By Dev Tobin

With the cooperation of Bethlehem Chamber of Commerce members, the Bethlehem Central School District will offer high school juniors a unique apprenticeship program next year and save money at the same time.

The program, outlined before the school board at its meeting last week, results from a suggestion by board president Pamela Williams that the district might be able to provide occupational education services itself, rather than sending students to BOCES.

The district expected to spend more than $175,000 next year on BOCES occupational education, but expenses for the two-year apprenticeship program are estimated to be more than $100,000 less than that, according to Jo Ann Davies, supervisor of occupational education at the high school.

"We can offer an equivalent or better program where a mentor works with a single student in the work place, rather than a teacher working with 20 students in a class," Davies told the school board. "This is unique. We're at the beginning of a national initiative."

Davies has been working with a committee of school staff and local

Dems think miracle possible

By Mel Hyman

Bethlehem Democrats plan on announcing their slate of candidates for townwide office next month, and with three seats up for grabs on the town board, they believe a miracle is not beyond their grasp.

That miracle, of course, would be gaining majority control of the five-member board although town Democratic Chairman Matt Clyne doesn't foresee any radical changes in local government even if lightning did strike.

Clyne predicts that voters will see a youthful lineup of Democrats this fall with at least one of the candidates expected to be a woman.

More important is that it will be a

Cable chief plans to review finances

By Mel Hyman

Bethlehem Comptroller Judith Kehoe, the town's cable TV administrator, plans to review the financial reports of A-R Cable Services Inc. to determine if the company is making excessive profits.

Kehoe will then report back to the town board, which last week signaled its intention to get tough with the Rensselaer County-based firm over monthly rates. The town board asked Kehoe to send a letter to A-R expressing concern over monthly cable TV bills considered to be "excessive."

"I want to get my hands on those (reports) quickly because that's going to affect the approach

I take in the letter," Kehoe said.

The board also wants to know why the company's rates for the scaled-down "broadcast basic service" seem to be out of line with what other cable firms in the area charge.

The town board is requesting that A-R "mitigate" its

Resident questions canvasser's tactics

By Mel Hyman

Canvassers trying to raise money for an area environmental group have allegedly been spreading misinformation about prospects for siting an ash dump in the Selkirk area.

Bethlehem Public Works Commissioner Bruce Secor said he received a call from a lifelong resident of the town last week complaining that scare tactics were being used by a canvasser going door-to-door along Route 396.

"They said there were raising money because the Beaver Dam Road area had been selected as the site for a dump for toxic ash. I don't want anyone to get the wrong impression.

"I don't care if they said dump, incinerator or nuclear waste site," he continued. "It's still wrong. They're going to get the people in Selkirk worked up in a lather for no reason at all."

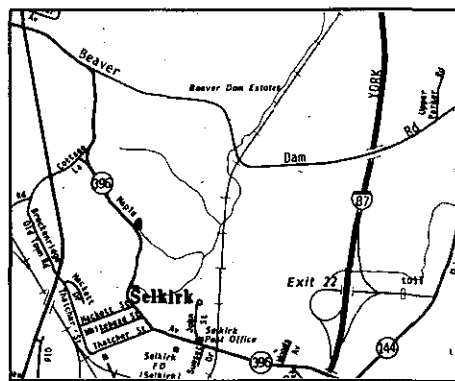

Early in 1992 the City of Albany released a list of 15 potential sites - nine of them in Bethlehem - for a regional landfill for ash and nonrecyclables left over after the incineration of garbage at the ANSWERS plant.

That list was narrowed down to three sites last summer, including one in Bethlehem, but the site selection process is on indefinite hold pending the sale of the ANSWERS plant to a private firm.

Informed sources told The Spotlight in December that if a regional landfill was to be built, the location would be in the Town of Coeymans and not Bethlehem.

"Most of these people are goody two-shoes who will say whatever it takes to raise money," remarked Supervisor Kenneth Ringler. The town has fought the

BC board members to run again

The three Bethlehem Central School District school board members up for re-election this year are all running.

At the end of last week's budget workshop, board president Pamela Williams and members Happy Scherer and Peter Trent, passed around nominating petitions.

Anyone interested in running for school board can pick up petitions at the district office at 90 Adams Place between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. on weekdays.

To qualify for the ballot, a candidate must return the petitions with at least 67 signatures of district residents by the close of business on Monday, April 5. The budget and school board vote is set for Wednesday, May 5.

Scherer was elected last year to serve the remaining year of Sheila Fuller's term. Fuller resigned after she was elected to the town board.

School board positions are unpaid, and carry three-year terms.

Reed resigns from zoning board

County Legislator Robin Reed has resigned her position on the Bethlehem Zoning Board of Appeals.

Reed cited the possibility of a conflict of interest between her new job with the county and her job with the town. It will be up to the town board to fill the vacancy created on the seven-member board.

ZBA Chairman Charles Fritts praised Reed for her competence, hard work and diligence in dealing with zoning matters. "We're going to miss her very much. She was a good person."

ZBA members serve a five-year term and the new appointee will serve out the remainder of Reed's term at an annual remuneration of $3,111.

3 charged with DWI

It was a busy time for Bethlehem police last Saturday as they arrested three people during the early morning hours for driving while intoxicated.

Thomas J. Hunt, 39, of 2203 Main St., Rensselaerville, was stopped at about 1:15 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 27, in front of Delaware Plaza for failure to keep right, police said. He was charged with DWI and released pending a scheduled appearance in town court.

Robert J. Gensel, 29, of Westerlo, was stopped at about 3:50 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 27, near Delaware and Cherry avenues for failure to keep right and insufficient taillights, police said.

He was also charged with DWI and released pending a scheduled appearance in town court.

Luigi A. Cubello, 28, of Unionville Road, Feura Bush, was stopped at about 5:05 a.m. Saturday, Feb. 27, for failing to obey a stop sign at Bell Crossing Road, police said.

He was also charged with failure to keep right and DWI. He was released pending a March 16 appearance in town court.

Parents hear stories of DWI devastation

By Dev Tobin

Students at Bethlehem Central High School got the message in November, and parents got a chance to hear it Thursday — drunk driving kills and leaves deep, emotional scars on the families left behind.

The first-ever general audience victim impact panel in the area resulted from the deaths of two local high school students in 1992 — Erin Cox of BCHS and David Bartholomew of Voorheesville — in drunk driving crashes.

The panel, organized by the Albany County Sheriff's Stop-DWI program, in the past presented its message mostly to small groups of DWI offenders.

"The first panel, in fact, was in Bethlehem in 1989," said Denis Foley, Stop-DWI director.

The turnout of more than 200 people, including middle school students and parents, exceeded Foley's expectations.

"It went fantastic because of such strong community support," he said.

During the 90-minute program, the audience heard the heart-wrenching details of how a DWI death affects family members from Nicole Cox (Erin's sister), Barbara Kipp (David Bartholomew's mother), Betty Martin of Glenmont (whose daughter Michelle was killed in 1982 on Route 85), and Anna Russo of Colonie (whose son and niece were killed by a drunk driver on Central Avenue). They also heard Bethlehem Police Detective John Cox choke back tears as he recalled having to tell parents that their child is dead.

Christine Carson of Delmar, a BCHS math teacher, attended part of the panel for students and "was very impressed with what I heard. I wanted my children to hear it."

The intense emotion of the evening will have an effect on her three children, ages 8, 11 and 13, who attended the panel, she hopes.

"My children now know how I feel — they watched me cry," she said. "You just hope that if you expose them to this, they will think twice" about driving drunk or riding with a drunk.

Diane Alston of Delmar said the panel "had a tremendous impact. Quite honestly, I'm not the same person after attending."

The mother of a sixth-grader, Alston said the panel "should be done at every high school in the area, and for the older kids in middle school."

Nancy Rice of Delmar "went because I have teenage children and I'm very concerned about the drinking problem in Bethlehem."

Her son had attended the high school program, so she brought her middle school daughter to Thursday's panel.

"She felt very sad, especially when one mother described how her child's friends responded to the death," Rice said.

"It was difficult for them (the relatives) to do, and for us to listen to, but it's worth it if it saves a life," Rice concluded.

Town board awards well project contract

The Florida Gulf Construction Co. Monday was awarded a $629,000 contract for the installation of production/test wells for Bethlehem's new water treatment plant.

Florida Gulf, which has a construction office on Route 144 in Selkirk, was the lowest of 10 bidders for the contract. Once the contract has been signed and a performance bond posted, work will begin on the $10 million project. The wells are located on land bordering the Hudson River, just south of Henry Hudson Park off Route 144.

The town board also approved $25,000 for the acquisition of easements from Ted and Sally Jennings, who own land adjacent to the water treatment facility.

Most of the water is expected to go toward operation of the new cogeneration power plant at the GE Plastics division in Selkirk.

Snowy sequence squeezes highway department budget

By Mel Hyman

Bethlehem Highway Superintendent Gregg Sagendorph has his fingers crossed.

If we can escape the next couple of months without another onslaught of snow, then the $125,000 that Bethlehem has budgeted for overtime in the highway department this year could suffice. To date, about 70 percent of the allocated overtime has been used up.

