really embraced the idea of an all-women's race. With the attention that's been paid to it, it has continued to grow over the years."

This year, the race will be taped by ESPN and shown at a later date.

From 1983 to 1988, the race was 10 kilometers long and sanctioned as a U.S. championship event. In 1989, a 5K race was added. This year, for the first time, the 10K won't be run.

"A 10K is a two-hour event minimum and we have to give the street back to Albany at 1 p.m."

Also, he said, the shorter race has consistently attracted between three and five times the number of runners that the 10K has attracted.

The top 15 finishers of the race will each receive cash prizes, ranging from $5000 for first place to $100 for the 14th and 15th place runners.

In addition, there will be bonuses for the first Adirondack Association finisher, the first TAC/USA Association finisher and the first master (over age 40) finisher. The awards ceremony will be held at 1 p.m. at the plaza.

Besides national and international runners who may be competing in the Olympics this summer in Barcelona, Spain, there will also be scores of local

SPOTLIGHT

By Martin P. Kelly

Actor marks 20 years of theater work with his performances in Wizard of Oz

 As Joel Aroeste swaggers about the stage at The Egg as the Cowardly Lion in the Theatre Institute's The Wizard of Oz, he is marking almost 20 years of performing for young audiences, and the third time he has performed in productions of this popular musical.

 Aroeste first attracted local attention as a college student at State University at Albany when he performed as Tony, the older man who attempts to woo a young woman in Frank Loesser's Most Happy Fella.

Watching that performance in 1971 at the University, one was struck by the student's ability to capture the poignancy of the character while singing the operatic melodies written by Loesser.

 When Patricia Snyder, then a faculty member at the university, put together a production of The Wizard of Oz in 1973, Aroeste was cast as the Cowardly Lion, the role Bert Lahr played in the movie version.

Since then, the burly actor has been identified with the role even though he has played almost 100 parts since that time. He was a hit when the student company travelled to Moscow in 1974. Later when the Empire State Institute for the Performing Arts was organized, he once again played the Cowardly Lion on tours of Europe and the Near East after another production of the musical was mounted in 1982.

When Snyder received Legislative approval to organize the state-funded ESIPA in 1976, Aroeste was one of the first actors she hired. Ironically, he is one of the last still funded by the state since a 75 percent cut was made in the Theatre Institute's budget.

 For Aroeste and the rest of the Theatre Institute company, this production of The Wizard of Oz may well be its final curtain unless funds are found to keep it alive. Legislation was passed to give it a special sole custody account free of State University governance. However, there was no money allotted for this account, only a ceiling of $700,000 which Snyder and her company will have to raise on their own.

Should the Legislature completely remove the State Institute from the University system, Snyder is prepared to develop working relationships with other organizations in the state in order to survive.

 The signature piece for the company—The Wizard of Oz—seems an appropriate production for this crucial period in the troupe's life. It was the piece which began the company, helped turn into an internationally-recognized unit and now is the linchpin for its survival.

 Performances of The Wizard of Oz are Friday and Saturday (June 5-6) and June 13 and 14. For more info, call 442-5373.

The King and I opens tonight as second Mac-Haydn production

Amusical which proved to be the last performed by both Yul Brynner and Gertrude Lawrence has been a popular Rodgers and Hammerstein show among theaters throughout the country.

 For MacHaydn, The King and I has been successful in several revivals during the theater's 24-year history. Tonight (Wed, June 3), another production opens a two-week run at the Chatham theater-in-the-round.

This musical when first done on Broadway with Yul Brynner and Gertrude Lawrence, captivated audiences and became a virtual career for Brynner whose bald head and imperious manner set the tone for future productions.

Lawrence became ill as the New York production continued and she had to withdraw. Her illness eventually proved fatal. Ironically, Brynner was still performing in a New York revival as his terminal illness closed in on him.

The story of the young English widow who is hired by the 19th century King of Siam to educate his wives and children, is an ingratiating one and also one which calls for a number of children in the cast.

The King and I runs through June 14. For more info, call 392-9292.

SPOTLIGHT TEENSCENE

By Erin Elizabeth Sullivan

As summer increases teens' free time, they often spend more hours on the road.