"We're going to monitor (the overtime)," Sagendorph said. "It all depends on what March holds in store and what happens in November and December."

"Right now we're pretty much back to our normal 40 hour week," he said. "We've got most of the sidewalks opened up and the streets widened."

Highway workers have begun clearing street corners in town where mountainous snowbanks have cut down on sight line distance for motorists.

In the coming week, the department will focus on the hundreds of catch basins in town. "Once the snow starts melting, if the storm sewers are blocked then the water stays in the street and freezes over," he said.

BC educators to change middle school schedule

By Dev Tobin

After 18 months of work, a committee of Bethlehem Central Middle School staff and parents has recommended restructuring the school's schedule to increase class time 25 percent.

The new schedule would replace the current nine 36-minute periods of the school day with eight periods — seven 45-minute class periods and one 55-minute lunch/extra help period.

"Students need time to develop an idea, and they often don't have that with 36 minutes," Gail Sobolewski, an eighth-grade math teacher, told the school board last week. "Also, there's too much switching gears in a nine-period day."

"I see this as a big benefit, particularly the extra help in the middle of the day, instead of after school," said Ann Kohler, a parent member of the restructuring committee.

The new schedule will also adjust the middle school curriculum slightly to accommodate the loss of one period. In sixth-grade, the library/reading period will be eliminated, and in seventh and eighth-grades, physical education will go from every day to every other day.

Middle School Principal Fred Burdick noted that the proposed new schedule is "just the first phase, we have a lot more work to do."

The restructuring plan met with unanimous approval from the board.

"I have an entering sixth-grader, and I'm really thrilled with this," said board member Happy Scherer.

The board also reviewed the special education and BOCES portions of the budget for 1993-94 at Wednesday's meeting.

Superintendent Leslie Loomis noted that the budget for special education programs is expected to grow 20 percent.

"We are working to determine to what extent costs are controllable," Loomis told the board. "We want to work to see if we can identify additional savings while providing comparable or better programs."

Special education and BOCES expenditures grew more than 10 percent over what was budgeted for this school year, as the district had to provide both for more students and for students with more severe needs, Loomis said.

The district will focus more on early intervention "so the youngest students come to us better prepared," Loomis added.

The 1993-94 budget calls for an additional resource room teacher to handle the increased enrollment, and proposes savings by replacing the BOCES Occupational Education program with the Bethlehem Apprenticeship Program (see story on page 1) and by dropping the BOCES film library service.

Assistant Superintendent Judith Wooster noted that the per-unit cost of using the BOCES library was more than $40, and recommended that the district spend $10,000 buying its own materials, instead of the $43,267 that the BOCES library would cost next year.

Driver leads deputies on 20-mile chase

Sheriff's deputies from the Voorheesville patrol got more than they expected when they tried to pull over a car for failing to yield at a stop sign Friday, Feb. 26, on Route 2 in Berne at around 6:20 p.m.

Melissa Bikowicz, 18, of Scotia, refused to pull over and led deputies on a 20-mile chase down Route 443 through New Scotland and into Bethlehem, where she finally stopped, according to Sgt. Craig Zarriello.

Bikowicz had been reported missing from a Division for Youth facility earlier in the day, and allegedly went to her parents' house and took one of their cars while they were out of town.

Along the way, police said Bikowicz tried to hit two patrol cars that were involved in the chase.

Bikowicz faces several vehicle and traffic charges, and misdemeanor charges of unauthorized use of a motor vehicle and two charges of second-degree reckless endangerment.

She was arraigned in Berne Town Court and sent to Albany County Jail in lieu of $1,000 bail.

On Monday, Feb. 22, at about 12:15 a.m., deputies arrested an East Berne man for driving while intoxicated after the car he was driving got stuck in a snowbank on the Lower Letter S in New Scotland.

John Chewins, 25, failed field sobriety tests and was also issued several traffic tickets, police said. He is due in New Scotland Town Court March 4.

Pribilofs like landing on moon

Slingerlands women to discuss Alaskan trip

By Mel Hyman

For Meryl Norek and Jane Kadish of Slingerlands, arriving on St. Paul's Island was a little like landing on the moon. When these intrepid travelers decided to go off the beaten path on a 10-day journey to Alaska last summer, they ended up in the Pribilof Islands, about as remote and isolated a human outpost as you can get. St. Paul's Island is the largest of five islands that comprise the Pribilofs.

The landscape of St. Paul's Island, located about midway between Russia and Alaska, that reminded Norek of a lunar horizon—barren, spongy terrain with no trees.

During the spring and summer, when there is 21 hours of sunlight, hundreds of varieties of flowering and nonflowering plants emerge.

Also during the summer, hundreds of thousands of northern fur seals lounge on the shore looking for compatible mates. It is the largest accumulation of mammals in one place on earth.

Protected by international and federal laws after their numbers were severely reduced by poachers, the seals are not the only wondrous creatures around. More than 200 species of birds inhabit the cliffs plus there are smatterings of reindeer and arctic foxes.

The fur seals do not like strangers, especially when their mating ritual is under way. They can let out a ferocious bark if you get under their skin, or even close to it.

"They're very territorial," Norek said. Even at 600 pounds for some of the males, they can "move pretty fast when they get their slippers going."

Only about 650 people live on St. Paul's Island year 'round. And who'd want to? Norek asks. Most of the time it's cloudy, foggy, windy and cool. Just the way the seals like it apparently.

Of the 30 people who flew into the island, Norek says the vast majority were photographers and birdwatchers. It's not exactly a tourist hot spot since the schedule of flights in and out is erratic.

Kadish's husband took some slides of the Pribilofs, which will be shown tonight, March 3, starting at 7:30 p.m. in the Bethlehem Public Library.

Voorheesville educators face fact of tough budget realities

By Dev Tobin

Last year, the Voorheesville school board was able to hold the line on spending, but this year, growing enrollment will force either a spending hike or a drastic increase in class size.

The combined impact of the recommended increase in spending, about 7 percent, and an expected cut in state aid leave the district with a budget gap of more than $1 million to be filled by spending cuts and property tax increases, Superintendent Alan McCartney told the board at Monday's budget workshop.

"We're at a point where we will soon have to make decisions about program and class size that will not be easy," McCartney said.

McCartney reviewed the anticipated elementary enrollment for next year, with staffing levels designed to keep class size at 25 or under.

Those levels will require the addition of one first-grade teacher, a half-time kindergarten teacher, and a half-time resource room teacher.

He noted that he did not recommend going to a full-time kindergarten next year at a cost of between $60,000 and $100,000.

The district's technology program will not take "a giant leap

"We will try to do the best job we can to preserve the best possible program for kids."

The specifics on how the budget gap will be filled, and the proposed property tax increase, will be provided at Monday's regular school board meeting at 7:15

He said he was looking at all aspects of district spending and hoped to find ways to cut in insurance, teachers' retirement and transportation.

Matters of Opinion

FDR and WJC

Sixty years ago tomorrow one of the corners of American history was reached and turned. It was the inauguration of Franklin D. Roosevelt as President, and as significant as that event was, another aspect of the occasion must rank as equally vital to the people of that time: the new President's message to "a tortured and bewildered people" as they have been aptly described.

"The only thing we have to fear is fear itself" is a familiar byword from that speech—but an even more dramatic phrase followed: "Nameless, unreasoning, unjustified terror." And it was preceded by a firm reassurance: "This great nation will endure as it has endured, will revive and will prosper."

In words that have genuine meaning for a new President in 1993, President Roosevelt said:

"The people of the United States . . . have registered a mandate that they want direct, vigorous action. They have asked for discipline and direction under leadership. They have made me the present instrument of their wishes. In the spirit of the gift, I take it."

The Whalen decade

Regardless of how much justifiable pride residents of outlying towns and villages take in our own communities, it is inescapably true that we are, in many ways, satellites of a major center of business, government, and culture. For good or ill, the leadership of such a center radiates into the lives and awareness of all of us.

For a decade, Albany has had the benefit of the enlightened stewardship of Thomas M. Whalen III as its mayor, with resulting "efficiency and effectiveness of its government," as he has recently said, and great advances in the "pride, performance, and progress" of the city and its people.

Fortunately, not only the achievements but the atmosphere in the area's hub have

Though it was a fortnight ahead of this anniversary, President Clinton's visit to the Roosevelt home and tomb was most appropriate and truly timely. It can be construed as more than symbolic public relations or gilding by association. Inspiration and example must necessarily be the strongest of guidelines for any leader.

Mr. Clinton—the first President to have been born after the Roosevelt administration—was chosen, likewise, by a people who wanted direct, vigorous action.

Of him and his administration the parallelism might be said to continue through the words of the 1930s commentator who remarked: "If only the performance measures up to the promise!"

been transmitted in many ways throughout that area. In that spirit, he has noted "the absolute necessity of working cooperatively with other local governments and—yes—with other political parties."

Tom Whalen's decade has been a good one in many respects—and superb in some, particularly in raising the spirit of the community and its expectations while lowering the prior level of cynicism about government and public service.

Albany is a quite different city than it was when he received the reins in 1983. He deserves recognition and appreciation for his zestfully determined and uncompromising vision and leadership as he now prepares to relinquish those reins, having set a lofty standard for his successors.

A new civil rights task?

Segregation imposed for ethnic or national background reasons has, long since, been recognized as the disgrace which it is. Even our language has adapted to the concept of not only justice but dignity and respect for all persons.

Barriers have fallen, properly and permanently. It is not merely incorrect politically to deal unfairly with any individual or group—it is widely recognized as degrading for both the perpetrator and the target of such prejudicial behavior. In his first days in office, President Clinton chose a variety of means to emphasize his belief in the oneness of Americans. And attitudes are molded and moderated—sometimes too slowly—in keeping with such precepts and teaching.

A few exceptions are visible. While laws and changing customs gradually protect and enhance the rights and status of females, for instance, or handicapped—"challenged"—individuals, there remain some Americans for whom handy but thoughtless labels are demeaning and limiting.

"Old" is one of these labels. While ostensibly protected from discrimination by "human rights" laws, persons "of a certain age" are too likely to be improperly categorized as incapable, inflexible, stagnant of mind and outlook, slow, vulnerable—and now, expensive.

This latter attitude creeps to the surface in many insidious ways. An opinion column published recently by an editor of a local daily newspaper railed against people—"old" people—who expect too much and cost too much to maintain decently in our competitive society. It is possible to discern this kind of grumbling tolerance (or intolerance) frequently in comments suggestive of a new class warfare in our country: "young" versus "old." The young—and inexperienced—appear to believe they're being cheated by prolonged existence of too many of their forebears. Throw the weak from the lifeboat! Leave the stragglers to the wolves!

Posted speed limits need more monitoring

Editor, The Spotlight:

I am concerned about the lack of enforcement of the speed limit on residential streets in Delmar.

I live on Murray Avenue, where the speed limit is posted as 30-mph. Cars using Murray as access to the bypass rarely travel slower than 40. There are children who live on this street or travel alongside the road going to and coming from Hamagrael.

In addition, it is hazardous to back out of a driveway because cars are approaching at such a fast speed. I can't help wondering why the Police Department seems to be so unconcerned about cars exceeding speed limits on a regular basis.

Vox Pop

My neighbor's cat was killed by a car recently. I wonder if the death or injury of a child will be the impetus to provide closer monitoring and enforcement of the stated speed limits.

Icy Delmar sidewalks need Albany treatment

Editor, The Spotlight:

More than a week after a major snowstorm, the sidewalks of Delmar are once again impassable. They are covered with a thick layer of hard-packed snow or solid ice, topped with glassy-smooth ice, repeatedly thawed and frozen. They are truly hazardous to pedestrians. I prefer to take my chances with traffic in the streets—even Delaware Avenue—rather than walk on the sidewalks.

The origin of the icy sidewalks is the town's sidewalk plow, which leaves in its wake a layer of firmly packed snow that rapidly turns to ice. The town's plowing of the sidewalks leads to the widespread, mistaken belief of property-owners that they have no responsibility for public sidewalks on their property.

In Albany, the vast majority of the sidewalks are clear and dry. Albany has no sidewalk plow. The clean sidewalks are achieved by a quite different mechanism: any pedestrian can call City Hall to complain about a hazardous sidewalk; the city will dispatch a crew to clear it. A lien is placed against the property for service. The going rate is $50-100 per hour. This method is very effective.

I can suggest two possibilities for Bethlehem to improve its sidewalks in the winter. The first, obvious solution is to add a salt-spreader to the back of the sidewalk plow. Spreading a little salt would eventually melt the ice; in a week or so the sidewalks would be clear.

The second solution is to retire the sidewalk plow, remind property-owners of their legal obligation to maintain their public sidewalks in a usable condition, and pass and enforce an ordinance similar to Albany's.

Word for the week

Vet: This recently over-used word, as in "Zoe was not adequately vetted," means to examine, investigate, or evaluate in a thorough or expert way. It may relate to veterinarian, for in another sense as a colloquialism vet means to examine or treat as a veterinarian does.

Your Opinion Matters

Stale notes off a well-worn cuff

One night not long ago, while listening to the MacNeil/Lehrer News Hour (a harmless occupation while scraping the dinner dishes), I heard a familiar name mentioned and turned to glance at the TV screen. That latter kind of attention rarely is necessary during the program because watching the same old people talk is not a rewarding activity.

The name mentioned was that of Joe Nicholson, who was a participant in the program. Inasmuch as I gave up looking at The Post, as well, several years ago I wasn't familiar with its writers.

Mr. Nicholson, a man in his late forties, was someone that I could relate to easily, however. I happen to know his age and even his birth date. There is a reason.

This Joe Nicholson was born on the day that I went to work for his father, who was what you might call the original Joe Nicholson. I had, in fact, showed up for work while Nic—as he was known—was on what would be called today "family leave." The occasion, of course, was the arrival of the individual who is now the aging Post reporter.

The original Joe Nicholson was a city editor of the old school—very competitive, very jealous of being first and best, very exacting with his staff. I was a reporter from out of town, an unknown quantity.

A considerable part of the staff was seen around the office only on payday, if then. They were the district men, covering beats from which they called in their stories. But there was a real—if distant—camaraderie; they were professionals at their respective assignments.

Uncle Dudley

Speed was one of the absolute essentials; I can remember one of the rewrite men, George Quint, typing with a telephone headset clamped to his ears, shouting "Faster! Faster!" at the upright phone a couple of feet from his face. One Wednesday—it has to have been a Wednesday because it was a matinee day—a report of a fire at the Shubert Theater came over the police Teletype amid many bells. Nic dispatched me to the scene, a few blocks distant. I took in the facts soon enough, stepped into a nearby booth, dictated the story, and walked back to the shop. Shortly, Nic saw me sitting there and reacted in dismay: "I told you to get over to that theater!" The story had been handled by one of his assistants—Bill Fagan or Max Buckingham or Eddie Williams or Johnny Loofbourrow—while Nic was busy with some other chore. Next day the story began: "Frank Fay, the old asbestos, stood on the stage at the Shubert and calmed the audience as smoke seeped into the theater..." Frank, whom you may remember better as one of Barbara Stanwyck's husbands, had the big role in the original production of "Harvey."

You'll have noticed, perhaps, my unusual spelling of Nic's name. All our stories had to bear a three-letter identifying label of everyone who handled it. So Nick was NIC. Some others used parts of their name, but sometimes initials were used: Gardiner Mulvaney was MUL and Frank Murphy was FJM.

One of the other younger reporters—he moved on rather soon—was Shelby Foote, who became the fine southern novelist and Civil War authority. Tom O'Hara, John's brother, was on the staff at the time.

A long epic poem dramatizing the idiosyncrasies of the staff was written, over a period of a few nights, by several contributors. I dearly wish that I had retained a copy of it. The only lines that I can still recall went something like this:

"... when from across the room came the raucous voice of Joseph H. Nicholson..."

*****

Nic and I kept in touch fitfully for at least twenty years thereafter. The last contact I can remember was about a year after Frank Murphy died and a couple of years before Gardiner Mulvaney died. I've read the obits of many of the members of that group of men and women, but I've never seen an obituary for Joe Nicholson. All this was a long time ago, and if I were to write a new beginning for this column it would probably be something bright about the passage of time.

Money: new players, changed rules

The topic may well not be of interest to just anyone, but a title such as "How to Finance Anything" is certain to catch the eye of plenty of people who happen to be shopping for capital sources.

The article is the "cover story" in the current issue of "Inc.," which describes itself as "The magazine for growing companies."

Bruce G. Posner, an Albanian who now is a senior writer on the magazine's staff, had written a quite comprehensive "guide to the new players and changed rules in the money-raising game."

There's "a new cast of characters" replacing the deal-makers of the 1980s when money was relatively easy to come by, the author points out, and "The sooner you understand who they are and what they're looking for, the better off you'll be."

The article is divided into three principal segments: Start-up money, money to grow on, and "exit money." Special concerns for the business entrepreneur who is looking for capital are appropriately emphasized in each of the three. In the first, for example, Mr. Posner notes that "One myth dies especially hard—that commercial bankers have a fundamental interest in making loans to start-up businesses. ... When the chips are down, you won't find many of them prepared to make business loans to companies younger than three or four years old. The loans banks do make (ostensibly to companies) are almost always heavily collateralized by homes and other personal assets."

Advice for people who want to sell a business is generally dampening: The peak period for selling was 1987 and 1988, and when banks changed their tune and the economy sputtered, the seller's market fizzled. The good news now is that the market has stabilized and prices are up a bit from where they had sunk. "Most good companies should be able to attract at least two serious bidders," a private investment company's president is quoted. Yet with many banks still out of the market, financing remains tricky.

Adding to the readability and impact of this specialized article are some eight pointed sidebars, such as "The money raiser's bookshelf," "A glossary of money terms," and "Finding the right investor." The one that interested me more, however, was "The five questions every money source asks." Here, the counsel is: "Because the competition for financing is so fierce, don't even think about approaching lenders or investors unless you've done your homework." The basic questions on which all lenders or investors will want answers are described as:

How much money do you need? ("Instead of being coy, it's important to be specific.") What do you plan to use it for? How will this money improve the business? How are you going to pay it back? ("How can you pay off the loan from cash flow?") If Plan A doesn't work, what's your backup plan?