Before they enter the fast lane, teens should consider taking a defensive driving course. These courses help to reduce the number of accidents each year.

Students completing the course will receive a 10 percent reduction on their automobile collision and liability insurance premiums for three years. They will also receive a four point subtraction from the total on their driving record.

Defensive driving classes consist of six hours of classroom instruction.

E & E Defensive Driving Associates, a public training agency of the National Safety Council, will offer two three-hour sessions on Wednesdays, June 10 and 17, from 7 to 10 p.m. in Delmar.

The course will also be offered in Colonie on the following dates: Saturday, June 13, from 8:45 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.; Saturday, June 20, from 8:45 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.; and Saturday, June 27, from 9:15 a.m. to 4:15 p.m.

For specific locations, or to register for a class, call E & E at 459-9048.

Teens who are good at helping others with problems, especially younger kids, may want to participate in the "Be Somebody" program.

Established by the Cornell Cooperative Extension of Albany County, the program trains teens to present the physical, psychological and social implications of drug and alcohol abuse to younger children through games and other educational activities.

For information, call 765-3500.

Drugs and alcohol will also be the topic of a talk at the Ravena-Coeymans-Selkirk Junior High School on Wednesday, June 10, from 1 to 2 p.m.

Ed McCaffrey, offensive wide receiver for the New York Giants football team, will conduct a workshop sponsored by Governor Mario Cuomo's Youth Prevention Campaign/Athletes Against Drunk Driving program.

The workshop is open to the public. For information, call 457-6040.

Run for women

athletes. In fact, 85 percent of the field is made up of runners from the Capital District.

"In the past few years, the race has become more community oriented," said David Shufelt, public relations director for Freihofer's.

Besides the 5K race, there will also be the Community Health Walk, now in its fourth year, and the Run for Kids, celebrating its fifth year. So far, 800 have pre-registered for the health walk and 450 for the Run for Kids.

"We can take registrations right up until the day of the race," said Shufelt.

Although some walkers will be collecting pledges for non-profit groups, the walk is open to anyone.

In past years, the event was held on the Empire State Plaza. However, because of the large turnout expected this year, it will take place along the course of the 5K race from 8 to 10 a.m.

The Run for Kids begins at 11:15 a.m., as children under 5 hit the 50-meter course. That will be followed by a 50-meter race for the physically challenged and races for kids 5 years and older.

A music and mime circus will perform all day, and refreshments will be provided for runners and walkers after the events.

New BMW sport wagon model arrives in Latham

The new BMW 525i Touring, a model that combines the driving pleasure of a sports sedan with the utility of a station wagon, has arrived at Keeler Motor Car Company.

Based on the 525i sedan, the Touring uses that model's 2.5-liter dual overhead-cam six-cylinder engine teamed to a four-speed automatic transmission. This advanced powerplant produces 189 horsepower, yet delivers commendable fuel efficiency and requires virtually no periodic maintenance beyond oil, filter and sparkplug changes. Self-leveling rear suspension keeps the car level regardless of the load carried.

As on all BMWs, a Supplementary Restraint System (SRS) driver's side air bag and anti-lock brakes (ABS) are standard equipment.

Comfort and convenience features abound. Standard equipment includes 10-way power front seats, a 10-speaker sound system and climate control with individual left/right temperature adjustment. Microfilter ventilation keeps out pollen, pollutants and other irritants. On pleasant days, front and rear passengers can enjoy a unique dual-position sunroof.

At first blush, a station wagon wearing the familiar BMW badge might seem a bit out of character—both for station wagons and for BMW. Yet, the station wagon has its roots not in family transportation, but as a specialty vehicle to carry travelers. The term "station wagon" was first used to describe luxuriously appointed horse-drawn wagons employed by hotels and private estates to collect guests and VIPs from train stations.

For many people today, the mention of a station wagon might rekindle childhood memories of sitting in the rearfacing third seat of a giant Detroit-brand wagon on family vacation trips, perhaps counting out-of-state license plates to pass the time.

The suggested retail price of the model is $38,600.