This nine-page article (including effective graphics and art) is written in a thoroughly comprehensible style, which is all to the good, and seems to be an editorial hallmark of "Inc."

*****

Perhaps enough has been said and written about Zoe and Kimba, but I will take one last shot by recommending a very good article by John Taylor in the Feb. 22 issue of "New York" magazine. It is exhaustive, objective, and fair, and brings up several aspects of the Judge Wood matter which deserve scrutiny. One of its revelations is the complications created by a "New York Times" reporter who wrote an inept story on developments.

'Time for a new leader; I have had my turn.'

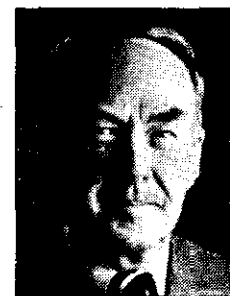

The following is the text of Mayor Whalen's announcement on March 1 of his intent to retire from office at the end of 1993.

By Mayor Thomas M. Whalen, III

I have decided not to be a candidate for Mayor this coming November. This has been a decision that has been a long time in the making and certainly is one of the most difficult decisions I have ever made.

Point of View

I would be less than honest if I did not tell you that I have real doubts about saying no to another four-year term. But I think deep down that it is the right decision for me and my family and for the people of Albany. For I do believe that, as much as I hate leaving that corner office over there, it is time to have new leadership here in this capital city come Jan. 1, 1994.

With change comes renewal of purpose and, hopefully, a re-energizing of the community-at-large so that the challenges of the next decade will be met and dealt with successfully.

By the end of this year, I will have served as Mayor for almost 11 years. I have a deep-seated belief that these elected positions in local government should not be considered long-term or permanent. I sometimes think that elected officials, the longer they hold office, start to feel a proprietary interest in the position—and I don't want that to happen to me.

As many of you might suspect, just from the sheer energy and enthusiasm I have given to being Mayor for these 10 years, it is a job I love. I love this city and the dedicated men and women with whom I work. So leaving this position, to which I have given the vast majority of my waking hours for a decade, has caused me serious and long reflection.

I have a certain anxiety-level now as I make the announcement. I'm anxious because I don't know what I will be doing a year from now, and although I have no definite plans, I feel confident about my future. I'm also anxious and concerned about the future of the city and who will lead the city as its next Mayor.

'Elected positions in local government should not be considered long-term or permanent. (Some) elected officials, the longer they hold office, start to feel a proprietary interest in the position.'

But I feel very strongly that we have put in place the good government policies and procedures which, if followed, will continue to move Albany forward. Everything is in place for my successor, and I believe the transition can be a smooth one.

I have had my turn as a citizen. It is now time for other citizens to come forward and present themselves and their credentials to the electorate.

Although it may sound antiquated, I have always subscribed to the theory of our Founding Fathers who believed that those called to public service should stay only as long as needed... That the farmer would lay down his plow, the teacher his books of learning, the doctor his stethoscope, and—like me—the lawyer his law books, and come and partake in the affairs of government and after making their contribution, they would return each to their chosen vocation. Then others would come forward and do the same in an on-going process of participatory government.

Just what will it take for me or someone else to lead Albany into the next century? In my opinion, it must be someone who:

- Understands how city government works and acknowledges that decisions must be made based on the common good and not the concerns of special interest groups;
- A person who can continue the good rapport we have established with our Governor, the Legislature, Federal officials, Washington contacts, and other mayors from around the country;
- A person who can commit to an active role in regionalization and who recognizes the absolute necessity of working cooperatively with other local governments and... yes... with other political parties;

□ WHALEN/page 8

Matters of Opinion

Whalen

• A person who recognizes the important role that the business community plays in the economic well-being of the city and the quality of life that we all enjoy;

• A person who will play an active role in promoting Albany as a leading city in our new global economy and, to that end, will reach out to foreign dignitaries and officials to establish international alliances that bring economic, cultural and educational benefits to our people.

• A person who can energize the spirit of all the people of the city, much the way we all did in 1986 when we celebrated our tricentennial and again last year when we celebrated our status as an All-America City.

I know that I have these qualities, and I am sure that others in our community are equally qualified to govern, and who are willing to make the personal commitment to serve, and who have a vision to guide our city towards the 21st century.

One thing is for sure, whether I am Mayor or some other man or woman; we cannot let the progress we have attained since 1983 disintegrate. We cannot let political considerations permeate the decision-making process. We cannot jeopardize through partisan politics the cooperative spirit which has made us an All-America City.

Let me just quickly comment on one matter and this will be all of the comment I will make on the subject. My decision not to run is independent of, and not connected to, my being an applicant for an appointment as a Federal judge. As I have stated in the past, I plan to follow the process that has been established by Senator Moynihan. I would consider it a high honor to hold such a position. I would ask the media to please respect the sensitivity of that process at this point and accept this as my statement on the subject.

By my calculations, we have exactly ten months to go in this administration and I plan to be very active and very involved in the governance of this city for the rest of the year. We still have major responsibilities, not the least of which will be the formulation and presentation of the 1994 city budget.

Many of you in this room have worked alongside of me to help solve major urban problems. Together we have made this city strong—fiscally, culturally, racially, and economically. Together we have invested a great deal to improve our city for all of our people. And our successes are evident. Let me paraphrase that great 19th century English architect, Christopher Wren: "Should you seek an administration's legacy . . . look around you." Literally, one needs to look no further than this shiny rotunda, once dingy and weary, and now a place for music, receptions, and announcements from morning until night. One can move along the downtown corridor to see the hanging flower baskets in spring and summer and the decorations for the holidays. Then on to our restoration of Washington Park and its new amphitheater and to exciting Academy Park with its new fountain, gardens and statuary. A new golf course, three new firehouses, a new public works building, three new public parks, two new libraries, and greatly expanded recreational and athletic facilities are but a short list of projects that demonstrate the attention we have given to the quality of life aspects of the Albany community.

But it hasn't been just bricks and mortar, because our prime focus has been to enhance the livability of our people in a variety of ways: Hundreds of new units of affordable housing, major financial and logistical support for dozens of arts organizations, increased facilities for the homeless and our disadvantaged populations; the Albany Plan for our inner-city youth, and direct involvement in city programs by our neighborhood associations.

'Our prime focus has been to enhance the livability of our people in a variety of ways'

And who can fail to recognize the exciting and stimulating new events on Albany's annual calendar: First Night, the Empire State Regatta, Park Playhouse, the City Charter Celebration, the Governor Dongan Dinner, and much more.

I am extremely proud of the men and women that I have been privileged to work with here in City Hall. Together we have professionalized city government service, and any future Mayor would be hard-pressed to find a team of department heads who are as talented, energetic, and committed as the staff people here now. The record shows that we have made historic strides in the number of women and minorities now working for the city, and many of those as heads of Departments, such as Chief of Police, City Treasurer, City Engineer, Director of Municipal Policy, Director of Volunteers, and Director of Personnel, to name just a few.

If I and this administration have a legacy, I would like it to be the way we have brought the entire community together to confront challenges and to take risks in the hope and expectation that we could make meaningful contributions to our quality of life. I take pride in the fact that we have been over-achievers in this regard.

Knowing all we have to accomplish in the next ten months, this cannot be considered as a farewell speech. But I must take this opportunity to thank my family and particularly my wife, Denis, who tried her best to make sure I kept the same hat size during my tenure; to those extraordinary people with whom I work, particularly my personal staff and to the city employees who, through their daily tasks, make me look good; to all the friends and supporters who have made this roller-coaster ride mostly enjoyable; to the people of Albany, every last one of the 101,092—you have made Albany what it is: An All America City.

'We brought the entire community together to confront challenges and to take risks'

To all of you, thank you for giving me an opportunity that few people ever have.

Bethlehem Recycling Corner

By Sharon Fisher, town recycling coordinator

Paint is not hazardous if handled and disposed of properly.

Here are some tips to make painting in the home easier:

If stopping for less than two hours while using latex paint, put a wet cloth over the paint pan, roller and/or brush. Since latex is water based, moisture keeps it pliable. This technique prevents cleaning the equipment more often than necessary.

If a job entails several days with the same color oil paint, wrap wax paper or a plastic bag around the brush and put it in the freezer between work sessions. When ready to reuse, it will need a few minutes to thaw out.

If the brush is clogged, moisten a cloth or paper towel with paint thinner and wipe the bristles. That saves pouring thinner into a can several times during the job and having a large amount of used contaminants to dispose of. When painting is completed, use a small container of paint thinner to clean the brush.

Paint thinner that has had paint mixed into it can be reused by capping the container tightly and allowing the paint to settle to the bottom of the container. The clean solvent may then be poured off the top, filtered through a stocking or coffee filter, and reused. The sludge that is left can be allowed to dry out and then discarded. Paint thinners can also be mixed into oil-based paints.

Leftover oil paint that is resealed properly will last a long time. To get rid of leftovers, paint the closet shelves for a smooth, washable surface.

A small amount of oil paint may dry out if the lid is removed and the air allowed to circulate. However, it takes a long time to become hard. When completely dry, the can of paint and lid should be put separately in the trash.

Latex paints that are too old or in too small quantities to be reused can also be allowed to air dry and, when hardened, can be put in the trash.

If latex paint has splattered on woodwork, it should be removed immediately with a damp cloth. Once it has dried, very hot water on a sponge and elbow grease is a non-toxic alternative for removal.

When buying paint, try to estimate the exact amount needed to prevent waste.

Plans for a market study of this closed supermarket in Voorheesville have hit a snag. Elaine McLain

V'ville won't buy market study

By Dev Tobin

Citing budget constraints, the Voorheesville Village Board refused to join New Scotland in paying part of the cost of a market survey for a new supermarket in the village.

At the board meeting last week, Mayor Edward Clark supported spending $1,025, or one quarter of the cost of the market study, to see if a new supermarket in the old Grand Union store on Route 85A would be commercially viable.

"This would be a good thing because the people want it, and our job is to facilitate what the people want," said Clark, although he admitted that such studies are "normally the developer's responsibility."

The survey would be conducted by the Scrivner Company, a Syracuse food wholesaler interested in developing the site into a full-service supermarket. Scrivner would perform the market survey.

At its last meeting, the New Scotland Town Board approved spending the $1,025 on the condition that the village also chip in. Ralph Wiggand, the owner of the property which has been vacant for nine years, would put up half the survey costs.

Since "the owner has the most to gain" if the results of the survey are positive, he should pay for it, argued Trustee Sue Rockmore.

"We should take an active approach to getting someone in there," replied Trustee Ed Donohue. "It's becoming an eyesore and a hang-out area."

Trustees Daniel Reh and Richard Langford joined Rockmore in opposing the request to partially fund the study.

In other business, the board:

- Decided to cut costs by limiting attendance at Mohawk-

Hudson Association of Village Officials quarterly meetings to one trustee and either the clerk or the treasurer.

- Decided to try to cut in half what the village spends on the annual dinner for volunteers.

- Received a letter of resignation from John Zongrone, chairman of the zoning board of appeals, effective April 1.

- Approved spending $250 for a sign at the village line commending the Voorheesville Central School District's two national schools of excellence.

Slingerlands man named to top post

Boyle replaces Sister Lawlor at St. Peter's

Steven P. Boyle of Slingerlands has a daunting task in front of him.

Recently named president and chief operating officer of St. Peter's Hospital in Albany, he must guide the not-for-profit institution through a period of soaring health care costs and increasing governmental regulation.

And he has no illusions about the job. "My first challenge is continuing the fine tradition of excellent health care and community service St. Peter's has provided for the past 123 years. In today's complex healthcare environment, it's a formidable challenge to assure high-quality services."

Boyle joined St. Peter's in 1988 as executive vice president and chief operating officer. He previously worked in similar capacities at Ellis Hospital in Schenectady.

St. Peter's, which provides 447 beds and has more than 600 physicians in affiliation, is in a growth mode, Boyle said. Overseeing the hospital's $78.9 million construction project now under way will "certainly be a challenge."

Upon completion, the expan-

sion will include a surgical suite, delivery suite, neonatal intensive care unit, post-partum care, a newborn nursery, a cancer center, a chapel, a central sterile supply area and warehousing.

For hospital care to be affordable in the next century, national healthcare reform is a must, Boyle said. "Clearly, we can't continue to finance healthcare as we do today. What's needed is systemic reform — not isolated and arbitrary adjustments to the existing system."

When it all settles out, Boyle predicted that "There will be fewer choices available" and people will have to meet rigorous criteria to receive hospital care.

"Furthermore, there will be an attempt to control expanding technology and there will be fewer choices than we now enjoy in our present healthcare system."

Boyle's MBA (masters of business administration) degree from the University of Connecticut cannot help but come in handy. St. Peter's handles more than 21,000 inpatients and nearly 300,000 ambulatory and outpatient visits a year. Its hospice program is the largest in New York state.

Boyle replaces Sister Ellen Lawlor, who will devote her full-time energies to the job of president and chief operating officer of MercyCare Corporation, the parent company for St. Peter's.

New business serves as canvas for Delmar artist

By Susan Graves

Joyce Sarachan enjoys painting the town red — and white and blue and any other conceivable color in the rainbow.

The Delmar artist started out on a small scale about three years ago when she began painting children's furniture, but her most recent accomplishment involves a whole new business scenario.

Sarachan designed and painted much of the decor for a new gift shop, Mally Wraps, on River Street in Troy. The gift shop features hand-painted children's and adults' clothing, along with other gift items to compliment the new restaurant and microbrewery, Brown & Moran Brewing Co., at the same address.

Gift shop proprietor Kelly Brown, wife of one of the brewery principals, Garry Brown, decided to take her hand-crafted show off the road when they bought the 150-year-old building in 1990.

Brown and co-principals completely gutted and renovated the building that had been occupied by Snyder Printing Company until it was destroyed by fire in 1980.

Kelly Brown said she was convinced Sarachan was the perfect designer for her 500-square-foot store after she saw her portfolio.

"What had happened was we met by accident and somehow got a hold of her portfolio. ... I saw her pictures and thought of the brewery and my shop," Brown said.

Joyce Sarachan designed and executed the decor for a new gift shop, Mally Wraps, in Troy. Sarachan found the "recycled" table on the right on the roadside apparently destined for the trash bin before she rescued it.

She and Sarachan purchased the store's first piece, an armoire, at an auction and once that was transformed, Brown was convinced she wanted more of the same.

"After that, I felt strongly we needed more — we wanted a whole environment, a theme" throughout the shop.

Creating that theme took Sarachan and Brown months. Moving from the floor up — Sarachan hand-painted a rug onto the original wood floor and then white-washed the floor that surrounds the rug.

Brown, who had had some misgivings about the floor treatment, is thrilled with the results. "We started with a small area, and I thought I'm not quite sure about this, but I trusted her this far, I think I'm going to go for it."

And she's glad she did, adding that many people who have come to the store have commented on its look. "I just can't say enough wonderful things about Joyce. We've created an environment that feels relaxed and warm," said Brown.

She moved up from there hand painting staircase spindles and the shop's countertop. Ultimately, Sarachan worked on the window display and the signing.

"Mally's was my first opportunity to do a whole environment. This was just really fun," she said.

Brown isn't the only one who is impressed with Sarachan's work. Last December, New York magazine selected her originally designed and painted child's chair as the one of the month's best bets.

Bicentennial art work Local poet to present program to highlight program

The library will join forces with the Bethlehem Art Association and the Bicentennial Publications Committee to present a program on the association's collection of bicentennial commemorative paintings on Thursday, March 11, at 7:30 p.m.

The event, scheduled the day before the town's "Bethlehem 200" celebration, will be in the community room.

Association president Colleen Skiff Kriss says, "It's odd to hear it called a collection. The 11 paintings are all done by individual artists in their own styles."

When the individually framed paintings are placed side by side, they create a mural depicting nearly 800 years of local history, she noted.

The collection will be on display during the program. The artists will share with the audience the sometimes difficult task of creating accurate representations of Bethlehem's past working from artifacts, photographs or written descriptions.

Kriss credits bicentennial chairman Robert Hendrick for supporting the project along with Floyd Brewer and other members of the Bethlehem Archaeology Group for their assistance in helping the artists achieve a high degree of historic authenticity.

The paintings have been in a revolving display during the year in exhibit cases in town hall, along with artifacts from the period depicted. They are expected to be reproduced as illustrations in the two books currently planned by the bicentennial publications committee.

The bicentennial artists are: Amelia Andersen, Eleanor Bolduc, Linda Bunzey, Rita Buttiker, Dale Crisafulli, Jean Eton, Connie Elliott, Susan Gillespie, Colleen Skiff Kriss, Edna McCoy and Charles Schade.

Brewer, Bethlehem Archaeology Group president and editor of the bicentennial history, Bethlehem Revisited, will moderate the discussion.

The art association presents two member shows at the library each year, one in April and one in November. Last year, the association sponsored two special exhibits at the library displaying works with bicentennial themes by association members.

The 11 works in the bicentennial commemorative collection debuted in last year's show. Another show with historic themes planned for June 1993 will include a silent auction of the works. The proceeds will benefit the association and the Friends of the Library.

Anna Jane Abaray

March is National Poetry Month, and the library has scheduled two special programs in honor of the occasion.

First off is a guest appearance by Charles Rossiter, host of cable TV's Poetry Motel.

On Thursday, March 11, at 7 p.m., Rossiter will present "The Beat Goes On: Beat Poetry and the 1990s." The evening will focus on some of the major poets of the soring its second Poetry Performance Day on Saturday, March 13, from 10:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

Last year, more than 100 poets of all ages participated either by reading from their own work or a favorite poem. If you write, enjoy poetry or have a piece you'd like to share, call the library at 765-2791 to schedule a time to read.

All are welcome to just come and listen to some of the leading lights of the local poetry scene.

For the first time, income tax assistance is being provided for people of all ages through volunteerstrained by the IRS. Beginning on March 5 and running through April 9, the service will be offered on Fridays, from 10 a.m. until 12:45 p.m. Appointments are required for the free counsel-

Seniors can still get help on Wednesdays between 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. through the AARP's Tax-aid program. All tax-related forms and receipts must be brought to the appointment.

To schedule a date and time, call the reference desk at 765-2791.

Library Quilter and Nimblefingers Needlework groups will continue to meet in the community room on Tuesdays throughout the month. The 1 p.m. programs are a great way to get advice and enjoy good company.

Families with young ones will want to stop in Wednesday, March 10, at 7 p.m. for Night's Nice, an evening story hour filled with tales about snuggling in on a cold winter's night.

Bethlehem girls in quest for title

By Jamie Sommerville

The Bethlehem girls hoop squad scored two more wins last week to advance to the semifinals of the Section II tournament.

On Wednesday, Feb. 24, the girls took on Colonie at home for what was one of the easiest victories of the season.

The game was a slow one, as Colonie was in the lead after the first quarter, but the Eagles came back full force and by halftime had forged ahead 21-17.

Karena Zornow had 10 points with 10 rebounds and Sheila McCaughin added 10 points in the 47-27 BC victory.

On Saturday, Feb. 27, the girls traveled to Colonie to play Bishop Maginn for one of the tougher games this season. The game was nose-to-nose until the fourth quarter, when the Eagles went on a nine-point run. They eventually won 54-43.

McCaughin finished with 21 points, seven rebounds and six steals. Zornow, Sara Battles and Lynda Smith were also key players in the quarterfinal win.

"All of this is really a great accomplishment," Coach Bill Warner said. "If we win against Shenendehowa on Wednesday, then we'll have reached the finals."

"We were tough and aggressive this year," remarked team member Melanie Dale. "It's probably because we worked so well this year, on and off the court."

Going up for a piece of the action in last week's game against Colonie are Bethlehem players Sarah Mineau (54) and Kiley Shortell (34).

Troy ends BC's season

By Joshua Kagan

The Bethlehem boys basketball team (7-8; 8-13) finished its season on a disappointing note, being overrun by Troy High in the first round of the Class A Section II tournament.

The Troy Flying Horses easily defeated the Eagles 81-57 on their home court on Tuesday, Feb. 23. Troy led from start to finish, as they outrebounded BC 68-28. The Eagles were plagued by poor shooting at the outset, making only four of their first 16 field goal attempts.

Troy was upset in the second round of sectionals by Schenectady and finished the season with an overall 18-4 record. The Flying Horses were seeded second in the Big Ten, behind CBA, and were tied with CBA for first place in a recent all-area poll.

Bethlehem finished with an overall 8-13 record and as the seventh seed in the Suburban Council. All Suburban Council teams lost their first games in sectionals, including Guilderland and Colonie, which received first round byes.

"Troy is one of those teams we didn't match up well against," BC coach Jack Moser said. "They are very experienced up front and their backcourt is very quick. They have so many weapons, if you take one away, they have a second one, or even a third or fourth."

Senior co-captains Mike Pellettier and Chris Macaluso led the Eagles with 22 and 11 points, respectively, in their last high school game.

Macaluso does not plan on playing basketball in college, while Pellettier is looking at Castleton State, among others, for college hoop action. Junior Matt Follis scored 12 for BC.

Bethlehem lost three league games by two points during the regular season and finished one game out of first place in the Suburban Council gold division.

"If we won against Niskayuna, Burnt Hills and Guilderland we would have been seeded second in the Suburban Council," Moser said. "That was a little frustrating."

"We were one of the teams fighting for the title. I'm not disappointed at all (with this season). The kids played hard every night. We improved as the season went on and that's what counts. It would have been nice to win the division, but things didn't go our way."

In several games early in the season, Bethlehem lost large leads late in the game. That did not happen in the later part of the season.

"Our younger kids got more mature, got more game time and experience," said Moser. "As the season went on and we would begin to lose a lead, we would say 'No, we won't let it get away.' That didn't happen early in the season."

The coach added, "We were playing with only two experienced players - Mike (Pellettier) and Chris (Macaluso) - and the rest of the team had to adjust. I think they did a good job adjusting."

V'ville girls hope to keep it going

By Greg Sullivan

The Voorheesville Ladybirds justified their fourth seeding in the Section II Class C Tournament last week by notching two consecutive wins. The two victories put V'ville into the semifinal round against top-seeded and undefeated Cambridge.

Voorheesville began the week with a first-round home game victory against 13th-seed Mayfield, 59-29. The Ladybirds were paced by sophomore Jen Persons' 18 points while sister Kristen had eight.

"We were much more experienced and played more physically," noted coach Nadine Bassler, "which allowed me to get everyone plenty of playing action."

The next hurdle was Friday, Feb. 26, against fifth-seed Saratoga Catholic. In this game the Ladybirds prevailed 61-51, but it wasn't easy.

After a quick start, Voorheesville found itself in foul trouble allowing Spa Catholic to get 11 second-quarter foul shots. A half-court three pointer at the buzzer brought Saratoga back to within one at the half.

The second half was nip and tuck until Jen Persons took over, sinking nine of her game-high 19 points. Kristen Dougherty and Lea Foster added some timely shooting to give the 'Birds some breathing room.

V'ville's Becky Bailey was tenacious under the basket all night and contributed 14 points. The Ladybirds also got fine efforts from Kristen Persons and Cortney Langford, who sank two three-pointers.

The boys also reach the semifinals

By Kelly Griffin

The Voorheesville boys basketball team blazed its way to the semifinals of the Class C Championship last week.

Seeded fifth, the Blackbirds eliminated two other contenders and earned themselves a trip to the Glens Falls Civic Center.

Phil Davis, Voorheesville's athletic director, said he was excited about how well the team has done. "We've been to Glens Falls once in the past three years. The last time was two years ago when we lost to Watervliet in the Class CC Finals.

"Last year we lost to Spa Catholic in the semifinals. This year is a change for us though. It's our first time in the C's in a long time."

Davis credits a good part of Voorheesville's success to the nature of the Colonial Council.

"The Colonial Council is a very tough, competitive league," he said. "It's great because many teams in the Council play very well in non-league tournaments such as this one due to their season-long experience."

Another thrilling aspect of this year's post-season play is that both the boys' and the girls' teams have advanced to the semifinal round. "We're very proud of our two teams," said Davis. "It's been quite awhile since both teams have been in the semis."

If the boys advance to the finals, they will play at the Glens Falls Civic Center on Saturday, March 6, at 2:30 p.m. for the Class C Championship. Tickets are available through the school by calling 765-3314.

It's never over 'til it's over

Katie Dambrowski this past Sunday showed that a game is never over until it's really over.

With only three seconds left on the clock, she sank a pressure-packed free throw to give Georgetown its first win of the season, 30-29, over a determined Providence squad. Mike Carney netted 12 points for the Friars in Bethlehem Basketball Club (BBC) action.

In other College Division games, Seton Hall used stingy defense to roll past St. Johns 43-14. Travis Ostroff was unstoppable for the winners with 24 points while Nick Conger netted 12 for St. Johns.

Behind the rebounding of Morgan Reilly, Pitt upended Villanova 32-26. Steve Kidera's 16 points kept Villanova close throughout the contest. Syracuse squeaked by Miami 27-25 as Toby Cushing propelled the winners with 13 points. For Miami, Josh Plattner played a solid game with 12 points and six assists.

In the All-Star Division, the Bucks stayed undefeated with a 52-20 win over the Spurs. Ryan Walker played steady defense for the Bucks while Kevin Russell contributed seven points for the Spurs.

Behind the 20-point performance of Tom Hitter, the Magic dumped the Hawks 34-26. Jaimie Paines scored nine points and dished out seven assists for the Hawks.

In a close contest, the Rockets held off a late rally to defeat the Mavs 60-59. For the winners, Dan Burrell netted 20 points while Ryan Murray scored 29 points for the Mavs.

In another high scoring contest, the Sixers outlasted the Heat 59-55. Seamus Gallagher lead the Sixers with 16 points while Steve Euler grabbed eight rebounds for the Heat.

In Pro Division action, the Nuggets downed the Bulls 36-25. For the Nuggets, Jayson Feliciano grabbed eight rebounds and scored six points. Justin Pinchback helped the Bulls with 13 points and seven rebounds.

Finally, led by the 10-point scoring effort of Brad Colacino, the Celtics topped a spirited Knicks squad 36-30. Mike Coker paced the Knicks with 13 points.

BC gymnasts end on high note

By Laura Del Vecchio

Bethlehem's gymnasts competed in sections on Saturday, Feb. 27, and they rose to the occasion, scoring their highest total of the season in the team competition.

All four gymnasts who competed in the all-around competition scored season highs.

"They did great," said coach Mary Powell. "They really pulled through." The BC squad was led by junior Brigid Carroll who scored a 32.5. Heather Mann scored a 32.1, Amy Schron a 28.0 and Sara Haskins a 25.15.

Carroll was the only team member to place. She took home a sixth place on the vault with a score of 8.7. Also competing well on the vault were Schron with a 7.85, April Houghton with a 7.4 (her season high), and Haskins with a 7.35.

On the uneven bars, five of BC's gymnasts achieved personal bests for the season. Mann was the leader with a score of 8.2. Carroll scored a slightly lower 8.15. Schron scored a 7.1, Houghton a 5.75, and Haskins earned a 4.45.

Carroll led the team on the balance beam competition while Mann was close behind.

Several of BC's gymnasts also accomplished personal season highs on the floor exercise. Although she did not have a personal high score, Carroll once again led BC in the floor routine with a score of 8.4. Mann took home her own personal record with a score of 8.2. Schron scored a 7.4 and Haskins a 7.2. Eighth grader Jill Pappalardi had her best performance of the season scoring a 6.2.

This was their final meet of the season. All of the gymnasts, except senior Meri Tombros, will be eligible to compete next winter.

"They really had a wonderful season," said Powell. "All of the gymnasts worked very hard. We're looking forward to next year."

□ Dems

unified ticket, Clyne says, with definite stands on pressing issues such as solid waste and land use planning.

It was more than 100 years before the Democrats actually elected one of their own to the town board when former Councilman Robert Burns was elected in 1987. Burns resigned his seat in 1991 when he relocated to Rochester to become probation director for Monroe County.

Needless to say, the last time Democrats controlled the board was probably during the time of Andrew Jackson. But times are a changin', and Clyne realizes that with party loyalty on the decline and increasing numbers of unaffiliated voters moving into town, it's a brand new ballgame.

Witness the election of Bethlehem Democrat George Kansas over longtime Republican incumbent W. Gordon Morris Jr. for the Albany County Legislature last year, he says. At the same time, however, Clyne has no illusions that the Dems will need to attract a large independent vote to overcome the still hefty registration edge held by the GOP.

Following up on this momentous event, Democrats will present a united front with the focus on the future of Bethlehem, Clyne says. Development and open space issues should occupy center stage for all the candidates this year, since the town board will begin debate on the town master plan, which is scheduled to be unveiled next month by the Land Use Management Advisory Commission.

"I think that (the Democratic resurgence) was first really noticeable in 1988 when (former Presidential candidate Michael) Dukakis nearly won Bethlehem," said former Democratic Assembly candidate Joseph Glazer.

"County Democratic incumbents have continually run well in the town," he added, "so clearly we have a fighting chance in Bethlehem."

Glazer, who is mulling a run for the supervisor's seat, observed that name recognition, quality of campaign and volatility of issues could be deciding factors this fall rather than just the old standby of party affiliation.

□ Tactics

we're fighting for in the State Legislature," he maintained.

Judith Enck, senior environmental associate for NYPIRG (New York Public Interest Research Group), said her organization has not been in Bethlehem recently and "typically" only canvasses there in the summer — usually in June.

But Bill Cooke, spokesman for Citizens Campaign for the Environment, said it was not uncommon for groups other than his own to be "over-aggressive" in their fund-raising tactics, particularly when it comes to questions of solid waste and toxic ash landfills.

When this occurs, and it does occur, Cook said, "It alienates the public," without whose support "the movement is nothing."

"We never use scare tactics," he continued. "It's short-sighted, ridiculous and counterproductive. ... We would have been in Bethlehem within the last year, probably in November or December."

□ Apprentice

businesspeople to develop the program.

"There wasn't a person I called who said no. They were all very enthusiastic," Davies said.

One member of the planning committee reflected the reception the proposal has received in the business community.

"I'm very excited about this," said Gail Sundling, proprietor of Delmar Bootery. "There is no better way to learn than on-the-job."

Sundling used to accept BCHS students as part of the school's work-study program, and "a couple of them went on to become master shoemakers."

Sundling's age-old craft of making and repairing shoes by hand "doesn't have a trade school, so this kind of program is the only way" to attract young people.

Some students may still take BOCES courses that lead to state licensure, in cosmetology or nursing, for example.

"We're not going to deny a student a program, and BOCES is willing to accept any students who wish to enroll," explained Superintendent Leslie Loomis.

Besides their apprenticeship with a local business, students enrolled in the program would take a daily seminar focusing on experiential learning, plus occupational and academic courses in an individual plan "that is best for each student," Davies said.

The district plans to hire a coordinator for the program who would teach the seminar and work with the businesses to ensure appropriate and effective placements.

□ Cable

rates for "broadcast basic," which is a scaled-down version of the 30-channel family package that most people in town subscribe to.

The cheaper "broadcast basic" service will begin on March 15 with Bethlehem and New Scotland subscribers receiving six channels (6, 10, 13, 17, 23 and 31) for $9.95 per month. The monthly charge for the family package is $22.30.

If the company fails to modify its rates for "broadcast basic," then the town board plans to petition the Federal Communications Commission (FCC) for "corrective action."

Kehoe said that it was still a bit unclear as to what powers the town had in regulating the cable company because it was awaiting guidelines from the FCC that are expected in early April. The new FCC guidelines result from a bill that passed the U.S. Congress last fall re-regulating the cable TV industry.

try.

If the independent financial reports for A-R show profits that seem immoderate, she said, that can provide the board with ammunition in case it decides to seek a reduction in rates.

Supervisor Ken Ringler accused A-R Cable Services of "playing games" with the intent of the cable regulation bill. The measure requires cable companies to offer subscribers a cheaper, scaled-down version of their normal package.

In the case of Bethlehem and New Scotland, it doesn't appear that subscribers to the bare-bones package will get anything for their money, Ringler said, since most people in town can already receive Channels 6, 10, 13, 17 and 23 with just a pair of rabbit ears.

The company's last quarterly report for 1992 was just received, Kehoe said, and the review has not been completed.

Pupil's poem shows dangers of drug abuse

The following poem was written by a pupil in this year's fifth-grade Drug Abuse Resistance Education (DARE) class.

Drugs

*You know that drugs can ruin your life.
And they can also cause you much strife.
Drugs can make you do crazy things,
And there is no happiness about what they bring.
Drinking and driving is twice as bad,
And if you should die it would be very sad.
When you start to drink you want more and more,
The result of an accident you will abhor.
Making a choice must be hard, I know,
But your life will depend on just saying no.
No one can make the choice for you
And we all have learned what we must do.
Officers McMillen and Linstruth, too,
Have taught us everything we must do.
Just answer no and you will be safe,
But if you say yes it's a big mistake.
Please help make our country drug free,
And create a better life for you and me!*

The Final Frontier

Georgi Grechko walked among the stars.
Now he's talking with audiences across America about his experiences.

By Kathleen Shapiro

On Earth, it was wintertime, 1977. In space, there are no seasons. It was just dark and cold when Cosmonaut Yuri Romanenko opened the satellite station's airlock door and began preparing for a spacewalk. Suddenly, his safety line still untethered, the Soviet unexpectedly lost his grip on the station and began drifting away into the darkness, only to be pulled back at the last moment by his alert crewmate Georgi Grechko.

For his heroics, Grechko has earned himself a place in the history books. In addition to being the first to carry out a satellite rescue, he has racked up a total of 133 days in space, including a 96-day endurance mission, which broke the record set by American Skylab astronauts in 1973.

Now working in Moscow as a scientist for the Russian Academy of Science, Grechko is currently traveling across the U.S. and Canada speaking at planetariums and schools from New York City to San Francisco and Ontario. Tomorrow evening, he will stop at the Schenectady Museum and Planetarium for a 7:30 p.m. lecture and reception. Tickets to Thursday's event are $3 per person.

"We just jumped at the chance to have him come and speak," said Schenectady

Museum and Planetarium spokesperson Carol Hudson. The event is being sponsored in cooperation with the Albany-Schoharie-Schenectady BOCES, and is expected to draw large crowds of adults and schoolchildren, as well as families, she said.

Before beginning his career as a cosmonaut, Grechko worked as an engineer with the USSR's unmanned lunar research program, which included work on the 1966 Luna-9 probe, the first spacecraft to safely land on the moon and transmit television pictures from the surface.

Later that year, he was elected to become a cosmonaut in the Lunar Group. He began training for a circumlunar flight, only to have the American Apollo-8

THE SIGN OF THE TIMES: Our heritage of signage

By Susan Graves

Take a trip down memory lane via posters and old advertising handbills on exhibit at the Albany Institute of History & Art opening on Friday, March 5.

A lecture, "The History of American Advertising" by Jeffrey F. Durgee, associate professor of marketing at the school of management at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute in Troy, will kick off the exhibit at 5:30 p.m. on Friday followed by a reception at 6:30 p.m.

The Please Post: 19th Century Broadside exhibit showcases an era of communication of days gone by. Memorabilia includes broadsides, the equivalent of today's radio announcements, TV commercials, billboards, classified ads and yellow pages. Durgee said the broadsides are important because, "They're an early example of advertising with the purpose to inform the people about an available product or service." He said the broadsides were a necessary form of communication since newspapers of the period were weeklies.

Many of the broadsides in this exhibit are from businesses that operated in Albany during the 19th century," said Mary Schifferly, acting chief librarian of the McKinney Library at the institute. The pieces in the exhibit illustrate the tastes and trends of Hudson River Valley residents and give a bird's eye view of life in the 19th century.

Broadsides were commonly posted by billposters to the sides of buildings, along fences and on telegraph poles. Some vendors rented space on signposts and even on the sandwich man's placards.

Over-zealous billposters were considered a nuisance when they attached broadsides and bills in undesignated spaces — hence the origin of the phrase "post no bills."

Another aspect of the advertising broadside is that its role is completely different from today's.

Please Post will be on view at the institute on 125 Washington Ave. in Albany until June 6. The institute's regular hours are weekdays, Tuesday through Friday from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. and Saturdays and Sundays, from noon to 5 p.m.

SPOTLIGHT

By Martin P. Kelly

Lake George Opera Company reduces season to three performances

Following three seasons of poorly attended fully-staged operas, the Lake George Opera Company will regroup this summer with only three performances by celebrity alumni members of the company.

These performances, to be scheduled in the last week of July or the first week of August, will not be staged events. Rather, they will be in concert form with arias and vocal ensembles from operas being considered for the 1994 season.

This opera company which began more than 30 years ago, will see the return of the original director, David Lloyd, who will oversee the artistic side of this summer's program.

Martin P. Kelly

Almost $300,000 in debt after last season, the company has been able to reduce this sum to $75,000 while cutting back staff including artistic director John Balme. Susan Danis is currently serving as the Festival's managing director.

Lloyd is an advocate of staged opera since he believes they were written for this purpose. He also notes that concert-type operas were poorly attended these past several seasons.

One more cutback this summer will be the program to train young opera singers. It has been the most expensive of its type in the country, giving the young singers a stipend of $500 a week, compared to the average of $150 a week elsewhere. This program, the American Lyric Theater, is being reconsidered as to format and budget.

Schenectady Symphony presents French horn soloist Sunday

In its third concert of the season, the Schenectady Symphony Orchestra will feature Stephen Kostyniak, a 20-year old Julliard student performing the French horn solo in Richard Strauss's Concerto for Horn.

Kostyniak is a native of Burnt Hills who attended the Burnt Hills-Ballston Lake High School and performed with National High School Honors Orchestra, New York's All-State Orchestra, the Empire State Youth Orchestra and the Albany and Schenectady Symphony Orchestras.

Conductor Charles Schneider will also lead the orchestra in Aaron Copland's Rodeo and Beethoven's Symphony No. 7 at Proctor's Theater in Schenectady. The concert is at 3 p.m. Sunday (March 7). Ticket info: 346-6204.

London's Hollywood to Mayfair visits Proctor's March 11

Songs and dance music of the 1920s and 1930s will be the format of Hollywood to Mayfair, a presentation with the Pasadena Roof Orchestra and Dancers of London.

The show which is making its first American tour appears at Proctor's Theater in Schenectady, Thursday, March 11, at 8 p.m. Formed in 1970, the band reflects the music of the period of the '20s and '30s played by orchestras on roof gardens and in hotel ballrooms.

The time warp effect of the Pasadena Roof Orchestra features musicians sitting behind art deco music stands and dressed in tuxedos and winged colors.

The dancers all wear evening clothes of the period and recreate the dances with their strict tempos and syncopated tunes which dominated the jazzy '20s and the depression era '30s.

The band's leader, Johnny Arthy, doesn't camp the period; rather, he attempts to recreate the period faithfully, using more than 1,500 original musical arrangements of bands of the period. Reservations: 346-6204.

Around Theaters!

astronauts beat the Soviets to their goal.

Over the next 20 years, Grechko completed several other missions before retiring from space travel to become a scientist, writer and Soviet television personality.

Twice decorated a "Hero of Russia," he has earned a reputation as a lively speaker, said Hudson. "Certainly any children who are interested in space exploration will love this."

Following the lecture, a reception will be held to allow Grechko to answer questions and meet with visitors. Autographed posters of the Soviet Salyut Space Station will also be available for purchase.

SPOTLIGHT TEENSCENE

By Michael Kagan

Because this winter is the first one in five years with a normal amount of snow, there's been a lot of moaning recently.

Adults moan because they have trouble getting to work, kids moan because, despite all the snow, school never closes as much as they want it to, and TV weathermen moan because their viewers moan.

The skiers, however, who have been sulking for the last half decade about the icy man-made conditions which have plagued eastern ski resorts, now have some powder to rally around.

Cross country skiers, who haven't had much but dirt to ski on in this area until recently, are even happier. I know the frustration personally. I got a brand-new pair of skis five years ago, and they were still in mint condition when I finally used them last month.

Cross country skiing not only gives enthusiasts an excellent workout, it's much cheaper than joining a health club, paying for membership at an indoor pool, or skiing downhill. Many locations are available at a nominal cost, or even free, such as a park, nature preserve, golf course or even open space behind someone's house. The only real cost is for equipment, which is less expensive than its downhill counterpart.

Also, cross country skiing is easy to learn—it's essentially just walking with a glide. Unlike alpine skiing, beginners don't need to spend extra money on lessons.

For those who want guaranteed groomed snow, even in snow-free winters, many downhill resorts do offer cross country skiing, such as Gore Mountain. These venues do require a fee, however.

For those who want to try the sport, now is probably the best time to ski. The snow is deep and the weather is relatively warm. Soon, temperatures will begin reaching the 40s regularly and the snow will quickly recede.

Funny mothers wanted

Shaker Road Community Playground volunteers will host a Mom's Night Out comedy show on March 14 to raise money for construction materials and project costs.

The event, which will be held at the Parc V restaurant on Albany-Shaker Road from 6 to 10 p.m., will include live music, hors d'oeuvres, door prizes and a chance for local residents to get up on stage and try their hand at making people laugh.

The evening will be highlighted by a Funniest Moms Contest. Winners will receive two tickets to see Howie Mandel at Proctor's in Schenectady on Thursday, March 18.

All members of the public are welcome, said Cathy Olsen, who is coordinating the event. "You don't have to be a mom to come," she said.

Tickets are $5, and can be purchased in advance or at the door.

All proceeds will go toward covering costs for the playground, which is slated for construction from June 2 through 6.

For information, call 458-9671.

Area choruses to offer evening of barbershop harmonies

Two of the area's premier barbershop choruses will present a program of barbershop music at Shaker High this weekend to benefit the North Colonie Friends of Music.

The program is intended to help raise funds for the organization, which sponsor activities and awards designed to promote the North Colonie School District's music curriculum.

The concert will feature The Capitaland Chorus, a women's barbershop chorus and member of Sweet Adelines International, and the Saratoga Racing City Chorus, a men's barbershop chorus and member of the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barbershop Quartet Singing in America.

Both choruses have consistently placed in the top five in regional competitions and are currently working toward this year's series of competitions.

In addition to the choruses, the concert will feature Oxymoron, a comedy quartet, the Adamsville Flats and other quartets from both choruses.

The concert is set for Sunday, Mar.

7, at 3 p.m. in the Shaker High School auditorium. Tickets, which can be purchased at the door on the day of the performance, are $5 for adults and $3 for senior citizens and students.

For information, call Richard Gervais at 783-1636 or Dave Rosenthal at 783-0865.

New Firebird features eye appeal

The fourth generation of Pontiac sports cars debuts in 1993 with the Pontiac Firebird — a newly-styled and engineered automobile that features both eye-catching looks and high performance.

Am has so many standard features that there are just four basic options: automatic transmission, leather seats, compact disc player and removable hatch roofs.

Officials of the Pontiac Division of General Motors say the new fourth generation 1993 Firebird combines exciting exteriors with powerful powertrains.

Firebird has always been the epitome of Pontiac sports car driving excitement.

John G. Middlebrook

"Firebird has always been the epitome of Pontiac sports car driving excitement," said Pontiac general manager John G. Middlebrook. "Just like the two million units before it, the fourth generation Firebird will carry on the tradition of cars designed to put fun and excitement in the driving experience."

The three new models — Firebird, Formula and Trans Am — contain 90 percent new features, including two new engines, standard anti-lock brakes and dual airbags, a fortified structure and dent, ding and rust-resistant composite body panels.

"Nowhere are those images more apparent than in the new Firebird's aggressive exteriors, driver-oriented interior, powerful powertrains and precise handling suspension systems."

Brownie celebration spotlights customs of foreign countries

Brownie Girls Scouts from St. Thomas the Apostle School in Delmar met at the Bethlehem Public Library recently for an international celebration.

The Brownies sampled foods from China, Mexico, India and the South Pacific, and enjoyed music, games and dances from Africa, Puerto Rico and the Philippines.

Monique Ting talked about her cultural heritage from Vietnam, China and the Philippines. The scouts practiced writing Chinese words and Ting's daughter, Audrey, a St. Thomas fourth-grade junior Girl Scout, taught the group the art of origami.

The Spotlight remembers

This week in 1983, these stories were making headlines in The Spotlight.

- The town of Bethlehem reached a tentative agreement to buy the old Waldenmaier meat packing plant on Feura Bush Road for use as a solid waste transfer station.

- On the first anniversary of assuming ownership of The Spotlight, publisher Richard Ahlstrom noted that the paper had doubled the amount of space for news, sports and features and attracted more than 200 new advertisers.

- Voorheesville's 22-0 boys basketball team advanced to the Section II Class CC finals by beating Greenville 60-58 on a buzzer-beater by Mike Lewis, who led the team with 24 points. The team won its quarter-final game over Watervliet 75-58.

- Two Voorheesville wrestlers, Jeff Clark and Shawn Sheldon, won sectional honors and earned trips to the state tournament. Paul Callanan of Bethlehem placed third in the sectional championships.
